There was a householder who had ¹ every conceivable thing, be it son or slave or ²⁵ cattle or dog or pig or corn ¹ [or] barley or chaff or grass or ¹ [...] or meat and acorn. [Now he was] a sensible fellow ¹ and he knew what the food of each ¹ one was. He served the children bread ³⁰ [...]. He served the slaves ¹ [...] and] meal. And ¹ [he threw barley] and chaff and grass to the cattle. ¹ He threw bones to [the] dogs, ¹ and to the pigs he threw acorns 81 and slop. Compare the disciple ¹ of God: if he is a sensible fellow he ¹ understands what discipleship is all about. The ¹ bodily forms will not deceive him, ⁵ but he will look at the condition ¹ of the soul of each one and speak ¹ with him. There are many animals in the world ¹ which are in human form. When ¹ he identifies them, to the swine he will throw ¹⁰ acorns, to the cattle he will throw ¹ barley and chaff and grass, to the ¹ dogs he will throw bones. To the slaves ¹ he will give only the elementary lessons, to the children he will give ¹ the complete instruction.

There is the son of man ¹⁵ and there is the son of the son of man. ¹ The lord is the son of man, ¹ and the son of the son of ¹ man is he who creates through the son ¹ of man. The son of man received ²⁰ from God the capacity to create. He also has the ability ¹ to beget. He who has received ¹ the ability to create is a creature. He who has received ¹ the ability to beget is an offspring. He who creates cannot ¹ beget. He who begets also has power to create. ²⁵ Now they say, “He who creates begets.” ¹ But his so-called “offspring” is merely a creature. Because of [...] ¹ of birth, they are not his offspring but [...]. ¹ He who creates works openly ¹ and he himself is visible. ³⁰ He who begets begets in [private] ¹ and he himself is hidden, since [...] ¹ image. Also, he who creates [creates] ¹ openly. But one who begets [begets] ¹ children in private. No [one can] ³⁵ know when [the husband] 82 and the wife have intercourse with one another ¹ except the two of them. Indeed marriage in the ¹ world is a mystery for those who have taken ¹ a wife. If there is a hidden quality to the marriage of defilement, ⁵ how much more is the undefiled marriage ¹ a true mystery! It is not fleshly ¹ but pure. It belongs not to desire ¹ but to the will. It belongs not to the darkness ¹ or the night but to the day and ¹⁰ the light. If a marriage is open to the public, ¹ it has become prostitution, and the bride ¹ plays the harlot not only when she is impregnated by another man ¹ but even if she slips out of her bedroom ¹ and is seen. ¹⁵ Let her show herself only to her father and her ¹ mother and to the friend of the bridegroom and ¹ the sons of the bridegroom. These are permitted ¹ to enter every day into the bridal chamber. ¹ But let the others yearn just ²⁰ to listen to her voice and to enjoy ¹ her ointment, and let them feed from the ¹ crumbs that fall from the table, like the ¹ dogs. Bridegrooms and ¹ brides belong to the bridal chamber. No one shall be able ²⁵ to see the bridegroom with the bride unless ¹ [he become] such a one.

When Abraham ¹ [...] that he was to see what he was to see, ¹ [he circumcised] the flesh of the foreskin, teaching ¹ us that it is proper to destroy the flesh. ³⁰

[Most things] in the world, as long as their ¹ [inner parts] are hidden, stand upright and live. ¹ [If they are revealed] they die, as ¹ is illustrated by the visible man: ¹ [as long as] the intestines of the man are hidden, the man is alive; 83 when his intestines are exposed ¹ and come out of him, the man will die. ¹ So also with the tree: while its root ¹ is hidden it sprouts and grows. If its ⁵ root is exposed, the tree dries up. ¹ So it is with every birth that is in the world, ¹ not only with the revealed ¹ but with the hidden. For so long as the root ¹ of wickedness is hidden, it is strong. But when it is recognized ¹⁰ it is dissolved. When it is revealed ¹ it perishes. That is why the word says, ¹ "Already the ax is laid at the root ¹ of the trees" (Mt 3:10). It will not merely cut — what ¹ is cut sprouts again — but the ax ¹⁵ penetrates deeply until it ¹ brings up the root. Jesus pulled out ¹ the root of the whole place, while others did it only ¹ partially. As for ourselves, let each ¹ one of us dig down after the root ²⁰ of evil which is within one, and let one pluck it ¹ out of one's heart from the root. It will be plucked out ¹ if we recognize it. But if we ¹ are ignorant of it, it takes root in ¹ us and produces its fruit ²⁵ in our heart. It masters us. ¹ We are its slaves. It takes us captive, ¹ to make us do what we do [not] want; ¹ and what we do want we do [not] do. It ¹ is powerful because we have not recognized it. While [it exists] ³⁰ it is active. Ignorance¹ is the mother of [all evil].¹ Ignorance will result in [death, because]¹ those that come from [ignorance]¹ neither were nor [are]³⁵ nor shall be. [...] 84 will be perfect when all the truth¹ is revealed. For truth is like¹ ignorance: while it is hidden it rests¹ in itself, but when it is revealed⁵ and is recognized, it is praised inasmuch as¹ it is stronger than ignorance and error.¹ It gives freedom. The word said,¹ "If you (pl.) know the truth,¹ the truth will make you free" (Jn 8:32).¹⁰ Ignorance is a slave. Knowledge is¹ freedom. If we know the truth,¹ we shall find the fruits of the truth within¹ us. If we are joined to it, it will bring our fulfillment.¹

At the present time we have the manifest things¹⁵ of creation. We say,¹ "The strong who are held in high regard are great people.¹ And the weak who are despised are the obscure." Contrast the manifest things¹ of truth: they are weak and¹ despised, while the hidden things are strong and²⁰ held in high regard. The mysteries of truth are¹ revealed, though in type and image. The bridal chamber,¹ however, remains hidden. It is the holy in¹ the holy. The veil at first¹ concealed how God controlled²⁵ the creation, but when the veil is rent¹ and the things inside are revealed,¹ this house will be left¹ desolate, or rather will be¹ [destroyed]. And the whole (inferior) godhead will flee³⁰ [from] here but not into the holies¹ [of the] holies, for it will not be able to mix with the¹ unmixed [light] and the¹ [flawless] fullness, but will be under the wings of the cross¹ [and under] its arms. This ark will be³⁵ [their] salvation when the flood 85 of water surges over them. If¹ some belong to the order of the priesthood¹ they will be able to go¹ within the veil with the high priest.⁵ For this reason the veil was not¹ rent at the top only, since it¹ would have been open only to those above; nor¹ was it rent at the bottom only, since¹ it would have been revealed only to those below.¹⁰ But it was rent from top to bottom. Those¹ above opened to us the things below,¹ in order that we may go in to the secret¹ of the truth. This truly is what is¹ held in high regard (and) what is strong! But we shall go in there¹⁵ by means of lowly types and forms of weakness.¹ They are lowly indeed when compared with the perfect glory.¹ There is glory which surpasses glory. There is power which surpasses¹ power. Therefore the perfect things have opened¹ to us, together with the hidden things of truth. The holies²⁰ of the holies were revealed, and¹ the bridal chamber invited us in.

As long¹ as it is hidden, wickedness is indeed ineffectual, but¹ it has not been removed from the midst of the seed of the holy spirit.¹ They are slaves of evil. But when²⁵ it is revealed, then the¹ perfect light will flow out on every ¹ one. And all those who are in it will [receive the chrism]. ¹ Then the slaves will be free [and] ¹ the captives ransomed. “[Every] plant [which] ³⁰ my father who is in heaven [has not] planted [will be] ¹ plucked out” (Mt 15:13). Those who are separated will unite [...] and ¹ will be filled. Every one who will [enter] ¹ the bridal chamber will kindle the [light], for [...] ¹ just as in the marriages which are [...] happen ³⁵ at night. That fire [...] only 86 at night and is put out. But the mysteries ¹ of that marriage are perfected rather in ¹ the day and the light. Neither that day ¹ nor its light ever sets. If anyone becomes a son ⁵ of the bridal chamber, he will receive the light. ¹ If anyone does not receive it while he is here, he will not be able to receive it ¹ in the other place. He who will receive that light ¹ will not be seen, nor can he be detained. ¹ And none shall be able to torment ¹⁰ a person like this even while he dwells ¹ in the world. And again when he leaves ¹ the world he has already received the truth in ¹ the images. The world has become the eternal realm (aeon), ¹ for the eternal realm is fullness for him. ¹⁵ This is the way it is: it is revealed ¹ to him alone, not hidden in the darkness and the ¹ night, but hidden in a perfect day ¹ and a holy light.

The Gospel ¹
According to Philip

THE HYPOSTASIS OF THE ARCHONS (II,4)

Introduced by

ROGER A. BULLARD

Translated by

BENTLEY LAYTON

The Hypostasis of the Archons ("Reality of the Rulers") is an anonymous tractate presenting an esoteric interpretation of Genesis 1-6, partially in the form of a revelation discourse between an angel and a questioner. While the treatise illustrates a wide-ranging Hellenistic syncretism, the most evident components are Jewish, although in its present form The Hypostasis of the Archons shows clearly Christian features and thus can be considered a Christian work. Its theological perspective is a vigorous Gnosticism of perhaps Sethian affiliation.

It is generally assumed that The Hypostasis of the Archons, like all the other Nag Hammadi texts, is a translation from Greek. The possibility of a Coptic pun on the phrase "beside me" (Is 46:9) and "blind" (Hyp. Arch. 86,30; 94,22), as well as the description of animal-headed Rulers (87,29) suggests that the provenance may have been Egypt.

The document is tentatively dated in the third century C.E. It is obviously no later than the fourth century, to which the Nag Hammadi collection is dated. But the well-developed gnostic treatment of the material in this document as well as the midrashic handling of scriptural material argue against an early date. Further, the philosophical orientation of 96,11-14 has been identified as typical of third-century Neoplatonism.

The questions of date and provenance are complicated by the possibility that the work as it stands is a result of a Christian editor's having combined a narrative source (interpreting parts of Genesis) with a revelation discourse concerned with soteriology and eschatology, and placing them both within a Christian framework.

The Hypostasis of the Archons is certainly the work of a gnostic teacher instructing an audience. While using previous material, he writes from a position of authority, even in the angelic revelation where a character in the discourse is ostensibly speaking. The audience is a Christian Gnostic community, aware of material of both testaments and accepting the authority of Paul. They are familiar with Jewish literary traditions, including apocalyptic. A traditional function of apocalyptic – providing reassurance for an insecure community – is operative here. The Hypostasis of the Archons is thus an esoteric work, written for a self-conscious community which probably felt pressure from a Christian community that defined itself as orthodox and others as heretical.

There is clearly some literary relationship between The Hypostasis of the Archons and On the Origin of the World, which follows this tractate in Codex II.

Both seem to draw from common sources. The latter mentions a Book or Books of Norea (102,11, 24-25), to which Epiphanius also refers. It has been suggested that The Hypostasis of the Archons is to be identified with that source, but without compelling evidence.

After a brief introduction quoting “the great apostle” Paul, The Hypostasis of the Archons offers its mythological narrative. The main characters in the mythological drama which unfolds include the blind ruler Samael, also called Sakla (“fool”) and Yaldabaoth, who blasphemes against the divine; the spiritual Woman, who rouses Adam and outwits the rapacious rulers; the Snake, the Instructor, who counsels the man and woman to eat of the fruit forbidden by the rulers; and Norea, the daughter of Eve, a virgin pure in character and exalted in knowledge. On page 93 of the tractate the focus changes somewhat: on center stage now is the great angel Eleleth, who reveals to Norea the origin and destiny of the archontic powers.

The Hypostasis of the Archons proclaims, as its title indicates, the reality of the archontic rulers: far from being merely fictitious, imaginary powers, the archons are all too real. These rulers indeed exist. This is a grim reality for the Christian Gnostics, who define their own spiritual nature in opposition to that of the ruling and enslaving authorities. Yet, as this document promises, the Christian Gnostics can have hope, for their spiritual nature will be more lasting than the archons, and their heavenly destiny will be more glorious. In the end the rulers will perish, and the Gnostics, the children of the light, will know the Father and praise him.

THE HYPOSTASIS OF THE ARCHONS

II 86, 20-97, 23

On account of the reality (hypostasis) of the authorities (eksousiai), (inspired) by the spirit ¹ of the father of truth, the great ¹ apostle – referring to the “authorities of the darkness” (Col 1:13) – told us ¹ that “our contest is not against flesh and ¹ [blood]; rather, the authorities of the universe ²⁵ and the spirits of wickedness” (Ep 6:12). ¹ [I have] sent (you) this because you (sg.) inquire about the reality ¹ [of the] authorities.

Their chief is blind; ¹ [because of his] power and his ignorance ¹ [and his] arrogance he said, with his ³⁰ [power], “It is I who am God; there is none ¹ [apart from me].”

When he said this, he sinned against ¹ [the entirety]. And this speech got up 87 to incorruptibility; then there was a voice that came ¹ forth from incorruptibility, saying, ¹ “You are mistaken, Samael” – which is, “god ¹ of the blind.”

His thoughts became blind. And, having expelled ⁵ his power – that is, the blasphemy he had spoken — ¹ he pursued it down to chaos and ¹ the abyss, his mother, at the instigation of Pistis ¹ Sophia (Faith Wisdom). And she established each of his offspring ¹ in conformity with its power — after the pattern ¹⁰ of the realms that are above, for by starting from the ¹ invisible world the visible world was invented.

As incorruptibility ¹ looked down into the region of the waters, ¹ her image appeared in the waters; ¹ and the authorities of the darkness became enamored of her. ¹⁵ But they could not lay hold of that image, ¹ which had appeared to them in the waters, ¹ because of their weakness — since beings that merely possess a soul ¹ cannot lay hold of those that possess a spirit — for ¹ they were from below, while it was from ²⁰ above.

This is the reason why “incorruptibility ¹ looked down into the region (etc.)”: ¹ so that, by the father’s will, she ¹ might bring the entirety into union with the light. The rulers (archontes) laid ¹ plans and said, “Come, ²⁵ let us create a man that will be soil from ¹ the earth.” They modelled their creature ¹ as one wholly of the earth.

Now the rulers . . . ¹ body . . . they have . . . female . . . is . . . ¹ with the face of a beast. They had taken [some soil] ³⁰ from the earth and modelled their [man], ¹ after their body and [after the image] ¹ of God that had appeared [to them] ¹ in the waters.

They said, “[Come, let] us ¹ lay hold of it by means of the form that we have modelled, [so that] ³⁵ it may see its male counterpart [. . .], 88 and we may seize it with the form that we have modelled” — not ¹ understanding the force of God, because of ¹ their powerlessness. And he breathed into ¹ his face; and the man came to have a soul (and remained) ⁵ upon the ground many days. But they could not ¹ make him arise because of their powerlessness. ¹ Like storm winds they persisted (in blowing), that they might ¹ try to capture that image, which had appeared ¹ to them in the waters. And they did not know ¹⁰ the identity of its power.

Now all these (events) came ¹ to pass by the will of the father of the entirety. Afterwards, ¹ the spirit saw the soul-endowed man ¹ upon the ground. And the spirit came forth from ¹ the Adamantine Land; it descended and came to dwell within ¹⁵ him, and that man became a living soul. ¹

It called his name Adam since he ¹ was found moving upon the ground. A voice ¹ came forth from incorruptibility for the assistance of Adam; ¹ and the rulers gathered together ²⁰ all the animals of the earth and all the ¹ birds of heaven and brought them in to Adam ¹ to see what

Adam would call them, ¹ that he might give a name to each of the birds ¹ and all the beasts.

They took Adam ²⁵ [and] put him in the garden, that he might cultivate ¹ [it] and keep watch over it. And the rulers issued a command ¹ to him, saying, "From [every] tree ¹ in the garden shall you (sg.) eat; ¹ yet — [from] the tree of recognizing good ³⁰ and evil do not eat, nor ¹ [touch] it; for the day you (pl.) eat ¹ [from] it, with death you (pl.) are going to die."

They ¹ [...] this. They do not understand what ¹ [they have said] to him; rather, by the father's will, 89 they said this in such a way that he ¹ might (in fact) eat, and that Adam might <not> regard them as would a man of an exclusively ¹ material nature.

The rulers took counsel ¹ with one another and said, "Come, let us cause ⁵ a deep sleep to fall upon Adam." And he slept. ¹ — Now the deep sleep that they ¹ "caused to fall upon him, and he slept" is Ignorance. — They opened ¹ his side like a living woman. ¹ And they built up his side with some flesh ¹⁰ in place of her, and Adam came to be endowed ¹ only with soul.

And the spirit-endowed woman ¹ came to him and spoke with him, saying, ¹ "Arise, Adam." And when he saw her, ¹ he said, "It is you who have given me life; ¹⁵ you will be called 'Mother of the living.' ¹ — For it is she who is my mother. It is she who is the physician, ¹ and the woman, and she who has given birth."

Then the ¹ authorities came up to their Adam. ¹ And when they saw his female counterpart speaking with him, ²⁰ they became agitated with great agitation; ¹ and they became enamored of her. They said to one another, ¹ "Come, let us sow our seed ¹ in her," and they pursued her. And ¹ she laughed at them for their witlessness ²⁵ and their blindness; and in their clutches, she became a tree, ¹ and left before them her shadowy reflection resembling herself; ¹ and they defiled [it] ¹ foully. — And they defiled the stamp of ¹ her voice, so that ³⁰ by the form they had modelled, together with [their] (own) image, they made themselves liable to condemnation. ¹

Then the female spiritual principle came [in] ¹ the snake, the instructor; and it taught [them], ¹ saying, "What did he [say to] ¹ you (pl.)? Was it, 'From every tree in the garden ³⁵ shall you (sg.) eat; yet — from [the tree] 90 of recognizing evil and good ¹ do not eat?'"

The carnal woman said, ¹ "Not only did he say 'Do not eat,' but even ¹ 'Do not touch it; for the day you (pl.) eat from it, with death you (pl.) are going to die.'"¹

And the snake, the instructor, said, "With death ¹ you (pl.) shall not die; for it was out of jealousy ¹ that he said this to you (pl.). Rather your (pl.) eyes ¹ shall open and you (pl.) shall come to be like gods, recognizing ¹⁰ evil and good." ¹ And the female instructing principle was taken away from the snake, ¹ and she left it behind merely a thing of the earth. ¹

And the carnal woman took from the tree ¹ and ate; and she gave to her husband as well as herself; and ¹⁵ these beings that possessed only a soul, ate. And their imperfection ¹ became apparent in their lack of acquaintance; and ¹ they recognized that they were naked of the spiritual element, ¹ and took fig leaves and bound them ¹ upon their loins.

Then the chief ruler came; ²⁰ and he said, "Adam! Where are you?" – for he did not ¹ understand what had happened.

And Adam ¹ said, "I heard your voice and was ¹ afraid because I was naked; and I hid." ¹

The ruler said, "Why did you (sg.) hide, unless it is ²⁵ because you (sg.) have eaten from the tree ¹ from which alone I commanded you (sg.) not to eat? ¹ And you (sg.) have eaten!" ¹

Adam said, "The woman that you gave me, ¹ [she gave] to me and I ate." And the arrogant ³⁰ ruler cursed the woman.

The woman ¹ said, "It was the snake that led me astray and I ate." ¹ [They turned] to the snake and cursed its shadowy reflection, ¹ [...] powerless, not comprehending ¹ [that] it was a form they themselves had modelled. From that day, 91 the snake came to be under the curse of the authorities; ¹ until the all-powerful man was to come, ¹ that curse fell upon the snake.

They turned ¹ to their Adam and took him and expelled him from the garden ⁵ along with his wife; for they have no ¹ blessing, since they too are ¹ beneath the curse.

Moreover they threw mankind ¹ into great distraction and into a life ¹ of toil, so that their mankind might be ¹⁰ occupied by worldly affairs, and might not have the opportunity ¹ of being devoted to the holy spirit.

Now afterwards, ¹ she bore Cain, their son; and Cain ¹ cultivated the land. Thereupon he knew his ¹ wife; again becoming pregnant, she bore Abel; and Abel ¹⁵ was a herdsman of sheep. Now Cain brought ¹ in from the crops of his field, but ¹ Abel brought in an offering (from) among ¹ his lambs. God looked upon the ¹ votive offerings of Abel; but he did not accept the votive offerings ²⁰ of Cain. And carnal Cain ¹ pursued Abel his brother.

And God ¹ said to Cain, "Where is Abel your brother?" ¹

He answered, saying, "Am I, then, ¹ my brother's keeper?"

God said to ²⁵ Cain, "Listen! The voice of your brother's blood ¹ is crying up to me! You have sinned with ¹ your mouth. It will return to you: anyone who ¹ kills Cain will let loose seven ¹ vengeancees, and you will exist groaning and ³⁰ trembling upon the earth."

And Adam [knew] ¹ his female counterpart Eve, and she became pregnant, and bore [Seth] ¹ to Adam. And she said, "I have borne [another] ¹ man through God, in place [of Abel]." ¹

Again Eve became pregnant, and she bore [Norea]. ³⁵ And she said, "He has begotten on [me a] virgin 92 as an assistance [for] many generations ¹ of mankind." She is the virgin whom the ¹ forces did not defile.

Then mankind began ¹ to multiply and improve.

The rulers took counsel ⁵ with one another and said, "Come, let ¹ us cause a deluge with our ¹ hands and obliterate all flesh, from man ¹ to beast."

But when the ruler of the forces ¹ came to know of their decision, he said to Noah, ¹⁰ "Make yourself an ark from some wood ¹ that does not rot and hide in it — you ¹ and your children and the beasts and ¹ the birds of heaven from small to large — and set it ¹ upon Mount Sir."

Then Orea came ¹⁵ to him wanting to board the ark. ¹ And when he would not let her, she blew upon the ¹ ark and caused it to be consumed by fire. Again he ¹ made the ark, for a second time.

The rulers went to meet her ¹ intending to lead her astray. ²⁰ Their supreme chief said to her, "Your mother ¹ Eve came to us."

But Norea turned to ¹ them and said to them, "It is you who are the rulers of ¹ the darkness; you are accursed. And you did not know ¹ my mother; instead it was your female ²⁵ counterpart that you knew. For I am not your descendant; ¹ rather it is from the world above that I am come." ¹

The arrogant ruler turned, with all his might, ¹ [and] his countenance came to be like (a) black ¹ [...]; he said to her presumptuously, ³⁰ "You must render service to us, ¹ [as did] also your mother Eve; for I have been given (?) ¹ [...]."

But Norea turned, with the might of ¹ [...]; and in a loud voice [she] cried out ¹ [up to] the holy one, the God of the entirety, ⁹³ "Rescue me from the rulers of unrighteousness ¹ and save me from their clutches — forthwith!"

The <great> angel ¹ came down from the heavens ¹ and said to her, "Why are you crying up ⁵ to God? Why do you act so boldly towards the ¹ holy spirit?"

Norea said, "Who are you?"¹

The rulers of unrighteousness had withdrawn from¹ her. He said, "It is I who am Eleleth,¹ sagacity, the great angel, who stands¹⁰ in the presence of the holy spirit.¹ I have been sent to speak with you and¹ save you from the grasp of the lawless. And I¹ shall teach you about your root."

— Now as for that angel,¹ I cannot speak of his power: his appearance is like¹⁵ fine gold and his raiment is like snow.¹ No, truly, my mouth cannot bear¹ to speak of his power and the appearance of his face!¹

Eleleth, the great angel, spoke to me.¹ "It is I," he said, "who am understanding.²⁰ I am one of the four light-givers,¹ who stand in the presence of the great¹ invisible spirit. Do you think¹ these rulers have any power over you (sg.)? None¹ of them can prevail against the root²⁵ of truth; for on its account he appeared¹ in the final ages; and¹ these authorities will be restrained. And these authorities¹ cannot defile you and that generation;¹ for your (pl.) abode is in incorruptibility,³⁰ where the virgin spirit dwells,¹ who is superior to the authorities of chaos¹ and to their universe."

But I said,¹ Sir, teach me about the [faculty of]¹ these authorities — [how] did they come into being,³⁵ and by what kind of genesis, [and] of 94 what material, and who¹ created them and their force?"

And the¹ great angel Eleleth, understanding, spoke to me:¹ "Within limitless realms⁵ dwells incorruptibility. Sophia,¹ who is called Pistis, wanted to¹ create something, alone without her consort; and¹ her product was a celestial thing.¹

"A veil exists between the world above¹⁰ and the realms that are below; and¹ shadow came into being beneath the veil;¹ and that shadow became matter;¹ and that shadow was projected¹ apart. And what she had created became¹⁵ a product in the matter, like an aborted fetus.¹ And it assumed a plastic form molded out of shadow, and became¹ an arrogant beast resembling a lion."¹ It was androgynous, as I have already said,¹ because it was from matter that it derived.

"Opening his²⁰ eyes he saw a vast quantity of matter without limit;¹ and he became arrogant, saying, 'It is I who am God, and there¹ is none other apart from me.'

"When he said¹ this, he sinned against the entirety.¹ And a voice came forth from above the realm of absolute power,²⁵ saying, 'You are mistaken, Samael' —¹ which is, 'god of the blind.'

"And he¹ said, 'If any other thing exists before¹ me, let it become visible to me!’ And ¹ immediately Sophia stretched forth her finger ³⁰ and introduced light into ¹ matter; and she pursued it down ¹ to the region of chaos. And she returned ¹ up [to] her light; once again darkness ¹ [. . .] matter.

“This ruler, by being androgynous, ³⁵ made himself a vast realm, 95 an extent without limit. And he contemplated ¹ creating offspring for himself, and created ¹ for himself seven offspring, androgynous just like ¹ their parent.

“And he said to his offspring, ⁵ ‘It is I who am the god of the entirety.’

“And Zoe (Life), ¹ the daughter of Pistis Sophia, cried ¹ out and said to him, ‘You are mistaken, Sakla!’ – ¹ for which the alternate name is Yaltabaoth. She ¹ breathed into his face, and her breath became ¹⁰ a fiery angel for her; and ¹ that angel bound Yaldabaoth ¹ and cast him down into Tartaros ¹ below the abyss.

“Now when his offspring ¹ Sabaoth saw the force of that angel, ¹⁵ he repented and ¹ condemned his father and his ¹ mother matter.

“He loathed her, but he ¹ sang songs of praise up to Sophia and her daughter Zoe. ¹ And Sophia and Zoe caught him up ²⁰ and gave him charge of the seventh heaven, ¹ below the veil between ¹ above and below. And he is ¹ called ‘God of the forces, Sabaoth,’ ¹ since he is up above the forces ²⁵ of chaos, for Sophia established ¹ him.

“Now when these (events) had come to pass, he made ¹ himself a huge four-faced chariot of cherubim, ¹ and infinitely many angels ¹ to act as ministers, ³⁰ and also harps and ¹ lyres.

“And Sophia took her daughter ¹ Zoe and had her sit upon his right to teach him about the things that exist ¹ in the eighth (heaven); and the angel [of] wrath ³⁵ she placed upon his left. [Since] that day, [his right] has been called 96 life; and the left has come to represent ¹ the unrighteousness of the realm of absolute power ¹ above. It was before your (sg.) time that they came into being (text corrupt?).

“Now when ¹ Yaldabaoth saw him in this ⁵ great splendor and at this height, he envied him; ¹ and the envy became an androgynous product. ¹ and this was the origin of ¹ envy. And envy engendered death; and death ¹ engendered his offspring and gave each ¹⁰ of them charge of its heaven; and all the heavens ¹ of chaos became full of their multitudes.

“But it was ¹ by the will of the father of the entirety that they all came into being – ¹ after the pattern of all the things above – ¹ so that the sum of chaos might be attained. ¹⁵

“There, I have taught you (sg.) about the pattern ¹ of the rulers; and the matter in which it was expressed; ¹ and their parent; and their universe.”

But I ¹ said, “Sir, am I also ¹ from their matter?”

– “You, together with your offspring, are from ²⁰ the primeval father; ¹ from above, out of the imperishable light, ¹ their souls are come. Thus the authorities ¹ cannot approach them because of ¹ the spirit of truth present within them; ²⁵ and all who have become acquainted with this way ¹ exist deathless in the midst ¹ of dying mankind. Still that sown element (sperma) ¹ will not become known now.

“Instead, ¹ after three generations it will come to be known, ³⁰ and has freed them from the bondage of the ¹ authorities’ error.”

Then I said, ¹ “Sir, how much longer?”

He said ¹ to me, “Until the moment when the true man, ¹ within a modelled form, reveals the existence of (?) ³⁵ [the spirit of] truth, which the father has sent. 97

“Then he will teach them about ¹ everything: And he will anoint them with the ¹ unction of life eternal, ¹ given him from the undominated generation. ⁵

“Then they will be freed of ¹ blind thought: And they will trample under foot ¹ death, which is of the authorities: And they will ascend ¹ into the limitless light, ¹ where this sown element belongs. ¹⁰

“Then the authorities will relinquish their ¹ ages: And their angels will weep ¹ over their destruction: And their demons ¹ will lament their death.

“Then all the children ¹ of the light will be truly acquainted with the truth ¹⁵ and their root, and the father ¹ of the entirety and the holy spirit: They will all say ¹ with a single voice, ¹ ‘The father’s truth is just, and the son ¹ presides over the entirety’: And from everyone ²⁰ unto the ages of ages, ‘Holy – holy – holy! Amen!’” ¹

The Reality ¹
Of the Rulers

ON THE ORIGIN OF THE WORLD (II,5 AND XIII,2)

Introduced by

HANS-GEORG BETHGE

Translated by

HANS-GEORG BETHGE, BENTLEY LAYTON, SOCIETAS COPTICA HIEROSOLYMITANA

The text of this tractate is quite well preserved. It is a compendium of central gnostic ideas, especially on cosmogony, anthropogony, and eschatology. Based on various sources and traditions, the treatise is in part presented in a semi-scholarly style, with numerous etiologies and etymologies. It is in the form of an apologetic tract designed for public effectiveness in attracting adherents. Earthly history, but also the presentation of the world above, including its development, are largely ignored. On the basis of the unnamed and unknown author's intention, stated at the beginning and then carried through in the text itself, scholarship has assigned the document the hypothetical title On the Origin of the World.

There are good reasons to assume that we have to do with a conscious, well-planned literary composition without extensive secondary alterations, rather than with the product of a rather long process in the transmission of tradition. The early fourth century could possibly be the time of composition. The remarkable mixture of various kinds of Jewish views, Manichaean elements, Christian ideas, Greek philosophical conceptions, and figures of Greek or Hellenistic mythology, magic, and astrology, as well as a clear emphasis on Egyptian thought, all point to Alexandria as the probable place of origin for the Greek original of On the Origin of the World. The process of translating into Coptic may have involved several stages. The seemingly corrupt condition of many passages that invite emendation, along with other difficult, often barely intelligible, parts could be explained by assuming that the text as it lies before us still represents a provisional stage in the process of translation. On the Origin of the World would thus be an "opus imperfectum" (B. Layton).

The author uses various sources and traditions, some not, that are difficult to define more closely in terms of literary criticism, much less to reconstruct. In the process there are on occasion tensions, unevenness, and contradictions, since at least a few of these traditions or works presuppose a very special system all their own, or contain other tendencies, e.g., Sethian, or Valentinian, or even Manichaean. On the Origin of the World itself offers no closed system of its own, nor does it represent one of the known gnostic systems. The author works with direct or indirect quotations, references, summaries, explanations, and etymologies, which stand in sharp contrast to the otherwise dominant narrative style. This way of working, defending one's own view by appeal or reference to other works, is intended as a demonstration of a substantive and convincing argumentation. On the Origin of the World has many parallels with The Hypothesis of the Archons, indicating a close relation between the two texts. Yet the dissimilar nature of both documents, the diverging world views, and numerous differences in details, indicate that direct literary relationships are rather improbable. The parallelism probably results from the use of the same source material.

The cosmogony and anthropogony that follow upon the semi-philosophical beginning are in part oriented to Genesis 1-2, but beyond that to concepts such as those known from Jubilees or the Enoch literature. In general, characteristically Jewish influences dominate, e.g., in the angelology, demonology, and eschatology, as well as in etymologies. The gnostic reinterpretation of the received material varies considerably. It extends from complete reevaluation, e.g., in the case of the demiurge's presumption (making use of Is 45:5; 46:9 LXX), and what took place in Genesis 3, on to relatively unbroken appropriation of Jewish ideas and motifs, such as the presentation of paradise.

The primordial history emphasizes the creation of the earthly man by the Archons, in connection with the doctrine of the primal man, which to be sure is hard to understand, due to varying motifs and heterogeneous concepts. On the other hand, the primordial history initiates already the story of redemption on the part of Pistis Sophia or Sophia Zoe, who are encountered or act in various ways. In this complex soteriology, however, Jesus Christ has no central function, but rather a marginal role. For these reasons On the Origin of the World belongs to the gnostic Nag Hammadi texts that are essentially non-Christian.

On the Origin of the World is oriented towards universal eschatology. This is shown by the many allusions to the end, as well as by the broad presentation of the final events with a massive appropriation of thoughts, terms, and motifs from apocalypticism. The final state, brought about by the higher world, distinguishing the redemption of the gnostics from the destruction of the creation together with its creator, surpasses the primal condition, and renders impossible a repetition of events such as these presented in On the Origin of the World.

On the Origin of the World is a significant gnostic work. We attain through this relatively long document a good insight into an educated author's thinking, work habits, and argumentation on fundamental themes. Furthermore, On the Origin of the World shows to what a high degree and with what freedom and authority a gnostic author makes use of foreign, even non-gnostic and heterogeneous thoughts. It thus attests the greater importance ascribed to the gnostic stance toward the world and existence than to its mythological formulation. On the Origin of the World can help us understand how the gnostic world view, in debate with other intellectual currents, but also making use of them, could maintain itself or perhaps at times even win the field.

ON THE ORIGIN OF THE WORLD

II 97, 24-127, 17

Seeing that everybody, gods of the world ²⁵ and mankind, says that nothing ¹ existed prior to chaos, I ¹ in distinction to them shall demonstrate that they are ¹ all mistaken, because they are not acquainted with the origin ¹ of chaos, nor with its root. Here is the demonstration. ³⁰ How well it suits 98 all men, on the subject of chaos, to say that ¹ it is a kind of darkness! But in fact it comes from a shadow, ¹ which has been called by the name darkness. And the shadow ¹ comes from a product that has existed ⁵ since the beginning. It is, moreover, clear that it (viz., the product) ¹ existed before chaos came into being, and that the latter ¹ is posterior to the first product.

Let us therefore concern ourselves ¹ with the facts of the matter; and furthermore, with the first ¹ product, from which chaos was projected. ¹⁰ And in this way the truth will be clearly demonstrated. ¹

After the natural structure of the immortal beings ¹ had completely developed out of the infinite, ¹ a likeness then emanated from Pistis (Faith); ¹ it is called Sophia (Wisdom). It exercised volition ¹⁵ and became a product resembling ¹ the primeval light. And ¹ immediately her will manifested itself ¹ as a likeness of heaven, having ¹ an unimaginable magnitude; ²⁰ it was between the immortal beings and those things that ¹ came into being after them, like . . . : she (Sophia) ¹ functioned as a veil dividing ¹ mankind from the things above.

Now the eternal realm (aeon) ¹ of truth has no shadow outside it, ²⁵ for the limitless light is everywhere ¹ within it. But its exterior is shadow, ¹ which has been called by the name darkness. From ¹ it there appeared a force, presiding over ¹ the darkness. And the forces ³⁰ that came into being subsequent to them called the shadow ¹ "the limitless chaos." From it, ¹ every [kind] of divinity sprouted up ¹ . . . together with the entire place, [so that] ¹ also, [shadow] is posterior to the first 99 product. It was (in) the abyss that [it] (shadow) appeared, ¹ deriving from the aforementioned Pistis.

Then ¹ shadow perceived that there was something ¹ mightier than it, and felt envy; and when it had become pregnant ¹⁵ of its own accord, suddenly it ¹ engendered jealousy. Since that day, ¹ the principle of jealousy amongst ¹ all the eternal realms and their worlds has been apparent. Now as for that jealousy, ¹ it was found to be an abortion without ¹⁰ any spirit in it. Like a shadow it came into existence ¹ in a vast watery substance. Then ¹ the bile that had come into being out of the shadow ¹ was thrown into a part of chaos. ¹ Since that day, a watery substance ¹⁵ has been apparent. And what sank within ¹ it flowed away, being visible ¹ in chaos: as with a woman giving birth to a child ¹ — all her superfluities flow out; ¹ just so, matter came into being out of ²⁰ shadow and was projected apart. And it (viz., matter) did not ¹ depart from chaos; rather, matter was in chaos, ¹ being in a part of it. ¹

And when these things had come to pass, then Pistis came ¹ and appeared over the matter of ²⁵ chaos, which had been expelled like an ¹ aborted fetus — since there was no spirit in it. For all of it (viz., chaos) ¹ was limitless darkness ¹ and bottomless water. ¹ Now when Pistis saw what had resulted ³⁰ from her defect, she became disturbed. ¹ And the disturbance appeared, as a ¹ fearful product; it rushed [to] her in ¹ the chaos. She turned to it and [blew] into ¹ its face in the abyss, which is below 100 all the heavens.

And when Pistis ¹ Sophia desired to cause the thing ¹ that had no spirit to be formed into a likeness ¹ and to rule over matter and over all her ⁵ forces, there appeared for the first time ¹ a ruler, out of the waters, ¹ lionlike in appearance, androgynous, ¹ having great authority within ¹ him, and ignorant of whence he had come into being. ¹⁰ Now when Pistis Sophia ¹ saw him moving about in the depth of the waters ¹ she said to him, “Child, ¹ pass through to here,” whose equivalent is “yalda baōth.”

Since that day there appeared the principle ¹⁵ of verbal expression, which reached ¹ the gods and the angels and mankind. ¹ And what came into being as a result of verbal expression, ¹ the gods and the angels and mankind finished. ¹ Now as for the ruler Yaltabaoth, ²⁰ he is ignorant of the force of Pistis: ¹ he did not see her face, rather he saw ¹ in the water the likeness that spoke with him. ¹ And because of that voice, he called ¹ himself Yaldabaoth. But ²⁵ Arael is what the perfect call him, for he was like ¹ a lion. Now when he had come to have authority over matter, ¹ Pistis Sophia withdrew up ¹ to her light.

When the ruler saw ³⁰ his magnitude — and it was only himself ¹ that he saw: he saw nothing else, ¹ except for water and darkness — then he supposed ¹ that it was he alone who existed. His ¹ [...] was completed by verbal expression: it 101 appeared as a spirit moving to and fro ¹ upon the waters. And when that spirit ¹ appeared, the ruler set apart the watery substance. ¹ And what was dry ⁵ was divided into another place. And from matter ¹ he made for himself an abode, and he called ¹ it heaven. And from matter, ¹ the ruler made a footstool, ¹ and he called it earth.

Next, ¹⁰ the ruler had a thought — consistent with his nature — and ¹ by means of verbal expression he created an androgyne. ¹ He opened his mouth and cooed to ¹ him. When his eyes had been opened, he looked ¹ at his father, and he said to him, “Eee!” Then his ¹⁵ father called him Eee-a-o (Yao). Next he ¹ created the second son. He cooed ¹ to him. And he opened his eyes and said ¹ to his father, “Eh!” His father called ¹ him Eloai. Next he created ²⁰ the third son. He cooed to him. And he opened his ¹ eyes and said to his father, "Asss!" His ¹ father called him Astaphaios. These ¹ are the three sons of their father. ¹

Seven appeared in chaos, androgynous. ²⁵ They have their masculine names ¹ and their feminine names. The feminine name ¹ is Pronoia (Forethought) Sambathas, which ¹ is "week." And his son is called ¹ Yao: his feminine name is Lordship. ³⁰

Sabaoth: his feminine name is Deity. ¹

Adonaios: his feminine name is Kingship. ¹

Eloaios: his feminine name is Jealousy. ¹

Oraios: his feminine name is Wealth. ¹

And Astaphaios: his feminine name 102 is Sophia (Wisdom).

These are the [seven] forces ¹ of the seven heavens of [chaos]. And they were born ¹ androgynous, consistent with the immortal pattern ¹ that existed before them, according to the wish ⁵ of Pistis: so that the likeness of what had ¹ existed since the beginning might reign to ¹ the end.

You (sg.) will find the effect of these names ¹ and the force of the male entities in the Archangelic (Book) ¹ of the Prophet Moses, and the ¹⁰ names of the female entities in the first Book (biblos) ¹ of Noraia.

Now the prime parent Yaldabaoth, ¹ since he possessed great authorities, ¹ created heavens for each of his ¹ offspring through verbal expression — created them beautiful, as dwelling places ¹⁵ — and in each heaven he created great glories, ¹ seven times excellent. Thrones and ¹ mansions and temples, and also ¹ chariots and virgin spirits up ¹ to an invisible one and their glories, each one ²⁰ has these in his heaven; mighty ¹ armies of gods and lords and angels ¹ and archangels — countless myriads ¹ — so that they might serve.

The account of these matters you (sg.) will find ¹ in a precise manner in the first Account ²⁵ of Oraia.

And they were completed from this heaven to as far up as ¹ the sixth heaven, namely that of Sophia. ¹ The heaven and his earth were destroyed by ¹ the troublemaker that was below them all. ¹ And the six heavens shook violently; ³⁰ for the forces of chaos knew who it was ¹ that had destroyed the heaven that was below them. ¹ And when Pistis knew about the breakage ¹ resulting from the disturbance, she sent forth her breath and ¹ bound him and cast him down into Tartaros. ³⁵ Since that day, the heaven, along with 103 its earth, has consolidated itself through Sophia the daughter of Yaldabaoth, ¹ she who is below them all. ¹

Now when the heavens had consolidated themselves along with their forces ¹ and all their administration, the prime parent ⁵ became insolent. And he was honored by ¹ all the army of angels. And ¹ all the gods and their angels ¹ gave blessing and honor to him. And for his part he ¹ was delighted and continually boasted, ¹⁰ saying to them, ¹ "I have no need of anyone." He said, ¹ "It is I who am God, and there is no other one that exists ¹ apart from me." And when he said this, he sinned against ¹ all the immortal beings who give answer. And they laid it ¹⁵ to his charge.

Then when Pistis saw the impiety ¹ of the chief ruler she was filled with anger. ¹ She was invisible. She said, "You are mistaken, ¹ Samael," that is, "blind god." ¹ "There is an immortal man of light who ²⁰ has been in existence before you and who will appear ¹ among your modelled forms; he will trample you to scorn ¹ just as potter's clay is pounded. And you will descend ¹ to your mother, the abyss, along with those that belong to you. ²⁵ For at the consummation of your (pl.) works ¹ the entire defect that has become visible ¹ out of the truth will be abolished, and it will cease to be and will be ¹ like what has never been." ¹ Saying this, Pistis revealed ³⁰ her likeness of her greatness in the waters. And ¹ so doing she withdrew up ¹ to her light.

Now when Sabaoth the son ¹ of Yaldabaoth heard the ¹ voice of Pistis, he sang praises to her, and [he] ³⁵ condemned the father . . . 104 at the word of Pistis; and he praised her ¹ because she had instructed them about the immortal man ¹ and his light. Then Pistis Sophia ¹ stretched out her finger and poured upon him ⁵ some light from her light, to be a condemnation ¹ of his father. Then when Sabaoth ¹ was illumined, he received great authority ¹ against all the forces of chaos. ¹ Since that day he has been called ¹⁰ "Lord of the Forces."

He hated his father, the darkness, ¹ and his mother, the abyss, and loathed ¹ his sister, the thought of the prime parent, ¹ which moved to and fro upon the waters. And because of ¹ his light all the authorities of chaos were jealous ¹⁵ of him. And when they had become disturbed, ¹ they made a great war in the seven ¹ heavens. Then when Pistis Sophia ¹ had seen the war, she dispatched ¹ seven archangels to Sabaoth from her light. ²⁰ They snatched him up to the seventh ¹ heaven. They stood before him as attendants. ¹ Furthermore she sent him three more ¹ archangels and established the kingdom for him ¹ over everyone so that he might dwell ²⁵ above the twelve gods ¹ of chaos.

Now when Sabaoth had taken up the place ¹ of repose in return for his repentance, ¹ Pistis also gave him her daughter Zoe (Life) ¹ together with great authority so that she might ³⁰ instruct him about all things that exist in the eighth heaven. ¹ And as he had authority, ¹ he made himself first of all a mansion. ¹ It is huge, magnificent, ¹ seven times as great as all those that exist ³⁵ in the seven heavens.

And before 105 his mansion he created a throne, ¹ which was huge and was upon a ¹ four-faced chariot called ¹ "Cherubin." Now the Cherubin has ⁵ eight shapes per each of ¹ the four corners, lion forms and ¹ calf forms and human forms ¹ and eagle forms, so that all the forms ¹ amount to sixty-four forms ¹⁰ — and (he created) seven archangels that stand ¹ before it; he is the eighth, and has ¹ authority. All the forms amount to ¹ seventy-two. Furthermore, from this chariot ¹ the seventy-two gods took shape; ¹⁵ they took shape so that they might rule over the seventy-two ¹ languages of the peoples. And by that throne ¹ he created other, ¹ serpent-like angels, called ¹ "Saraphin," which praise him at all times. ²⁰

Thereafter he created a congregation (ekklesia) of angels, thousands and myriads, numberless, ¹ which resembled the congregation in ¹ the eighth heaven; and a firstborn ¹ called Israel — which ²⁵ is, "the man that sees God"; and another being, ¹ called Jesus Christ, who resembles the savior ¹ above in the eighth heaven and who ¹ sits at his right upon a ¹ revered throne, and at his left, there ³⁰ sits the virgin of the holy spirit, ¹ upon a throne and glorifying him. ¹ And the seven virgins stand before her, ¹ ... possessing thirty harps, ¹ and psalteries and 106 trumpets, glorifying him. And ¹ all the armies of the angels glorify him, ¹ and they bless him. Now where he sits is upon a ¹ throne of light <within a> great cloud that covers ⁵ him. And there was no one with him ¹ in the cloud except Sophia <the daughter of> Pistis, ¹ instructing him about all the things that exist in the eighth heaven, ¹ so that the likenesses of those things might be created, ¹ in order that his reign might endure ¹⁰ until the consummation of the heavens of chaos ¹ and their forces.

Now Pistis Sophia ¹ set him apart from the darkness and summoned him to her right, ¹ and the prime parent she put at her left. ¹ Since that day, right has been called ¹⁵ justice, and left called ¹ wickedness. Now because of this they all received ¹ a realm (kosmos) in the congregation of justice ¹ and wickedness, ... stand ... upon a creature ... ¹ all.

Thus when the prime parent of chaos ²⁰ saw his son Sabaoth and the glory ¹ that he was in, and perceived that he was greatest of all the authorities ¹ of chaos, he envied him. And ¹ having become wrathful he engendered Death out of his ¹ death: and he (viz., Death) was established over the sixth ²⁵ heaven, <for> Sabaoth had been snatched up from there. ¹ And thus the number ¹ of the six authorities of chaos was achieved. Then Death, ¹ being androgynous, mingled with his (own) nature ¹ and begot seven androgynous offspring. ³⁰ These are the names of the male ones: Jealousy, Wrath, ¹ Tears, Sighing, Suffering, Lamentation, ¹ Bitter Weeping. And these are the names ¹ of the female ones: Wrath, Pain, Lust, ¹ Sighing, Curse, Bitterness, Quarrelsomeness. ³⁵ They had intercourse with one another, and each ¹ one begot seven, so that they amount to 107 forty-nine androgynous demons. ¹

Their names and their effects you will find ¹ in the Book of Solomon. ¹

And in the presence of these, Zoe, who ¹⁵ was with Sabaoth, created seven ¹ good androgynous forces. ¹ These are the names of the male ones: the Unenvious, ¹ the Blessed, the Joyful, the True, ¹ the Unbegudging, the Beloved, ¹⁰ the Trustworthy. Also, as regards the female ones, these are their ¹ names: Peace, Gladness, Rejoicing, Blessedness, ¹ Truth, Love, Faith (Pistis). And ¹ from these there are many good ¹ and innocent spirits.

Their influences ¹⁵ and their effects you will find in ¹ the Configurations of the Fate of Heaven That Is ¹ Beneath the Twelve. ¹

And having seen the likeness ¹ of Pistis in the waters, the prime parent grieved very much, ²⁰ especially when he heard her voice, ¹ like the first voice that had ¹ called to him out of the waters. And ¹ when he knew that it was she who had given a name ¹ to him, he sighed. He was ashamed on account of his ²⁵ transgression. And when he had come to know in truth ¹ that an immortal man ¹ of light had been existing before him, he was greatly disturbed; ¹ for he had previously said ¹ to all the gods and their angels, ³⁰ "It is I who am god. No other one ¹ exists apart from me." For he had been afraid ¹ they might know that another ¹ had been in existence before him, and might condemn him. But he, being devoid of understanding, ³⁵ scoffed at the condemnation ¹ and acted recklessly. He said, "If 108 anything has existed before me, let it appear, ¹ so that we may see its light."

And ¹ immediately, behold! Light came out of the eighth heaven ¹ above and passed through all of the heavens ⁵ of the earth. When the prime parent saw that the light was beautiful as it radiated, ¹ he was amazed. And he was greatly ashamed. As ¹ that light appeared, a human likeness ¹ appeared within it, very wonderful. ¹⁰ And no one saw it except for ¹ the prime parent and Pronoia, ¹ who was with him. Yet its light appeared ¹ to all the forces of the heavens. Because of this ¹ they were all troubled by it.

Then ¹⁵ when Pronoia saw that emissary, she became enamored of him. ¹ But he hated her because she was on the darkness. ¹ But she desired to embrace him, and she was not ¹ able to. When she was unable to assuage her love, ¹ she poured out her light upon the earth. Since ²⁰ that day, that emissary has been called ¹ "Adam of Light," whose rendering ¹ is "the luminous man of blood," and the earth spread over him, holy Adaman, ¹ whose rendering is "the Holy Land of Adamantine." ²⁵ Since that day, ¹ all the authorities have honored the blood of the virgin. ¹ And the earth was purified on account of ¹ the blood of the virgin. But most of all, ¹ the water was purified through the likeness of Pistis ³⁰ Sophia, who had appeared to ¹ the prime parent in the waters. ¹ Justly, then, it has been said: "through the waters." ¹ The holy water, since it vivifies the all, 109 purifies it.

Out of that first blood ¹ Eros appeared, being androgynous. ¹ His masculinity is Himireris (i.e., Himeros), being ¹ fire from the light. His femininity, ⁵ that is with him – a soul of blood – is from ¹ the stuff of Pronoia. He is very lovely ¹ in his beauty, having a charm beyond ¹ all the creatures of chaos. Then all the gods ¹ and their angels, when they beheld ¹⁰ Eros, became enamored of him. And appearing ¹ in all of them he set them afire: just as ¹ from a single lamp many lamps ¹ are lit, and one and the same light is there, but the lamp ¹ is not diminished. And in this way Eros ¹⁵ became dispersed in all the created beings of chaos, ¹ and was not diminished. Just as from ¹ the midpoint of light and darkness ¹ Eros appeared and at the midpoint ¹ of the angels and mankind ²⁰ the sexual union of Eros was consummated, so ¹ out of the earth the primal pleasure blossomed. ¹ The woman followed earth. ¹ And marriage followed woman. ¹ Birth followed marriage. Dissolution ²⁵ followed birth.

After that Eros, ¹ the grapevine sprouted up ¹ out of that blood, which had been shed over ¹ the earth. Because of this, those who drink of it ¹ conceive the desire of sexual union. ³⁰ After the grapevine, a fig tree ¹ and a pomegranate tree sprouted up from ¹ the earth, together with the rest of the trees, ¹ all species, having ¹ within them their seed from the 110 seed of the authorities and their angels. ¹

Then Justice created Paradise, ¹ being beautiful and being outside the orbit ¹ of the moon and the orbit of the sun in ¹⁵ the Land of Wantonness, in the East in the midst ¹ of the stones. And desire is in the midst of ¹ the beautiful, appetizing trees. And ¹ the tree of eternal life is as it ¹ appeared by God's will, ¹⁰ to the north of Paradise, so that it might make ¹ eternal the souls of the pure, ¹ who shall come forth from the modelled forms of poverty ¹ at the consummation of the age. Now the color ¹ of the tree of life is like the sun. And ¹⁵ its branches are beautiful. Its leaves are like ¹ those of the cypress. Its fruit is like ¹ a bunch of grapes when it is white. Its height ¹ goes as far as heaven. And next to it (is) the tree ¹ of acquaintance (gnosis), having the strength ²⁰ of God. Its glory is like the moon ¹ when fully radiant. And its branches are beautiful. ¹ Its leaves are like fig leaves. ¹ Its fruit is like a good appetizing date. ¹ And this tree is to the north of Paradise, ²⁵ so that it might arouse the souls from ¹ the torpor of the demons, in order that they might approach ¹ the tree of life and eat of ¹ its fruit and so condemn the ¹ authorities and their angels.

The effect ³⁰ of this tree is described in the Sacred Book, ¹ to wit: "It is you who are the tree of acquaintance, ¹ which is in Paradise, from which the first ¹ man ate and which opened his mind; ¹ and he loved his female counterpart and condemned 111 the other, alien likenesses and loathed them." ¹

Now after it, the olive tree sprouted up, ¹ which was to purify the kings and the ¹ high priests of righteousness, who were to ⁵ appear in the last days, since ¹ the olive tree appeared out of the light ¹ of the first Adam for the sake of the unguent ¹ that they were to receive.

And the first soul (psyche) loved ¹ Eros, who was with her, and poured her blood ¹⁰ upon him and upon the earth. ¹ And out of that blood the rose first sprouted up, ¹ out of the earth, out of ¹ the thorn bush, to be a source of joy for the light that ¹ was to appear in the bush. ¹⁵ Moreover after this the beautiful, good-smelling flowers ¹ sprouted up from the earth, ¹ different kinds, from every single virgin ¹ of the daughters of Pronoia. ¹ And they, when they had become enamored of Eros, poured out ²⁰ their blood upon him and upon the earth. ¹ After these, every plant sprouted up ¹ from the earth, different kinds, containing ¹ the seed of the authorities and their ¹ angels. After these, the authorities ²⁵ created out of the waters all species of beast, ¹ and the reptiles and birds — different kinds — containing ¹ the seed of the authorities and their angels. ¹

But before all these, when he had appeared ³⁰ on the first day, he remained upon the earth, something like two days, and ¹ left the lower Pronoia in ¹ heaven, and ascended towards his light. And ¹ immediately darkness covered all the universe. 112 Now when she wished, the Sophia who was in the lower heaven ¹ received authority from ¹ Pistis, and fashioned great luminous bodies ¹ and all the stars. And she put them in the sky to ⁵ shine upon the earth and to render ¹ temporal signs and seasons and ¹ years and months and days ¹ and nights and moments and so forth. ¹ And in this way the entire region upon the sky was adorned. ¹⁰

Now when Adam of Light conceived the wish ¹ to enter his light — i.e., ¹ the eighth heaven — he was unable to do so because of ¹ the poverty that had mingled with his light. Then ¹ he created for himself a vast eternal realm. And within ¹⁵ that eternal realm he created six eternal realms ¹ and their adornments, six in number, that were seven times better ¹ than the heavens of chaos and their adornments. ¹ Now all these eternal realms and their ¹ adornments exist within the infinity ²⁰ that is between the eighth heaven and the chaos below ¹ it, being counted with the universe that belongs to ¹ poverty.

If you (sg.) want to know the arrangement ¹ of these, you will find it written in the Seventh ¹ Universe of the Prophet Hieralias. ²⁵

And before Adam of Light had ¹ withdrawn in the chaos, the authorities saw him ¹ and laughed at the prime parent because he had ¹ lied when he said, “It is I who am God. ¹ No one exists before me.” When they came to ³⁰ him, they said, “Is this not the god who ¹ ruined our work?” He answered and said, ¹ “Yes. If you do not want him to be able ¹ to ruin our work, come let us ¹ create a man (i.e., human being) out of earth, according to ³⁵ the image of our body and according to the likeness 113 of this being (viz., Adam of Light), to serve us; so that when he (viz., Adam of Light) ¹ sees his likeness he might become enamored of it. No longer will he ¹ ruin our work; rather, ¹ we shall make those who are born out of the light our servants ⁵ for all the duration of this eternal realm. Now all of this ¹ came to pass according to the forethought of Pistis, ¹ in order that man should appear after ¹ his likeness, and should condemn them ¹ because of their modelled form. And their modelled form ¹⁰ became an enclosure of the light.

Then the authorities ¹ received the acquaintance (gnosis) necessary to create ¹ man. Sophia ¹ Zoe — she who is with Sabaoth — had anticipated them. And she laughed ¹ at their decision. For they are blind: ¹⁵ against their own interests they ignorantly created him. ¹ And they do not realise what they are about to do. ¹ The reason she anticipated them and made her own man (i.e., human being) ¹ first, was in order that he might instruct ¹ their modelled form how to despise ²⁰ them and thus to escape from them. ¹

Now the production of the instructor came about ¹ as follows. When Sophia let fall a droplet ¹ of light, it flowed onto the water, ¹ and immediately a human being appeared, being androgynous. ²⁵ That droplet she molded ¹ first as a female body. Afterwards, ¹ using the body she molded it ¹ in the likeness of the mother which had appeared. ¹ And he finished it in twelve months. ³⁰ An androgynous human being was produced, ¹ whom the Greeks call Hermaphrodites; ¹ and whose mother the Hebrews call ¹ Eve of Life (Eve of Zoe), namely, the female instructor ¹ of life. Her offspring is the creature ³⁵ that is lord. Afterwards, the authorities 114 called it "Beast," so that it might lead astray ¹ their modelled creatures. The interpretation of "the beast" ¹ is "the instructor." For it was found to be the wisest ¹ of all beings.

Now, Eve is the first ⁵ virgin, the one who without a husband bore her first offspring. ¹ It is she who served as her own midwife.

For ¹ this reason she is held to have said: ¹

"It is I who am the part of my mother;
 And it is I who am ¹ the mother;
 It is I who am the wife;
 It is I who am the virgin; ¹⁰
 It is I who am pregnant;
 It is I who am the midwife;
 It is I who am the one that ¹ comforts pains of travail;
 It is my husband who bore me;
 And ¹ it is I who am his mother,
 And it is he who is my father ¹ and my lord.
 It is he who is my force;
 What he desires, ¹ he says with reason.
 I am in the process of becoming.
 Yet ¹⁵ I have borne a man as lord."

Now these through the will ¹ (. . .). The souls ¹ that were going to enter the modelled forms of the authorities were manifested to Sabaoth and his Christ. ¹ And regarding these the holy voice ¹ said, "Multiply and improve! Be lord ²⁰ over all creatures." And it is they who were ¹ taken captive, according to their destinies, by ¹ the prime parent. And thus ¹ they were shut into the prisons of the modelled forms. ¹ Or: at the consummation of the age. And at that time, ²⁵ the prime parent ¹ then rendered an opinion concerning man to those who were with him. ¹ Then each of them cast ¹ his sperm into the midst of the navel of ¹ the earth. Since that day, the seven rulers ³⁰ have fashioned man with his body ¹ resembling their body, but his likeness ¹ resembling the man that had appeared to them. ¹ His modelling took place by parts, ¹ one at a time. And their leader fashioned ³⁵ the brain and the nervous system. Afterwards ¹ he appeared as prior to him. He became 115 a soul-endowed man. And he was called ¹ Adam, that is, "father," according to ¹ the name of the one that existed before him.

And when they had finished ¹ Adam, he abandoned him as an inanimate vessel, since he had taken form ⁵ like an abortion, in that no spirit was in him. ¹ Regarding this thing, when the chief ruler ¹ remembered the saying of Pistis, he was afraid ¹ lest the true man enter his ¹ modelled form and become its lord. For this reason he ¹⁰ left his modelled form forty days without ¹ soul, and he withdrew and abandoned it. Now on the fortieth ¹ day, Sophia Zoe sent ¹ her breath into Adam, who had no ¹ soul. He began to move upon the ground. ¹⁵ And he could not stand up.

Then when the seven ¹ rulers came, they saw him and ¹ were greatly disturbed. They went up to ¹ him and seized him. And he (viz., the chief ruler) said to ¹ the breath within him, "Who are you? And ²⁰ whence did you come hither?" It answered ¹ and said, "I have come from the force ¹ of the man for the destruction of your work." ¹ <...> When they heard, they glorified him, since he ¹ gave them respite from the fear and the anxiety in which they found themselves. ²⁵ Then they called that day ¹ "Rest," in as much as they had rested ¹ from toil. And when they saw that Adam ¹ could not stand up, they were glad, and they took him ¹ and put him in Paradise. And they withdrew ³⁰ up to their heavens.

After ¹ the day of rest Sophia ¹ sent her daughter Zoe, being called ¹ Eve, as an instructor in order that she might ¹ make Adam, who had no soul, arise ³⁵ so that those whom he should engender might become ¹ containers of light. When 116 Eve saw her male counterpart prostrate she had pity ¹ upon him, and she said, "Adam! Become alive! ¹ Arise upon the earth!" Immediately her word ¹ became accomplished fact. For Adam, having ⁵ arisen, suddenly opened his eyes. ¹ When he saw her he said, "You shall be called ¹ 'Mother of the Living'. For it is you who have ¹ given me life."

Then the authorities were informed ¹ that their modelled form was alive and had arisen, and they ¹⁰ were greatly troubled. They sent seven archangels ¹ to see what had happened. They came ¹ to Adam. When they saw Eve talking to ¹ him they said to one another, "What sort of thing is this luminous woman? ¹ For she resembles that likeness which appeared ¹⁵ to us in the light. Now come, ¹ let us lay hold of her and cast our ¹ seed into her, so that when she becomes soiled ¹ she may not be able to ascend into her light. ¹ Rather, those whom she bears will be under ²⁰ our charge. But let us not tell Adam, for he is not one ¹ of us. Rather let us bring a deep sleep ¹ over him. And let us instruct him in his ¹ sleep to the effect that she came from ¹ his rib, in order that his wife may obey, ²⁵ and he may be lord over her."

Then Eve, ¹ being a force, laughed at their decision. ¹ She put mist into their eyes and secretly left ¹ her likeness with Adam. She entered ¹ the tree of acquaintance and remained there. ³⁰ And they pursued her, and she revealed ¹ to them that she had gone into the tree and become ¹ a tree. Then, entering a great ¹ state of fear, the blind creatures fled.

Afterwards, ¹ when they had recovered from the daze, they came ³⁵ [to Adam]; and seeing the likeness of this woman 117 with him, they were greatly disturbed, thinking it was she ¹ that was the true Eve. And they acted rashly; they came ¹ up to her and seized her and cast ¹ their seed upon her. They did so ⁵ wickedly, defiling not only ¹ in natural ways but also in foul ways, ¹ defiling first the seal of her voice ¹ – that had spoken with them, saying, “What is it that exists ¹ before you?” – intending to defile those who might say ¹⁰ at the consummation (viz., of the age) that they had been born ¹ of the true man through verbal expression. ¹ And they erred, not knowing ¹ that it was their own body that they had defiled: it was the likeness that ¹ the authorities and their angels defiled in every way. ¹⁵

First she was pregnant with Abel, ¹ by the first ruler. And it was ¹ by the seven authorities and their angels ¹ that she bore the other offspring. And all this ¹ came to pass according to the forethought of the prime parent, ²⁰ so that the first mother ¹ might bear within her every seed, ¹ being mixed and being fitted to the fate ¹ of the universe and its configurations, and ¹ to Justice. A prearranged plan came into effect ²⁵ regarding Eve, so that the modelled forms of the authorities ¹ might become enclosures of the light, whereupon ¹ it (viz., the light) would condemn them through their ¹ modelled forms.

Now the first Adam, (Adam) of Light, ¹ is spirit-endowed (pneumatikos), and appeared ³⁰ on the first day. The second ¹ Adam is soul-endowed (psychikos), and appeared ¹ on the sixth day, which is called Aphrodite. The third ¹ Adam is a creature of the earth (choikos), that is, ³⁵ the man of the law, and he appeared on ¹ the eighth day [... the] tranquility 118 of poverty, which is called ¹ Sunday. And the progeny of the ¹ earthly Adam became numerous and was completed, ¹ and produced within itself every kind of scientific information of ⁵ the soul-endowed Adam. But all were in ¹ ignorance.

Next let me say ¹ that once the rulers had seen him and ¹ the female creature who was with him erring ignorantly ¹ like beasts, they were very glad. ¹⁰ <...> When they learned that the immortal man was not going to ¹ neglect them, rather that they would even have to fear ¹ the female creature that had turned into a tree, they were disturbed, and said,

“Perhaps this is the true man – this being who has brought a fog upon us and ¹⁵ has taught us that she who was soiled is like him – and so we shall be conquered!”

Then the seven of them together laid plans. They came up to Adam and Eve timidly: they said to him, “The fruit of all the trees created for you in Paradise ²⁰ shall be eaten; but as for the tree of acquaintance, control yourselves and do not eat from it. If you eat you will die.” Having imparted great fear to them they withdrew up to their authorities.

Then ²⁵ came the wisest of all creatures, who was called Beast. And when he saw the likeness of their mother Eve he said to her, “What did God say to you (pl.)? Was it ‘do not eat from the tree ³⁰ of acquaintance (gnosis)’?” She said, “He said, ‘Not only do not eat from it, but do not touch it, lest you (sg.) die’.” He said to her, “Do not be afraid. In death you (pl.) shall not die. For he knows that when you eat 119 from it, your intellect will become sober and you will come to be like gods, recognizing the difference that obtains between evil men and good ones. ⁵ Indeed, it was in jealousy that he said this to you, so that you would not eat from it.”

Now Eve had confidence in the words of the instructor. She gazed at the tree and saw that it was beautiful and appetizing, and liked it; she took some of ¹⁰ its fruit and ate it; and she gave some also to her husband, and he too ate it. Then their intellect became open. For when they had eaten, the light of acquaintance had shone upon them. When they clothed themselves with shame, they knew that they were naked ¹⁵ of acquaintance. When they became sober, they saw that they were naked and became enamored of one another. When they saw that the ones who had modelled them had the form of beasts, they loathed them: they were very aware.

Then when the rulers knew that they had broken ²⁰ their commandments, they entered Paradise and came to Adam and Eve with earthquake and great threatening, to see the effect of the aid. Then Adam and Eve trembled greatly ²⁵ and hid under the trees in Paradise. Then the rulers did not know where they were and said, “Adam, where are you?” He said, “I am here, for through fear of you I hid, being ashamed.” And they said to him ignorantly, ³⁰ “Who told you about the shame with which you clothed yourself? – unless you have eaten from that tree!” He said, “The woman whom you gave me – it is she that gave to me and I ate.” Then they said to the latter, 120 “What is this that you have done?” She answered and said, “It is the instructor that urged me on, and I ate.”

Then the rulers came up to the instructor. ¹ Their eyes became misty because of him, ⁵ and they could not do anything to him. They cursed him, ¹ since they were powerless. Afterwards, they came up to the woman ¹ and cursed her and her offspring. After ¹ the woman, they cursed Adam; and (cursed) the land because of him, ¹ and the crops; and all things that they had created ¹⁰ they cursed. They have no blessing. ¹ Good cannot result from ¹ evil.

From that day, the authorities ¹ knew that truly there was something mightier than ¹ they: they recognized only that ¹⁵ their commandments had not been kept. Great ¹ jealousy was brought into the world solely because of ¹ the immortal man. Now when the rulers saw ¹ that their Adam had entered into an alien state of acquaintance they ¹ desired to test him, and they gathered together ²⁰ all the domestic animals and the wild beasts ¹ of the earth and the birds of heaven and brought them to Adam ¹ to see what he would call them. ¹ When he saw them he gave names to their ¹ creatures.

They became troubled because Adam had recovered from ²⁵ all the trials. They assembled and ¹ laid plans, and they said, "Behold Adam! ¹ He has come to be like one of us, so that he ¹ knows the difference between the light and the darkness. ¹ Now perhaps he will be deceived as in the case of ³⁵ the tree of acquaintance and also will come to ¹ the tree of life and eat from it ¹ and become immortal and become lord and despise ¹ us and disdain [us] and all our glory. ¹ Then he will denounce ³⁵ [us along with our] universe. Come let us expel him 121 from Paradise down to the land ¹ from which he was taken, so that henceforth he might not ¹ be able to recognize anything better ¹ than we can." And so they expelled Adam from ⁵ Paradise, along with his wife. And this deed ¹ that they had done was not enough for them. Rather, they were afraid. ¹ They went in to the tree of life and surrounded it ¹ with great fearful things, fiery living creatures ¹ called "Cheroubin," and they put ¹⁰ a flaming sword in their midst, fearfully ¹ twirling at all times, so that ¹ no earthly being might ever enter ¹ that place.

Thereupon ¹ since the rulers were envious of Adam they wanted to diminish ¹⁵ their (viz., Adam's and Eve's) lifespans. They could not because of ¹ fate, which had been fixed since the beginning. ¹ For to each had been allotted a lifespan ¹ of 1,000 years according to the course of the luminous bodies. ¹ But although the rulers could not ²⁰ do this, each of the evil doers ¹ took away ten years. ¹ And all this lifespan (which remained) amounted to 930 years: and these are in pain and ¹ weakness and evil ²⁵ distraction. And so ¹ life has turned out to be, from that day until the consummation ¹ of the age.

Then when Sophia Zoe¹ saw that the rulers of the darkness had¹ laid a curse upon her counterparts, she was indignant.³⁰ And coming out of the first heaven with¹ full power she chased those rulers out of¹ [their] heavens, and cast them down into¹ the sinful [world], so that there they¹ should dwell, in the form of evil³⁵ spirits (daimones) upon the earth.

[...], 122 so that in their world it might pass the thousand years in Paradise¹ – a soul-endowed living creature¹ called “phoenix.” It¹ kills itself and brings itself to life as a witness⁵ to the judgment against them, for they did wrong to Adam and his¹ generation, unto the consummation of the age. (...) There are ... three¹ men, and also his posterities unto the consummation¹ of the world: the spirit-endowed of eternity, and the soul-endowed, and the earthly. Likewise,¹⁰ the three phoenixes (in) Paradise – the first¹ [is] immortal; the second lives 1,000¹ years; as for the third, it is written in the *Sacred Book*¹ that it is consumed. So too there are¹ three baptisms – the first is the spiritual,¹⁵ the second is by fire, the third¹ is by water. Just as the phoenix¹ appears as a witness concerning the angels,¹ so the case of the water hydri in Egypt,¹ which has been a witness to those going down²⁰ into the baptism of a true man.¹ The two bulls in Egypt possess¹ a mystery, the sun and moon, being¹ a witness to Sabaoth: namely, that over¹ them Sophia received the universe; from²⁵ the day that she made the sun and the moon she¹ put a seal upon her heaven, unto eternity.¹

And the worm that has been born out of the phoenix¹ is a human being as well. It is written (Ps 91:13 LXX) concerning it, “the just man¹ will blossom like a phoenix.” And³⁰ the phoenix first appears¹ in a living state, and dies, and rises again,¹ being a sign of what has become apparent¹ at the consummation of the age. It was only in Egypt that these great signs appeared³⁵ – nowhere else – as an indication 123 that it is like God’s Paradise.¹

Let us return to the aforementioned rulers,¹ so that we may offer¹ some explanation of them. Now, when the seven rulers⁵ were cast down from their heavens¹ onto the earth, they made for themselves angels,¹ numerous, demonic, to serve¹ them. And the latter instructed mankind in many kinds of error¹ and magic and potions and worship of¹⁰ idols and spilling of blood and altars and¹ temples and sacrifices and libations to all the spirits¹ of the earth, having their coworker¹ fate, who came into existence by¹ the concord between the gods of injustice¹⁵ and justice.

And thus when the world¹ had come into being, it distractedly erred¹ at all times. For all men¹ upon earth worshipped the spirits (daimo- nes) from ¹ the creation to the consummation – both the angels ²⁰ of righteousness and the men of unrighteousness. ¹ Thus did the world come to exist in distraction, ¹ in ignorance, and in a stupor. ¹ They all erred, until the appearance (parousia) ¹ of the true man.

Let this suffice ²⁵ so far as the matter goes. Now we shall proceed to consideration of our world, ¹ so that we may accurately finish the description of its structure ¹ and management. ¹ Then it will become obvious how ¹ belief in the unseen realm, which has been apparent ³⁰ from creation down to the consummation ¹ of the age was discovered.

I come, therefore, to the main points ¹ [regarding] the immortal man: I shall ¹ speak of all the beings that belong to him, explaining how ¹ they happen to be here.

When a multitude ³⁵ of human beings had come into existence, through the parentage of [the Adam] 124 who had been fashioned, and out of matter, ¹ and when the world had already become full, the rulers were master ¹ over it – that is, they kept ¹ it restrained by ignorance. For what reason? ⁵ For the following: since the immortal father knows ¹ that a deficiency of truth came into being amongst the eternal realms ¹ and their universe, when he wished ¹ to bring to naught the rulers of perdition through the ¹ creatures they had modelled he sent your (pl.) likenesses down into the world ¹⁰ of perdition, namely, the blessed little ¹ innocent spirits. They are not alien to ¹ acquaintance. For all acquaintance is vested in one angel ¹ who appeared before them; he is not without power ¹ in the company of the father. And <he> gave them acquaintance. ¹⁵ Whenever they appear in the world ¹ of perdition, immediately and first of all they reveal ²⁰ the pattern of imperishability as a condemnation ¹ of the rulers and their forces. Thus when the blessed beings ¹ appeared in forms modelled by authorities, ¹ they were envied. And out of envy the authorities ¹ mixed their seed with them, in hopes of ²⁵ polluting them. They could not. Then when the blessed beings ¹ appeared in luminous form, ¹ they appeared in various ways. And each one ¹ of them, starting out in his land, revealed ¹ his (kind of) acquaintance to the visible church ³⁰ constituted of the modelled forms of perdition. ¹ It (viz., the church) was found to contain all kinds of seed, because of the seed ¹ of the authorities that had [mixed with it].

Then ¹ the savior created [...] of ¹ them all – and the spirits of these [are manifestly] ³⁵ superior, being blessed 125 and varying in election – and ¹ also (he created) many other beings, which have no king and are superior ¹ to everyone that was before them. Consequently, four ¹ races exist. There are three that belong to the kings ⁵ of the eighth heaven. But the fourth ¹ race is kingless and perfect, being ¹ the highest of all. For these shall enter ¹ the holy place of their father. ¹ And they will gain rest in repose ¹⁰ and eternal, unspeakable glory ¹ and unending joy. Moreover they are ¹ kings within the mortal domain, in that they are immortal. They ¹ will condemn the gods of chaos and ¹ their forces.

Now the Word (Logos) that is superior to ¹⁵ all beings was sent for this purpose alone: ¹ that he might proclaim the unknown. ¹ He said (Mk 4:22 par.), "There is nothing hidden that is ¹ not apparent, and what has not been recognized ¹ will be recognized." And these were sent ²⁰ to make known what is hidden, and ¹ the seven authorities of chaos and their ¹ impiety. And thus they were condemned ¹ to death.

So when all the perfect ¹ appeared in the forms modelled ²⁵ by the rulers and when they revealed ¹ the incomparable truth, ¹ they put to shame all the wisdom of the gods. ¹ And their fate was found ¹ to be a condemnation. And their force ³⁰ dried up. Their lordship was dissolved. ¹ Their forethought became [emptiness, ¹ along with] their glory.

Before the consummation ¹ [of the age], the whole place will shake ¹ with great thundering. Then the rulers ³⁵ will be sad, [...] their 126 death. The angels will mourn for their mankind, ¹ and the demons will weep over their seasons, ¹ and their mankind will wail and scream ¹ at their death. Then the age ⁵ will begin, and they will be disturbed. Their kings will ¹ be intoxicated with the fiery sword, and they will ¹ wage war against one another, so that ¹ the earth is intoxicated with bloodshed. ¹ And the seas will be disturbed by ¹⁰ those wars. Then the sun will become dark. ¹ And the moon will cause its light to cease. ¹ The stars of the sky will cancel their circuits. ¹ And a great clap of thunder will come out ¹ of a great force that is above ¹⁵ all the forces of chaos, where ¹ the firmament of the woman is situated. ¹ Having created the first product, she will ¹ put away the wise fire of intelligence ¹ and clothe herself with witless wrath. ²⁰ Then she will pursue the gods ¹ of chaos, whom she created along with the prime parent. ¹ She will cast them down into the abyss. ¹ They will be obliterated because of their wickedness. For they will ¹ come to be like volcanoes ²⁵ and consume one another until they perish ¹ at the hand of the prime parent. ¹ When he has destroyed them, he will turn against himself ¹ and destroy himself until he ceases to exist.

And ¹ their heavens will fall one upon the next ³⁰ and their (the rulers') forces will be consumed by fire. Their eternal realms, too, ¹ will be overturned. And his (the prime parent's) heaven will ¹ fall and break in two. His ... will ¹ fall down upon the [...] ¹ support them; they will fall into the abyss, ³⁵ and the abyss will be overturned.

The light will ¹ [. . . the] darkness and obliterate it: it will be like 127 something that has never been. And the product ¹ to which the darkness had been posterior will dissolve. And ¹ the deficiency will be plucked out by the root (and thrown) down into ¹ the darkness. And the light will withdraw up ⁵ to its root. And the glory of the unbegotten ¹ will appear. And it will fill ¹ all the eternal realm. When the prophecy and ¹ the account of those that are king becomes known and ¹ is fulfilled by those who are called ¹⁰ perfect, those who – in contrast – have not become perfect ¹ in the unbegotten father will receive their glory ¹ in their realms and in the kingdoms of the ¹ immortals: but they will never enter ¹ the kingless realm.

For everyone must ¹⁵ go to the place from which he has come. ¹ Indeed, by his acts and his ¹ acquaintance each person will make his nature known.

THE EXEGESIS ON THE SOUL (II,6)

Introduced by

MADDALENA SCOPELLO

Translated by

WILLIAM C. ROBINSON, JR.

The Exegesis on the Soul is a short tale (ten pages of papyrus) narrating the gnostic myth of the soul from her fall into the world to her return to heaven. The soul, whose nature is feminine – she even had a womb – was virginal and androgynous in form when she was alone with her Father in heaven, but when she fell into the world and into a body she polluted herself with many lovers. These lovers are brigands and bandits who treat the soul as a whore, then abandon her. In her suffering, she seeks for other lovers who also deceive her, making her the slave of their sexual pleasure. Ashamed, the soul remains in slavery, living in a brothel, going from one market place to another. The only gift she receives from her lovers is their polluted seed: her children are dumb, blind, sick and feeble-minded.

The soul remains in this sexual and psychic captivity until the day she perceives her situation and repents. She asks help from the Father who has mercy on her. He performs two actions to help the soul: first, he makes her womb turn inward so that the soul regains her proper character: “the womb of the soul is around the outside like the male genitalia, which are external” (131,19-27). This turning inward protects the soul from further sexual contaminations by her lovers. Secondly, the Father sends a bridegroom from heaven to the soul. The bridegroom is her brother, the firstborn of the house of the Father.

Renewed and purified, the soul adorns herself in the bridal chamber waiting for the fiancé. At his arrival, they love each other passionately. Their love, which is spiritual and eternal, is described with a vivid sensuality normally used for carnal intercourse. The fruit of this marriage are good and beautiful children (i.e., in allegory, the good, virtuous ideas: cf. Philo, Cher. 44). Finally the soul regenerates herself and returns to her former state.

In its main lines, the story of the soul in Exeg. Soul follows the Valentinian myth of Sophia, the last aeon who leaves the Pleroma searching for new horizons. From prostitution to repentance in tears and from repentance to her return to the house of the Father, the itinerary of the soul closely recalls Sophia's journey.

Nevertheless, much of the originality of Exeg. Soul is to be found in the theatrical approach to the myth, now presented not in a philosophical and complex way but in a novelistic adaptation, capable of capturing the reader's attention.

Two close literatures and traditions have certainly influenced the author in the composition of his treatise: Hellenistic and Jewish romance literature. Love and adventures are the chief ingredients of Hellenistic novels, love being the first cause of the action. These novels are governed by a single motif: the tragic separation of two lovers and their final reunion after thousands of misadventures (tricks, brigands, ambiguous figures tempting the soul's chastity; cf. the Greek novels of Achilles Tatius, Chariton, Heliodorus, Longus, and Xenophon of Ephesus).

However, two features having no connection with the Greek novel can be observed in the gnostic story: first, the heroine in Exeg. Soul is unique. The fiancé has little part in the narration, while in the Greek novel the primary role is always given to a couple. Second, if Greek heroines are always chaste and pure, the heroine in Exeg. Soul (as in other gnostic novels) has led a life of prostitution. Only later will she attain virginity.

The Jewish influence is deeper. Exeg. Soul is a female story, the soul in fact is presented as a woman. This is quite rare in ancient literature. We find women's stories in Jewish writings, however, especially in Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha. The story of the soul from prostitution to virginity through repentance recalls the stories of Jewish sinners such as Rahab, Tamar, Ruth, and Bathsheba (cf., Joshua, Jubilees, Testament of Judah, Ruth, 2 Kings).

Exeg. Soul is not the only Nag Hammadi treatise consecrated to a female figure. Comparisons exist also with Auth. Teach, Thund., Norea, Trim. Prot., and with other gnostic texts recounting short women's stories. Under the different names and physiognomies of all these women there is hidden one and only one personage: soul searching for her heavenly origin. The common feature linking these female figures is the opposition, the polarity "virginity-prostitution." Rehabilitation consists in recovering original purity which is essential to attain knowledge.

In Exeg. Soul emphasis on pollution shows how the author was influenced by Apocryphal Judaism. This intense focus on pollution is typical of Essenic psychology (cf., Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs and Qumran literature). In Exeg. Soul as well as in Essenic spirituality, purification and repentance are the only remedies for impurity. The turning inward of the womb is to be compared with spiritual circumcision; both express the will to abandon the outside, symbol of worldly temptations.

The author of Exeg. Soul illustrates the myth of the soul by a series of biblical quotations and two Homeric references. These quotations are part of the narrative and strictly linked to it: they even give the writer the occasion to develop themes related to the myth of the soul. Part of these quotations are grouped together in order to point out the three stages of the soul's journey: prostitution, repentance, return to the Father. These groups of quotations were not gathered by the author but drawn from an anthology of which traces had been preserved by some Christian authors of Alexandria: Clement, Didymos and Origen.

This helps to determine the author's milieu. He is dependent on an academic culture in which florilegia and anthologies formed an important part of an intellectual education.

The use of biblical as well as of Homeric references shows that Greek and Jewish wisdom had the same prophetic value for the author. Both of them expound the gnostic doctrine in a comprehensible way to a Christian, Jewish, or pagan public. These elements show that the gnostic author of Exeg. Soul was part of a cultivated, syncretistic milieu where Jewish and Greek scriptures were well known, probably Alexandria at the beginning of the third century C.E. Even though the author borrowed traditions from Judaism and, partly, from Christianity and Paganism, nonetheless he was able to reinterpret them in the light of a new message, the gnostic one.

THE EXEGESIS ON THE SOUL

II 127, 18-137, 27

The Expository Treatise on the Soul ¹

Wise men of old gave ²⁰ the soul a feminine name. ¹ Indeed she is female in her nature as well. ¹ She even has her womb.

As long as ¹ she was alone with the father, ¹ she was virgin and in form androgynous. ²⁵ But when she fell ¹ down into a body and came to this life, then she ¹ fell into the hands of many robbers. And ¹ the wanton creatures passed her from one to another ¹ and [...] her. Some made use of ³⁰ her [by force], while others did so by seducing ¹ her with a gift. In short, ¹ they defiled her, and she [...] her] 128 virginity.

And in her body she prostituted herself ¹ and gave herself to one and all, ¹ considering each one she was about to embrace ¹ to be her husband. When she had given herself ⁵ to wanton, unfaithful adulterers, ¹ so that they might make use of her, then she sighed ¹ deeply and repented. But even when she ¹ turns her face from those adulterers, she runs ¹ to others and they compel her ¹⁰ to live with them and render service to them ¹ upon their bed, as if they were her masters. ¹ Out of shame she no longer dares ¹ to leave them, whereas they deceive ¹ her for a long time, pretending to be faithful, true husbands, ¹⁵ as if they greatly respected ¹ her. And after all this ¹ they abandon her and go.

She then ¹ becomes a poor desolate widow, ¹ without help; not even a measure of food ²⁰ was left her from the time of her affliction. ¹ For from them she gained nothing except ¹ the defilements they gave her while they had ¹ sexual intercourse with her. And her offspring ¹ by the adulterers are dumb, ²⁵ blind, and sickly. ¹ They are feeble-minded.

But when ¹ the father who is above visits her ¹ and looks down upon her and sees her ¹ sighing – with her sufferings and disgrace ³⁰ – and repenting of the prostitution ¹ in which she engaged, and when she begins to call ¹ upon [his name] ¹ so that he might help her, [...] all ¹ her heart, saying, “Save ³⁵ me, my father, for behold I will render an account ¹ [to thee, for I abandoned] my house and 129 fled from my maiden's quarters. ¹ Restore me to thyself again." When he sees her ¹ in such a state, then he will count ¹ her worthy of his mercy upon her, for many are the afflictions ⁵ that have come upon her because she abandoned her house.

Now concerning ¹ the prostitution of the soul the holy spirit prophecies in ¹ many places. For he said ¹ in the prophet Jeremiah (3:1-4),

If ¹ the husband divorces his wife and she ¹⁰ goes and takes another man, can she return to him after ¹ that? Has not that woman utterly ¹ defiled herself? "And you (sg.) ¹ prostituted yourself to many shepherds and you returned ¹ to me!" said the lord. "Take an honest ¹⁵ look and see where you ¹ prostituted yourself. Were you not sitting in the ¹ streets defiling the land with your acts of prostitution ¹ and your vices? And you took many shepherds for a ¹ stumbling block for yourself. You became shameless ²⁰ with everyone. You did not call on me as ¹ kinsman or as father or author of your ¹ virginity."

Again it is written in the prophet Hosea (2:2-7), ¹

Come, go to law with ¹ your (pl.) mother, for she is not to be a wife to me ²⁵ nor I a husband to her. ¹ I shall remove her prostitution from my presence, ¹ and I shall remove her adultery from ¹ between her breasts. I shall make her naked ¹ as on the day she was born, and ³⁰ I [shall] make her desolate like a land without ¹ [water], and I shall make her [longingly] childless. ¹ [I] shall show her children no pity, for ¹ they are children of prostitution, since their mother ¹ prostituted herself and [put her children to shame]. 130 For she said, "I shall prostitute myself to ¹ my lovers. It was they who gave me my ¹ bread and my water and my garments and my ¹ clothes and my wine and my oil and everything ⁵ I needed." Therefore behold ¹ I shall shut them up so that she shall not be able ¹ to run after her adulterers. And when she ¹ seeks them and does not find them, she will say, ¹ "I shall return to my former husband, for ¹⁰ in those days I was better off than now." ¹

Again he said in Ezekiel (16:23-26), ¹

It came to pass after much depravity, said ¹ the lord, you built yourself a brothel ¹ and you made yourself a beautiful place ¹⁵ in the streets. And you built yourself ¹ brothels on every lane, and you wasted ¹ your beauty, and you spread your legs ¹ in every alley, and you multiplied your acts of prostitution. ¹ You prostituted yourself to the sons of Egypt, ²⁰ those who are your neighbors, men great of flesh.

But what ¹ does “the sons of Egypt, men great of flesh” mean ¹ if not the domain of the flesh and the perceptible realm ¹ and the affairs of the earth, by which the soul ¹ has become defiled here, receiving bread from ²⁵ them, as well as wine, oil, clothing, ¹ and the other external nonsense ¹ surrounding the body — the things she thinks ¹ she needs.

But as to this prostitution the ¹ apostles of the savior commanded (cf. Acts 15:20, 29; 21:25; 1 Th 4:3; 1 Co 6:18; 2 Co 7:1), ³⁰

Guard yourselves against it, purify yourselves from it, ¹ speaking not just of the prostitution of the ¹ body but especially of that of the soul. For this reason ¹ the apostles [write to the churches] of ¹ God, that such [prostitution] might not ³⁵ occur among [us].

Yet the greatest ¹ [struggle] has to do with the prostitution 131 of the soul. From it arises the prostitution ¹ of the body as well. Therefore Paul, ¹ writing to the Corinthians (1 Co 5:9-10), said,

I wrote ¹ you in the letter, “Do not associate with prostitutes,” ⁵ not at all (meaning) the prostitutes of this world ¹ or the greedy or the thieves or the ¹ idolators, since then you would have to ¹ go out from the world.

here it is speaking ¹ spiritually —

For our struggle is ¹⁰ not against flesh and blood — as he ¹ said (Ep 6:12) — but against the world rulers ¹ of this darkness and the spirits of ¹ wickedness.

As long as the soul ¹ keeps running about everywhere copulating with whomever ¹⁵ she meets and defiling herself, she exists suffering ¹ her just deserts. But when ¹ she perceives the straits she is in ¹ and weeps before the father and repents, ¹ then the father will have mercy on her and he will make ²⁰ her womb turn from the external domain ¹ and will turn it again inward, so that the soul will regain her ¹ proper character. For it is not so with a woman. ¹ For the womb of the body is ¹ inside the body like the other internal organs, but the womb ²⁵ of the soul is around the outside ¹ like the male genitalia, which are ¹ external.

So when the womb of the soul, ¹ by the will of the father, turns itself inward, ¹ it is baptized and is immediately ³⁰ cleansed of the external pollution ¹ which was pressed upon it, just as ¹ [garments, when] dirty, are put into ¹ the [water and] turned about until their ¹ dirt is removed and they become clean. And so the cleansing ³⁵ of the soul is to regain the [newness] 132 of her former nature and to turn herself back again. ¹ That is her baptism.

Then she will ¹ begin to rage at herself like a woman ¹ in labor, ⁵ who writhes and rages in the hour of delivery. ¹ But since she is female, by herself she is powerless to beget ¹ a child. From heaven the father sent her ¹ her man, who is her brother, ¹ the firstborn. Then the bridegroom came ¹⁰ down to the bride. She gave up ¹ her former prostitution and cleansed herself of the pollutions ¹ of the adulterers, and she was renewed so as to be a bride. ¹ She cleansed herself in the bridal chamber; she filled it with perfume; ¹ she sat in it waiting ¹⁵ for the true bridegroom. No longer does she ¹ run about the market place, copulating with whomever she ¹ desires, but she continued to wait for him – ¹ (saying) “When will he come?” – and to fear him, ¹ for she did not know what he looked like: ²⁰ she no longer remembers since the time she fell ¹ from her father’s house. But by the will ¹ of the father (< . . . >). And she dreamed of him like ¹ a woman in love with a man.

But then ¹ the bridegroom, according to the father’s will, ²⁵ came down to her into the bridal chamber, ¹ which was prepared. And he decorated the bridal chamber. ¹

For since that marriage is ¹ not like the carnal marriage, those who are to have intercourse ¹ with one another will be satisfied with ³⁰ that intercourse. And as if it were a burden ¹ they leave behind them the annoyance of physical ¹ desire and they [turn their faces from] ¹ each other. But this marriage [. . .]. ¹ But [once] they unite ³⁵ [with one another], they become a single life. 133 Wherefore the prophet said (Gn 2:24) ¹ concerning the first man and the first woman, ¹

They will become a single flesh. ¹

For they were originally joined to one another when they were with the father ⁵ before the woman led astray the man, who ¹ is her brother. This marriage ¹ has brought them back together again and the ¹ soul has been joined to her true love, her ¹ real master, as it is written (cf. Gn 3:16; 1 Co 11:1; Ep 5:23), ¹⁰

For the master of the woman is her husband.

Then gradually she recognized him, ¹ and she rejoiced once more, weeping ¹ before him as she remembered the ¹ disgrace of her former widowhood. ¹ And she adorned herself still more so that ¹⁵ he might be pleased to stay with her.

And the ¹ prophet said in the Psalms (45:10-11),

Hear, ¹ my daughter, and see and incline your ear ¹ and forget your people and your father’s house, ¹ for the king has desired your beauty, ²⁰ for he is your lord.

For he requires her ¹ to turn her face from her ¹ people and the multitude of her adulterers, ¹ in whose midst she once was, to devote herself ¹ only to her king, her real ¹ lord, and to forget the house of the ¹ earthly father, with whom things went ¹ badly for her, but to remember her father ¹ who is in heaven. Thus also it was said ¹ (Gn 12:1) to Abraham, Come out from your ³⁰ country and your kinsfolk and from ¹ your father's house.

Thus when the soul [had adorned] ¹ herself again in her beauty ¹ [. . .] enjoyed her beloved, ¹ and [he also] loved her. And ³⁵ when she had intercourse with him, she got 134 from him the seed that is the life-giving ¹ spirit, so that by him she bears good children ¹ and rears them. ¹ For this is the great, perfect marvel ⁵ of birth. And so this marriage is made perfect ¹ by the will of the father.

Now it is fitting that the soul ¹ regenerate herself and become again as ¹ she formerly was. The soul then moves of her own accord. ¹ And she received the divine nature from the father ¹⁰ for her rejuvenation, so that she might be restored to ¹ the place where originally she had been. This is ¹ the resurrection that is from the dead. ¹ This is the ransom from captivity. ¹ This is the upward journey of ascent to heaven. This ¹⁵ is the way of ascent to the father. Therefore ¹ the prophet said (Ps 103:1-5), ¹

Praise the lord, O my soul, and, all that is ¹ within me, (praise) his holy name. My ¹ soul, praise God, who forgave ²⁰ all your sins, who healed ¹ all your sicknesses, who ransomed ¹ your life from death, who crowned ¹ you with mercy, who satisfies your longing ¹ with good things. Your youth will ²⁵ be renewed like an eagle's.

Then when she becomes young ¹ again she will ascend, praising the father ¹ and her brother, by whom she was rescued. ¹ Thus it is by being born again that the soul will ¹ be saved. And this ³⁰ is due not to rote phrases ¹ or to professional skills or to ¹ book learning. Rather it [is] the grace of the [. . . , ¹ it is] the gift of the [. . .]. ¹ For such is this heavenly thing. ³⁵ Therefore the savior cries out (Jn 6:44), 135

No one can come to me unless ¹ my Father draws him and brings him to me; ¹ and I myself will raise him up on the last ¹ day.

It is therefore fitting to pray to the father and to call ⁵ on him with all our soul — not externally with the lips ¹ but with the spirit, ¹ which is inward, which came forth from the ¹ depth — sighing; repenting for ¹ the life we lived; confessing ¹⁰ our sins; perceiving the empty deception ¹ we were in, and the empty zeal; ¹ weeping over how we were ¹ in darkness and in the wave; mourning for ourselves, ¹ that he might have pity on us; hating ¹⁵ ourselves for how we are now. Again ¹ the savior said (cf. Mt 5:4, 6; Lk 6:12),

Blessed ¹ are those who mourn, for it is they who will be pitied; ¹ blessed, those who are hungry, for ¹ it is they who will be filled.

Again he said (cf. Lk 14:26),

If ²⁰ one does not hate his soul he cannot follow ¹ me.

For the beginning of salvation is ¹ repentance. Therefore (cf. Acts 13:24),

Before ¹ Christ's appearance came John, ¹ preaching the baptism of repentance. ²⁵

And repentance takes place in distress ¹ and grief. But the father is good and loves ¹ humanity, and he hears the ¹ soul that calls upon him and ¹ sends it the light of salvation. Therefore ³⁰ he said through the spirit to the ¹ prophet (cf. 1 Cl 8:3),

Say to the children of my people, ¹ "[If your] sins extend ¹ [from earth to] heaven, and if they become ¹ [red] like scarlet and ³⁵ blacker than [sackcloth and if] 136 you return to me with all your ¹ soul and say to me, ¹ "My father," I will heed you as a ¹ holy people."

Again another place (Is 30:15),

Thus says ⁵ the lord, the holy one of ¹ Israel: "If you (sg.) return and sigh, ¹ then you will be saved and will know where you were ¹ when you trusted in what is empty." ¹

Again ¹ he said in another place (Is 30:19-20) ,

Jerusalem wept ¹⁰ much, saying, "Have pity on me." He will have pity on the sound ¹ of your (sg.) weeping. And when he saw he heeded you. ¹ And the lord will give you (pl.) bread of ¹ affliction and water of oppression. ¹ From now on those who deceive will not approach you (sg.) again. ¹⁵ Your eyes will see those who are deceiving ¹ you.

Therefore it is fitting to pray to ¹ God night and day, spreading out ¹ our hands towards him as do people sailing in the middle ¹ of the sea: they pray to God ²⁰ with all their heart without hypocrisy. ¹ For those who pray ¹ hypocritically deceive only themselves. ¹ Indeed, it is in order that he might know who is worthy of salvation ¹ that God examines the inward parts and ²⁵ searches the bottom of the heart. For no ¹ one is worthy of salvation who still loves ¹ the place of deception. Therefore it is written ¹ in the poet (Homer, Odyssey 1.48-59), Odysseus sat ¹ on the island weeping and grieving and turning ³⁰ his face from the words of Calypso ¹ and from her tricks, longing to see ¹ his village and smoke coming ¹ forth from it. And had he not [received] ¹ help from heaven, [he would] not [have been able to return] ³⁵ to his village.

Again [Helen] <...> saying (Odyssey 4.260-261), ¹

[My heart] turned itself from me. 137 It is to my house that I want to return.

For she sighed, ¹ saying (Odyssey 4.261-264),

It is Aphrodite who ¹ deceived me and brought me out of my village. My only daughter ¹ I left behind me, and my ⁵ good, understanding, handsome husband.

For when ¹ the soul leaves her ¹ perfect husband because of the treachery of Aphrodite, ¹ who exists here in the act of begetting, then ¹ she will suffer harm. But if she sighs ¹⁰ and repents, she will be restored to her ¹ house.

Certainly Israel would not have been visited ¹ in the first place, to be brought out of the land of Egypt, ¹ out of the house of bondage, if it had not sighed ¹ to God and wept for the oppression ¹⁵ of its labors. Again it is written in the Psalms (6:6-9), ¹

I was greatly troubled in my groaning. I will ¹ bathe my bed and my cover each ¹ night with my tears. I have become old in the midst of all my enemies. ¹ Depart from me, all ²⁰ you who work at lawlessness, for behold the ¹ lord has heard the cry of my weeping and ¹ the lord has heard my prayer."

If ¹ we repent, truly God will ¹ heed us, he who is long suffering and abundantly ²⁵ merciful, to whom is the glory for ¹ ever and ever. Amen. ¹

The Expository Treatise on the Soul

THE BOOK OF THOMAS THE CONTENDER (II,7)

Introduced and translated by

JOHN D. TURNER

The Book of Thomas the Contender is the seventh and last treatise in Codex II of the Coptic Gnostic library from Nag Hammadi. It is a revelation dialogue between the resurrected Jesus and his twin brother Judas Thomas, ostensibly recorded by Mathaias (the apostle Matthew?) at a time just before Jesus' ascension. It is a literary expression of traditions native to Syrian Edessa about the apostle Jude, surnamed Thomas, the missionary to India. It was likely composed in the first half of the third century C.E. Two products of this tradition have been dated with fair certainty: The Gospel of Thomas, composed ca. C.E. 50-125, and the Acts of Thomas, composed ca. C.E. 225. Both seem to derive from the ascetic, pre-Manichaean Christianity in the Osrhoëne (eastern Syria, between Edessa [modern Urfu] and Messene). The Book of Thomas the Contender seems to occupy a median position between the Gos. Thom. and the Acts in 1) date of composition, 2) relative dominance of the role played by Thomas in these works, and 3) in developing from a sayings collection preserved by Thomas (Gos. Thom.) to a dialogue between Jesus and Thomas (Thom. Cont.), to a full-blown romance centered on the missionary exploits of Thomas (Acts of Thomas). The present Coptic version was probably translated from Greek; the existence of the text is otherwise unattested in antiquity.

The subscripted title designates the work as a "book" of "Thomas the athletes (i.e., "one who struggles" against the fiery passions of the body) writing to the perfect, while the opening lines designate the work as "secret sayings" spoken by Jesus to Judas Thomas and recorded by Mathaias as he heard them speaking. The designation "sayings" does not really correspond to the genre of the work, which is a revelation dialogue. This type of dialogue is unlike the Platonic dialogue in which a conversational process of statement, counterstatement, and clarification leads step by step to the birth of knowledge. It is instead more related to the literature sometimes called eratapokriseis ("questions and answers"), in which an initiate elicits revealed truth from a spiritual authority in the form of cataphetical answers to topical questions. Such revelation dialogues are found in many pagan Hermetic and gnostic Christian texts, including many from Nag Hammadi (Ap. John, Soph. Jes. Chr., Dis. 8-9, Dial. Sav., Ep. Pet. Phil.) These dialogues are set at a time between the resurrection and ascension, when the Savior appeared on earth in his true divine form, so that both he and his teaching were available to select apostles in a form unclouded by the sort of materiality which was believed to obscure the spiritual significance of his rather parabolic earthly, preresurrection teaching. This special teaching might consist of enlightening commentary on his darker earthly teaching, or even new revelations to special apostles. As the Savior's twin, Thomas had a claim to direct insight into the nature of the Savior and his teaching. By "knowing himself," Thomas would also know the "depth of the all," whence the Savior came, and whither he was about to return, and thus become a missionary possessing the true teaching of Jesus.

This true teaching of Jesus turns out to be consistently ascetic. Its basic theme or catchword is "fire," the fire of bodily passions that torment the soul, and its counterpart in the flames of hell: one shall be punished by that by which one sins. Around this principal theme are gathered a number of conceptual oppositions. It is of course the presence of the Savior as the emissary of the light which serves to illumine the eyes to see invisible reality within that which heretofore was only perceptually visible and thus illusory. The treatise thus evinces a Platonic dualism of a radically ascetic stripe, and may be properly considered broadly ascetic rather than gnostic. The gnostic myth of the creation of the world by a divine accident or evil power is neither mentioned nor apparently presupposed, and the dualism of the treatise is much more anthropological (body/soul) than cosmic (the above/below). A more appropriate designation for the doctrine of this work is Christian(ized) wisdom with ascetic application: the wisdom themes of seeking, finding, being troubled, resting, and ruling (cf. Gospel of Thomas, saying 2, etc.) are distinctly present and pressed into the service of an exhortation to the ascetic life by means of a Platonic dualism between the visible-passional-illusory and the invisible-spiritual-real.

There are presently two competing theories concerning the composition of The Book of Thomas the Contender. The more recent one, developed by H.M. Schenke, holds that its underlying source lay in a probably non-Christian Hellenistic Jewish wisdom treatise. Subsequently, in the Christian orbit, this ascetic treatise was Christianized by the substitution of Jesus for the figure of divine wisdom as the revelatory figure of the work, by the addition to the title of the phrase "The Book of Thomas," and by the attendant recasting of the whole from the genre of expository treatise into the genre of revelation dialogue. That is, the text was dissected into smaller expository sections placed upon the lips of the risen Jesus; these were recast as answers to fictitious questions put to him by the apostle Thomas, which themselves were inserted into the text as pretexts for the ensuing answers of the Savior.

The earlier theory, developed by the author of this article, began with the observation that the actual dialogue between Thomas and Jesus occupies only the first three fifths of the treatise (138,4-142,21), while the remaining two fifths (142,21-end) actually constitute a long monologue of the Savior, in which Thomas no longer plays a role. This and the detection of a transitional editorial seam at 142,21 suggest that The Book of Thomas the Contender could have been compiled by a redactor from two separate works, the first three fifths from a dialogue between Thomas and Jesus, perhaps entitled "The Book of Thomas the Contender writing to the Perfect," and the second two fifths from a collection of the sayings of the Savior gathered into a homiletical discourse perhaps entitled "The hidden words which the Savior spoke, which I recorded, even I, Mathaias." A redactor later prefixed the dialogue to the sayings collection, prefaced the whole with the present opening lines, augmented by the reference to Thomas as the recipient of the secret words and Mathaias as the scribe, but then appended a subscript title designating Thomas as the author of the whole.

While a final decision between these two compositional theories is still awaited, there can be no question that The Book of Thomas the Contender displays the marks of a redactional history. On either view, it represents a new source for the critical investigation of early Christian literature and for the process by which ever new literary genres were adapted for Christian teaching. It also constitutes another instance in a growing body of Christian wisdom literature, with its emphasis on seeking, finding, resting on, and ruling by the truth, and thus escaping the troubles of life.

THE BOOK OF THOMAS THE CONTENDER

II 138, 1-145, 19

145, 20-23

The secret words that the savior spoke to ¹ Judas Thomas which I, even I Mathaiias, ¹ wrote down, while I was walking, listening to them speak with ¹ one another.

The savior said, "Brother Thomas, while ⁵ you (sg.) have time in the world, listen to me, ¹ and I will reveal to you the things you have pondered ¹ in your mind.

"Now since it has been said that you are my ¹ twin and true companion, examine yourself and learn ¹ who you are, in what way you exist, and ¹⁰ how you will come to be. Since you will be called my brother, ¹ it is not fitting that you be ignorant ¹ of yourself. And I know that you have understood, ¹ because you had already understood that I am the knowledge of the truth. ¹ So while you accompany me, although you are uncomprehending, ¹⁵ you have (in fact) already come to know, and you will be called 'the one who ¹ knows himself.' For he who has not known himself ¹ has known nothing, but he who has known himself ¹ has at the same time already achieved knowledge about the depth of the all. ¹ So then, you, my brother Thomas, have beheld what is obscure ²⁰ to men, that is, what they ignorantly stumble against." ¹

Now Thomas said to the lord, ¹ "Therefore I beg you to tell me ¹ what I ask you before your ascension, ¹ and when I hear from you about ²⁵ the hidden things, then I can speak about ¹ them. And it is obvious to me that the truth is difficult to ¹ perform before men."

The savior answered, saying, ¹ "If the things that are visible to you (pl.) are obscure ¹ to you, how can you hear ³⁰ about the things that are not visible? If the deeds of the truth ¹ that are visible in the world are difficult for you (pl.) to perform, ¹ how indeed, then, shall you perform those that pertain to the ¹ exalted height and to the pleroma which are not visible? ¹ And how shall you be called 'laborers'? ³⁵ In this respect-you are apprentices, and have not yet received ¹ the height of perfection."

Now Thomas answered ¹ and said to the savior, "Tell us about these things ¹ that you say are not visible, [but are] hidden ¹ from us."

The savior said, "[All] bodies [...] ⁴⁰ the beasts are begotten [...] . . . ¹ it is evident like [...] . . . ¹ [...] . . . this, too, those that are above ¹ [...] things that are visible, but [they are] visible 139 in their own root, and it is their fruit ¹ that nourishes them. But these visible bodies ¹ survive by devouring creatures similar to them ¹ with the result that the bodies change. Now that which changes will ⁵ decay and perish, and has no hope of life from then on, ¹ since that body is bestial. So just as the body of the beasts ¹ perishes, so also will these formations ¹ perish. Do they not derive from intercourse ¹ like that of the beasts? If it, (the body) too derives from intercourse, ¹⁰ how will it beget anything different from ¹ beasts? So, therefore, you are babes until ¹ you become perfect."

And Thomas answered, ¹ "Therefore I say to you, lord, that those who speak ¹ about things that are invisible and difficult ¹⁵ to explain are like those who shoot their arrows at a ¹ target at night. To be sure, they shoot their arrows as ¹ anyone would – since they shoot at the target – but it is not visible. ¹ Yet when the light comes forth and ¹ hides the darkness, then the work of each will appear. ²⁰ And you, our light, enlighten, O lord."¹

Jesus said, "It is in light that light exists."¹

Thomas spoke, saying, "Lord, ¹ why does this visible light that shines ¹ on behalf of men rise and set?"

The savior ²⁵ said, "O blessed Thomas, of course this visible light ¹ shines on your (pl.) behalf – not in order [that] ¹ you (pl.) remain here, but rather that you might come forth ¹ – and whenever all the elect abandon ¹ bestiality, then this light will withdraw ³⁰ up to its essence, and its essence will welcome it, ¹ since it is a good servant."

Then ¹ the savior continued and said, "O ¹ unsearchable love of the light! O bitterness of ¹ the fire that blazes in the bodies of men and in ³⁵ their marrow, kindling in them night and ¹ day, and burning the limbs of men and ¹ [making] their minds become drunk and their souls become deranged ¹ [...] them within males and females ¹ . . . [...] night and moving them, [...] ⁴⁰ . . . secretly and visibly. ¹ For the males [move . . . upon the females] ¹ and the females upon [the males. Therefore it is] 140 said, 'Everyone who seeks the truth from ¹ true wisdom will make himself wings so as to ¹ fly, fleeing the lust that scorches the spirits ¹ of men.' And he will make himself wings to flee ⁵ every visible spirit."

And Thomas answered, ¹ saying, "Lord, this is exactly what I am asking ¹ you about, since I have understood that you ¹ are the one who is beneficial to us, as you say."

Again the savior answered and said, "Therefore it is necessary ¹⁰ for us to speak to you (pl.), since this is the doctrine for the perfect. ¹ If, now, you (pl.) desire to become perfect, you shall ¹ observe these things; if not, your (pl.) name is 'Ignorant,' ¹ since it is impossible for an intelligent man to dwell with a ¹ fool, for the intelligent man is perfect in all wisdom. ¹⁵ To the fool, however, the good and bad are ¹ the same – indeed the wise man will be nourished by ¹ the truth and (Ps 1:3) 'will be like a tree growing by ¹ the meandering stream' – seeing that there are some who, although having wings, ¹ rush upon the visible things, things that ²⁰ are far from the truth. For that which guides them, ¹ the fire, will give them an illusion of truth, ¹ [and] will shine on them with a [perishable] beauty, ¹ and it will imprison them in a dark ¹ sweetness and captivate them with fragrant pleasure. ²⁵ And it will blind them with insatiable lust ¹ and burn their souls and become ¹ for them like a stake stuck in their heart ¹ which they can never dislodge. And like ¹ a bit in the mouth it leads them according to its ³⁰ own desire.

"And it has fettered them with its ¹ chains and bound all their limbs ¹ with the bitterness of the bondage of lust for those ¹ visible things that will decay and change ¹ and swerve by impulse. They have ³⁵ always been attracted downwards; as they are killed, ¹ they are assimilated to all the beasts of ¹ the perishable realm."

Thomas answered and said, "It ¹ is obvious and has been said, '[Many are ... ¹ ... those who do not know [...] ... ⁴⁰ soul.]'"

And [the savior] answered, saying, ¹ "[Blessed is] the wise man who [sought ¹ after the truth, and] when he found it, he rested 141 upon it forever and was unafraid of those ¹ who wanted to disturb him."

Thomas answered ¹ and said, "Is it beneficial for us, lord, to rest ¹ among our own?"

The savior said, "Yes, it is useful. ⁵ And it is good for you (pl.) since things visible ¹ among men will dissolve – for the vessel of ¹ their flesh will dissolve, and when it is brought to naught ¹ it will come to be among visible things, among things that are seen. ¹ And then the fire which they see gives them pain ¹⁰ on account of love for the faith they ¹ formerly possessed. They will be gathered back to that which is visible. ¹ Moreover, those who have sight among things that are not visible, without ¹ the first love they will perish in the concern for this ¹ life and the scorching of the fire. Only a little while longer, ¹⁵ and that which is visible will dissolve; then ¹ shapeless shades will emerge and ¹ in the midst of tombs they will forever dwell upon the corpses ¹ in pain and corruption of soul.” ¹

Thomas answered and said, “What have we ²⁰ to say in the face of these things? What shall we say to ¹ blind men? What doctrine should we express to these miserable ¹ mortals who say, ‘We came to [do] ¹ good and not to curse,’ and yet [claim], ¹ ‘Had we not been begotten in the flesh, we would not have known ²⁵ [iniquity]’?”

The savior said, “Truly, as for ¹ [those], do not esteem them as men, but regard them [as] ¹ beasts, for just as beasts devour one another, ¹ so also men of this sort ¹ devour one another. On the contrary, they are deprived of [the kingdom] ³⁰ since they love the sweetness of the fire and are ¹ servants of death and rush to the works of corruption. ¹ They fulfill the lust of their fathers. They will ¹ be thrown down to the abyss and be afflicted ¹ by the torment of the bitterness of their evil nature. ³⁵ For they will be scourged so as to make them ¹ rush backwards, whither they do not know, and ¹ they [will recede] from their limbs not patiently, but ¹ [with] despair. And they rejoice over [...] ¹ [...] madness and derangement ... ⁴⁰ [They] pursue [this] derangement without realizing [their ¹ madness, thinking] that they [are] wise. [They ...] ¹ ... their body [...] 142 Their mind is directed to their own selves, for their thought is occupied ¹ with their deeds. But it is the fire that will burn them!” ¹

And Thomas answered and said, “Lord, what will the one ¹ thrown down to them do? For I am most anxious ⁵ about them; many are those who fight them.” ¹

The savior answered and said, ‘What is your own ¹ opinion?’”

Judas – the one called ¹ Thomas – said, “It is you, lord, whom it befits ¹ to speak, and me to listen.” ¹⁰

The savior replied, “Listen to what I am going to tell you (sg.) ¹ and believe in the truth. That which sows and that which is sown ¹ will dissolve in their fire – within the fire ¹ and the water – and they will hide in tombs of darkness. ¹ And after a long time they shall show forth ¹⁵ the fruit of the evil trees, being punished, ¹ being slain in the mouth of beasts and men ¹ at the instigation of the rains and winds and air ¹ and the light that shines above.”

Thomas ¹ replied, “You have certainly persuaded us, lord. ²⁰ We realize in our heart, and it is obvious, that this ¹ [is so], and that your word is sufficient. But these words ¹ that you speak to us are ridiculous and contemptible to the world ¹ since they are misunderstood. ¹ So how can we go ²⁵ preach them, since we are [not] esteemed ¹ [in] the world?"

The savior answered and said, ¹ "Truly I tell you (pl.) that he who will listen to ¹ [your] word and turn away his face or sneer ¹ at it or smirk at these things, truly ³⁰ I tell you that he will be handed over to ¹ the ruler above who rules over ¹ all the powers as their king, and he will turn ¹ that one around and cast him from heaven down to ¹ the abyss, and he will be imprisoned in a narrow ³⁵ dark place. Moreover, he can neither turn nor move on account of ¹ the great depth of Tartaros and the [heavy bitterness] ¹ of Hades that is steadfast [...] ¹ [...] them to it ... ¹ [...] they will not forgive ... ⁴⁰ [...] pursue you (pl.). They will hand ¹ [...] over [to...] angel Tartarouchos ¹ [...] fire pursuing them 143 [...] fiery scourges that cast a shower of sparks into ¹ the face of the one who is pursued. If he flees westward, he ¹ finds the fire. If he turns southward, he finds it there as well. ¹ If he turns northward, the threat ⁵ of seething fire meets him again. Nor does he find the way to the east ¹ so as to flee there and be saved, for he did not find it in the day ¹ he was in the body, so that he might find it in the day of judgment." ¹

Then the savior continued, saying, ¹ "Woe to you, godless ones, who have no hope, ¹⁰ who rely on things that will not happen!

"Woe to you (pl.) ¹ who hope in the flesh and in the prison that will perish! ¹ How long will you be oblivious? And how long will you suppose that the imperishables ¹ will perish too? Your hope is set ¹ upon the world, and your god is this life! ¹⁵ You are corrupting your souls!

"Woe to you (pl.) within ¹ the fire that burns in you, for it is insatiable! ¹

"Woe to you because of the wheel that turns in ¹ your minds!

"Woe to you within the grip of the burning ¹ that is in you, for it will devour your flesh openly ²⁰ and rend your souls secretly, ¹ and prepare you for your companions!

"Woe to ¹ you, captives, for you are bound in caverns! ¹ You laugh! In mad laughter you rejoice! ¹ You neither realize your perdition, nor ²⁵ do you reflect on your circumstances, nor have [you] ¹ understood that you dwell in darkness and [death]! ¹ On the contrary, you are drunk with the fire and [full] ¹ of bitterness. Your mind is deranged on account of the [burning ¹ that is in] you, and sweet to you are the poison and ³⁰ the blows of your enemies! And the darkness rose for ¹ you like the light, for you surrendered your freedom ¹ for servitude! You darkened your hearts ¹ and surrendered your thoughts ¹ to folly, and you filled your thoughts ³⁵ with the smoke of the fire that is in you! And ¹ your light [has hidden] in the cloud ¹ [of . . .] and the garment that is put upon you, you [. . .] ¹ [. . .]. And [you] were seized [by ¹ the hope that] does not exist. And whom is it [you ⁴⁰ have] believed? Do you [not know that you] ¹ all dwell among those who that [. . .] ¹ [. . .] you as though [you . . .]. 144 You baptized your souls in the water of darkness! ¹ You walked by your own whims!

“Woe ¹ to you (pl.) who dwell in error, heedless ¹ that the light of the sun which judges and ⁵ looks down upon the all will circle around all things ¹ so as to enslave the enemies. You do not even notice ¹ the moon, how by night and day it ¹ looks down, looking at the bodies of your slaughters!

“Woe ¹ to you (pl.) who love intimacy with womankind ¹⁰ and polluted intercourse with them!

“Woe to you (pl.) in the grip of the powers of your body, ¹ for they will afflict you!

“Woe to you (pl.) in the grip of ¹ the forces of the evil demons! ¹

“Woe to you (pl.) who beguile your limbs with fire! ¹⁵ Who is it that will rain a refreshing dew on you ¹ to extinguish the mass of fire from you ¹ along with your burning? Who is it that will cause the sun to ¹ shine upon you to disperse the darkness in you ¹ and hide the darkness and polluted water?

“The sun ²⁰ and the moon will give a fragrance to you (pl.), together with the air and ¹ the spirit and the earth and the water. For if the sun does not ¹ shine upon these bodies, they will wither and perish ¹ just like weeds or grass. If ¹ the sun shines on them, they prevail and choke ²⁵ the grapevine; but if the grapevine ¹ prevails and shades those weeds ¹ [and] all that other brush growing alongside and ¹ [spreads] and flourishes, it alone ¹ inherits the land in which it grows; ³⁰ and every place it has shaded it dominates. ¹ And when it grows up, it dominates all the land ¹ and is bountiful for its master, and it pleases him ¹ even more, for he would have suffered great pains ¹ on account of these plants until he uprooted them. But the ³⁵ grapevine alone removed them and choked ¹ them, and they died and became like the soil.”

Then ¹ Jesus continued and said to them, “Woe to ¹ you (pl.), for you did not receive the doctrine, and those who are [. . .] ¹ will labor at preaching [. . .]. ⁴⁰ And [you] are rushing into . . . [. . .] ¹ [. . .] will send [them] down . . . ¹ [. . .] you kill them daily 145 in order that they might rise from death.

“Blessed are you (pl.) ¹ who have prior knowledge of the stumbling blocks and who flee ¹ alien things.

“Blessed are you (pl.) who are reviled ¹ and not esteemed on account of the love ⁵ their lord has for them.

“Blessed are ¹ you (pl.) who weep and are oppressed by ¹ those without hope, for you will be released from ¹ every bondage.

“Watch and pray that you (pl.) not come to be ¹ in the flesh, but rather that you come forth from the bondage of the bitterness ¹⁰ of this life. And as you pray, ¹ you will find rest, for you have left behind the suffering and the disgrace. ¹ For when you come forth from the sufferings and ¹ passions of the body, you will receive rest ¹ from the good one, and you will reign with the king, ¹⁵ you joined with him and he with you, from now on, ¹ for ever and ever. Amen.” ¹

The Book of Thomas ¹
 The Contender Writing ¹
 To the Perfect (pl.). ²⁰

Remember me also, my brethren, ¹
 [in] your prayers: ¹
 Peace to the saints ¹ and those who are spiritual.

THE GOSPEL OF THE EGYPTIANS (III,2 AND IV,2)

Introduced and translated by

ALEXANDER BÖHLIG and FREDERIK WISSE

The so-called Gospel of the Egyptians is preserved in two Coptic versions which were translated independently from the Greek. It is not related to the apocryphal Gospel of the Egyptians which is cited in Patristic literature. The tractate, which is also entitled "The Holy Book of the Great Invisible Spirit," is an esoteric writing representing a Sethian type of mythological Gnosticism. It may be described as a work which presents a gnostic salvation history. Since the mythological, heavenly Seth is portrayed as the father of the gnostic race, it is appropriate that the tractate lists him as the author of this divinely inspired book.

The tractate is divisible into four main sections. The first section (III 40,12-55,16 = IV 50,1-67,1) deals with the origin of the heavenly world: from the supreme God, dwelling in solitary height as the transcendent Great Invisible Spirit, there evolves and emanates a series of glorious beings, from the mighty trinity of Father, Mother Barbelo, and Son, through the pleroma of heavenly powers, to Adamas' great son Seth, the father and savior of the incorruptible race. The second section (III 55,16-66,8 = IV 67,2-78,10) discusses the origin, preservation, and salvation of the race of Seth: because of the arrogance and hostility of Saklas and the Archons, Seth comes from heaven, puts on Jesus as a garment, and accomplishes a work of salvation on behalf of his children. The third section (III 66,8-67,26 = IV 78,10-80,15) is hymnic in character; and the fourth section (III 68,1-69,17 = IV 80,15-81,end) contains a concluding account of the Sethian origin and transmission of the tractate.

Thus, in a manner analogous to that in which the New Testament gospels proclaim the life of Jesus, The Gospel of the Egyptians presents the life of Seth. His pre-history, the origin of his seed, the preservation of his seed by the heavenly powers, the coming of Seth into the world, and his work of salvation, especially through baptism, are proclaimed with drama and praise.

The following translation is based primarily on the text of Codex III; the more fragmentary (though probably more reliable) text of Codex IV has been utilized for the missing pages 45-48, and when the text of III,2 appears to be corrupted.

THE GOSPEL OF THE EGYPTIANS

III 40, 12-44, 28

IV 55, 20-60, 30

III 49, 1-69, 20

The [holy] book [of the Egyptians] ¹ about the great invisible [Spirit, the] Father ¹ whose name cannot be uttered, [he who came] ¹⁸ forth from the heights of [the perfection, the] light ¹ of the light of the [aeons of light], ¹ the light of the [silence of the] providence ¹ <and> the Father of the silence, the [light] ¹ of the word and the truth, the light [of the 41 incorruptions, the] infinite light, ¹ [the] radiance from the aeons of light ¹ of the unrevealable, unmarked, ¹ ageless, unproclaimable Father, ⁵ the aeon of the aeons, Autogenes, ¹ self-begotten, self-producing, alien, ¹ the really true aeon.

Three ¹ powers came forth from him; ¹ they are the Father, the Mother, (and) the Son, ¹⁰ from the living silence, what came forth from ¹ the incorruptible Father. These came ¹ [forth from] the silence of the unknown Father. ¹

[And] from that place ¹ Domedon Doxomedon came [forth, ¹⁵ the aeon of] the aeons and the [light ¹ of] each one of [their] powers. ¹ [And] thus the Son came ¹ [forth] fourth; the Mother [fifth; ¹ the Father] sixth. He was ²⁰ [...] but unheralded; ¹ [it is he] who is unmarked among ¹ all [the powers], the glories, and the ¹ [incorruptions].

From that place ¹ the three powers [came] forth, 42 the three ogdoads that [the Father ¹ brings] forth, in silence with his providence, ¹ from his bosom, i.e. ¹ the Father, the Mother, (and) the Son. ⁵

The <first> ogdoad, because of which ¹ the thrice-male child came forth, ¹ which is the thought, and [the] word, ¹ and the incorruption, and the eternal ¹ [life], the will, the mind, ¹⁰ and the foreknowledge, the androgynous ¹ Father.

The second ¹ ogdoad-power, the Mother, the virginal Barbelon ¹ epititioch[...] ¹ ai, memeneaimen[...] who] ¹⁵ presides over the heaven, karb[...] ¹ the uninterpretable power, ¹ the ineffable Mother. [She originated] ¹ from herself [...]; ¹ she came forth; [she] ²⁰ agreed with the Father [of the] silent ¹ [silence].

The third ogdoad-[power], ¹ the Son of the [silent silence], ¹ and the crown of the silent silence, [and] ¹ the glory of the Father, and the virtue [of the 43 Mother. He] brings forth from the bosom ¹ the seven powers of the great ¹ light of the seven voices, and the word ¹ [is] their completion.

These are the three ⁵ [powers], the three ogdoads that the Father ¹ [through] his providence brought ¹ [forth] from his bosom. He brought them ¹ [forth] at that place.

Domedon ¹ Doxomedon came forth, ¹⁰ the aeon of the aeons, and the ¹ [throne] which is in him, and the powers ¹ [which surround] him, the glories and the ¹ [incorruptions. The] Father of the great light ¹ [who came] forth from the silence, he is ¹⁵ [the great] Doxomedon-aeon in which ¹ [the thrice]-male child rests. ¹ And the throne ¹ of his [glory] was established [in it, ¹ this one] on which his unrevealable name ²⁰ [is inscribed], on the tablet ¹ [. . .] one is the word, the [Father ¹ of the light] of everything, he ¹ [who came] forth from the silence, while he rests ¹ in the silence, he whose 44 name [is] in an [invisible] symbol. [A] ¹ hidden, [invisible] mystery ¹ came forth iiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiii[iii] ¹ ēēēēēēēēēēēēēēēēēēēē [ēē o] ⁵ oooooooooooooooooooooooooo uu[uuu] ¹ uuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuu eeeee ¹ eeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeee aaaaaa[aaaa] ¹ aaaaaaaaaaa oooooooooo[oo] ¹ oooooooooo.

And [in this] ¹⁰ way the three powers gave praise to the [great], ¹ invisible, unnameable, ¹ virginal, uncallable Spirit, and [his] ¹ male virgin. They asked [for a] ¹ power. A silence of living silence ¹⁵ came forth, namely [glories] and ¹ incorruptions in the aeons [. . . aeons] ¹ myriads added [on . . . , the] ¹ three males, [the three] ¹ male offspring, the [male] races (IV 55, 5-7 adds: the [glories of the Father, ¹ the] glories of the great [Christ and ¹ the] male offspring, the [races]) ²⁰ filled the great Doxomedon-[aeon with] ¹ the power of the word of the [whole pleroma]. ¹

Then the thrice-male [child of the great] ¹ Christ whom the [great] invisible ¹ Spirit had anointed – he [whose] ²⁵ power [was called] Ainon – gave [praise to] ¹ the great invisible Spirit [and his] ¹ male virgin Yoel, [and] ¹ the silence of silent silence, and the [greatness] IV 55 ²⁰ that [. . .] ¹ ineffable. [. . .] ¹ ineffable [. . .] ¹ unanswerable and ¹ uninterpretable, the ²⁵ first one who has [come forth], ¹ and (who is unproclaimable, [. . .] 56 which is wonderful ¹ [. . .] ineffable ¹ [. . .], he who has ¹ all the greatnesses [of] greatness ⁵ [of] the silence at ¹ that [place]. The thrice-[male ¹ child] brought ¹ praise and asked [for a ¹ power] from the [great, ¹⁰ invisible, virginal] ¹ Spirit.

Then there ¹ appeared at [that] place ¹ [. . .] who [. . . ¹ who] sees [glories ¹⁵ . . .] treasures in a [. . . ¹ invisible] ¹ mysteries to [. . .] ¹ of the silence ¹ [who is the male] virgin ²⁰ [Youel].

Then ¹ [the child of the] child ¹ Esephech [appeared]. ¹

And [thus] he was completed, ¹ namely, the [Father, the] Mother, the [Son], ²⁵ the [five] seals, the ¹ unconquerable power which [is] ¹ the great [Christ] of all the incorruptible 57 ones. [...] ¹ holy [...] ¹ the end, [the] incorruptible [...] ¹ and [...], ⁵ they are powers [and glories ¹ and] incorruptions [...] ¹ they came forth [...]. ¹³ This one brought [praise] ¹ to the unrevealable, ¹⁵ hidden [mystery ... ¹ the] hidden [...] ²¹ him in the [...] ¹ and] the aeons [...] thrones, ¹ [...] and ¹ each one [...] ²⁵ myriads of [powers] ¹ without number surround [them, 58 glories] and ¹ incorruptions [...] and they ¹ [...] of] the Father, ¹ [and] the [Mother, and] the Son, and ⁵ [the] whole [pleroma] which I [mention- ed] ¹ before, [and the] five seals ¹ [and the mystery] of ¹ [mysteries]. They [appeared ... ¹³ who] presides [over ¹ ...] and the aeons [of ¹⁵ ... really] ¹ truly [...] and the [...] ¹⁸ eternal [...]. ²¹ and the ¹ [really] truly [eternal] aeons.

Then [providence came forth ¹ from silence], and the [living silence ²⁵ of] the Spirit, [and] ¹ the Word [of] the Father, and [a] ¹ light. [She ... the five] 59 seals which [the Father brought] ¹ forth from his bosom, and she passed [through] ¹ all the aeons which I mentioned ¹ before. And she established ⁵ thrones of glory [and myriads] ¹ of angels [without] number ¹ [who] surrounded them, [powers ¹ and incorrupt- ible] glories, who ¹ [sing] and give glory, all giving ¹⁰ praise with [a single voice], ¹ with one accord, [with ¹ one] never-silent [voice ... ¹ to] the Father, and the [Mother, ¹ and the] Son [...] and ¹⁵ all the] pleromas [that I] ¹ mentioned [before], who is [the ¹ great] Christ, who is from [silence, ¹ who] is the [incorruptible] child ¹ Telmael Telmachael ²⁰ [Eli Eli] Machar Machar ¹ [Seth, the] power which really truly lives, ¹ [and the] male ¹ [virgin] who is with [him], Youel, ¹ [and] Esephech, [the] holder of glory, ²⁵ the [child] of the child ¹ [and the crown of] his glory ¹ [...] of the five ¹ seals, [the] pleroma [that ¹ I mentioned be- fore].

There 60 the great self-begotten ¹ living [Word came forth, ¹ the] true [god], the ¹ unborn physis, he whose ⁵ name I shall tell, saying, ¹ [...]aia[....]thaōthōsth[...], ¹ who [is the] son of the [great] ¹ Christ, who is the son [of ¹ the] ineffable silence, [who] ¹⁰ came forth from the great [invisible] ¹ and incorruptible [Spirit]. ¹ The [son] of the silence and [silence] ¹ appeared [...] ¹⁵ invisible ... ¹ man ¹ and the] treasures [of] his glory. [Then] ¹ he appeared in the revealed [...]. ¹ And he [es- tablished] ²⁰ the four [aeons]. ¹ With a word [he] established ¹ them.

He brought [praise] ¹ to the great, [invisible], ¹ virginal Spirit, [the silence] ²⁵ of the [Father] in a silence [of the] ¹ living silence [of silence, ¹ the] place where the man rests. ¹ [...] ¹ through [...]. ³⁰

Then there came forth [at (or: from)] III 49 that [place] the cloud ¹ [of the] great light, the living ¹ power, the mother of the holy, incorruptible ones, ¹ the great power, the Mirothoe. ⁵ And she gave birth to him whose name ¹ I name, saying, ien ¹ ien ea ea ea, three times. IV 61 ⁸

For this one, [Adamas], ¹ is [a light] which radiated [from ¹⁰ the light; he is] the eye of the [light]. ¹ For [this is] the first man, III 49 ¹⁰ he through whom ¹ and to whom everything became, ¹ (and) without whom nothing became. ¹ The unknowable, ¹ incomprehensible Father came forth. He ¹⁵ came down from above ¹ for the annulment of the deficiency.

Then ¹ the great Logos, the divine Autogenes, ¹ and the incorruptible man ¹ Adamas mingled with each other. ²⁰ A Logos of man came into being. ¹ However, the man ¹ came into being through a word.

He ¹ gave praise to the great, invisible, ¹ incomprehensible, virginal ²⁵ Spirit, and the male virgin, ¹ and the thrice-male child, 50 and the male [virgin] ¹ Youel, and Esephech, the holder of glory, ¹ the child of the child and ¹ the crown of his glory, and the great ⁵ Doxomedon-aeon, and ¹ the thrones which are in him, and the ¹ powers which surround him, the glories and ¹ the incorruptions, and their whole pleroma ¹ which I mentioned before, ¹⁰ and the ethereal earth, the ¹ receiver of God, where ¹ the holy men of the ¹ great light receive shape, ¹ the men of the Father ¹⁵ of the silent, living silence, the Father ¹ and their whole pleroma as ¹ I mentioned before.

The ¹ great Logos, ¹ the divine Autogenes, and ²⁰ the incorruptible man Adamas gave praise, ¹ (and) they asked for a power and ¹ eternal strength for the Autogenes ¹ for the completion of the ¹ four aeons, in order that, ²⁵ through them, there may appear 51 [...] the glory and the power ¹ of the invisible Father of ¹ the holy men of the great light ¹ which will come to the world ⁵ which is the image of the night. The incorruptible ¹ man Adamas asked for them ¹ a son out of himself, in order ¹ that he (the son) may become father of the ¹ immovable, incorruptible race, so ¹⁰ that, through it (the race), the silence ¹ and the voice may appear, ¹ and, through it, ¹ the dead aeon may raise itself, so that ¹ it may dissolve.

And thus ¹⁵ there came forth, from above, the power ¹ of the great light, the ¹ Manifestation. She gave birth to the four great ¹ lights: Harmozel, Oroiael, ¹ Davithe, Eleleth, ²⁰ and the great incorruptible Seth, the son ¹ of the incorruptible man ¹ Adamas.

And thus ¹ the perfect hebdomad which ¹ exists in hidden mysteries became complete. 52 When she [receives] the [glory] ¹ she becomes eleven ¹ ogdoads.

And the Father nodded approval; ¹ the whole pleroma of the ¹ lights was well pleased. ¹ Their consorts came forth ¹ for the completion of the ogdoad of ¹ the divine Autogenes: the ¹ Grace of the first light ¹⁰ Harmozel, the Perception of the second ¹ light Oroiael, the Understanding ¹ of the third light ¹ Davithe, the Prudence of the ¹ fourth light Eleleth. This ¹⁵ is the first ogdoad of the ¹ divine Autogenes.

And ¹ the Father nodded approval; the whole pleroma ¹ of the lights was well pleased. ¹ The <ministers> came forth: ²⁰ the first one, the great ¹ Gamaliel (of) the first great ¹ light Harmozel, and the great ¹ Gabriel (of) the second great ¹ light Oroiael, and the great ²⁵ Samlo of the great light Davithe, ¹ and the great Abrasax of 53 [the great light] Eleleth. And ¹ [the] consorts of these came forth ¹ by the will of the good pleasure ¹ of the Father: the Memory of the great one, ⁵ the first, Gamaliel; the Love ¹ of the great one, the second, Gabriel; ¹ the Peace of the third one, the great ¹ Samblo; the eternal Life ¹ of the great one, the fourth, Abrasax. ¹⁰ Thus were the five ogdoads completed, ¹ a total of forty, ¹ as an uninterpretable power.

Then ¹ the great Logos, the Autogenes, ¹ and the word of the pleroma ¹⁵ of the four lights gave ¹ praise to the great, invisible, ¹ uncallable, virginal Spirit, ¹ and the male virgin, ¹ and the great Doxomedon-aeon, ²⁰ and the thrones which are in ¹ them, and the powers which surround them, ¹ glories, authorities, ¹ and the powers, <and> the thrice-male ¹ child, and the male virgin ²⁵ Youel, and Esephech, 54 the holder of glory, [the child] ¹ of the child and the crown of [his] ¹ glory, the whole pleroma, and ¹ all the glories which are there, the ⁵ infinite pleromas <and> the ¹ unnameable aeons, in ¹ order that they may name the Father ¹ the fourth with the incorruptible ¹ race, (and) that they may call the seed ¹⁰ of the Father the seed of the great ¹ Seth.

Then everything shook, ¹ and trembling took hold of the incorruptible ¹ ones. Then the three male ¹ children came forth ¹⁵ from above down ¹ into the unborn ones, and the ¹ self-begotten ones, and those who were begotten ¹ in what is begotten. ¹ The greatness came forth, the ²⁰ whole greatness of the great Christ. He ¹ established thrones in glory, ¹ myriads without number, ¹ in the four aeons around them, ¹ myriads without number, ²⁵ powers and glories 55 and incorruptions. And they came ¹ forth in this way.

And ¹ the incorruptible, spiritual ¹ church increased in the four ⁵ lights of the great, living Autogenes, ¹ the god of truth, praising, ¹ singing, (and) giving glory with one voice, ¹ with one accord, with a mouth ¹ which does not rest, to the Father, and ¹⁰ the Mother, and the Son, and their whole ¹ pleroma, just as I mentioned <before>. ¹ The five seals which possess the myriads, and ¹ they who rule over the aeons and they who ¹ bear the glory of the leaders ¹⁵ were given the command to reveal ¹ to those who are worthy. Amen.

Then the great ¹ Seth, the son of the incorruptible ¹ man Adamas, gave praise ¹ to the great, invisible, uncalled, ²⁰ unnameable, virginal ¹ Spirit, and the <male virgin, and the thrice-male child, and the male> ¹ virgin Youel, and Esephech, ¹ the holder of glory, and the ¹ crown of his glory, the child of the child, 56 and the great Doxomedon-aeons, ¹ and the pleroma which I mentioned ¹ before; and asked for his seed. ¹

Then there came forth from that place ⁵ the great power of the great ¹ light Plesithea, the mother of the angels, ¹ the mother of the lights, the ¹ glorious mother, the virgin with the ¹ four breasts, bringing the fruit ¹⁰ from Gomorrah as spring and Sodom, ¹ which is the fruit of the spring of ¹ Gomorrah which is in her. She came forth ¹ through the great Seth.

Then ¹ the great Seth rejoiced about ¹⁵ the gift which was granted him ¹ by the incorruptible ¹ child. He took his seed ¹ from her with the four breasts, the virgin, ¹ and he placed it with ²⁰ him in the fourth aeon (or, IV 68, 3: [in] the four aeons), ¹ in the third great ¹ light Davithe.

After five ¹ thousand years the great ¹ light Eleleth spoke: "Let someone ²⁵ reign over the chaos and Hades." ¹ And there appeared a cloud 57 [whose name is] hylic Sophia ¹ [... She] looked out on the parts ¹ [of the chaos], her face being like ¹ [... in] her form [...] ⁵ blood. And ¹ [the great] angel Gamaliel spoke ¹ [to the great Gabriel], the minister of ¹ [the great light] Oroiael; ¹ [he said, "Let an] angel come forth ¹⁰ [in order that he may] reign over the chaos ¹ [and Hades]." Then the cloud, being ¹ [agreeable, came forth] in the two monads, ¹ each one [of which had] light. ¹ [... the throne], which she had placed ¹⁵ in the cloud [above. ¹ Then] Sakla, the great ¹ [angel, saw] the great demon ¹ [who is with him, Nebr]uel. And they became ¹ [together a] begetting spirit of the earth. ²⁰ [They begot] assisting angels. ¹ Sakla [said] to the great ¹ [demon Neb]ruel, "Let ¹ [the] twelve aeons come into being in ¹ [the ...] aeon, worlds ²⁵ [...]" ... the great angel ¹ [Sakla] said by the will of the Autogenes, 58 "There shall [be] the [...] ¹ of the number of seven [...]." ¹ And he said to the [great angels], ¹ "Go and [let each] ⁵ of you reign over his [world]." ¹ Each one [of these] ¹ twelve [angels] went [forth. The first] ¹ angel is Ath[oth. He is the one] ¹ whom [the great] generations ¹⁰ of men call [... The] ¹ second is Harmas, [who] is [the eye of the fire]. ¹ The third [is Galila. The] ¹ fourth is Yobel. [The fifth is] ¹ Adonaios, who is [called] ¹⁵ Sabaoth. The sixth [is Cain, whom] ¹ the [great generations of] ¹ men call the sun. The [seventh is Abel]; ¹ the eighth Akiressina; the [ninth Yubel]. ¹ The tenth is Harm[upiael. The] ²⁰ eleventh is Arch[ir-Adonin]. ¹ The twelfth [is Belias. These ¹ are] the ones who preside over Hades [and the chaos]. ¹

And after the founding [of the world] ¹ Sakla said to his [angels], ²⁵ "I, I am a [jealous] god, ¹ and apart from me nothing has [come into being," since he] 59 trusted in his nature.

Then a voice ¹ came from on high, saying, ¹ "The Man exists, and the Son of the Man." ¹ Because of the descent of the image ⁵ above, which is like its voice in the height ¹ of the image which has looked out, ¹ through the looking out of the image ¹ above, the first creature was ¹ formed.

Because of this ¹⁰ Metanoia came to be. She received her ¹ completion and her power by the will ¹ of the Father and his approval with which he ¹ approved of the great, incorruptible, ¹ immovable race of the great, ¹⁵ mighty men of the great Seth, ¹ in order that he may sow it in the aeons which ¹ had been brought forth, so that, through her (Metanoia), ¹ the deficiency may be filled up. ¹ For she had come forth from above down ²⁰ to the world which is the image of the night. ¹ When she had come, she prayed for (the repentance of) both the seed ¹ of the archon of this aeon and <the> authorities ¹ who had come forth from him, that ¹ defiled (seed) of the demon-begetting god ²⁵ which will be destroyed, and the seed 60 of Adam and the great Seth, ¹ which is like the sun.

Then the great ¹ angel Hormos came to prepare, ¹ through the virgins of the ⁵ corrupted sowing of this aeon, in ¹ a Logos-begotten, holy vessel, ¹ through the holy Spirit, ¹ the seed of the great Seth. ¹

Then the great Seth came and brought his ¹⁰ seed. And it was sown in the aeons ¹ which had been brought forth, their number being the amount of ¹ Sodom. Some say ¹ that Sodom is the place of pasture ¹ of the great Seth, which is Gomorrah. ¹⁵ But others (say) that the great Seth took ¹ his plant out of Gomorrah and ¹ planted it in the second place ¹ to which he gave the name Sodom. ¹

This is the race which came forth through ³⁰ Edokla. For she gave birth through the word ¹ to Truth and Justice, the origin ¹ of the seed of the eternal life ¹ which is with those who will persevere ¹ because of the knowledge of their emanation. ²⁵ This is the great, incorruptible ¹ race which has come forth through three 61 worlds to the world.

And the ¹ flood came as an example ¹ for the consummation of the aeon. But it ¹ will be sent into the world ⁵ because of this race. A conflagration will ¹ come upon the earth. And grace ¹ will be with those who belong to the race ¹ through the prophets ¹ and the guardians who guard the life ¹⁰ of the race. Because of this race ¹ famines will occur and plagues. ¹ But these things will happen because of the ¹ great, incorruptible race. Because of ¹ this race temptations will come, ¹⁵ a falsehood of false prophets. ¹

Then the great Seth saw the activity ¹ of the devil, and his many ¹ guises, and his schemes which will come ¹ upon his incorruptible, immovable race, ²⁰ and the persecutions of his ¹ powers and his angels, and their ¹ error, that they acted against themselves. ¹

Then the great Seth gave ¹ praise to the great, uncallable, ²⁵ virginal Spirit, and the male 62 virgin Barbelon, ¹ and the thrice-male child Telmael ¹ Telmael Heli Heli Machar ¹ Machar Seth, the power which really truly ⁵ lives, and the male virgin ¹ Youel, and Esephech, the ¹ holder of glory, and the crown of his ¹ glory, and the great Doxomedon-aeon, ¹ and the thrones which are in him, and ¹⁰ the powers which surround them, and the whole ¹ pleroma, as I mentioned before. ¹ And he asked for guards over his ¹ seed.

Then there came forth from the great ¹ aeons four hundred ethereal ¹⁵ angels, accompanied by the great ¹ Aerosiel and the great Selmechel, to ¹ guard the great, incorruptible race, ¹ its fruit, and the great men ¹ of the great Seth, from the time and ²⁰ the moment of Truth and Justice ¹ until the consummation of the aeon and its ¹ archons, those whom the great judges ¹ have condemned to ¹ death.

Then the great Seth was ²⁵ sent by the four ¹ lights, by the will of the Autogenes 63 and the whole pleroma, through ¹ <the gift> and the good pleasure of the great invisible ¹ Spirit, and the five seals, ¹ and the whole pleroma.

He passed through ⁵ the three parousias which I mentioned ¹ before: the flood, and the conflagration, ¹ and the judgment of the archons and the powers ¹ and the authorities, to save her (the race) who went astray, ¹ through the reconciliation of the world, and ¹⁰ the baptism through a Logos-begotten ¹ body which the great Seth ¹ prepared for himself, ¹ secretly through the virgin, in order that the ¹ saints may be begotten by the holy Spirit, through ¹⁵ invisible, secret symbols, ¹ through a reconciliation of the world with the world, ¹ through the renouncing of the world ¹ and the god of the thirteen aeons, ¹ and (through) the convocations of the saints, and ²⁰ the ineffable ones, and the incorruptible bosom, ¹ and (through) the great light of the Father ¹ who preexisted with his Providence ¹ and established through her ¹ the holy baptism that surpasses ²⁵ the heaven, through the incorruptible, 64 Logos-begotten one, even Jesus the living one, even ¹ he whom the great Seth has ¹ put on. And through him he nailed the powers ¹ of the thirteen aeons, and ⁵ established those who are brought forth and ¹ taken away. He armed them ¹ with an armor of knowledge of this truth, ¹ with an unconquerable power ¹ of incorruptibility.

There appeared to them ¹ the great attendant Yesseus ¹ Mazareus Yessedekus, the living ¹ water, and the great leaders, ¹ James the great and Theopemptos ¹ and Isaouel, and they who preside over ¹⁵ the spring of truth, Micheus and Michar ¹ and Mnesinous, and he who presides over ¹ the baptism of the living, and the ¹ purifiers, and Sesengenpharanges, ¹ and they who preside over the gates of the waters, ²⁰ Micheus and Michar, and they who ¹ preside over the mountain Seldao and Elainos, ¹ and the receivers of ¹ the great race, the incorruptible, ¹ mighty men <of> the great Seth, the ²⁵ ministers of the four lights, ¹ the great Gamaliel, the great Gabriel, ¹ the great Samblo, and the great 65 Abrasax, and they who preside over the sun, its ¹ rising, Olses and Hypneus and ¹ Heurumaious, and they who preside over the ¹ entrance into the rest of eternal ⁵ life, the rulers Mixanther ¹ and Michanor, and they who guard the ¹ souls of the elect, Akramas and ¹ Strempsouchos, and the great power ¹ Heli Heli Machar Machar Seth, and ¹⁰ the great invisible, uncallable, ¹ unnameable, virginal ¹ Spirit, and the silence, and the great light ¹ Harmozel, the place of the living Autogenes, ¹ the God of the truth, and <he> who is with ¹⁵ him, the incorruptible man Adamas, ¹ the second, Oroiael, the place of the great ¹ Seth, and Jesus, who possesses the life and who came ¹ and crucified that which is in the law, ¹ the third, Davithe, the place of the ²⁰ sons of the great Seth, the fourth, ¹ Eleleth, the place where the souls ¹ of the sons are resting, ¹ the fifth, Yoel, who presides over the name ¹ of him to whom it will be granted to baptize with ²⁵ the holy baptism that surpasses the heaven, ¹ the incorruptible one.

But from now on 66 through the incorruptible man Poimael, ¹ and they who are worthy of (the) invocation, ¹ the renunciations of the five seals in ¹ the spring-baptism, these will ⁵ know their receivers as ¹ they are instructed about them, and they will ¹ know them (or: be known) by them. These ¹ will by no means taste death.

Iē ieus ¹ ēō ou ēō ōua! Really truly, ¹⁰ O Yesseus Mazareus Yessedekus, ¹ O living water, O child of the child, ¹ O glorious name, really truly, ¹ aiōn o ōn (or: O existing aeon), iiii ēēēē eeee oo ¹ oo uuuu ōōōō aaaa{a}, really ¹⁵ truly, ēi aaaa ōō ¹ ōō, O existing one who sees the aeons! ¹ Really truly, aee ēēē iiii ¹ uuuuuu ōōōōōōōō, ¹ who is eternally eternal, ²⁰ really truly, iēa aiō, in ¹ the heart, who exists, u aei eis aei, ¹ ei o ei, ei os ei (or: (Son) forever, Thou art what Thou art, Thou art who Thou art)!

This great name ¹ of thine is upon me, O self-begotten Perfect one, ¹ who art not outside me. ²⁵ I see thee, O thou who art visible ¹ to everyone. For who will be able ¹ to comprehend thee in another tongue? Now 67 that I have known thee, I have mixed ¹ myself with the immutable. I have armed ¹ myself with an armor of light; ¹ I have become light. For the Mother was at ⁵ that place because of the ¹ splendid beauty of grace. Therefore ¹ I have stretched out my hands while they were ¹ folded. I was shaped in the circle ¹ of the riches of the light which is in ¹⁰ my bosom, which gives shape to the many ¹ begotten ones in the light into which no complaint ¹ reaches. I shall declare thy ¹ glory truly, for I have comprehended ¹ thee, sou iēs ide aeiō aeie ois, O ¹⁵ aeon, aeon, O God of silence! I ¹ honor thee completely. Thou art my ¹ place of rest, O son ēs ēs o e, the ¹ formless one who exists in the formless ones, ¹ who exists, raising up the man ²⁰ in whom thou wilt purify me into ¹ thy life, according to thine imperishable name. ¹ Therefore the incense of life ¹ is in me. I mixed it with water ¹ after the model of all archons, ²⁵ in order that I may live with thee in the peace ¹ of the saints, thou who existeth really truly 68 for ever.

This is the book ¹ which the great Seth wrote, and placed ¹ in high mountains on which ¹ the sun has not risen, nor is it ⁵ possible. And since the days of the prophets, ¹ and the apostles, and the ¹ preachers, the name has not at all risen ¹ upon their hearts, nor is it possible. ¹ And their ear has not heard it. ¹⁰

The great Seth wrote this book ¹ with letters in one hundred and thirty ¹ years. He placed it in the mountain ¹ that is called Charaxio, ¹ in order that, at the end of the ¹⁵ times and the eras, by the ¹ will of the divine Autogenes ¹ and the whole pleroma, through the gift ¹ of the untraceable, unthinkable, ¹ fatherly love, it may ²⁰ come forth and reveal this ¹ incorruptible, holy race ¹ of the great savior, and those who ¹ dwell with them in love, and ¹ the great, invisible, eternal ²⁵ Spirit, and his only begotten ¹ Son, and the eternal light, 69 and his great, incorruptible ¹ consort, and the incorruptible ¹ Sophia, and the Barbelon, and the ¹ whole pleroma in eternity. ⁵ Amen. ¹

The Gospel of <the> Egyptians. ¹ The God-written, holy, secret ¹ book. Grace, understanding, ¹ perception, prudence (be) with him ¹⁰ who has written it, Eugnostos the beloved ¹ in the Spirit — in the flesh

‘ my name is Gongessos – and my ‘ fellow lights in incorruptibility, ‘ Jesus Christ, Son of God, ¹⁵ Savior, Ichthus, God-written (is) ‘ the holy book of the great, invisible ‘ Spirit. Amen. ‘

The Holy Book of the Great ‘ Invisible Spirit. ²⁰
Amen.

EUGNOSTOS THE BLESSED (III,3 and V,1)

and

THE SOPHIA OF JESUS CHRIST (III,4 AND BG 8502,3)

Introduced and translated by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

Eugnostos begins as a formal letter written by a teacher to his disciples and subsequently shifts to take on qualities of a revelation discourse. It is without apparent Christian influence. With some minor omissions and one major one, it was used by a Christian gnostic editor as he composed The Sophia of Jesus Christ. In form, Soph. Jes. Chr. is a revelation discourse given by the risen Christ in response to the questions of his disciples. Thus the placing of the two tractates together in the present edition allows one to see the process by which a non-Christian tractate was modified and transformed into a Christian gnostic one. On the basis of the model provided by these two tractates, scholars have conjectured that the same process may have been responsible for other Christian gnostic writings, such as The Gospel of the Egyptians and The Apocryphon of John.

Eugnostos seems to be directed to a general audience interested in certain religious-philosophical problems. Soph. Jes. Chr. was directed to an audience for whom Christianity was an added element in their religious environment. The audience may have been made up of non-Christian Gnostics who already knew the tractate Eugnostos. By connecting Christ, in Soph. Jes. Chr., with the prediction at the end of Eugnostos (90,6-11), the editor may have hoped to persuade them that Christ was the latest incarnation of the gnostic savior. Or the audience may have consisted of non-gnostic Christians, and the editor may have wanted to persuade them that the religion revealed by Christ was gnostic Christianity. Perhaps the editor had both groups in mind.

The main intent of Eugnostos appears to have been to assert and describe the existence of an invisible, supercelestial region beyond the visible world — a region not reflected in the speculations of philosophers (whose views, as they are described, resemble those of Stoics, Epicureans, and Babylonian astrologers). Ruling that region is a hierarchy of five principal divine beings: Unbegotten Father; his reflection, called Self-Father; Self-Father's hypostatized power, Immortal Man, who is androgynous; Immortal Man's androgynous son, Son of Man; and Son of Man's androgynous son, the Savior. The names of the female aspects of the last three include the term Sophia. These divine beings each have their own sphere or aeon, and numerous attendant and subordinate beings. A special group, called "the generation over whom there is no kingdom among the kingdoms that exist," has its origin and true home with Unbegotten Father (75,12-19). A second group of six divine beings spring from the first five. These are said to resemble the first. Ineffable joy and unutterable jubilation characterize existence in the supercelestial region; and from there come patterns or types for subsequent creations. Following a summary passage (85,9-21), the tractate concludes with an appendix dealing with the realm of Immortal Man, which is our aeon. Eugnostos shows the influence of the transcendent realm upon this world. With one brief exception (85,8), which is probably an editorial addition, the influence is benign. Eugnostos, then, cannot be considered gnostic in any classic sense.

In the Soph. Jes. Chr. the following major points are added: the Savior (Christ) came from the supercelestial region (III 93,8-10; 94,10-14; 107,11-14; 118,15-16). Sophia is the one responsible for the fall of drops of light from the divine realm into the visible world (III 107,16-17; III 114,13/BG 119,9). Furthermore, a god exists who, with his subordinate powers, directly rules this world to the detriment of those who come from the divine realm (III 107,3-11; BG 119,2-121,13). Sex, it is suggested, is the means by which enslavement to the powers is perpetuated (III 108,10-14). But the Savior (Christ) broke the bonds imposed by the powers, and taught others to do the same (III 107,15-108,4; BG 121,13-122,3; III 118,3-25). Two classes of persons will be saved: those who know the Father in pure knowledge (that is, as described in Soph. Jes. Chr.), who will go to him; and those who know the Father defectively (III 117,8-118,2), who will go to the Eighth. In addition, it should be noted that the disciples named in Soph. Jes. Chr., Philip, Matthew, Thomas, Bartholomew, and Mary, reflect a tradition within Gnosticism of disciples who are distinctively gnostic, and who are contrasted with some regularity, and in various ways, with "orthodox" or "orthodox turned gnostic" disciples (principally, Peter and John).

The notion of three divine men in the heavenly hierarchy appears to be based on Genesis 1-3 (Immortal Man = God; Son of Man = Adam [81,12]; Son of Son of Man, Savior = Seth). Because of the presence of Seth (although unnamed in the tractate), Eugnostos must be thought of as Sethian, in some sense. However, since it is not classically gnostic and lacks other elements of developed Sethian thought, it can only be characterized as proto-Sethian. Egyptian religious thought also appears to have influenced its picture of the supercelestial realm. The probable place of origin for Eugnostos, then, is Egypt. A very early date is suggested by the fact that Stoics, Epicureans and astrologers are called "all the philosophers." That characterization would have been appropriate in the first century B.C.E., but not later. Eugnostos and Soph. Jes. Chr. may have influenced the Sethian-Ophites, as described by Irenaeus. Some have proposed an influence by Eugnostos on Valentinism. Because of the dating of Eugnostos, it would not be surprising if Soph. Jes. Chr. had been composed soon after the advent of Christianity in Egypt – the latter half of the first century C.E. That possibility is supported by the tractate's relatively nonpolemical tone.

The two versions of Eugnostos differ from each other at significant points, attesting a long period of usage. The two versions of Soph. Jes. Chr. are very close. The translation which follows is based on the versions of Codex III; the other versions have been employed in instances where pages are no longer extant and where the text has required restoration.

EUGNOSTOS THE BLESSED

THE SOPHIA OF JESUS CHRIST

III 70, 1-90, 12;
Supplemented by V 7, 23-9, 9

III 90, 1-119, 18
Supplemented by BG 107, 1-111, 1
and 118, 13-112, 9

Eugnostos, the Blessed, to those¹ who are his.

The Sophia of Jesus Christ.

After¹⁵ he rose from the¹ dead, his twelve¹ disciples and seven¹ women continued to be his followers and¹ went to Galilee onto the mountain⁹¹ called "Divination¹ and Joy." When they gathered together¹ and were perplexed about the underlying reality¹ of the universe and the plan and⁵ the holy providence and¹ the power of the authorities and about¹ everything that the Savior is doing¹ with them in the secret¹ of the holy plan,¹⁰ the Savior appeared, not in his¹ previous form, but in the¹ invisible spirit. And his likeness¹ resembles a great angel of light.¹ But his resemblance I must not describe.¹⁵ No mortal flesh¹ could endure it, but only¹ pure (and) perfect flesh, like¹ that which he taught us about on the mountain¹ called²⁰ "Of Olives" in Galilee. And¹ he said: "Peace be to you (pl.)! My peace¹ I give¹ to you!" And they all marveled¹ and were afraid.

The Savior⁹² laughed and said to them: "What¹ are you thinking about? (Why) are you perplexed?¹ What are you searching for?"¹ Philip said: "For the un-

Rejoice in this, ¹ that you know (V [1], 3-4: Greetings! I want [you to know]) that all men ¹ born from the foundation ⁵ of the world until now are ¹ dust. While they have inquired about God, ¹ who he is and what he is like, ¹ they have not found him. The wisest ¹ among them have speculated about the truth from the ordering ¹⁰ of the world. ¹ And the speculation has not reached ¹ the truth. For the ordering ¹ is spoken of in three (different) opinions ¹ by ¹⁵ all the philosophers, (and) hence ¹ they do not agree. For some ¹ of them say ¹ about the world that it was directed ¹ by itself. Others, ²⁰ that it is providence (that directs it). ¹ Others, that it is fate. ¹ But it is none of these. ¹ Again, of the three voices I have just ¹ mentioned, none ⁷¹ is true.

For whatever is from itself ¹ is an empty ¹ life; it is self-made. Providence ¹ is foolish. (And) fate ⁵ is an undiscerning thing.

Whoever, then, is able ¹ to get free of ¹ these three voices ¹ I have just mentioned and come by means ¹ of another voice to confess the ¹⁰ God of truth and agree ¹ in everything concerning him, he is ¹ im-

derlying reality ⁵ of the universe and the plan.” ¹

The Savior said to them: ¹ “I want you to know ¹ that all men born ¹ on earth from the foundation of ¹⁰ the world until now, being ¹ dust, while they have inquired about God, ¹ who he is and what he ¹ is like, have not found him. Now the ¹ wisest among ¹⁵ them have speculated from the ordering of ¹ the world and (its) movement. ¹ But their speculation has not reached ¹ the truth. For it ¹ is said that the ordering is directed in three ways ²⁰ by all the philosophers, ¹ (and) hence they do not ¹ agree. For some of ¹ them say about the world ¹ that it is directed by itself. ⁹³ Others, ¹ that it is providence (that directs it). Others, ¹ that it is fate. ¹ But it is none of these. ⁵ Again, of the three voices I have ¹ just mentioned, none ¹ is close to the truth, and (they are) from ¹ man. But I, who came ¹ from Infinite Light, ¹⁰ I am here — for I know him (Light) — ¹ that I might speak to you about the precise nature ¹ of the truth. For whatever is from ¹ itself is a polluted life; ¹ it is self-made. Providence ¹⁵ has no wisdom in it. And ¹ fate does not discern.

But to you ¹ it is given to know; ¹ and whoever is worthy of knowledge ¹ will receive (it), whoever has not been ²⁰ begotten by the sowing of ¹ unclean rubbing but by First ¹ Who Was Sent, for ¹ he mortal, dwelling in the midst ¹ of mortal men.

He Who ¹ Is is ineffable. ¹⁵ No principle knew him, no authority, ¹ no subjection, nor any creature ¹ from the foundation of the world, ¹ except he alone.

For he ¹ is immortal and eternal, ²⁰ having no birth; for everyone ¹ who has birth will perish. ¹ He is unbegotten, having no beginning; ¹ for everyone who has a beginning ¹ has an end. No one rules 72 over him. He has no name; for whoever has ¹ a name is the creation of another. ¹ He is unnameable. He has no ¹ human form; for whoever has ⁵ human form is the creation ¹ of another. He has his own semblance — ¹ not like ¹ the semblance we have received and seen, ¹ but a strange semblance ¹⁰ that surpasses all things ¹ and is better than the totalities. It looks ¹ to every side and sees itself ¹ from itself. ¹ He is infinite; he is incomprehensible. ¹⁵ He is ever imperishable ¹ (and) has no likeness (to anything). He is ¹ unchanging good. He is ¹ faultless. He is everlasting. ¹ He is blessed. He is unknowable, ²⁰ while he (none-is an immortal in the midst of ¹ mortal men.”

Matthew said [9]4 to him: “Lord, ¹ no one can find the truth except ¹ through you. Therefore teach us ¹ the truth.” The Savior said: ⁵ “He Who Is is ineffable. ¹ No principle knew him, no authority, ¹ no subjection, nor any creature ¹ from the foundation of ¹ the world until now, except ¹⁰ he alone and anyone to whom he wants ¹ to make revelation through him ¹ who is from First ¹ Light. From now on ¹ I am the Great Savior. For he ¹⁵ is immortal and eternal. ¹ Now he is eternal, ¹ having no birth; for everyone ¹ who has birth will perish. He is unbegotten, ¹ having no beginning; ²⁰ for everyone who has a beginning ¹ has an end. Since no one rules ¹ over him, he has no name; for whoever ¹ has a name is the creation of ¹ another. (BG 84, 13-17 adds: He is unnameable. He has no human form; for whoever has human form is the creation of another.) And he has a semblance 9[5] of his own — not like ¹ what you have seen and ¹ received, but a strange semblance ¹ that surpasses all things ⁵ and is better than the universe. ¹ It looks to every side and sees itself ¹ from itself. Since it is infinite, ¹ he is ever incomprehensible. ¹ He is imperishable and has no likeness (to anything). ¹⁰ He is unchanging good. ¹ He is faultless. He is eternal. ¹ He theless) knows ¹ himself. He is immeasurable. ¹ He is untraceable. He is ¹ perfect, having no defect. 73 He is imperishably blessed. ¹ He is called "Father ¹ of the Universe."

Before anything is ¹ visible among those that are visible, ⁵ the majesty and the authorities that ¹ are in him, he embraces the ¹ totalities of the totalities, and nothing ¹ embraces him. For he ¹ is all mind, thought ¹⁰ and reflecting, considering, ¹ rationality and power. ¹ They all are equal powers. ¹ They are the sources of the totalities. ¹ And their whole race <from first> to last ¹⁵ is in the foreknowledge ¹ of Unbegotten, ¹ is blessed. While he is not known, ¹ he ever knows ¹ himself. He is immeasurable. He is ¹⁵ untraceable. He is perfect, ¹ having no defect. He is imperishably blessed. ¹ He is called ¹ "Father of the Universe."''

Philip said: "Lord, ²⁰ how, then, did he appear to the perfect ones?" ¹ The perfect Savior said to him: ¹ "Before anything is visible ¹ of those that are visible, the ¹ majesty and the authority are 9[6] in him, since he embraces the whole of the totalities, ¹ while nothing embraces ¹ him. For he is ¹ all mind. And he is thought ⁵ and considering ¹ and reflecting and ¹ rationality and power. They ¹ all are equal powers. ¹ They are the sources of the totalities. ¹⁰ And their whole race from ¹ first to last was ¹ in his foreknowledge, (that of) the infinite ¹ Unbegotten ¹ Father."

Thomas said to him: ¹⁵ "Lord, Savior, ¹ why did these come to be, and why ¹ were these revealed?" ¹ The perfect Savior said: ¹ "I came from the Infinite ²⁰ that I might tell you all ¹ things. Spirit Who Is was the begetter, ¹ who had ¹ the power <of> a begetter [97] and form-[giver's] nature, that ¹ the great ¹ wealth that was hidden in him might be revealed. Because of ¹ his mercy and his love ⁵ he wished ¹ to bring forth fruit by himself, that ¹ he might not <enjoy> his ¹ goodness alone for they had not yet come to visibility. ¹

Now a difference existed ¹ among the imperishable aeons. ²⁰ Let us, then, consider (it) this way. ¹

Everything that came from the perishable will perish, since it came ¹ from the perishable. Whatever came 74 from imperishableness will not ¹ perish but will become ¹ imperishable, since it came from ¹ imperishableness. So, ⁵ many men went astray ¹ because they had not known this difference; that ¹ is, they died.

But this much is ¹ enough, since it is impossible for anyone ¹ to dispute the nature of the words ¹⁰ I have just spoken about the blessed, ¹ imperishable, true God. ¹ Now, if anyone ¹ wants to believe the words ¹ set down (here), let him go ¹⁵ from what is hidden to the end of what is visible, ¹ and this Thought ¹ will in-but (that) other spirits ¹ of the Unwavering Generation might bring forth ¹⁰ body and fruit, glory and ¹ honor in imperishableness and ¹ his infinite grace, ¹ that his treasure might be revealed ¹ by Self-begotten God, ¹⁵ the father of every imperishableness and ¹ those that came to be afterward. ¹ But they had not yet come to visibility.

Now a great difference ¹ exists among the imperishables." He called ²⁰ out saying: "Whoever ¹ has ears to hear about ¹ the infinities, let him hear"; ¹ and "I have addressed those who are awake." ¹ Still he continued [98] and said: "Everything that came ¹ from the perishable will perish, ¹ since it came from ¹ the perishable. But whatever came ⁵ from imperishableness does not perish ¹ but becomes imperishable (BG 89, 16-17 adds: since it is from imperishableness). So, many men ¹ went astray because they had not known this ¹ difference and they died."

Mary said to him: ¹⁰ "Lord, ¹ then how will we know that?" ¹ The perfect Savior said: ¹

"Come (pl.) from invisible ¹ things to the end of those that are visible, ¹⁵ and the very emanation struct him how faith ¹ in those things that are not visible was ¹ found in what is visible. This is a ²⁰ knowledge principle.

The Lord ¹ of the Universe is not rightly ¹ called "Father" but "Forefather." ¹ For the Father is the beginning (or principle) 7[5] of what is visible. For he (the Lord) is ¹ the beginningless ¹ Forefather. He sees himself ¹ within himself, like a ⁵ mirror, having appeared in his ¹ likeness as Self-Father, that is, ¹ Self-Begetter, and as Confronter, ¹ since he confronted ¹ Unbegotten First Existent. ¹⁰ He is indeed of equal age with the one who is before ¹ him, but he is not equal to him ¹ in power. ¹ of ¹ Thought will reveal to you ¹ how faith in those ¹ things that are not visible was found ¹ in those that are visible, those that belong to ²⁰ Unbegotten Father. ¹ Whoever has ears to hear, ¹ let him hear.

Afterward he revealed ¹ many confronting, ¹ self-begotten ones, equal in age ¹⁵ (and) power, being ¹ in glory and without number, who are called ¹ "The Generation over Whom ¹ There Is No Kingdom among ¹ the Kingdoms That Exist." ¹

And the whole multitude ²⁰ of the place over which there is no ¹ kingdom is called ¹ "Sons of Unbegotten ¹ Father." ¹

Now the Unknowable 7[6] [is] ever [full] of imperishableness [and] ineffable joy. ¹ They all are at rest ¹

The Lord of the Universe ¹ is not called 'Father' ¹ but 'Forefather.' <For the Father is> the beginning (or principle) of ²⁵ those that will appear, but he (the Lord) 99 is [the] beginningless Forefather. ¹ Seeing himself ¹ within himself in a mirror, he appeared ¹ resembling himself, ⁵ but his likeness appeared ¹ as Divine ¹ Self-Father ¹ and <as> Confronter 'over the confronted ones,' ¹ First Existent Unbegotten ¹⁰ Father. He is indeed of equal age ¹ <with> the Light that is before ¹ him, but he is not equal to him ¹ in power. ¹

"And afterward was revealed ¹ a whole multitude of confronting, ¹⁵ self-begotten ones, ¹ equal in age and power, ¹ being in glory (and) without number, whose race is called ¹ 'The Generation ¹ over Whom There Is No Kingdom ' 'from the one ²⁰ in whom you yourselves have appeared ¹ from these ¹ men.' And that whole multitude ¹ over which there is no ¹ kingdom is called 100 'Sons of Unbegotten ¹ Father, God, [Savior], ¹ Son of God,' ¹ whose likeness is with you. Now he ⁵ is the Unknowable, ¹ who is full of ever imperishable glory ¹ and ineffable joy. ¹ in him, ⁵ ever rejoicing in ineffable joy ¹ over the unchanging glory ¹ and the measureless jubilation ¹ that was never heard or ¹ known among all the aeons ¹⁰ and their worlds. But ¹ this much is enough, lest we ¹ go on endlessly. ¹ This is another knowledge principle from ¹ <Self->begotten.

The First ¹⁵ who appeared before the universe ¹ in infinity is Self-grown, ¹ Self-constructed Father, ¹ and is full of shining, ineffable light. ¹ In the beginning, he decided ²⁰ to have his likeness become ¹ a great power. ¹ Immediately, ¹ the principle (or beginning) of that Light ¹ appeared as Immortal Androgynous Man.

His male name [77] is ¹ “[Begotten,] Perfect [Mind].” ¹ And his female name (is) “All-wise ¹ Begettress Sophia.” It is also said ⁵ that she resembles her ¹ brother and her consort. ¹ She is uncontested truth; ¹ for here below error, which exists with truth, ¹ contests it.

They all are at rest ¹ in him, ¹⁰ ever rejoicing in ineffable joy ¹ in his unchanging glory ¹ and measureless jubilation; ¹ this was never heard ¹ or known ¹⁵ among all the aeons and their worlds ¹ until now.”

Matthew said ¹ to him: “Lord, ¹ Savior, how was Man revealed?” ¹ The perfect ²⁰ Savior said: “I want ¹ you to know that he who ¹ appeared before the universe in ¹ infinity, Self-grown 101 Self-constructed Father, being full ¹ of shining light ¹ and ineffable, ¹ in the beginning, when he decided to have his ⁵ likeness become a great power, ¹ immediately the principle (or beginning) ¹ of that Light appeared as Immortal ¹ Androgynous Man, ¹ that through that Immortal ¹⁰ Man they might attain ¹ their salvation and awake ¹ from forgetfulness through the interpreter ¹ who was sent, who ¹ is with you until the end ¹⁵ of the poverty of the robbers.

“And his ¹ consort is the Great Sophia ¹ who from the first was

Through ¹⁰ Immortal Man ¹ appeared the first designation, ¹ namely, divinity ¹ and kingdom, for the Father, who is ¹ called "Self-Father Man," ¹⁵ revealed this. ¹ He created a great aeon for his own majesty. He gave him ¹ great authority, and he ruled ¹ over all creations. He created ²⁰ gods and archangels ¹ and angels, myriads ¹ without number for retinue. ¹

Now through that Man ¹ originated divinity [78] [and kingdom]. Therefore he was ¹ called "God of gods," "King ¹ of kings."

First Man ¹ is "Faith" for those who will come ⁵ afterward. He has, within, ¹ a unique mind (and) thought — just as ¹ he is it (thought) — (and) reflecting ¹ and considering, rationality and power. All the attributes ¹⁰ that exist are perfect and immortal. ¹ In respect to imperishableness, they ¹ are indeed equal. (But) in respect to power, there is a difference, ¹ like the difference between father ¹ and son, and son and thought, ¹⁵ and the thought and the remainder.

As ¹ I said earlier, among the things that were created, ¹ the monad is first, The dyad ¹ follows it, and the triad, ¹ up to the tenths. Now the tenths ²⁰ rule the destined in him ¹ for union by ¹ Self-begotten Father, from ²⁰ Immortal Man 'who appeared ¹ as First and divinity and kingdom,' ¹ for the Father, who is 102 called 'Man, Self-Father,' ¹ revealed this. ¹ And he created a great aeon, ¹ whose name is Ogdoad, ⁵ for his own majesty.

"He was given ¹ great authority, and he ruled ¹ over the creation of poverty. ¹ He created gods ¹ and angels <and> archangels, ¹⁰ myriads without number ¹ for retinue from that Light ¹ and the ¹ tri-male Spirit, which is that of Sophia, ¹ his consort. ¹⁵ For from this God originated ¹ divinity ¹ and kingdom. Therefore he ¹ was called 'God of ¹ gods,' 'King of kings.'

"²⁰ First Man has ¹ his unique mind, ¹ within, and thought ¹ — just as he is it (thought) — (and) considering, ¹ reflecting, rationality, 103 power. All the attributes that exist ¹ are perfect and ¹ immortal. In respect to ¹ imperishableness, they are indeed equal. (But) in respect to ⁵ power, they are different, like the difference ¹ between father and son, <and son> and thought, ¹ and the thought and the remainder.

"As ¹ I said earlier, among ¹ the things that were created, the monad is ¹⁰ first.

hundredths; the hundredths ¹ rule the thousandths; the thousand<th>s rule ¹ the ten thousand<th>s. This is the pattern <among the> ¹ immortals. First Man ¹ is like this: His monad

(Pages 79 and 80 are missing. They are replaced here with the corresponding section from Eugnostos – Codex V, the beginning of which is somewhat different from the final partial sentence of III 78.)

V [7] ²³ Again it is this pattern ¹ [that] exists among the immortals: the monad ²⁵ and the thought are those things that belong to [Immortal] Man. ¹ The thinkings [are] for ¹ <the> decads, and the hundreds are [the teachings,] ¹ [and the thousands] are the counsels, ¹ [and] the ten thousands [are] the powers. [Now] those [who] ³⁰ come [from the ...] ¹ exist with their [...] ¹ [in] every aeon [...] ¹ [...] [8] [...] In the beginning, thought] ¹ and thinkings [appeared from] mind, ¹ [then] teachings [from] ¹ thinkings, counsels ⁵ [from teachings], (and) power [from] ¹ [counsels]. And after all [the attributes,] ¹ all that [was revealed] ¹ appeared from [his powers.] ¹ And [from] what [was] ¹⁰ created, what was [fashioned] appeared. And ¹ what was formed appeared ¹ from what was [fashioned.] ¹ What was named appeared ¹ from what was formed, ¹⁵ while the difference among begotten things ¹ appeared from what was [named], ¹ from beginning to end, by ¹ power of all the aeons. Now Immortal Man ¹ is full of every ²⁰ imperishable glory and ineffable ¹ joy. His whole kingdom ¹ rejoices in ¹ everlasting rejoicing, those who never ¹ have been heard of or known ²⁵ in any aeon that ¹ [came] after [them and ¹ its [worlds].

And after everything, ¹ all that was revealed ¹ appeared from his power. And from what ¹ was created, ¹ all that was fashioned ¹⁵ appeared; from ¹ what was fashioned ¹ appeared what was formed; ¹ from what was formed, ¹ what was named. Thus ²⁰ came the difference among the unbegotten

Afterward [another] ¹ [principle] came from Immortal [Man], ¹ who is [called] "Self-perfected ³⁰ [Begetter.]" ¹ [When he received the consent] of his [consort,] ¹ [Great Sophia, he] revealed ¹ [that first-begotten androgyne,] [9] [who is called] ¹ "First-begotten [Son] ¹ [of God]." His female aspect ¹ [is "First-]begotten Sophia, ⁵ [Mother of the Universe]," whom some ¹ [call] "Love." ¹ [Now] First-begotten, since he has ¹ [his] authority from ¹ his [father], III[81] created angels, ¹ myriads [without] number, ¹ for retinue. The whole multitude ¹ of those angels are called ⁵ "Assembly of the ¹ Holy Ones, the ones ¹ from beginning to end." ¹

Then Bartholomew ¹ said to him: "How (is it that) <he> was designated in 104 the Gospel 'Man' ¹ and 'Son of Man'? ¹ To which of ¹ them, then, is this Son related?" The Holy One ⁵ said to him:

"I want you ¹ to know that First Man ¹ is called ¹ 'Begetter, Self-perfected ¹ Mind.' ¹⁰ He reflected with Great ¹ Sophia, his consort, and revealed ¹ his first-begotten, ¹ androgynous son. His ¹ male name ¹⁵ is designated 'First Begetter ¹ Son of God'; his female ¹ name, 'First ¹ Begettress Sophia, Mother of the Universe.' ¹ Some call her ²⁰ 'Love.' Now First-begotten is called ¹ 'Christ.' Since he has authority ¹ from his father, he created ¹ a multitude of angels 105 without number for retinue ¹ from Spirit and Light." ¹ Shadowless Lights.”¹ Now when these greet¹ each other, their embraces¹ become angels¹⁰ like themselves.

First Begetter¹ Father is called¹ “Adam of the Light.”

And the kingdom¹ of Son of Man is¹ full of ineffable joy¹⁵ and unchanging jubilation, (they) ever rejoicing¹ in ineffable joy¹ over their imperishable¹ glory, which has¹ never been heard nor has it been revealed²⁰ to all the aeons that came to be¹ and their worlds.

Then Son¹ of Man consented with¹ Sophia, his consort, and¹ revealed a great androgynous light. [82] [His] masculine name¹ is [designated] “Savior,¹ Begetter

His disciples¹ said to him: “Lord, reveal to us⁵ about the one¹ called ‘Man’ that¹ we also may know his glory exactly.”¹ The perfect¹ Savior said: “Whoever has¹⁰ ears to hear, let him¹ hear. First Begetter¹ Father is called ‘Adam,¹ Eye of Light,’ because he came¹ from shining Light,¹⁵ [and] his holy angels, who are ineffable¹ (and) shadowless,¹ ever rejoice with joy¹ in their reflecting,¹ which they received from their Father. The whole kingdom²⁰ of Son of Man,¹ who is called ‘Son¹ of God,’ is full of¹ ineffable and shadowless joy,¹ and unchanging jubilation, (they) rejoicing²⁵ over his imperishable 106 glory, which has never been heard until¹ now, nor has it been revealed¹ in the aeons that came¹ afterward and their worlds.⁵ I came from Self-¹ begotten and First¹ Infinite Light that¹ I might reveal everything to you.”¹

Again, his disciples said:¹⁰ “Tell us clearly¹ how (it is that) they came down from the¹ invisibilities,¹ from the immortal (realm) to the world¹ that dies?” The perfect¹⁵ Savior said: “Son of¹ Man consented with Sophia, his¹ consort, and revealed¹ a great androgynous light.¹ His male name²⁰ is designated ‘Savior,¹ of All things.” His feminine name is designated ⁵ “Sophia, All-Begettress.” Some call her “Pistis.”

Then Savior consented with his consort, Pistis Sophia, and revealed six androgynous spiritual beings ¹⁰ who are the type of those who preceded them. Their male names are these: first, “Unbegotten”; second, “Self-begotten”; third, ¹⁵ “Begetter”; fourth, “First Begetter”; fifth,
 “All-Begetter”; sixth, “Arch-Begetter.” Also the names of the females are these: first, ²⁰ “All-wise Sophia”; second, “All-Mother Sophia”; third, “All-Begettress Sophia”; fourth, “First Begettress Sophia”; fifth, “Love Sophia”;
[83] [sixth], “Pistis Sophia.”

[From the] consenting of those I have just mentioned, thoughts appeared in the aeons that exist.
⁵ From thoughts, reflectings;
 from reflectings, considerings;
 from considerings, rationalities;
 from rationalities, wills; from ¹⁰
 wills, words.

Then the twelve powers, whom I have just discussed, consented with each other. <Six> males (each) (and) <six> females (each) were revealed, so that there are seventy- ¹⁵ two powers.
 Each one of the seventy-two revealed five spiritual (powers), which (together) are the three hundred sixty powers. The union of them all is ²⁰ the will.

Begetter of All Things.’ His female name is designated ‘All-Begettress Sophia.’ Some call her ‘Pistis.’

Therefore our aeon came to be as the type ¹ of Immortal Man. ¹ Time came to be as ¹ the type of First Begetter, [84] his son. [The year] came to be as ¹ the type of [Savior. The] twelve ¹ months came to be as the type ¹ of the twelve powers. The three ⁵ hundred sixty days of the year ¹ came to be as the type of the three hundred ¹ sixty powers who appeared ¹ from Savior. Their hours ¹ and moments came to be as the ¹⁰ type of the angels who came ¹ from them (the three hundred sixty powers) (and) who are without number. ¹

All who come ²⁵ into the world, like 107 a drop from the Light, ¹ are sent by him ¹ to the world of Almighty, ¹ that they might be guarded ⁵ by him. And the bond of ¹ his forgetfulness bound him by the will ¹ of Sophia, that the matter might be <revealed> through it ¹ to the whole world in poverty ¹ concerning his (Almighty's) arrogance ¹⁰ and blindness and ¹ the ignorance that he was named. But I ¹ came from the places ¹ above by the will of the great ¹ Light, (I) who escaped from that bond; ¹⁵ I have cut off the work of the ¹ robbers; I have wakened that drop ¹ that was sent from Sophia, ¹ that it ¹ might bear much fruit ²⁰ through me and be perfected and not again be ¹ defective but be <joined> through ¹ me, the Great Savior, that his ¹ glory might be revealed, so that ¹ Sophia might also be justified in regard to that ²⁵ defect, that her 108 sons might not again become defective but ¹ might attain honor and ¹ glory and go up to their ¹ Father and know the words of the masculine Light. And ⁵ you ¹ were sent by ¹ the Son, who was sent ¹ that you might receive Light and ¹ remove yourselves from the forgetfulness of ¹⁰ the authorities, and that it might not again come to appearance ¹ because of you, namely, the unclean rubbing ¹ that is ¹ from the fearful fire that ¹ came from their fleshly part. ¹⁵ Tread upon their ¹ malicious intent."

Then Thomas said to [him]: ¹ "Lord, Savior ¹ how many are the aeons of those ¹ who surpass the heavens?" The perfect ²⁰ Savior said: "I praise ¹ you (pl.) because you ask about ¹ the great aeons, for your roots ¹ are in the infinities. Now when ¹ those whom I have discussed earlier were revealed, ²⁵ he [provided]

(Pages 109 and 110 are missing. They are replaced here with the corresponding section from the Berlin Gnostic Codex [no. 8502], the beginning of which is somewhat different from the final partial sentence of III 108.)

And when those whom I have discussed appeared, ¹ All-Begetter, their father, very soon ¹

BG 107 Now when ¹ those whom I have discussed earlier were revealed, ¹ Self-Begetter ¹ Father created ¹⁵ twelve aeons ¹ for retinue for the twelve ¹ angels.

And in ¹ each aeon there were six (heavens), ¹ so ²⁰ there are seventy-two heavens of the seventy-two ¹ powers who appeared ¹ from him. And in each of the heavens ¹ there were five firmaments, ¹ so there are (altogether) three hundred sixty [85] [firmaments] of the three hundred
¹ sixty powers that appeared ¹
from them.

When the firmaments ¹ were complete, they were called ⁵ "The Three Hundred Sixty Heavens," according to the name of the ¹ heavens that were before them.
And all these ¹ are perfect and good. And in this ¹ way the defect ¹ of femaleness appeared.

The first ¹⁰ aeon, then, is that of Immortal Man. ¹ The second aeon is that of Son of ¹ Man, who is called ¹ "First Begetter," (V 13, 12-13 adds here: The third is that of son of Son of Man), who ¹ is called "Savior." ¹⁵

That which embraces these is the aeon ¹ over which there is no kingdom, (the aeon) of the ¹ Eternal Infinite God, the ¹ aeon of the aeons of the immortals ¹ who are in it, (the aeon) above the Eighth very soon created ⁵ twelve ¹ aeons for retinue ¹ for the twelve ¹ angels.

All ¹ these are perfect ¹⁰ and good.
¹ Thus ¹ the defect ¹ in the female appeared."

And <he> said ¹ to him: "How many are the ¹⁵ aeons of the immortals, ¹ starting from the infin-ities?" ¹ The perfect Savior said: ¹
"Whoever has ¹ ears to hear, let him 108 hear. The first aeon ¹ is that of Son of Man, ¹ who is called ¹ 'First Begetter,' ⁵ who is called ¹ 'Savior,' ¹ who has appeared.
¹ The second aeon (is) that of ¹
Man, who is called ¹⁰ 'Adam, Eye
¹ of Light.'

That which embraces ¹ these is the aeon ¹ over which there is no kingdom, ¹ (the aeon) of the Eternal ¹⁵ Infinite God, ¹ the Self-begotten aeon ¹ of the aeons ¹ that are in it, (the aeon) of the immor-

²⁰ that appeared in ¹ chaos.

Now Immortal Man ¹ revealed aeons ¹ and powers and kingdoms ¹ and gave authority to everyone [86] who [appeared from] him ¹ to make [whatever they desire] ¹ until the days that are above chaos. ¹ For these consented with each other ⁵ and revealed ¹ every magnificence, even from spirit, ¹ multitudinous lights ¹ that are glorious and without number. These ¹ received names in the beginning, that ¹⁰ is, the first, the middle, <and> the perfect; ¹ that is, the first aeon and ¹ the second and the third. ¹ The first was called ¹ "Unity and Rest." ¹⁵ Since each one has its (own) ¹ name, the ¹ <third> aeon was designated "Assembly" ¹ from the great multitude that ¹ appeared in the multitudinous one. ²⁰ Therefore, when the multitude ¹ gathers and comes to a unity, ¹ they are called "Assembly," ¹ from the Assembly that surpassed ¹ heaven. Therefore, the Assembly of [87] the [Eighth was] revealed ¹ as [androgynous] and was named ¹ partly as male and partly ¹ as female. The male was called "Assembly," ⁵ the female, "Life," that ¹ it might be shown that from ¹ a female came the life ¹ in all the aeons. Every name was received, ¹ starting from the beginning.

tals, ¹ whom I described earlier, 109 (the aeon) above the Seventh ¹ that appeared from ¹ Sophia, which is the ¹ first aeon.

"Now ⁵ Immortal Man revealed ¹ aeons ¹ and powers and kingdoms ¹ and gave authority ¹ to all who appear ¹⁰ in him that they might ¹ exercise their desires until ¹ the last things that are above ¹ chaos. For these ¹ consented with each ¹⁵ other and revealed ¹ every magnificence, even ¹ from spirit, ¹ multitudinous lights that are glorious ¹ and without number. These 110 were called ¹ in the beginning, that is, ¹ the first aeon ¹ and <the second> and <the third>. ⁵ The first <is> called ¹ 'Unity ¹ and Rest.' Each one has ¹ its (own) name; for ¹⁰ the <third> aeon ¹ was designated 'Assembly' ¹ from the ¹ great multitude that ¹ appeared: ¹⁵ in one, a multitude revealed themselves. ¹ Now because ¹ the multitudes 111 gather III 111 and come to a unity, (BG 111, 2-5 adds here: therefore <they> are called 'Assembly,' from that Assembly that surpasses heaven) we call ¹ them 'Assembly ¹ of the Eighth.' It appeared ¹ as androgynous and was named ⁵ partly as male and ¹ partly as female. The male ¹ is called 'Assembly,' while the ¹ female is called 'Life,' ¹ that it might be shown that from ¹⁰ a female came the life for ¹ all the aeons. And every name was ¹ received, starting from the beginning.

From his ¹⁰ concurrence with his thought, ¹ the powers appeared who were called ¹ "gods"; and the gods ¹ from their considerings revealed ¹ divine gods; ¹⁵ and the gods from their ¹ considerings revealed lords; ¹ and the lords of the lords from ¹ their words revealed lords; ¹ and the lords from ²⁰ their powers revealed ¹ archangels; the archangels ¹ revealed angels; from ¹ <them> the semblance appeared [88] with structure [and form] for naming ¹ [all] the aeons [and] their worlds. ¹

All the immortals, whom ¹ I have just described, have authority — all of them — ⁵ from the power of ¹ Immortal Man and Sophia, ¹ his consort, who was ¹ called "Silence," (and) who was named ¹ "Silence" because by reflecting ¹⁰ without speech she perfected her ¹ own majesty. Since the imperishabilities had ¹ the authority, each provided ¹ great kingdoms in all the immortal heavens ¹⁵ and their firmaments, ¹ thrones, (and) temples, ¹ for their own majesty.

Some, indeed, ¹ (who are) in dwellings and in chariots, ¹ being in ineffable glory ²⁰ and not able to be sent into any creature, ¹ provided for themselves ¹ hosts of angels, myriads ¹ without number

"For from ¹ his concurrence with his thought, the powers ¹ very soon appeared who ¹⁵ were called 'gods'; ¹ and [the] gods of the gods from their ¹ wisdom revealed gods; ¹ <and the gods> from their wisdom revealed ¹ lords; and the lords of ²⁰ the lords from their thinkings revealed lords; ¹ and the lords from ¹ their power revealed archangels; ¹ the archangels ¹ from their words revealed angels; 112 from them ¹ semblances appeared with structure and form ¹ and name for all the aeons ¹ and their worlds.

"And the immortals, ⁵ whom I have just described, all have ¹ authority from ¹ Immortal Man, who ¹ is called 'Silence' ¹ because by reflecting without ¹⁰ speech all her own majesty was perfected.' ¹ For since the imperishabilities had ¹ the authority, each created ¹ a great kingdom ¹ in the Eighth ¹⁵ and (also) thrones and ¹ temples (and) firmaments for ¹ their own majesties. For these all ¹ came by the will ¹ of the Mother of the Universe."

Then ²⁰ the Holy Apostles said ¹ to him: "Lord, Savior, ¹ tell us about those who are in the aeons, ¹ since it is necessary for us to ask ¹ about them." The perfect 113 Savior said: "If you ask ¹ about anything, I will tell you. ¹ They created hosts of ¹ angels, myriads without number ⁵ for retinue and their glory. They created ¹ virgin for retinue [89] and glory, even virgin¹ spirits, the ineffable lights.¹ They have no sickness¹ nor weakness, but it is only will:⁵ it comes to be in an instant.¹ Thus were completed¹ the aeons with their heavens and firmaments¹ for the glory of Immortal¹ Man and Sophia, his consort:¹⁰ the area which (contained the pattern of) every aeon and¹ their worlds and those that came¹ afterward, in order to provide¹ the types from there, their¹ likenesses in the heavens of chaos and¹⁵ their worlds.

And all natures¹ from the Immortal One, from Unbegotten¹ to the revelation of¹ chaos, are in the light that shines without shadow¹ and (in) ineffable joy²⁰ and unutterable jubilation.¹ They ever delight themselves¹ on account of their glory that does not change¹ and the rest that is not measured,¹ which cannot be described⁹⁰ or conceived¹ among all the aeons¹ that came to be and their powers.¹ But this much is enough. All⁵ I have just said to you,¹ I said in the way you might¹ accept, until the one who need not be taught¹ appears among you,¹ and he will speak all these things to you¹⁰ joyously and in¹ pure knowledge.¹

spirits, the¹ ineffable and unchangeable lights.¹ For they have no sickness¹ nor weakness,¹⁰ but it is will. (BG 115, 14 adds here: And they came to be in an instant.)

“Thus the aeons were completed¹ quickly with the heavens¹ and the firmaments in the glory¹ of Immortal Man and Sophia,¹ his consort: the area from which¹⁵ every aeon and the world¹ and those that came afterward¹ took (their) pattern for their creation¹ of likenesses in the heavens of chaos¹ and their worlds. And all natures,²⁰ starting from the revelation of chaos,¹ are in the Light that shines without shadow¹ and joy that cannot be described¹ and¹ unutterable jubilation. They ever²⁵ delight themselves on account of their unchanging glory 114 and the immeasurable rest,¹ which cannot be described¹ among all the aeons that¹ came to be afterward and all their⁵ powers. Now all that¹ I have just said to you, I¹ said that you might shine in¹ Light more than these.”

Mary said¹ to him: “Holy Lord,¹⁰ where did your disciples¹ come from and where are they going and (what) should they¹ do here?”¹ The perfect Savior said to them: "I want ¹ you to know that Sophia, ¹⁵ the Mother of the Universe and the consort, ¹ desired by herself ¹ to bring these to existence without ¹ her male (consort). But by the will ¹ of the Father of the Universe, that his ²⁰ unimaginable goodness might be revealed, ¹ he created that curtain ¹ between the immortals ¹ and those ¹ that came afterward, ²⁵ that the consequence might follow

(Pages 115 and 116 are missing. They are replaced here with the corresponding section from the Berlin Gnostic Codex [no. 8502].)

BG 118 every aeon ¹ and chaos, ¹⁵ that the defect of the female ¹ might <appear>, and it might come about that ¹ Error would contend with ¹ her. And these became 119 the curtain ¹ of spirit. From <the> aeons ¹ above the emanations ¹ of Light, as ⁵ I have said already, a ¹ drop from Light ¹ and Spirit came down to the lower regions ¹ of Almighty ¹⁰ in chaos, that ¹ their molded forms might appear ¹ from that drop, ¹ for it is a judgment ¹ on him, Arch-Begetter, ¹⁵ who is called ¹ 'Yaldabaoth.' ¹ That drop revealed ¹ their molded forms ¹ through the breath, as a 120 living soul. It was withered ¹ and it slumbered in the ignorance ¹ of the soul. When it ¹ became hot from the breath ⁵ of the Great Light ¹ of the Male, and it took ¹ thought, (then) ¹ names were received by all who ¹ are in the world of chaos ¹⁰ and all things that are in ¹ it through that ¹ Immortal One, when the breath ¹ blew into him. ¹ But when this came about ¹⁵ by the will of Mother ¹ Sophia – so that Immortal Man ¹ might piece together 121 the garments there ¹ for a judgment ¹ on the robbers – ¹ <he> then welcomed the blowing ⁵ of that breath; ¹ but since he was soul-like, ¹ he was not able to take ¹ that power for himself ¹ until ¹⁰ the number of chaos should be complete, (that is,) when the time ¹ determined by the great ¹ angel is complete.

“Now I have taught ¹ you about Immortal ¹⁵ Man and have loosed ¹ the bonds of the robbers ¹ from him. ¹ I have broken the gates of 122 the pitiless ones in their presence. ¹ I have humiliated their ¹ malicious intent, and they all have been shamed ¹ and have risen ⁵ from their ignorance. Because ¹ of this, then, I came here, ¹ that they might be joined with ¹ that Spirit and ¹ Breath, III 117 that [...] and Breath, and might ¹ from two become one, just as from ¹ the first, that you might yield much fruit ¹ and go up to ⁵ Him Who Is from the Beginning, in ¹ ineffable joy and glory ¹ and [honor and] grace of ¹ [the Father of the Universe].

“Whoever, [then], knows ¹ [the

Father in pure] knowledge ¹⁰ [will depart] to the Father ¹ [and repose in] Unbegotten ¹ [Father]. But [whoever knows] [him defectively] will depart ¹ [to the defect] and the rest ¹⁵ [of the Eighth. Now] whoever knows ¹ Immortal [Spirit] ¹ of Light in silence, through reflecting ¹ and consent in the truth, ¹ let him bring me signs ²⁰ of the Invisible One, and he will become ¹ a light in the Spirit of Silence. ¹ Whoever knows Son of Man ¹ in knowledge and love, ¹ let him bring me a sign 118 of Son of Man, that he might depart ¹ to the dwelling-places with those in the Eighth. ¹ about the God who is above the universe. 119 Therefore, tread upon their ¹ graves, humiliate their malicious intent ¹ and break their yoke ¹ and arouse my own. I have given ⁵ you authority over all things ¹ as Sons of Light, ¹ that you might tread upon their power with ¹ [your] feet.”

“Behold, I have revealed to you ¹ the name of the Perfect One, the whole will ⁵ of the Mother of the Holy Angels, ¹ that the masculine [multitude] ¹ may be completed here, ¹ that there [might appear, in the aeons,] ¹ [the infinities and] ¹⁰ those that [came to be in the] untraceable ¹ [wealth of the Great] ¹ Invisible [Spirit, that they] all [might take] ¹ [from his goodness,] ¹ even the wealth [of their rest] ¹⁵ that has no [kingdom over it]. I ¹ came [from First] Who ¹ Was Sent, that I might reveal ¹ to you Him Who Is from ¹ the Beginning, because of the arrogance ²⁰ of Arch-Begetter and his angels, ¹ since they say about themselves that ¹ they are gods. And I ¹ came to remove them from their blindness ¹ that I might tell everyone ²⁵

These are the things [the] blessed ¹ Savior [said,] ¹⁰ [and he disappeared] from them. Then ¹ [all the disciples] were in ¹ [great, ineffable joy] in ¹ [the spirit from] that day on. ¹ [And his disciples] began to preach ¹⁵ [the] Gospel of God, ¹ [the] eternal, imperishable [Spirit]. ¹ Amen. ¹

EUGNOSTOS, THE BLESSED

THE SOPHIA OF JESUS

THE DIALOGUE OF THE SAVIOR (III,5)

Introduced by

HELMUT KOESTER and ELAINE H. PAGELS

Translated by

STEPHEN EMMEL

The title The Dialogue of the Savior appears in the incipit and the explicit of the manuscript and is apparently a later addition. No specific author is indicated anywhere in the text. But the speaker is the "Savior" or the "Lord" (he is never called Jesus or Jesus Christ) in conversation with his disciples Judas, Mary, and Matthew. In this respect, the title "dialogue" is appropriate, except for the first section of the text (120,3-124,22) which is an uninterrupted monologue of the Savior. The text is preserved only in this somewhat fragmentary manuscript, and it is not referred to or quoted in any ancient source. Thus, no external attestation for the date of its composition is available.

The Dialogue of the Savior is a writing of considerable complexity, and its several parts exhibit a great variety in style and content. It is best seen as a compilation of various generations of Christianity and composed in its extant form, originally in Greek, some time during the 2nd century. Parallels to the author's understanding of baptism in deutero-Pauline epistles suggest a date close to the turn of the first century.

The primary source was a dialogue between the Lord and three disciples. This source is preserved in the following sections of the extant work: 124,23-127,19; 128,23-129,16; 131,19-133,21(?); 137,3-146,20, i.e., in about 65% of the present text. These sections are characterized by brief questions, usually from one of the named disciples (sometimes by all disciples) and equally brief answers of the Lord. Sometimes these questions and answers are expanded into longer units discussing a particular topic. Traditional sayings of Jesus used in these questions and answers have parallels in the Gospels of Matthew, Luke, and John, and particularly in The Gospel of Thomas. However, a literary dependence upon any of these writings seems unlikely. Rather, the sayings tradition used here appears to be an independent parallel to the one used in The Gospel of Thomas and the Gospel of John.

The form of these brief dialogue units parallels the dialogues found in the Gospel of John. In contrast to some gnostic dialogues which are actually secondarily arranged theological discourses (such as The Sophia of Jesus Christ and Pistis Sophia), the dialogues of the Gospel of John and of The Dialogue of the Savior are not free compositions of an author, but elaborations and interpretations of traditional sayings. In some instances, the dialogical development of the sayings tradition in our document is less advanced and theologically less complex than the Johannine parallels. This would argue for a date of the original dialogue source of this document before the end of the first century.

The sequence of the topics explored in these dialogues has close parallels in sayings of The Gospel of Thomas, especially in its saying 2 about the seeking, finding, marvelling, ruling and resting. That saying presents an eschatological timetable which is further explored in the dialogues of this writing. The disciples have sought and found and marvelled, but their ruling and resting will come only in the future. At the present time, they still carry the burden of the flesh, i.e., the body and earthly labor or, in the words of this writing, of "the works of womanhood." Mary who recognizes this receives the highest praise. This theme, the continuation of the works of the female, i.e., the continuation of the human race through childbirth, is prominent in the last portion of the dialogue. It deals with the role of the female in the process of salvation more explicitly than most other early Christian writings (close parallels can be found in The Gospel of the Egyptians, quoted by Clement of Alexandria), and it gives Mary a very high estimate as "a woman who had understood completely" (139,11-13).

In the final form of the document, several other traditional pieces have been added to the original dialogue: 1) Fragments of a creation myth (127,19-131,18) which is based upon Gen 1-2. The myth relates how water, originally separated from the earth by a wall of fire, made the world fruitful. In 128,1-129,12, the author has interrupted the account of this myth in order to interpret the term spirit. 2) A cosmological wisdom list (133,23-134,24). The author has added comments about the root of wickedness and about baptism. 3) An apocalyptic vision of which fragments are still recognizable in 134,24-137,3. The vision, taking place on a high mountain from where the whole of heaven and earth can be seen, originally spoke about the rescue of a soul and its installation before God in a new garment. The process is explained by an angelic figure called "Son of Man," a title which The Dialogue of the Savior never uses for Jesus.

The final author opened his compilation of these materials with an intriguing section (120,2-124,22), consisting of an exhortation, a prayer of thanksgiving and a gnostic discourse about the passage of the soul through the heavenly powers. This section employs established Christian soteriological language with allusions to passages from the New Testament epistles; it also contains a reference to the Gospel of John (Jn 1:18). With this introduction the entire dialogue is placed into a new context: baptismal initiation. The baptismal theology resolves the conflict between the "already" of a realized eschatology and the "not yet" of a futuristic eschatology. As baptism is understood in the same way as in Eph 2:1-6 and Col 3:1-4, those who are baptized have already passed through death into true life. Metaphorical and mythical language is thus related to a cultic act for the expression of realized eschatology.

Yet, receiving visions in the context of baptism is not the culmination of the experience of redemption. Instead, through the utilization and interpretation of the older dialogue used in the composition, the author presents a discussion of the complex eschatological situation of the disciples. Although the disciples have already sought and found and have marvelled at visions, have experienced the indwelling of the living God and passed through the powers in the experience of baptism, their final entry into ruling and resting is still to come. Their present existence is defined as work in behalf of the revelation, so that they, like their Lord, may save others and "reveal the greatness of the revealer," while they are still wearing the flesh, carrying a burden just as the Lord himself. This also indicates that the "Lord" who is speaking in this dialogue is not the exalted Lord but the "earthly" Jesus. The "place of truth" is not defined in terms of other-worldly existence, but as the place where the Lord is. This emphasis upon the tasks of a Christian life in this world implies that the "dissolution of the works of womanhood" does not suggest a metaphysically motivated sexual asceticism, but speaks of the secret birth through the one who "is coming from the Father." In spite of the evident employment of gnostic language in the description of the baptismal experience, The Dialogue of the Savior cannot be understood as the simple product of gnostic theology. Rather, it resembles the Gospel of John in its attempt to reinterpret the sayings of Jesus in the horizon of gnostic thought.

THE DIALOGUE OF THE SAVIOR

III 120, 1-147, 23

The Dialogue of the Savior ¹

(1) The Savior said to his disciples, ¹ "Already the time has come, ¹ brothers, for us to abandon ⁵ our labor and stand at ¹ rest. For whoever stands ¹ at rest will rest ¹ forever. And I ¹ say to you, [be] always ¹⁰ [above ...] ¹ time ... [...] ¹ ... you [...] ¹ be afraid [of ...] ¹ ... you ... [...] ¹⁵ ... anger [is] fearful [...] ¹ arouse anger ... [...] ¹ is ...] ¹ but since you have ... [...] ¹ ... [...] ¹ they accepted these words [concerning it] with [fear] ²⁰ and trembling, and it set ¹ them up with governors, ¹ for from it nothing was forthcoming. ¹ But when I came, I ¹ opened the path and I taught them about ²⁵ the passage which they will traverse, ¹ the elect and solitary, 121 [who have known the Father, having ¹ believed] the truth and [all] the praises ¹ while you offered praise. ¹

(2) "So when you offer praise, do so like this: ⁵ Hear us, Father, just as ¹ you heard your only-begotten ¹ son and received him ¹ [and] gave him rest from many ... ¹ [...] You are the one] whose power ¹⁰ [... your] armor ... ¹ [...] is ...] ... light ¹ [...] ... living ¹ [...] ... touch ... ¹ [...] ... the word ... ¹⁵ [...] repentance ... life ¹ [...] ... you. You are ¹ [the] thinking and the [entire] serenity ¹ of the solitary. Again: [Hear] ¹ us just as you heard ²⁰ your elect. Through your [sacrifice ¹ these] will enter; through their ¹ [good] works these have saved ¹ their souls from these ¹ blind [limbs] so that they might exist 122 eternally. Amen.

(3) "I will ¹ teach you. When ¹ the time of dissolution arrives, ¹ the first power of darkness will ⁵ come upon you. Do not be afraid ¹ and say, 'Behold! The time ¹ has come!' But when you see ¹ a single staff ... [...] ¹ ... this ... [...] ... [...] ¹⁰ ... [...] ¹ ... [...] ¹ understand ... [...] ¹ ... the work ... [...] ¹ and the governors ... [...] ¹⁵ come upon you ... [...]. ¹ Truly, fear is the [power ...] ¹ So if you are going to be [afraid] ¹ of what is about to come upon [you], ¹ it will engulf you. ²⁰ For there is not one among them who will ¹ spare you or show [you] mercy. ¹ But in this way, look at [the ...] ¹ in it, since you have mastered every word ¹ on earth. It 123 [...] take] you up to the ... ¹ [...] place] where there is no rule ¹ [...] tyrant]. When you ¹ [...] you] will see those who ⁵ [...] ... and also ... ¹ [...] tell] you ... ¹ [...] ... the reasoning power ¹ [...] reasoning power ... ¹ [...] place] of truth ¹⁰ [...] ... but ... ¹ [...]. But you ¹ [...] ... truth, this ¹ [...] ... living ... ¹ [...] and] your joy ¹⁵ [...]. So [...] ... in order that ¹ [...] your souls ¹ [...] lest it ¹ [...] the word [...] ... raise ... ²⁰ [...] ... [...] ... ¹ [...] ... [...] ... your ... ¹ [...] ... [...] ... ¹ [...] For the crossing place 124 is fearful [before you]. ¹ But you, [with a] ¹ single mind, pass [it] by! ¹ For its depth is great; [its] ⁵ height [is] enormous [...] ¹ a single mind ... [...] ¹ and the fire ... [...] ¹ ... [...] ¹ all] the powers [...] ¹⁰ ... you, they ... [...] ¹ and the [powers ...] ¹ they ... [...] ¹ ... [...] ¹ ... soul ... [...] ¹⁵ ... [...] ¹ in everyone [...] you] ¹ are the ... [...] ¹ and ... [...] ¹ ... forget ... [...] ²⁰ ... son ... [...] ¹ and you [...] ... [...] ¹ you ... [...] ... [...].” ¹

(4) [Matthew] said, “[How ... ¹ ... 125 ...]?”

(5) The Savior said, ¹ “[...] ... the things inside you ¹ [...] ... will remain, you ¹ [...].”

(6) Judas [said], “Lord, ⁵ [...] ... the works ¹ [...] these] souls, these ¹ [...] these little ones, when ¹ [...] where will they be? ¹ [...] ... [...] ... the spirit ¹⁰ [...].”

(7) The Lord [said], ¹ “[...] ... ¹ [...] receive] ¹ them. These do not die, ¹ [...] ... they are not destroyed, for they have known ¹⁵ [their] consorts and him who would [receive ¹ them]. For the truth seeks ¹ [out the] wise and the righteous.” ¹

(8) The Savior [said], “The lamp ¹ [of the body] is the mind. As long as ²⁰ [the things inside] you are set in order, that is, ¹ [...] ... , your bodies are [luminous]. ¹ As long as your hearts ¹ are [dark], the luminosity you 126 anticipate [...] ¹ I have ... [...] ¹ ... I will go ... [...] ¹ ... my word ... [...] ⁵ I send ... [...].” ¹

(9) His [disciples said, “Lord], ¹ who is it who seeks, and [...] ¹ reveals?”

(10) [The Lord said to them], ¹ "He who seeks [...] ¹⁰ reveals ...
[...]." ¹

(11) [Matthew said, "Lord, when] ¹ I [...] ¹ and [when] I speak, who is it who ... [...] ¹ ... who listens?"

(12) [The Lord] said, ¹⁵ "It is the one who speaks who also [listens], ¹ and it is the one who can see who also ¹ reveals."

(13) [Mary] said, ¹ "Lord, behold! ¹ Whence [do I] bear the body
[while I] ²⁰ weep, and whence while I [...]?" ¹

(14) The Lord said, "[...] ¹ weep on account of its works [...] ¹ remain and the mind laughs [...] ... [127] ... spirit. If one does not ¹ [...] darkness, he will be able to see ¹ [...]. So I tell you ¹ [...]
light is the darkness ⁵ [...] ... stand in ¹ [...] not see the light ¹ [...]
the lie [...] ... they brought them from ¹ [...] ... [...] ... You will give ¹ [...] ... and ¹⁰ [...] exist] forever. ¹ [...] ... ¹ [...] ... ¹ [...]
ever. Then ¹ [all] the powers ¹⁵ which are above as well as those ¹ [below] will [...] you. In that place ¹ [there will] be weeping and ¹
[gnashing] of teeth over the end of [all] these things." ¹

(15) Judas [said], "Tell ²⁰ [us, Lord], what was [...] before ¹ [the heaven and the] earth existed." ¹

(16) The Lord said, ¹ "There was darkness and water and 128 spirit upon [water]. ¹ And I say [to you, ... ¹ what] you seek [after ...] ¹ inquire after ... [...] ⁵ within you ... [...] ¹ ... the power and the [mystery ...] ¹ spirit, for from ... [...] ¹ wickedness [...] come ...
[...] ¹ mind ... [...] ¹⁰ behold ... [...] ¹ ... [...]." ¹

(17) [...] said, "[Lord], ¹ tell us ¹ where [the ... is established] and ¹⁵ where [the true mind] exists." ¹

(18) The Lord [said], "The fire [of the] ¹ spirit came into existence
... [...] ¹ both. On this account, the [...] ¹ came into existence, and ²⁰ the [true] mind came into existence [within] them [...]. ¹ If someone [sets his soul] ¹ up high, [then he will] ¹ be exalted."

(19) And Matthew [asked him 129 ...] ... took ... ¹ [...] ... it is he who ... ¹ [...]." ¹

(20) The Lord [said], ¹ "[... stronger] than ... ⁵ [...] ... you ...
¹ [...] ... [...] ... to follow ¹ [you] and all the works ¹ [...] your hearts. For just as ¹ your hearts [...], so ¹⁰ [...] the means to overcome the powers ¹ [above] as well as those below ¹ [...]. I say to you, ¹ let him [who possesses] power renounce ¹ [it and repent]. And ¹⁵ [let] him who [...] seek and find and [rejoice]." ¹

(21) Judas [said], "Behold! ¹ [I] see that all things exist ¹ [...] like signs upon ¹ [...]. On this account did they happen thus." ²⁰

(22) The Lord [said], "When the [Father ¹ established] the cosmos, he ¹ [...] water from it ¹ [and his] Word came forth from it 130 and it inhabited many ... [...]. ¹ It was higher than the [path ... surround] ¹ the entire earth ... [...]. ¹ ... the [collected] water [...] ⁵ existing outside them. [...] ¹ ... the water, a great fire [encircling] ¹ them like a wall. ... [...] ¹ ... time once many things had become separated [from what] ¹ was inside. When the [...] ¹⁰ was established, he looked ... [...] ¹ and said to it, 'Go, and ... [...] ¹ from yourself in order that ... [...] ¹ be in want from generation to [generation, and] ¹ from age to age.' [Then it] ¹⁵ cast forth from itself [fountains] ¹ of milk and [fountains of] ¹ honey and oil and [wine] ¹ and [good] fruits ¹ and sweet flavor and ²⁰ good roots, [in order that] ¹ it might not be deficient from generation [to] ¹ generation, and from age [to age]. ¹

(23) "And it is above ... [...] 131 ...] standing ¹ [...] ... its beauty ... ¹ [...] ... and outside ¹ [there was a great] light, powerful ⁵ [...] ... resemble it, for it ¹ [...] ... rules over [all] the aeons ¹ [above] and below. ¹ [...] was] taken from the fire ... ¹ [...] ... it was scattered in the ¹⁰ [...] ... above and ¹ [below. All] the works ¹ [which] depend on them, it is they ¹ [...] over the heaven above ¹ [and over] the earth [below]. ¹⁵ On them depend ¹ all [the works]."

(24) [And] when [Judas] ¹ heard these things, he bowed down and he ¹ [...] and he offered praise to the Lord. ¹

(25) [Mary] hailed her brethren, ²⁰ [saying], "Where are you going to put [these things] about which you ask the son ... ¹ [...]?" ¹

(26) [The Lord said] to her, "Sister, ¹ [...] will be able to inquire about these things [except ¹ for someone who] has somewhere 132 to put them in his [heart ...] ¹ ... to come [forth ...] ¹ and enter ... [...] ... [...] ¹ so that they might not hold back ... [...] ⁵ this impoverished cosmos."

(27) [Matthew] said, ¹ "Lord, I want [to see] ¹ that place of life [...] ¹ where there is no wickedness, [but rather] ¹ there is pure [light]!"

(28) The Lord [said], ¹⁰ "Brother [Matthew], ¹ you will not be able to see it [as long as you are] ¹ carrying flesh around."

(29) [Matthew] said, ¹ "Lord, [even if I will] ¹ not [be able] to see it, let me [know it]!" ¹⁵

(30) The Lord [said], "[Everyone] ¹ who has known himself has seen [it in] ¹ everything given to him to do [...] ¹ ... and has come to [...] ¹ it in his [goodness]."

(31) [Judas] ²⁰ responded, saying, ¹ "Tell me, Lord, [how it is that ...] ¹ ... which shakes the earth ¹ moves."

(32) The Lord picked up a [stone and] ¹ held it in his hand, [saying, 133 "What] am I holding ¹ [in] my [hand]?"

(33) He said, "[It is] a stone." ¹

(34) He [said] to them, "That which supports ¹ [the earth] is that which supports the heaven. ⁵ When a Word comes forth ¹ from the Greatness, it will come on what ¹ supports the heaven and the earth. For the earth ¹ does not move. Were it to move, it would ¹ fall. But it neither moves nor falls, in order that the First Word might not ¹⁰ fail. For it was that which established ¹ the cosmos and inhabited ¹ it and inhaled fragrance from ¹ it. For, . . . [...] . . . which do not move I ¹ [...] . . . you, all the sons of [men. ¹⁵ For] you are from [that] place. ¹ [In] the hearts of those who speak out of [joy] ¹ and truth you exist. ¹ Even if it comes forth in ¹ [the body] of the Father among men ²⁰ and is not received, still ¹ it [...] return to its place. Whoever [does not] know ¹ [the work] of perfection [knows] ¹ nothing. If one does not stand ¹ in the darkness, he will not be able to see the light. 134

(35) "If [one] does not [understand ¹ how] fire came into existence, ¹ he will burn in it, because ¹ he does not know the root of it. ⁵ If one does not first understand ¹ water, he knows nothing. For what ¹ use is there for him to be baptized ¹ in it? If one does not understand ¹ how blowing wind ¹⁰ came into existence, he will blow away ¹ with it. If one does not understand ¹ how body, which he bears, ¹ came into existence, he will [perish] with ¹ it. And how will someone who does [not] know [the Son] ¹⁵ know the [Father]? ¹ And to someone who will not know the [root] ¹ of all things, they remain hidden. Someone who ¹ will not know the root of wickedness ¹ is no stranger to it. Whoever ²⁰ will not understand how ¹ he came will not understand how ¹ he will go, and he is no [stranger] ¹ to this cosmos which [will . . .], ¹ which will be humiliated."

(36) Then he [...] Judas] ²⁵ and Matthew and [Mary 135 . . .] . . . [...] . . . the edge of heaven ¹ [and] earth. [And] when he placed his ¹ [hand] upon them, they hoped that they might ¹ [...] . . . it. Judas raised his eyes ⁵ and saw an exceedingly high place, ¹ and he saw the place of the abyss ¹ below. Judas said to ¹ Matthew, "Brother, who will ¹ be able to climb up to such a height or down to the ¹⁰ bottom of the abyss? For there is a tremendous ¹ fire there and something very fearful!" ¹ At that moment, a Word came forth from ¹ it. As it stood there, ¹ he saw how it had come ¹⁵ [down]. Then he said to it, "[Why] ¹ have you come down?"

(37) And the Son ¹ of Man greeted them and said to them, ¹ "A seed from a power was ¹ deficient and it went down to ²⁰ [the] abyss of the earth. And the Greatness ¹ remembered [it] and he sent the [Word ¹ to] it. It brought it up into ¹ [his presence] so that 136 the First Word might not fail.” [Then his disciples] were ¹ amazed at [all the things] ¹ he had said to them, and they accepted them on [faith]. ¹ And they concluded that it is useless ⁵ to regard wickedness.

(38) Then he said to ¹ his disciples, “Have I not told ¹ you that like a visible voice and flash of ¹ lightning ¹ will the good be taken up to ¹⁰ the light?”

(39) Then all his disciples ¹ offered him praise and said, “Lord, ¹ before you appeared ¹ here, who was it who offered you praise? ¹ For all praises exist on your account. ¹⁵ Or who is it who will bless [you]? ¹ For all blessing derives [from] ¹ you.”

(40) As they stood there, he saw ¹ two spirits bringing a single soul ¹ with them in a great flash of lightning. ²⁰ And a Word came forth from ¹ the Son of Man, saying, ¹ “Give them their garment!” [And] ¹ the small one became like the big one. They were [...] ... ¹ ... those who received 137 them. [...] ... each other. ¹ Then [...] ... disciples, ¹ [whom] he had [...] ...

(41) Mary [said, ¹ “[...] see ⁵ [evil ...] ... them from the ¹ first [...] each other.” ¹

(42) The [Lord] said, “[...] ... when you see ¹ them [...] ...] become huge, they ¹ will [...] ... But when you ¹⁰ see the Eternal Existent, that ¹ is the great vision.”

(43) Then they all said to him, ¹ “Tell us about it!”

(44) He said to them, ¹ “How do you wish to see it? ¹ [By means of a] transient vision or an ¹⁵ eternal [vision]?” He went on and said, ¹ “[Strive] to save that ¹ [which] can follow ¹ [you], and to seek it out, and to ¹ speak from within it, so that, ²⁰ as you seek it out, [everything] ¹ might be in harmony with you! For ¹ I [say] to you, truly, ¹ the living God [...] ... in you 138 [...] ... in ¹ him.”

(45) [Judas said, “Truly], I ¹ want [...] ...” ¹

(46) The [Lord said] to him, “[...] living [...] ⁵ dwells [...] ... entire ¹ ... the [deficiency ...].”

(47) [Judas said], ¹ “Who [...] [...]?” ¹

(48) The Lord said, “[...] all [the] works ¹ which [...] [...] the remainder, ¹⁰ it is they [which you [...] [...] ...]” ¹

(49) Judas said, “Behold! ¹ The governors dwell above ¹ us, so it is they who will rule ¹ over us!”

(50) The Lord said, ¹⁵ “It is you who will rule over them! ¹ But when you rid yourselves of ¹ jealousy, then ¹ you will clothe yourselves in light ¹ and enter the bridal chamber.” ²⁰

(51) Judas said, ¹ “How will [our] garments be brought to us?” ¹

(52) The Lord said, “There are ¹ some who will provide for you, and ¹ there are others who will receive [. . .]. 139 For [it is] they [who will give you] your ¹ garments. [For] who [will] be able to reach ¹ that place [which] is [the] reward? ¹ But the garments of life were given to ⁵ man because he knows the ¹ path by which he will leave. And ¹ it is difficult even for me to reach it!” ¹

(53) Mary said, “Thus with respect to ‘the ¹ wickedness of each day,’ and ‘the laborer ¹⁰ is worthy of his food,’ and ¹ ‘the disciple resembles his teacher.’” ¹ She uttered this as a woman who had understood ¹ completely.

(54) The disciples said to him, ¹ “What is the fullness and ¹⁵ what is the deficiency?”

(55) He said to them, ¹ “You are from the fullness ¹ and you dwell in the place ¹ where the deficiency is. And lo! His light has poured [down] ²⁰ upon me!”

(56) [Matthew] said, ¹ ‘Tell me, Lord, ¹ how the dead die ¹ [and] how the living live.” 140

(57) The [Lord] said, “[You have] asked ¹ me about a saying [. . .] which ¹ eye has not seen, [nor] have I heard it ¹ except from you. But I say ⁵ to you that when ¹ what invigorates a man is removed, ¹ he will be called ‘dead.’ And when ¹ what is alive leaves what is dead, ¹ what is alive will be called upon.”

(58) Judas said, ¹⁰ “Why else, for the sake of truth, do they ¹ <die> and live?”

(59) The Lord said, ¹ “Whatever is born of truth ¹ does not die. Whatever is born of woman ¹ dies.”

(60) Mary said, ¹⁵ “Tell me, Lord, why ¹ I have come to this place to profit ¹ or to forfeit.”

(61) The Lord said, “You make clear ¹ the abundance of the revelation!” ¹

(62) Mary said to him, ²⁰ “Lord, is there then a place which is . . . , ¹ or lacking truth?” ¹

(63) The Lord said, “The place where I ¹ am not!”

(64) Mary said, ¹ “Lord, you are fearful and [wonderful], 141 and . . . [. . .] . . . ¹ . . . those who do not know [you].” ¹

(65) Matthew said, “[Why] do we ¹ not rest [at once]?” ⁵

(66) The Lord said, “When you lay down ¹ these burdens!”

(67) Matthew said, ¹ "How does the small ¹ join itself to the big?"

(68) The Lord said, ¹ "When you abandon ¹⁰ the works which will not be able ¹ to follow you, then you will rest." ¹

(69) Mary said, ¹ "I want to understand all things, ¹ [just as] they are."

(70) The [Lord] said, ¹⁵ "He who will seek out life! ¹ For [this] is their wealth. ¹ For the ... [...] ... of this cosmos ¹ is [...], and its gold and its silver ¹ are [misleading]."

(71) His [disciples] said to him, ²⁰ "What should we do to ensure that ¹ our work will be perfect?" ¹

(72) The Lord [said] to them, "Be ¹ [prepared] in face of everything. ¹ [Blessed] is the man who has found 142 ... [...] ... the contest ... ¹ his eyes. [Neither] did he kill, nor ¹ was [he] killed, but he came forth victorious." ¹

(73) [Judas] said, "Tell me, Lord, ⁵ what the beginning of the path is."

(74) He said, ¹ "Love and goodness. For if ¹ one of these existed among the ¹ governors, wickedness would never have come into existence." ¹

(75) Matthew said, "Lord, ¹⁰ you have spoken about the end of everything without concern." ¹

(76) The Lord said, "You have understood all the things ¹ I have said to you ¹ and you have accepted them on faith. ¹ If you have known them, then they are [yours]. ¹⁵ If not, then they are not yours." ¹

(77) They said to him, "What is the place ¹ to which we are going?"

(78) The [Lord] said, ¹ "Stand in ¹ the place you can reach!" ²⁰

(79) Mary said, "Everything ¹ established thus is seen." ¹

(80) The Lord [said], "I have told you [that] ¹ it is the one who can see who [reveals]." ¹

(81) His [disciples], numbering twelve, asked him, ²⁵ "Teacher, [... 143 ... serenity ...] teach ¹ us ... [...]." ¹

(82) The Lord said, "... [...] ... everything ¹ which I have ... [...] you will ... ⁵ ... [...] ... you [...] ... everything." ¹

(83) [Mary] said, "There is but one saying ¹ I will [speak] to the Lord ¹ concerning the mystery of truth: ¹ In this have we taken our stand, and ¹⁰ to the cosmic are we transparent." ¹

(84) Judas said to Matthew, "We ¹ [want] to understand the sort ¹ of garments we are to be [clothed] with ¹ [when] we depart the decay of the ¹⁵ [flesh]."

(85) The Lord said, "The governors ¹ [and] the administrators possess ¹ garments granted [only for a time,] ¹ which do not last. [But] you, ¹ as children of truth, ²⁰ not with these transitory garments are you to clothe yourselves. ¹ Rather, I say ¹ [to] you that you will become [blessed] ¹ when you strip [yourselves]! ¹ For it is no great thing 144 ... [...] outside.” ¹

(86) [... said ...] ... speak, I ¹ ... [...]”

(87) The Lord said, ¹ “ ... [...] ... your Father ⁵ ... [...]”

(88) [Mary said, ¹ “Of what] sort is that [mustard seed]? ¹ Is it something from heaven or ¹ is it something from earth?”

(89) The Lord said, ¹ “When the Father established the ¹⁰ cosmos for himself, he left much over from ¹ the Mother of the All. Therefore, he speaks and ¹ he acts.”

(90) Judas said, “You have ¹ told us this out of the mind of ¹ truth. When we pray, ¹⁵ how should we pray?”

(91) The Lord said, ¹ “Pray in the place where there is no woman.” ¹

(92) Matthew said, ¹ ““Pray in the place where there is [no woman],” he tells us, ¹ meaning, ‘Destroy the ²⁰ works of womanhood,’ not because there is any other [manner of birth], ¹ but because they will cease [giving birth].” ¹

(93) Mary said, “They will never be obliterated.” ¹

(94) The Lord said, “[Who] ¹ knows that they will [not] dissolve 145 and ... [...] ... ¹ [...] ... [...] ...?” ¹

(95) Judas said [to Matthew], ¹ “[The works] of [womanhood] will dissolve ⁵ [...] the governors ¹ will ... [...] Thus will we [become] ¹ prepared [for] them.” ¹

(96) [The] Lord [said], “Right. For do they see ¹ [you? Do they see] those who receive ¹⁰ [you]? Now behold! A [true] Word ¹ is coming forth from the Father ¹ [to the abyss], in silence with a [flash of lightning], ¹ giving birth. Do they see it or [overpower] ¹ it? But you are even more ¹⁵ aware of [the path], this one, [before] ¹ either [angel or authority has] ¹ Rather it belongs to the Father] and the [Son ¹ because they] are both a single ¹ [... And] you [will] go via ²⁰ [the path] which you have [known]. Even [if] ¹ the governors become huge ¹ [they will] not be able to reach it. [But listen!] I ¹ [tell] you [that] it is difficult ¹ even [for] me [to reach] it!” 146

(97) [Mary] said [to the Lord], “When ¹ the works [...] ... ¹ ... [... which] dissolves ¹ a [work].”

(98) [The Lord said, “Right. For] you ⁵ know [...] ... if I ¹ dissolve [...] ... will go to ¹ his [place].”

(99) Judas said, “How ¹ is the [spirit] apparent?” ¹

(100) The Lord said, “How [is] ¹⁰ the sword [apparent]?”

(101) [Judas] said, ¹ “How is the [light] apparent?” ¹

(102) The Lord said, “... [...] ¹ in it forever.”

(103) [Judas] said, ¹ “Who forgives the [works] ¹⁵ of whom? [The works] which ... [...] ¹ the cosmos [...] ... [...] ¹ who] forgives the [works].” ¹

(104) The Lord [said], “[Who ...] ...? ¹ It behooves whomever has understood [the works] ²⁰ to do the [will] of the Father. ¹ And as for [you, strive] to rid [yourselves] of [anger] ¹ and [jealousy], ¹ and [to strip] yourselves ¹ of your [...] ...s, and not to ... [...] 147 ... ⁸ ...] ... ¹ [...] ... ¹⁰ [...] ... ¹ [...] ... ¹ [...] ... ¹ [...] ... reproach ¹ [...]. For I say ... ¹⁵ [...] ... you take ... ¹ [...] ... you ... ¹ [...] who has sought, having ¹ [...] ... this, will ... ¹ [...] he will live [forever. ²⁰ And] I say to ¹ [you ...] ... so that you will not lead ¹ [your] spirits and your souls into error.” ¹

[The Dialogue] of the Savior

THE APOCALYPSE OF PAUL (V,2)

Introduced and translated by

GEORGE W. MACRAE and WILLIAM R. MURDOCK

Edited by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

The first of the four apocalypses in Codex V is a highly syncretistic, gnostic version of the ascension of Paul through the heavens. It bears no literary relationship to the Greek work of the same name, though the latter also deals with Paul's vision of judgment in the heavens. Whether it had affinities with the now lost "Ascension of Paul" used by the "Gnostics" according to Epiphanius, it is impossible to tell, but it should be noted that in Epiphanius' account the "Ascension" refers only to three heavens, whereas it is the uniqueness of the present work that it describes Paul's experience of the fourth to the tenth heavens; the third is mentioned only as a starting point.

Apoc. Paul begins with a narrative of Paul's encounter with a small child on the "mountain of Jericho" en route to Jerusalem. The child, who is Paul's guiding spirit or interpreting angel, sometimes called the Holy spirit in the text, takes him to the heavens to meet his fellow apostles, who accompany him during his further ascent. In the fourth heaven Paul witnesses the judgment of souls; in the fifth, angels driving souls to judgment. The sixth heaven is illuminated by a light from above, and in the seventh Paul meets an old man on a shining throne who threatens to block his further ascent. He continues, however, into the Ogdoad and the ninth and tenth heavens, and when he reaches the last he has been transformed so that he greets, no longer his fellow-apostles, but his fellow-spirits. The language of the narrative fluctuates from third person to first at 19,8, back to third person at 19,18, and finally to first person again from 20,5 on. The inconsistency may perhaps be attributed to literary carelessness rather than to multiple sources, for at these points in the narrative no clear "seams" can be detected on other grounds.

For purposes of analysis, the contents of Apoc. Paul may be divided into three distinct episodes: an epiphany scene, a scene of judgment and punishment, and a heavenly journey. In the first, the little child who meets Paul on the mountain and gives him a revelation most naturally suggests an epiphany of the risen Christ, who is sometimes described as a small child (e.g., in Ap. John (BG,2) 20,19-21,4, Act. Jn. 88). This experience, as the allusion to Gal 1:15 (Jer 1:5) in 18,15-16 suggests, functions as the calling of Paul to be an apostle and thus interprets Gal 1:11-17. The heavenly visitor not only reveals to Paul but conducts him above to (the heavenly) Jerusalem, to the apostles, thus interpreting Gal 2:1-2 also. The ascent itself builds on 2 Co 12:2-4.

The scene of the judgment and punishment of souls in the fourth and fifth heavens has its closest parallel in Jewish apocalyptic literature, notably in the Testament of Abraham 10 (long recension) and even more closely in the Coptic version of the short recension, which has several details peculiar to it. The author of Apoc. Paul is indebted to other traditions, however, for his picture of the three angels who rival one another in whipping the souls forward to judgment (22,5-10). This is clearly an evocation of the Erinyes of Greek mythology. Likewise the toll-collector who is also judge belongs to Babylonian and Hellenistic astrology. The scene is thus the result of popular syncretism.

The third main element of the work, the heavenly journey, is concentrated for the most part in the sixth and seventh heavens. The ascent theme may have been borrowed from Jewish apocalyptic tradition, but its gnostic coloring is obvious in the depiction of the "old man" on the throne in the seventh heaven (Dan 7:13; 1 Enoch 46-47) as a hostile figure who tries to block the gnostic soul's ascent to the Ogdoad and the higher heavens. And the interrogation of Paul also recalls similar dialogues or formulas in other gnostic works (e.g., 1 Apoc. Jas. (V,3), Gos. Mary (BG,1), Gos. Thom. (II,2, saying 50).

The date and provenance of the document cannot be determined with any certainty. That it comes from gnostic circles with a typical anti-Jewish bias seems assured by the negative view of the deity in the seventh heaven. The portrayal of Paul as exalted even above the other apostles is at home in second-century Gnosticism, especially Valentinianism, and, according to Irenaeus (Haer. II.30.7), there was a gnostic tradition of interpreting Paul's experience in 2 Co 12:2-4. Nothing in Apoc. Paul demands any later date than the second century for its composition.

THE APOCALYPSE OF PAUL

V 17, 19-24, 9

[The Apocalypse of] Paul ¹

[...] ¹⁸ the road. And [he spoke to him], ¹ saying, "[By which] ⁵ road [shall I go] up to [Jerusalem]?" ¹ The little child [replied, saying], ¹ "Say your name, so that [I may show] ¹ you the road." [The little child] ¹ knew [who Paul was]. ¹⁰ He wished to make conversation with ¹ him through his words [in order that] he ¹ might find an excuse for speaking ¹ with him.

The little child spoke, ¹ saying, "I know ¹⁵ who you are, Paul. ¹ You are he who was blessed from ¹ his mother's womb. For I have [come] ¹ to you that you may [go up to Jerusalem] ¹ to your fellow [apostles. And] ²⁰ for this reason [you were called. And] ¹ I am the [Spirit who accompanies] ¹ you. Let [your mind awaken, ¹ Paul], with [...]. ¹⁹ For [...] ¹ whole which [...] ¹ among the [principalities and] these authorities [and] ¹ archangels and powers ⁵ and the whole race of demons, ¹ [...] the one that reveals ¹ bodies to a soul-seed.” ¹

And after he brought that speech ¹ to an end, he spoke, saying ¹⁰ to me, “Let your mind awaken, ¹ Paul, and see that this mountain ¹ upon which you are standing is the mountain ¹ of Jericho, so that you may know the ¹ hidden things in those that are visible. ¹⁵ Now it is to the twelve apostles ¹ that you shall go, ¹ for they are elect spirits, and they will ¹ greet you.” He raised ¹ his eyes and saw them ²⁰ greeting him.

Then the ¹ Holy [Spirit] who was speaking ¹ with [him] caught him up ¹ on high to the third ¹ heaven, and he passed ²⁵ beyond to the fourth [heaven]. ¹ The [Holy] Spirit spoke to him, ¹ saying, “Look ¹ and see your [likeness] ¹ upon the earth.” And he [looked] ³⁰ down and saw those [who were upon] ¹ the earth. He stared [and saw] ¹ those who were upon the [... Then 20 he] gazed [down and] saw ¹ the [twelve] apostles ¹ [at] his right [and] at his left ¹ in the creation; and the Spirit was ⁵ going before them.

But I saw ¹ in the fourth heaven according to class – I ¹ saw the angels resembling ¹ gods, the angels bringing ¹ a soul out of the land of ¹⁰ the dead. They placed it at the gate ¹ of the fourth heaven. And ¹ the angels were whipping it. ¹ The soul spoke, saying, ¹ “What sin was it that I committed ¹⁵ in the world?” ¹ The toll-collector who dwells in the ¹ fourth heaven replied, saying, ¹ “It was not right to commit all those lawless deeds ¹ that are in the world ²⁰ of the dead.” ¹ The soul replied, saying, ¹ “Bring witnesses! Let them [show] you ¹ in what body I committed lawless deeds. ¹ [Do you wish] to bring a book ²⁵ [to read from]?”

And ¹ the three witnesses came. ¹ The first spoke, saying, ¹ “Was I [not ¹ in] the body the second hour ³⁰ [...] ? I rose up against you 21 until [you fell] into anger [and ¹ rage] and envy.” And ¹ the second spoke, saying, ¹ “Was I not ⁵ in the world? And I entered at ¹ the fifth hour, and I saw you ¹ and desired you. And behold, ¹ then, now I charge you with the ¹ murders you committed.” ¹⁰ The third spoke, saying, ¹ “Did I not come to you at ¹ the twelfth hour of the day when ¹ the sun was about to set? I gave you darkness ¹ until you should accomplish your sins.” ¹⁵ When the soul heard these things, ¹ it gazed downward in ¹ sorrow. And then it gazed ¹ upward. It was cast down. ¹ The soul that had been cast down ²⁰ [went] to [a] body which had been prepared ¹ [for it. And] behold ¹ [its] witnesses were finished.

[Then I ¹ gazed] upward and [saw ¹ the] Spirit saying [to me], ²⁵ “Paul, come! [Proceed ¹ toward] me!” Then as I [went], ¹ the gate opened, [and] ¹ I went up to the fifth [heaven]. ¹ And I saw my fellow apostles ³⁰ [going with me] 22 while the Spirit accompanied us. ¹ And I saw a great angel ¹ in the fifth heaven holding ¹ an iron rod in his ⁵ hand. There were three other angels with ¹ him, and I stared into ¹ their faces. But they were rivalling ¹ each other, with whips ¹ in their hands, goading the ¹⁰ souls on to the judgment. ¹ But I went with the Spirit ¹ and the gate opened for me. ¹

Then we went up to the sixth heaven. ¹ And I saw my fellow apostles ¹⁵ going with me, and the Holy Spirit ¹ was leading me before them. ¹ And I gazed up on high and saw a ¹ great light shining down ¹ on the sixth heaven. I spoke, ²⁰ saying to the toll-collector ¹ who was in the sixth heaven, "[Open] ¹ to me and the [Holy] Spirit [who ¹ is] before [me]." He opened [to me].

[Then ¹ we went] up to the seventh [heaven ²⁵ and I saw] an old man [. . .] ¹ light [and ¹ whose garment] was white. [His throne], ¹ which is in the seventh heaven, ¹ [was] brighter than the sun ³⁰ by [seven] times. 23 The old man spoke, saying to [me], ¹ "Where are you going, Paul, ¹ O blessed one and the one who was ¹ set apart from his mother's womb?" ⁵ But I looked at the Spirit, ¹ and he was nodding his head, saying ¹ to me, "Speak with him!" ¹ And I replied, saying ¹ to the old man, "I am going to the place ¹⁰ from which I came." And ¹ the old man responded to me, "Where are you from?" ¹ But I replied, saying, ¹ "I am going down to the world of ¹ the dead in order to lead captive ¹⁵ the captivity ¹ that was led captive ¹ in the captivity of Babylon." ¹ The old man replied to me, ¹ saying, "How will you be ²⁰ able to get away from me? Look ¹ and see the principalities and ¹ authorities." [The] ¹ Spirit spoke, saying, "Give him [the] ¹ sign that you have, and [he will] ²⁵ open for you." And then I gave [him] ¹ the sign. He turned his face ¹ downwards to his creation ¹ and to those who are his own authorities. ¹

And then the ³⁰ <seventh> heaven opened and we went up to [the] 24 Ogdoad. And I saw the ¹ twelve apostles. They ¹ greeted me, and we went ¹ up to the ninth heaven. I ⁵ greeted all those who were in the ¹ ninth heaven, and we went up ¹ to the tenth heaven. And I ¹ greeted my fellow spirits. ¹

THE (FIRST) APOCALYPSE OF JAMES (V,3)

Introduced and translated by

WILLIAM R. SCHOEDEL

Edited by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

The manuscript names this writing The Apocalypse of James. We refer to it here as The (First) Apocalypse of James to distinguish it from the next writing (V,4) which the manuscript also entitles The Apocalypse of James. Our apocalypse is an excellent example of a "revelation dialogue." The partners in the dialogue are the Lord and James the Lord's brother (though the latter is said to be the Lord's brother only in a purely spiritual sense). In the first part of the writing (24,10-30,11) James addresses questions to the Lord that reflect his anxiety at the suffering soon to overtake both himself and the Lord, and the Lord provides James consolation in terms of standard gnostic teaching about the place of man in the universe. An oblique and very brief reference to the crucifixion in 30,12-13 serves as the turning point in the account. After the reappearance of the Lord, the story is dominated by a series of formulae transmitted to James to enable him to meet the challenges of the hostile powers who will attempt to block his ascent to "the Pre-Existent One" after his martyrdom (32,23-36,1). These formulae represent a dramatized version of texts that appear elsewhere in the context of rites for the dying in forms of Valentinian Gnosticism (Irenaeus, Haer. 1.21.5; Epiphanius, Pan. 36.3.1-6). It is worth noting, however, that at least one characteristic line that appears here ("I am an alien, a son of the Father's race") has a close parallel in the Corpus Hermeticum (13.3). Other interesting matters taken up in the second part of our apocalypse include the directions concerning the handing on of the teaching in secret (36,13-38,11), the comments about the value of women as disciples (38,15-41,18), the mention of James' rebuke of the twelve disciples (42,20-24), and the relatively lengthy account (now much mutilated) of James' martyrdom at the conclusion of the writing.

The designation of James as "James the Just" (32,2-3; cf. 43,19) indicates contact with Jewish Christian tradition (cf. Hegesippus, in Eusebius, H.E. 2.23.4,7; Gospel according to the Hebrews, in Jerome, De viris inl. 2; Gos. Thom., saying 12). The inclusion of Addai (36,15-24) in the list of figures who will hand on the teaching in secret points to contact with Syria and thereby possibly also to a Semitic form of Christianity (cf. Eusebius, H.E. 1.13). Some scholars have argued that numerous other themes in our apocalypse also betray the influence of Jewish Christian theology. But apart from the importance attributed to James the Just there is little in the writing that can with any confidence be attributed to the influence of Jewish Christianity in particular. There is a good possibility, then, that the figure of James was chosen by a circle of Gnostics as a convenient peg on which to hang their teaching.

One reason for the appeal of the figure of James was the fact that he stood outside the circle of twelve disciples and because of his relationship to Jesus (here understood in purely spiritual terms) could be appealed to as the originator of a purer form of Christian teaching than that represented by the twelve. In this connection, the command to hand on the teaching in secret presumably served to explain why it was that Gnosticism appeared to the uninitiated as a relatively late flowering of the religion of Jesus. Our apocalypse, in short, was attempting to present an alternative to the apostolic authority claimed for the teaching of a steadily advancing catholic form of Christianity. It appears, however, that whereas Jerusalem and Judaism are associated with the darker powers of the universe, the twelve (and thus catholic Christianity) move within the more beneficent spheres of the activity of Achamoth, the lesser Sophia.

Another reason for the appeal that the figure of James had for some Gnostics was that it enabled them to make more sense of the history of the first century. The fall of Jerusalem was an event that cried out for explanation. And though it soon seemed natural to attribute the disaster to the treatment of Jesus by the Jews (cf. Origen, Contra Celsum 2.13; Eusebius, H.E. 3.7), it was even more natural to connect the fall of Jerusalem with the treatment meted out to James by Jewish authorities just before the great war with Rome (Hegesippus, in Eusebius, H.E. 2.23). A careful Christian scholar was bound to find this disquieting (cf. Origen, Contra Celsum 1.47). Our apocalypse, however, has no such uneasiness and finds it possible to exploit the role of James for two reasons. First, the difference between the redeemer (the Lord) and the redeemed (James, the prototypical disciple) is significantly less pronounced in Gnosticism (cf. 27,8-10 where James is flatly identified with "Him-who-is"). Consequently, the two figures complement rather than rival one another in ways that are difficult for catholic Christianity to contemplate. Second, the general gnostic view that martyrdom could be (and in the minds of some Gnostics inevitably was) embraced for the wrong reasons made the emergence of resolve in this regard only after a long period of fear and anxiety a perfectly natural expectation. Thus the crucifixion of Jesus and the martyrdom of James are seen as complementary events, both of which are required for the full exemplification of the victory over the powers of darkness. In this connection, the defeat of the archons by James during his ascent to God is presumably connected with the fall of Jerusalem, the dwelling place (according to 25,15-19) of many archons.

A guide to the place of James the Just in early Christianity is provided by a fragment of Clement of Alexandria: "To James the Just and John and Peter the Lord transmitted the gnosis after the resurrection. They transmitted it to the other apostles. And the other apostles transmitted it to the seventy . . ." (Eusebius, H.E. 2.1.4). The passage strongly suggests that there were three main (no doubt overlapping) stages in the development of the image of James: 1) as James the Just, a symbol of Jewish-Christian values; 2) as the recipient of postresurrection revelation in a Gnosticizing milieu; and 3) as a colleague of the apostles of the Lord in a catholicizing milieu. Our apocalypse presumably reflects an interest in James that corresponds to the second main stage of the development of his image.

It should be noted finally that there is some evidence of the direct influence of esoteric Jewish speculation in our apocalypse. For it is only through an unusual manipulation of numbers and an awareness of the importance of the number 72 in Jewish lore that we can account for the fact that "twelve hebdomads" (12×7) amount to "seventy-two heavens (26,2-18).

THE (FIRST) APOCALYPSE OF JAMES

V 24, 10-44, 10

The Apocalypse of James ¹

It is the Lord who spoke with me: ¹ "See now the completion of my redemption. ¹ I have given you a sign of these things, James, ¹ my brother. For not without reason have I called ¹⁵ you my brother, although you are not my brother ¹ materially. And I am not ignorant ¹ concerning you; so that ¹ when I give you a sign — know and ¹ hear.

"Nothing existed except ²⁰ Him-who-is. He is unnameable ¹ and ineffable. ¹ I myself also am unnameable, ¹ from Him-who-is, just as I have been ¹ [given a] number of names — two ²⁵ from Him-who-is. And I, ¹ [I] am before you. Since you have ¹ [asked] concerning femaleness, femaleness existed, ¹ but femaleness was ¹ not [first]. And ³⁰ [it] prepared for itself powers and gods. ¹ But [it did] not exist [when] I came forth, 25 since I am an image of Him-who-is. ¹ But I have brought forth the image of [him] ¹ so that the sons of Him-who-is ¹ might know what things are theirs ⁵ and what things are alien (to them). Behold, ¹ I shall reveal to you everything ¹ of this mystery. For they will seize ¹ me the day after tomorrow. But my ¹ redemption will be near." ¹⁰

James said, "Rabbi, you have said, ¹ 'They will seize me.' But I, ¹ what can I do?" He said to me, ¹ "Fear not, James. ¹ You too will they seize. ¹⁵ But leave Jerusalem. ¹ For it is she who always gives the cup of bitterness ¹ to the sons ¹ of light. She is a dwelling place ¹ of a great number of archons. ²⁰ But your redemption will be preserved ¹ from them. So that ¹ you may understand who they are [and] ¹ what kinds they are, you will [...]. ¹ And listen. They [are] not [...] ²⁵ but [archons ...]. ¹ These twelve ¹ [...] down [...] ²⁹ archons [...] 26 upon his own hebdomad." ¹

James said, "Rabbi, are there then ¹ twelve hebdomads ¹ and not seven as ⁵ there are in the scriptures?" ¹ The Lord said, "James, he who spoke ¹ concerning this scripture had a limited understanding. ¹ I, however, shall reveal to you ¹ what has come forth from him ¹⁰ who has no number. I shall give a sign concerning their ¹ number. As for what has come forth from him ¹ who has no measure, I shall give a sign concerning their ¹ measure."

James said, ¹ "Rabbi, behold then, I have received ¹⁵ their number. There are seventy-two measures!" ¹ The Lord said, "These ¹ are the seventy-two heavens, which ¹ are their subordinates. These are the powers of ¹ all their might; and they were ²⁰ established by them; ¹ and these are they who were distributed ¹ everywhere, existing under the [authority] ¹ of the twelve archons. ¹ The inferior power among them ²⁵ [brought forth] for itself angels ¹ [and] unnumbered hosts. ¹ Him-who-is, however, has been given ¹ [...] on account of ¹ [...] Him-who-is ³⁰ [...] they are unnumbered. 27 If you want ¹ to give them a number now, you [will] ¹ not be able to (do so) until you cast away ¹ from yourself blind thought, ⁵ this bond of flesh which encircles you. ¹ And then you will reach ¹ Him-who-is. ¹ And you will no longer be ¹ James; rather you are ¹⁰ the One-who-is. And all those who are ¹ unnumbered will ¹ all have been named." ¹

⟨James said, "Then,⟩ ¹ Rabbi, in what way shall I reach ¹⁵ Him-who-is, since ¹ all these powers and these ¹ hosts are armed against me?" ¹ He said to me, "These powers ¹ are not armed against you specifically, ²⁰ but are armed against another. ¹ It is against me that they are armed. ¹ And they are armed with other [powers]. ¹ But they are armed against me [in] ¹ judgment. They did not give [...] ²⁵ to me in it [...] through them [...]. ¹ In this place [...] ¹ suffering, I shall [...]. ¹ He will [...] 28 and I shall not rebuke them. But there shall ¹ be within me a silence and ¹ a hidden mystery. But I ¹ am fainthearted before their anger." ⁵

James said, "Rabbi, ¹ if they arm themselves against you, then ¹ is there no blame?

You have come with knowledge, that ¹ you might rebuke their forgetfulness.
You have come with ¹ recollection, that you might rebuke their ¹⁰ ignorance.

But I was concerned ¹ because of you.

For you descended into a ¹ great ignorance, but ¹ you have not been defiled by anything in it. ¹
For you descended into a great mindlessness, ¹⁵ and your recollection remained. ¹

You walked in mud, ¹ and your garments were not soiled, ¹ and you have not been buried ¹ in their filth, and ²⁰ you have not been caught.

And I was ¹ not like them, but I clothed myself with everything ¹ of theirs.

There is in me ¹ forgetfulness, yet I ¹ remember things that are not theirs. ²⁵
There is in me [...], ¹ and I am in their ¹ [...].

[...] knowledge ¹ [...] not in their sufferings ¹ [...]. But I have become afraid ³⁰ [before them], since they rule. For what 29 will they do? What will I be able ¹ to say? Or what word will I be able ¹ to say that I may escape them?" ¹

The Lord said, "James, I praise ⁵ your understanding and your fear. ¹ If you continue to be distressed, ¹ do not be concerned for anything else ¹ except your redemption. ¹ For behold, I shall complete this destiny ¹⁰ upon this earth as ¹ I have said from the heavens. ¹ And I shall reveal to you ¹ your redemption."

James said, ¹ "Rabbi, how, after these things, ¹⁵ will you appear to us again? ¹ After they seize you, ¹ and you complete this destiny, ¹ you will go up to Him- ¹ who-is." The Lord said, "James, ²⁰ after these things I shall reveal to you ¹ everything, not for your sake ¹ alone but for the sake of [the] ¹ unbelief of men, ¹ so that [faith] may ²⁵ exist in them. ¹ For [a] multitude will [attain] ¹ to faith [and] ¹ they will increase [in ...]. 30 And after this I shall appear ¹ for a reproof to the archons. And I shall ¹ reveal to them that ¹ he cannot be seized. If they ⁵ seize him, then ¹ he will overpower each of them. ¹ But now I shall go. Remember ¹ the things I have spoken and let them ¹ go up before you." ¹⁰ James said, "Lord, I shall hasten ¹ as you have said." ¹ The Lord said farewell to him and fulfilled ¹ what was fitting.

When James ¹ heard of his sufferings ¹⁵ and was much distressed, ¹ they awaited the sign ¹ of his coming. And he came after ¹ several days. And James ¹ was walking upon the mountain, ²⁰ which is called "Gaugelan," ¹ with his disciples, ¹ who listened to him ¹ [because they had been distressed], and he was ¹ [...] a comforter, ²⁵ [saying], "This is ¹ [...] the (or: a) second [...]" ¹ Then the] crowd dispersed, ¹ but James remained ¹ [...] prayer ³⁰ [...], as 31 was his custom. ¹

And the Lord appeared to him. ¹ Then he stopped (his) prayer ¹ and embraced him. He kissed ⁵ him, saying, "Rabbi, ¹ I have found you! I have heard of your ¹ sufferings, which you endured. And ¹ I have been much distressed. My ¹ compassion you know. ¹⁰ Therefore, on reflection, I was wishing ¹ that I would not see this people. They must ¹ be judged for these things that they have done. ¹ For these things that they have done are contrary to ¹ what is fitting.”

The Lord said, ¹⁵ “James, do not be concerned ¹ for me or for ¹ this people. I am he who ¹ was within me. Never ¹ have I suffered in any way, ²⁰ nor have I been distressed. ¹ And this people has done ¹ me no harm. ¹ But this (people) existed [as] ¹ a type of the archons, ²⁵ and it deserved to be [destroyed] ¹ through them. But [...] ¹ the archons, [...] ¹ who (or: which) has [...] ¹ but since it (fem.) [...] ³⁰ angry with [...] ¹ The] just [...] 32 is his servant. Therefore ¹ your name is ‘James ¹ the Just.’ You see ¹ how you will become sober when you see ⁵ me. And you stopped this prayer. ¹ Now since you are a just ¹ man of God, you have ¹ embraced me and kissed me. ¹ Truly I say to you that ¹⁰ you have stirred up great anger and ¹ wrath against yourself. But ¹ (this has happened) so that these others might come to be.” ¹

But James was timid ¹ (and) wept. And he was very distressed. ¹⁵ And they both sat down ¹ upon a rock. The Lord said ¹ to him, “James, thus ¹ you will undergo these sufferings. But do not ¹ be sad. For the flesh is ²⁰ weak. It will receive what has been ¹ ordained for it. But as for you, do not ¹ be [timid] or afraid.” ¹ The Lord [ceased].

[Now] when James ¹ heard these things, he ²⁵ wiped away [the] tears in ¹ [his eyes] and very bitter (?) ¹ [...] which is ¹ [...]. The Lord [said] to [him, ¹ “James], behold, I shall 33 reveal to you your redemption. ¹ When [you] are seized, ¹ and you undergo these sufferings, ¹ a multitude will arm themselves against you ⁵ that <they> may seize you. And in particular ¹ three of them ¹ will seize you – they who ¹ sit (there) as toll collectors. Not ¹ only do they demand toll, but ¹⁰ they also take away souls ¹ by theft. When ¹ you come into their power, ¹ one of them who is their guard will say ¹ to you, ¹⁵ ‘Who are you or where are you from?’ ¹ You are to say to him, ‘I am ¹ a son, and I am from ¹ the Father.’ He will say to you, ¹ ‘What sort of son are you, and ²⁰ to what father do you belong?’ You are to ¹ say to him, ‘I am from ¹ the Pre-existent Father, ¹ and a son in the ¹ Pre-existent One.’ [When he says] ²⁵ to you, [...], ¹ you are to [say to him, ...] ¹ in the [...] ¹ that I might [...].

“[...] 34 of] alien things?” You are to say to him, ¹ ‘They are not entirely alien, ¹ but they are from Achamoth, ¹ who is the female. And these ⁵ she produced as she brought down the race ¹ from the ¹ Pre-existent One. So then ¹ they are not alien, but they are ours. ¹ They are indeed ours because she who ¹⁰ is mistress of them is from ¹ the Pre-existent One. ¹ At the same time they are alien because ¹ the Pre-existent One did not ¹ have intercourse with her, when she ¹⁵ produced them.' When he also says to you, ¹ "Where will you go?," you are to ¹ say to him, 'To the place from which I have come, ¹ there shall I return.' ¹ And if you say these things, you will ²⁰ escape their attacks.

"But when ¹ you come to ¹ [these] three detainers ¹ [who] take away souls by ¹ theft in that place ²⁵ [...] these. You ¹ [...] a vessel ¹ [...] much more than [...] 35 of the one (fem.) whom ¹ you [...] for [...] ¹ her root. You ¹ too will ⁵ be sober [...]. But I shall call ¹ [upon] the imperishable knowledge, ¹ which is Sophia who ¹ is in the Father (and) who is the mother ¹ of Achamoth. ¹⁰ Achamoth had no father nor ¹ male consort, but ¹ she is female from a ¹ female. She produced you (pl.) ¹ without a male, since she was alone ¹⁵ (and) in ignorance as to what ¹ [lives through] her mother because she thought ¹ that she alone existed. ¹ But [I] shall cry out ¹ to her mother. And then ²⁰ they will fall into confusion (and) will ¹ blame their ¹ root and the race [of] ¹ their mother. [But] you ¹ will go up to [what is] ²⁵ yours [...] ¹ you will [...] 36 the [Pre-existent One].

"[They are ¹ a] type [of the] twelve ¹ disciples and [the] twelve ¹ pairs, [...] ⁵ Achamoth, which is ¹ translated 'Sophia.' ¹ And who I myself am, ¹ and (who) the imperishable Sophia (is) ¹ through whom you will be redeemed, ¹⁰ and (who are) all the sons of Him-who- ¹ is – these things they have known ¹ and have hidden within ¹ them. You are to hide <these things> within you, ¹ and you are to keep silence. ¹⁵ But you are to reveal them to ¹ Addai. When you [depart], ¹ immediately war will be [made] ¹ with this land. [Weep], ¹ then, for him who dwells in Jerusalem. ²⁰ But let Addai take these things ¹ to heart. In the tenth ¹ year let Addai sit ¹ and write them down. ¹ And when he writes them down ²⁵ [...] and they are to give them ¹ [...] he has the [...] 37⁶ he is [called] ¹ Levi. Then he is to bring ¹ [...] word ¹ [...] from ¹⁰ [what I] said earlier ¹ [...] a woman ¹ [...] Jerusalem in her ¹ [...] and] he begets ¹ [two] sons through her. ¹⁵ [They are to] inherit these things ¹ [and] the understanding of him who ¹ [...] exalts. And they are to receive ¹ [...] through him from his ¹ intellect. Now, the younger of them ²⁰ is greater. And ¹ may these things remain ¹ hidden in him until [he] ¹ comes to the age of ¹ seventeen years [...] 38³ beginning [...] ⁵ through [them]. They will pursue ¹ him exceedingly, since [they are] from ¹ his [...] companions. He will be ¹ proclaimed [through] them, ¹ and [they will] proclaim this word. ¹⁰ [Then he will become] ¹ a seed of [...]."

James said, "[I am] ¹ satisfied [...] ¹ and they are [...] ¹⁵ my soul. Yet [another thing] ¹ I ask of you: who are the [seven] ¹ women who have [been] your disciples? ¹ And behold, ¹ all women bless you. ²⁰ I also am amazed ¹ how [powerless] vessels ¹ have become strong by a perception ¹ which is in them." ¹ [The] Lord [said], "You [...] well [...] ³⁹³ a spirit [of ...], ¹ a [spirit] of thought, [a spirit] ⁵ of counsel of [a ...], ¹ a spirit [...], a spirit ¹ of knowledge [...] of their ¹ fear. [...] when we had passed ¹ through [the breath] of ¹⁰ [this] archon who ¹ is [named] Adoniaos ¹ [...] him and ¹ [...] he was ignorant ¹ [...] when I came forth from him, ¹⁵ [he] remembered that I ¹ am [a] son of his. He was gracious ¹ [to me] at that time as ¹ his son. And then, ¹ before <I> ²⁰ appeared here, <he> ¹ cast them among [this] ¹ people. And from the [place] ¹ of heaven the prophets [...]." ⁴⁰⁴

James [said], "Rabbi, [...] ⁶ I [...] all together ¹ [...] in them ¹ especially [...]." ¹ The Lord said, "[James], I ¹⁰ praise [you ...] ¹ walk upon the earth [...] ¹ the words while he [...] ¹ on the [...]. ¹ For cast away from [you the] ¹⁵ cup, which is bitterness. ¹ For some from [...] ¹ set themselves against you. For [you have begun] ¹ to understand [their roots] ¹ from beginning to end. Cast ²⁰ away from yourself all lawlessness. ¹ And beware lest ¹ they envy you. When you ¹ speak these words of this ¹ [perception], encourage these ²⁵ [four]: Salome and Mariam ¹ [and Martha and Arsinoe ...] ⁴¹⁶ since he takes ¹ some [...] to me ¹ he is [...] burnt offerings ¹ and [...]. But I ¹⁰ [...] not in this way; but ¹ [...] first-fruits of the ¹ [...] upward ¹ [...] so that ¹ the power [of God might] appear. ¹⁵ The perishable has [gone ¹ up] to the imperishable and ¹ the female element has ¹ attained to this male element." ¹

James said, ²⁰ "Rabbi, into these three (things), then, ¹ has their [...] been cast. ¹ For they have been reviled, [and they have been] ¹ persecuted [...]. ⁴²⁵ Behold ¹ [...] everything ¹ [...] from ¹ anyone [...]. ¹ For you have received [...] of ¹⁰ knowledge. [And ...] ¹ that what is the [...] ¹ go [...] ¹ you will [find ...]. ¹ But I shall go [forth] ¹⁵ and shall reveal ¹ that they believed in you [that they may] ¹ be content with their [blessing] ¹ and salvation, and ¹ this revelation may come to pass." ²⁰ And he went at that time ¹ [immediately] and rebuked the ¹ twelve, and cast ¹ [out] of them contentment ¹ [concerning the] way of knowledge [...].

[...]. ⁴³⁷ And the majority ¹ of [them ...] when they ¹ [saw, the] messenger took in ¹⁰ [...]. The others [...] ¹² said, "[...] ¹⁴ him from this earth. ¹ For [he is] not [worthy] of life." ¹ These, then, [were] afraid. They arose, ¹ saying, “We ¹ have no part in this blood, ¹ for a just man ²⁰ will perish through ¹ injustice.” James departed ¹ so that [...] 44⁶ look ¹ [...] for ¹ we (?) [...] him. ¹

The Apocalypse ¹⁰
of James

THE (SECOND) APOCALYPSE OF JAMES (V,4)

Introduced and translated by

CHARLES W. HEDRICK

Edited by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

The fourth tractate in Codex V has been given the modern title The (Second) Apocalypse of James in order to distinguish it from the preceding tractate, since both documents have the same ancient title: The Apocalypse of James. The twenty pages comprising the tractate are preserved in a fragmentary state. The literary form is difficult to describe. The title of the text calls it an apocalypse, and the first line describes it as a discourse. In the sense that James relates a revelation received from the resurrected Jesus, it may be called a revelation discourse. However, its actual structure is cast in the form of a two-part report to Theuda, the father of James, by Mareim, a priest and relative of Theuda, who apparently was present at the stoning of James.

The tractate contains at least four sections artistically arranged. Because of their balance and stylized form they have been described as "harmonic prose" possessing a "hymnic" quality. Three of these units are aretalologies. One (49,5-15) is a series of self-assertions by the resurrected Jesus in the "I am" style. Another (58,2-20) is a series of predications about the resurrected Jesus made by James in the third person (i.e., "he is"). In a further aretalogy (55,15-56,13) the resurrected Jesus describes James' special role in the second person (i.e., "you are"). The entire description in the third aretalogy suggests that James is intended to perform the function of gnostic redeemer.

The fourth unit (62,16-63,29) is a prayer attributed to James. Its present setting requires that one read it as the prayer of a martyr shortly before death. However, it is by no means certain that the present setting of the prayer was its original setting. Apart from its context, it has the character of a prayer that one might pray if one were facing some future period of persecution or trial. The request in 62,21-22 suggests that there was a prospect of continued existence in the world. The material in 63,23-24 speaks of something other than a painful death, already mentioned in 63,5-6, and in fact suggests trials and tribulations such as one might anticipate in one's daily experience.

The tractate as a whole is clearly gnostic in character, yet it shows remarkable restraint in treating usual gnostic themes. Nor can it be identified with any of the known gnostic systems of the second century. On the other hand, the author has made extensive use of Jewish-Christian traditions. James, who held a position of special prominence in Jewish-Christian circles, is regarded as the possessor of a special revelation from Jesus and is assigned a role in the gnostic tradition that rivals, and perhaps exceeds, that of Peter in the canonical tradition. For example,

James is the "escort" who guides the Gnostic through the door of the heavenly kingdom and even rewards him (55,6-14; cf. 55,15-56,13). The description is similar to Peter's charge as the keeper of the keys of heaven (Mt 16:19).

As to the date and place of composition, little can be said with certainty. Because of the basic Jewish-Christian traditions out of which the tractate is composed, it is probable that its origin is to be associated with Jewish-Christian circles. The absence of allusions to the later developed gnostic systems, and the almost total absence of allusions to the New Testament tradition suggest an early date for the origin of the tractate.

The presence and order of the two James apocalypses in Codex V are undoubtedly due to deliberate scribal organization. The two apocalypses stress different aspects of the James tradition and actually complement one another. The setting of I Apoc. Jas. emphasizes the period prior to the suffering of James, while 2 Apoc. Jas. describes his suffering and death in line with the predictions in I Apoc. Jas.

THE (SECOND) APOCALYPSE OF JAMES

V 44, 11-63, 32

The Apocalypse¹
of [James]¹

This is [the] discourse that James¹ [the] Just spoke¹⁵ in Jerusalem, [which]¹ Mareim, one [of] the priests,¹ wrote. He had told it to¹ Theuda, the father of the Just One,¹ since he was a relative²⁰ of his. He said,¹ "[Hasten]! Come with¹ [Mary], your wife and¹ your relatives [...]⁴⁵ therefore [...]⁵ of this [...]¹ to [him, he will] understand.¹ For behold, a multitude¹⁰ are disturbed over¹ his [...], and they are greatly¹ angry [at him. ...]¹ and they pray [...].¹⁵ For¹ [he would] often say these words¹ and others¹ also.

"He used to speak these words¹ while the multitude of people²⁰ were seated. But (on this occasion) he entered¹ and did <not> sit down¹ in the place, as was his custom.¹ Rather he sat above¹ the fifth flight of steps, [which]²⁵ is (highly) esteemed, while all our people [...]²⁷ the words [...].

"[...].⁴⁶ I am he who¹ received revelation from¹ the Pleroma [of] Imperishability.¹ (I am) he who was first summoned¹⁰ by him who is great, and¹ who obeyed the [Lord] —¹ he who passed [through]¹ the [worlds ...]¹ he who [... he who]¹⁵ stripped [himself and]¹ went about naked,¹ he who was found in a¹ perishable (state), though he was about to be brought¹ up into imperishability. —²⁰ This Lord who is present ¹ [came] as a son who sees, ¹ and as a brother ¹ [was he sought]. He will come to ¹ [...] produced him because ²⁵ [...] and he unites ¹ [...] make him free [...] 47 in [...] ¹ he who came [to ...]. ⁷

“‘Now again am I rich in ¹ knowledge [and] I have ¹ a unique [understanding], ¹⁰ which was produced only from ¹ above and the [...] ¹ comes from a [...]. ¹ I am the [...] ¹⁵ whom I ¹ knew. That which was revealed ¹ to me was hidden from everyone ¹ and shall (only) be revealed ¹ through him. These ²⁰ two who see I <...> ¹ (and) they have already proclaimed ¹ through these [words]: ¹ “He shall be judged with the [unrighteous].” ¹ He who lived [without] ²⁵ blasphemy died by means of [blasphemy]. ¹ He who was cast out ¹ they [...].

““[... 48⁵ the] flesh ¹ [and] it is by knowledge ¹ that I shall come forth from the [flesh]. ¹ I am surely dying, ¹ but it is in life that I shall be found. ¹⁰ I entered ¹ in order that they might judge [...] I] ¹ shall come forth [in ...] ¹ judge [...] I do] ¹ not bring blame against the ¹⁵ servants of his [...] ¹ I hasten ¹ to make them free and ¹ want to take them above ¹ him who wants to rule ²⁰ over them. If ¹ they are helped, ¹ I am the brother in ¹ secret, who prayed ¹ to the Father [until ²⁵ he ...] in [...] 49² reign: [...] imperishability [...] first ¹ in [...]. ⁵

I [am the] first [son] ¹ who was begotten. —

He will destroy ¹ the dominion of [them] all. — ¹

I am the beloved. ¹

I am the righteous one. ¹⁰

I am the son of ¹ [the Father].

I speak even as ¹ [I] heard.

I command ¹ even as I [received] the order.

I ¹ show you (pl.) even as ¹⁵ I have [found].

Behold, I speak ¹ in order that I may come forth. Pay ¹ attention to me in order that you ¹ may see me!

““If I ¹ have come into existence, who then am I? ²⁰ For I did <not> come as I am, ¹ nor would I have appeared ¹ as I am. ¹ For I used to exist ¹ for a brief period ²⁵ of time [...].” 50⁵

“‘Once when I was sitting ¹ deliberating, ¹ [he] opened [the] door. ¹ That one ¹ whom you hated ¹⁰ and persecuted came in to me. ¹ He said to me, “Hail, my ¹ brother; my brother, hail.” ¹ As I raised my [face] ¹ to stare at him, ¹⁵ (my) mother said to me, “Do not ¹ be frightened, my son, because ¹ he said ‘My brother’ to you (sg.). ¹ For you (pl.) were nourished with ¹ this same milk. Because of ²⁰ this he calls ¹ me ‘My mother.' ¹ For he is not a stranger to us. ¹ He is your [step-brother ...]."

““[...] ⁵¹2 these words [...] ⁵ great [...] ¹ I shall [find] them, and [they shall come] ¹ forth. [However], I am the stranger, ¹ and they have no knowledge ¹ of me in [their] thoughts, ¹⁰ for they know me in ¹ [this place]. But it ¹ was fitting that others ¹ know through you. ¹

“““¹⟨You are⟩ the one to whom I say: ¹⁵ Hear and understand — ¹ for a multitude, when they ¹ hear, will be slow witted. ¹ But you, understand as I ¹ shall be able to tell you. Your father ²⁰ is not my father. But ¹ my father has become a father ¹ to [you].

“““This virgin ¹ about whom you hear — ¹ this is how [...] ²⁷ virgin [...] ⁵² namely, the virgin. ¹ [...], how ¹ [...] to me for ¹ [...] to know ⁵ [...] not as ¹ [...] whom I [...]. For this one (masc.) ¹ [...] to him, ¹ and this also is profitable ¹ for you. Your father, whom you ¹⁰ consider to be [rich], ¹ shall grant that you inherit ¹ all these (things) that you ¹ see.

“““I proclaim ¹ to you to tell you ¹⁵ these (words) that I shall speak. When ¹ you hear, therefore, ¹ open your ears ¹ and understand and walk (accordingly)! ¹ It is because of you that they pass by, ²⁰ activated by ¹ that one who is glorious. ¹ And if they want to make a ¹ disturbance and (seize) possession [...] ⁵³ he began [...] ¹ not, nor those who are [coming], ¹ who were sent forth [by] ¹ him to make this present [creation]. ⁵ After [these things, ¹ when he] is ashamed, he shall be disturbed ¹ that his labor, which is far [from] ¹ the aeons, is nothing. And ¹ his inheritance, ¹⁰ which he boasted ¹ to be great, shall appear ¹ small. And his ¹ gifts are not ¹ blessings. His promises are evil ¹⁵ schemes. For you are not an (instrument) ¹ of his compassion, ¹ but it is through you ¹ that he does violence. He wants ¹ to do injustice to us, and ²⁰ will exercise dominion for a time ¹ allotted to him.

“““But ¹ understand and know the Father ¹ who has compassion. ¹ He was not given ²⁵ an inheritance that was unlimited, ¹ [nor] does it (his inheritance) [have] ¹ a (limited) number of days, ¹ but it is as [the] eternal [day ...] ³⁰ it is [...] ⁵⁴ perceive [...]. ¹ And he used ¹ [...]. For in fact he is not ¹ one (come) from [them], (and) because of this he ⁵ [is despised]. Because of this he [boasts], so ¹ that he may not be reproved. ¹ For because of this he is superior to ¹ those who are below, those ¹ by whom you ¹⁰ were looked down upon. After he imprisoned ¹ those from [the] Father, ¹ he seized them ¹ and fashioned them to resemble ¹ himself. And it is ¹⁵ with him that they exist.

“““I ¹ saw from the height ¹ those (things) that happened, and I have explained ¹ how they happened. ¹ They were visited while they ²⁰ were in another form, and, ¹ while I was watching, ¹ [they] came to know <me> as I am, ¹ through those whom I know. ¹

“““Now before those (things) ²⁵ [have happened] they will make a ¹ [. . .]. I know ¹ [how] they attempted ¹ [to come] down to this place 55 [that] he might approach [. . .] ¹ the small children, [but ¹ I] wish to reveal ¹ through you and the [Spirit ⁵ of Power], in order that he might reveal ¹ [to those] who are yours. And ¹ those who wish to enter, ¹ and who seek to ¹ walk in the way that is ¹⁰ before the door, ¹ open the good door through you. And they ¹ follow you; they enter ¹ [and you] escort them inside, and give a reward ¹ to each one who is ready for it. ¹⁵

For you are not the redeemer ¹
nor a helper of strangers. ¹
You are an illuminator ¹ and a redeemer ¹ of those who are mine, and now ²⁰ of those who are yours.
You shall ¹ reveal (to them);
you shall bring good ¹ among them all.

You [they shall] ¹ admire because of every powerful (deed). ¹
You are he whom the heavens ²⁵ bless.
You ¹ he shall envy, he [who has] ¹ called himself your [Lord]. ¹
I am the [. . .] 56
[those who] are instructed in these (things) with [you]. ¹

For your sake
they will be told ¹ [these (things)], and will come to rest. ¹

For your sake
they will reign,
[and will] ⁵ become kings.

For [your] sake ¹
they will have pity on whomever they pity. ¹

For just as ¹ you are first having clothed ¹ yourself, you are also the ¹⁰ first who will strip himself, ¹ and you shall become ¹ as you were ¹

before you were stripped.” ¹

“‘And he kissed ¹⁵ my mouth. He took hold of me, saying, ¹ “My beloved! ¹ Behold, I shall reveal ¹ to you those (things) that (neither) ¹ [the] heavens nor their archons ²⁰ have known. Behold, ¹ I shall reveal to you ¹ those (things) that he did not know, ¹ he who [boasted, ‘... ²⁶ there is no] ⁵⁷ other except me. Am I not alive? ¹ Because I am a father, ¹ [do] I [not have power] for everything?” ¹ Behold, I shall reveal to you ⁵ everything, my beloved. ¹ [Understand] and know them ¹ [that] you may come forth just as ¹ I am. Behold, I ¹ [shall] reveal to you him who ¹⁰ [is hidden]. But now, stretch out your ¹ [hand]. Now, take hold of me.” ¹ [And] then I stretched out my ¹ hands and I did not find him ¹ as I thought (he would be). But ¹⁵ afterward I heard him ¹ saying, “Understand and ¹ take hold of me.” Then I understood, ¹ and I was afraid. And ¹ I was exceedingly joyful. ²⁰

“‘Therefore, I tell ¹ you (pl.), judges, you ¹ have been judged. And you ¹ did not spare, but you were spared. ¹ Be sober and [...] ⁵⁸ you did not [know]. ¹

He was that one ¹ whom he who created ¹ the heaven and the earth, ⁵ and dwelled in it, ¹ did not see.

He was [this one who] ¹ is the life.

He ¹ was the light.

He ¹ was that one who will come to be. ¹⁰

And again he shall provide

[an] ¹ end for what ¹ has begun

and a beginning ¹ for what is about to be ended. ¹

He was the Holy Spirit ¹⁵ and the Invisible One, ¹ who did not descend ¹ upon the earth.

He was ¹ the virgin, and that which ¹ he wishes happens ²⁰ to him.

I saw ¹ that he was naked, ¹ and there was no garment clothing ¹ him.

That which he wills ¹ happens to him [...]. ⁵⁹

“‘[Renounce] this difficult way, ¹ which is (so) variable, ¹ [and] walk in accordance with him who desires ¹ [that] you become free men ⁵ [with] me, after you have passed above ¹ every [dominion]. For he will not [judge] (you) ¹ for those (things) that you did, ¹ but will have mercy on you. ¹ For (it is) not you that did them, but it is ¹⁰ [your] Lord (that did them). [He was not] ¹ a wrathful one, but he was a kind Father. ¹

“‘But you have judged [yourselves], ¹ and because of this you will remain ¹ in their fetters. You ¹⁵ have oppressed yourselves, and you ¹ will repent, (but) you will ¹ not profit at all. Behold him ¹ who speaks and seek ¹ him who is silent. Know him ²⁰ who came to this place, and understand ¹ him who went forth (from it). I am ¹ the Just One, and I do <not> judge. ¹ I am not a master, then, but ¹ I am a helper. He was cast ²⁵ out before he ¹ stretched out his hand. I [...].

“[...] 60 and he allows me to hear. ¹ And play your trumpets, ¹ your flutes ¹ and your harps [of ⁵ this house]. The Lord has taken ¹ you captive ¹ from the Lord, having closed ¹ your ears, that ¹ they may not hear the sound of ¹⁰ my word. Yet you [will be able to pay] ¹ heed in your hearts, [and] ¹ you will call me “the Just One.” ¹ Therefore, I tell ¹ you: Behold, I gave ¹⁵ you your house, which ¹ you say that God ¹ has made – that (house) in which ¹ he promised to give you ¹ an inheritance through it. ²⁰ This (house) I shall doom to ¹ destruction and derision of those ¹ who are in ignorance. ¹ For behold, ¹ those who judge deliberate [...].’ 61

“[On] that day ¹ all the [people] and the crowd ¹ were disturbed, and they ¹ showed that they had not been persuaded. ⁵ And he arose and went ¹ forth speaking in this [manner]. ¹ And he entered (again) on that same day and ¹ spoke a few hours. ¹ And I was with the priests ¹⁰ and revealed nothing ¹ of the relationship, ¹ since all of them were saying ¹ with one voice, ‘Come, ¹ let us stone the Just One.’ ¹⁵ And they arose, ¹ saying, ‘Yes, let ¹ us kill this man, that ¹ he may be taken from our midst. ¹ For he will be of no use to us.’ ²⁰

“And they were there and found him ¹ standing beside the columns of ¹ the temple beside the mighty corner ¹ stone. And they decided to throw ¹ him down from ²⁵ the height, and they cast ¹ him down. And ¹ they [...] they [...]. 62 They seized him and [struck] ¹ him as they dragged him upon the ground. ¹ They stretched him out, and placed ¹ a stone on his abdomen. ⁵ They all placed their feet on him, ¹ saying, ¹ ‘You have erred!’

“Again ¹ they raised him up, since he was alive, and made him ¹ dig a hole. They made him stand ¹⁰ in it. After having covered him ¹ up to his abdomen, they stoned ¹ him in this manner.

“And ¹ he stretched out his hands ¹ and said this prayer – ¹⁵ not that (one) which it is his custom to say: ¹

‘My God and my Father, ¹ who saved me from ¹ this dead hope, ¹ who made me alive through a ²⁰ mystery of what he wills, ¹ do not let these days of this world ¹ be prolonged for me, ¹ but the day of your (sg.) ¹ [light . . .] remains ²⁵ in [. . .] 63 salvation.

Deliver me from this ¹ [place of] sojourn!

Do not let your grace be left behind ¹ in me, but may ¹ your grace become pure! ⁵

Save me from an ¹ evil death!

Bring me from ¹ a tomb alive, because your grace — ¹ love — is alive in me ¹ to accomplish a work of fullness! ¹⁰

Save me from ¹ sinful flesh, because I trusted ¹ in you with all my strength!

Because you ¹ are the life of the life, save me ¹ from a humiliating ¹⁵ enemy!

Do not give me into the hand ¹ of a judge who is severe ¹ with sin!

Forgive me ¹ all my debts of the ¹ days (of my life)!

Because I am alive ²⁰ in you, your grace is alive in me. ¹

I have renounced everyone, ¹

but you I have confessed. ¹

Save me from evil ¹ affliction!

But now is the [time] ²⁵ and the hour.

O Holy ¹ [Spirit], send [me] ¹ salvation [. . .] the light [. . .] ¹

the light [. . .] ¹ in a power [. . .].' ³⁰

“After he [spoke, he] fell silent [. . .] ¹ word [. . . afterward ¹ . . .] the discourse [. . .].”

THE APOCALYPSE OF ADAM (V,5)

Introduced and translated by

GEORGE W. MACRAE

Edited by

DOUGLS M. PARROTT

The Apocalypse of Adam is a revelation received by Adam from three heavenly visitors and narrated by him to his son Seth. He explains the loss of saving knowledge by himself and Eve (the fall), its transmission to Seth and his descendants, and its preservation, despite the attempts of the creator-god to destroy mankind by flood and by fire, until the third coming of a savior figure, the "Illuminator." The latter is persecuted by the powers of the world but will ultimately triumph over them. At the mention of his coming there is a long hymnic passage (77,27-83,4), which may be an interpolation into an original apocalypse, in which thirteen false or inadequate explanations of his origin are contrasted with a true one by the "generation without a king," i.e., the Gnostics. This unusual passage is a remarkable example of gnostic syncretism.

In terms of literary form the work embodies a whole succession of the traditional revelation devices. First, the revelation comes to Adam in a dream vision (65,24-66,23) in which it is not clearly stated that he sees the events of the future but perhaps is merely told them. Secondly, Adam's narration to Seth takes the form of a secret traditio from father to son (85,19-22). Thirdly, though not written in a book, these words are hidden on a high mountain (85,3-11). Finally, since Adam's revelation takes place just before his death, the work assumes the form of a testament. Though it is clearly dependent on certain episodes of the Genesis story which are often found in gnostic revelation literature, Apoc. Adam does not follow closely the text of Genesis as do Hyp. Arch. (II,4) and Ap. John (II,1), for example.

The most notable feature of this work is the absence of any explicit or clear borrowings from the Christian tradition. This has led several interpreters to see in it a witness to a non-Christian Gnosticism which contains an already well developed redeemer myth. On the other hand, its close dependence on Jewish apocalyptic tradition suggests that it may represent a transitional stage in an evolution from Jewish to gnostic apocalyptic. In this case the document may be a very early one, perhaps first or second century C.E., but no clear indications of its date have been perceived. Apoc. Adam is a Sethian work in the sense that Seth and his posterity are the tradents of the saving knowledge; it does not have any uniquely close affinities to the description of the Sethians found in Hippolytus (Ref. V.19-21) or Epiphanius (Pan. 39). Within the Nag Hammadi collection it has a great deal in common with Gos. Eg. (III,2), which seems to suppose a christianized version of the story. Using as a key the three sets of angel names, which are not common in the gnostic writings (Abraxas, Sablo, and Gamaliel, 75,22-23; Micheu, Michar, and Mnesinous, 84,5-6; Iesseus Mazareus Iessedekes, 85,30-31), we find that Apoc. Adam is related to The Untitled Text in the Bruce Codex, to Gos. Eg., to Zostrianos (VIII,1), and to Trim. Prot. (XIII,1). In addition several of these works share an interest in the personage of Seth and some concern with the interpretation of baptism, thus reflecting at least a remote connection with (Jewish) baptist circles.

There are references to "apocalypses of Adam" in the writings of the heresiologist Epiphanius (4th cent. C.E.) and Manichaean writings refer to "an apocalypse of Adam," but no direct connection with this tractate can be made in either case.

(George W. MacRae †)

The possibility that the third illuminator, described in 76,8-77,18, might be Christ, has continued to be discussed. Some who favor the identification with Christ have argued that the vagueness of the allusions is precisely what one would expect in an apocalyptic work. The apocalyptic tradition, however, did not prevent the writer from being rather precise about the flood. Also, the details that do come through in the illuminator's description only partly resemble the traditional details about Christ: He will come in great glory, bring the knowledge of the eternal God, and perform signs and wonders. The god of the powers will become angry. At that point the glory will withdraw. The flesh of the man, who was the illuminator when he had the glory, will be punished. We are not told the form of the punishment or whether it ended in death. Nor are we told of a subsequent resurrection. Thus the description is that of a charismatic figure who ran afoul of the authorities and was punished. It is difficult to see any compelling reason to identify this figure with Christ.

Seams in the text have invited those interested in source analysis. In addition to the suggestion, noted above, that the long hymnic passage (13 Kingdoms) was originally independent, two other proposals should be mentioned. One is that the tractate originally ended at 84,3 and that the remainder was added later (it seems to have its own theme — opposition to water baptism). The other is that the tractate is the result of the combining of two separate source documents by a redactor, who also made some contributions of his own. One can get a sense of the basis for the latter theory by looking at the following passages, which, it is contended, are the beginning sections of each of the sources: (A) 64,6-65,23; 66,12-67,11; (B) 65,24-66,12; 67,12-67,21).

(Douglas M. Parrott)

THE APOCALYPSE OF ADAM

V 64, 1-85, 32

The Apocalypse of Adam ¹

The revelation which Adam ¹ taught his son Seth in ¹ the seven hundredth year, saying, ⁵ "Listen to my words, my ¹ son Seth. When ¹ god had created me out of ¹ the earth along with Eve your mother, ¹ I went about with her in a ¹⁰ glory which she had seen in ¹ the aeon from which we had come ¹ forth. She taught me a word ¹ of knowledge of the eternal god. ¹ And we resembled ¹⁵ the great eternal angels, ¹ for we were higher than ¹ the god who had created us and ¹ the powers with him, whom ¹ we did not know. ²⁰

"Then god, ¹ the ruler of the aeons ¹ and the powers, divided us in wrath. Then ¹ we became two aeons. ¹ And the glory in our heart(s) ²⁵ left us, ¹ me and your mother Eve, ¹ along with the first knowledge ¹ that breathed within us. And ¹ it (glory) fled from us; ³⁰ it entered into [...] great [...] which (fem.) 65 [had come] forth, not from this aeon from which [we had] ¹ come forth, I ¹ and Eve your mother. But ¹ it (knowledge) entered into the seed of ⁵ great aeons. For this reason ¹ I myself have called you ¹ by the name of that man ¹ who is the seed of the great generation ¹ or from whom (it comes). After ¹⁰ those days the eternal knowledge ¹ of the God of truth ¹ withdrew from me ¹ and your mother Eve. ¹ Since that time we ¹⁵ learned about dead things, ¹ like men. Then ¹ we recognized the god who had ¹ created us. For we were not ¹ strangers to his powers. And ²⁰ we served him in fear ¹ and slavery. ¹ And after these (events) we became ¹ darkened in our heart(s). ¹ Now I slept in the ²⁵ thought of my heart. ¹

"And I saw three ¹ men before me ¹ whose likeness I was unable ¹ to recognize, since they ³⁰ were not the powers ¹ of the god who had [created ¹ us]. They surpassed [...] ¹ glory, and [...] ¹ men [...] 66 saying to me, 'Arise, ¹ Adam, from the sleep ¹ of death, and hear ¹ about the aeon and the seed ⁵ of that man ¹ to whom life has come, ¹ who came from you and ¹ from Eve, your wife.' ¹

"When I had heard these ¹⁰ words from the great men ¹ who were standing ¹ before me, then we ¹ sighed, I and Eve, in ¹ our heart(s). And the Lord, the god ¹⁵ who had created us, stood ¹ before us. He said to us, ¹ 'Adam, why were you (pl.) ¹ sighing in your heart? ¹ Do you not know that I ²⁰ am the god who created ¹ you? And I breathed into ¹ you a spirit of life ¹ as a living soul.' ¹ Then darkness came upon our ²⁵ eyes.

"Then the god, who ¹ created us, created a ¹ son from himself [and] Eve, ¹ [your mother], for [...] 67 in] the thought [of] ¹ my [...]. I knew ¹ a sweet desire ¹ for your mother. Then ⁵ the vigor of ¹ our eternal knowledge ¹ was destroyed in us, ¹ and weakness ¹ pursued us. ¹⁰ Therefore the days of ¹ our life became few. ¹ For I knew that I had ¹ come under the authority ¹ of death.

"Now then, ¹⁵ my son Seth, I will ¹ reveal to you the things ¹ which those men ¹ whom I saw ¹ before me ²⁰ at first ¹ revealed to me: ¹ after I have completed ¹ the times ¹ of this generation ²⁵ and [the] years of ¹ [the generation] ¹ have been accomplished, [then ¹ ...] slave [...]. (p. 68 blank) 69²

"For rain-showers ¹ of [god] the ¹ almighty ⁵ will be poured forth [so that] he ¹ might destroy [all] flesh [of ¹ god the almighty, ¹ so that he might destroy all flesh] ¹ from the earth ¹⁰ on account of the things that it seeks ¹ after, along with [those from] ¹ the seed [of] the men ¹ to whom passed ¹ the life of ¹⁵ the knowledge, which ¹ came from me [and] Eve, ¹ your mother. For they were ¹ strangers to him. ¹ Afterwards great ²⁰ angels will come ¹ on high clouds, ¹ who will bring those men ¹ into the place ¹ where the spirit [of] life dwells [...] 70 glory ¹ [...] there, ¹ [...] come from heaven ¹ to earth. [Then] ⁵ the whole [multitude] of flesh ¹ will be left behind in the [waters].

"Then god ¹ will rest from ¹ his wrath. And he will cast ¹ his power upon the waters, ¹⁰ and [he will] give power to his sons ¹ and their wives by means of the ark ¹ along with [the] animals, ¹ whichever he pleased, and the ¹ birds of heaven, which he ¹⁵ called and released ¹ upon the earth. And god ¹ will say to Noah — ¹ whom the generations will call ¹ Deucalion —, 'Behold, ²⁰ I have protected <you> in the ark ¹ along with your wife and your sons ¹ and their wives and their ¹ animals and the birds of ¹ [heaven], which you called ²⁵ [and released upon the earth]. 71 Therefore I will give the [earth] to you — ¹ you and your sons. In ¹ kingly fashion you will rule over it — you ¹ and your sons. And no ⁵ seed will come from you ¹ of the men who will not ¹ stand in my presence in ¹ another glory.'

"Then they will ¹ become as the cloud of the ¹⁰ great light. Those ¹ men will come who have ¹ been cast forth from the knowledge ¹ of the great aeons and the ¹ angels. They will stand ¹⁵ before Noah and the aeons. ¹ And god will say to ¹ Noah, 'Why have you departed from ¹ what I told you? You have ¹ created another generation so that you ²⁰ might scorn my power.' Then ¹ Noah will say, 'I shall ¹ testify before your ¹ might that the generation ¹ of these men did not come ²⁵ [from me] nor [from ¹ my sons. . . .] 72 knowledge.

“And [he] will ¹ [. . .] those men ¹ and bring them into their proper ¹ land and build them a ⁵ holy dwelling-place. And ¹ they will be called by that ¹ name and dwell there ¹ six hundred years in a ¹ knowledge of imperishability. ¹⁰ And angels of the great ¹ light will dwell with them. ¹ No foul deed ¹ will dwell in their heart(s), but ¹ only the knowledge of god. ¹⁵

“Then Noah will divide the ¹ whole earth among his sons, ¹ Ham and Japheth and Shem. ¹ He will say to them, ‘My sons, ¹ listen to my words. Behold, ²⁰ I have divided the earth among you. But ¹ serve him in fear and ¹ slavery all the days ¹ of your life. Let not ¹ your seed depart from the face ²⁵ of god the almighty. ¹ [. . .] I and your [. . .] 73 son of Noah, ‘[My] ¹ seed [will be] pleasing before you ¹ and before your power. ¹ Seal it by your ¹ strong hand with fear and ¹ commandment, so that the whole ¹ seed which came forth from me ¹ may not be inclined away from you ¹ and god the almighty, ¹⁰ but it will serve ¹ in humility and ¹ fear of its knowledge.’ ¹

“Then others ¹ from the seed of Ham and ¹⁵ Japheth will come, four hundred ¹ thousand men, and enter into ¹ another land and sojourn ¹ with those men who ¹ came forth from the great ²⁰ eternal knowledge. For ¹ the shadow of their power will ¹ protect those who have sojourned ¹ with them from every evil thing ¹ and every unclean desire. ²⁵ Then the seed of Ham and ¹ Japheth will form twelve ¹ kingdoms, and their ¹ seed [also] will enter into ¹ the kingdom of another people. ³⁰

“[Then . . .] will take counsel [. . .] ¹ aeons [. . .] 74 who are dead, of the great ¹ aeons of imperishability. ¹ And they will go to Sakla ¹ their god. They will go in ⁵ to the powers, accusing the great ¹ men who are in their ¹ glory.

“They will say to Sakla, ¹ ‘What is the power of these men who ¹ stood in your presence, ¹⁰ who were taken from the ¹ seed of Ham and Japheth, ¹ who will number four hundred (thousand) men? ¹ They have been received into another aeon ¹ from which they had come forth, and ¹⁵ they have overturned all the glory of your ¹ power and the dominion of your hand. ¹ For the seed of Noah through ¹ his sons has done ¹ all your will, and (so have) all the powers ²⁰ in the aeons over which your might ¹ rules, while both those ¹ men and the ones who are ¹ sojourners in their glory ¹ have not done your will. ²⁵ [But] they have turned (aside) your ¹ whole throng.’

“Then the god ¹ of the aeons will give them ¹ (some) of those who serve [him . . .] ³⁰ they will come upon that land 75 where the great men ¹ will be who ¹ have not been defiled, nor will be ¹ defiled by any desire. ⁵ For their soul did not come ¹ from a defiled hand, but it ¹ came from a great commandment ¹ of an eternal angel. ¹ Then fire ¹⁰ and sulphur and asphalt will be cast upon ¹ those men, and ¹ fire and (blinding) mist will come over ¹ those aeons, and ¹ the eyes of the powers of the illuminators will be darkened, ¹⁵ and the aeons will not see ¹ them in those days. ¹ And great clouds of light ¹ will descend, and ¹ other clouds of light ²⁰ will come down upon them from ¹ the great aeons. ¹

“Abrasax and Sablo and ¹ Gamaliel will descend and bring ¹ those men out of ²⁵ the fire and the wrath, and ¹ take them above the aeons ¹ and the rulers of the [powers], and ¹ [take] them away [. . .] ¹ of life [. . .] ³⁰ and take them away [. . .] ¹ aeons [. . . 76 dwelling place] of the [great . . .] ¹ there with the holy angels ¹ and the aeons. ¹ The men will be like ⁵ those angels, for they ¹ are not strangers to them. But ¹ they work in the imperishable seed. ¹

“Once again, for the ¹ third time, the illuminator ¹⁰ of knowledge will pass by in great ¹ glory, in order to leave ¹ (something) of the seed of Noah ¹ and the sons of Ham and Japheth — ¹ to leave for himself ¹⁵ fruit-bearing trees. And he will ¹ redeem their souls from the ¹ day of death. For the whole creation ¹ that came from ¹ the dead earth will be ²⁰ under the authority of death. ¹ But those who reflect upon the knowledge ¹ of the eternal God ¹ in their heart(s) will not perish. ¹ For they have not received spirit ²⁵ from this kingdom alone, ¹ but they have received (it) from an ¹ [. . .] eternal angel. ¹ [. . .] illuminator ¹ [. . . will] come upon ³⁰ [. . . that is] dead [. . .] 77 of Seth. And he will perform ¹ signs and wonders in order to ¹ scorn the powers and their ruler. ¹

“Then the god ⁵ of the powers will be disturbed, saying, ‘What ¹ is the power of this man who ¹ is higher than we?’ Then he will ¹ arouse a great wrath against ¹ that man. And ¹⁰ the glory will withdraw and ¹ dwell in holy houses which ¹ it has chosen for itself. And ¹ the powers will not see it ¹ with their eyes, nor will they ¹⁵ see the illuminator either. ¹ Then they will punish the flesh ¹ of the man upon whom the ¹ holy spirit came.

“Then ¹ the angels and all the ²⁰ generations of the powers ¹ will use the name ¹ in error, asking, ¹ ‘Where did it (the error) come from?’ or ¹ ‘Where did the ²⁵ words of deception, which ¹ all the powers have failed to discover, come from?

“[Now] the first ¹ kingdom [says of him] ¹
 [that] he came [from . . .]. 78 A spirit [. . .] to heaven.
 He was nourished ¹ in the heavens.
 He received the glory ¹ of that one and the power. He came ¹ to the bosom of his mother. ⁵
 And thus he came to the water. ¹

“And the second kingdom says ¹ about him that he came ¹ from a great prophet. ¹ And a bird came, took ¹⁰ the child who was born and brought him ¹ onto a high mountain. ¹
 And he was nourished by ¹ the bird of heaven. An angel ¹ came forth there. He said to him, ¹⁵ ‘Arise! God has given glory ¹ to you.’
 He received glory and strength. ¹
 And thus he came to the water. ¹

“The third kingdom says ¹ of him that he came ²⁰ from a virgin womb. ¹ He was cast out of his city, ¹ he and his mother; he was brought ¹ to a desert place.
 He was nourished ¹ there.
 He came and received ²⁵ glory and power.
 And thus ¹ he came to the water. ¹

“[The fourth] kingdom says ¹ [of him]
 [that] he came ¹ [from a virgin. ³⁰ . . . Solomon 79 sought] her, he and Phersalo ¹ and Sael and his armies, ¹ which had been sent out. Solomon ¹ himself sent his army ⁵ of demons to seek out the ¹ virgin. And they did not find ¹ the one whom they sought, but ¹ the virgin who was given to them. ¹ It was she whom they fetched. ¹⁰ Solomon took her. ¹ The Virgin became pregnant and gave birth to ¹ the child there. ¹ She nourished him on a border ¹ of the desert. When ¹⁵ he had been nourished, he received glory ¹ and power from the seed ¹ from which he had been begotten. ¹
 And thus he came to the ¹ water.

“And the fifth ²⁰ kingdom says of him that ¹ he came from a ¹ drop from heaven. He was thrown ¹ into the sea. The abyss ¹ received him, gave birth to him, ²⁵ and brought him to heaven.

He received ¹ glory and power.
And ¹ thus he came to [the water]. ¹

“And [the] sixth kingdom ¹ [says] that a [... ³⁰ down] to the aeon 80 which is below, in order to [gather] ¹ flowers. She became pregnant from ¹ the desire of the flowers. She ¹ gave birth to him in that place. ⁵

The angels of the ¹ flower garden nourished him.
He received ¹ glory there ¹ and power.
And thus he came ¹ to the water.

“And the ¹⁰ seventh kingdom says ¹ of him that he is a drop. ¹ It came from heaven to earth. ¹ Dragons brought him down to caves. ¹ He became a ¹⁵ child. A spirit came upon him and ¹ brought him on high to the place where the ¹ drop had come forth. ¹

He received glory and power ¹ there.
And thus ²⁰ he came to the water.

“And the ¹ eighth kingdom says ¹ of him that a cloud came ¹ upon the earth and enveloped a ¹ rock. He came ²⁵ from it.

The angels ¹ who were above the cloud ¹ nourished him.
He [received] glory ¹ [and] power [there].
And [thus he] came to [the water]. 81

“And the [ninth] kingdom says ¹ of him that from the nine ¹ Muses one separated away. ¹ She came to a high mountain and spent ⁵ (some) time seated there, so that ¹ she desired herself alone ¹ in order to become androgynous. ¹ She fulfilled her desire ¹ and became pregnant from her desire. ¹⁰ He was born.

The ¹ angels who were over the desire nourished him. ¹
And he received glory there ¹ and power.
And ¹ thus he came to the water.

“The ¹⁵ tenth kingdom says of him ¹ that his god loved a cloud ¹ of desire. He begot him ¹ in his hand and cast ¹ upon the cloud above him ²⁰ (some) of the drop, and ¹ he was born.

He received glory and ¹ power there.
And ¹ thus he came to the water. ¹

“And the eleventh ²⁵ kingdom says that the father ¹ desired his [own] ¹ daughter. She herself became pregnant ¹ [from] her father. She cast [...] ¹ tomb 82 out in the desert.

The angel ¹ nourished him there.
 And thus he came ¹ to the water.

“The ⁵ twelfth kingdom says ¹ of him that he came from ¹ two illuminators.
 He was ¹ nourished there.
 He received glory ¹ and power.
 And thus he came ¹⁰ to the water.

“And the ¹ thirteenth kingdom says ¹ of him that every birth ¹ of their ruler is a word. ¹
 And his word received ¹⁵ a mandate there.
 He ¹ received glory and power. ¹
 And thus he came to the water, ¹ in order that the desire ¹ of those powers might be satisfied.

“But the generation ²⁰ without a king over it says ¹ that God chose ¹ him from all the aeons. ¹ He caused knowledge of the ¹ undefiled one of truth to come to be ²⁵ [in] him. [He (or: It)] said, ‘[Out of] ¹ a foreign air, ¹ [from a] great aeon, [the ¹ great] illuminator came forth. [And he made] 83 the generation of those men ¹ whom he had chosen for himself shine, ¹ so that they could shine upon the ¹ whole aeon.’

“Then the seed, ⁵ those who will receive his ¹ name upon the water and (that) of them all, will fight against the power. ¹ And a cloud ¹ of darkness will come upon them.

“Then ¹ the peoples will cry out with a ¹⁰ great voice, saying, ¹ ‘Blessed is the soul of those ¹ men because they have known ¹ God with a knowledge ¹ of the truth! They shall live forever, ¹⁵ because they have not been ¹ corrupted by their desire, ¹ along with the angels, nor ¹ have they accomplished the works of the ¹ powers, but they have stood ²⁰ in his presence in a knowledge ¹ of God like light ¹ that has come forth from ¹ fire and blood.

“‘But we ¹ have done every deed of the powers ²⁵ senselessly. We have ¹ boasted in the transgression ¹ of [all] our works. ¹ We have [cried] against [the God] ¹ of [truth] because all his works [...] 84 is eternal. These are against our ¹ spirits. For now we have known that ¹ our souls will die the death.’” ¹

“Then a voice came to them, ⁵ saying, ‘Micheu and Michar and Mnesinous, who ¹ are over the holy baptism ¹ and the living water, why ¹ were you crying out against the ¹⁰ living God with lawless voices ¹ and tongues without law ¹ over them, and souls ¹ full of blood and foul ¹ [deeds]? You are full of ¹⁵ works that are not of the truth, ¹ but your ways are full of ¹ joy and rejoicing. ¹ Having defiled the water of life, ¹ you have drawn it within ²⁰ the will of the powers ¹ to whom you have been given ¹ to serve ¹ them.

“‘And your ¹ thought is not like that of ²⁵ those men whom ¹ you persecute [...] ²⁸ desire [...]. 85 Their fruit does not wither. But ¹ they will be known ¹ up to the great aeons, because the words ¹ they have kept, of the God ⁵ of the aeons, were not committed to ¹ the book, nor were they written. ¹ But angelic (beings) will bring ¹ them, whom all the generations ¹ of men will not know. ¹⁰ For they will be on a high ¹ mountain, upon a rock of truth. ¹ Therefore they will be named ¹ “The Words of Imperishability ¹ [and] Truth,” for those who know ¹⁵ the eternal God in ¹ wisdom of knowledge ¹ and teaching of angels ¹ forever, for he knows all things.’” ¹

These are the revelations which ²⁰ Adam made known to Seth his ¹ son. And his son taught ¹ his seed about them. This is the ¹ hidden knowledge of Adam, ¹ which he gave to Seth, which is the ²⁵ holy baptism of those who ¹ know the eternal knowledge ¹ through those born of the word ¹ and the imperishable illuminators, who ¹ came from the holy seed: ³⁰ Yesseus, Mazareus, ¹ [Yesse]dekeus, [the Living] Water. ¹

The Apocalypse of Adam

THE ACTS OF PETER AND THE TWELVE APOSTLES (VI,1)

Introduced by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

Translated by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT and R. McL. WILSON

The title appears only at the conclusion of the tractate. At first glance it gives the impression of referring to thirteen apostles (Peter plus the twelve). But a reading of the text makes it clear that the title probably has to do with two different "acts": an act of Peter (1,30-5,5) and an act of the apostolic group (5,5-12,19). The title, however, must nonetheless be secondary, since the number twelve contradicts the explicit statement of the text that the disciples numbered eleven (9,20-21).

The tractate can be divided into four major units:

1. An introductory section, which sets the stage for the tractate. The first seven lines probably contained some indication of initial setting and purpose. The narrator is Peter (1,30) and the time is after the crucifixion, since the apostles undertake their journey on their own immediate initiative, and Jesus is not with them. The fact that there are only eleven disciples, however, suggests the preascension period. Having decided to undertake their ministry together, the apostles find a ship and set sail (1,16-26). They appear to leave their destination to the Lord. The ship arrives at an island city called Habitation, and Peter goes to learn about lodgings.

2. Peter meets a pearl merchant and sees the response of the rich and the poor to him (2,10-5,18). He observes that the rich turn away from him when he hawks his wares because they think he really has none. The poor, however, flock to him, although they lack the means to buy what he offers. They would be content to see a pearl. But the merchant says he will give them one without cost, if they would go to his city. The poor ask Peter about the hazards of the way to the city. Peter tells them what he has heard and turns to the merchant, asking about his name and the hardships of the way. The merchant tells him his name is Lithargoel, which is interpreted in the text as a lightweight, gazelle-like (i.e., gleaming like a gazelle's eyes) stone, presumably a pearl.

3. The journey of Peter and his friends to Lithargoel's city (5,19-8,11), following instructions by Lithargoel. The only way to prepare for the journey to the city of "nine gates" is complete renunciation of possessions and a regimen of fasting, so that one will have nothing predators might want (5,19-6,8). All that is needed is the name of Jesus (6,9-19). Then Peter sees a vision of the walls of the city surrounded by waves. The meaning of this is interpreted in a brief dialogue between Peter and an old man. Peter and the disciples then make the journey to the city.

4. The appearance of Lithargoel as a physician, his revelation of himself as Jesus Christ, and the commissioning of the eleven disciples (8,11-12,19). Lithargoel comes out of the city disguised as a physician and says that he will show them where Lithargoel lives (8,11-35). Instead of doing that, however, he reveals that he is Jesus Christ (9,1-19), in a dialogue with Peter that has been traced to Matthew 16,13-19. After the disciples prostrate themselves in worship and indicate their willingness to do his will, Christ, who is henceforth called the Lord, gives them a box and pouch of medicine and commissions them to return to Habitation, the city from which they came. They are to teach and minister to the faithful, with special emphasis on the poor (9,1-10,13). Peter objects that they have nothing to give the poor, since they have renounced everything, but the Lord points out that they have his name, which is of more value than anything else (10,13-30). After further discussion, the dialogue concludes with the injunction to avoid the rich. The disciples accept the commission and the Lord departs.

The text is composite. This can be seen by the awkward relationship among the various sections. For example, between sections 2 and 3, the reader expects the poor to go to the pearl merchant's city, but only the disciples do; two differing explanations are given for Peter's request about the way; the reader is unprepared for Peter's asking about the merchant's name; the reader is surprised that journey from the island city can be undertaken by foot. Examples of problems between 4 and the earlier sections are these: the sudden shift to third person narrative; the information that the disciples are expected to continue a ministry to Christians (10,4-6) (one had the impression at the start that the disciples were embarking on a mission to a non-Christian world), and the presence of explicit rules regarding church life at the conclusion of the tractate.

Four originally independent accounts seem to have been brought together by an editor. Three probably began as parables or allegories, somewhat resembling those found in The Shepherd of Hermas: the story of the pearl merchant who is rejected by the rich and accepted by the poor; the account of a city surrounded by walls (in part three, above) called Habitation; and the story of a journey whose successful completion required giving up food and possessions, rather than having enough of them. The fourth is the account of Christ's commissioning of the disciples to undertake a ministry of preaching and healing among poor and sick Christians. These accounts are related to each other by the common presence of Peter and the other disciples, and by the name Lithargoel, which serves to connect the pearl merchant, in section 2, with the one who gives instructions about the way, in section 3, and, then, also, with Christ, in section 4, who commissions the disciples.

The narrative intention of the final editor appears to have been to depict the disciples' preparation for apostolic activity. In the course of the account, he shifts the time frame from the earliest apostolic period to that of his own time. The result is that, at the conclusion of the final segment, it is not really the original disciples who are being commissioned, but their latter day representatives. In view of the shift, it appears that the editor wished to remind contemporary church leaders about their true mission.

Lithargoel may originally have been a non-Christian deity. But since no record of a Lithargoel cult has come down to us, it seems more reasonable to think that identification of Lithargoel with Jesus Christ (9,8-15) was the intention when the word was first coined. (See Acts of Peter 20 and Rv 2:17.) The image of Christ as a physician may have been a way of dealing with the popularity of the cult of Asclepius.

It has sometimes been assumed that this tractate is gnostic. But that view has been based more on its presence in the Nag Hammadi library than on the text itself. As has been discussed elsewhere (see introduction to Asclepius 21-29 [VI,8]), the codex in which it is found is not itself gnostic, but rather a miscellaneous collection of spiritual writings reflecting on the ultimate fate of the soul. If one examines the tractate by itself, little is found that would have offended developing orthodoxy. The Christology is that of the divine sonship; the crucifixion and death of Jesus, although not mentioned, may be implied (see 2,14). The theme of apostolic poverty is found in the Gospels, as is the polemic against the rich. A moderate encratite emphasis may be seen in the prohibition on the eating of meat, but there is nothing said about sexual activity or marriage. The tractate, then, does not appear to have sprung from or be directed to a sectarian group within early Christianity. The editor rather seems to be standing within the broad church and to be appealing for a return to apostolic practice on the part of the leaders.

It seems unlikely that this tractate would have been part of the lost portion of the apocryphal Acts of Peter, as has been proposed (see introduction to The Act of Peter [BG,4], for discussion).

The Acts of Peter and the Twelve Apostles is to be grouped with the apocryphal Acts of the second and third centuries, rather than with the later ones, with which it has little in common. The similarity of portions of it to The Shepherd of Hermas suggests a second-century date for them.

THE ACTS OF PETER AND THE TWELVE APOSTLES

VI 1, 1-12, 22

[...] which [...] ¹ purpose [...] : ¹ after [...] ¹ us [...] ⁵ apostles [...]. ¹ We sailed [...] ¹ of the body. [Others] were not ¹ anxious in [their ¹ hearts]. And in our hearts, we were ¹⁰ united. We agreed to fulfill ¹ the ministry to which ¹ the Lord appointed us. And we made ¹ a covenant with each other. ¹

We went down to the sea at ¹⁵ an opportune moment, which came ¹ to us from the Lord. We ¹ found a ship moored at the shore ¹ ready to embark, ¹ and we spoke with the sailors of ²⁰ the ship about our coming aboard with them. ¹ They showed great ¹ kindness toward us as ¹ was ordained by the Lord. ¹ And after we had embarked, ²⁵ we sailed a day ¹ and a night. After that, ¹ a wind came up behind the ship and ¹ brought us to a small city ¹ in the midst of the sea. ³⁰

And I, Peter, inquired about the name ¹ of this city from residents ¹ who were ¹ standing on the dock. 2 [A man] among [them] answered, [saying, ¹ "The name] of this [city is ¹ Habitation, that is], Foundation [...] ¹ endurance." And ⁵ the leader [among them ¹ holding] the palm branch at the edge of [the dock]. ¹ And after we had gone ashore [with the] ¹ baggage, I [went] ¹ into [the] city, to seek [advice] ¹⁰ about lodging.

A man came out ¹ wearing a cloth ¹ bound around his waist, ¹ and a gold belt girded [it]. ¹ Also a napkin was tied over [his] ¹⁵ chest, extending over ¹ his shoulders and covering his head ¹ and his hands.

I was staring at the ¹ man, because he was beautiful in his ¹ form and stature. There were four ²⁰ parts of his body that ¹ I saw: the soles of his ¹ feet and a part of his ¹ chest and the palms of his ¹ hands and his visage. ²⁵ These things I was able to see. ¹ A book cover like (those of) my ¹ books was in his left hand. ¹ A staff of styrax wood was in ¹ his right hand. His ³⁰ voice was resounding as he slowly spoke, ¹ crying out in the city, ¹ "Pearls! Pearls!"

I, ¹ indeed, thought he was a man [of] ¹ that city. I said ³⁵ to him, "My brother and my friend!" ³ [He answered] me, [then, saying, ¹ "Rightly] did you say, '[My brother ¹ and] my friend.' What is it you [seek] ¹ from me?" I said to him, "[I ⁵ ask] you [about] lodging for me ¹ [and the] brothers also, because we ¹ are strangers here." He said [to] me, ¹ "For this reason have I myself just said, ¹ 'My brother and my friend,' ¹⁰ because I also am a fellow stranger ¹ like you."

And ¹ having said these things, he cried out, ¹ "Pearls! Pearls!" ¹ The rich men of that ¹⁵ city heard his voice. ¹ They came out of their hidden storerooms. ¹ And some were ¹ looking out from the storerooms ¹ of their houses. Others ²⁰ looked out from their ¹ upper windows. And they did not see (that they could gain) ¹ anything from him, because ¹ there was no pouch on his back nor ¹ bundle inside his cloth ²⁵ and napkin. And because of their ¹ disdain they did not ¹ even acknowledge him. ¹ He, for his part, did not reveal himself to them. ¹ They returned to their ³⁰ storerooms, saying, ¹ "This man is mocking us." ¹

And the poor [of that city] heard ⁴ [his voice, ¹ and they came to] the man [who sells ¹ this pearl. They said], ¹ "Please take the trouble to [show us ⁵ the] pearl [so that we may], then, [see] ¹ it with our (own) eyes. For we are [the poor]. ¹ And we do not have this [...] price ¹ to pay for it. But [show us] ¹ that we might say to our friends that [we saw] ¹⁰ a pearl with our (own) eyes." He ¹ answered, saying to them, "If ¹ it is possible, come to my city, ¹ so that I may not only show it ¹ before your (very) eyes, but give it to ¹⁵ you for nothing."

And indeed they, ¹ the poor of that city, heard ¹ and said, "Since we ¹ are beggars, we surely ¹ know that a man does not give a pearl ²⁰ to a beggar, but (it is) bread ¹ and money that is usually received. ¹ Now then, the kindness which we want to receive ¹ from you (is) that you show ¹ us the pearl before our eyes. ²⁵ And we will say to our friends ¹ proudly that we saw a ¹ pearl with our (own) eyes” – because ¹ it is not found among the poor, especially ¹ such beggars (as these). He answered ³⁰ (and) said to them, “If it is ¹ possible, you yourselves come ¹ to my city, so that I may not only ¹ show you it, but give it ¹ to you for nothing.” ³⁵ The poor and the beggars rejoiced because of ⁵ the man [who gives for] nothing.

[The men ¹ asked Peter] about the hardships. ¹ Peter answered [and ¹ told] those things that he had heard about the [hardships] ⁵ of [the] way. Because they are [interpreters of the] ¹ hardships in their ministry. ¹

He said to the man who sells this ¹ pearl, “I want ¹ to know your name and the hardships of ¹⁰ the way to your city because we ¹ are strangers and servants of ¹ God. It is necessary for us to spread ¹ the word of God in ¹ every city harmoniously.” He ¹⁵ answered and said, “If you ¹ seek my name, Lithargoel ¹ is my name, the interpretation of which is, ¹ the light, gazelle-like stone. ¹

“And also (concerning) the road to the city, ²⁰ which you asked me about, I will tell you ¹ about it. No man is able to go ¹ on that road, except one ¹ who has forsaken everything that ¹ he has and has fasted ²⁵ daily from stage to stage. ¹ For many are the robbers and ¹ wild beasts on that road. ¹ The one who carries bread with him ¹ on the road, the black dogs ³⁰ kill because of ¹ the bread. The one who carries a costly garment ¹ of the world with him, ¹ the robbers kill ⁶ [because of the] garment. [The one who carries] water ¹ [with him, the wolves kill because ¹ of the water], since they were thirsty [for] it. ¹ [The one who] is anxious about [meat] and ⁵ green vegetables, the lions eat ¹ because of the meat. [If] he evades ¹ the lions, the bulls ¹ devour him because of the green vegetables.” ¹

When he had said [these] things to me, I sighed ¹⁰ within myself, saying, “[Great] ¹ hardships are on the road! If only ¹ Jesus would give us power to walk it!” ¹ He looked at me since my face was sad, and I ¹ signed. He said to me, “Why ¹⁵ do you sigh, if you, indeed, know ¹ this name ‘Jesus’ and believe him? ¹ He is a great power for giving strength. ¹ For I too believe in the Father ¹ who sent him.”

I replied, ²⁰ asking him, “What is the name ¹ of the place to which you go, ¹ your city?” He said to me, ¹ “This is the name of my city, ¹ ‘Nine Gates.’ Let us praise God ²⁵ as we are mindful that the tenth ¹ is the head.” After this I went away ¹ from him in peace.

As I was ¹ about to go and call my friends, I ¹ saw waves and large ³⁰ high walls surrounding ¹ the bounds of the city. I ¹ marveled at the great things I saw. ¹ I saw an old man ¹ sitting and I asked him if the name of the ³⁵ city was really 7 [Habitation]. He [...], ¹ "Habitation ...". ¹ He said to me, "[You ¹ speak] truly, for we [inhabit] here ⁵ because [we] endure."

[I ¹ responded], saying, "Justly ¹ [...] have men named it ¹ [...], because (by) everyone ¹ [who] endures his trials, ¹⁰ cities are inhabited, ¹ and a precious kingdom ¹ comes from them, because ¹ they endure in the midst of the ¹ apostasies and the difficulties of the storms. ¹⁵ So that in this way, the city of everyone ¹ who endures the burden of his yoke ¹ of faith will be inhabited, ¹ and he will be included in ¹ the kingdom of heaven."

I hurried ²⁰ and went and called my ¹ friends so that we might go to the city ¹ that he, Lithargoel, appointed for us. ¹ In a bond ¹ of faith we forsook ²⁵ everything as ¹ he had said (to do). We evaded ¹ the robbers, because they did not ¹ find their garments with us. ¹ We evaded the ³⁰ wolves, because they did not find the water ¹ with us for which they thirsted. ¹ We evaded the lions, ¹ because they did not find the desire ¹ for meat with us. 8 [We evaded the bulls ... ³ they did not find] green vegetables. ¹

A great joy [came upon] us [and a] ⁵ peaceful carefreeness [like ¹ that of] our Lord. We [rested ¹ ourselves] in front of the gate, [and] ¹ we talked with each other [about that] ¹ which is not a distraction of this [world]. ¹⁰ Rather we continued in contemplation ¹ of the faith.

As we discussed the ¹ robbers on the road, whom we ¹ evaded, behold ¹ Lithargoel, having changed, came out to ¹⁵ us. He had the appearance of a physician, ¹ since an unguent box was under ¹ his arm, and a young disciple was ¹ following him carrying a pouch ¹ full of medicine. ²⁰ We did not recognize him. ¹

Peter responded and said to him, ¹ "We want you to do ¹ us a favor, because we are ¹ strangers, and take us to the house of ²⁵ Lithargoel before evening comes." ¹ He said, "In uprightness ¹ of heart I will show it to you. ¹ But I am amazed at how ¹ you knew this good man. ³⁰ For he does not reveal himself to ¹ every man, because he himself ¹ is the son of a great king. ¹ Rest yourselves a little so ¹ that I may go and heal this man ³⁵ and come (back)." He hurried and came (back) 9 quickly.

He said to Peter, ¹ "Peter!" And Peter was frightened, ¹ for how did he know ¹ that his name was Peter? ⁵ Peter responded to the Savior, ¹ "How do you know me, ¹ for you called my name?" ¹ Lithargoel answered, "I want to ask you who gave the ¹⁰ name Peter to you?" He said to him, "It was Jesus Christ, the son of the living God. He gave this name to me." He answered and said, "It is I! Recognize me, ¹⁵ Peter." He loosened the garment, which clothed him – the one into which he had changed himself because of us – revealing to us in truth that it was he.

We prostrated ourselves ²⁰ on the ground and worshipped him. We comprised eleven disciples. He stretched forth his hand and caused us to stand. We spoke with him humbly. Our heads were ²⁵ bowed down in unworthiness as we said, "What you wish we will do. But give us power to do what you wish at all times." ²⁰

He gave them the unguent box and the pouch that was in the hand of the young disciple. He commanded them like this, ¹⁰ saying, "Go into [the] city from which you came, which is called Habitation. Continue in endurance as you ⁵ teach all those who have believed in my name, because I have endured in hardships of the faith. I will give you your reward. To the poor of that city give ¹⁰ what they need in order to live until I give them what is better, which I told you that I will give you for nothing."

Peter answered and said to him, ¹⁵ "Lord, you have taught us to forsake the world and everything in it. We have renounced them for your sake. What we are concerned about (now) is the food for a single day. ²⁰ Where will we be able to find the needs that you ask us to provide for the poor?"

The Lord answered and said, "O Peter, it was necessary that you understand the parable ²⁵ that I told you! Do you not understand that my name, which you teach, surpasses all riches, and the wisdom of God surpasses gold, and silver ³⁰ and precious stone(s)?"

He gave them the pouch of medicine and said, "Heal all the sick of the city who believe ¹¹ [in] my name." Peter was afraid [to] reply to him for the second time. He signaled to the one who was beside him, who was John: "You ⁵ talk this time." John answered and said, "Lord, before you we are afraid to say many words. But it is you who asks us ¹⁰ to practice this skill. We have not been taught to be physicians. How then will we know how to heal bodies as you have told us?"

He answered them, "Rightly have you ¹⁵ spoken, John, for I know that the physicians of this world heal what belongs to the world. The physicians of souls, however, heal the heart. Heal ²⁰ the bodies first, therefore, so that through the real powers of healing for their bodies, without medicine of ¹ the world, they may believe in you, ²⁵ that you have power to heal ¹ the illnesses of the heart also.

“The ¹ rich men of the city, however, those ¹ who did not see fit ¹ even to acknowledge me, but who ³⁰ reveled in their ¹ wealth and pride — ¹ with such as these, therefore, 12 do not dine in [their] houses ¹ nor be friends with them, ¹ lest their partiality ¹ influence you. For many in the churches have ⁵ shown partiality to the rich, because ¹ they also are sinful, ¹ and they give occasion for ¹ others to sin. But judge ¹ them with uprightness, so ¹⁰ that your ministry may ¹ be glorified, and that ¹ my name also, may be glorified in the ¹ churches.” The disciples ¹ answered and said, “Yes, ¹⁵ truly this is what is fitting ¹ to do.”

They prostrated themselves on the ground ¹ and worshipped him. He caused them ¹ to stand and departed from ¹ them in peace. Amen. ²⁰

The Acts of Peter ¹
and the Twelve ¹ Apostles

THE THUNDER: PERFECT MIND (VI,2)

Introduced and translated by

GEORGE W. MACRAE

Edited by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

The title appears to be double: "The Thunder" is not syntactically related to "Perfect Mind" but is separated by a mark of punctuation (:). It is nowhere referred to in the body of the work (unless one should reconstruct "[perfect] mind" at 18,9).

In content Thund. is virtually unique in the Nag Hammadi library and very unusual. It is a revelation discourse by a female figure who is, except possibly for the title, otherwise not specifically identified. The work has no apparent structural divisions but is written throughout in the first person, interweaving and combining three types of statement: self-proclamation in the "I am" style, exhortations to heed the speaker, and reproaches for failures to heed or love, etc. The most distinctive feature is that the self-proclamations are most often antithetical or even paradoxical. The parallelism of form suggests that originally these may have been part of a hymnic structure.

Parallels for this revelatory genre can be adduced from a variety of sources. In Orig. World (II,5) 114,7-15, the heavenly Eve utters a hymnic self-proclamation that is very similar to Thund. 13,19-14,9, and a trace of the same material, though not in the form of self-proclamation, occurs in a similar context in Hyp. Arch. (II,4) 89,14-17. It may be significant that the Thund. passage thus paralleled is not repeated in the work, whereas many of the other self-proclamations occur more than once in Thund., sometimes in varying forms. In such other Nag Hammadi works as Trim. Prot. (XIII,1) and the longer ending of Ap. John (II,1:30,11-31,25), there are examples of the "I style" of proclamation by a revealer figure, but without the antithetical context. There are three interesting parallels to Thund., in content or in style or in both, outside the Nag Hammadi corpus. One is the well-known "Hymn of Christ" in the Acts of John 94-96, in which Christ sings of himself in a succession of antitheses and contrasts, without, however, the use of "I am" formulas. The second example is a passage in the Mandaean Ginza R, Book VI, the so-called "Book of Dinanukht," which is generally thought to be one of the older sections of the Ginza. There the spirit Ewath recites a formula which contains antitheses similar to, but for the most part not identical with, those in Thund.: "I am death, I am life. I am darkness, I am light. I am error, I am truth, etc." The third example is a series of passages in ancient Indian literature in which contrasting or contradictory assertions are made of the Deity either in the "I am" form (Bhagavad-Gita IX,16-19) or in the second or third person (Atharva-Veda X, viii,27-28; Śvetāśvatara Upanishad IV,3). These examples include both personal categories ("Thou art woman, Thou art man") and non-personal ones ("Death am I and deathlessness, What is not and that which is").

In terms of the religious traditions represented in the Nag Hammadi collection, Thund. is difficult to classify. It contains no distinctively Christian, Jewish, or gnostic allusions and does not seem clearly to presuppose any particular gnostic myth. There are resemblances to the tone and style of the wisdom hymns in the Biblical and intertestamental wisdom literature, and the self-proclamations are similar to the Isis aretology inscriptions. But if the multiple assertions in these works are intended to assert the universality of Isis or of God's wisdom, perhaps the antithetical assertions of Thund. are a way of asserting the totally other-worldly transcendence of the revealer.

(George W. MacRae †)

There has been a tendency among scholars to assume that Thund. is gnostic, in spite of George MacRae's caution, expressed above. Accordingly it has been proposed that the female figure here is to be understood as a combination of the higher and lower Sophia figures found in gnostic literature. It has also been proposed that the figure is Eve, as she is understood in gnostic writings found in the Nag Hammadi collection (see references above) and mentioned elsewhere.

If one takes Thund. at face value and includes the title in consideration, the female figure who is the speaker throughout is named Thunder (feminine in Greek), a figure who must be understood in terms of the parallel phrase in the title: Perfect Mind. Thunder, in Greek myth, in the Hebrew Bible, and elsewhere, comes forth from the highest god (the Greeks sometimes called Zeus "The Thundering One"). It is the way in which the god makes his presence known on earth. In the tractate, Thunder is allegorized as Perfect Mind, meaning the extension of the divine into the world (1,1-2). The understanding of Perfect Mind appears to owe much to the Stoic notion of cosmic Pneuma, the active, intelligent element in all things, made up of air and fire. It was thought of as spanning all worldly divisions and dichotomies and at some level being responsible for everything that occurs. In its manifestation as reason, it was also able to instruct those who listen about the way to true life. (For Thunder's similar role, see 20,26-27; 21,20-32). The tractate as it stands, is not Stoic, since it speaks of a power above Perfect Mind (1,1). But with its conception of the immanence of the divine in all aspects of the world, neither is it gnostic. It still remains "difficult to classify."

(Douglas M. Parrott)

THE THUNDER: PERFECT MIND

VI 13, 1-21, 32

The Thunder: Perfect Mind ¹

I was sent forth from ¹ [the] power, and I have come to those who ¹ reflect upon me, and I have been found ⁵ among those who seek after me. ¹ Look upon me, you (pl.) who reflect upon me, ¹ and you hearers, hear me. ¹
 You who are waiting for me, take me ¹ to yourselves.
 And do not banish me ¹⁰ from your sight. ¹
 And do not make your voice hate ¹ me, nor your hearing. ¹ Do not be ignorant of me anywhere ¹ or any time. Be on your guard! ¹⁵
 Do not be ignorant of me. ¹

For I am the first and the last.
 I ¹ am the honored one and the scorned one. ¹
 I am the whore and the holy one. ¹
 I am the wife and the ²⁰ virgin.
 I am <the mother> ¹ and the daughter.
 I am the members ¹ of my mother.
 I am the barren one ¹
 and many are her sons.
 I ¹ am she whose wedding is great, and ²⁵ I have not taken a husband.
 I am the midwife ¹ and she who does not bear.
 I ¹ am the solace of my labor pains.
 I ¹ am the bride and the bridegroom, ¹ and it is my husband who ³⁰ begot me.
 I am the mother of ¹ my father and the sister of my ¹ husband, and he is my offspring. ¹
 I am the slave of him who ¹ prepared me.
 I am the ruler 14 of my offspring.
 But he is the one who [begot me] ¹ before the time on a birthday. ¹
 And he is my offspring [in] ¹ (due) time, and my power ⁵ is from him.

 I am the staff ¹ of his power in his youth,
 [and] ¹ he is the rod of my ¹ old age.
 And whatever he wills ¹ happens to me.
 I am the silence ¹⁰ that is incomprehensible and the idea ¹ whose remembrance is frequent. ¹
 I am the voice whose sound is ¹ manifold and the word whose appearance ¹ is multiple.
 I am the utterance of ¹⁵ my name.

 Why, you who hate me, ¹ do you love me and ¹ hate those who love me? ¹
 You who deny me, confess ¹ me, and you who confess ²⁰ me, deny me.
 You who tell ¹ the truth about me, lie about me, and you ¹ who have lied about me, tell the truth about me. ¹
 You who know me, be ignorant ¹ of me, and those who have not ²⁵ known me, let them know me. ¹

 For I am knowledge and ¹ ignorance.
 I am ¹ shame and boldness. ¹
 I am shameless; I am ³⁰ ashamed.
 I am strength and ¹ I am fear.
 I am ¹ war and peace.
 Give heed ¹ to me.
 I am the one who is disgraced ¹ and the great one.

 Give heed to my ¹⁵ poverty and my wealth. ¹
 Do not be arrogant to me when I am ¹ cast out upon the earth, [and] ¹ you will find me in [those ⁵ that] are to come.
 And do not look ¹ [upon] me on the dung-heap nor go ¹ and leave me cast out, ¹ and you will find me in ¹ the kingdoms.
 And do not look ¹⁰ upon me when I am cast out among those who ¹ are disgraced and in the least ¹ places, nor laugh at me. ¹
 And do not cast me out among those who ¹ are slain in violence. ¹⁵
 But I, I am compassionate ¹ and I am cruel.

 Be on your guard! ¹
 Do not hate my obedience ¹ and do not love my self-control. ¹

In my weakness, do not ²⁰ forsake me, and do ¹ not be afraid of my power. ¹

For why do you despise ¹ my fear and ¹ curse my pride? ²⁵

But I am she who exists in ¹ all fears and strength ¹ in trembling.

I am she who is ¹ weak, and I am well in a ¹ pleasant place.
I am ³⁰ senseless and I am wise. ¹

Why have you hated me ¹ in your counsels?

For I shall be ¹ silent among those who are silent, ¹ and I shall appear and speak. 16

Why then have you hated me, you Greeks? ¹

Because I am a barbarian among [the] ¹ barbarians?

For I am the wisdom ¹ [of the] Greeks and the knowledge of [the] ⁵ barbarians.

I am the judgment of [the] ¹ Greeks and of the barbarians.

[I] ¹ am the one whose image is great in Egypt ¹ and the one who has no image among the ¹ barbarians.

I am the one who has been hated ¹⁰ everywhere and who has been loved ¹ everywhere.

I am the one whom they call ¹ Life, and you have ¹ called Death.

I am the one whom ¹ they call Law, ¹⁵ and you have called Lawlessness. ¹

I am the one whom you have pursued, ¹ and I am the one whom you have seized. ¹

I am the one whom you have scattered, ¹ and you have gathered me together. ²⁰

I am the one before whom you have ¹ been ashamed, and you have been ¹ shameless to me.

I am she who does not keep festival, ¹ and I am she whose festivals are many. ¹

I, I am godless, and ²⁵ I am the one whose God is great. ¹

I am the one whom you have reflected upon, ¹ and you have scorned me.

I am ¹ unlearned, and they learn from ¹ me.

I am the one whom you have ³⁰ despised, and you ¹ reflect upon me.
 I am the one ¹ whom you have hidden from,
 and you ¹ appear to me.
 But whenever ¹ you hide yourselves, ³⁵
 I myself will appear. 17
 For [whenever] you ¹ [appear],
 I myself ¹ [will hide] from you.
 Those who have [...] ¹ to it [...] ⁵ senselessly [...]. ¹
 Take me [...] ¹ understanding] from grief, ¹ and take me ¹ to yourselves from understanding ¹⁰ [and] grief.
 And take ¹ me to yourselves from places ¹ that are ugly and in ruin, ¹ and rob from those ¹ which are good even though in ugliness. ¹⁵ Out of shame, take me ¹ to yourselves shamelessly; ¹ and out of shamelessness ¹ and shame, upbraid my members ¹ in yourselves.
 And ²⁰ come forward to me, ¹ you who know me and you who ¹ know my members, and ¹ establish the great ones among the small ¹ first creatures.
 Come ²⁵ forward to childhood, ¹ and do not despise it ¹ because it is small and it is little. ¹ And do not turn away ¹ greatnesses in some parts from ³⁰ the smallnesses, for ¹ the smallnesses are known ¹ from the greatnesses.
 Why ¹ do you curse me ¹ and honor me? ³⁵
 You have wounded and you have ¹ had mercy.
 Do not separate me from the first 18 ones whom you have [known].
 [And] ¹ do not cast anyone [out nor] ¹ turn anyone away
 [...] ¹ turn you away and [...] ⁵ know] him not.
 [...]. ¹
 What is mine [...]. ¹
 I know the [first ones] and ¹ those after them [know] me. ¹
 But I am the mind of [...] ¹⁰ and the rest of [...]. ¹
 I am the knowledge of my inquiry, and ¹ the finding of those who seek after me, and ¹ the command of those who ask of me, ¹ and the power of the powers in my knowledge ¹⁵ of the angels, who have been ¹ sent at my word, and of gods ¹ in their seasons by my counsel, ¹ and of spirits of every man who ¹ exists with me, and of women ²⁰ who dwell within me.

 I am the one who ¹ is honored, and who is praised, ¹ and who is despised ¹ scornfully.
 I ¹ am peace,
 and war ²⁵ has come because of me.
 And I ¹ am an alien and a citizen. ¹
 I am the substance and the one who ¹ has no substance.

 Those who are ¹ without association with me are ignorant ³⁰ of me, and those who are in my ¹ substance are the ones who know me. ¹
 Those who are close to me have been ignorant ¹ of me, and those who are far ¹ away from me are the ones who have known ³⁵ me.
 On the day when I am close to 19 [you],
 [you] are far away ¹ [from me],
 [and] on the day when I ¹ [am far away] from you,
 [I am ¹ close] to you.

 [I am ⁵ . . .] within.
 [I am ¹ . . .] of the natures.
 I am ¹ [. . .] of the creation of the [spirits]. ¹
 [. . .] request of the souls. ¹
 [I am] control and the uncontrollable. ¹⁰
 I am the union and ¹ the dissolution.
 I am the abiding ¹ and I am the dissolution.
 I ¹ am the one below,
 and they come ¹ up to me.
 I am the judgment ¹⁵ and the acquittal.
 I, I ¹ am sinless,
 and the root ¹ of sin derives from me. ¹
 I am lust in (outward) appearance, ¹ and interior self-control ²⁰ exists within me.
 I ¹ am the hearing which is attainable to ¹ everyone and the speech which cannot be ¹ grasped.
 I am a mute ¹ who does not speak, and great ²⁵ is my multitude of words.

 Hear ¹ me in gentleness, and ¹ learn of me in roughness. ¹
 I am she who cries out, ¹ and I am cast ³⁰ forth upon the face of the earth. ¹

I prepare the bread and ¹ my mind within.

I am the ¹ knowledge of my name.

I am the one ¹ who cries out, and I listen. 20

I appear and [...] ¹ walk in [...] ¹ seal of my [...]. ⁵

I am [...] ¹ the defense [...]. ¹

I am the one who is called ¹ Truth, and iniquity [...]. ¹

You honor me [...] ¹⁰ and you whisper against [me].

You [who] ¹ are vanquished, judge them (who vanquish you) ¹ before they give judgment against you, ¹

because the judge and partiality ¹ exist in you.

If you are condemned ¹⁵ by this one, who will ¹ acquit you?

Or if you are acquitted ¹ by him, who will be able to ¹ detain you?

For what is ¹ inside of you is what is outside of you, ²⁰ and the one who fashions you on the outside ¹ is the one who shaped ¹ the inside of you.

And what ¹ you see outside of you, ¹

you see inside of you; ²⁵

it is visible and it is your garment. ¹

Hear me, you hearers, ¹ and learn of my words, ¹ you who know me.

I am ¹ the hearing that is attainable to everything; ³⁰

I am the speech that cannot ¹ be grasped.

I am ¹ the name of the sound and the sound ¹ of the name.

I am the sign ¹ of the letter and the designation ³⁵ of the division.

And I [...].

[...] 21⁴ light [...].

[...] ⁶ hearers [...] ¹ to you

[...] ¹ the great power.

And [...] ¹ will not move the name. ¹⁰

[...] to the one who created me. ¹

And I will speak his name. ¹

Look then at his words and all ¹ the writings which have been completed.
Give ¹ heed then, you hearers and ¹⁵ you also, the angels ¹ and those who have been sent, ¹ and you spirits who have arisen from ¹ the dead.
For I am the one who ¹ alone exists, and I have no one ²⁰ who will judge me.

For many ¹ are the pleasant forms which ¹ exist in numerous sins, ¹ and incontinencies, ¹ and disgraceful passions, ²⁵ and fleeting pleasures, ¹ which (men) embrace ¹ until they become sober and ¹ go up to their resting-place. ¹
And they will find ³⁰ me there, and they will ¹ live,
and they will not die ¹ again.

AUTHORITATIVE TEACHING (VI,3)

Introduced and translated by

GEORGE W. MACRAE

Edited by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

The third tractate of Codex VI is not obviously related either to what precedes or to what follows. It is a heavily metaphorical exposition of the origin, condition, and ultimate destiny of the soul. With respect to its contents, there are some reasons for regarding Auth. Teach. as a composite or collection of several explanations of the soul's origin, fall, and victory over the material world. There is a major break at 25,26, where the narrative returns to the world of the Father where it has (presumably) begun, and from 26,20 onward there are several sections containing statements in the first person plural. Moreover, a number of different extended metaphors are introduced successively to explain the same phenomenon, the condition of the soul in the world, although some key metaphors such as those of the food, the medicine, the bridal relationship occur in several sections of the work. Some of these metaphors are extremely common in the literature of the Roman Hellenistic era, e.g., the bridegroom and life as an athletic contest, but others are highly distinctive and almost unparalleled in their elaborateness, e.g., the fisherman and the dealers in bodies.

Auth. Teach. contains no typical gnostic cosmogenic myth — unless it is alluded to in the passages now lost through some of the early lacunae — but it seems to presuppose a generally gnostic, i.e., anticosmic dualist, understanding of the fate of the soul in the material world. It has a number of parallels in the remainder of the Nag Hammadi library, notably with Gos. Phil. (II,3), Exeg. Soul (II,6), Teach. Silv. (VII,4), and the Hermetic tractates of Codex VI, as well as with the Corpus Hermeticum. There is nothing in Auth. Teach., however, to suggest that it is itself a Hermetic composition. It is also distinctively different from the De anima literature of the early Christian centuries, whether of Tertullian and his sources, or of Porphyry or Iamblichus, in that it is totally nonphilosophical in its forms of expression. Apart from a few expressions such as “evangelists,” “hearing the preaching,” and the like, there is nothing specifically Christian in the document, nor is there any trace of the heavy dependence on Jewish speculation which we find in so many other Nag Hammadi tractates.

Perhaps there is a clue, though a veiled one, to be sure, to its origin in the section 33,4-34,34, which contains a polemic against the senseless who are distinguished both from the “we” with whom the writer identifies and from the pagans, who are more or less excusable on grounds of ignorance. One is tempted to think of a Christian berating the Jews for their failure to heed the message which they have heard preached to them, but again there is no unambiguous allusion to either Christian or Jewish belief or practice. In its emphasis on the evil character of the material world, on the heavenly origin of the spiritual soul, on the role of revealed knowledge as salvific, Auth. Teach. appears to be a gnostic work. But it lacks the tone of self-assurance and confidence, almost arrogance, which characterizes many unquestionably gnostic treatises. The soul is in perpetual danger of succumbing to the "adversary," or to the false attraction of the material, and consequently she must maintain a practised vigilance.

(George W. MacRae †)

Since George W. MacRae wrote, attempts have been made to be more precise about the group responsible for the tractate. Some have argued that they were in fact Gnostics, who only expressed as much of the gnostic myth in the tractate as was needed. A fundamental difference may be seen between Gnostics and traditional Christians, it is argued, in 33,4-34,34, where gnostic "seekers" contrast themselves with the "senseless" faith-oriented Christians, who have "found" the way, in sterile creedal religion. Others believe that second-century Christian Middle Platonists produced the tractate. They find numerous echoes to passages in the New Testament. They also find the distinctive Middle Platonic doctrine of two souls (spiritual and rational). Neither of these basically antithetical positions is well enough supported in the text to warrant abandoning the cautious assessment expressed by MacRae.

(Douglas M. Parrott)

AUTHORITATIVE TEACHING

VI 22, 1-35, 24

[...] ⁶ in heaven [...] ¹ within him [...] ¹ anyone appears [...] ¹ the hidden heavens [...] ¹⁰ appear, and [before] ¹ the invisible, ineffable worlds ¹ appeared. ¹ From these the invisible ¹ soul of righteousness ¹⁵ came, being ¹ a fellow member, and a fellow ¹ body, and a fellow spirit. ¹ Whether she is in the descent ¹ or is in the Pleroma, ²⁰ she is not separated from them, but they see ¹ her and she looks at them ¹ in the invisible world. ¹

Secretly her bridegroom ¹ fetched it. He presented it to her mouth ²⁵ to make her eat it like ¹ food, and he applied the word ¹ to her eyes as a medicine ¹ to make her see with her mind ¹ and perceive her kinsmen ³⁰ and learn about her root, ¹ in order that she might cling to her branch ¹ from which she had first come forth, ¹ in order that she might receive what ¹ is hers and renounce [matter].

[...] ²³ he [dwelt ...] ¹ having [...] ¹ sons. The sons [...] ¹ truly, those who have ¹ [come] from his seed, ¹⁰ call the sons ¹ of the woman

“our brothers.”¹ In this very way, when the spiritual¹ soul was cast¹ into the body, it became¹⁵ a brother to lust and hatred¹ and envy, and a material¹ soul. So therefore the body¹ came from lust,¹ and lust²⁰ came from material substance.¹ For this reason the soul¹ became a brother to them.

And yet¹ they are outsiders, without power¹ to inherit from the male,²⁵ but they will inherit¹ from their mother only.¹ Whenever, therefore, the soul¹ wishes to inherit¹ along with the outsiders – for the possessions of³⁰ the outsiders are¹ proud passions, the pleasures¹ of life, hateful envies,¹ vainglorious things, nonsensical things,¹ accusations²⁴ [...] ⁶ for her [...] ¹ prostitution], he excludes her [and puts]¹ her into the brothel. For [...] ¹ [debauchery] for her. [She left]¹⁰ modestly behind. For death¹ and life are set before¹ everyone. Which-ever of these two they wish, then,¹ they will choose for themselves.

That one (fem.) then will fall¹⁵ into drinking much wine in¹ debauchery. For wine is¹ the debaucher. Therefore she does not remember¹ her brothers and her father, for¹ pleasure and sweet profits²⁰ deceive her.

Having¹ left knowledge behind, she fell¹ into bestiality. For a senseless person¹ exists in¹ bestiality, not knowing what it is²⁵ proper to say and what it is proper¹ not to say. But, on the other hand, the¹ gentle son inherits¹ from his father with pleasure, while¹ his father rejoices over him³⁰ because he receives honor on account of him from¹ everyone, as he looks again¹ for the way to double the things¹ that he has received. For the outsiders [...].

[...] ²⁵ to mix with the [...].¹ For if a thought [of] lust¹ enters into¹ [a] virgin man, he has¹ [already] become contaminated. And their¹⁰ gluttony cannot¹ mix with moderation.¹ For if the chaff is mixed¹ with the wheat, it is not the chaff that is¹ contaminated, but the wheat.¹⁵ For since they are mixed with each other, no¹ one will buy her wheat because it is contaminated.¹ But they will coax¹ him, “Give us this chaff!”,¹ seeing the wheat mixed²⁰ with it, until they get it and¹ throw it with all other chaff,¹ and that chaff¹ mixes with all other materials.¹ But a pure seed²⁵ is kept in storehouses¹ that are secure. All these things, then,¹ we have spoken.

And before¹ anything came into being,¹ it was the Father alone who existed,³⁰ before the worlds that are in¹ the heavens appeared,¹ or the world that is on¹ the earth, or principality, or¹ authority, or the powers.²⁶ [...] ⁴ appear [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ And] nothing¹ came into being without his wish.¹

He, then, the Father, wishing ¹ to reveal his [wealth] ¹⁰ and his glory, brought about ¹ this great contest ¹ in this world, wishing ¹ to make the contestants appear, ¹ and make all those who contend ¹⁵ leave behind ¹ the things that had come into being, and ¹ despise them with a ¹ lofty, incomprehensible knowledge, ¹ and flee to the one who ²⁰ exists.

And (as for) those who contend with us, ¹ being adversaries who ¹ contend against us, we are to be victorious over their ¹ ignorance through our ¹ knowledge, since we have already known ²⁵ the Inscrutable One from whom we have ¹ come forth. We have nothing in ¹ this world, lest ¹ the authority of the world that ¹ has come into being should detain us ³⁰ in the worlds that are in the heavens, ¹ those in which universal death ¹ exists, ¹ surrounded by the individual 27 [...] ⁵ worldly. [We have] ¹ also become ashamed [of the] worlds, ¹ though we take no interest in them when they ¹ [malign] us. And we ignore ¹ them when they curse ¹⁰ us. When they cast shame in ¹ our face, we look at them ¹ and do not speak.

For they ¹ work at their business, ¹ but we go about in hunger (and) ¹⁵ in thirst, looking toward ¹ our dwelling-place, the place which ¹ our conduct and our conscience ¹ look toward, ¹ not clinging to the things ²⁰ which have come into being, but withdrawing ¹ from them. Our hearts ¹ are set on the things that exist, though we are ill ¹ (and) feeble (and) in pain. ¹ But there is a great strength hidden ²⁵ within us.

Our soul ¹ indeed is ill because she dwells ¹ in a house of poverty, while ¹ matter strikes blows at her eyes, ¹ wishing to make her blind. ³⁰ For this reason she pursues ¹ the word and applies it to her eyes ¹ as a medicine, (opening) ¹ them, casting away 28 [...] ⁴ thought of a[...] ¹ blindness in [...] ¹ afterwards when ¹ that one is again in ¹ ignorance, he is completely [darkened] ¹ and [is] material. ¹⁰ Thus the soul [...] ¹ a word every hour, to apply ¹ it to her eyes as a medicine ¹ in order that she may see, ¹ and her light may conceal the hostile forces ¹⁵ that fight with ¹ her, and she may make them blind with ¹ her light, and enclose them in ¹ her presence, ¹ and make them fall down in sleeplessness, ²⁰ and she may act boldly ¹ with her strength and with her ¹ scepter.

While her enemies look ¹ at her in shame, she runs ¹ upward into her treasure-house — ²⁵ the one in which her mind ¹ is — and (into) her ¹ storehouse which is secure, since nothing ¹ among the things that have come into being has seized ¹ her, nor has she received a ³⁰ stranger into her house. ¹ For many are her ¹ homeborn ones who fight against her ¹ by day and by night, ¹ having no rest 29 by day or by night, ¹ for their lust oppresses ¹ them.

For this reason, then, we do ¹ not sleep, nor do we forget [the] ⁵ nets that are spread out in ¹ hiding, lying in wait for us to catch ¹ us. For if we are caught in ¹ a single net, it will suck us ¹ down into its mouth, while the water flows ¹⁰ over us, striking our face. And we will ¹ be taken down into the dragnet, and we ¹ will not be able to come up from ¹ it because the waters are high ¹ over us, flowing from above ¹⁵ downward, submerging our heart down ¹ in the filthy mud. And we ¹ will not be able to escape from them. ¹ For man-eaters will seize ¹ us and swallow us, rejoicing ²⁰ like a fisherman casting ¹ a hook into the water. For ¹ he casts many kinds of food ¹ into the water because each one ¹ of the fish has his own ²⁵ food. He smells it ¹ and pursues its odor. ¹ But when he eats it, ¹ the hook ¹ hidden within the food ³⁰ seizes him and brings him up by ¹ force out of the deep waters. ¹ No man is able, then, ¹ to catch that fish ¹ down in the deep waters, 30 except for the trap ¹ that the fisherman sets. ¹ By the ruse of food he brought the fish ¹ up on the hook.

In this very ⁵ way we exist in this world, ¹ like fish. The adversary ¹ spies on us, lying in wait ¹ for us like a fisherman, ¹ wishing to seize us, rejoicing ¹⁰ that he might swallow us. For [he places] ¹ many foods before ¹ our eyes, (things) which belong to this ¹ world. He wishes to make us ¹ desire one of them ¹⁵ and to taste only a ¹ little, so that he may seize us ¹ with his hidden poison and bring ¹ us out of freedom ¹ and take us into ²⁰ slavery. For whenever he catches us ¹ with a single food, ¹ it is indeed necessary for <us> to ¹ desire the rest. ¹ Finally, then, such things ²⁵ become the food of death. ¹

Now these are the foods with which ¹ the devil lies in wait for us. ¹ First he ¹ injects a pain into your ³⁰ heart until you have heartache ¹ on account of a small thing of ¹ this life, and he seizes <you> ¹ with his poisons. And ¹ afterwards (he injects) the desire ³⁵ of a tunic so that you will pride yourself 31 in it, and ¹ love of money, pride, ¹ vanity, envy that ¹ rivals another envy, beauty of ⁵ body, fraudulence. ¹ The greatest of all these ¹ are ignorance and ease. ¹

Now all such things ¹ the adversary prepares ¹⁰ beautifully and spreads out ¹ before the body, ¹ wishing to make the mind of the soul ¹ incline her toward one of them ¹ and overwhelm her, like a hook ¹⁵ drawing her by force in ¹ ignorance, deceiving ¹ her until she conceives evil, ¹ and bears fruit of matter, ¹ and conducts herself ²⁰ in uncleanness, pursuing many ¹ desires, ¹ covetousnesses, while ¹ fleshly pleasure draws her in ¹ ignorance.

But the soul — ²⁵ she who has tasted these things — ¹ realized that sweet passions ¹ are transitory. ¹ She had learned about evil: ¹ she went away from them and she entered ³⁰ into a new conduct. ¹ Afterwards she ¹ despises this life, ¹ because it is transitory. And she ¹ looks for those foods that will ³⁵ take her into life, ³² and leaves behind her those deceitful foods. ¹ And she learns about her light, as she ¹ goes about stripping off this ¹ world, while her true garment ⁵ clothes her within, ¹ (and) her bridal clothing ¹ is placed upon her in beauty of ¹ mind, not in pride of flesh. ¹ And she learns about her depth and ¹⁰ runs into her fold, while ¹ her shepherd stands at the door. ¹ In return for all the shame and scorn, then, ¹ that she received in this ¹ world, she receives ¹⁵ ten thousand times the grace and ¹ glory.

She gave the body to ¹ those who had given it to her, and they were ¹ ashamed, while the dealers ¹ in bodies sat down and wept ²⁰ because they were not able to ¹ do any business with ¹ that body, nor did they find ¹ any (other) merchandise except it. ¹ They endured great labors ²⁵ until they had shaped the body of this ¹ soul, wishing to strike ¹ down the invisible soul. ¹ They were therefore ashamed of their ¹ work; they suffered the loss of the one ³⁰ for whom they had endured labors. They did not realize ¹ that she has an ¹ invisible spiritual body, ¹ thinking, "We are her ¹ shepherd who feeds her." ³⁵ But they did not realize that she knows ³³ another way, which is hidden from them. This ¹ her true shepherd ¹ taught her in knowledge. ¹

But these — the ones who are ignorant — ⁵ do not seek after God. ¹ Nor do they inquire about ¹ their dwelling-place, which exists ¹ in rest, but they ¹ go about in bestiality. They ¹⁰ are more wicked than the ¹ pagans, because first of all they ¹ do not inquire about God, for ¹ their hardness of heart draws ¹ them down to make them ¹⁵ their cruelty. ¹ Furthermore, if they find someone else ¹ who asks about his salvation, ¹ their hardness of ¹ heart sets to work upon ²⁰ that man. ¹ And if he does not stop asking, they ¹ kill him by ¹ their cruelty, ¹ thinking that they have done a ²⁵ good thing for themselves.

Indeed ¹ they are sons of the devil! ¹ For even the pagans give ¹ charity, and they know ¹ that God who is in the heavens ³⁰ exists, the Father of the universe, ¹ exalted over their idols, which ¹ they worship. ³⁴ But they have not heard the word, that ¹ they should inquire about his ways. ¹ Thus the senseless man ¹ hears the call, ⁵ but he is ignorant of the place ¹ to which he has been called. And ¹ he did not ask during the preaching, ¹ "Where is the temple ¹ into which I should go and worship ¹⁰ my hope?" ¹ for the pagans know ¹ the way to go to their stone temple, ¹⁵ which will perish, and they worship ¹ their idol, while their hearts ¹ are set on it because it is their hope. ¹ But to this senseless man ¹ the word has been preached, ²⁰ teaching him, "Seek and ¹ inquire about the ways you should go, ¹ since there is nothing else ¹ that is as good as this thing." ¹ The result is that the substance of hardness ²⁵ of heart strikes a blow upon ¹ his mind, along with the force ¹ of ignorance and ¹ the demon of error. ¹ They do not allow his mind ³⁰ to rise up, because he was wearying ¹ himself in seeking that he might learn about his ¹ hope.

On account of his senselessness, then, ¹ he is worse than a pagan, ¹

But the rational soul ³⁵ who (also) wearied herself in seeking – ¹ she learned about God. ¹ She labored with inquiring, enduring ¹ distress in the body, wearing out ⁵ her feet after ¹ the evangelists, ¹ learning about the Inscrutable One. ¹ She found her rising. ¹ She came to rest in him who ¹⁰ is at rest. She reclined ¹ in the bride-chamber. She ate ¹ of the banquet for which ¹ she had hungered. She partook ¹ of the immortal food. ¹⁵ She found what she had sought after. ¹ She received rest from her labors, ¹ while the light that shines forth ¹ upon her does not sink. ¹ To it belongs the glory ²⁰ and the power and the ¹ revelation for ever and ¹ ever. Amen. ¹

Authoritative ¹
Teaching

THE CONCEPT OF OUR GREAT POWER (VI,4)

Introduced by

FRANCIS E. WILLIAMS

Translated by

FREDERIK WISSE

Edited by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

The Concept of Our Great Power is a Christian Gnostic “salvation history.” Beginning with creation, it recounts the workings of God’s justice and mercy in the conflict between good and evil, ending with the final beatitude. Unusually for a gnostic work the tractate is “apocalyptic,” that is, its climax is a dramatic description of the end of the world. Even here, however, it betrays its gnostic character; in gnostic fashion it expects no general resurrection, and contemplates the salvation of nothing material.

“Our great power” is the document’s supreme God. He is transcendent and “above all powers” – including the Old Testament God, the “Father of the flesh.” However, he intervenes in history; it is he who builds the ark and rescues Noah from the flood.

The very first lines of the tractate make it clear that human salvation depends upon knowing our great power. As the title has probably been taken from the first line, it might well be rendered “the perception of our great power,” or even “the knowledge of our great power.”

In the manner typical of apocalyptic, the tractate divides all history into three “aeons.” The first, the “aeon of the flesh,” ends with the flood. In the second, or “psychic” aeon, the revealer appears. He is clearly meant to be the New Testament Christ, though the author avoids that title and is careful not to say explicitly that the revealer is crucified.

The second aeon ends with a war among wicked angelic rulers – the “Archons” – the appearance of an antichristlike figure, and the destruction of the world by fire. Though the fire consumes matter, it purifies souls; together with “the saints,” the purified souls then live forever in the great power’s “indestructible aeon.”

While the tractate’s message is clear in broad outline, its details are often puzzling. Some figures well known from other gnostic theology – “the Mother,” for example – are mentioned but seem to play no part in the story. Incidents sometimes repeat themselves, or come at unexpected places in the narrative – thus the fire can be understood to destroy the universe twice. The transitions between episodes are often abrupt; so, likewise, are the changes in the person of pronouns and the person and tense of verbs. Of a few passages it is even difficult to make connected sense.

Some of the problems can be solved simply by an attentive reading of the tractate, and a recent interpretation has presented the work as a self-consistent whole. Other investigators, however, may still feel that the document has undergone more than one redaction, or at least been extensively glossed. In particular, the question whether an original Jewish apocalypse underlies certain portions of the work seems worthy of investigation.

Even the language of the tractate, a mixture of Sahidic and Subakhmimic dialects of Coptic, calls for explanation. It may simply be that a Sahidic-speaking scribe attempted to translate a Subakhmimic writing into his own dialect. Some, however, explain the language as "proto-Sahidic," a stage of Coptic earlier than that of the Sahidic New Testament.

Questions of the tractate's date and provenance are bound up with those of its language and presumed literary history. If the language is felt to be proto-Sahidic, the document will be dated rather early. There is, however, an apparent reference to the Anhomoean heresy; one who sees this as stemming from the original author, rather than a glossator, will wish to place the document in the fourth century C.E.

Similar uncertainties make it difficult to determine the document's provenance. If the statement that the Word "appeared in the east at the first" is the author's, the tractate might come from Asia Minor. If the words in question are a gloss, there is less reason to hold this view.

THE CONCEPT OF OUR GREAT POWER

VI 36, 1-48, 15

The Perception of Understanding ¹

The Concept (or: Thought) of the Great Power ¹

He who will know our great ¹ Power will become invisible, ⁵ and fire ¹ will not be able to consume him. But it (i.e. the fire) will ¹ purge and destroy ¹ all your (pl.) possessions. For ¹ everyone in whom my form ¹⁰ will appear will be ¹ saved, from (the age of) seven days ¹ up to one hundred and twenty years. ¹ (Those) whom I constrained to ¹ gather all that is fallen, — and ¹⁵ the writings of our great Power, in order that ¹ he (i.e. the Power) may inscribe your (sg.) name ¹ in our great light — and ¹ their thoughts ¹ and their works may be ended, ²⁰ that they may be purged, ¹ and be scattered, and be ¹ destroyed, and be gathered in ¹ the place which no one ¹ in it sees. But ²⁵ you (pl.) will see me and ¹ you will prepare your dwelling places ¹ in our great Power.

Know ¹ how what has departed ¹ came to be, in order that you ³⁰ may know how to discern ¹ what lives to become: ¹ of what appearance ¹ that aeon is, or 37 what kind it is, or ¹ how it [will] come to be. [Why] ¹ do you not ask what [kind] ¹ you will become, ⁵ (or) rather how you came to be? ¹

Discern what size ¹ the water is, that it is immeasurable ¹ (and) incomprehensible, both its beginning ¹ and its end. It supports the earth; it ¹⁰ blows in the air where ¹ the gods and the angels are. ¹ But in him who is exalted ¹ above all these there is the fear ¹ and the light, and ¹⁵ in him are my writings revealed. ¹ I have given them as a service ¹ to the creation of the physical things, for ¹ it is not possible for anyone to stand ¹ without that One, nor ²⁰ is it possible for the aeon to live ¹ without him. It is he who possesses ¹ what is in him by discerning ¹ (it) in purity.

Then ¹ behold the Spirit and know ²⁵ where he is. He gave himself to ¹ men that they may receive life ¹ from him every day, ¹ since he has his life within ¹ him; he gives to them all.

Then ³⁰ the darkness together with Hades ¹ took the fire. And ¹ he (i.e. the darkness) will release from himself what is mine. ¹ His eyes were not able ¹ to endure my light. ³⁵ After the spirits and the waters moved, 38 the remainder came into being: ¹ the whole aeon of the creation ¹ and their <powers>. ¹ [The] fire came forth from ⁵ them and the Power came in ¹ the midst of the powers. And the ¹ powers desired to see my ¹ image. And the soul became ¹ its (i.e. my image's) replica.

This is ¹⁰ the work that came into being. See ¹ what it is like, that ¹ before it comes into being it does not see, ¹ because the aeon ¹ of the flesh came to be in the great bodies. ¹⁵ And there were apportioned to them ¹ long days in the creation. ¹ For when they had polluted themselves ¹ and had entered into the flesh, ¹ the father of the flesh, ²⁰ the water, avenged ¹ himself. For when ¹ he had found that Noah was pious ¹ (and) worthy ¹ — and it is the father of the flesh who holds ²⁵ the angels in subjection. ¹ And he (i.e. Noah) preached piety ¹ for one hundred and twenty ¹ years. And no one ¹ listened to him. And he ³⁰ made a wooden ark, ¹ and whom he had found entered ¹ it. And the flood ¹ took place. 39 And thus Noah was saved ¹ with his sons. For if [indeed] ¹ <the> ark had not been meant for man ¹ to enter, then the water ⁵ of the flood would ¹ not have come. In this way he intended ¹ (and) planned to save <the> gods ¹ and the angels, and the powers, ¹ the greatness of all of these, ¹⁰ and the <nourishment> and the way of life. ¹ And he moves them from ¹ the aeon (and) nourishes them ¹ in the permanent places. And the judgment ¹ of the flesh was unleashed. ¹⁵ Only the work of the Power stood up. ¹

Next the psychic ¹ aeon. It is a small one, ¹ which is mixed with bodies, ¹ by begetting in the souls (and) defiling (them). ²⁰ For the first defilement of the creation ¹ found strength. And it begot ¹ every work: many works ¹ of wrath, anger, ¹ envy, malice, hatred, ²⁵ slander, contempt ¹ and war, lying and ¹ evil counsels, sorrows ¹ and pleasures, ¹ basenesses and defilements, ³⁰ falsehoods and diseases, ¹ evil judgments ¹ that they decree according to their ¹ desires.

Yet you are sleeping, 40 dreaming dreams. Wake up ¹ and return, ¹ taste and eat ¹ the true food! Hand out the word ⁵ and the water of life! Cease ¹ from the evil lusts and ¹ desires and (the teachings of) the Anomoeans, ¹ evil heresies ¹ that have no basis.

And ¹⁰ the mother of the fire was impotent. ¹ She brought the fire upon the soul and ¹ the earth, and she burned all <the> dwellings ¹ that are in it (fem.). ¹ And its (fem.) shepherd perished. ¹⁵ Moreover, when she does not find (anything else) to burn, ¹ she will destroy herself. And ¹ it (the fire?) will become incorporeal, ¹ without body, and it will burn matter, ¹ until it has cleansed ²⁰ everything, — and all wickedness. ¹ For when it does not find ¹ anything else to burn, it will turn ¹ against itself until it has destroyed itself. ¹

Then, in this aeon, which ²⁵ is the psychic one, ¹ the man will come into being ¹ who knows the great Power. ¹ He will receive (me) and he will know me. ¹ He will drink from the milk of ³⁰ the mother, in fact. He will speak ¹ in parables; he will proclaim ¹ the aeon that is to come, 41 just as he spoke in ¹ the first aeon of the flesh ¹ as Noah. Now concerning ¹ his words, which he uttered, ⁵ he spoke in all of them, ¹ in seventy-two tongues. ¹ And he opened the gates ¹ of the heavens with his words. ¹ And he put to shame the ¹⁰ ruler of Hades; he raised ¹ the dead, and ¹ he destroyed his dominion. ¹

Then a great disturbance ¹ took place. ¹⁵ The archons raised up their wrath against him. ¹ They wanted to hand him over ¹ to the ruler of Hades. ¹ Then they recognized one of ¹ his followers. ²⁰ A fire took hold of his (i.e. Judas') ¹ soul. He handed ¹ him over, since no one knew ¹ him. They acted and seized ¹ him. They brought ²⁵ judgment upon themselves. ¹ And they delivered him up ¹ to the ruler ¹ of Hades. And they handed ¹ him over to Sasabek ³⁰ for nine bronze coins. He prepared ¹ himself to go down and ¹ put them to shame. Then ¹ the ruler of Hades took him. 42 And he found that the nature of his flesh ¹ could not be seized, ¹ in order to show it to the archons. ¹ But he was saying: "Who is ⁵ this? What is it? His word has ¹ abolished the law of the aeon. ¹ He is from the Logos of the power ¹ of life." And he was victorious over the command ¹ of the archons, and ¹⁰ they were not able by their work ¹ to rule over him.

The archons ¹ searched after that which had come to pass. ¹ They did not know that this is the sign ¹ of their dissolution, and (that) ¹⁵ it is the change of the aeon. The sun ¹ set during the day; that day ¹ became dark. The evil spirits were ¹ troubled. And after these things he will appear ¹ ascending. ²⁰ And ¹ the sign of the aeon that is to come will appear. ¹ And the aeons will dissolve, ¹

And those who would ¹ know these things ²⁵ that were discussed with them, will become ¹ blessed. And they ¹ will reveal them, and ¹ they will become blessed, since ¹ they will come to know the truth. ³⁰ For you (pl.) have found rest in ¹ the heavens.

Then many ¹ will follow him, and they will ¹ labor in their birth places. 43 They will go about; they will write down ¹ his words according to <their> desire. ¹

Behold, these aeons have passed. ¹ What size ⁵ is the water of ¹ the aeon that has ¹ dissolved? ¹ What dimensions do aeons have? How ¹ will men prepare themselves, ¹⁰ and how will they be established, and how will they become ¹ indestructible aeons?

But at first, ¹ after his preaching ¹ — it is he who proclaims the second aeon, ¹ and the first. ¹⁵ And the first aeon ¹ perished in the course of time. ¹ He made the first aeon, going about ¹ in it until it perished ¹ while preaching one hundred and twenty ²⁰ years in number. ¹ This is the perfect number ¹ that is highly exalted. ¹ He made the border of the West ¹ desolate, and he ²⁵ destroyed the East.

Then ¹ your (sg.) seed and those who wish ¹ to follow our ¹ great Logos and his proclamation — . ¹ Then the wrath of the archons ³⁰ burned. They were ashamed ¹ of their dissolution. ¹ And they fumed and were angry ¹ at the life. The cities were <overturned>; ¹ the mountains dissolve. ³⁵ The archon came, with the 44 archons of the western regions, to ¹ the East, i.e., that place ¹ where the Logos appeared ¹ at first. Then ⁵ the earth trembled, and the cities ¹ were troubled. Moreover, the birds ¹ ate and were filled ¹ with their dead. The earth ¹ mourned together with the inhabited world; ¹⁰ they became desolate.

Then when the ¹ times were completed, then wickedness ¹ arose mightily even until the final ¹ end of the Logos. Then ¹ the archon of the western regions arose, ¹⁵ and from the East ¹ he will perform a work, and he will instruct ¹ men in his wickedness. ¹ And he wants to nullify ¹ all teaching, the words of true wisdom, ²⁰ while loving the lying wisdom. For ¹ he attacked the old, wishing ¹ to introduce wickedness ¹ and to put on ¹ dignity. He was incapable, ²⁵ because the defilement ¹ <of> his garments is great. Then he ¹ became angry. He appeared and desired ¹ to go up and to pass up ¹ to that place.

Then ³⁰ the appointed time came and drew near. And ¹ he changed the commands. Then ¹ the time came until ¹ the child had grown up. ¹ When he had come to his maturity, 45 then the archons sent ¹ the imitator to ¹ that man in order that they might know ¹ our great Power. And ⁵ they were expecting from ¹ him that he would perform for them a ¹ sign. And he bore ¹ great signs. And he ¹ reigned over the whole earth and ¹⁰ <over> all those who are under heaven. ¹ He placed his throne upon the end ¹ of the earth, for "I shall ¹ <make> you (sg.) god of the world." ¹ He will perform signs ¹⁵ and wonders. Then they ¹ will turn from me, and they will go astray. ¹

Then those men ¹ who will follow after him (i.e. the imitator) ¹ will introduce circumcision. ²⁰ And he will pronounce judgment upon those who are from the ¹ uncircumcision, who are ¹ the (true) people. For in fact he sent many ¹ preachers beforehand, who preached ¹ on his behalf.

When ²⁵ he has completed the established ¹ time of the kingdom ¹ of the earth, then ¹ the cleansing of the souls ¹ will come, since ³⁰ wickedness is stronger than you (pl.). ¹ All the powers of the sea will tremble ¹ and dry up. And the firmament ¹ will not pour down dew. ¹ The springs will ³⁵ cease. The rivers will not flow 46 down to their springs. And ¹ the waters of the springs of ¹ the earth will cease. Then the depths ¹ will be laid bare and they will open. The stars ⁵ will grow in size, and the sun will cease. ¹

And I shall withdraw with ¹ everyone who will know me. ¹ And they will enter into the ¹ immeasurable light, (where) there is ¹⁰ no one of the flesh nor ¹ the wantonness of the first ¹ to seize them. They will be unhampered ¹ (and) holy, since nothing ¹ drags them down. I ¹⁵ myself protect them, ¹ since they have ¹ holy garments, which ¹ the fire cannot touch, ¹ nor darkness nor ²⁰ wind nor a moment, so as ¹ to cause one to shut the eyes.

Then ¹ he will come to destroy all of them. ¹ And they will be chastised ¹ until they become pure. ²⁵ Moreover their period, which was ¹ given to them to have power, which ¹ was apportioned to them, (is) fourteen ¹ hundred and sixty years. ¹ When the fire has ³⁰ consumed them all, and when ¹ it does not find anything else to burn, ¹ then it will perish by its own hand. ¹ Then the [...] will be completed 47 [...] ¹ the [second] power [...] ¹ the mercy will come [...] ¹ through wisdom [...] ⁵ Then the firmaments [will fall] ¹ down into the depth. Then [the] ¹ sons of matter will perish; they ¹ will not be, henceforth. ¹

Then the souls will appear, ¹⁰ who are holy through the ¹ light of the Power, who is exalted ¹ above all powers, the immeasurable, ¹ the universal one, I and ¹ all those who will know me. ¹⁵ And they will be in the aeon ¹ of beauty of ¹ the aeon of judgment, since they are ready ¹ in wisdom, having given glory ¹ to him who is in the ²⁰ incomprehensible unity; and they ¹ see him because of his will, ¹ which is in them. And ¹ they all have become as reflections ¹ in his light. They ²⁵ all have shone, and they have found rest ¹ in his rest. ¹

And he will release the souls that ¹ are being punished, ¹ and they will come to be ³⁰ in purity. And they will ¹ see the saints and ¹ cry out to them, ¹ "Have mercy on us, O Power who art above ¹ all powers." For 48 [...] and in the tree ¹ [of] iniquity that exists ¹ [...] to him their eyes. ¹ [And they] do not seek him ⁵ because they do not seek us ¹ nor do they believe us, ¹ but they acted according to the creation of ¹ the archons and its other rulers. ¹ But we have acted according to our ¹⁰ birth of the flesh, in the creation ¹ of the archons, which gives law. ¹ We also have come to be ¹ in the unchangeable aeon. ¹

The Concept of Our Great ¹⁵
Power

PLATO, REPUBLIC 588A-589B (VI,5)

Introduced by

HOWARD M. JACKSON

Translated by

JAMES BRASHLER

Edited by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

Tractate VI,5 is a Coptic version of part (588A-589B, not, as formerly, 588B) of Socrates' parable in the ninth book of Plato's Republic, in which the human soul is likened to a trichotomous hybrid of different forces: a hybrid composed of a many-headed beast, representing the baser passions; a lion, representing the nobler passion courage; and man, representing the outermost element, reason. The fact of the excerption of the parable as an independent unit, perhaps originally in some philosophical anthology, is made understandable by its great popularity among late antique authors, especially Neoplatonists, who frequently cite or allude to it. What has proved more difficult to account for is the extent to which the Coptic version deviates from the Greek original. So much does it deviate from what Plato wrote that the tractate's first editors (1971) did not recognize it for what it is. The deviation has been accounted for in two ways. In the first, it is viewed as the product of inept translation (so Schenke, who first recognized the tractate's Platonic identity in 1974, and Brashler). In the second, it is viewed as the product of gnosticizing redaction of the Greek original, a redacted version which was then translated into Coptic (so Orlandi). These explanations are obviously not mutually exclusive, and the truth may therefore be a mixture of both (so Jackson and Painchaud). An additional element is doubtless also the incapability of the Coptic language to render the complexities and niceties of Plato's style. The question who the gnosticizing redactor may have been is not readily answerable, since many late antique groups with world-denying and ascetic inclinations revered Plato and shared technical terminology. It may have been Hermetists, especially as Hermetic tractates (VI,6,7,8) follow our tractate, in which case VI,5-8 would have come to the Coptic translator as a group. But gnostic tractates precede VI,5, and the repeated allusion, for example, to "images" and the references in 50,24-33 to the weakness of man (or the [primal] Man) with regard to the images of the evil beast and the lion and his initial fall into their clutches, together with the directive to him to cast down and trample the images, suggests a specifically gnostic setting, perhaps even more explicitly a Manichaean one.

PLATO, REPUBLIC 588A-589B

VI 48, 16-51, 23

"Since we have come ¹ to this point in a discussion, let us again take up ¹ the first things that were said ¹ to us. And we will find ²⁰ that he says, 'Good is ¹ he who has been done injustice completely. ¹ He is glorified justly.' ¹ Is not this how he was ¹ reproached?"

"This is certainly the ²⁵ fitting way!"

And I said, ¹ "Now then, we have spoken because ¹ he said that he who does injustice ¹ and he who does justice ¹ each has ³⁰ a force."

"How then?" ¹

"He said, 'An image that has no ¹ likeness is the rationality of the soul,' ¹ so that he who said these things will 49 understand. He [...] ³ or not? We [...] ¹ is for me. But all [...] ⁵ who told them [...] ¹ ruler, these now have become natural creatures — even ¹ Chimaera and Cerberus ¹ and all the rest that ¹⁰ were mentioned. They all ¹ came down and they cast ¹ off forms and ¹ images. And they all became ¹ a single image. It was ¹⁵ said, 'Work now!' ¹ Certainly it is a ¹ single image that became ¹ the image of a complex beast ¹ with many heads. ²⁰ Some days indeed it is like ¹ the image of a wild beast. ¹ Then it is able to cast ¹ off the first image. And ¹ all these hard ²⁵ and difficult forms ¹ emanate from it with ¹ effort, since these are ¹ formed now ¹ with arrogance. And also ³⁰ all the rest that are ¹ like them are formed ¹ now through the word. For now ¹ it is a single image. ¹ For the image of the lion is one thing ³⁵ and the image of the man is another. 50 [...] single [...] is the [...] of ¹ [...] join. And this ¹ [...] much more complex ¹ [than the first]. And the second ⁵ [is small]."

"It has been formed." ¹

"Now then, join them to ¹ each other and make them a single ¹ one — for they are three — so ¹ that they grow together ¹⁰ and all are in a ¹ single image outside of the image ¹ of the man just like him ¹ who is unable to see ¹ the things inside him. But what ¹⁵ is outside only is what he sees. ¹ And it is apparent ¹ what creature his image is in and ¹ that he was formed ¹ in a human image.

"And I spoke ²⁰ to him who said that there is profit ¹ in the doing of injustice for the man. ¹ He who does injustice truly ¹ does not profit nor ¹ does he benefit. But ²⁵ what is profitable for him is this: that he ¹ cast down every image of the ¹ evil beast and trample ¹ them along with the images of the lion. ¹ But the man is in weakness ³⁰ in this regard. And all the things that he ¹ does a e weak. ¹ As a result he is drawn to ¹ the place where he spends time with them. 51 [...]. And he [...] ³ to him in [...]. ¹ But he brings about [...] ⁵ enmity [...]. ¹ And with strife they ¹ devour each other among ¹ themselves. Yes, all these things ¹ he said to everyone who ¹⁰ praises the doing of injustice.” ¹

“Then is it not ¹ profitable for him who speaks ¹ justly?”

“And if he ¹ does these things and speaks in them, ¹⁵ within the man they ¹ take hold firmly. ¹ Therefore especially he strives ¹ to take care of them and he nourishes ¹ them just like the ²⁰ farmer nourishes his ¹ produce daily. And ¹ the wild beasts ¹ keep it from growing.”

THE DISCOURSE ON THE EIGHTH AND NINTH (VI,6)

Introduced by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

Translated by

JAMES BRASHLER, PETER A. DIRKSE, and DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

Although its title is lost, this tractate has been identified as Hermetic from the use of the names Trismegistus and Hermes and close similarities with previously known Hermetic tractates. It has been named from its contents, using a phrase found in the tractate itself (53,24-26). It describes in dialogue form the process by which a spiritual guide (mystagogue) leads an initiate to a mystical experience.

The eighth and the ninth indicate the eighth and ninth spheres surrounding the earth. In ancient times it was thought that the first seven spheres were the realms of the sun, moon, and planets, the lower powers whose control over human life was not necessarily benevolent. The eighth and ninth spheres thus designate the beginning of the divine realm, the levels beyond the control of the lower powers. At death the soul would journey through the seven spheres, and after successful passage it would reach the eighth and the ninth, the levels at which the soul could experience true bliss. Furthermore, the eighth and the ninth spheres can also indicate advanced stages of spiritual development. The tractate possibly assumes yet another sphere, a higher, tenth sphere, where God himself dwells, though this is not entirely clear.

The tractate begins with an introductory discussion (52,2-53,21) in which the initiate secures the approval of the mystagogue to request the experience of the eighth and the ninth. He then makes the formal request (53,24-27). The process leading to the experience begins with a period of instruction, which culminates in a carefully constructed prayer, perhaps spoken by both participants (53,28-57,25). At the heart of the prayer is a request for the visionary experience (57,3-9). Following an embrace between initiate and mystagogue, the mystagogue has his vision (57,28-58,22). Then, directed by the mystagogue, the initiate enters first the eighth, and then the ninth (58,22-60,1).

Following that, the mystagogue exhorts the initiate to silence and gives instruction about continuing in the way of the mystical experience (60,1-10). The tractate concludes with a hymn of thanks by the initiate, and instructions for writing and preserving the account of the experience (60,10-63,32).

Assumed in the tractate are earlier levels of spiritual attainment. They are not described in Disc. 8-9 but it is clear that two things need to have occurred in order to be ready for the experience of the eighth and ninth: the attainment of purity of life according to the standard of divine law (56,27-57,1) and the banishing of ignorance by mastering the knowledge found in certain books (54,6-18).

The attainment of the final two stages for the initiate requires that the mystagogue have the experience first and thereby become the embodiment of universal mind, which is the ninth (58,1-22). The initiate then enters the eighth by recognizing the presence of universal mind, and responds to this recognition by joining the chorus of the eighth and singing a silent hymn to universal mind. He reaches the ninth when he experiences his own unity with universal mind and receives the confirmatory vision in which the chorus of the eighth sings to him (59,24-60,1).

This and other Hermetic tractates may well have been used in the context of small groups devoted to secret knowledge and mystical experience, in which those who were more advanced would teach and direct neophytes, and in which certain cultic acts were engaged in (prayers and hymns are found throughout the Hermetic corpus). The tractates would have served as the basis for discussion and as texts for individual meditation.

Evidence that Disc. 8-9 was composed in Egypt is found in references to the city of Diospolis, as well as to hieroglyphic characters and gods with animal faces – all found in the section beginning 61,18. The designation of the mystagogue as Hermes and Trismegistus also suggests Egypt. A second-century C.E. date for the composition is possible, because of affinities with the thought of the Middle Platonist Albinus.

THE DISCOURSE ON THE EIGHTH AND NINTH

VI 52, 1-63, 32

[...] ¹

“[My father], yesterday you promised [me ¹ that you would bring] my mind into ¹ [the] eighth and ⁵ afterwards you would bring me into the ¹ ninth. You said that this is the ¹ order of the tradition.”

“My ¹ son ¹, indeed this is the order. ¹ But the promise was according to ¹⁰ human nature. For I told you ¹ when I initiated the promise, I ¹ said, ‘If you hold in mind ¹ each one of the steps.’ ¹ After I had received the spirit through the power, ¹⁵ I set forth the action for you. ¹ Indeed the understanding dwells ¹ in you; in me (it is) as though ¹ the power were pregnant. ¹ For when I conceived from the fountain ²⁰ that flowed to me, I gave birth.” ¹

“My father, you have spoken every word ¹ well to me. But I am amazed ¹ at this statement that you have just ¹ made. For you said, ‘The ²⁵ power that is in me – .’” ¹

He said, “I gave birth to it (the power), as ¹ children are born.”

“Then, my ¹ father, I have many brothers, if ¹ I am to be numbered among the offspring.” ³⁰

“Right, my son! This ¹ good thing is numbered by 53 [...]. ⁴ And

[...] ¹ at all times. ¹ Therefore, my son, ¹ it is necessary for you to ¹ recognize your brothers and ¹ to honor them rightly and ¹⁰ properly, because they ¹ come from the same father. ¹ For each generation I have ¹ called. I have named ¹ it, because they were offspring ¹⁵ like these sons."

"Then, ¹ my father, do they have ¹ (a) day?"

"My son, ¹ they are spiritual ones. For ¹ they exist as forces that grow ²⁰ other souls. Therefore I say ¹ that they are immortal." ¹ "

"Your word is true; it has no ¹ refutation from now on. ¹ My father, begin the ²⁵ discourse on the eighth and ¹ the ninth, and include me also ¹ with my brothers."

"Let us pray, ¹ my son, to the father of the ¹ universe, with your brothers who are my ³⁰ sons, that he may give ¹ the spirit of eloquence."

"How ¹ do they pray, my father, ¹ when joined with the generations? ¹ I want to obey, my father."

54 [...] ³ "But it is [not ...]. ¹ Nor [is it] a [...]. ⁵ But he is satisfied [with] it (fem.). ¹ [...] it (masc.). And it is right ¹ [for you] to remember the progress ¹ that came to you as ¹ wisdom in the books. ¹⁰ My son, compare yourself to the ¹ early years of life. As children (do), ¹ you have posed senseless, ¹ unintelligent questions."

"My ¹ father, the progress that has come ¹⁵ to me now and the foreknowledge, ¹ according to the books, that has come to me, ¹ exceeding the deficiency — these things are ¹ foremost in me."

"My son, ¹ when you understand the ²⁰ truth of your statement, you will ¹ find your brothers, who are my sons, ¹ praying with you." ¹ "

"My father, I understand nothing else ¹ except the beauty that ²⁵ came to me in the books."

"This is ¹ what you call the beauty ¹ of the soul, the edification that ¹ came to you in stages. ¹ May the understanding come to you, ³⁰ and you will teach."

"I have understood, ¹ my father, each one of ¹ the books. And especially the (fem.) 55 [...] which is in [...]."¹ "

"My son, [...] ⁴ in praises from ¹ [those who] extolled [them]."¹ "

"My father, from you ¹ I will receive the [power] of the ¹ discourse [that you will] give. As it was told ¹ to both (of us), let us pray, ¹⁰ my father."

"My son, ¹ what is fitting is to pray ¹ to God with all our mind ¹ and all our heart and our ¹ soul, and to ask ¹⁵ him that the gift of the ¹ eighth extend to ¹ us, and that each one ¹ receive from him what ¹ is his.

Your part, then, is ²⁰ to understand; my own is ¹ to be able to deliver the discourse ¹ from the fountain that flows to me.” ¹

“Let us pray, my father: ¹ I call upon you, who ²⁵ rules over the kingdom ¹ of power, whose word ¹ comes as (a) birth of light. ¹ And his words are immortal. ¹ They are eternal and ³⁰ unchanging. He is the one whose will ¹ begets life for the forms in ¹ every place. His nature gives form ¹ to substance. By him 56 the souls of [the eighth ¹ and] the angels are moved [...] ⁴ those that exist. His providence ¹ extends to everyone [...] ¹ begets everyone. He is the one who ¹ [...] the aeon among spirits. ¹ He created everything. He who is ¹ self-contained cares ¹⁰ for everything. He is perfect, the ¹ invisible God to whom one speaks ¹ in silence — his ¹ image is moved when it is directed, ¹ and it governs — the ¹⁵ one mighty power, who is exalted ¹ above majesty, who is better than the ¹ honored (ones), Zoxathazo a oō ¹ ee oōō ēēē oōōō ¹ ēē oōōō-ōō ooooo ²⁰ oōōōōō uuuuuu ¹ oōōōōōōōōōōōō ¹ oōō Zozazoth.

“Lord, ¹ grant us a wisdom from ¹ your power that reaches ²⁵ us, so that we may describe to ourselves the ¹ vision of the eighth and the ninth. ¹ We have already advanced to the seventh, ¹ since we are pious and ¹ walk in your law. ³⁰ And your will ¹ we fulfill ¹ always. For we have walked in 57 [your way, and we have] renounced ¹ [...], so that ¹ your [vision] may come. Lord, grant ¹ us the truth in the image. ⁵ Allow us through the spirit to ¹ see the form of the image ¹ that has no deficiency, ¹ and receive the reflection of the pleroma ¹ from us through our praise. ¹⁰

“And acknowledge the spirit ¹ that is in us. For from ¹ you the universe received soul. ¹ For from you, the unbegotten one, ¹ the begotten one came into being. ¹⁵ The birth of the self-begotten one ¹ is through you, ¹ the birth of all begotten things ¹ that exist. Receive ¹ from us these spiritual sacrifices, ²⁰ which we send ¹ to you with all our heart ¹ and our soul and all ¹ our strength. Save that which ¹ is in us and grant us ²⁵ the immortal wisdom.” ¹

“Let us embrace ¹ each other affectionately, my son. ¹ Rejoice over this! For already ¹ from them the power, ³⁰ which is light, is coming to us. ¹ For I see! I see ¹ indescribable depths. ¹ How shall I tell you, 58 my son? [...] ¹ from the (fem.) [...] ¹ the places. How [shall I describe] ¹ the universe? I [am Mind and] ⁵ I see another Mind, the one that [moves] the ¹ soul! I see the one that moves me ¹ from pure forgetfulness. You give ¹ me power! I see myself! I want ¹ to speak! Fear restrains ¹⁰ me. I have found the ¹ beginning of the power that is above ¹ all powers, the one that has no ¹ beginning. I see a fountain bubbling ¹ with life. I have said, ¹⁵ my son, that I am Mind. ¹ I have seen! Language is not able ¹ to reveal this. For the entire ¹ eighth, my son, and ¹ the souls that are in it, and the ²⁰ angels, sing a hymn in ¹ silence. And I, Mind, ¹ understand.”

“What is the way to sing ¹ a hymn through it (silence)?”

“Have you become such that ¹ you cannot be spoken to?”

“I am silent, ²⁵ my father. I want to ¹ sing a hymn to you while I am silent.”

“Then ¹ sing it, for I am Mind.” ¹

“I understand Mind, Hermes, ¹ who cannot be interpreted, ³⁰ because he keeps within himself. ¹ And I rejoice, my father, because I see ¹ you smiling. And the universe 59 [rejoices]. Therefore there is no ¹ creature that will lack ¹ your life. For you are the ¹ lord of the citizens in ⁵ every place. Your providence protects. ¹ I call you father, aeon ¹ of the aeons, great divine spirit. ¹ And by a spirit he gives ¹ rain upon everyone. What ¹⁰ do you say to me, my ¹ father, Hermes?”

“Concerning these things I ¹ do not say anything, my son. ¹ For it is right before God ¹ that we keep silent about what is hidden.” ¹⁵

“Trismegistus, let not ¹ my soul be deprived of the ¹ great divine vision. For ¹ everything is possible for you as master ¹ of the universe.”

“Return to ²⁰ <praising>, my son, and sing ¹ while you are silent. Ask what ¹ you want in silence.” ¹

When he had finished praising he ¹ shouted, “Father ²⁵ Trismegistus! What shall I say? ¹ We have received this light. And ¹ I myself see this same vision ¹ in you. And ¹ I see the eighth and the souls ³⁰ that are in it and the angels ¹ singing a hymn to the ninth and ¹ its powers. And I see ¹ him who has the ¹ power of them all, creating 60 those <that are> in the spirit.”

“It is advantageous from [now on] ¹ that we keep silence in a reverent posture. ¹ Do not speak about the vision ¹ from now on. It is proper to [sing a hymn] ⁵ to the father until the day to quit (the) body.” ¹

“What you sing, my ¹ father, I too want to sing.” ¹

“I am singing a hymn within myself. ¹ While you rest yourself, be active in praise. ¹⁰ For you have found what you seek.” ¹

“But it is proper, ¹ my father, that I praise because I ¹ am filled in my heart?”

“What is proper ¹ is your praise that you ¹⁵ will sing to God ¹ so that it might be written in this imperishable book.” ¹

“I will offer up ¹ the praise in my heart, as I ¹ pray to the end of the universe and ²⁰ the beginning of the beginning, to the object ¹ of man’s quest, the ¹ immortal discovery, the begetter of ¹ light and truth, the ¹

sower of reason, the love of ²⁵ immortal life. No ¹ hidden word will be able to speak about you, ¹ Lord. Therefore my mind ¹ wants to sing a hymn to you ¹ daily. I am the instrument ³⁰ of your spirit; Mind is your ¹ plectrum. And your counsel ¹ plucks me. I see 61 myself! I have received power from you. ¹ For your love has reached us.” ¹

“Right, my son.”

“Grace! ¹ After these things I give thanks ⁵ by singing a hymn to you. For I have ¹ received life from you, when you made me wise. I ¹ praise you. I call ¹ your name that is hidden within me: ¹⁰ a ò ee ò ēēē òōō iii òōōō ooooo òōō òō uuuuuu òō òōōōōōōō òōōōōōōō¹⁵ òō. You are the one who exists ¹ with the spirit. I sing a hymn ¹ to you reverently.” ¹

“My son, ¹ write this book for the temple at Diospolis ²⁰ in hieroglyphic characters, ¹ entitling it ‘The Eighth ¹ Reveals the Ninth.’” ¹

“I will do it, my <father>, as ¹ you command ²⁵ now.”

“My <son>, ¹ write the language of the book on steles ¹ of turquoise. My son, ¹ it is proper to write this book ¹ on steles of turquoise, ³⁰ in hieroglyphic characters. ¹ For Mind himself has ¹ become overseer 62 of these. Therefore I command ¹ that this teaching be carved ¹ on stone, and that you place it in ¹ my sanctuary. Eight ⁵ guardians guard it with[. . .] ¹ of the Sun. The males ¹ on the right are frog-faced, ¹ and the females ¹ on the left are cat-faced. ¹⁰ And put a square ¹ milk-stone at the base of the ¹ turquoise tablets ¹ and write the name on the ¹ azure stone tablet ¹⁵ in hieroglyphic characters. ¹ My son, you will do this ¹ when I am in Virgo, ¹ and the sun is in the first half of the ¹ day, and fifteen degrees have ²⁰ passed by me.”

“My father, ¹ everything that you say I will ¹ do eagerly.”

“And write ¹ an oath in the book, lest those who ¹ read the book bring ²⁵ the language into ¹ abuse, and not (use it) ¹ to oppose the acts of fate. ¹ Rather, they should submit ¹ to the law of God, ³⁰ without having transgressed at all, ¹ but in purity asking ¹ God for wisdom and ¹ knowledge. And he who 63 will not be begotten at the start by God ¹ comes to be by the general ¹ and guiding discourses. ¹ He will not be able to read the things written ⁵ in this book, although his ¹ conscience is pure within him, since he ¹ does not do anything shameful, ¹ nor does he consent ¹ to it. Rather, by stages ¹⁰ he advances and enters into ¹ the way of immortality. And ¹ thus he enters into the ¹ understanding of the eighth that ¹ reveals the ninth.”

“So ¹⁵ shall I do it, my father.”

“This ¹ is the oath: I make him who will ¹ read this holy book swear by heaven ¹ and earth and fire and ¹ water and seven rulers of substance

²⁰ and the creating spirit in them ¹ and the <unbegotten> God ¹ and the self-begotten one ¹ and him who has been begotten, that he will ¹ guard the things that Hermes has said. ²⁵ And those who keep the oath, ¹ God will be reconciled with them ¹ and everyone whom we have ¹ named. ¹ But wrath will come to each one ³⁰ of those who violate the oath. ¹ This is the perfect one who is, ¹ my son.”

THE PRAYER OF THANKSGIVING (VI,7)

Introduced and translated by

JAMES BRASHLER, PETER A. DIRKSE, and DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

Edited by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

This short, almost perfectly preserved Hermetic prayer expresses in carefully constructed liturgical language the gratitude of one who has received deifying knowledge. Although set off with decorations like those regularly used with titles in the Nag Hammadi codices, the heading, "This is the prayer that they spoke," was originally only an introductory line. Together with the concluding statement, this heading forms a narrative framework for the prayer.

The scribal note, which immediately follows The Prayer of Thanksgiving, shows that the prayer was contributed by the copyist, who had a collection of Hermetic materials. Presumably he thought that the prayer was an appropriate way to conclude the account of the mystical experience described in VI,6. The note suggests that after he had copied the prayer, the copyist was uncertain whether he should have done it, and was seeking in an oblique way to justify his action (rather than being bold, he was in fact restrained!). His action may have been responsible for an unusual crowding of the Coptic text in the remaining pages of the codex. The theory that the scribal note refers to VI,8 was based on the mistaken supposition that the note was written over the erased title of VI,8 after VI,8 was copied (see introduction to VI,8).

Version VI,7 is one of three versions of the Hermetic Prayer of Thanksgiving. The context of the prayer is different in each case. In the Greek text called Papyrus Mimaut, it is part of a long prayer embedded in a magical composition. In the Latin Asclepius, it forms the conclusion of the tractate. And here it is appended to another Hermetic tractate. This suggests that it was originally an independent piece of tradition.

Pr. Thanks. is especially significant for the clear evidence it presents of the existence of Hermetic cultic practices. The prayer itself reflects liturgical usage, as its balanced language attests. Moreover, the concluding statement mentions a ritual embrace or kiss (also found in VI,6 at 57,26-27) after the prayer, and a cultic meal. These references to cultic practices suggest that the primary Sitz im Leben of Pr. Thanks. was a Hermetic community dedicated to the encouragement of the visionary experience alluded to in 64,16-17 and the preservation of the mystical knowledge communicated in that experience. While it is not possible to assign a date to such communities, it is reasonable to assume that they flourished in the second and third centuries C.E. and possibly even earlier.

THE PRAYER OF THANKSGIVING

VI 63, 33-65, 7

This is the prayer that they spoke: ¹ “We give thanks to You! Every soul ³⁵ and heart is lifted up to You, ¹ undisturbed name, 64 honored with the name ¹ ‘God’ and praised ¹ with the name ‘Father,’ ¹ for to everyone and everything ⁵ (comes) the fatherly kindness and ¹ affection and love, ¹ and any teaching there may be that is sweet ¹ and plain, giving ¹ us mind, speech, ¹⁰ (and) knowledge: mind, ¹ so that we may understand You, ¹ speech, so that we may ¹ expound You, knowledge, ¹ so that we may know You. ¹⁵ We rejoice, having been illuminated ¹ by Your knowledge. We rejoice ¹ because You have shown us Yourself. We rejoice ¹ because while we were in (the) body, You have made us ¹ divine through Your knowledge. ²⁰

“The thanksgiving of the man who attains ¹ to You is one thing: that we know ¹ You. We have known You, ¹ intellectual light. ¹ Life of life, we have known You. ²⁵ Womb of every creature, we have ¹ known You. Womb pregnant with ¹ the nature of the Father, we have known ¹ You. Eternal permanence ¹ of the begetting Father, thus have we ³⁰ worshipped Your goodness. ¹ There is one petition that we ask: ¹ we would be ¹ preserved in knowledge. ¹ And there is one protection that we 65 desire: that we not stumble ¹ in this kind of life.” ¹

When they had said these things in the prayer, they ¹ embraced each other and ⁵ they went to eat their ¹ holy food, which has no blood ¹ in it. ¹

SCRIBAL NOTE (VI, 7a)

VI 65, 8-14

I have copied this one discourse of his. ¹ Indeed, very many have come to me. I have not ¹⁰ copied them because I thought that they had come to you (pl.). ¹ Also, I hesitate to copy these for ¹ you because, perhaps they have (already) come to you, and ¹ the matter may burden you. Since ¹ the discourses of that one, which have come to me, are numerous . . .

ASCLEPIUS 21-29 (VI,8)

Introduced and translated by

JAMES BRASHLER, PETER A. DIRKSE, and DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

The Hermetic tractate Asclepius was composed in Greek but exists in complete form only in a Latin translation. It was originally called The Perfect Teaching. VI,8 is a Coptic translation of a large selection from the middle portion of the tractate. It differs from the Latin at many points, but is still recognizably from the same source as the Latin because of the similarity of contents and the way they are ordered. Two Greek passages from the middle section of Asclepius have survived, and VI,8 is stylistically closer to them than to the rather expansive and rhetorical Latin.

VI,8 has no title, either at the beginning or the end, which makes it unique in the codex. It has been suggested that a title might have been erased at the beginning of the tractate and replaced by the scribal note, which is found there, but close examination of the manuscript shows that to be unlikely. Since the scribal note suggests that The Prayer of Thanksgiving (VI,7) is the copyist's insertion, it is possible that VI,8 may originally have been a continuation of VI,6 (Disc. 8-9). In that event, the now lost title of VI,6 could have served for it as well.

The tractate is in the form of a dialogue between an Hermetic initiate, Asclepius (two others, Tat and Amon, are mentioned in 72,30-31), and the mystagogue, Trismegistus (designated as Hermes in other Hermetic tractates). Asclepius as a whole was probably used in an instructional-cultic context (see introduction to VI,6). The contents are arranged in five general areas.

1) 65,15-37. The mystery experience (here undescribed) is likened to sexual intercourse, in that it requires an intimate interaction between two parties in which (according to Trismegistus' view) each receives something from the other.

2) 65,37-68,19. Discussion of the separation between the pious and the impious, with the former being distinguished by having learning and knowledge, and the latter, ignorance. Man needs learning and knowledge to restrain harmful passions and to become good and immortal. Indeed, with learning and knowledge man becomes better than the gods, since then he is both mortal and immortal.

3) 68,20-70,2. Trismegistus argues that men create gods according to human likenesses.

4) 70,3. This marks the beginning of the apocalyptic section. It seems to extend only to 74,6, in contrast to the Latin Asclepius, where it clearly continues through 331,11 (parallel to 74,11). Here are described the woes that will come upon Egypt and the final action of the creator god to end them and bring the universe to birth. This section was probably originally independent. There are a significant number of parallels to Egyptian conceptions, which can be traced back to the Ptolemaic period and before. But parallels are also found to Plato, Stoicism, the Sibylline Oracles, and the New Testament. Some have held that the apocalypse was originally a Jewish writing, while others suggest that it was originally Egyptian because of the greater number and antiquity of these parallels. The two concepts need not be mutually exclusive in view of the large, ancient, and literarily active Jewish community in Egypt.

5) 74,7-78,42. Discussion of the ultimate fate of the individual. The restoration of the nature of the pious ones is founded upon the eternal will of God, which expresses itself in the design of the good universe. The plan of the universe is then described. The "heights of heaven" are controlled by God. Other areas, including the earth, are controlled by other gods. Every person must go to the city in the west (place of the dead?). The soul separates from the body and goes to "the middle of the air" to be judged by the great daimon, who determines reward or punishment.

The Latin Asclepius is one of a group of Hermetic tractates that stands between those Hermetic tractates that are pantheistic, and hence distinctively Hellenistic, and those that are dualistic. The tractates in this group contain a mixture of both emphases. In addition to Asclepius they are Corp. Herm. IX, X, and XII. The excerpt from Asclepius that is VI,8 has both pantheism and dualism. The pantheism is explicitly expressed in 75,10-11 ("He [God] is in every place, and he looks out over every place."). It can also be seen in the conviction that the universe is good (74,33-36) and that the demiurge and the earth goddess are beneficent (75,13-24), as well as in the panegyric on Egypt (70,3-9). The dualism is found in the discussion of the two natures of man (66,9-67,34), but whether this should be attributed to Gnosticism, as some have thought, or is merely an expression of the dualism common in the Graeco-Roman world generally, is not clear.

The pantheism mentioned above, with its positive evaluation of the world, has presented a problem for those who assume that Codex VI, as a collection, had its origin among Gnostics. It has been suggested that perhaps the pantheistic parts were disregarded by the collector, who was interested in the dualism. The pantheistic elements, however, could have been deleted. It seems better to suppose that the codex may not have had its origin among Gnostics. Among its eight tractates, it contains two other Hermetic pieces (tractates 6 and 7), a garbled selection from Plato's Republic (tractate 5), a non-gnostic account of apostolic activity (tractate 1), and a tractate that has no clear indication of gnostic influence (tractate 2). Of the remaining two tractates (3 and 4), the first has been called questionably gnostic, and only the second seems to contain distinctively gnostic ideas. Thus, when the contents of the codex as a whole are considered, one has the impression of a miscellaneous collection of spiritual pieces without any clear ideological tendency running throughout. The one common theme may be the ultimate fate of the individual – the theme with which Asclepius 21-29, and therefore the codex as a whole, ends. There is probably no way to know how the codex found its way into a collection of predominantly gnostic works.

ASCLEPIUS 21-29

VI 65, 15-78, 43

“And if you (sg.) wish to see the reality of ¹ this mystery, then you should see the wonderful representation ¹ of the intercourse ¹ that takes place between ¹ the male and the female. For when ²⁰ the semen reaches the climax, it leaps forth. ¹ In that moment ¹ the female receives the strength ¹ of the male; the male for his part ¹ receives the strength of the female, while ²⁵ the semen does this. ¹

“Therefore the mystery of intercourse ¹ is performed in secret, ¹ in order that the two sexes ¹ might not disgrace themselves in front of many who do not experience ³⁰ that reality. ¹ For each of them (the sexes) contributes its (own part in) begetting. ¹ For if it happens in the presence of those who do not understand the reality, ¹ (it is) laughable ¹ and unbelievable. And, moreover, ³⁵ they are holy mysteries, ¹ of both words and deeds ¹ because not only are they not heard ¹ but also they are not seen.

“Therefore 66 such people (the unbelievers) are blasphemers. ¹ They are atheistic and impious. ¹ But the others are not many; ¹ rather, the pious who are counted are few. ⁵ Therefore ¹ wickedness remains among (the) many, ¹ since learning ¹ concerning the things which are ordained does not exist among them. ¹ For the knowledge of the things which are ordained ¹⁰ is truly the healing of the passions ¹ of the matter. Therefore learning ¹ is something derived from knowledge. ¹

“But if there is ¹ ignorance, and learning ¹⁵ does not exist in the soul of man, ¹ (then) the incurable passions persist in it (the soul). ¹ And additional ¹ evil comes with them (the passions) in the ¹ form of an incurable sore. ²⁰ And the sore constantly gnaws at the soul, ¹ and through it the soul produces worms from ¹ the evil and stinks. But God ¹ is not the cause of ¹ these things, since he sent to men ²⁵ knowledge and learning.” ¹

“Trismegistus, ¹ did he send them to men ¹ alone?”

“Yes, Asclepius, ¹ he sent them to them (men) alone. ³⁰ And it is fitting that we tell ¹ you why to men ¹ alone he granted ¹ knowledge and learning, ¹ the allotment of his good. ³⁵

“And now listen! God ¹ and the Father, even the Lord, created ¹ man subsequent to the gods, ¹ and he took him from 67 the region of matter. [Since] matter ¹ is involved in the creation of [man] ¹ of [...], the passions are ¹ in it. Therefore ⁵ they continually flow over his ¹ body, for this living creature would not have existed ¹ in any other way except that he had taken this ¹ food, since ¹ he is mortal. It is also inevitable ¹⁰ that inopportune desires, ¹ which are harmful, dwell in him. ¹ For the gods, since ¹ they came into being out of a pure matter, ¹ do not need ¹⁵ learning and knowledge. ¹ For the immortality of the gods ¹ is learning and knowledge, ¹ since they came into being out of pure matter. ¹ It (immortality) assumed for them ²⁰ the position of knowledge and learning. ¹ By necessity he (God) ¹ set a boundary for man; he placed him ¹ in learning and knowledge. ¹

“Concerning these things (learning and knowledge), which we have mentioned ²⁵ from the beginning, he perfected them ¹ in order that by means of these things ¹ he might restrain passions and evils, ¹ according to his will. ¹ He brought his (man’s) mortal existence into ³⁰ immortality; he (man) became ¹ good (and) immortal, just as ¹ I have said. For he (God) created (a) two-fold nature ¹ for him: the immortal and ¹ the mortal.

“And it ³⁵ happened this way because of the will 68 of [God] that men ¹ be better than the gods, since ¹ indeed [the] gods are ¹ immortal, but men alone ⁵ are both immortal and mortal. ¹ Therefore man has ¹ become akin to the gods, ¹ and they know the affairs ¹ of each other with certainty. The ¹⁰ gods know the things of ¹ men, and men ¹ know the things of the gods. ¹ And I am speaking about men, Asclepius, ¹ who have attained learning ¹⁵ and knowledge. ¹ But (about) those who are more vain than these, it is not fitting ¹ that we say anything base, ¹ since we are divine and are ¹ introducing holy matters. ²⁰

“Since we have entered ¹ the matter of the communion between the ¹ gods and men, know, ¹ Asclepius, that in which man ¹ can be strong! ²⁵ For just as the Father, the Lord of ¹ the universe, creates gods, ¹ in this very way man too, ¹ this mortal, earthly, living creature, ¹ the one who is not like ³⁰ God, also himself ¹ creates gods. Not only ¹ does he strengthen, but he is also strengthened. ¹ Not only is he god, but ¹ he also creates gods. Are you astonished, ³⁵ Asclepius? Are you yourself ¹ another disbeliever like the many?” 69

“Trismegistus, [I agree with] the words (spoken) ¹ to me. [And] I believe you ¹ as you [speak]. But I have also been astonished ¹ at the discourse about [this]. And I have ⁵ decided that man is blessed, ¹ since he has enjoyed this great power.” ¹

“And that which is greater than all these things, ¹ Asclepius, is worthy of admiration. ¹ Now it is clear to us ¹⁰ concerning the race of the gods, ¹ and we confess it ¹ along with everyone else, that it (the race of the gods) has come into being ¹ out of a pure matter. And ¹ their bodies are heads only. ¹⁵ But that which men create ¹ is the likeness of the gods. They (the gods) are from ¹ the farthest part of the matter, ¹ and it (the object created by men) is from the outer (part) of the being ¹ of men. Not only ²⁰ are they (what men create) heads but (they are) also all the other members ¹ of the body and according to ¹ their likeness. Just as ¹ God has willed that the inner man ¹ be created according to ²⁵ his image, in the very same way ¹ man on earth creates gods ¹ according to his likeness.”

“Trismegistus ¹ you are not talking about idols, are you?” ¹

“Asclepius, you yourself are talking ³⁰ about idols. You see that again you yourself, ¹ Asclepius, are also a ¹ disbeliever of the discourse. You say ¹ about those who have soul and ¹ breadth, that they are idols – these who ³⁵ bring about these great events. ¹ You are saying about these who give prophecies ¹ that they are idols – these who give 70 [men sickness and] healing ¹ that [...] them. ¹

“Or are you ignorant, Asclepius, ¹ that Egypt is (the) image ⁵ of heaven? Moreover, ¹ it is the dwelling place of heaven and all the forces ¹ that are in heaven. If ¹ it is proper for us to speak the truth, our ¹ land is (the) temple of the world. ¹⁰ And it is proper for you not to be ¹ ignorant that a time ¹ will come in it (our land ¹ when) Egyptians will seem ¹ to have served the divinity in ¹⁵ vain, and all their activity ¹ in their religion will ¹ be despised. For all divinity ¹ will leave Egypt and will ¹ flee upward to heaven. And Egypt ²⁰ will be widowed; it will be abandoned by the ¹ gods. For foreigners ¹ will come into Egypt, and they will rule ¹ it. Egypt! Moreover, ¹ Egyptians will be prohibited ²⁵ from worshipping ¹ God. Furthermore, they will come ¹ into the ultimate punishment, especially whoever ¹ among them is found worshipping ¹ (and) honoring God. ³⁰

“And in that day the country ¹ that was more pious than all countries ¹ will become ¹ impious. No longer will it be full ¹ of temples, but it will be full of tombs. ³⁵ Neither will it be full of gods ¹ but (it will be full of) corpses. Egypt! ¹ Egypt will become like the ¹ fables. And your religious objects 71 will be [...] the marvelous things ¹ and [...], ¹ and if your words are ¹ stones and are wonderful. ⁵ And the barbarian will be ¹ better than you, Egyptian, ¹ in his religion, whether ¹ (he is) a Scythian, or the Hindus, or some other ¹ of this sort.

“And what is this that I say ¹⁰ about the Egyptian? For they (the Egyptians) will ¹ not abandon Egypt. For (in) the time ¹ (when) the gods have abandoned the land ¹ of Egypt and have fled upward to ¹ heaven, then all Egyptians ¹⁵ will die. And Egypt will be ¹ made a desert by the gods and the Egyptians. ¹ And as for you, River, there ¹ will be a day when you will flow ¹ with blood more than water. And ²⁰ dead bodies will be ¹ (stacked) higher than the dams. ¹ And he who is dead will not be mourned ¹ as much as he who is alive. Indeed the latter will be ¹ known as an Egyptian ²⁵ on account of his language in ¹ the second period (of time). Asclepius, ¹ why are you weeping? He will seem ¹ like (a) foreigner in regard to ¹ his customs. Divine Egypt ³⁰ will suffer evils greater ¹ than these. Egypt, lover of God, ¹ and the dwelling place of the gods, ¹ school of religion, ¹ will become an example of ³⁵ impioussness.

“And in that day ¹ the world will not be marveled at, 72 [...] and [immortality, ¹ nor] will it be worshipped ¹ [...] since we say that it is ¹ not good [...]. It has become neither ⁵ a single thing nor ¹ a vision. But it is in danger ¹ of becoming a burden ¹ to all men. Therefore, ¹ it will be despised — the beautiful world ¹⁰ of God, ¹ the incomparable work, ¹ the energy that possesses ¹ goodness, the many-formed vision, ¹ the abundance ¹⁵ that does not envy, that is full ¹ of every vision. ¹ Darkness will be preferred to light ¹ and death will be preferred to ¹ life. No one will gaze ²⁰ into heaven. And the pious man ¹ will be counted as insane, ¹ and the impious man will be honored ¹ as wise. The man who is afraid ¹ will be considered as strong. And ²⁵ the good man will be punished ¹ like a criminal. ¹

“And concerning the soul, and the things ¹ of the soul, and the things of immortality, ¹ along with the rest of what I have said ³⁰ to you, Tat, Asclepius, ¹ and Ammon, not only will they ¹ be considered ridiculous, ¹ but they will also be thought of as vanity. ¹ But believe ³⁵ me (when I say) that people of this kind will ¹ be endangered by the ultimate danger ¹ to their soul. And ¹ a new law will be established. 73 [...] ³ they will [...] ⁵ good. [The] wicked angels ¹ will remain among ¹ men, (and) be with them ¹ (and) lead them into wicked things ¹ recklessly, as well as into ¹⁰ atheism, wars, ¹ and plunderings, by teaching them ¹ things contrary to nature.

“In those days ¹ the earth will not be stable, ¹ and men will not sail the sea, ¹⁵ nor will they know the stars in heaven. ¹ Every sacred voice ¹ of the word of God will ¹ be silenced, and the air will be diseased. ¹ Such is the senility of the world: ²⁰ atheism, ¹ dishonor, and the disregard ¹ of noble words.

“And when these things had happened, Asclepius, ¹ then the Lord, the Father and ²⁵ god from the only first (God), god ¹ the creator, when he looked upon ¹ the things that happened, established his design, ¹ which is good, ¹ against the disorder. He took away ³⁰ error, and cut off evil. ¹ Sometimes ¹ he submerged it in a great flood, ¹ at other times he burned it in a ¹ searing fire, and at still other times ³⁵ he crushed it in wars ¹ and plagues, until he brought 74 [...] ⁵ of the work. ¹ And this is the birth of the world. ¹

“The restoration of the ¹ nature of the pious ones who are good ¹ will take place in a ¹⁰ period of time that ¹ never had a beginning. ¹ For the will of God has no ¹ beginning, even as his nature, ¹ which is his will, (has no beginning). ¹⁵ For the nature of God is will. ¹ And his will is the good.” ¹

“Trismegistus, ¹ is purpose, then, will?” ¹

“Yes, Asclepius, since will ²⁰ is (included) in counsel. ¹ For <he> does not will what he has ¹ from deficiency. Since he is ¹ complete in every part, he wills ¹ what he (already) fully has. ²⁵ And he has every good. ¹ And what he wills, he wills. ¹ And he has the good ¹ that he wills. Therefore he has ¹ everything. And God ³⁰ wills what he wills. ¹ And the good world ¹ is an image of the Good One.” ¹

“Trismegistus, ¹ is the world good?”

“Asclepius, ³⁵ it is good, as ¹ I shall teach you. For just as 75 [...] ³ of soul and] life ¹ [...] of the [world ...] ⁵ come [forth] in matter, [those that are good], ¹ the change of the climate, and [the] beauty ¹ and the ripening of the fruits, and ¹ the things similar to all these. Because of this, ¹ God has control over the heights ¹⁰ of heaven. He is in every place and he looks out ¹ over every place. And (in) his place there is neither ¹ heaven nor star. And ¹ he is free from (the) body.

“Now the creator ¹ has control in the place that is ¹⁵ between the earth and heaven. He ¹ is called Zeus, that is, ¹ life. Plutonium Zeus ¹ is lord over the earth ¹ and sea. And he does not possess the nourishment ²⁰ for all mortal living creatures, ¹ for (it is) Kore who bears ¹ the fruit. These forces ¹ always are powerful in the circle ¹ of the earth, but those of others ²⁵ are always from Him-who-is. ¹ completes ¹ the number of the body. ¹⁰ For the number is the union of ¹ the body. Now the body dies ¹ when it is not able to support ¹ the man. And this is death: ¹ the dissolution of the body and the destruction ¹⁵ of the sensation of the body. ¹ And it is not necessary to be afraid ¹ of this, nor because of this, but because of ¹ what is not known ¹ and is disbelieved (one is afraid)."

“And the lords of the earth will withdraw themselves. ¹ And they will establish ¹ themselves in a city that is in ¹ a corner of Egypt and that will be built ³⁰ toward the setting of the sun. ¹ Every man will go into it, ¹ whether they come on the sea ¹ or on the shore.” ¹

“Trismegistus, ³⁵ where will these be settled now?”

“Asclepius, ¹ in the great city that is on the [Libyan] mountain 76 [...] ³ it frightens ... ¹ as a] great [evil, ⁵ in] ignorance of the matter. ¹ For death occurs, [which] is ¹ the dissolution of the labors of the body ¹ and (the dissolution of) the number (of the body), when it (death)

"But what is ²⁰ not known ¹ or is disbelieved!"

"Listen, ¹ Asclepius! There is a great ¹ demon. The great God has ¹ appointed him to be overseer ²⁵ or judge over the souls ¹ of men. And God has placed him ¹ in the middle of the air between the earth ¹ and heaven. Now, when ¹ the soul comes forth from (the) body, it is necessary ³⁰ that it meet this ¹ daimon. Immediately he (the daimon) will surround ¹ this one (masc.), and he will examine him in regard to the character that he has ¹ developed in his life. And if ¹ he finds that he piously performed ³⁵ all of his actions ¹ for which he came into the world, ¹ this (daimon) will allow him ⁷⁷ [...] ¹ turn him [...]. ¹ But [if he sees ¹ ...] in this one [...] he brought ⁵ his life into [evil] deeds, ¹ he grasps him, as he [flees] upward ¹ and throws him down ¹ so that he is suspended between heaven and earth ¹ and is punished with a great punishment. ¹⁰ And he will be ¹ deprived of his hope and ¹ be in great pain.

"And that soul ¹ has been put neither ¹ on the earth nor in heaven. ¹⁵ But it has come into the open sea of the air ¹ of the world, the place where there is a great ¹ fire, and crystal water, ¹ and furrows of fire, ¹ and a great upheaval. The bodies ²⁰ are tormented (in) various (ways). ¹ Sometimes they are cast ¹ upon raging waters; at other times ¹ they are cast down into the fire ¹ in order that it may destroy them. Now, I will not say ²⁵ that this is the death of the soul, ¹ for it has been delivered from evil, ¹ but it is a death sentence. ¹

"Asclepius, it is necessary to believe ¹ these things and to fear them ³⁰ in order that we might not encounter them. For ¹ unbelievers are impious and ¹ commit sin. Afterwards they will be compelled ¹ to believe, ¹ and they will not hear by word of mouth only, ³⁵ but will experience ¹ the reality itself. For they kept believing that they would not endure these things. Not only ⁷⁸ [...]. ¹ First, [Asclepius], ¹ all [those of the earth die ¹ and those who are of the] body [cease ...] ⁵ of evil [...] ¹ with these of this sort. For those who are here ¹ are not like those who are ¹ there. So with the daimons who [...] ¹ men, they despise [...] ¹⁰ there. Thus it is not the same. But ¹ truly the gods who are here ¹ will punish more whoever has hidden it here ¹ every day." ¹

"Trismegistus, what [is the] character of ¹⁵ the iniquity that is there?"

“Now you think, Asclepius, that when one takes ¹ something in a temple, he is impious. ¹ For that kind of a person is a thief and ¹ a bandit. And this matter concerns ²⁰ gods and men. ¹ But do not compare those here with those of the other place. ¹ Now I want to speak ¹ this discourse to you confidentially; ¹ no part of it will be believed. For the souls ²⁵ that are filled with much evil will not come and go ¹ in the air, but they will be put ¹ in the places of the daimons, which ¹ are filled with pain, (and) which are always ¹ filled with blood and slaughter, and their ³⁰ food, which is weeping, mourning, ¹ and groaning.”

“Trismegistus, ¹ who are these (daimons)?”

“Asclepius, they are the ones who ¹ are called stranglers, and ¹ those who roll souls down on ³⁵ the dirt, and those who ¹ scourge them, and those who cast ¹ into the water, and those who cast into the fire, ¹ and those who bring about the pains ¹ and calamities of men. For ⁴⁰ such as these are not from a ¹ divine soul, nor from a ¹ rational soul of man. Rather, ¹ they are from the terrible evil.”

THE PARAPHRASE OF SHEM (VII,1)

Introduced by

MICHEL ROBERGE

Translated by

FREDERIK WISSE

The first of the five tractates contained in Codex VII is entitled The Paraphrase of Shem. For its major part, this is an apocalypse, with the narrative frame describing the initial ascent of the seer, Shem (consistently spelled Sêem), to the top of the creation (1,5-16) and his final return to the earth (41,21-42,11). The actual revelation is provided by Derdekeas, the son of the infinite Light; it consists of a cosmogony and an anthropology (1,16-24,29), followed by a history of salvation which focuses on the account of the Flood (24,29-28,8), the destruction of Sodom (28,8-30,4), the baptism of the Savior and his ascent on the occasion of his crucifixion (30,4-40,31). The revelation concludes with an address to Shem concerning his mission on earth (40,31-41,21). To this apocalypse are added a first eschatological discourse pronounced by Derdekeas (42,11-45,31), a description of Shem's ascent to the planetary spheres at the end of his life (45,31-47,32), a second eschatological discourse of Derdekeas (47,32-48,30) and, to conclude the whole tractate, a final address to Shem (48,30-49,9).

The cosmogonic myth reported here is related to those systems which consider the universe as rooted in three principles. It opens with the description of the three great powers or roots: at the top reigns Light Infinite, called "Majesty," which is Thought filled with hearing and word; located at the bottom is Darkness, a male principle which is "wind in the waters" and possesses the Mind (nous) wrapped with the restless fire. Between these two powers is the Spirit, a quiet and humble light. The harmony which prevails at the beginning derives from the fact that each of those roots reigns in itself without mixing with the other two. It is important to note that the text makes no allusion to any previous action taken by Darkness to seize the Mind, nor does it mention a fall of the Mind. However, the events are essentially triggered by the will of the Majesty in an effort to save the Mind.

Suddenly Darkness stirs and the Spirit discovers the existence of the bad root. By the will of the Great Light the waters separate and Darkness comes up with his eye, the Mind. The Spirit reveals himself to Darkness and by doing so loses a part of his light to the benefit of the Mind.

The exalted Light then reveals himself through his son, Derdekeas. He appears in the likeness of the Spirit, thus initiating the salvation of the Mind and the ascent of the Spirit's light. In order to deceive Darkness, the Savior provokes the creation of the universe from water, part of which transforms into a giant Womb (also called "Nature"). The restless fire goes to the Womb. Fooled by the fire, Darkness, on seeing the Womb, becomes unchaste, has intercourse with the Womb and ejaculates the Mind. Nature is then divided into four "clouds" or spheres, which are called Hymen, Chorion, Power and Water. On entering the Womb, the Mind collides with the Unbegotten Spirit and the "burden of the Mind" causes "astonishment" in the Spirit. This power of Astonishment diverts the burden of Mind to the effect that, clothed with the light of the Spirit, he takes resort to the cloud of Power (also called "the Middle"). The Astonishment, however, sticks to the cloud of Hymen.

The Spirit beseeches the infinite Light to have mercy on his own light. The Savior appears this time as a whirlwind to blow up the clouds: they divide, and the Mind takes shape. Derdekeas puts on his universal garment of light and prompts the ascent of the light from the cloud of Water. When the Spirit gives thanks to the infinite Light, his Astonishment produces a great power, Thought, the principle of the race of Shem, the pneumatics.

Now the Savior deposits his universal garment and puts on his trimorphic garment in order to bring to perfection the light in the three clouds of Hymen, Silence (Chorion), and the Middle. The light retained in the Middle is the part of light which was detached from Astonishment and is united with Mind. After the Flood, it is called "Faith."

The Savior descends to the cloud of the Middle, puts on a garment of fire and prostitutes himself with Nature. In its orgasm, the Womb casts off Mind in the form of a fish and gives birth to all sorts of beasts. Derdekeas puts on the garment of the Beast and prompts the Womb to produce heaven and earth and all kinds of seed. He also makes her give birth to female entities, the winds, and to male entities, the demons. The latter mate with the winds and thereby cast off the power they have, which is Mind. By the will of the Savior, Mind rules over the winds and the demons. He receives a likeness of fire, a light, a listening and a share of Logos. At the end of time, Mind will take his repose with Faith in the cloud of Hymen. The winds and the demons have intercourse for a second time and give birth to all sorts of impurity, that is, the material souls. Through the masturbation of one of the winds, barren women and sterile men are begotten. These are the psychics, who possess only a material soul and are bound to dissolve in Darkness. Finally the pneumatics come to existence, namely those who possess a particle of Mind and a thought from the light of Astonishment.

In order to detain the light of Faith and to destroy the pneumatic race, Nature plans to cause a flood, to which the Savior reacts by proclaiming the erection of a tower. Shem is saved and remains in a body so that he may have patience with Faith and pass on his revelation to postdiluvian mankind. In other words, during the time appointed to Faith, Shem and his race will live among the people who carry out the will of Nature through the observance of the law. For Nature uses the light of Faith under the form of the Law to keep to itself the noetic seed. After the flood, mankind in fact includes two classes of redeemed: the noetics, who possess a body, a soul, and a particle of Mind, and whose root is Faith, and pneumatics, who possess not only a particle of Mind but also a "thought" issued from Astonishment, and whose root is the Unbegotten Spirit.

The destruction of Sodom is also presented as an attempt by Nature to destroy the pneumatic seed. But Shem is told not to worry about his race, since thanks to his teaching they will bear the universal testimony and will repose in the place of the Unbegotten Spirit.

The Savior reveals himself for the last time when the demon (that is, John the Baptist) appears on the river in order to baptize. The baptismal rite is essentially bad because of its use of water – a primordial impure power, which in the beginning tried to detain the light of the Spirit and now tries to keep men prisoner through baptism. But by descending on the water, the Savior rescues the light of Faith and reveals to the pneumatics and the noetics the passwords which will allow them to pass without hindrance through the planetary spheres as they return to their proper root. Thanks to the “memorial” (or “universal testimony”) the pneumatics ascend to the place of the Unbegotten Spirit; as for the noetics, they bear the “testimony of Faith” and ascend to Hymen, the place of Faith. This part of the tractate contains a harsh antibaptismal polemic, probably directed against the Great Church.

After his baptism, the Savior foretells his ascent at the end of his mission on earth. In its anger, Nature will try to seize him, but will only manage to crucify Soldas (that is, the terrestrial Jesus). The following allegory which narrates the beheading of Rebouel is intended to explain to the noetics the meaning of the crucifixion: it does not have the effect of purifying the water of baptism, but rather brings out the division between light and darkness. Just as Rebouel is declared blessed in her beheading, so the noetics should not hesitate to separate from the Great Church, which practises baptism, and enter the community of those who possess gnosis.

Former research has pointed out similarities between The Paraphrase of Shem and the tractate entitled The Paraphrase of Seth, which is referred to by the heresiologist Hippolytus in his report on the Sethians. But the differences between the two doctrines, especially with regard to anthropology, are too great to warrant the assumption of any direct or indirect link whatsoever between the two works. Likewise, more recent research tends not to regard The Paraphrase of Seth as a christianized version of The Paraphrase of Shem, which in that case could have been a witness of a pre-Christian Gnosticism.

THE PARAPHRASE OF SHEM

VII 1, 1-49, 9

The Paraphrase of Shem ¹

[The] paraphrase which was about ¹ the unbegotten Spirit. ¹

What Derdekeas revealed to me, Shem, ⁵ according to ¹ the will of the Majesty. ¹ My thought which was in my body ¹ snatched me away from my race. It ¹ took me up to the top of the world, ¹⁰ which is close to the light ¹ that shone upon the whole area ¹ there. I saw no ¹ earthly likeness, but there was light. ¹ And my thought separated ¹⁵ from the body of darkness as ¹ though in sleep.

I heard ¹ a voice saying to me, ¹ Shem, since you are from ¹ an unmixed power ²⁰ and you are the first being upon ¹ the earth, hear and understand ¹ what I shall say to you first ¹ concerning the great powers who ¹ were in existence in the beginning, before ²⁵ I appeared. There ¹ was Light and Darkness ¹ and there was Spirit between ¹ them. Since your root ¹ fell into forgetfulness — he who was ³⁰ the unbegotten Spirit — I ¹ reveal to you the truth about ¹ the powers. The Light ¹ was thought full of ¹ hearing and word. They were ³⁵ united into one form. ¹ And the Darkness was 2 wind in waters. ¹ He possessed the mind ¹ wrapped in a chaotic fire. ¹ And the Spirit between them ⁵ was a gentle, humble light. ¹ These are the three ¹ roots. They reigned each in ¹ themselves, alone. And they covered ¹ each other, each one with ¹⁰ its power.

But the Light, ¹ since he possessed a great ¹ power, knew the abasement ¹ of the Darkness and his disorder, ¹ namely that the root was not straight. ¹⁵ But the crookedness of the Darkness ¹ was lack of perception, namely (the illusion that) there is no one ¹ above him. And as long as he was able ¹ to bear up under his evil, he was ¹ covered with the water. And he ²⁰ stirred. And the Spirit was frightened ¹ by the sound. He lifted himself ¹ up to his station. And ¹ he saw a great, dark water. ¹ And he was nauseated. And ²⁵ the thought of the Spirit stared ¹ down; he saw the infinite Light. ¹ But he was overlooked ¹ by the putrid root. ¹ And by the will of the great Light ³⁰ the dark water separated. ¹ And the Darkness came up ¹ wrapped in vile ignorance, ¹ and (this was) in order that the mind ¹ might separate from him because he prided ³⁵ himself in it.

And when he ¹ stirred, 3 the light of the Spirit appeared to him. ¹ When he saw it he was astonished. ¹ He did not know that another ¹ Power was above him. And when he ⁵ saw that his likeness was ¹ dark compared with the Spirit, he felt hurt. ¹ And in his pain he lifted up ¹ to the height ¹ of the members of Darkness his mind which ¹⁰ was the eye of the bitterness of evil. ¹ He caused his mind to take shape ¹ in a member of the regions of the ¹ Spirit, thinking that, by staring (down) ¹ at his evil, he would be able ¹⁵ to equal the Spirit. But he ¹ was not able. For he wanted to do ¹ an impossible thing, and it did not ¹ take place. But in order that ¹ the mind of Darkness, which ²⁰ is the eye of the bitterness of evil, might not be destroyed, ¹ since he was made partially similar, ¹ he arose and shone ¹ with a fiery light upon ¹ all of Hades, so that ²⁵ the equality to the faultless Light ¹ might become apparent. For the Spirit ¹ made use of every form ¹ of Darkness because he appeared ¹ in his majesty. ³⁰

And the exalted, infinite Light ¹ appeared, ¹ for he was ¹ very joyful.

He wished to reveal ¹ himself to the Spirit. And the likeness ³⁵ of the exalted Light appeared ¹ to the unbegotten Spirit. 4 I appeared. [I] ¹ am the son of the ¹ incorruptible, infinite Light. ¹ I appeared in the likeness ⁵ of the Spirit, for I am the ray ¹ of the universal Light. ¹ And his appearance to me (was) ¹ in order that the mind ¹ of Darkness might not remain in Hades. ¹⁰ For the Darkness made himself like his ¹ mind in a part of the ¹ members. When I, (O) Shem, appeared ¹ in it (i.e. the likeness), in order that ¹ the Darkness might become dark to himself, ¹⁵ according to the will of the Majesty – ¹ in order that the Darkness might become free ¹ from every aspect of the power ¹ which he possessed – ¹ the mind drew the chaotic fire, with which ²⁰ it was covered, from ¹ the midst of the Darkness and the water. ¹ And from the Darkness the water ¹ became a cloud. and from ¹ the cloud the womb took shape. ²⁵ The chaotic fire ¹ which was a deviation ¹ went there.

And when the Darkness ¹ saw it (i.e. the womb) he became unchaste. ¹ and when he had aroused ³⁰ the water, he rubbed the womb. ¹ His mind dissolved ¹ down to the depths of Nature. ¹ It mingled with the power of ¹ the bitterness of Darkness. And ³⁵ her (i.e. the womb's) eye ruptured at the wickedness ¹ in order that she might not again bring forth ¹ the mind. For it was 5 a seed of Nature ¹ from the dark root. ¹ And when Nature had taken to herself ¹ the mind by means of the dark power, ⁵ every likeness took shape ¹ in her. And when the Darkness ¹ had acquired the likeness of the mind, ¹ it resembled the Spirit. ¹ For Nature rose up to expel it; ¹⁰ she was powerless against it, since ¹ she did not have a form from the ¹ Darkness. For she brought it forth in the cloud. ¹ And the cloud shone. ¹ A mind appeared in ¹⁵ it like a frightful, harmful fire. ¹ It (i.e. the mind) collided ¹ against the unbegotten Spirit ¹ since it possessed ¹ a likeness from him. In order that ²⁰ Nature might become empty ¹ of the chaotic fire, ¹ then immediately Nature ¹ was divided into four parts. ¹ They became clouds which varied ²⁵ in their appearance. They were called ¹ Hymen, Afterbirth, ¹ Power, (and) Water. ¹ And the Hymen and the Afterbirth ¹ and the Power were ³⁰ chaotic fires. And ¹ it (i.e. the mind) was drawn from the midst ¹ of the Darkness and the water – since ¹ the mind was in the midst of Nature ¹ and the dark power – ³⁵ in order that the harmful waters ¹ might not cling to it. 6 Because of this Nature was divided, ¹ according to my will, in order that ¹ the mind may return ¹ to its power which the ⁵ dark root, which was mixed ¹ with it (i.e. the mind), had taken from it. And ¹ he (i.e. the dark root) appeared in the womb. ¹ And at the division of ¹ Nature he separated from the dark power ¹⁰ which he possessed from ¹ the mind. It (i.e. the mind) went into the midst ¹ of the power – this was ¹ the middle region of Nature.

And the Spirit ¹ of light, when the mind ¹⁵ burdened him, was astonished. ¹ And the force of his Astonishment ¹ cast off the burden. And it (i.e. the burden) ¹ returned to its heat. It ¹ put on the light of the Spirit. ²⁰ And when Nature moved ¹ away from the power of the light ¹ of the Spirit, the burden returned. ¹ And the Astonishment <of the> light ¹ cast off the burden. It stuck ²⁵ to the cloud of the Hymen. And ¹ all the clouds of Darkness ¹ cried out, they who had separated from Hades, ¹ because of the alien Power. ¹ He is the Spirit of light who has come ³⁰ in them. And by the will of ¹ the Majesty the Spirit gazed up ¹ at the infinite Light, ¹ in order that ¹ his light may be pitied and ³⁵ the likeness brought up from Hades.

And ¹ when the Spirit had looked, I flowed ⁷ out – I, the son of the Majesty – ¹ like a wave of bright light ¹ and like a whirlwind of the ¹ immortal Spirit. And I blew from ⁵ the cloud of the Hymen upon the Astonishment ¹ of the unbegotten Spirit. It ¹ (i.e. the cloud) separated and cast light upon the clouds. ¹ These separated in order that ¹ the Spirit might return. Because of this the mind ¹⁰ took shape. Its repose was shattered. ¹ For the Hymen of Nature ¹ was a cloud which cannot be ¹ grasped; it is a great fire. ¹ Similarly, the Afterbirth ¹⁵ of Nature is the cloud of silence; ¹ it is an august fire. ¹ And the Power which was mixed ¹ with the mind, it, too, was ¹ a cloud of Nature which ²⁰ was joined with the Darkness that ¹ had aroused Nature ¹ to unchastity. And the dark water ¹ was a frightful cloud. ¹ And the root ²⁵ of Nature, which was below, ¹ was crooked, since it is burdensome and ¹ harmful. The root was ¹ blind with respect to the light-bondage ¹ which was unfathomable since ³⁰ it had many appearances. ¹

And I had pity on ¹ the light <of> the Spirit which ¹ the mind had received. I returned ¹ to my position in order to pray ³⁵ to the exalted, infinite Light ⁸ that ¹ the power of the Spirit might increase ¹ on the place and might be filled ¹ without dark defilement. And ⁵ reverently I said, ¹ “Thou art the root of the Light. ¹ Thy hidden form has appeared, ¹ O exalted, infinite ¹ one. May the whole power of ¹⁰ the Spirit spread and may it be filled ¹ with its light, O infinite Light. ¹ (Then) he will not be able to join ¹ with the unbegotten Spirit, and ¹ the power of the Astonishment will not be able to ¹⁵ mix with Nature. According to the will ¹ of the Majesty,” my prayer ¹ was accepted.

And the voice ¹ of the Word was heard saying ¹ through the Majesty to the ²⁰ unbegotten Spirit, “Behold, the ¹ power has been completed.

He who was revealed ¹ by me appeared in ¹ the Spirit. Again I shall appear. ¹ I am Derdekeas, the son ²⁵ of the incorruptible, infinite Light.” ¹

The light of ¹ the infinite Spirit ¹ came down to a feeble nature for ¹ a short time until ³⁰ all the impurity of nature ¹ became void, and in order that ¹ the darkness of Nature ¹ might be blamed. I put on my ¹ garment which is the garment of the light ³⁵ of the Majesty — which I am. ¹ I came in the appearance of the 9 Spirit to consider the whole light ¹ which was in the depths ¹ of the Darkness. According to the will ¹ of the Majesty, in order that the Spirit ⁵ by means of the Word might be filled with his ¹ light independently of the power of ¹ the infinite Light, ¹ and at my wish, the Spirit ¹ arose by his (own) power. ¹⁰ His greatness was granted to him ¹ that he might be filled with his whole light ¹ and depart from the whole burden ¹ of the Darkness. For what was behind ¹ was a dark fire which blew ¹⁵ (and) pressed on the Spirit. And ¹ the Spirit rejoiced because he was protected ¹ from the frightful water. But ¹ his light was not equal to ¹ the Majesty. But (what) he was granted ²⁰ by the infinite Light, (he was granted it) ¹ in order that in all his members ¹ he might appear as ¹ a single image of light. ¹ And when the Spirit arose above the water, ²⁵ his black likeness became apparent. ¹ And the Spirit honored ¹ the exalted Light: “Surely thou ¹ alone art the infinite one, ¹ because thou art above ³⁰ every unbegotten thing, for thou hast protected ¹ me from the Darkness. And at thy ¹ wish I arose above the power ¹ of darkness.

And that ¹ nothing might be hidden from you, Shem, the thought, ³⁵ which the Spirit from the ¹ greatness had contemplated, came into being, ¹⁰ since the Darkness was not able [to] ¹ restrain his evil. But when ¹ it appeared, ¹ the three roots became known as they ⁵ were from the beginning. If ¹ the Darkness had been able to bear ¹ up under his evil, the ¹ mind would not have separated from him, and ¹ another power would not have appeared. ¹⁰

But from the time it appeared ¹ I was seen, the son ¹ of the Majesty, in order that ¹ the light of the Spirit might not become faint, ¹ and that Nature might not reign ¹⁵ over it, because it gazed at me. ¹ And by the will of the greatness ¹ my equality was revealed, that ¹ what is of the Power might ¹ become apparent. You ²⁰ are the great Power which came into being, ¹ and I am the perfect Light ¹ which is above the Spirit ¹ and the Darkness, the one who puts to shame the Darkness ¹ for the intercourse of the impure ²⁵ practice. For through the division ¹ of Nature the Majesty wished ¹ to be covered with ¹ honor up to the height of the Thought ¹ of the Spirit. And the Spirit received ³⁰ rest in his power.

¹ For the image of the Light ¹ is inseparable from the unbegotten Spirit.
¹ And the lawgivers did not name ¹ him after all the clouds ³⁵ of Nature, nor is it ¹ possible to name them. ¹ For every likeness 11 into which Nature had divided ¹ is a power of the ¹ chaotic fire which is the ¹ hylic seed. The one who took to himself ⁵ the power of the Darkness imprisoned it ¹ in the midst of its members. ¹

And by the will of the Majesty, ¹ in order that the mind ¹ and the whole light of the Spirit might be protected ¹⁰ from every burden and (from) the toil of ¹ Nature, a voice came forth from ¹ the Spirit to the cloud of the Hymen. ¹ And the light of the astonishment ¹ began to rejoice with the voice ¹⁵ which was granted to him. ¹ And the great Spirit of light was ¹ in the cloud of the Hymen. He honored ¹ the infinite Light ¹ and the universal likeness ²⁰ who I am, the son of ¹ the Majesty. It is said: ¹ "Anasses Duses, thou art ¹ the infinite Light ¹ who was given by the will ²⁵ of the Majesty to establish ¹ every light of the Spirit ¹ upon the place, and to separate ¹ the mind from the Darkness. ¹ For it was not right ³⁰ for the light of the Spirit to remain ¹ in Hades. For at thy wish ¹ the Spirit arose to ¹ behold thy greatness." ¹

For I said these things to you, ³⁵ Shem, that you might know 12 that my likeness, the son of the Majesty, ¹ is from my ¹ infinite Thought, since I ¹ am for him a universal likeness ⁵ which does not lie, (and) I am above ¹ every truth and origin ¹ of the word. His appearance is in ¹ my beautiful garment of light ¹ which is the voice of the immeasurable Thought. ¹⁰ We are that ¹ single, sole light which came into being. ¹ He appeared in another root ¹ in order that the power ¹ of the Spirit might be raised from the ¹⁵ feeble Nature. For by the will of the ¹ great Light I came forth from the ¹ exalted Spirit down to the cloud of ¹ the Hymen without my universal ¹ garment.

And the Word took ²⁰ me to himself, from the Spirit, in the first ¹ cloud of the Hymen of ¹ Nature. And I put on ¹ this of which the Majesty and the ¹ unbegotten Spirit made me worthy. ²⁵ And the threefold unity ¹ of my garment appeared ¹ in the cloud, by the will ¹ of the Majesty, in a single form. ¹ And my likeness was covered ³⁰ with the light of my ¹ garment. And the cloud was disturbed, ¹ and it was not able to bear my likeness. ¹ It shed the first power, ¹ the one (which) it had taken from ³⁵ the Spirit, that one which shone ¹ on him from the beginning, before ¹ (I) appeared in the word ¹ to the Spirit. The cloud 13 would not have been able to bear both of them. ¹ And the light which came forth from the cloud ¹ passed through the silence, until ¹ it came into the middle region. And, ⁵ by the will of the Majesty, ¹ the light mixed with him ¹ <i.e.> the Spirit which exists in the silence, ¹ he who had been separated from the Spirit ¹ of light. It was separated from the light ¹⁰ by the cloud of the silence. ¹ The cloud was disturbed. It was he ¹ who gave rest to the flame ¹ of fire. He humbled the dark womb ¹ in order that she might not reveal ¹⁵ other seed from the darkness. He ¹ kept them back in the middle region ¹ of Nature in their ¹ position which was in ¹ the cloud. They were troubled since they did ²⁰ not know where they were. For still ¹ they <did> not possess the ¹ universal understanding of ¹ the Spirit.

And when I prayed ¹ to the Majesty, toward the ²⁵ infinite Light, that ¹ the chaotic power ¹ of the Spirit might go to and fro, and ¹ the dark womb might be idle, ¹ and that my likeness might appear ³⁰ in the cloud of the Hymen, ¹ as if I were wrapped in the light ¹ of the Spirit which went ¹ before me, and by the will ¹ of the Majesty and through ³⁵ the prayer I came in the cloud ¹ in order that through my garment — ¹ which was from the power 14 of the Spirit — the pleroma ¹ of the word, might bring power to the members ¹ who possessed it in the Darkness. ¹ For because of them I appeared ⁵ in this insignificant place. ¹ For I am a helper ¹ of every one who has been given a name. ¹ For when I appeared ¹ in the cloud, the light ¹⁰ of the Spirit began to save itself ¹ from the frightful water, and (from) the clouds ¹ of fire which had been separated ¹ from dark Nature. And ¹ I gave them eternal honor ¹⁵ that they might not again engage ¹ in the impure practice.

And the light ¹ which was in the Hymen was disturbed ¹ by my power, and ¹ it passed through my middle region. It ²⁰ was filled with the universal Thought. ¹ And through the word of ¹ the light of the Spirit it returned to ¹ its repose. It received ¹ form in its root and shone ²⁵ without deficiency. And the light ¹ which had come forth with it from the silence ¹ went in the middle region ¹ and returned to the place. ¹ And the cloud shone. ³⁰ And from it came ¹ an unquenchable fire. ¹ And the part which separated from ¹ the astonishment put on forgetfulness. ¹ It was deceived by ³⁵ the fire of darkness. And the shock ¹ of its astonishment cast ¹ off the burden of the 15 cloud. It was evil ¹ since it was unclean. And ¹ the fire mixed with the water in ¹ order that the waters might become harmful. ⁵ below. A light ¹ went down to chaos filled ¹ with mist and dust, in order to ¹ harm Nature. ²⁰ And the light of the Astonishment which is ¹ in the middle region came to it ¹ after he cast off ¹ the burden of the Darkness. He rejoiced ¹ when the Spirit arose. For he looked ²⁵ from the clouds down ¹ at the dark waters upon ¹ the light which was in ¹ the depths of Nature.

And Nature which had been disturbed ¹ immediately arose ¹ from the idle waters. ¹ For her ascent was shameful. ¹ And Nature took to herself the ¹⁰ power of fire. She became strong ¹ because of the light of the Spirit which ¹ was in Nature. Her ¹ likeness appeared in the water ¹ in the form of a frightful beast ¹⁵ with many faces, which ¹ is crooked

Therefore ¹ I appeared that I might ³⁰ get an opportunity to go ¹ down to the nether world, to the light ¹ of the Spirit which was burdened, ¹ that I might protect him from the evil ¹ of the burden. And through ³⁵ his looking down at the dark region ¹ the light once more 16 came up in order that the womb might again ¹ come up from the water. ¹ She (i.e. the womb) came up by my will. ¹ Guilefully the eye opened. ⁵ And the light ¹ which had appeared in the middle region ¹ (and) which had separated from the Astonishment ¹ rested and shone upon ¹ her. And the womb saw ¹⁰ things she had not seen, ¹ and she rejoiced joyfully in ¹ the light, although this was not hers — the one which ¹ appeared in the middle region, in her ¹ wickedness, when he (i.e. the light) shone ¹⁵ upon her. And ¹ the womb saw things she had not seen, ¹ and she was brought down ¹ to the water, she was thinking that ¹ she had reached to the power of light. ²⁰ And she did not know that ¹ her root was made idle by ¹ the likeness of the Light, and that it was to her (i.e. the root) ¹ that he had run.

The light was astonished, ¹ the one which was in ²⁵ the middle region and which was ¹ beginning and end. Therefore ¹ his thought gazed ¹ directly up at the exalted Light. ¹ And he called out and said, ²⁰ "Lord, have mercy on me, ¹ for my light and my effort went astray. ¹ For if thy goodness does not establish ¹ me, I do not know ¹ where I am." And when the Majesty ³⁵ had heard him, he had mercy on him. ¹

And I appeared in the cloud ¹ of the Hymen, in the silence, 17 without my holy garment. ¹ With my will I honored ¹ my garment which has three ¹ forms in the cloud of the Hymen. ⁵ And the light which was in ¹ the silence, the one from the rejoicing ¹ Power, contained me. ¹ I wore it. And its ¹ two parts appeared ¹⁰ in a single form. Its ¹ other parts did not appear ¹ on account of the fire. I became ¹ unable to speak in the cloud of the Hymen, ¹ for its fire was frightful, ¹⁵ lifting itself up without ¹ humility. And in order that ¹ my greatness and the word ¹ might appear, I placed likewise ¹ my other garment in the cloud of the silence. ²⁰ I went into the middle region ¹ and put on the light ¹ that was in it, that was sunk in forgetfulness ¹ and that was separated from the Spirit of ¹ astonishment, for he had cast off the burden. ²⁵ At my wish ¹ nothing mortal appeared ¹ to him, but they were all immortal ¹ things which the Spirit granted ¹ to him. And he said in ³⁰ the thought of the Light, ai eis ¹ ai ou phar dou ia ei ou: ¹ I have come in a great rest ¹ in order that he may give rest ¹ to my light in ³⁵ his root, and may bring it out of 18 harmful Nature.

Then, ¹ by the will of the Majesty, I ¹ took off my garment of light. ¹ I put on another garment ⁵ of fire which has no form, which ¹ is from the mind of the power, ¹ which was separated, and which was ¹ prepared for me, according to my will, in ¹ the middle region. For the middle region ¹⁰ covered it with a dark power ¹ in order that I might come ¹ and put it on. I went down ¹ to chaos to save ¹ the whole light from it. For without ¹⁵ the power of darkness I could not oppose ¹ Nature. But I rested ¹ myself upon her staring eye ²⁰ which was a light ¹ from the Spirit. For it had been prepared ¹ for me as a garment and a rest ¹ by the Spirit. Through me ¹ he opened his eyes down to ²⁵ Hades. He granted Nature ¹ his voice for a time. ¹

And my garment of fire, according to the will ¹ of the Majesty, went ¹ down to what is strong, and to the ³⁰ unclean part of Nature ¹ which <the> power of darkness ¹ was covering. And my garment ¹ rubbed Nature in her ¹ covering. And her unclean ³⁵ femininity was strong. And ¹ the wrathful womb came up 19 and made the mind dry, ¹ resembling a fish which has ¹ a drop of fire and ¹ a power of fire. And when Nature ⁵ had cast off the mind, ¹ she was troubled and she ¹ wept. When she was hurt, and in ¹ her tears, she cast off ¹ the power of the Spirit ¹⁰ (and) remained as I. I put on ¹ the light of the Spirit and I ¹ rested with my garment on account of ¹ the sight of the fish.

And in order that ¹ the deeds of Nature might be condemned, ¹⁵ since she is blind, manifold ¹ animals came out ¹ of her, in accordance with the number of the ¹ fleeting winds. All of them came into being in ¹ Hades searching for the light ²⁰ of the mind which took shape. They were not ¹ able to stand up against it. ¹ I rejoiced over their ignorance. ¹ They found me, ¹ the son of the Majesty, in ²⁵ front of the womb which has ¹ many forms. I put ¹ on the beast, and laid ¹ before her a great request ¹ that heaven and earth ³⁰ might come into being, in order that the whole ¹ light might rise up. ¹ For in no other way could the power ¹ of the Spirit be saved from bondage ¹ except that I appear ³⁵ to her in animal form. ¹ Therefore she was gracious to me 20 as if I were her son. ¹

And on account of my request, ¹ Nature arose since she possesses of ¹ the power of the Spirit and the Darkness ⁵ and the fire. For she had taken off ¹ her forms. When she had cast ¹ it off, she blew upon the water. ¹ The heaven was created. And from ¹ the foam of the heaven ¹⁰ the earth came into being. And at my wish it ¹ brought forth all kinds of food in accordance with ¹ the number of the beasts. And it ¹ brought forth dew from ¹ the winds on account of you (pl.) and those ¹⁵ who will be begotten the second time ¹ upon the earth. ¹ For the earth possessed ¹ a power of chaotic fire. ¹ Therefore it brought forth ²⁰ every seed.

And when ¹ the heaven and the earth were created, ¹ my garment of fire arose in the midst ¹ of the cloud of Nature (and) ¹ shone upon the whole world ²⁵ until Nature became ¹ dry. The Darkness which was ¹ its (i.e. the earth's) garment was cast into the ¹ harmful waters. ¹ The middle region was cleansed from the Darkness. ³⁰ But the womb grieved because of ¹ what had happened. She perceived in ¹ her parts what was ¹ water like a mirror. When she ¹ perceived (it), she wondered ²⁵ how it had come into being. Therefore she ¹ remained a widow. It also was 21 astonished (that) it was not in her. ¹ For still the forms ¹ possessed a power ¹ of fire and light. It (i.e. the power) remained ⁵ in order that it might be in Nature ¹ until all the powers are taken ¹ away from her. For just as ¹ the light of the Spirit was completed ¹ in three clouds, it is necessary ¹⁰ that also the power ¹ which is in Hades will be completed at the ¹ appointed time. For, because of the grace ¹ of the Majesty, I came forth to her ¹ from the water for the second time. ¹⁵ For my face pleased ¹ her. Her face also was glad. ¹

And I said to her, "May ¹ seed ¹ and power come forth from you ²⁰ upon the earth." And she obeyed ¹ the will of the Spirit that ¹ she might be brought to naught. And when ¹ her forms returned, they rubbed ¹ their tongue(s) with each other; they copulated; ²⁵ they begot winds and ¹ demons and the power which ¹ is from the fire and ¹ the Darkness and the Spirit. But the form ¹ which remained alone cast the ³⁰ beast from herself. ¹ She did not have intercourse, but ¹ she was the one who rubbed herself alone. ¹ And she brought forth a wind which ¹ possessed a power ³⁵ from the fire and the Darkness ¹ and the Spirit.

And in order that the 22 demons also might become free from the power which they possessed ¹ through the impure intercourse, ¹ a womb was with the winds ⁵ resembling water. And an ¹ unclean penis was ¹ with the demons in accordance with the example ¹ of the Darkness, and in the way he rubbed with ¹ the womb from the beginning. And after ¹⁰ the forms of Nature had been ¹ together, they separated from ¹ each other. They cast off the power, ¹ being astonished about ¹ the deceit which had happened to them. They grieved ¹⁵ with an eternal grief. They covered ¹ themselves with their power. ¹

And when I had put them to shame, I arose ¹ with my garment in the power and — ¹ which is above the beast which is a light, ²⁰ in order that I might make Nature ¹ desolate. The mind which had appeared ¹ in the Nature of Darkness, (and) which ¹ was the eye of the heart of Darkness, ¹ at my wish reigned over ²⁵ the winds and the demons. And I ¹ gave him a likeness of fire, light, ¹ and attentiveness, and a share ¹ of guileless word. Therefore ¹ he was given of the greatness ³⁰ in order to be strong in his ¹ power, independent of the power, ¹ independent of the light of the Spirit, and ¹ intercourse of Darkness, in order that, at ¹ the end of time, when 23 Nature will be destroyed, he may rest ¹ in the honored place. ¹ For he will be found ¹ faithful, since he has loathed ⁵ the unchastity of Nature with ¹ the Darkness. The strong power ¹ of the mind came into being from ¹ the mind and the unbegotten Spirit. ¹

But the winds, which are demons ¹⁰ from water and fire ¹ and darkness and light, had ¹ intercourse unto perdition. And through ¹ this intercourse the winds received ¹ in their womb ¹⁵ foam from the penis ¹ of the demons. They conceived ¹ a power in their womb. From ¹ the breathing ¹ the wombs of the winds girded each other ²⁰ until the times of the birth came. ¹ They went down to the water. ¹ And the power was delivered, through ¹ the breathing which moves the birth, ¹ in the midst of the practice. And ²⁵ every form of the birth received shape ¹ in it. When ¹ the times of the birth were near, ¹ all the winds were gathered ¹ from the water which is near the ³⁰ earth. They gave birth to all kinds of unchastity. ¹ And the place where ¹ the wind alone went was permeated with ¹ the unchastity. ¹ Barren wives came from it ³⁵ and sterile husbands. 24 For just as they are born, ¹ so they bear.

Because of you (pl.), ¹ the image of the Spirit appeared ¹ in the earth and the water. ⁵ For you are like the Light. ¹ For you possess a share ¹ of the winds and the demons, ¹ and a thought from the Light ¹ of the power of the Astonishment. ¹⁰ For everything which he brought forth from ¹ the womb upon the earth ¹ was not a good thing for her, ¹ but her groan and her pain, because ¹ of the image which appeared in ¹⁵ you from the Spirit. For you are ¹ exalted in your heart. ¹ And it is blessedness, Shem, if ²⁰ a part is given to someone and if he ¹ departs from ¹ the soul to (go) to the thought of the Light. For the soul ¹ is a burden of the Darkness, and ¹ those who know where the root ¹ of the soul came from will be able ¹ to grope after Nature also. ²⁵ For the soul is a work of ¹ unchastity and an (object of) scorn to the ¹ thought of Light. For I

I am the one who revealed concerning I all that is unbegotten. ³⁰

And in order that the sin I of Nature might be filled, I made the I womb, which was disturbed, pleasant — I the blind wisdom — that I might I be able to bring (it) to naught. And at my 25 wish, he plotted with the water I of Darkness and also the Darkness, I that they might wound every form I of your (pl.) heart. For by ⁵ the will of the light of the I Spirit they surrounded you; they bound I you in Faith. And in order that I his plan might become idle, I he sent a demon ¹⁰ that the plan of I her wickedness might be proclaimed. And he caused I a flood, and he destroyed I your (pl.) race, in order to I take the light and to take from ¹⁵ Faith. But I proclaimed I quickly by the mouth of I the demon that a tower I come to be up to the particle of the light, I which was left in the demons and ²⁰ their race — which was I water — that the demon might be protected I from the turbulent chaos. I And the womb planned these things I according to my will in order that she might ²⁵ pour forth completely. A tower I came to be through the demons. The I Darkness was disturbed by his loss. I He loosened the muscles of the I womb. And the demon ³⁰ who was going to enter the tower was protected I in order that the races might I continue and might acquire coherence I through him. For he possesses I power from every form. ³⁵

Return henceforth, 26 O Shem, and rejoice [greatly] I over your race and I Faith, for without body and I necessity it is protected from ⁵ every body of Darkness, bearing witness I to the holy things of the greatness I which was revealed to them in their I thought by my will. And I they shall rest in the unbegotten Spirit ¹⁰ without grief. I But you, Shem, because of this, you I remained in (the) body outside the cloud I of light that you might remain I with Faith. And Faith ¹⁵ will come to you. Her thought will be taken I and given to you with a consciousness I of light. And I I told you these things for the benefit of your I race from the cloud of light. ²⁰ And likewise what I shall say to you I concerning everything, I shall reveal I to you completely that I you may reveal them to those who I will be upon the earth the ²⁵ second time.

O Shem, the disturbance I which occurred at my wish I happened in order that Nature might I become empty. I For the wrath of the Darkness subsided. ³⁰ O Shem, the Darkness' mouth was shut. I No longer does the light which I shone for the world appear in it, I according to my will. And when I Nature had said that ³⁵ its wish was fulfilled, then every form I was engulfed by the waters 27 in prideful ignorance. I She (i.e. Nature) turned her I dark vagina and cast from I her the power of fire ⁵ which was in her from the beginning I through the practice of the Darkness. It (masc.) ¹ lifted itself up and shone upon ¹ the whole world instead of the righteous one. ¹ And all her forms ¹⁰ sent forth a power ¹ like a flame of fire up ¹ to heaven as a help to the ¹ corrupted light, which had lifted itself up. ¹ For they were members of the ¹⁵ chaotic fire. And she did not ¹ know that she had harmed herself. ¹ When she cast forth the power, ¹ the power which she possessed, ¹ she cast it forth from the genitals. It was the demon, ²⁰ a deceiver, who ¹ stirred up the womb in every form — . ¹

And in her ignorance, ¹ as if she were doing a great ¹ thing, she granted the demons ²⁵ and the winds a star each. ¹ For without wind and star ¹ nothing happens upon the earth. ¹ For every power is filled ¹ by them after they were ³⁰ released from the Darkness and the fire ¹ and the power and the light. ¹ For in the place where their darkness and ¹ their fire were mixed with each other ¹ beasts were brought forth. And it was in the place ³⁵ of the Darkness, and the fire, and the power 28 of the mind, and the light, ¹ that human beings came into existence. ¹ Being from the Spirit, the thought of the Light, my eye, ¹ exists not in every man. ⁵ For before the flood ¹ came from the winds and the ¹ demons, rain came to ¹ men. But then, in order that the power ¹ which is in the tower might be brought forth, ¹⁰ and might rest upon the earth ¹ Nature, which had been disturbed, ¹ wanted to harm the seed ¹ which will be upon the earth after ¹ the flood. ¹⁵ Demons were sent to them, and ¹ a deviation of the winds, and ¹ a burden of the angels, and ¹ a fear of the prophet, a ¹ condemnation of speech, that I may ²⁰ teach you, O Shem, from ¹ what blindness your ¹ race is protected. When I have ¹ revealed to you all that has been spoken, ¹ then the righteous one will ²⁵ shine upon the world with my garment. ¹ And the night and the day will ¹ be separated. For I shall hasten down to the ¹ world to take the light ¹ of that place, the one which ³⁰ Faith possesses. And ¹ I shall appear to those who will ¹ acquire the thought of the light ¹ of the Spirit. For because of them my ¹ majesty appeared.

When ³⁵ he will have appeared, O Shem, ¹ upon the earth, [in] the place which will be 29 called Sodom, (then) ¹ safeguard the insight which I ¹ shall give you. For those whose ¹ heart was pure will congregate to you, ⁵ because of ¹ the word which you will reveal. ¹ For when you appear ¹ in the world, dark Nature ¹ will shake against you, ¹⁰ together with the winds and a demon, ¹ that they may destroy ¹ the insight. But you, proclaim ¹ quickly to the Sodomites ¹ your universal teaching, ¹⁵ for they are your members. ¹ For the demon of human form ¹ will part from that place ¹ by my will, since he is ignorant. ¹ He will guard this utterance. But the ²⁰ Sodomites, according to the will of the ¹ Majesty, will bear witness to the ¹ universal testimony. They ¹ will rest with a pure conscience ¹ in the place ²⁵ of their repose, which ¹ is the unbegotten Spirit. ¹ And as these things will happen, ¹ Sodom will be burned unjustly ¹ by a base nature. ³⁰ For the evil will not cease ¹ in order that your ¹ majesty may reveal ¹ that place.

Then 30 the demon will depart with ¹ Faith. And then he will appear ¹ in the four regions ¹ of the world. And when ⁵ Faith appears ¹ in the last likeness, then will ¹ her appearance become manifest. ¹ For the first-born is the demon ¹ who appeared in the union ¹⁰ of Nature with many faces, ¹ in order that Faith might ¹ appear in him. For when he ¹ appears in the world, ¹ evil passions will arise, ¹⁵ and earthquakes, and ¹ wars, and famines, and ¹ blasphemies. For because of him the whole ¹ world will be disturbed. ¹ For he will seek the power ²⁰ of Faith and Light; he will ¹ not find it. For at that time ¹ the demon will also ¹ appear upon the river ¹ to baptize with an ²⁵ imperfect baptism, ¹ and to trouble the world with a bondage ¹ of water. But it is necessary ¹ for me to appear in the members ¹ of the thought of Faith to ³⁰ reveal the great things of my ¹ power. I shall separate it ¹ from the demon who is Soldas. ¹ And the light which ¹ he possesses from the Spirit I shall mix ³⁵ with my invincible garment, ¹ as well as him whom I shall reveal 31 in the darkness for your sake ¹ and for the sake of your race which ¹ will be protected from the evil ¹ Darkness.

Know, O Shem, that without ⁵ Elorchaïos and Amoiias and ¹ Strophaïas and Chelkeak ¹ and Chelkea and Aileou, no ¹ one will be able to pass by this wicked region. ¹ For this is my memorial ¹⁰ that in it I have been ¹ victorious over the wicked region. And ¹ I have taken the light of the Spirit ¹ from the frightful water. ¹ For when the ¹⁵ appointed days of the ¹ demon draw near ¹ he who will baptize ¹ erringly —, then I shall appear ¹ in the baptism ¹ of the demon to reveal ²⁰ with the mouth of Faith ¹ a testimony to those ¹ who belong to her. I testify ¹ of thee, Spark the unquenchable, ¹ Osei, the elect of ²⁵ the Light, the eye of heaven, and ¹ Faith, the first and the last, ¹ and Sophia, and Saphaia, and ¹ Saphaina, and the righteous ¹ Spark, and the ³⁰ impure light. And you (sg.), east, ¹ and west, and ¹ north, and south, ¹ upper air and lower air, and ¹ all the powers and authorities, 32 you (pl.) are in Nature. ¹ And you (sg.), Moluchtha ¹ and Soch are from every work ¹ and every impure effort of ⁵ Nature. Then I shall come ¹ from the demon down to the water. ¹ And whirlpools of water ¹ and flames of fire will rise ¹ up against me. Then I ¹⁰ shall come up from the water, having put ¹ on the light of Faith ¹ and the unquenchable fire, ¹ in order that through my help ¹ the power of the Spirit may cross, ¹⁵ she who has been cast in the world ¹ by the winds and the demons ¹ and the stars. And in them ¹ every unchastity will be filled. ¹

Finally, O Shem, consider ²⁰ yourself pleasing in the thought ¹ of the Light. Do not let ¹ your thought have dealings with ¹ the fire and the body of Darkness ¹ which was an unclean ²⁵ work. These things which I teach ¹ you are right. ¹

This is the paraphrase: ¹ — For you did not remember ¹ that it is from the firmament that ³⁰ your race has been protected. — Elorchaio ¹ is the name of the great Light, ¹ the place from which I have come, the Word ¹ which has no equal. ¹ And the likeness is my honored garment. ³⁵ And Derderkeas is the name of his Word in 33 the voice of the Light. And ¹ Strophæa is the blessed glance ¹ which is the Spirit. ¹ and it is Chelkeach, who is my garment, ⁵ who has come from the Astonishment, ¹ who was in the cloud of the Hymen ¹ which appeared, as ¹ a trimorphic cloud. ¹ And Chelkea is my garment ¹⁰ which has two forms, he ¹ who was in the cloud of Silence. ¹ And Chelke is my garment which ¹ was given him from every region; ¹ it was given him in a single form ¹⁵ from the greatness, he ¹ who was in the cloud of the middle region. ¹ and the star of the Light ¹ which was mentioned is my ¹ invincible garment which ²⁰ I wore in Hades; ¹ this (i.e. the star of the Light) is the mercy which surpasses ¹ the thought and the testimony ¹ of those who bear witness. And ¹ the testimony which has been mentioned: ²⁵ the First and the Last, Faith, ¹ the Mind of the wind of darkness. And ¹ Sophæa and Saphæa are in ¹ the cloud of those who have been separated ¹ from the chaotic fire. ³⁰ And the righteous Spark is ¹ the cloud of light which has shone ¹ in your (pl.) midst. For ¹ in it (i.e. the cloud of light) my garment will go ¹ down to chaos.

But the 34 impure light, which appeared ¹ in the Darkness (and) which belongs to ¹ dark Nature, is a power. ¹ And the upper air and the lower air, and the ⁵ powers and the authorities, the ¹ demons and the stars, these possessed ¹ a particle of fire ¹ and a light from the Spirit. ¹ And Moluchthas is a wind, ¹⁰ for without it nothing is brought ¹ forth upon the earth. He has ¹ a likeness of a serpent and ¹ a unicorn. His protrusion(s) ¹ are manifold wings. ¹⁵ And the remainder is the womb ¹ which has been disturbed. You are blessed, ¹ Shem, for your race ¹ has been protected from the dark wind which is ¹ many-faced. And they will ²⁰ bear the universal ¹ testimony and (bear witness) to the impure ¹ practice of <Nature>. And ¹ they will become sublime through the ¹ reminder of the Light.

O Shem, ²⁵ no one who wears the body ¹ will be able to complete these things. But through ¹ remembrance he will be able to grasp ¹ them, in order that, when ¹ his thought separates from the body, ³⁰ then these things may be revealed to him. ¹ They have been revealed to your ¹ race. O Shem, it is difficult for someone ¹ wearing a body to complete ¹ [these things, as] I said to you. 35 And it is a small number that will ¹ complete them, those who possess ¹ the particle of the mind ¹ and the thought of the light of the ⁵ Spirit. They will keep their mind ¹ from the impure practice. ¹ For many in the race of Nature ¹ will seek the security ¹ of the Power. They will not find it, nor ¹⁰ will they be able to ¹ do the will of Faith. ¹ For they are seed of the ¹ universal Darkness. And those who ¹ find them are in much suffering. The winds ¹⁵ and the demons will hate ¹ them. And the bondage of the body is ¹ severe. For where ¹ the winds, and the stars, ¹ and the demons cast forth from the power ²⁰ of the Spirit, (there) repentance ¹ and testimony will appear ¹ upon them, and mercy ¹ will lead them to ¹ the unbegotten Spirit. ²⁵ And those who are repentant ¹ will find rest ¹ in the consummation and Faith, ¹ in the place of the Hymen. ¹ This is the Faith which will ³⁰ fill the place which has been ¹ left empty. But those who do not share ¹ in the Spirit of light and ¹ in Faith will ¹ dissolve in the [Darkness], the place 36 where repentance did not come. ¹

It is I who opened the eternal gates ¹ which were shut from the beginning. ¹ To those who long for the best of ⁵ life, and those who are worthy of the ¹ repose, he revealed ¹ them. I granted ¹ perception to those who perceive. ¹ I disclose to them ¹⁰ all the thoughts and the teaching ¹ of the righteous ones. And I did not become ¹ their enemy at all. But ¹ when I had endured the wrath ¹ of the world, I was victorious. There was not ¹⁵ one of them who knew me. ¹ The gates of fire ¹ and endless smoke opened against me. ¹ All the winds rose ¹ up against me. The thunderings and the ²⁰ lightning-flashes for a time will rise ¹ up against me. And they will bring ¹ their wrath upon me. ¹ And on account of me according to the flesh, they ¹ will rule over them according to kind. ²⁵

And many who wear ¹ erring flesh will go down ¹ to the harmful waters through ¹ the winds and the demons. ¹ And they are bound by the water. ³⁰ And he will heal with a ¹ futile remedy. He will lead astray, ¹ and he will bind the world. ¹ And those that do the will of Nature, their part will [...] 37 two times in the day of the water ¹ and the forms of Nature. ¹ And it will not be granted them, when ¹ Faith disturbs them ⁵ in order to take to herself the righteous one. ¹ order that the bondage of the power ¹ of the Spirit may be saved from the frightful ¹⁰ water. And it is blessedness ¹ if it is granted someone to contemplate ¹ the exalted one, and to ¹ know the exalted time ¹ and the bondage. For the water is an ¹⁵ insignificant body. And ¹ men are not released, since ¹ they are bound in the water, just as from ¹ the beginning the light of the Spirit ¹ was bound.

O Shem, it is necessary that ¹ the thought be called by the Word in ¹

O Shem, they are deceived ²⁰ by manifold ¹ demons, thinking that through ¹ baptism with the uncleanness ¹ of water, that which is dark, ¹ feeble, idle, ²⁵ (and) disturbing, he will take away the sins. ¹ And they do not know ¹ that from the water to ¹ the water there is bondage, ¹ and error and unchastity, ³⁰ envy, murder, adultery, ¹ false witness, ¹ heresies, robberies, ¹ lusts, babblings, ¹ wrath, bitterness, ³⁵ great [...]. 38 Therefore there are many deaths ¹ which burden their thoughts. ¹ For I foretell ¹ it to those who have a heart. ⁵ They will refrain from the impure ¹ baptism. And those who ¹ take heart from the light ¹ of the Spirit will not have dealings ¹ with the impure practice. ¹⁰ And their heart will not expire, ¹ nor will they curse. ¹ And the water — <nor> will they be given ¹ honor. Where ¹ the curse is, there is the deficiency. ¹⁵ And the blindness is ¹ where the honor is. ¹ For if they mix with the evil ones, ¹ they become empty in the dark water. ¹ For where the water has been ²⁰ mentioned, there is ¹ Nature, and the oath, and ¹ the lie, and the loss. For only ¹ in the unbegotten Spirit, ¹ where the exalted Light rested, ²⁵ has the water not ¹ been mentioned, ¹ nor can it be mentioned. ¹

For this is my appearance: ¹ for when I have ³⁰ completed the times ¹ which are assigned to me upon the earth, then ¹ I will cast from me ¹ [my garment of fire (?)]. And 39 my unequalled garment will ¹ come forth upon me, ¹ and also all my garments which I ¹ put on in all the clouds ⁵ which were from ¹ the Astonishment of the Spirit. ¹ For the air will tear my garment. ¹ For it (i.e. my garment) will shine, and it will divide ¹ all the clouds up to ¹⁰ the root of the Light. The repose ¹ is the mind and my garment. ¹ And my remaining garments, ¹ those on the left and those on the ¹ right, will shine ¹⁵ on the back in order that ¹ the image of the Light may appear. ¹ For my garments which I put ¹ on in the three ¹ clouds, in the last day they ²⁰ will rest in their ¹ root, i.e. in the unbegotten ¹ Spirit, since they are without ¹ fault, through the division of (the) ¹ clouds.

Therefore I have appeared, ²⁵ being faultless, on account of the ¹ clouds, because they are unequal, in order that ¹ the wickedness of Nature ¹ might be ended. For she wished ¹ at that time ³⁰ to snare me. She was about to fix (to the cross) ¹ Soldas who is the dark ¹ flame, who attended ¹ on the [...] of error, 40 that he might snare me. ¹ She took care of her faith, ¹ being vainglorious. ¹

And at that time ⁵ the light was about to separate ¹ from the Darkness, and a voice ¹ was heard in the world, saying, ¹ "Blessed is the eye which has ¹ seen thee, and the mind which has ¹⁰ supported thy majesty at ¹ my desire." It will be said by ¹ the exalted one, "Blessed is ¹ Rebouel among every race ¹ of men, for it is you (fem.) alone ¹⁵ who have seen." And she will listen. And ¹ they will behead the woman ¹ who has the perception, ¹ whom you will reveal ¹ upon the earth. And according to ²⁰ my will she will bear witness, and she will ¹ cease from every ¹ vain effort of Nature ¹ and chaos. For the woman ¹ whom they will behead at that ²⁵ time is the coherence ¹ of the power of the demon ¹ who will baptize the seed ¹ of darkness in severity, ¹ that it (i.e. the seed) may mix with unchastity. ³⁰ He begot a woman. She was ¹ called Rebouel.

See, ¹ O Shem, how all the things I have said ¹ to you have been fulfilled. ¹ [And And the things which] you 41 lack, according to my will ¹ they will appear to you ¹ at that place upon the earth ¹ that you may reveal them ⁵ as they are. Do ¹ not let your thought have dealings ¹ with the body. For I have said these ¹ things to you, through the voice of the fire, ¹ for I entered through ¹⁰ the midst of the clouds. And I ¹ spoke according to the language of each one. ¹ This is my language which I spoke to you. ¹ And it will be taken from you. And ¹ you will speak with the voice of the world ¹⁵ upon the earth. And it will appear ¹ to you with that appearance ¹ and voice, and ¹ all that I have said to you. ¹ Henceforth proceed with Faith ²⁰ to shine in the depths of the world. ¹

And I, Shem, awoke ¹ as if from a long sleep. ¹ I marveled when I received the ¹ power of the Light and his whole thought. ²⁵ And I proceeded with Faith ¹ to shine with me. And ¹ the righteous one followed us with ¹ my invincible garment. And ¹ all that he had told me ³⁰ would happen upon the earth ¹ happened. Nature was handed over ¹ to Faith, that she (i.e. Faith) might overturn ¹ her and that she (i.e. Nature) might stand in the Darkness. ¹ She brought forth a 42 turning motion while wandering ¹ night and day without ¹ receiving rest with the souls. ¹ These things completed her ⁵ deeds.

Then I rejoiced ¹ in the thought of the Light. ¹ I came forth from the Darkness and I walked ¹ in Faith where ¹ the forms of ¹⁰ Nature are, up to the top of the ¹ earth, to the things which are prepared.

Thy Faith ¹ is upon the earth the ¹ whole day. For all night ¹ and day she surrounds ¹⁵ Nature to take to herself ¹ the righteous one. For Nature is ¹ burdened, and she is troubled. ¹ For none will be able to open the forms ¹ of the Womb except the mind ²⁰ alone who was entrusted ¹ with their likeness. For frightful is ¹ their likeness of the two forms ¹ of Nature, the one which is blind. ¹

But they who have ²⁵ a free conscience ¹ remove themselves from ¹ the babbling of Nature. ¹ For they will bear witness ¹ to the universal testimony; ³⁰ they will strip off the burden ¹ of Darkness; they will put on ¹ the Word of the Light; and ¹ they will not be kept back 43 in the insignificant place. ¹ And what they possess from ¹ the power of the mind they ¹ will give to Faith. They will ⁵ be accepted without ¹ grief. And the chaotic ¹ fire which they possess they ¹ will place in the middle region of ¹ Nature. And they will be received ¹⁰ by my garments, those which are ¹ in the clouds. It is they ¹ who guide their members. They ¹ will rest in the Spirit ¹ without suffering. And because of this the ¹⁵ appointed term of Faith appeared ¹ upon the earth for a ¹ short time, until ¹ the Darkness is taken away from her, and ¹ her testimony is revealed ²⁰ which was revealed ¹ by me. They who will prove ¹ to be from her root ¹ will strip off the ¹ Darkness and the chaotic fire. ²⁵ They will put on the light ¹ of the mind and they will bear witness. ¹ For all that I have said ¹ must happen.

After ¹ I cease to be upon the earth and ³⁰ withdraw up to my rest, ¹ a great, evil error ¹ will come upon ¹ the world, and many evils ¹ in accordance with the number of the forms of 44 Nature. Evil times ¹ will come. And when ¹ the era of Nature is approaching ¹ destruction, darkness will ⁵ come upon the earth. The number will ¹ be small. And a demon ¹ will come up from the power who ¹ has a likeness of fire. ¹ He will divide the heaven, (and) he will rest ¹⁰ in the depth of the east. ¹ For the whole world will quake. ¹ And the deceived world ¹ will be thrown into confusion. Many ¹ places will be flooded because of ¹⁵ envy of the winds and the demons ¹ who have a name ¹ which is senseless: Phorbea, Chloerga. ¹ They are the ones who govern the world ¹ with their teaching. And they lead astray ²⁰ many hearts because of their ¹ disorder and their unchastity. ¹ Many places will be sprinkled ¹ with blood. And five ¹ races by themselves ²⁵ will eat their ¹ sons. But the regions of the south ¹ will receive the Word of the Light. ¹ But they who are from ¹ the error of the world ³⁰ and from the east —. ¹ A demon will come forth ¹ from (the) belly of the serpent. He was 45 in hiding in a desolate place. ¹ He will perform many wonders. Many ¹ will loathe him. A ¹ wind will come forth from his mouth with ¹ a female likeness. Her name will ¹ be called Abalphe. He will ¹ reign over the world from the ¹ east to the west.

Then ¹ Nature will have ¹⁰ a final opportunity. And the stars ¹ will cease from the sky. The mouth ¹ of error will be opened in order that ¹ the evil Darkness may become idle and ¹ silent. And in the last day ¹⁵ the forms of Nature ¹ will be destroyed with the winds and ¹ all their demons; they ¹ will become a dark lump, ¹ just as they were ²⁰ from the beginning. And the ¹ sweet waters which were burdened ¹ by the demons will perish. ¹ For where the power ¹ of the Spirit has gone ²⁵ there are my sweet ¹ waters. The other works ¹ of Nature will not be manifest. ¹ They will mix with the ¹ infinite waters of darkness. ³⁰ And all her forms ¹ will cease from the middle region.

I, ¹ Shem, have completed these things. And ¹ my mind began to separate ¹ from the body of darkness. My 46 time was completed. And ¹ my mind put on the immortal ¹ memorial. And ¹ I said, "I agree with thy ⁵ memorial which thou hast revealed ¹ to me: Elorchaois, and ¹ thou, Amoiaiai, and thou, ¹ Sederkeas, and they guilelessness, ¹ Strophaias, and thou, Chelkeak, ¹⁰ and thou, Chelkea, and ¹ Chelke and Elaie, you (pl.) are ¹ the immortal memorial. ¹ I testify to thee, Spark, ¹ the unquenchable one, who is an eye ¹⁵ of heaven and a voice of light, ¹ and Saphaia, and Saphaia, ¹ and Saphaina, and the righteous ¹ Spark, and Faith, the first ¹ and the last, and the upper air and lower ²⁰ air, {and thou, Chelkeak, and ¹ Chelke and Elaie, you (pl.) ¹ are the immortal memorial. ¹ I testify to thee, Spark, the ¹ unquenchable one, who is an eye of heaven ²⁵ and a voice of light, and ¹ Saphaia, and Saphaia, and Saphaina, ¹ and the righteous Spark, ¹ and Faith, the First and the Last, ¹ and the upper air and the lower air, } and ³⁰ all the powers and the authorities ¹ that are in the world. ¹ And you, impure light, ¹ and you (sg.) also, east, ¹ and west, and south, and ³⁵ north, you (pl.) are the zones 47 of the inhabited world. And ¹ you (fem. sg.) also Moluchtha and Essoch, ¹ you (pl.) are the root ¹ of evil and every work and ⁵ impure effort of Nature." ¹

These are the things which I completed ¹ while bearing witness. I am Shem. ¹ On the day that I was to come forth ¹ from (the) body, when my thought ¹⁰ remained in (the) body, I awoke as if ¹ from a long sleep. And ¹ when I arose as it were from the burden ¹ of my body, I said, ¹ Just as Nature became old, ¹⁵ so is it also in the day of ¹ mankind. Blessed ¹ are they who knew, when they ¹ slept, in what power ¹ their thought rested. ²⁰

And when the Pleiades ¹ separated, I saw clouds ¹ which I shall pass by. ¹ For the cloud of the Spirit is ¹ like a pure beryl. ²⁵ And the cloud of the hymen ¹ is like a shining ¹ emerald. And the cloud ¹ of silence is like a ¹ flourishing amaranth. And ³⁰ the cloud of the middle region is like ¹ a pure jacinth. ¹ And when the righteous one ¹ appeared in Nature, ¹ then — when Nature ³⁵ was angry — she felt hurt, and she granted 48 to Morphaia to visit ¹ heaven. The righteous one visits ¹ during twelve periods ¹ that he may visit them during one ⁵ period, in order that his ¹ time may be completed ¹ quickly, and Nature ¹ may become idle.

Blessed are ¹ they who guard themselves against the ¹⁰ heritage of death, which is ¹ the burdensome water of darkness. ¹ For it will not be possible to conquer them in a ¹ few moments, since they hasten ¹ to come forth from the error of the ¹⁵ world. And if they are conquered, ¹ they will be kept back from them ¹ and be tormented in the darkness ¹ until the time of the consummation. ¹ When the consummation ²⁰ has come and Nature has been ¹ destroyed, then their thoughts will ¹ separate from the Darkness. Nature ¹ has burdened them for a ¹ short time. And they ²⁵ will be in the ineffable ¹ light of the unbegotten ¹ Spirit without a form. ¹ And thus is ¹ the mind as I have said from ³⁰ the first.

Henceforth, O Shem, ¹ go in grace and continue in ¹ faith upon the earth. For every ¹ power of light and fire ¹ will be completed by me 49 because of you. For without you ¹ they will not be revealed until ¹ you speak them openly. ¹ When you cease to be upon the earth, they will ⁵ be given to the worthy ones. And apart from ¹ this proclamation, let them speak ¹ about you upon the earth, since they will ¹ take the care-free and ¹ agreeable land.

THE SECOND TREATISE OF THE GREAT SETH (VII,2)

Introduced by

JOSEPH A. GIBBONS

Translated by

ROGER A. BULLARD and JOSEPH A. GIBBONS

The Second Treatise of the Great Seth is a revelation dialogue allegedly delivered by Jesus Christ to an audience of "perfect and incorruptible ones," that is, gnostic believers. Apart from the title, the name Seth never occurs in the text, though perhaps Jesus Christ is meant to be identified with Seth. The treatise presents, in a brief and simple way, the true story of the Savior's commission by the heavenly Assembly, his descent to earth, his encounter with the worldly powers and apparent crucifixion, and his return to the Pleroma. To this story of the Savior are added an exhortation to the Savior's followers and a promise of future blessedness. As the Savior says to the gnostic believers at the close of his discourse, "Rest then with me, my fellow spirits and my brothers, for ever."

There is no doubt that The Second Treatise of the Great Seth is a work that is both Christian and gnostic. On the one hand, Christian elements are tightly woven into the fabric of the treatise. The tractate accepts the New Testament or parts of it, and claims to be the revelation of Jesus Christ. Furthermore, the crucifixion figures prominently in the tractate; in fact, it is described in three separate scenes within the tractate. On the other hand, The Second Treatise of the Great Seth is also clearly gnostic: knowledge is the means of salvation. The God of this world is evil and ignorant, and can be identified with the God of the Old Testament; in addition, all his minions are mere counterfeits and laughingstocks. The interpretation of the crucifixion is that of the Gnostic Basilides as presented by the heresiologist Irenaeus: Simon of Cyrene is crucified in the place of the laughing Jesus.

The purpose for which The Second Treatise of the Great Seth was written is plainly polemical. The entire first part (49,10-59,18) describes the true history of Jesus Christ and emphasizes, over against orthodox Christianity, his docetic passion. The second part of the tractate (59,19-70,10) is a refutation of orthodoxy's claim to be the true church. Despite the trials and persecutions apparently instigated by the orthodox church, by those ignorant and imitative persons "who think that they are advancing the name of Christ," the gnostic believers will enjoy true brotherhood on earth, and bliss in the joy and union of eternal life.

THE SECOND TREATISE OF THE GREAT SETH

VII 49, 10-70, 12

And the perfect Majesty is at rest ¹ in the ¹ ineffable light, ¹ in the truth of the mother ¹ of all these, and all of you ¹⁵ that attain to me, ¹ to me alone who am perfect, because of ¹ the Word. For I exist with all the ¹ greatness of the Spirit, which is a ¹ friend to us and our ²⁰ kindred alike, since I brought ¹ forth a word to the glory ¹ of our Father, through ¹ his goodness, as well as an ¹ imperishable thought; that is, the Word ²⁵ within him — ¹ it is slavery that we shall die with ¹ Christ — and an imperishable ¹ and undefiled thought, an ¹ incomprehensible marvel, the writing ³⁰ of the ineffable water ¹ which is ¹ the word from us. It is I who am in ¹ you (pl.) and you ¹ are in me, just as the ³⁵ Father is in you 50 in innocence.

Let us ¹ gather an assembly together. ¹ Let us visit that creation ¹ of his. Let us send someone ⁵ forth in it, just as he visited ¹ <the>Ennoias, the regions ¹ below. And I said these things ¹ to the whole multitude of the ¹ multitudinous assembly of the ¹⁰ rejoicing Majesty. ¹ The whole house of the Father of Truth rejoiced ¹ that I am the one who is ¹ from them. I produced thought ¹ about the Ennoias which came ¹⁵ out of the undefiled Spirit, ¹ about the descent upon the water, ¹ that is, the regions below. ¹ And they all had ¹ a single mind, since it ²⁰ is out of one. They charged ¹ me since I was willing. ¹ I came forth to reveal ¹ the glory to my kindred ¹ and my fellow spirits. ²⁵

For those who were ¹ in the world had been prepared by the will ¹ of our sister Sophia — ¹ she who is a whore — ¹ because of the innocence which ³⁰ has not been uttered. And she did not ¹ ask anything from ¹ the All, nor from the greatness ¹ of the Assembly, nor from the ¹ Pleroma. Since she was first she came forth 51 to prepare monads and ¹ places for the Son of Light, ¹ and the fellow workers ¹ which she took from ⁵ the elements below ¹ to build ¹ bodily dwellings from them. ¹ But, having come into being in an ¹ empty glory, they ended ¹⁰ in destruction in the dwellings ¹ in which they were, since they were ¹ prepared by ¹ Sophia. They stand ready ¹⁵ to receive ¹⁵ the life-giving word of ¹ the ineffable Monad ¹ and of the greatness of the assembly ¹ of all those who persevere ¹ and those who are ²⁰ in me.

I visited a ¹ bodily dwelling. I cast ¹ out the one who was ¹ in it first, and I ¹ went in. And ²⁵ the whole multitude ¹ of the archons became troubled. ¹ And all the matter of the archons ¹ as well as all the begotten powers of the earth ¹ were shaken when ³⁰ it saw the likeness of the Image, ¹ since it was mixed. And I am the one who ¹ was in it, not resembling ¹ him who was in it ¹ first. For he was an 52 earthly man, but I, ¹ I am from above ¹ the heavens. I did not refuse ¹ them even to become ⁵ a Christ, but I did not reveal ¹ myself to them in the love ¹ which was coming forth from me. ¹ I revealed that I am a ¹ stranger to the regions ¹⁰ below.

There was a great ¹ disturbance in ¹ the whole earthly area with ¹ confusion and flight, as well as (in) the plan ¹ of the archons. And some ¹⁵ were persuaded, when they saw ¹ the wonders which were being accomplished by ¹ me. And ¹ all these, with the race, that came ¹ down, flee from him ²⁰ who had fled from the throne ¹ to the Sophia of hope, ¹ since she had earlier given the sign ¹ concerning us and all the ones ¹ with me — those of the race ²⁵ of Adoniaios. Others ¹ also fled, as if ¹ from the Cosmocrator ¹ and those with them, ¹ since they have brought every (kind of) punishment ³⁰ upon me. And there was a flight ¹ of their mind ¹ about what they would counsel ¹ concerning me, thinking ¹ that she (Sophia) is the whole greatness, and ³⁵ speaking false witness, ¹ moreover, against the Man and the whole greatness 53 of the assembly. ¹ It was not possible for them to know ¹ who the Father of ¹ Truth, the Man of the ⁵ Greatness, is. But they who received ¹ the name because of contact with ¹ ignorance — which (is) a burning ¹ and a vessel — having created ¹ it to destroy Adam ¹⁰ whom they had made, in order to ¹ cover up those who are theirs ¹ in the same way. But they, ¹ the archons, those of the place of Yaldabaoth, ¹ reveal the realm of ¹⁵ the angels, which ¹ humanity was seeking ¹ in order that they may not know the Man of Truth. ¹ For Adam, ¹ whom they had formed, appeared to them. ²⁰ And a fearful motion came about ¹ throughout their entire dwelling, lest ¹ the angels ¹ surrounding them rebel. For without those ¹ who were offering praise — I did ²⁵ not really die lest ¹ their archangel become empty. ¹

And then ¹ a voice — of the Cosmocrator — ¹ came to the angels: ³⁰ “I am God and ¹ there is no other beside me.” But I laughed joyfully ¹ when I examined his empty glory. ¹ But he went on to ³⁵ say, “Who 54 is man?” And the entire host ¹ of his angels who had ¹ seen Adam and his dwelling were laughing ¹ at his smallness. And ⁵ thus did their Ennoia come to be ¹ removed outside the Majesty ¹ of the heavens, i.e. the ¹ Man of Truth, ¹ whose name they saw since he is ¹⁰ in a small dwelling place, ¹ since they are small (and) senseless ¹ in their empty Ennoia, ¹ namely their laughter. It was ¹ contagion for them.

The whole greatness ¹⁵ of the Fatherhood of the ¹ Spirit was at rest in ¹ his places. And I am he ¹ who was with him, since I have ¹ an Ennoia of a single emanation ²⁰ from the eternal ones ¹ and the ¹ undefiled and immeasurable incomprehensibilities. ¹ I placed the small Ennoia ¹ in the world, ²⁵ having disturbed them and ¹ frightened the whole multitude of the ¹ angels and their ruler. And I ¹ was visiting them all ¹ with fire and ³⁰ flame because of my Ennoia. And ¹ everything pertaining to them was brought about ¹ because of me. And there came about a disturbance ¹ and a fight around ¹ the Seraphim and Cherubim, ³⁵ since their glory will fade, 55 and the confusion around ¹ Adonaios on both sides ¹ and their dwelling – to the Cosmocrator ¹ and him who said, ⁵ “Let us seize him”; others ¹ again, “The plan will certainly not materialize.” ¹ For Adonaios knows me ¹ because of hope. ¹ And I was ¹⁰ in the mouths of lions. And ¹ the plan which they devised ¹ about me to release ¹ their Error and their senselessness – ¹ I did not succumb to them as ¹⁵ they had planned. But I was ¹ not afflicted at all. Those who were there punished ¹ me. And ¹ I did not die in reality ¹ but in appearance, lest ²⁰ I be put to shame by them ¹ because these are my kinsfolk. I ¹ removed the shame from me ¹ and I did not become fainthearted in the face of what ¹ happened to me at their hands. ²⁵ I was about to ¹ succumb to fear, and I ¹ <suffered> according to their sight ¹ and thought, in order that ¹ they may never find any word to speak ³⁰ about them. For my death ¹ which they think happened, ¹ (happened) to them in their ¹ error and blindness, ¹ since they nailed their ³⁵ man unto their death. ¹ For their Ennoias did not see 56 me, for they were deaf ¹ and blind. ¹ But in doing these things, they condemn ¹ themselves. Yes, they saw ⁵ me; they punished me. ¹ It was another, their father, ¹ who drank the gall and the vinegar; ¹ it was not I. They struck ¹ me with the reed; it was another, Simon, ¹⁰ who bore the cross on ¹ his shoulder. ¹ I was another upon whom they placed ¹ the crown of thorns. ¹ But I was rejoicing in the height ¹⁵ over all the wealth ¹ of the archons and the offspring ¹ of their error, of their ¹ empty glory. And I was ¹ laughing at their ignorance. ²⁰

And I subjected all their powers. ¹ For as I came ¹ downward no one saw me. ¹ For I was altering my shapes, ¹ changing from ²⁵ form to form. And ¹ therefore, when I was at their gates ¹ I assumed their likeness. ¹ For I passed them by ¹ quietly, and I was viewing the ³⁰ places, and I was not afraid ¹ nor ashamed, ¹ for I was undefiled. And I was ¹ speaking with them, ¹ mingling with ¹ them through those who are ³⁵ mine, and trampling on those who 57 are harsh to them with zeal, ¹ and quenching the flame. ¹ And I was doing all these things ¹ because of my desire ⁵ to accomplish what I desired ¹ by the will of the Father above. ¹

And the Son ¹ of the Majesty, who was hidden ¹ in the regions below, ¹⁰ we brought to the height where I <was> ¹ in all these aeons with them, ¹ which (height) no one has seen ¹ nor known, where ¹ the wedding of the wedding robe is, ¹⁵ the new one and ¹ not the old, nor does it perish. ¹ For it is a new and perfect bridal chamber of the ¹ heavens, as I ¹ have revealed (that) there are ²⁰ three ways: an ¹ undefiled mystery in a ¹ spirit of this aeon, which does not ¹ perish, nor is it fragmentary, ¹ nor able to be spoken ²⁵ of; rather, it is ¹ undivided, universal, ¹ and permanent. For the soul, the one ¹ from the height, will not speak ¹ about the error which is here, nor ³⁰ transfer from these aeons, ¹ since it will be ¹ transferred when it becomes free and when it ¹ is endowed with nobility ¹ in the world, standing 58 before the Father without weariness ¹ and fear, always mixed ¹ with the Nous of power (and) ¹ of form. They will see me ⁵ from every side without hatred. ¹ For since they see me, they are being seen (and) ¹ are mixed with them. Since they ¹ did not put me to shame, they were not ¹ put to shame. Since they were not afraid ¹⁰ before me, they will pass by ¹ every gate without fear and ¹ will be perfected in the third ¹ glory.

It was ¹ my going to ¹⁵ the revealed height which the world did not accept, ¹ my third baptism in a revealed image. ¹ When they had fled from ¹ the fire of the ¹ seven Authorities, and ²⁰ the sun of the powers of ¹ the archons set, darkness took them. ¹ And the world became poor ¹ when he was restrained with a multitude ¹ of fetters. They nailed him ²⁵ to the tree, and they fixed him with ¹ four nails of brass. The ¹ veil of his temple ¹ he tore with his hands. It was a ¹ trembling which seized ³⁰ the chaos of the earth, ¹ for the souls which were ¹ in the sleep below were released. ¹ And they arose. They went about ¹ boldly, having shed 59 zealous service of ignorance ¹ and unlearnedness ¹ beside the dead tombs, ¹ having put on the new man, ⁵ since they have come to know ¹ that perfect Blessed One of ¹ the eternal and incomprehensible Father ¹ and the infinite light, ¹ which is I, since I came to ¹⁰ my own and united ¹ them with myself. There is no need ¹ for many words, ¹ for our Ennoia was with their Ennoia. ¹ Therefore they knew what ¹⁵ I speak of, for we took counsel ¹ about the destruction of the ¹ archons. And therefore I did ¹ the will of the Father, who is I. ¹

After we went forth from our home, ²⁰ and came down to this world, ¹ and came into being in the world ¹ in bodies, we were hated ¹ and persecuted, not only ¹ by those who are ignorant, but ²⁵ also by those who think that ¹ they are advancing the name of Christ, ¹ since they were unknowingly empty, ¹ not knowing ¹ who they are, like dumb animals. ³⁰ They ¹ persecuted those who have been liberated ¹ by me, since they hate them – ¹ those who, should they shut ¹ their mouth, would weep with a ³⁵ profitless groaning because 60 they did not fully know me. ¹ Instead, they served two masters, ¹ even a multitude. But you will become ¹ victorious in everything, in ⁵ war and battles, ¹ jealous division ¹ and wrath. But in the ¹ uprightness of our love we are ¹ innocent, pure, ¹⁰ (and) good, since we have a mind ¹ of the Father in an ¹ ineffable mystery. ¹

For it was ludicrous. It is I ¹ who bear witness that it was ludicrous, ¹⁵ since the archons do not know ¹ that it is an ¹ ineffable union of ¹ undefiled truth, as exists ¹ among the sons of light, ²⁰ of which they made an imitation, ¹ having proclaimed ¹ a doctrine of a dead man ¹ and lies so as to resemble the freedom ¹ and purity of ²⁵ the perfect assembly, ¹ (and) (joining) themselves with their doctrine ¹ to fear and slavery, ¹ worldly cares, ¹ and abandoned worship, ³⁰ being small (and) ignorant since they do not ¹ contain the ¹ nobility of the truth ¹ for they hate the one in whom ¹ they are, and love ³⁵ the one in whom they are not. ¹ For they did not know the 61 Knowledge of the Greatness, ¹ that it is from above ¹ and (from) a fountain of truth, and that ¹ it is not from slavery ⁵ and jealousy, ¹ fear and love of ¹ worldly matter. For that ¹ which is not theirs and that which ¹ is theirs they use ¹⁰ fearlessly and freely. ¹ They do not desire because ¹ they have authority, and (they have) a ¹ law from themselves over ¹ whatever they will wish. ¹⁵

But those who have not are poor, ¹ that is, those who do not possess him. ¹ And they desire him and ¹ lead astray those, who through ¹ them have become like those who possess ²⁰ the truth of their freedom, ¹ just as they bought us for ¹ servitude and constraint of ¹ care and fear. This person is ¹ in slavery. ²⁵ And he who is brought by ¹ constraint of force and threat ¹ has been guarded by ¹ God. But the entire nobility ¹ of the Fatherhood ³⁰ is not guarded, since he guards only him ¹ who is from him, without ¹ word and constraint, since he is united ¹ with his will, he who belongs only to the ¹ Ennoia of the Fatherhood, ³⁵ to make it perfect ¹ and ineffable through 62 the living water, to be ¹ with you mutually in wisdom, ¹ not only in word ¹ of hearing but in deed ⁵ and fulfilled word. ¹ For the perfect ones are worthy to be established ¹ in this way and to be ¹ united with me, in order that they may not share ¹ in any enmity, in ¹⁰ a good friendship. I ¹ accomplish everything through the Good One, ¹ for this is the union of the truth, ¹ that they should have no adversary. ¹ But everyone ¹⁵ who brings division – and

¹ he will learn no wisdom at all ¹ because he brings division and ¹ is not a friend — is hostile to ¹ them all. But he who lives ²⁰ in harmony and friendship ¹ of brotherly love, ¹ naturally and not artificially, ¹ completely and ¹ not partially, this person is truly the desire ²⁵ of the Father. He is the ¹ universal one and perfect love. ¹

For Adam was a laughingstock, ¹ since he was made a counterfeit ¹ type of man ³⁰ by the Hebdomad, ¹ as if he had become stronger ¹ than I and my brothers. We ¹ are innocent with respect to him, ¹ since we have not sinned. ³⁵ And Abraham and Isaac ¹ and Jacob were a laughingstock, since they, ¹ the counterfeit fathers, were given a name ¹ by the Hebdomad, as if 63 he had become stronger than I ¹ and my brothers. We are ¹ innocent with respect to him, since we have not sinned. ¹ David was a laughingstock ⁵ in that his son was named the Son ¹ of Man, having been influenced ¹ by the Hebdomad, ¹ as if he had become stronger than I ¹ and the follow members of my race. ¹⁰ But we are innocent with respect to him; ¹ we have not sinned. Solomon was a laughingstock, ¹ since he thought that he was Christ, ¹ having become vain through ¹ the Hebdomad, as if he had become ¹⁵ stronger than I and my brothers. ¹ But we are innocent with respect to ¹ him. I have not sinned. ¹ The 12 prophets were laughingstocks, ¹ since they have come forth as imitations of ²⁰ the true prophets. They came into being ¹ as counterfeits through ¹ the Hebdomad, as if ¹ he had become stronger than I ¹ and my brothers. But we are ²⁵ innocent with respect to him, since we have not sinned. ¹ Moses, ¹ a faithful servant, was a laughingstock, ¹ having been named “the Friend,” ¹ since they perversely bore witness concerning him ³⁰ who never ¹ knew me. Neither he ¹ nor those before him, from ¹ Adam to Moses and ¹ John the Baptist, ³⁵ none of them knew me nor 64 my brothers.

For they had a ¹ doctrine of angels ¹ to observe dietary laws and ¹ bitter slavery, since they never ⁵ knew truth, ¹ nor will they know it. ¹ For there is a great deception ¹ upon their soul making it impossible ¹ for them ever to find a Nous of ¹⁰ freedom in order to know ¹ him, until they come to know the Son ¹ of Man. Now concerning my Father, ¹ I am he whom the world ¹ did not know, and because of this, ¹⁵ it (the world) rose up against me and my brothers. ¹ But we are innocent with respect to ¹ him; we have not sinned. ¹

For the Archon was a laughingstock because he said, ¹ “I am God, and ²⁰ there is none greater than I. I ¹ alone am the Father, the Lord, and ¹ there is no other beside me. I ¹ am a jealous God, who ¹ brings the sins of the fathers ²⁵ upon the children for three and ¹ four generations." As if he had ¹ become stronger than I and my brothers! ¹ But we are innocent ¹ with respect to him, in that we have not sinned, ³⁰ since we mastered his teaching. Thus ¹ he was in an empty glory. ¹ And he does not agree ¹ with our Father. And thus ¹ through our fellowship ³⁵ we grasped his teaching, since he ¹ was vain in an ¹ empty glory. And he does ¹ not agree with our Father, ¹ for he was a laughingstock and 65 judgment and false prophecy. ¹

O those who do ¹ not see, you do not see your ¹ blindness, i.e. this which was ⁵ not known, nor ¹ has it ever been known, nor ¹ has it been known about him. ¹ They did not listen to firm obedience. ¹ Therefore they proceeded ¹⁰ in a judgment of error, ¹ and they raised their ¹ defiled and murderous hands against him ¹ as if they were beating the air. ¹ And the senseless and blind ones ¹⁵ are always senseless, ¹ always being slaves ¹ of law and ¹ earthly fear.

I am Christ, ¹ the Son of Man, the one ²⁰ from you (pl.) who is among you. ¹ I am despised for your sake, in ¹ order that you yourselves ¹ may forget the difference. ¹ And do not become female, ²⁵ lest you give birth to evil ¹ and (its) brothers: jealousy ¹ and division, anger ¹ and wrath, fear ¹ and a divided heart, and ³⁰ empty, non-existent desire. ¹ But I am ¹ an ineffable mystery to you. ¹

Then before the ¹ foundation of the world, ³⁵ when the whole multitude ¹ of the Assembly came together ¹ upon the places of the Ogdoad, 66 when they had taken counsel about a ¹ spiritual wedding which is in union, ¹ and thus he was perfected ¹ in the ineffable places ⁵ by a living word, ¹ the undefiled wedding was consummated ¹ through the Mesotes ¹ of Jesus, who inhabits ¹ them all and possesses ¹⁰ them, who abides in an ¹ undivided love of power. ¹ And surrounding him, he ¹ appears to him as ¹ a Monad of all these, ¹⁵ a thought and a father, since he is ¹ one. And he stands ¹ by them all, since he ¹ as a whole came forth alone. And ¹ he is life, since he came from the ²⁰ Father of ineffable ¹ and perfect Truth, ¹ (the father) of those who are there, the union ¹ of peace and a friend ¹ of good things, and life ²⁵ eternal and undefiled joy, ¹ in a great harmony ¹ of life and faith, ¹ through eternal life ¹ of fatherhood and ³⁰ motherhood and sisterhood ¹ and rational wisdom. ¹ They had agreed with Nous, ¹ who stretches out (and) will stretch ¹ out in joyful union ³⁵ and is trustworthy 67 and faithfully listens to ¹ someone. And he is in fatherhood ¹ and motherhood ¹ and rational brotherhood ⁵ and wisdom. And this is a ¹ wedding of truth, ¹ and a repose of incorruption, ¹ in a spirit of truth, ¹ in every mind, and a ¹⁰ perfect light in an ¹ unnameable mystery. ¹ But this is not, nor ¹ will it happen among us ¹ in any region or place ¹⁵ in division and breach ¹ of peace, but (in) union ¹ and a mixture of love, all of which ¹ are perfected in the one who is. ¹

It (fem.) also happened in the places ²⁰ under heaven for their reconciliation. ¹ Those who knew me ¹ in salvation and undividedness, ¹ and those who existed ¹ for the glory of the father ²⁵ and the truth, having been separated, ¹ blended into the one ¹ through the living word. ¹ And I am in the spirit ¹ and the truth of the ³⁰ motherhood, just as he has been there; ¹ I was among those ¹ who are united in the friendship ¹ of friends forever, ¹ who neither know ³⁵ hostility at all, ¹ nor evil, but who are united 68 by my Knowledge ¹ in word and peace ¹ which exists in perfection ¹ with everyone and in ⁵ them all. And those who ¹ assumed the form of my type will ¹ assume the form of my word. Indeed, these ¹ will come forth in light forever, ¹ and (in) friendship with each other ¹⁰ in the spirit, since they have known ¹ in every respect (and) indivisibly ¹ that what is is One. And ¹ all of these are one. And thus ¹ they will learn about the One, as (did) ¹⁵ the Assembly and those dwelling ¹ in it. For the father ¹ of all these exists, being immeasurable ¹ (and) immutable: Nous ¹ and Word and Division ²⁰ and Envy and Fire. ¹ And he is entirely one, being ¹ the All with them all in a ¹ single doctrine because all these ¹ are from a single spirit. ²⁵ O unseeing ones, why ¹ did you not know the mystery ¹ rightly? ¹

But the archons ¹ around Yaldabaoth were disobedient because of ³⁰ the Ennoia who went down to him ¹ from her sister Sophia. ¹ They made for themselves a union ¹ with those who were with ¹ them in a mixture of 69 a fiery cloud, which ¹ was their Envy, and the rest ¹ who were brought forth by ¹ their creatures, as if ⁵ they had bruised the noble pleasure ¹ of the Assembly. ¹ And therefore they revealed ¹ a mixture of ignorance ¹ in a counterfeit ¹⁰ of fire and ¹ earth and a murderer, since ¹ they are small and untaught, ¹ without knowledge having dared ¹ these things, and not having understood ¹⁵ that light has fellowship ¹ with light, and darkness ¹ with darkness, and the ¹ corruptible with the perishable, ¹ and the imperishable with the incorruptible. ²⁰

Now these things I have presented to you (pl.) — ¹ I am Jesus Christ, the Son of ¹ Man, who is exalted above the heavens — , ¹ O perfect and incorruptible ones, ¹ because of the ²⁵ incorruptible and perfect mystery ¹ and the ineffable one. ¹ But they think that we decreed ¹ them before the foundation ¹ of the world in order that, ³⁰ when we emerge from the places ¹ of the world, we may present there ¹ the symbols of ¹ incorruption from the ¹ spiritual union unto 70 knowledge. You (pl.) do not know ¹ it because the fleshly cloud ¹ overshadows you. ¹ But I alone am the friend of Sophia. ⁵ I have been in the bosom ¹ of the father from the beginning, in the place ¹ of the sons of the truth, and ¹ the Greatness. Rest then with me, ¹ my fellow spirits and my brothers, ¹⁰ for ever. ¹

Second Treatise ¹
of the Great Seth

APOCALYPSE OF PETER (VII,3)

Introduced by

JAMES BRASHLER

Translated by

JAMES BRASHLER and ROGER A. BULLARD

The Apocalypse of Peter is a pseudonymous Christian Gnostic writing that contains an account of a revelation seen by the apostle Peter and interpreted by Jesus the Savior. The persecution of Jesus is used as a model for understanding early Christian history in which a faithful gnostic remnant is oppressed by those "who name themselves bishop and also deacons."

This document belongs to the literary genre of the apocalypse. It is organized around three vision reports attributed to Peter. The visions are explained by the Savior, who functions as the interpreting angel commonly found in apocalyptic literature. In a series of prophecies that actually reflect past events, the early Christian church is portrayed as divided into various factions which oppose the gnostic community. The world is a hostile environment for the immortal souls (the Gnostics), who outwardly resemble the mortal souls (non-Gnostics) but inwardly differ from them by virtue of their immortal essence. Having been given knowledge of their heavenly origin, the Gnostics long for the return of the heavenly Son of Man, who will come as the eschatological judge to condemn the oppressors and vindicate the Gnostics.

The apocalyptic form of this tractate has been employed to present a gnostic understanding of Christian tradition about Jesus. The traditional material is skillfully interpreted in accordance with gnostic theology. The first visionary scene, depicting the hostile priests and people about to kill Jesus (72,4-9) is interpreted in terms of at least six groups characterized as "blind ones who have no guide." Many of these groups appear to be from the orthodox church, but some of them may be better understood as rival gnostic sects. The second scene (81,3-14) describes Peter's vision of the crucifixion of Jesus. The accompanying interpretation by Jesus makes a distinction between the external physical form and the living Jesus; the latter stands nearby laughing at his ignorant persecutors. The third visionary scene (82,4-16) corresponds to the resurrection of Jesus in orthodox tradition, but it is interpreted in gnostic terms as a reunification of the spiritual body of Jesus with the intellectual light of the heavenly pleroma.

The Apocalypse of Peter is significant in several respects. It contains important source material for a gnostic Christology that understands Jesus as a docetic redeemer. The view of the Gnostic community, including its relationship to Peter as its originator, is another key theme of this document. Of considerable interest are the identity of the gnostic group to which the writing is addressed, and the stage of the controversy, between emerging orthodoxy and heresy, presupposed by the tractate. It would appear that the Apocalypse of Peter was written in the third century, when this distinction between orthodoxy and heresy was rather clearly drawn.

APOCALYPSE OF PETER

VII 70, 13-84, 14

Apocalypse of Peter ¹

As the Savior was sitting in ¹⁵ the temple in the three hundredth (year) of ¹ the covenant and the agreement of ¹ the tenth pillar, and ¹ being satisfied with the number ¹ of the living, incorruptible Majesty, ²⁰ he said to me, "Peter, ¹ blessed are those ¹ above belonging to the Father ¹ who revealed life ¹ to those who are from the life, through ²⁵ me, since I reminded (them), ¹ they who are built ¹ on what is strong, ¹ that they may hear my word ¹ and distinguish words ³⁰ of unrighteousness and ¹ transgression of law ¹ from righteousness, as 71 being from the height of ¹ every word of this pleroma ¹ of truth, having ¹ been enlightened in good pleasure by ⁵ him whom the principalities sought. ¹ But they did not find ¹ him, nor was he mentioned ¹ among any generation of ¹ the prophets. He has ¹⁰ now appeared among these, ¹ in him who appeared, ¹ who is the Son of Man ¹ who is exalted above the heavens in ¹ a fear of men of like essence. ¹⁵ But you yourself, Peter, ¹ become perfect ¹ in accordance with your name with myself, ¹ the one who chose you, because ¹ from you I have established a base ²⁰ for the remnant whom I have ¹ summoned to knowledge. ¹ Therefore be strong until the ¹ imitation of righteousness — ¹ of him who had summoned you, ²⁵ having summoned you ¹ to know him in a way which is ¹ worth doing because of the rejection ¹ which happened to him, and the sinews ¹ of his hands and his feet, ³⁰ and the crowning ¹ by those of the middle region, ¹ and the body of ¹ his radiance which they bring ¹ in hope of 72 service because of a reward ¹ of honor — as he was about to reprove ¹ you three times ¹ in this night."

And as he was saying ⁵ these things, I saw the priests ¹ and the people running up ¹ to us with stones, as if they ¹ would kill us; and I was afraid ¹ that we were going to die.'

And ¹⁰ he said to me, "Peter, I have told ¹ you many times that ¹ they are blind ones who have ¹ no guide. If you want ¹ to know their blindness, ¹⁵ put your hands upon (your) eyes — ¹ your robe — and say ¹ what you see."

But when I had done it, I did not see ¹ anything. I said, "No one sees (this way)." ²⁰

Again he told me, ¹ "Do it again."

And there came ¹ in me fear with ¹ joy, for I saw a ¹ new light greater than the ²⁵ light of day. Then ¹ it came down upon the Savior. ¹ And I told him about those things ¹ which I saw.

And ¹ he said to me again, "Lift up ³⁰ your hands and ¹ listen to what 73 the priests and the people are saying."

And ¹ I listened to the priests as they sat ¹ with the scribes. The multitudes were ¹ shouting with their voice.

When he ⁵ heard these things from me ¹ he said to me, "Prick up your ears ¹ and listen ¹ to the things they are saying." ¹

And I listened again. "As you sit ¹⁰ they are praising you."

And ¹ when I said these things, the Savior said, ¹ "I have told you that these (people) ¹ are blind and ¹ deaf. Now then, listen to ¹⁵ the things which they are telling you ¹ in a mystery, and ¹ guard them. Do not tell them to the ¹ sons of this age. ¹ For they shall blaspheme ²⁰ you in these ages since they ¹ are ignorant of you, ¹ but they will praise you in knowledge. ¹

"For many ¹ will accept our teaching in the beginning. ²⁵ And they will turn ¹ from them again by the will ¹ of the Father of their error, ¹ because they have done what he wanted. ¹ And he will reveal them ³⁰ in his judgment, i.e. ¹ the servants of the Word. ¹ But those who became 74 mingled with these shall become ¹ their prisoners, ¹ since they are without perception. ¹ And the guileless, good, ⁵ pure one they push ¹ to the worker of death, ¹ and to the kingdom of ¹ those who praise Christ ¹ in a restoration. ¹⁰ And they praise the men ¹ of the propagation of falsehood, ¹ those who will come after you. ¹ And they will cleave to the name ¹ of a dead man, thinking ¹⁵ that they will become pure. But ¹ they will become greatly defiled and they will ¹ fall into a name of error, ¹ and into the hand of an ¹ evil, cunning man and a ²⁰ manifold dogma, and they will be ¹ ruled ¹ heretically.

"For some ¹ of them will ¹ blaspheme the truth and ²⁵ proclaim evil teaching. And ¹ they will say evil things ¹ against each other. Some ¹ will be named: ¹ (those) who stand in (the) strength ³⁰ of the archons, of a man ¹ and a naked woman ¹ who is manifold ¹ and subject to much ¹ suffering. And 75 those who say these things will ¹ ask about dreams. And if they ¹ say that a dream ¹ came from a demon ⁵ worthy of their error, then ¹ they shall be given perdition instead ¹ of incorruption.

"For evil ¹ cannot produce ¹ good fruit (cf. Lk 6:43). For ¹⁰ the place from which each of them is ¹ produces that which is like itself; ¹ for not every soul is ¹ of the truth, nor ¹ of immortality. ¹⁵ For every soul of these ages ¹ has death assigned to it ¹ in our view, because ¹ it is always a slave, ¹ since it is created for its desires ²⁰ and their eternal ¹ destruction, in which ¹ they are and ¹ from which they are. ¹ They (the souls) love the creatures ²⁵ of the matter which came forth ¹ with them.

“But ¹ the immortal souls are not like these, ¹ O Peter. But indeed, as long as ¹ the hour is not yet come, (the immortal soul) ³⁰ shall ¹ resemble a mortal one. ¹ But it shall not reveal ¹ its nature, that it ¹ alone is the 76 immortal one, and thinks about ¹ immortality, having faith, ¹ and desiring to renounce ¹ these things.

“For people do not gather ⁵ figs from thorns or from ¹ thorn trees, if they ¹ are wise, nor grapes ¹ from thistles (cf. Lk 6:44). ¹ For on the one hand, that which is ¹⁰ always becoming is in that ¹ from which it is, being ¹ from what is not good, which ¹ becomes destruction for it (the soul) and ¹ death. But that (immortal soul) which comes to be ¹⁵ in the Eternal One is in the One of ¹ the life and the immortality of ¹ the life which they resemble. ¹

“Therefore all that which exists ¹ not will dissolve into what ²⁰ exists not. ¹ For deaf and ¹ blind ones join only with ¹ their own kind. ¹

“But others shall change ²⁵ from evil words ¹ and misleading ¹ mysteries. Some ¹ who do not understand mystery ¹ speak of things which ³⁰ they do not understand, ¹ but they will boast ¹ that the mystery ¹ of the truth is theirs ¹ alone. And ⁵⁵ in haughtiness 77 they shall grasp at pride ¹ to envy the ¹ immortal soul which has become a pledge. ¹ For every authority, rule, ⁵ and power of the aeons ¹ wishes to be with ¹ these in the creation of ¹ the world, in order that those who ¹ are not, having been forgotten ¹⁰ by those that are, ¹ may praise them, ¹ though they have not been saved, nor have they ¹ been brought to the Way by them, ¹ always wishing ¹⁵ that they may become ¹ imperishable ones. ¹ For if the immortal soul ¹ receives power in an ¹ intellectual spirit — . But immediately ²⁰ they join with one ¹ of those who misled them. ¹

“But many others, ¹ who oppose the ¹ truth and are the messengers ²⁵ of error, will ¹ set up their error and ¹ their law against ¹ these pure thoughts of mine, ¹ as looking out ²⁰ from one (perspective), thinking ¹ that good and evil ¹ are from one (source). ¹ They do business in 78 my word. And they will propagate ¹ harsh fate. ¹ The race of immortal ¹ souls will go in it ⁵ in vain ¹ until my Parousia. ¹ For they shall come out of them — ¹ and my forgiveness of ¹ their transgressions ¹⁰ into which they fell through ¹ their adversaries, ¹ whose ransom I got ¹ from the slavery in which ¹ they were, to give them ¹⁵ freedom that they may create ¹ an imitation remnant ¹ in the name of a dead man, ¹ who is Her-mas, of the ¹ first-born of unrighteousness, ²⁰ in order that the light which exists ¹ may not be believed ¹ by the little ones. ¹ But those of this sort are the workers ¹ who will be cast into the outer darkness, ²⁵ away from the sons ¹ of light. For neither will they ¹ enter, ¹ nor do they permit ¹ those who are going up to ³⁰ their approval for ¹ their release.

“And still others ¹ of them who suffer think ¹ that they will perfect 79
the wisdom of the brotherhood ¹ which really exists, which is the ¹ spiritual fellowship with those ¹ united in communion, ⁵ through which ¹ the wedding of ¹ incorruptibility shall be revealed. ¹ The kindred race
¹ of the sisterhood will appear ¹⁰ as an imitation. ¹ These are the ones who oppress ¹ their brothers, saying ¹ to them, ‘Through this ¹ our God has pity, ¹⁵ since salvation comes ¹ to us through this,’ not knowing ¹ the punishment of those who ¹ are made glad by those who ¹ have done this thing to the little ones whom ²⁰ they saw, (and) whom they took ¹ prisoner. ¹

“And there shall be others ¹ of those who are outside our ¹ number who name themselves ²⁵ bishop and also ¹ deacons, as if they have received ¹ their authority from God. ¹ They bend themselves under the ¹ judgment of the leaders. ³⁰ Those people are ¹ dry canals.” ¹

But I said, “I am afraid because ¹ of what you have told me, that 80 indeed little (ones) are, in our view, the ¹ counterfeit ones, ¹ indeed, that there are multitudes that will mislead ¹ other multitudes of living ones, ⁵ and destroy them among ¹ themselves. And when they speak your name ¹ they will be believed.” ¹

The Savior said, “For a time ¹ determined for them in ¹⁰ proportion to their error they will ¹ rule over the little ones. And ¹ after the completion of ¹ the error, the ¹ never-aging one of the immortal understanding ¹⁵ shall become young, and they (the little ones) shall rule over ¹ those who are their rulers. ¹ The root of their error ¹ he shall pluck out, and he shall ¹ put it to shame so that it shall be manifest ²⁰ in all the impudence which it ¹ has assumed to itself. And ¹ such ones shall become ¹ unchangeable, O Peter.

“Come, ¹ therefore, let us go on with the completion ²⁵ of the will of the ¹ incorruptible Father. ¹ For behold, those who will ¹ bring them judgment are coming, and they ¹ will put them to shame. But me ³⁰ they cannot touch. ¹ And you, O Peter, shall ¹ stand in their midst. Do not be ¹ afraid because of your cowardice. 81 Their minds shall be closed, ¹ for the invisible one ¹ has opposed them.”

When ¹ he had said those things, I saw him ⁵ seemingly being seized ¹ by them. And ¹ I said, “What do I see, ¹ O Lord, that it is you yourself ¹ whom they take, and that you are ¹⁰ grasping me? Or who is this one, ¹ glad and laughing on the tree? ¹ And is it another one ¹ whose feet and ¹ hands they are striking?” ¹⁵

The Savior said to me, “He whom you saw ¹ on the tree, glad ¹ and laughing, this is the ¹ living Jesus. But this one ¹ into whose hands and ²⁰ feet they drive the nails is his fleshly part, ¹ which is the substitute ¹ being put to shame, the one ¹ who came into being in his likeness. ¹ But look at him and me.” ²⁵

But I, when I had looked, said, ¹ ‘Lord, no one is looking at ¹ you. Let us flee this ¹ place.’”

But he said to me, ¹ ‘I have told you, ³⁰ ‘Leave the blind alone!’ ¹ And you, see how ¹ they do not know what they are saying. 82 For the son of ¹ their glory instead of my servant ¹ they have put to shame.’ ¹

And I saw someone about to approach ⁵ us resembling him, even him ¹ who was laughing on the tree. ¹ And he was <filled> with a ¹ Holy Spirit, and he is the ¹ Savior. And there was a great, ¹⁰ ineffable light around them, ¹ and the multitude ¹ of ineffable and ¹ invisible angels ¹ blessing them. ¹⁵ And when I looked at him, ¹ the one who gives praise was revealed. ¹

And he said to me, ¹ “Be strong, for you are the one to whom ¹ these mysteries have been given, ²⁰ to know them through revelation, ¹ that he whom they crucified is ¹ the first-born, and the home ¹ of demons, and the stony vessel (?) ¹ in which they dwell, of Elohim, ²⁵ of the cross ¹ which is under the Law. ¹ But he who stands near him ¹ is the living Savior, the first ¹ in him, whom they seized ³⁰ and released, ¹ who stands joyfully ¹ looking at those who did him ¹ violence, while they are divided among themselves. 83 Therefore he laughs ¹ at their lack of perception, ¹ knowing that they are born blind. ¹ So then ⁵ the one susceptible to suffering shall come, since the body ¹ is the substitute. But what they ¹ released was my incorporeal ¹ body. But I am the intellectual ¹ Spirit filled with ¹⁰ radiant light. He ¹ whom you saw coming to ¹ me is our intellectual ¹ Pleroma, which unites ¹ the perfect light with ¹⁵ my Holy Spirit.

“These things, then, ¹ which you saw you shall present ¹ to those of another race ¹ who are not of this age. ¹ For there will be no honor ²⁰ in any man ¹ who is not immortal, ¹ but only (in) those who were chosen ¹ from an immortal substance, ¹ which has shown ²⁵ that it is able to contain him ¹ who gives his abundance. Therefore ¹ I said, ‘Every one ¹ who has, it will be given to him, and ¹ he will have plenty' (Mt 25:29).

³⁰ But he who does not have, that is, ¹ the man of this place, who is ¹ completely dead, who ¹ is removed from the planting ¹ of the creation of what is begotten, 84 whom, if one ¹ of the immortal essence appears, ¹ they think that ¹ they possess him — ⁵ it will be taken from him and ¹ be added to the one who is. You, ¹ therefore, be courageous and do not ¹ fear at all. For I shall be ¹ with you in order that none ¹⁰ of your enemies may prevail over you. ¹ Peace be to you. Be strong!" ¹

When he (Jesus) had said these things, he (Peter) came ¹ to himself. ¹

Apocalypse of Peter

THE TEACHINGS OF SILVANUS (VII,4)

Introduced and translated by

MALCOLM L. PEEL and JAN ZANDEE

The eclectic spirit of the second and early third centuries is clearly reflected in the fourth tractate of Codex VII, The Teachings of Silvanus. Its author, like other educated Christians, found it necessary both to reject erroneous pagan thought and yet, simultaneously, to appropriate the best of such thought to clarify and make cogent the Faith. The resultant text, a rare specimen of Hellenistic Christian wisdom literature, displays a remarkable synthesis of biblical and late Jewish ideas with Middle Platonic and late Stoic anthropological, ethical, and theological concepts. The synthesis has a didactic purpose: to impart the wisdom of Christ which confers the self-controlled and "quiet" life, enables one to be "pleasing to" the Divine, and, ultimately, helps one "become like God."

Unlike the other four tractates in Codex VII, Teach. Silv. is not gnostic and may even contain some anti-gnostic polemic. It is explicitly affirmed, for example, that all creation has been brought into being by God through his "hand," the Christ. Thus, unlike the gnostic dualists, one should never describe the Creator (demiurge!) as "ignorant," in spite of the author's pessimism regarding interpersonal relations (97,30-98,10). Moreover, instead of a docetic view of Christ, the author states that the Savior "bore affliction" for our sins, "died" as a "ransom" and gave his life for others, and put on "humanity." With respect to anthropology, while the author does espouse a tripartite view of man ("mind," "soul," and "body") similar to the gnostic, he departs sharply from their views that one is "saved by nature." Every human being, the text maintains, possesses both divine "reason" and "mind" and thus has the capacity for salvation; God wishes for all to be saved.

Perhaps what helped attract the Teach. Silv. to the predominantly gnostic collection of writings that constitute the Nag Hammadi library, however, was its rather austere and somewhat ascetic ethic. The text counsels keeping under control base passions, passions and unclean thoughts which are induced by the adversary, Satan. One is to have God alone as a friend, for all the world is deceitful and full of pain. Moreover, "austerity" is a type of life to be preferred, and "fornication" is to be avoided rigorously, as is "lust." Especially must one struggle with Satan, the adversary, who offers temptations in subtle disguises, and whose evil powers seek to infest one's life. Such an ascetic and almost "anchoritic" ethic could have appealed to Gnostics, as could also other concepts in the text, such as the "bridal chamber" in 94,27-29.

The literary genre of Teach. Silv. is clearly indebted to Jewish and Hellenistic Jewish wisdom literature; though the author is also influenced by the Cynic-Stoic diatribe and the Hellenistic hymn styles. Influence from the Jewish side, though, is exhibited in the direct quotes in Teach. Silv. of canonical and apocryphal (e.g., 112,37-113,7 = Wis 7:25-26) wisdom writings.

With respect to content, the first part of Teach. Silv. is more Hellenistic and philosophical in character. The latter part is more specifically Christian and biblical in imagery.

In the initial part (84,15-99,4) the writer's main concern is with the state of the soul. To prevent its being inhabited and overcome by base passions and irrational impulses (symbolically described as "robbers" and "wild, savage beasts," the reader is admonished to let the "mind" (nous) become his "guiding principle" and "reason" (logos) become his "teacher." The terminology and emphases clearly echo the anthropology and ethics of the late Stoa and of Middle Platonism.

In the second part of the tractate (99,6-118,7), on the other hand, emphasis is placed on the salvation of the soul made possible by the Redeemer-Revealer Christ, Son of Almighty God. At the outset, the author echoes the Platonic discussion of the "One and the many," utilizing this concept to discuss how Christ and God, like the "mind" in man's body, is present all places without being confined to a single place. Such "topological theology" both presupposes a non-dualistic cosmology in rather anti-gnostic fashion and offers an implicit refutation of the pantheistic theology of Stoicism. In conclusion, the reader is exhorted to seek Christ's inward help in illuminating "reason," in escaping the control of evil powers, in purifying one's life, and in seeking the lasting rewards of his wisdom and God's way (117,5-118,7).

As to the authorship of Teach. Silv., we know of several early prominent Christians who bore the name "Silvanus." The late dates of their activity, however, and the differences of their teaching from that of our tractate seem to rule out consideration of any of them as its author. Rather, we are probably to recognize in the name "Silvanus" that common device used in Christian apocryphal literature of attributing a later, anonymous writing to a figure known by name in the New Testament canon. Such a "Silas" or "Silvanus" was a prominent member of the Jerusalem Church, cotraveller with Paul (Ac 15:22-40; 16:19-29; etc.), and possibly the amanuensis of "Peter's" named in 1 Peter 5:12. So, here is yet another Nag Hammadi tractate identified with the circle of influence emanating from Paul and Peter (cf. Pr. Paul, Apoc. Paul, Acts Pet. 12 Apost., Apoc. Pet. and Ep. Pet. Phil.). As to who the author of Teach. Silv. actually was, however, we must state (as did Origen of the author of Hebrews) "in truth (only) God knows!"

In dating the text, we are mainly dependent on internal evidence, though dates have been found in the cartonnage used to strengthen the leather envelope that contained Codex VII. These dates point toward the third quarter of the fourth century as the probable time of the manuscript's burial near ancient Chenoboskia. Internal evidence includes the author's apparent knowledge of all major divisions of Old and New Testament canons; the stage of development of the Church's doctrine of Christ's "Descent into Hell" that was familiar to the author; the affinities of the text's "Logos" and "Wisdom" Christology to that of the Alexandrine Fathers, Clement of Alexandria and Origen; and the close parallels of the thought of the later Stoa (notably, Marcus Aurelius) and Middle Platonists (especially Albinus) with that of the author of Teach. Silv. Cumulatively, such evidence points toward the late second to early third century.

Many striking parallels that can be adduced to our text from Philo, Sent. Sex-

tus, Clement of Alexandria, Origen, and even Athanasius underscore its affinities with what has become known as Alexandrian theology. Its theology, Christology, cosmology, anthropology, and ethics all point, in their similarity, toward Alexandrian Egypt as the probable provenance.

The concluding note (118,8-9) is secondary, probably added by the copyist. It is surrounded by magical signs related to Christ's designation as "ichthys" ("fish"), an acrostic signifying "Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior." It may well have been added by the copyist in response to the impressive Christology he has just copied in the text. For him Christ is truly the "extraordinary wonder"!

THE TEACHINGS OF SILVANUS

VII 84, 115-118, 7

118, 8-9

The Teachings of Silvanus ¹

Abolish every childish time of life, ¹ acquire for yourself strength ¹ of mind and soul, ¹ and intensify the struggle against ²⁰ every folly of the passions ¹ of love and base wickedness, ¹ and love of praise, ¹ and fondness of contention, ¹ and tiresome jealousy and wrath, ²⁵ and anger and the desire ¹ of avarice. Guard ¹ your (pl.) camp and ¹ weapons and spears. Arm ¹ yourself and all the soldiers ³⁰ which are the words, and the commanders ¹ which are the counsels, and your 85 mind as a guiding principle.

My ¹ son, throw every robber ¹ out of your gates. Guard ¹ all your gates with torches ⁵ which are the words, and ¹ you will acquire through all these things a ¹ quiet life. But he who will not guard ¹ these things will become like a ¹ city which is desolate since it has been ¹⁰ captured. All kinds of wild beasts have ¹ trampled upon it, for thoughts which ¹ are not good are evil wild beasts. ¹ And your city ¹ will be filled with robbers, and you ¹⁵ will not be able to acquire peace, ¹ but only all kinds of savage wild beasts. ¹ The Wicked One, who is ¹ a tyrant, is lord over these. While ¹ directing this, he (the Wicked One) is beneath the great ²⁰ mire. The whole city ¹ which is your soul will perish. ¹

Remove yourself from these things, O ¹ wretched soul. ¹ Bring in your guide and ²⁵ your teacher. The mind is the guide, ¹ but reason is the teacher. ¹ They will bring you ¹ out of destruction and dangers. ¹

Listen, my son, to my ³⁰ advice! Do not show your back ¹ [to] your enemies and flee, but ¹ rather pursue them as a [strong one]. 86 Be not an animal, with men ¹ pursuing you; but ¹ rather, be a man, with you pursuing ¹ the evil wild beasts, lest somehow ⁵ they become victorious over you and trample ¹ upon you as on a dead man, ¹ and you perish due to ¹ their wickedness.

O wretched ¹ man, what will you ¹⁰ do if you fall into their ¹ hands? Protect yourself ¹ lest you be delivered into the hands of your ¹ enemies. Entrust yourself to this ¹ pair of friends, reason ¹⁵ and mind, and no one ¹ will be victorious over you. May God ¹ dwell in your camp, ¹ may his Spirit protect your ¹ gates, and may the mind of divinity ²⁰ protect the walls. Let holy reason ¹ become a ¹ torch in your mind, burning ¹ the wood which is the whole of sin. ¹

And if you do these things, O my son, ²⁵ you will be victorious over all your enemies, ¹ and they will not be able to wage war ¹ against you, neither will they be able ¹ to resist, nor will they ¹ be able to get in your way. ³⁰ For if you find these, you will despise ¹ them as deniers of truth. ¹ They will speak with you, [cajoling] ¹ you and enticing (you), not because they are [afraid] 87 of you, but because they are afraid of ¹ those who dwell within you, ¹ namely, the guardians of the divinity ¹ and the teaching.

My son, ⁵ accept the education and the teaching. ¹ Do not flee from the education and ¹ the teaching, but when you are taught, ¹ accept (it) with joy. And if ¹ you are educated in ¹⁰ any matter, do what is good. ¹ You will plait a crown of ¹ education by your guiding principle. ¹ Put on the holy teaching ¹ like a robe. Make yourself noble-minded ¹⁵ through good conduct. ¹ Obtain the austerity of ¹ good discipline. Judge ¹ yourself like a wise judge. ¹ Do not go astray from my teaching, ²⁰ and do not acquire ignorance, ¹ lest you lead your people astray. ¹ Do not flee from the divine ¹ and the teaching which are within ¹ you, for he who is teaching ²⁵ you loves you very much. ¹ For he shall bequeath to you a worthy austerity. ¹ Cast out the animal nature ¹ which is within you, ¹ and ³⁰ do not allow base thought to enter you. For . . . you ¹ know the way which I teach.

If it is good to rule over the [few], ¹ as you see it, ³⁵ [how] much better is it that you 88 rule over everyone, since you are exalted ¹ above every congregation and every people, ¹ (are) prominent in every respect, ¹ and (are) a divine reason, having ⁵ become master over every power ¹ which kills the soul.

My son, does anyone ¹ want to be a slave? ¹ Why, then, do you trouble yourself wrongly? ¹

My son, do not ¹⁰ fear anyone except ¹ God alone, the Exalted One. ¹ Cast the deceitfulness of the Devil ¹ from you. Accept the light ¹ for your eyes, and cast ¹⁵ the darkness from you. Live ¹ in Christ, and you will acquire ¹ a treasure in heaven. Do not become ¹ a sausage (made) of many things ¹ which are useless, and do not ²⁰ become a guide ¹ in your blind ignorance. ¹

My son, listen to my ¹ teaching which is good and useful, ¹ and end the sleep which weighs heavily upon you. ²⁵ Depart from the forgetfulness ¹ which fills you with darkness, ¹ since if you were unable ¹ to do anything, I would not have said these things ¹ to you. But Christ has come in order to give you ³⁰ this gift. Why do you ¹ pursue the darkness when the light ¹ is at your disposal? Why ¹ do you drink stale water though ¹ sweet is available for you? ³⁵ Wisdom summons [you], 89 yet you desire folly. ¹ Not by your own desire do you do ¹ these things, but it is the animal nature ¹ within you that does them. ⁵

Wisdom summons you ¹ in her goodness, saying, ¹ "Come to me, all of you, ¹ O foolish ones, that you may receive a ¹ gift, the understanding which is ¹⁰ good and excellent. I am giving to you ¹ a high-priestly garment ¹ which is woven from every (kind of) wisdom." What else ¹ is evil death except ¹ ignorance? What else is ¹⁵ evil darkness except familiarity ¹ with forgetfulness! Cast your anxiety ¹ upon God alone. Do not become ¹ desirous of gold and silver ¹ which are profitless, but ²⁰ clothe yourself with wisdom like ¹ a robe, put knowledge ¹ on yourself like ¹ a crown, and be seated upon a throne ¹ of perception. For these are yours, ²⁵ and you will receive them again on high ¹ another time.

For a foolish man ¹ usually puts on folly ¹ like a robe, and ¹ like a garment of sorrow ³⁰ he puts on shame. And ¹ he crowns himself with ignorance ¹ and takes his seat ¹ upon a throne of ¹ [nescience]. For while he is [without reason], 90 he leads only himself astray, for ¹ he is guided by ignorance. ¹ And he goes the ways ¹ of the desire of every passion. ⁵ He swims in the desires ¹ of life and has sunk. ¹ To be sure, he thinks that he finds profit ¹ when he does all the things ¹ which are without profit. The ¹⁰ wretched man who goes ¹ through all these things will die because ¹ he does not have the mind, ¹ the helmsman. But he is like ¹ a ship which the wind tosses ¹⁵ to and fro, and like ¹ a loose horse which has no rider. ¹ For this (man) ¹ needed the rider which is reason. ¹ For the wretched one went astray ²⁰ because he did not want ¹ advice. He was thrown to and ¹ fro by these three misfortunes; ¹ he acquired death as ¹ a father, ignorance ²⁵ as a mother, and evil counsels — ¹ he acquired them ¹ as friends and brothers. ¹ Therefore, foolish one, you should mourn for yourself. ¹

From now on, then, my son, return ³⁰ to your divine nature. ¹ Cast from [you] these evil, ¹ deceiving friends! ¹ [Accept] Christ, [this true friend], 91 as a good teacher. Cast ¹ from you death, which has ¹ become a father to you. ¹ For death did not exist, nor ⁵ will it exist at the end.

But ¹ since you cast from yourself ¹ God, the holy Father, ¹ the true Life, the Spring ¹ of Life, therefore you have ¹⁰ obtained death as a father ¹ and have acquired ignorance ¹ as a mother. They have robbed ¹ you of the true knowledge. ¹

But return, my son, to ¹⁵ your first Father, God, ¹ and Wisdom your mother, ¹ from whom you came into being ¹ from the very first in order that you might fight against ¹ all of your enemies, the Powers ²⁰ of the Adversary.

Listen, ¹ my son, to my advice. ¹ Do not be arrogant in opposition to ¹ every good opinion, ¹ but take for yourself the side of the divinity ²⁵ of reason. Keep the holy ¹ commandments of Jesus Christ, and ¹ you will reign over every place ¹ on earth and will be ¹ honored by the angels ³⁰ and the archangels. ¹ Then you will acquire them as friends and ¹ fellow servants, and you will acquire ¹ places in [heaven ¹ above].

Do not bring 92 grief or trouble to the divine [which is] ¹ within you. But when you will care for ¹ it, will request of it ¹ that you remain pure, and will become ⁵ self-controlled in your soul ¹ and body, you will become ¹ a throne of wisdom and ¹ one belonging to God's household. He will ¹ give you a great light through ¹⁰ it (wisdom).

But before everything (else), ¹ know your birth. Know ¹ yourself, that is, from what substance you are, ¹ or from what ¹ race, or from what species. ¹⁵ Understand that you have come into being ¹ from three races: ¹ from the earth, from the ¹ formed, and from the created. ¹ The body has come into being from ²⁰ the earth with an earthly substance, ¹ but the formed, for the sake of ¹ the soul, has come into being from the thought ¹ of the Divine. The created, however, is the mind, ¹ which has come into being in conformity with the image ²⁵ of God. The divine mind ¹ has substance ¹ from the Divine, but the soul ¹ is that which he (God) has formed for their ¹ own hearts. For I think ³⁰ that it (the soul) exists as wife of that which ¹ has come into being in conformity with the image, ¹ but matter is the substance ¹ of the body which has come into being from the earth. ¹ female. ¹ And if you cast out of yourself the substance of the mind, ¹⁰ which is thought, ¹ you have cut off ¹ the male part and turned yourself to the female part ¹ alone. You have become psychic ¹ since you have received the substance of the ¹⁵ formed. If you cast out the smallest part of this ¹ so that ¹ you do not acquire again a ¹ human part — but you have accepted for ¹ yourself the animal thought and ²⁰ likeness — you have become fleshly ¹ since you have taken on animal nature. ¹ For (if) it is difficult to find a psychical man, ¹ how much more so to find ¹ the Lord!

[If] you mix yourself, you will acquire the 93 three parts as you ¹ fall from virtue into ¹ inferiority. Live according to ¹ the mind. Do not think about things belonging to ⁵ the flesh. Acquire strength, ¹ for the mind is strong. ¹ If you fall from ¹ this other, you have become male-

But I say that ²⁵ God is the spiritual one. ¹ Man has taken shape from ¹ the substance of God. ¹ The divine soul ¹ shares partly in this One (God); furthermore, ³⁰ it shares partly in the flesh. ¹ The base soul ¹ is wont to turn from side to side ¹ [...] which it imagines the truth. ¹

It is [good] for you, O man, 94 to turn yourself toward the human rather ¹ than toward the animal nature — ¹ I mean toward the fleshly (nature). You ¹ will take on the likeness of the part toward which you will turn yourself. ⁵

I shall say something further ¹ to you. Again, for what ¹ will you (masc. sg.) be zealous? Did you (fem. sg.) wish ¹ to become animal when you had come into ¹ this kind of nature? ¹⁰ But rather, share in ¹ a true nature of life. ¹ To be sure, animality will guide you ¹ into the race of the earth, ¹ but the rational nature will ¹⁵ guide you in rational ways. ¹ Turn toward the rational nature ¹ and cast from ¹ yourself the earth-begotten nature. ¹

O soul, persistent one, ²⁰ be sober and shake off your ¹ drunkenness, which is the work of ¹ ignorance. If you persist ¹ and live in the ¹ body, you dwell in rusticity. ²⁵ When you entered ¹ into a bodily birth, you were ¹ begotten. Come into being inside ¹ the bridal chamber! Be illuminated ¹ in mind!

My son, do not ³⁰ swim in any water, ¹ and do not allow yourself to be defiled ¹ by strange kinds of knowledge. ¹ Certainly you know [that] 95 the schemes of the Adversary ¹ are not few and (that) ¹ the tricks which he has ¹ are varied? Especially has the noetic ⁵ man been robbed ¹ of the intelligence ¹ of the snake. For it is fitting for you ¹ to be in agreement with the ¹ intelligence of (these) two: with the ¹⁰ intelligence of the snake and with ¹ the innocence of the dove — ¹ lest he (the Adversary) come into you ¹ in the guise of a flatterer, ¹ as a true friend, saying, ¹⁵ “I advise ¹ good things for you.” ¹

But you did not recognize the ¹ deceitfulness of this one when ¹ you received him as a true friend. ²⁰ For he casts into your heart ¹ evil thoughts ¹ as good ones, and ¹ hypocrisy in the guise of ¹ true wisdom, ²⁵ avidity in the guise ¹ of conservative frugality, ¹ love of glory ¹ in the guise of that which is beautiful, ¹ boastfulness and ³⁰ pride in the guise ¹ of great austerity, and ¹ godlessness as ¹ [great] godliness. 96 For he who says, "I have ¹ many gods," is godless. ¹ And he casts spurious knowledge ¹ into your ⁵ heart in the guise of mysterious words. ¹ Who ¹ will be able to comprehend his thoughts and ¹ devices which are varied since he is ¹ a Great Mind for those who wish ¹⁰ to accept him as king?

My ¹ son, how will you be able ¹ to comprehend the schemes of this one or his ¹ soul-killing counsel? ¹ For his devices and the ¹⁵ schemes of his wickedness are many. And ¹ think about his entrances, that is, how ¹ he will enter your ¹ soul and in what garment ¹ he will enter you.

Accept ²⁰ Christ, who is able ¹ to set you free, and who has ¹ taken on the devices of that one ¹ so that through these he ¹ might destroy him by ²⁵ deceit. For this is the king whom you have ¹ who is forever invincible, ¹ against whom ¹ no one will be able to fight nor ¹ say a word. This is ³⁰ your king and your father, ¹ for there is no one like him. ¹ The divine teacher is with [you] 97 always. He is a helper, ¹ and he meets you because of the good ¹ which is in you.

Do not put maliciousness ¹ in your judgment, ⁵ for every malicious man ¹ harms his heart. ¹ For only a foolish man is wont ¹ to his destruction, ¹ but a wise man knows ¹⁰ his way.

And a foolish man ¹ does not guard against speaking (a) mystery. ¹ A wise man, (however), ¹ does not blurt out every word, ¹ but he will be discriminating ¹⁵ toward those who hear. Do not mention ¹ everything in the presence ¹ of those whom you do not know. ¹

Have a great number of friends, ¹ but not counselors. ²⁰ First, examine your ¹ counselor, for do not ¹ honor anyone who flatters. ¹ Their word, to be sure, is sweet as ¹ honey, but their heart is full ²⁵ of hellebore. For whenever ¹ they think that they have become ¹ a reliable friend, ¹ then they will deceitfully turn ¹ against you, and they will cast you down ³⁰ into the mire.

Do not ¹ trust anyone as a friend, ¹ for this whole world ¹ has come into being deceitfully, and ¹ every [man] is troubled ³⁵ [in vain]. All things [of] 98 the world are not profitable, ¹ but they happen in vain. ¹ There is no one, not even a brother, (who is trustworthy), ¹ since each one is seeking ⁵ his own advantage.

My son, do not ¹ have anyone as a friend. ¹ But if you do acquire one, do not entrust yourself ¹ to him. Entrust yourself to ¹ God alone as father ¹⁰ and as friend. For everyone ¹ proceeds deceitfully, ¹ while the whole earth is full of suffering and ¹ pain — things in which there is no profit. ¹ If you wish to pass your ¹⁵ life in quiet, do not keep company ¹ with anyone. And if you do keep ¹ company with them, be as if ¹ you do not. Be pleasing ¹ to God, and you will ²⁰ not need anyone.

Live ¹ with Christ, and he will save ¹ you. For he is the true light ¹ and the sun of life. ¹ For just as the sun which is visible ²⁵ and makes light for the eyes of the flesh, ¹ so Christ ¹ illuminates every mind ¹ and the heart. For (if) a wicked man ¹ (who is) in the body (has) an evil death, ³⁰ how much more so (does) ¹ he who has ¹ his mind blind. ¹ For every blind man [goes along ¹ in such a way] that he (?) is seen [just] 99 as one who does not have ¹ his mind sane. He does not ¹ delight in acquiring the light ¹ of Christ, which is reason. ⁵

For everything which is visible ¹ is a copy of that which ¹ is hidden. For as a fire which ¹ burns in a place without being confined ¹ to it, so it is with ¹⁰ the sun which is in the sky, all of whose rays ¹ extend to places ¹ on the earth. Similarly, ¹ Christ has a single being, ¹ and ¹⁵ he gives light to every place. This ¹ is also the way in which he speaks of our ¹ mind, as if it were a lamp ¹ which burns and lights up the place. ¹ (Being) in a part of the soul, ²⁰ it gives light to all the parts. ¹

Furthermore, I shall speak of what is ¹ more exalted than this: the mind, with respect to ¹ actual being, is in a place, ¹ which means it is in the body; ²⁵ but with respect to thought, the mind ¹ is not in a place. For how can it ¹ be in a place when ¹ it contemplates every place? ¹

But we are able ³⁰ to mention what is more exalted than this: ¹ for do not think in your heart ¹ that God exists ¹ [in a] place. If ¹ you localize the [Lord of] all 100 in a place, then it is fitting for you to ¹ say that the place is more exalted than he who ¹ dwells in it. For that which contains ¹ is more exalted than that which is contained. ⁵ For there is no place which is called ¹ incorporeal. ¹ For it is not right for us to say that ¹ God is corporeal. ¹ For the consequence (would be) that we (must) attribute both ¹⁰ increase and decrease to the corporeal, ¹ but also that he (God) who is subject to these ¹ will not remain imperishable. ¹

Now, it is not difficult to know ¹ the Creator of all creatures, ¹⁵ but it is impossible to comprehend ¹ the likeness of this One. For ¹ it is difficult not only for men to ¹ comprehend God, but it is (also) difficult ¹ for every divine being, (both) the angels ²⁰ and the archangels. ¹ It is necessary to know ¹ God as he is. ¹ You cannot ¹ know God through ²⁵ anyone except Christ ¹ who has ¹ the image of the Father, ¹ for this image reveals the true likeness ¹ in correspondence to that which is revealed. ³⁰ A king is not usually known apart from ¹ an image.

Consider these things about ¹ God: he is in every place; ¹ on the other hand, he is in [no] ¹ place. [With respect to power], 101 to be sure, he is in every place; ¹ but with respect to divinity, he is in no ¹ place. So, then, it is ¹ possible to know God a ⁵ little. With respect to his power, ¹ he fills every place, but in ¹ the exaltation of his divinity ¹ nothing contains him. ¹ Everything is in God, ¹⁰ but God is not in anything. ¹

Now what is it to know God? ¹ God is all which is in the truth. ¹ But it is as impossible ¹ to look at Christ as ¹⁵ at the sun. God sees ¹ everyone; no one looks at ¹ him. But Christ without ¹ being jealous receives and gives. He ¹ is the Light of the Father, as he gives ²⁰ light without being jealous. ¹ In this manner he gives light to every place. ¹

And all is Christ, ¹ he who has inherited all ¹ from the Existent One. ²⁵ For Christ is the idea ¹ of incorruptibility, and ³⁰ he is the Light which is shining undefiled. ¹ For the sun (shines) on every impure place, ¹ and yet it is not defiled. ¹ So it is with Christ: even if ¹ [he is in the] deficiency, yet [he] is without deficiency. ³⁵ And even if [he has been begotten], 102 he is (still) unbegotten. So it is with ¹ Christ: if, on the one hand, he is comprehensible, ¹ on the other he is incomprehensible ¹ with respect to his actual being. ⁵ Christ is all. ¹ He who does not possess all is unable to ¹ know Christ.

My son, ¹ do not dare to say a word about ¹ this One, and do not confine the God of all ¹⁰ to mental images. ¹ For he (God) who condemns ¹ may not be condemned by the one who ¹ condemns. Indeed, it is good ¹ to ask and to know who ¹⁵ God is. Reason and mind ¹ are male names. Indeed, let him who wishes ¹ to know about this One ¹ quietly and ¹ reverently ask. For there is no small danger ²⁰ in speaking about these things, since you ¹ know that you will be judged ¹ on the basis of everything that you say. ¹

And understand by this that he who is in ¹ darkness will not be able to see anything ²⁵ unless he receives the light and recovers (his) sight ¹ by means of it. Examine yourself (to see) ¹ whether you wholly have ¹ the light, so that if you ¹ ask about these things, you may understand ³⁰ how you will escape. ¹ For many are seeking in ¹ darkness, and they grope about, ¹ wishing to understand since ¹ there is no light for them.

My 103 son, do not allow your mind to stare ¹ downward, but rather let ¹ it look by means of the light ¹ at things above. ⁵ For the light will always come from above. ¹ Even if it (the mind) is upon the earth, ¹ let it seek to pursue the ¹ things above. Enlighten your ¹ mind with the light of heaven ¹⁰ so that you may turn to ¹ the light of heaven.

Do not tire ¹ of knocking on the door of reason, ¹ and do not cease ¹

walking in the way of ¹⁵ Christ. Walk in it so that ¹ you may receive rest from your ¹ labors. If you walk in another ¹ way, there will be no ¹ profit in it. For also those who walk ²⁰ in the broad way ¹ will go down at their end ¹ to the perdition of the mire. ¹ For the Underworld is open wide for the soul, ¹ and the place of perdition is broad. ²⁵ Accept Christ, ¹ the narrow way. For he is oppressed ¹ and bears affliction for your ¹ sin.

O soul, persistent one, ¹ in what ignorance you exist! ³⁰ For who ¹ is your guide ¹ into the darkness? How many likenesses ¹ did Christ take on because of you? ¹ Although he was God, he [was found] 104 among men as a man. ¹ He descended to the Underworld. He released ¹ the children of death. They were ¹ in travail, as ⁵ the scripture of God has said. And ¹ he sealed up the (very) heart ¹ of it (the Underworld). And he broke its (the Underworld's) strong bows ¹ completely. And ¹ when all the powers had seen ¹⁰ him, they fled so that he might ¹ bring you, wretched one, ¹ up from the Abyss, and might die for you ¹ as a ransom for your sin. He saved ¹ you from the strong hand of the Underworld. ¹⁵

But you yourself, difficult (though it be), give to him your ¹ fundamental assent with (even so much as) a hint ¹ that he may take you up with ¹ joy! Now the fundamental choice, ¹ which is humility of heart, is the gift of Christ. ²⁰ A contrite heart is the acceptable sacrifice. ¹ If you humble yourself, you will be greatly exalted; ¹ and if you exalt yourself, ¹ you will be exceedingly humbled.

My son, ²⁵ guard yourself against wickedness, ¹ and do not let the Spirit of Wickedness ¹ cast you down into the Abyss. ¹ For he is mad and bitter. ¹ He is terrifying, and he casts ³⁰ everyone down into a pit ¹ of mire.

It is a great ¹ and good thing not to love ¹ fornication and not even to think ¹ of the wretched matter 105 at all, for to think of it is death. ¹ It is not good for any man ¹ to fall into death. ¹ For a soul which has been found in ⁵ death will be without reason. ¹ For it is better not to live than ¹ to acquire an animal's life. ¹ Protect yourself lest you are burned ¹ by the fires of fornication. ¹⁰ For many who are submerged in fire are ¹ its servants whom ¹ you do not know as ¹ your enemies.

O my son, strip off ¹ the old garment of fornication, ¹⁵ and put on the ¹ garment which is clean and shining, ¹ that you may be beautiful in it. ¹ But when you have this garment, ¹ protect it well. Release yourself ²⁰ from every bond so that you may ¹ acquire freedom. ¹ If you cast out of yourself ¹ the desire whose ¹ devices are many, you will ²⁵ release yourself from the sins of lust. ¹

Listen, O soul, to my ¹ advice. Do not become ¹ a den of foxes and snakes, nor ¹ a hole of serpents and ³⁰ asps, nor a dwelling place ¹ of lions, or a place of refuge ¹ of basilisk-snakes. When these things ¹ happen to you, O soul, what ¹ will you do? For these are the powers 106 of the Adversary. ¹ Everything which is dead will come ¹ into you through them (the powers). ¹ For their food is everything which is dead ⁵ and every unclean thing. For when these ¹ are within you, what living thing ¹ will come into you? ¹ The living angels will detest you. ¹ You were ¹⁰ a temple, (but) you have made yourself a tomb. Cease ¹ being a tomb, and become (again) ¹ a temple, so that uprightness ¹ and divinity may remain in ¹ you.

Light the light within you. ¹⁵ Do not extinguish it. Certainly no one ¹ lights a lamp for wild beasts or ¹ their young. ¹ Raise your dead who have died, ¹ for they lived and have died for ²⁰ you. Give them life. ¹ They shall live again.

For the Tree of ¹ Life is Christ. He is ¹ Wisdom. For he is Wisdom; ¹ he is also the Word. He ²⁵ is the Life, the Power, ¹ and the Door. He is the Light, ¹ the Angel, and ¹ the Good Shepherd. Entrust yourself ¹ to this one who became ³⁰ all for your sake.

Knock ¹ on yourself as upon ¹ a door, and walk upon ¹ yourself as on a straight road. ¹ For if you walk on the road, ³⁵ it is impossible for you to go astray. 107 And if you knock with this one (Wisdom), you ¹ knock on hidden treasures. ¹

For since he (Christ) is Wisdom, ¹ he makes the foolish man wise. ⁵ It (Wisdom) is a holy kingdom ¹ and a shining robe. ¹ For it (Wisdom) is much gold ¹ which gives you great honor. ¹ The Wisdom of God ¹⁰ became a type of fool for you ¹ so that it might take you up, ¹ O foolish one, and make you a wise man. ¹ And the Life died ¹ for you when he (Christ) was powerless, ¹⁵ so that through his death ¹ he might give life to you who have died. ¹

Entrust yourself to ¹ reason and remove yourself from ¹ animalism. For ²⁰ the animal which has no ¹ reason is made manifest. ¹ For many think that they have ¹ reason, but if you ¹ look at them attentively, ²⁵ their speech is animalistic. ¹

Give yourself gladness from the true ¹ vine of Christ. ¹ Satisfy yourself with the true wine ¹ in which there is no drunkenness ³⁰ nor error. ¹ For it (the true wine) marks ¹ the end of drinking since there ¹ is usually in it what gives joy ¹ to the soul and ³⁵ the mind through the Spirit of God. 108 But first, nurture your reasoning powers ¹ before you drink ¹ of it (the true wine).

Do not pierce yourself with ¹ the sword of sin. Do not burn yourself, ⁵ O wretched one, with the fire ¹ of lust. Do not surrender yourself ¹ to barbarians like a prisoner, ¹ nor to ¹ savage beasts which want ¹⁰ to trample upon you. ¹ For they are as lions ¹ which roar very loudly. Be not ¹ dead lest they ¹ trample upon you. You shall be man! ¹⁵ It is possible for you through reasoning ¹ to conquer them. ¹

But the man who does nothing is unworthy of ¹ (being called) rational man. The rational man ¹ is he who fears God. ²⁰ He who fears ¹ God does nothing insolent. ¹ And he who guards himself ¹ against doing anything insolent is one ¹ who keeps his guiding principle. ²⁵ Although he is a man who exists ¹ on earth, he makes himself like ¹ God.

But he who makes himself like ¹ God is one who does ¹ nothing unworthy of God, ³⁰ according to the statement of Paul ¹ who has become like ¹ Christ.

For who shows reverence ¹ for God while not wanting ¹ to do things which are pleasing ³⁵ to him? For piety ¹ is that which is 109 from the heart, ¹ and piety from ¹ the heart (characterizes) every soul which is near to ¹ God.

The soul which is ⁵ a member of God's household is one which ¹ is kept pure, ¹ and the soul which has put on Christ ¹ is one which is pure. ¹ It is impossible for it to sin. ¹⁰ Now where Christ is, there ¹ sin is idle.

Let Christ ¹ alone enter your world, ¹ and let him bring to naught ¹ all powers which have come upon you. ¹⁵ Let him enter the temple which is ¹ within you so that he may cast ¹ out all the merchants. Let him ¹ dwell in the temple which is ¹ within you, and may you become ²⁰ for him a priest and a Levite, ¹ entering in purity. ¹

Blessed are you, O soul, if you ¹ find this one in your temple. ¹

Blessed are you still more if you perform his ²⁵ service.

But he who will defile ¹ the temple of God, that one God ¹ will destroy. For you lay yourself open, ¹ O man, if you ¹ cast this one out of your ³⁰ temple. For whenever ¹ the enemies do not see Christ ¹ in you, then they will come into ¹ you armed in order to crush ¹ you.

O my son, I have given ³⁵ you orders concerning these things many times 110 so that you would always guard your ¹ soul. It is not you who ¹ will cast him (Christ) out, but ¹ he will cast you out. For ⁵ if you flee from him, you will ¹ fall into great sin. ¹ Again, if you flee from him, you will ¹ become food for your enemies. ¹ For all base persons flee from ¹⁰ their lord, and the (man) base in virtue ¹ and wisdom flees from ¹ Christ. For every man who is ¹ separated (from him) falls into the claws ¹ of the wild beasts.

Know who Christ is, ¹⁵ and acquire him as a friend, ¹ for this is the friend who is faithful. ¹ He is also God and ¹ Teacher. This one, being God, became ¹ man for your sake. It is this one who ²⁰ broke the iron bars ¹ of the Underworld and the bronze bolts. ¹ It is this one who attacked ¹ and cast down ¹ every haughty tyrant. It is he ²⁵ who loosened from himself the chains ¹ of which he had taken hold. ¹ He brought up the poor from the ¹ Abyss and the mourners from ¹ the Underworld. It is he who humbled ³⁰ the haughty powers; ¹ he who put to shame haughtiness ¹ through humility; he who has cast ¹ down the strong and ¹ the boaster through weakness; ³⁵ he who in his contempt scorned that which is 111 considered an honor ¹ so that ¹ humility for God's sake might be highly exalted; ¹ (and) he who has put on humanity. ⁵

And yet, the divine Word is God, ¹ he who bears patiently with man always. ¹ He wished to produce ¹ humility in the exalted. He (Christ) who has ¹ exalted man became like ¹⁰ God, not in order that he ¹ might bring God down to ¹ man, but that man might become ¹ like God.

O this ¹ great goodness of God! ¹⁵ O Christ, King who has revealed ¹ to men the Great Divinity, ¹ King of every virtue and ¹ King of life, King of ages and ¹ Great One of the heavens, hear my words ²⁰ and forgive me!

Furthermore, ¹ he manifested a great zeal ¹ for Divinity.

Where is a man (who is) wise ¹ or powerful in intelligence, ¹ or a man whose devices are many ²⁵ because he knows wisdom? ¹ Let him speak wisdom; let him utter ¹ great boasting! ¹ For every man has become a fool and has spoken out of ¹ his (own) knowledge. For he (Christ) confounded the ³⁰ counsels of guileful people, and ¹ he prevailed over those wise in their own ¹ understanding.

Who will be able ¹ to discover the counsel of the ¹ Almighty, or to speak of the ³⁵ Divinity, or to proclaim it correctly? 112 If we have not even been able to ¹ understand the counsels of our companions, ¹ who will be able to comprehend the Divinity ¹ or the divinities of ⁵ the heavens? If ¹ we scarcely find things on earth, ¹ who will search for the things of ¹ heaven? A Great Power ¹ and Great Glory has made the world ¹ known.

And the Life ¹ of Heaven wishes to renew all, ¹ that he may cast out that which is ¹ weak and every black form, ¹ that everyone may shine forth in ¹⁵ heavenly garments in order to make manifest ¹ the command of the Father (who) is exceedingly brilliant, ¹ and that he (Christ) may ¹ crown those wishing to contend ¹ well. Christ, being judge of the contest, ²⁰ is he who crowned every one, ¹ teaching every one ¹ to contend. This one who contended ¹ first received the crown, gained dominion, ¹ and appeared, giving light ²⁵ to everyone. And all were ¹ made new through the Holy Spirit ¹ and the Mind.

O Lord Almighty, ¹ how much glory shall I give Thee? ¹ No one has been able ³⁰ to glorify God adequately. ¹ It is Thou who hast given glory ¹ to Thy Word in order to save ¹ everyone, O Merciful God. (It is) he who ¹ has come from Thy mouth and has risen from ³⁵ Thy heart, the First-born, the Wisdom, ¹ the Prototype, the First ¹ Light.

For he is light from 113 the power of God, and ¹ he is an emanation of the pure glory ¹ of the Almighty. ¹ He is the spotless mirror of the working ⁵ of God, and he is the image of his ¹ goodness. For he is also the Light ¹ of the Eternal Light. He is the eye ¹ which looks at the invisible ¹ Father, always serving ¹⁰ and forming ¹ by the Father's will. He ¹ alone was begotten by the Father's good pleasure. ¹ For he is an incomprehensible Word, ¹ and he is Wisdom ¹⁵ and Life. He gives life to and ¹ nourishes all living things and powers. ¹ Just as the ¹ soul gives life to all the members, ¹ he rules all with ²⁰ power and gives life to them. ¹ For he is the beginning and ¹ the end of everyone, watching over ¹ all and encompassing them. ¹ He is troubled on behalf of everyone, and he rejoices ²⁵ and also mourns. On the one hand, he mourns ¹ for those who have gotten as their lot the place ¹ of punishment; on the other, he is troubled ¹ about every one whom he arduously brings ¹ to instruction. ³⁰ But he rejoices over everyone who ¹ is in purity.

Then beware, ¹ lest somehow you fall into the hands of the ¹ robbers. Do not allow sleep ¹ to your eyes nor ³⁵ drowsiness to your eyelids that ¹ you may be saved like a gazelle ¹ from nets and like a 114 bird from a trap.

Fight the ¹ great fight as long as the fight lasts, ¹ while all the powers are ¹ staring after you — not only the holy ones, ⁵ but also all the powers ¹ of the Adversary. Woe ¹ to you if you are vanquished in the midst ¹ of every one who is watching you! ¹ If you fight the fight and ¹⁰ are victorious over the powers which fight against you, ¹ you will bring great joy to every ¹ holy one, and yet ¹ great grief to your enemies. Your ¹ judge helps (you) completely ¹⁵ since he wants you to be victorious.

Listen, my ¹ son, and do not be slow ¹ with your ears. Raise yourself up when you have left your old man behind ¹ like an eagle. Fear ²⁰ God in all your acts, ¹ and glorify him through ¹ good work. You know that every man who is ¹ not pleasing to God is the son of perdition. ²⁵ He will go down to the Abyss ¹ of the Underworld.

O this patience ¹ of God, which bears with ¹ every one, which desires that ¹ every one who has become ³⁰ subject to sin be saved!

But no one prevents ¹ him (God) from doing what he wants. ¹ For who is stronger than him that ¹ he may prevent him? To be sure, ¹ it is he who touches the earth, ³⁵ causing it to tremble and also causing ¹ the mountains to smoke. (It is) he who has ¹ gathered together such a great sea 115 as in a leather bag and ¹ has weighed all the water on his scales. ¹ Only the hand of the Lord ¹ has created all these things. ⁵ For this hand of the Father is Christ, ¹ and it forms all. ¹ Through it, all has come into being ¹ since it became the mother of all. ¹ For he is always ¹⁰ Son of the Father. ¹

Consider these things about God Almighty ¹ who always exists: ¹ this One was not always ¹ King for fear that ¹⁵ he might be without a ¹ divine Son. For all dwell ¹ in God, (that is), the things which have come into being ¹ through the Word, who is ¹ the Son as the image of the Father. ²⁰

For God is nearby; he ¹ is not far off. All divine limits ¹ are those which belong to God's household. ¹ Therefore, if the divine agrees with ¹ you partially in anything, ²⁵ know that all of the Divine ¹ agrees with you. But this ¹ divine is not pleased with anything ¹ evil. For it is this which ¹ teaches all men what is good. ³⁰ This is what God has ¹ given to the human race ¹ so that for this reason every man ¹ might be chosen ¹ before all the angels ³⁵ and the archangels. ¹

For God does not need ¹ to put any man to the test. 116 He knows all things ¹ before they happen, and ¹ he knows the hidden things of the heart. ¹ They are all revealed and ⁵ found wanting in his presence. Let ¹ no one ever say that God ¹ is ignorant. For it is not right ¹ to place the Creator of ¹ every creature in ignorance. ¹⁰ For even things which are in darkness ¹ are before him like (things in) the light. ¹

So, there is no other one hidden except ¹ God alone. But he is revealed ¹ to everyone, and yet ¹⁵ he is very hidden. He is revealed ¹ because God knows ¹ all. And if they do not wish ¹ to affirm it, they will be corrected by ¹ their heart. Now he is hidden because ²⁰ no one perceives the things of God. ¹ For it is incomprehensible and ¹ unfathomable to know ¹ the counsel of God. Furthermore, ¹ it is difficult to comprehend him, and it is difficult ²⁵ to find Christ. For he is the one who dwells ¹ in every place, and also he is ¹ in no place. For no one ¹ who wants to will be able to know ¹ God as he actually is, ³⁰ nor Christ, nor

¹ the Spirit, nor the chorus of ¹ angels, nor even the archangels, 117 as well as the thrones of the spirits, ¹ and the exalted lordships, ¹ and the Great Mind. If you do not ¹ know [yourself], you will not be able ⁵ to know all of these.

Open ¹ the door for yourself that you may know ¹ the One who is. Knock on ¹ yourself that the Word ¹ may open for you. For he ¹⁰ is the Ruler of Faith and ¹ the Sharp Sword, having become all ¹ for everyone because he wishes ¹ to have mercy on everyone.

My son, ¹ prepare yourself to escape from the ¹⁵ world-rulers of darkness and of ¹ this kind of air which is full of powers. ¹ But if you have ¹ Christ, you will conquer this entire world. ¹ That which you will open ²⁰ for yourself, you will open. ¹ That which you will knock upon for yourself, you will ¹ knock upon, benefiting yourself. ¹

Help yourself, my son, ¹ (by) not proceeding with things in which ²⁵ there is no profit.

My son, ¹ first purify yourself toward the outward life ¹ in order that you may be able ¹ to purify the inward.

And ¹ be not as the merchants ³⁰ of the Word of God.

Put ¹ all words to the test first ¹ before you utter them. ¹

Do not wish to acquire honors which ¹ are insecure, nor 118 the boastfulness which brings ¹ you to ruin.

Accept ¹ the wisdom of Christ (who is) patient ¹ and mild, and guard ⁵ this, O my son, knowing ¹ that God's way is always ¹ profitable. ¹

Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior (Ichthus), Wonder ¹ Extraordinary

THE THREE STELES OF SETH (VII,5)

Introduced by

JAMES E. GOEHRING

Translated by

JAMES M. ROBINSON

The Three Steles of Seth offers a rare view into the worship practice of a Gnostic Sethian community. These Gnostics identified their teachings with the primal revelation of God to Adam, which had passed through Seth to his descendants (The Apocalypse of Adam, V,5). Lost and forgotten for ages, this Sethian gnosis had been revealed anew in the latter days. The recipients of this renewed revelation understood themselves as “the living and unshakable race” (118,12-13), the true latter-day descendants of Seth (hence the modern label of Sethian Gnosticism). The Three Steles of Seth is presented as part of this latter-day revelation, in this case to Dositheos, the supposed Samaritan founder of Gnosticism.

The text, which shows no Christian influence, is indebted to Jewish and Neoplatonic traditions. In Genesis, Seth marks a new beginning after the tragic conflict between Cain and Abel (Gn 3:25-5:8). Appointed by God to replace Abel, he is a son in the likeness of his father Adam, as Adam is in the likeness of God. It is in his time that “men began to call upon the name of the Lord.” According to the first-century Jewish historian Josephus (Ant. I,67-71), Seth’s descendants continued to follow his godfearing ways for seven generations, after which they too fell into a life of depravity. During this time, they preserved and added to the knowledge transmitted by Adam to Seth. Forewarned of impending divine judgements by water and fire, they preserved this knowledge for future generations on two steles, one of stone to survive the flood and one of brick to survive the fire.

This legend accounts for the presentation of the present text as the content of steles attributed to Seth (cf. Zost. 130,1-4 and Gos. Eg. 68,10-23). The expansion from the original two steles in the Jewish legend to three represents the influence of Neoplatonic conceptions of the divine triad. The three steles or hymnic prayers of the present text are addressed in ascending order to the threefold nature of god: the Selfbegotten Son, the male virgin Barbelo (mother), and the Unbegotten Father.

Ecstatic trips through the heavens are well attested in Sethian Gnosticism. The Sethian tractates Zostrianos and Allogenes record such journeys by the seers for which the texts were named. These accounts, however, record what was revealed to the seer in his ascent. The invocations of the seer to the divine triad are only noted in passing, as when Zostrianos affirms, “I joined with them all and blessed the Kalyptos aeon and the virgin Barbelo and the Invisible Spirit. I became all-perfect.” In The Three Steles of Seth these blessings or hymnic prayers are recorded in full.

Since Allogenes may be interpreted as another name for Seth, both tractates may commemorate the ascent of the community's primal ancestor to the divine triad. However, while Allogenes records for edification what was revealed to the seer, The Three Steles of Seth preserves the invocations of the seer as a prototype to serve the latter-day Sethian community in its liturgical reenactment of his ascent. While the hymnic prayers are set forth in the tractate as prayers of Seth, first person plural references in the text (e.g. 124,17-18) betray the use of the prayers in the worship practice of the community. The text has led Hans Martin Schenke to posit the existence of a Sethian mystery of ascension. The three subdivisions of the text thus correspond to the three stages or levels in the worshippers' ascent to the threefold nature of god, since at the conclusion of the tractate one must return from the third back down to the second and first.

Neoplatonic philosophical terminology abounds in the text, especially the Existence-Life-Mind triad in the deity. The terminology is also found in the related tractates of Zostrianos, Allogenes, and Marsanes, which together form a cluster of Sethian Gnostic texts with close ties to Neoplatonism. Zostrianos and Allogenes are both mentioned by Porphyry in his Life of Plotinus as texts refuted by Plotinus, who taught a course "Against the Gnostics" in 265-266 C.E. Thus a dating for this stage of Sethian Gnosticism and therefore for The Three Steles of Seth is suggested. Provenience is uncertain, though the philosophical nature of the text would be much at home in Alexandria, Egypt.

The scribal note at the end of the text (127,28-32) has been variously interpreted as applying to The Three Steles of Seth alone or to the codex as a whole.

THE THREE STELES OF SETH

VII 118, 10-127, 27
127, 28-32

The revelation of Dositheos ¹ about the three steles ¹ of Seth, the Father of the living ¹ and unshakable race, which ¹ he (Dositheos) saw and understood. ¹⁵ And after he had read them, he ¹ remembered them. And he gave them ¹ to the elect, just ¹ as they were ¹ inscribed there. ²⁰

Many times I joined in ¹ giving glory with the powers, and I became worthy of the ¹ immeasurable majesties. ¹

Now they (the steles) are as follows:

The First ²⁵
Stele of Seth.

I bless ¹ thee, Father Geradama(s), I, ¹ as thine (own) Son, ¹ Emmacha Seth, whom thou didst beget ¹ without begetting, as a blessing ³⁰ of our God; for I am ¹ thine (own) Son. And thou 119 art my mind, O my Father. And ¹ I, I sowed and begot; ¹ [but] thou hast [seen] the majesties. ¹ Thou hast stood imperishable. I ⁵ bless thee, Father. Bless me, ¹ Father. It is because of thee that I exist; ¹ it is because of God that thou dost exist. Because ¹ of thee I am with ¹ that very one. Thou art light, ¹⁰ since thou beholdest light. Thou hast ¹ revealed light. Thou art ¹ Mirotheas; thou art my Mirotheos. ¹ I bless thee as ¹ God; I bless thy ¹⁵ divinity. Great is the ¹ good Self-begotten who ¹ stood, the God who had already ¹ stood. Thou didst come in goodness; ¹ thou hast appeared, and thou hast ²⁰ revealed goodness. I shall utter ¹ thy name, for thou art a first ¹ name. Thou art unbegotten. Thou ¹ hast appeared in order that thou ¹ mightest reveal the eternal ones. ²⁵ Thou art he who is. Therefore ¹ thou hast revealed those who really ¹ are. Thou art he who is uttered ¹ by a voice, ¹ but by mind art thou ³⁰ glorified, thou who hast ¹ dominion everywhere. Therefore ¹ [the] perceptible world too ¹ knows thee because of ¹ thee and they seed. Thou art merciful. 120

And thou art from another race, ¹ and its place is over another race. ¹ And now thou art from another ¹ race, and its [place is] over another ⁵ race. Thou art from another ¹ race, for thou art not similar. And thou ¹ art merciful, for thou art eternal. ¹ And thy place is over a race, ¹ for thou hast caused all these to increase; and for the sake of ¹⁰ my seed. For it is thou who knows ¹ it, that its place is in begetting. But they ¹ are from other races, for ¹ they are not similar. But their place is over ¹ other races, for their place is in ¹⁵ life. Thou art Mirotheos.

I bless his power which was ¹ given to me, who caused the ¹ male-nesses that really are to become ¹ male three times; ²⁰ he who was divided into the pentad, the one who ¹ was given to us in triple ¹ power, the one who was begotten without begetting, the one who ¹ came from that which is elect; because of ²⁵ what is humble, he went ¹ forth from the midst.

Thou art a Father ¹ through a Father, ¹ a word from a command. ¹ We bless thee, Thrice Male, ³⁰ for thou didst unite the all ¹ through them all, for thou hast ¹ empowered us. Thou hast arisen from ¹ one; from one thou hast gone forth; ¹ thou hast come to one. [Thou] hast saved, ³⁵ thou hast saved, thou hast saved us, O ¹ crown-bearer, crown-giver! 121 We bless thee eternally. ¹ We bless thee, once we have ¹ been saved, as the perfect individuals, ¹ perfect on account ⁵ of thee, those who [became] perfect with thee ¹ who is complete, who completes, ¹ the one perfect through all these, ¹ who is similar everywhere.

Thrice ¹ Male, thou hast stood. Thou hast already ¹⁰ stood. Thou wast divided everywhere. Thou didst continue being one. And ¹ those whom thou hast willed, thou hast saved. ¹ But thou dost will to be saved ¹ all who are worthy.

Thou art ¹⁵ perfect! Thou art perfect! ¹ Thou art perfect!

The First ¹
 Stele of Seth ¹

The Second Stele ¹
 of Seth ²⁰

Great is the first aeon, ¹ male virginal Barbelo, ¹ the first glory ¹ of the invisible Father, she ¹ who is called ²⁵ "perfect."

Thou (fem.) hast seen first ¹ the one who truly pre-exists ¹ because he is a non-being. And ¹ from him and through ¹ him thou hast pre-existed ³⁰ eternally, the non-being ¹ from one indivisible, ¹ triple [power], thou a triple ¹ power, [thou a] great monad ¹ from [a] pure monad, 122 thou an elect monad, the ¹ first [shadow] of the holy ¹ Father, light from ¹ light.

[We] bless thee, ⁵ producer (fem.) of perfection, aeon-giver (fem.). ¹
 Thou hast [seen] the eternal ¹ ones because they are from a shadow. ¹
 And thou hast become numerable. And ¹ thou didst find, thou didst continue being ¹⁰ one (fem.); yet becoming numerable in division, thou ¹ art three-fold. Thou art truly ¹ thrice, thou one (fem.) ¹ of the one (masc.). And thou art from ¹ a shadow of him, thou a Hidden One, ¹⁵ thou a world of understanding, ¹ knowing those of the one, that they ¹ are from a shadow. And these ¹ are thine in the heart.

For ¹ their sake thou hast empowered the eternal ones ²⁰ in being; thou hast empowered ¹ divinity in living; ¹ thou hast empowered knowledge in ¹ goodness; in ¹ blessedness thou hast empowered the ²⁵ shadows which pour from the one. ¹ Thou hast empowered this (one) in knowledge; ¹ thou hast empowered another one in creation. ¹ Thou hast empowered him who is equal ¹ and him who is not equal, him ³⁰ who is similar and him who is not similar. ¹ Thou hast empowered in begetting, and ¹ (provided) forms in [that which] exists ¹ to others. [. . .
¹ Thou hast] empowered 123 these. — He is that One Hidden ¹ [in] the heart. — And [thou hast] come forth to ¹ these and [from] these. Thou art divided ¹ [among them]. And thou dost ⁵ become a great male [noetic] First-Appearer. ¹

- Fatherly God, ¹ divine child, ¹ begetter of multiplicity according to a division ¹ of all who really are, ¹⁰ thou (masc.) hast appeared to them all in ¹ a word. And thou (masc.) dost possess ¹ them all without begetting

¹ and eternally indestructible ¹ on account of thee (fem.). ¹⁵

Salvation has come to us; from ¹ thee is salvation. Thou art ¹ wisdom, thou knowledge; thou ¹ art truthfulness. On account of thee is ¹ life; from thee is life. ²⁰ On account of thee is mind; from ¹ thee is mind.
 Thou art mind, ¹ thou a world of truthfulness, ¹ thou a triple power, thou ¹ threefold. Truly thou art ²⁵ thrice, the aeon of ¹ aeons. It is thou only ¹ who sees purely the first ¹ eternal ones and the unbegotten ones. ¹

But the first divisions are as ³⁰ thou wast divided. Unite us ¹ as thou hast been united. ¹ Teach us [those] things which thou dost see. ¹ Empower [us] that we may 124 be saved to eternal life. ¹ For [we] are [each] a shadow ¹ of thee as thou art ¹ a shadow [of that] ⁵ first pre-existent one. Hear ¹ us first. We are eternal ones. ¹ Hear us as the ¹ perfect individuals. Thou art the aeon ¹ of aeons, the all-perfect one ¹⁰ who is established.

Thou hast heard! ¹ Thou hast heard!

Thou hast saved! Thou hast saved! ¹

We give thanks! We bless thee always! ¹ We shall glorify thee! ¹

The Second Stele ¹⁵ of Seth ¹

The Third Stele ¹

We rejoice! We rejoice! We rejoice! ¹

We have seen! We have seen! We have seen the ¹ really pre-existent one (masc.), ²⁰ that he really exists, that he is the ¹ first eternal one.

O Unconceived, ¹ from thee are the eternal ones ¹ and the aeons, the all-perfect ones ¹ who are established, and the ²⁵ perfect individuals.

We bless ¹ thee, non-being, existence ¹ which is before existences, ¹ first being which is before ¹ beings, Father of ³⁰ divinity and life, ¹ creator of mind, ¹ giver of good, giver of ¹ blessedness!

We all bless ¹ thee, knower, in ³⁵ a [glorifying] blessing, (thou) 125
 because of whom [all these are. ¹ . . . really, ¹ . . .], who knows thee ¹ [through] thee alone. For there is no one ⁵ [who is] active before ¹ thee.
 Thou art an only and living [spirit]. ¹ And [thou] knowest one, ¹ for this one who belongs to thee is on every side. ¹ We are not able to express him. For ¹⁰ thy light shines upon us. ¹

Present a command to us ¹ to see thee, so that ¹ we may be saved.
 Knowledge of thee, it ¹ is the salvation of us all. Present ¹⁵ a command!

When thou dost command, ¹ we have been saved! Truly we have been ¹ saved! We have seen thee by mind! ¹ Thou art them all, for thou dost save ¹ them all, he who ²⁰ was not saved, nor was he ¹ saved through them. ¹ For thou, thou hast commanded us. ¹

Thou art one. Thou art one, just as ¹ there is one (who) will say ²⁵ to thee: Thou art one, thou art a single living spirit. ¹ How shall we give ¹ thee a name? We do not have it. ¹ For thou art the existence ¹ of them all. ³⁰ Thou art the life of them ¹ all. Thou art the mind ¹ of them all. ¹ [For] thou [art he in whom they all] rejoice. 126

Thou hast commanded all these ¹ [to be saved] through thy ¹ word [...] ¹ glory ⁵ who is before him, Hidden One, blessed ¹ Senaon, [he who begat] ¹ himself, [Asi]neu(s). ¹ [...]ephneu(s), Optaon, Elemaon ¹ the great power, Emouniar, ¹⁰ Nibareu(s), Kandephor(os), Aphredon, ¹ Deiphaneus, thou ¹ who art Armedon to me, power-begetter, ¹ Thalana-theu(s), Antitheus, ¹ thou who existeth within ¹⁵ thyself, thou who art before ¹ thyself – and after thee ¹ no one entered into activity.

As what shall we ¹ bless thee? We are ¹ not empowered. But we give thanks, ²⁰ as being humble toward thee. For thou hast ¹ commanded us, as he who ¹ is elect, to glorify thee to the extent that ¹ we are able. ¹ We bless thee because we were saved. ²⁵ Always we glorify ¹ thee. For this reason we shall ¹ glorify thee, that we may be ¹ saved to eternal salvation. ¹ We have blessed thee, for we are ³⁰ empowered. We have been saved, for thou ¹ hast willed always ¹ that we all do this.

We ¹ all did this. [...] ¹ not through [...] 127³ aeon. . . .], ¹ the one who was ⁵ [...], we and those ¹ who [...]. He who will ¹ remember these and give ¹ glory always will ¹ become perfect among those who are perfect ¹⁰ and impassable beyond ¹ all things. For they all bless ¹ these individually and together. ¹ And afterwards they shall be ¹ silent. And just as they ¹⁵ were ordained, they ascend. ¹ After the silence, they descend ¹ from the third. ¹ They bless the second; ¹ after these the first. ²⁰ The way of ascent is the way ¹ of descent.

Know therefore, ¹ as those who live, that you have ¹ attained. And you taught ¹ yourselves the infinite things. ²⁵ Marvel at the truth which is within ¹ them, and (at) the revelation. ¹

The Three Steles of Seth. ¹

This book belongs to the fatherhood. ¹

It is the son who wrote it. ³⁰

Bless me, O father. I bless ¹ you, O father, in peace. ¹

Amen.

ZOSTRIANOS (VIII,1)

Introduced and translated by

JOHN N. SIEBER

The tractate Zostrianos, a heavenly journey apocalypse, is the major work in Codex VIII and one of the longest works in the Nag Hammadi library. Unfortunately Codex VIII suffered extensive damage prior to its discovery and conservation in modern times so that almost every page of Zostrianos is incomplete and some pages now exist only as fragments. Consequently, much of the text of the tractate is now lost. In spite of these problems Zostrianos offers an interesting example of how some Gnostics combined a mythological world view and a philosophical interpretation of it, based on Platonic thought.

The book opens with an account of the call of its central character, Zostrianos, to leave this world and to journey through the heavens in pursuit of saving gnosis. In antiquity this Zostrianos was linked to the lineage of the famous Persian magus Zoroaster. His call is recounted in autobiographical fashion. He was deeply depressed, ready to commit suicide in the desert, when suddenly an angel appeared to him and called him to gnosis. Leaving his physical body behind on earth, he ascended with the angel through the lower reaches of the heavenly realms. At each level he was initiated through a baptism into the gnosis revealed there.

As Zostrianos' journey continued he met a succession of angelic guides, questioned them and learned from each of them the gnosis of the various heavenly aeons through which he passed. The knowledge consisted largely in learning the names of the inhabitants of the heavenly world and sorting out the relationships between them. When his tour of the heavens was complete, Zostrianos descended once again to the physical world, where he wrote down the gnosis for the benefit of the elect, the holy seed of Seth. The tractate concludes with a brief but compelling homily in which Zostrianos exhorts his readers to abandon this oppressive world and to seek salvation through gnosis.

Zostrianos' mythological gnosis posits a high god named the thrice powerful Invisible Spirit from whom everything else has emanated. The physical earth and its inhabitants represent the lowest and most ignorant level. Between it and the Spirit lies a vast aeon system called Barbelo and understood as the "thought" of the Spirit. Barbelo herself is divided into three constituent aeons: the uppermost aeon is named Kalyptos (the hidden or veiled aeon), in the middle is located the Protophanes (the first-visible or first-appearing aeon), and at the bottom is the Autogenes (the self-generated or self-begotten aeon). Each of these aeons has its own system of constituent beings called lights, glories, angels, waters, etc.

The philosophical interests of the tractate are clear from its use of questions, categories, and terms best known to us from the Neoplatonic school of Plotinus. Zostrianos never tires of asking his angelic revealers about how this changeable world came into existence from an unchanging source, or about why there are different kinds of souls or animals or human beings. Their answers assert that each successive layer of the universe is formed on the basis of the models in the layer above and that each layer is less perfect than its model. Of special interest is the identification of the three Barbelo aeons with the philosophical triad of existence, mind, and life. These and other references make it almost certain that this tractate is the one mentioned by Porphyry (Vit. Plot., 16) as one of the spurious apocalypses in circulation in Plotinus' day and assigned by him to his pupil Amelius for refutation.

Zostrianos shares both its philosophical concern and some of its mythological world with three other tractates from the Nag Hammadi library: The Three Steles of Seth (VII,5), Marsenes (X,1) and Allogenes (XI,3). There are also some mythological ties, especially with regard to the names of the Autogenes system, with some of the more Christian works such as The Gospel of the Egyptians (III,2 and IV,2) and The Apocryphon of John (II,1 et al.), and with The Untitled Text of the Bruce Codex.

Except for a few allusions to the New Testament and Christianity in the extant text, the author of Zostrianos seems to have no specific interest in things Christian. He rejects the ways of the others, his opponents, but it is not clear if they are Christians or Platonists or some other group. His use of liturgical formulas, baptisms, and magical vowel strings indicates the book may have been used by a group of Gnostics in worship or contemplative exercises, but we are unable to identify this group on the basis of the reports of Christian heresiologists.

ZOSTRIANOS

VIII 1, 1-132, 9

[...] of the [...] the words ¹ [...] live forever, these I ¹ [...] Zostrianos ¹ [...] and [...] and Iolaos, ⁵ when I was in the world for these ¹ like me and [those] after me, ¹ [the] living elect. As God lives, ¹ [...] the truth with truth ¹ and knowledge and eternal ¹⁰ light.

After I parted from the ¹ somatic darkness in me and ¹ the psychic chaos in mind ¹ and the feminine desire ¹ [...] in the darkness, I did not use it ¹⁵ again. After I found the infinite ¹ part of my matter, then I reproved the ¹ dead creation within me ¹ and the divine Cosmocrater ¹ of the perceptible (world) by preaching ²⁰ powerfully about the All to those ¹ with alien parts. ¹

Although I tried their ways ¹ for a little while after ¹ the necessity of begetting brought me ²⁵ to the revealed, I was never pleased with ¹ them, but I always ¹ separated myself from them ¹ because I came into being through ¹ a holy [...], yet mixed. ³⁰ When I had set straight my sinless ¹ soul, then I strengthened ² the intellectual [...] ¹ and I [...] ¹ in the [...] ¹ of my God [...] ⁵ [...] I having done [...] ¹ grow strong in a holy spirit ¹ higher than god.

It [came] ¹ upon me alone as I was setting myself straight, [and] ¹ I saw the perfect child [...] ¹⁰ [...]. With him who [...] ¹ many times and many ways [he] ¹ appeared to me as a ¹ loving father, when I was seeking the ¹ male father of all (who are) ¹⁵ in thought, perception, (in) ¹ form, race, [region ...], ¹ (in) an All which ¹ restrains and is restrained, ¹ (in) a body yet without a body, ²⁰ (in) essence, matter and [those that] ¹ belong to all these. It is with ¹ them and the god of the unborn ¹ Kalyptos and the power [in] them all that ¹ existence is mixed.

(About) existence: ²⁵ how do those who exist, being from ¹ the aeon of those who exist, (come) from ¹ an invisible, undivided and ¹ self-begotten spirit? Are they ¹ three unborn images having ³⁰ an origin better than existence, ¹ existing prior [to] all [these], ¹ yet having become the [world ...]? ¹ How are those opposite it and all these ³ [...] good, he ¹ and an ¹ excuse. What is that one's place? ¹ What is his origin? ⁵ How does the one from him ¹ exist for him and all these? How ¹ [does he come into existence] as a simple one, ¹ differing [from] himself? Does he exist as ¹ existence, form, and ¹⁰ blessedness? By giving strength is ¹ he alive with life? How ¹ has the existence which does not exist ¹ appeared from an existing power? ¹

I pondered these things to understand them; ¹⁵ according to the custom of my race ¹ I kept bringing them up to the god ¹ of my fathers. I kept praising ¹ them all, for my forefathers ¹ and fathers who sought found. ²⁰ As for me, I did not cease seeking ¹ a resting place worthy of my spirit, ¹ since I was not yet bound in the perceptible ¹ world. Then, as I was deeply ¹ troubled and gloomy because of the ²⁵ discouragement which encompassed me, ¹ I dared to act and ¹ to deliver myself to the wild beasts of the ¹ desert for a violent death.

There stood ¹ before me the angel of the knowledge ³⁰ of eternal light. He said to me, ¹ 'Zostrianos, why have you gone mad ¹ as if you were ignorant of the great eternal ⁴ who are above? [...] ¹ you [...] ¹ [...] say also [...] ¹ that you are now saved, [...] ⁵ [...] in eternal death, nor [...] ¹ [...] those whom you know ¹ in order to [...] save others, [namely] ¹ my father's chosen elect? [Do you] ¹ [suppose] that you are the father of [your race ...] ¹⁰ or that Iolaos is your father, a [...] ¹ angel of god [...] ¹ you through holy men? ¹ Come and pass through each ¹ of these. You will return to them another [time] ¹⁵ to preach to a living [race ...] ¹ and to save those who are ¹ worthy, and to strengthen the elect, ¹ because the struggle of the aeon is great ¹ but one's time in this world is short.'

²⁰ When he had said this [to me], ¹ I very quickly and very ¹ gladly went up with him ¹ to a great light-cloud. I cast ¹ my body upon the earth ²⁵ to be guarded by glories. I was ¹ rescued from the whole world ¹ and the thirteen aeons ¹ in it and their angelic beings. ¹ They did not see us, but their ³⁰ archon was disturbed at [our] ¹ passage, for the light-cloud ⁵ [...] it is better ¹ than every [worldly ...] one. ¹ Its beauty is ineffable. ¹ With strength it provides light ⁵ [guiding] pure spirits ¹ as a spirit-savior ¹ and an intellectual word, ¹ [not] like those in the world ¹ [...] with changeable matter ¹⁰ and an upsetting word. ¹

Then I knew that the power ¹ in me was set over the darkness ¹ because it contained the whole light. ¹ I was baptized there, and ¹⁵ I received the image of the glories ¹ there. I became like ¹ one of them. I left the ¹ airy-[earth] and passed by the ¹ copies of the aeons, after ²⁰ washing there seven times ¹ [in] living [water], once for each ¹ [of the] aeons. I did not cease until ¹ [I saw] all the waters. ¹ I ascended to the Exile ²⁵ which really exists. I was baptized and ¹ [...] world. I ascended to the ¹ Repentance which really exists ¹ [and was] baptized there ¹ four times. I passed by the ⁶ sixth aeon. ¹ I ascended to the [...] ¹ I stood there after having seen light ¹ from the truth which really exists, from ⁵ its self-begotten root, and ¹ great angels and glories, [...] ¹ number.

I was baptized in the [name of] ¹ the divine Autogenes ¹ by those powers which are [upon] ¹⁰ living waters, Michar and Micheus. ¹ I was purified by [the] great ¹ Barpharanges. Then they [revealed] ¹ themselves to me and wrote me in glory. ¹ I was sealed by ¹⁵ those who are on these powers, [Michar] ¹ Mi[ch]eus, Seldao, Ele[nos] ¹ and Zogenethlos. I became ¹ a root-seeing angel ¹ and stood upon the first ²⁰ aeon which is the fourth. ¹ With the souls I blessed the ¹ divine Autogenes and the ¹ forefather Geradamas, [an eye of] ¹ the Autogenes, the first perfect ²⁵ [man], and Seth Emm[acha Seth], ¹ the son of Adamas, the [father of] ¹ the [immovable race ...] and the [four] ¹ [lights ...] ¹ [...] ³⁰ Mirothea, the mother [...] ¹ [...] and Prophania [...] ¹ of the lights and De-[...] ⁷ [...]

I was ¹ [baptized] for the second time in the name ¹ of the divine Autogenes ¹ by these same powers. I ⁵ became an angel of the ¹ male race. I stood upon ¹ the second aeon which is the ¹ third, with the sons of ¹ Seth I blessed each of them.

¹⁰ I was baptized for the third time ¹ in the name of the divine Autogenes ¹ by each of these powers. ¹ I became a holy angel. ¹ I stood upon the third ¹⁵ aeon which is the second. I ¹ blessed each of them.

I was baptized ¹ for the fourth time by ¹ [each of] these powers. I became ¹ [a] perfect [angel] ²⁰ [I stood upon] the fourth aeon ¹ [which is the first], and ¹ [I blessed each of them.]

Then I sought ¹ [...] I said ¹ [...] I ²⁵ [...] of ¹ [...] I ¹ [...] ¹ [...] why [...] ¹ [...] with power [...] ³⁰ about them in another way in the reports 8 of men? Are these their ¹ powers? Or, are these the ones, but ¹ their names differ from one another? Are ¹ there souls different from souls? ⁵ Why are people different ¹ from one another? What and in what way ¹ are they human?

The great ruler ¹ on high, Authrounios, said to me, ¹ 'Are you asking about those ¹⁰ whom you have passed by? And ¹ about this airy-earth, why ¹ it has a cosmic model? And ¹ about the aeon copies, how ¹ many there are, and, why they are [not] in pain? ¹⁵ And, about Exile and ¹ Repentance and the creation of the ¹ [aeons] and the world which [...] ¹ really [...] ¹ you, about [...] ²⁰ me, them [...] ¹ nor [...] ¹ you [...] ¹ invisible [spirit ...] ¹ and the [...] ²⁵ of [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ and [...] ³⁰ [...] when I [...]

9 The great ruler on high, ¹ Authrounios, said to me, 'The ¹ airy-earth came into being by a ¹ word, yet it is the begotten ⁵ and perishable ones whom it reveals ¹ by its indestructibility. In regard to the coming ¹ of the great judges, (they came) so as not ¹ to taste perception and to ¹ be enclosed in creation, and when ¹⁰ they came upon it and saw through ¹ it the works of the world, ¹ they condemned its ruler to death ¹ because he was a model of the world, ¹ a [...] and an origin of matter ¹⁵ begotten of lost darkness. ¹

When Sophia looked at [...] them ¹ she produced the darkness, as she ¹ [...] she] is beside the ¹ [...] he is a] model ²⁰ [...] of essence ¹ [...] form ¹ [...] to an image ¹ [...] I ¹ [...] the All ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] darkness [...] ¹ [...] say [...] powers ¹ [...] aeons] of [creation ...] to ³⁰ see any of the eternal ones. 10 he saw a reflection. In relation to ¹ the reflection which he saw ¹ in it, he created the world. ¹ With a reflection of a reflection ⁵ he worked at producing the world, ¹ and then even the reflection belonging to ¹ visible reality was taken from him. But to ¹ Sophia a place of rest was given ¹ in exchange for her repentance. ¹⁰ Thus, there was in her no ¹ prior reflection, pure ¹ in itself beforehand.

After they had ¹ already come into being through it, he ¹ used his imagination (and) produced the ¹⁵ remainder, for the image of Sophia ¹ was always being lost because ¹ her countenance was deceiving. But the Archon ¹ [...] and made a body which [...] ¹ concerning the greater [...] ²⁰ down [...] ¹ when I saw [...] ¹ to the heart [...] ¹ [...] ¹ he having [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ perfect through [...] ³⁰ [...] ¹ [...] through him, as he 11 [revealed] the destruction of the world ¹ by his [immutability]. It is in the ¹ following way that the copies of the ¹ aeons exist. They have not ⁵ obtained a single power's shape. ¹ It is eternal glories that they ¹ possess, and they dwell ¹ in the judgment seats of each of ¹ the powers.

But when ¹⁰ souls are illuminated by ¹ the light in them and ¹ (by) the model which often comes ¹ into being in them without ¹ suffering, she did not think that she saw ¹⁵ [...] and the eternal ¹ [...] in the blessed ¹ [...] each single one ¹ [...] each of ¹ [...] light ²⁰ [...] all], and she ¹ [...] whole, and she ¹ [...] and a ¹ [...] and she ¹ [...] she who ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ of repentance. [Souls] 12 are located according to the power ¹ they have in themselves, [...] ¹ lower are produced ¹ by the copies. ⁵ Those who receive a model ¹ of their souls are still in the ¹ world. They came into being ¹ after the departure of the aeons, ¹ one by one, and they are removed ¹⁰ one by one from the ¹ copy of Exile ¹ to the Exile that really ¹ exists, from the copy of ¹ Repentance to the Repentance ¹⁵ that really exists, [and from the] ¹ copy of Autogenes ¹ to [the Autogenes] that really ¹ exists. The remainder [...] ¹ the souls [...] ²⁰ exist in a [...] ¹ all [...] ¹ of aeons [...] ¹ [...] ¹ and [...] ²⁵ [through ...] ¹ the [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ³⁰ of [...] ¹ these [...] 13 [blessed the] god above, ¹ the great aeons, the ¹ unborn Kalyp-tos, the great ¹ male Protophanes, the perfect ⁵ child who is higher than god, ¹ and his eye, Pigeradamas. ¹

I called upon the ¹ Child of the Child, Ephesech. He ¹ stood before me and said, ¹⁰ 'O angel of god, O son of the ¹ father, [...] the perfect man. ¹ Why are you calling on me and ¹ asking about those things which you know, ¹ as though you were [ignorant] of them?' And ¹⁵ I said, 'I have asked about the ¹ mixture [...] it is perfect and gives ¹ [...] there is power which ¹ [has ... those] in which we receive baptism ¹ [...] these names are ²⁰ [different ...] and why ¹ [...] from one ¹ [...] in the ¹ [...] from] others ¹ [...] men ²⁵ [...] different] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...]

14 He said, '[Zost]rianos, ¹ listen about these [...] ¹ for the first [...] ¹ origins are three because they have ⁵ appeared in a single origin [of] the ¹ Barbelo aeon, not like some ¹ origins and powers, nor ¹ like (one) from an origin and ¹ power. It is to every origin that they ¹⁰ have appeared; they have strengthened every power; ¹ and they appeared from that which ¹ is far better than themselves. These (three) are ¹ Existence, Blessedness ¹ and Life. [...] ¹⁵ [...] their companions [...] ¹ in a [...] ¹ and concerning the [...] ¹ having named [...] ¹ more than [...] ²⁰ and [...] ¹ a perfect [...] ¹ from a [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...]

15 And a water of each one of ¹ them [...] ; therefore [...] waters are the perfect ones. ¹ It is the water of life that ⁵ belongs to Vitality in which you now ¹ have been baptized in the Autogenes. ¹ It is in the [water] of Blessedness ¹ which belongs to Knowledge that you ¹ will be baptized in the Protophanes. ¹⁰ It is the water of Existence ¹ [which] belongs to Divinity, ¹ the Kalyptos. ¹ Now the water of Life ¹ [exists in relation to ...] power; that belonging ¹⁵ to Blessedness in relation to essence; ¹ that belonging to [Divinity] in relation to ¹ [Existence ...]. But all these ¹ [...] authority and ¹ [...] those who ²⁰ [...] water which ¹ [becomes pure ...] ¹ [...] according to ¹ [...] when they] depart ¹ [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹

[...] 16 Existence as [he] is ¹ in it. [He] not only [was dwelling] ¹ in Thought, but he also [...] ¹ them that it is he who is [Being] in the ⁵ following way. In order that this world ¹ might not be endless and formless, ¹ he placed a [...] over it; ¹ but in order that [he] might become ¹ something, the truly young crossed ¹⁰ it with what ¹ is his, [thus] ¹ Existence. It is with the [son] that ¹ he is located, with him that he seeks, him that ¹ he surrounds [...] ¹⁵ everywhere [...] ¹ from the truth [...] ¹ takes him who [...] ¹ exists [...] ¹ activity [...] ²⁰ life [...] ¹ his word also [...] ¹ are these after [...] ¹ they became [...] ¹ [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹

[...] 17 and the power is with the ¹ Essence and Existence ¹ of Being, when the water exists. ¹ But the name in which they wash ⁵ is a word of the water. Then ¹ the first perfect water of ¹ the triple-power of the Autogenes ¹ [is] the perfect soul's ¹ life, for it is a word of ¹⁰ the perfect god while coming into ¹ being [...] ¹ for the Invisible Spirit ¹ is a fountain of them all. ¹ Thus, the rest are from [knowledge ...] as ¹⁵ his likeness. [But] he who knows himself ¹ [...] what kind and what ¹ [...] alive at one time ¹ [...] live with a ¹ [...] he is the ²⁰ [...] life, in the ¹ [...] become ¹ [limitless ...] his [...] his] ¹ [own ...] the name ¹ [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] 18 he really exists. It is he because he ¹ limits himself. They approach ¹ the water according to this ¹ single power and the likeness of order. ⁵

The great male invisible Mind, ¹ the perfect Protophanes ¹ has his own water ¹ as you [will see] ¹ when you arrive at his place. This ¹⁰ is also the case with the unborn Kalyptos. ¹ In accordance with each one exists a ¹ partial entity with a first form, ¹ so that they might become perfect in this way; ¹ for the self-begotten aeons ¹⁵ are four perfect entities. [The] individuals ¹ of the all-perfect ones [...] ¹ them as perfect individuals. And ¹ the [...] aeon [...] ¹ of the Autogenes [...] ²⁰ for all [...] ¹

[perfect] male [...] ¹ for the alls [...] ¹ [perfect god ... the triple-] ¹ male [...] ²⁵ [perfect] individual [...] ¹ in the [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ³⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹⁹ perfect, those who exist according to ¹ a form, a race, an ¹ All and a partial difference. ¹ This is also the case with the highway of ascent which ⁵ is higher than perfect and Kalyptos. ¹

The Autogenes is the ¹ chief archon of his ¹ own aeons and angels ¹ as his parts, for those ¹⁰ who are the four individuals ¹ belong to him; they belong to the fifth ¹ aeon together. The ¹ fifth exists in one; the four ¹ [are] the fifth, part by part. ¹⁵ But these [four] are ¹ complete individually [because they] have a ¹ [...] it is also [...] with ¹ [the triple male] individual ¹ [...] for he is a [...] of ²⁰ [...] god, the ¹ invisible [Protophanes] ¹ [...] male] mind ¹ [...] which ¹ exists ¹ [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁰ living and perfect parts. ¹

(About) the All and the all-perfect ¹ race and the one who is higher than perfect ¹ and blessed. The ⁵ self-begotten Kalyptos ¹ pre-exists because he is an origin of ¹ the Autogenes, a god and ¹ a forefather, a cause of the ¹ Protophanes, a father ¹⁰ of the parts that are his. ¹ As a divine father he is ¹ foreknown: but he is ¹ unknown, for he is a power and ¹ a father from himself. ¹⁵ Therefore, he is [fatherless]. ¹ The Invisible Triple Powerful, ¹ First Thought [of] all [these], the ¹ Invisible Spirit [...] ¹ is a [...] and ²⁰ Essence which [...] ¹ and Existence [...] ¹ there are [existences] ¹ the [...] ¹ blessed [...] ²⁵ the [...] ¹ all these [...] ¹ the [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ³⁰ [...] ²¹ exist in them, [and] they [...] ¹ in others [...] ¹ by them all ¹ in many places. They are in ⁵ every place that he ¹ loves and ¹ desires, yet ¹ they are not in any place. ¹ They have capacity for spirit, ¹ for they are incorporeal yet are better ¹⁰ than incorporeal. They are undivided with ¹ living thoughts and a power ¹ of truth with those purer ¹ than these since with respect to ¹ him they are purer and ¹⁵ are not like the bodies which ¹ are in one place. ¹ Above all, they have ¹ necessity either in relation to the All ¹ or to a part. ¹ Therefore, the ²⁰ way of ascent [...] it is pure ¹ [...] each ¹ [...] herself and ¹ [...] ¹ [...] them ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] above all] ¹ [...] ²² particular aeons.

Then ¹ [he said], 'How then can he ¹ contain an ¹ eternal model? The ⁵ general intellect shares ¹ when the self-begotten ¹ water becomes perfect. ¹ It one knows him and ¹ all these, one is the ¹⁰ protophanic water. If ¹ one joins oneself with all these, one is ¹ that water which belongs to Kalyptos, ¹ whose image is still in the ¹ aeons. To understand individually ¹⁵ all their parts, they are [...], those ¹ of the All where ¹ knowledge is. They have ¹ [separated] from the one whom they knew and ¹ (from) fellowship ²⁰ with one another. The All and all ¹ these, when they [...] ¹ wash in the [washing of] ¹ [Autogenes] he [...] ¹ of [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ 23 he appears to [him], ¹ that is, when one knows how ¹ he exists for him and (how) he has ¹ fellowship with their companions, one has ⁵ washed in the washing of Protophanes. ¹ And if in understanding the ¹ origin of these, ¹ how they all appear from ¹ a single origin, how ¹⁰ all who are joined come to ¹ be divided, how those ¹ who are divided join ¹ again, and how the parts ¹ [join with] the alls and the ¹⁵ species and [kinds – if] ¹ one understands these things, one has washed ¹ in the washing of Kalyptos.

According ¹ to each of [the] places one has ¹ a portion of the ²⁰ eternal ones [and] ascends ¹ [...] as he ¹ [...] pure and simple, ¹ he is always [...] ¹ one of the [...] ²⁵ [always] he is pure for simpleness. ¹ He is filled [...] ¹ [in ...] Existence ¹ and a holy spirit. There is ¹ 24 nothing of his outside of him. He can ¹ [see] with his perfect soul those ¹ who belong to Autogenes; with his mind ¹, those who belong to the Triple Male, and with ⁵ his holy spirit, those who belong to Protophanes. ¹ He can learn of Kalyptos ¹ through the powers of the spirit from whom they ¹ have come forth in a far better ¹ revelation of the Invisible ¹⁰ Spirit. And by means of thought ¹ which now is in silence and ¹ by First Thought (he learns) of the Triple ¹ Powerful Invisible Spirit, since there ¹ is then a report and power of silence which ¹⁵ is purified in a life-giving spirit. ¹ (It is) perfect and [...] perfect ¹ and all-perfect. ¹ Glories, therefore, which ¹ are set ¹ over these, are [life-givers] who have ²⁰ been baptised in truth and knowledge. ¹ Those who are worthy are guarded, ¹ but those who [are] not ¹ from this race [...] ¹ and go [...] these ²⁵ who [...] ¹ [...] in the fifth, he being [...] ¹ [...] copy ¹ [...] of the aeons ¹ [...] namely a washing ³⁰ but if ¹ [he] strips off the world 25 and lays aside [knowledge], ¹ and (if) he is he who has no ¹ dwelling place and power, then ¹ because he follows the ways of the others, ⁵ he is also a sojourner, but (if) he is one ¹ who has committed no sin because ¹ knowledge was sufficient for him, he ¹ is not anxious when he repents, ¹ and then washings are appointed' ¹⁰ in these in addition.

(Concerning) (the path ...) ¹ to the self-begotten ones, those ¹ in which you have now been baptised each ¹ time, (a path) worthy of seeing the [perfect ...] ¹ individuals: it serves as knowledge ¹⁵ of the All since it came into being ¹ from the powers of the self-begotten ones, ¹ the one you acquire when you pass ¹ through the all-perfect aeons. ¹ When you receive the third ²⁰ washing [...], you will learn ¹ about the [...] really [...] ¹ in [that] place.

About these names, ¹ they are as follows: because ¹ he is one, they [...] ²⁵ is like [...] ¹ while he [came into being ...] ¹ exists and [...] ¹ a word they [said ...] 26 This is a name which really exists ¹ together with [these] within her. ¹ These who exist do so in ¹ [...] ... resembles. ⁵ His resemblance in kind (is) within what is ¹ his own. He can see it, understand it ¹ enter it, (and) ¹ take a resemblance from it. Now ¹ (they can) speak aloud and hear sounds, but ¹⁰ they are unable to obey because they ¹ are perceptible and somatic. ¹ Therefore, just as they are able to contain ¹ them by containing them thus, ¹ so is he an image which is [...] ¹⁵ in this way, having come into existence ¹ in perception [by] a word which ¹ is better than material nature ¹ but lower than intellectual ¹ essence.

Do not be amazed about the ²⁰ differences among souls. ¹ When they think they are ¹ different and do [not resemble] ¹ [...] of those who [...] and ¹ that [...] ²⁵ aloud [...] he being lost ¹ [...] their [souls] ¹ [...] body, and that ¹ [...] his] time, he ¹ [...] a desire, 27 their souls exist as [...] ¹ their body. As for those who are ¹ totally pure, there are four [...] that they ¹ possess; but those [in] ⁵ time are nine. Each one ¹ of them has its species ¹ and its custom. Their likenesses ¹ differ in being separated, and ¹ they stand.

Other immortal souls ¹⁰ associate with all ¹ these souls because of ¹ the Sophia who looked down; ¹ for there are three species of ¹ immortal soul: first, those who have ¹⁵ taken root upon the Exile ¹ because they have no ability ¹ to beget, (something) that only those ¹ who follow the ways of ¹ the others have, the one being a ²⁰ single species which ¹ [...]; being second, those who stand ¹ [upon the] Repentance which ¹ [...] sin, ¹ (it) being sufficient [...] knowledge [...] ²⁵ being new [...] ¹ and he has [...] ¹ difference [...] they have ¹ sinned with the others [and] 28 they have repented with the others ¹ [...] from them alone, ¹ for [...] are species which exist in ¹ [...] with those who committed ⁵ all sins and repented. ¹ Either they are parts, or they ¹ desired of their own accord. ¹ Therefore, their other aeons are six ¹ according to the place which has come ¹⁰ to each (fem.) of them. The ¹ third (species) is that of the souls of ¹ the self-begotten ones because they ¹ have a word of the ineffable ¹ truth, one which exists in ¹⁵ knowledge and [power] from ¹ themselves alone and eternal [life]. ¹ They have four ¹ differences like the species ¹ of angels who exist: ²⁰ those who love the truth; ¹ those who hope; those who ¹ believe having [...]; those who are [...] ¹ They exist, he being [...] ²⁵ the self-begotten ones [...] ¹ he is the one belonging to [perfect ... life]; ¹ the second is [...] the ¹ [...]

knowledge ¹ [...] the fourth is ³⁰ that one [belonging to the] immortal [souls ...]

29 The four Lights dwell ¹ [there] in the following way. [Armozel] is ¹ placed upon the first aeon. ¹ (He is) a promise of god, [...] of ⁵ truth and a joining of soul. ¹ Oroiael, a power (and) seer ¹ of truth, is set over ¹ the second. Daveithe, a vision ¹ of knowledge, is set over ¹⁰ the third. Eleleth, an eager desire ¹ and preparation for truth, ¹ is set over the fourth. ¹ The four exist because they ¹ are expressions of truth and ¹⁵ knowledge. They exist, although they ¹ do not belong to Protophanes but ¹ to the mother, for she is a thought of ¹ the perfect mind of the ¹ light, so that immortal souls ²⁰ might receive knowledge for themselves. ¹ [...] at these, the Autogenes ¹ [...]rse[...]oas, a ¹ life [...] all ¹ he is a word [...] ²⁵ ineffable [...] truth ¹ he who says [...] revelation] ¹ concerning the [...] ¹ that it exists as [...] ¹ exists above in [...] 30 [...] joined] in a yoking of it ¹ in light ¹ and thought within his ¹ [...].

Since Adamas, the perfect ⁵ man, is an eye of Autogenes, ¹ it is his knowledge which comprehends ¹ that the divine Autogenes ¹ is a word of the perfect mind ¹ of truth. The son of ¹⁰ Adam, Seth, comes to ¹ each of the souls. As knowledge ¹ he is sufficient for them. Therefore, ¹ [the] living [seed] came into existence ¹ from him. Mirothea is [...] ¹⁵ the divine Autogenes, a [...] ¹ from her and [...], she being a thought ¹ of the perfect mind because of ¹ that existence of hers. What is it? ¹ Or did she exist? [...] ²⁰ does she exist? Therefore, ¹ the divine Autogenes ¹ is word and knowledge, and the ¹ knowledge [...] word.] ¹ Therefore [...] ²⁵ Adama[s ...] ¹ of the [simple ones] when she appeared ¹ [...] a change of [the] ¹ souls [...] she herself is [...] ¹ [...] perfect.

Concerning ³⁰ the [perfect one ...] angelic beings 31 [...] ¹ [becomes then] ¹ [souls] ¹ [die ...] ⁵ [...] the world [...] ¹ [...] the copies ¹ [...] really ¹ [...] which [exists] ¹ [...] repentance ¹⁰ [...] to this place ¹ [...] which exists ¹ [...] aeons, if ¹ [...] and she loves ¹ [...] she stands upon ¹⁵ [...] aeon ¹ having the Light ¹ [Ele]leth [...] become a ¹ [...] god-seer ¹ [But] if she hopes, then she ²⁰ perceives. And a [...] race ¹ [...] she stands upon ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ³² [...] she is chosen ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] light ⁵ Ar[mozel] ¹

[...] one [...] ¹ [bless] ¹ upon the [power ...] you ¹ stand upon [...] ¹⁰ the light which [...] ¹ and without measure [...] ¹ the aeon is great [...] ¹ [...] those alone [...] ¹ from the perfect [...] ¹⁵ that power [...] ¹ be able, and [...] ¹ be able [...] ¹ of his soul [...] ¹ perceptible [...] not with [...] ²⁰ [...] but] you are [...] ¹ individually [...] ¹ there being nothing [...] ¹ him [...] ¹ which he [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [in ...] 33 and [...] ¹ upon every one [...] ¹ every [...] ¹ [...] formless [...] ⁵ [...] and this one ¹ [...] and this [model ...] ¹ [...] and some ¹ [...] eternal, nor ¹ [...] an all ¹⁰ [...] increasing from this ¹ [...] he is light ¹ [...] because he lacked ¹ [...] the perfect mind ¹ [...] undivided ¹⁵ [...] perfect light ¹ [...] and he is in ¹ [...] Adamas ¹ [the] Autogenes ¹ [...] and he goes ²⁰ [...] mind ¹ [...] the divine Kalyptos ¹ [...] knowledge ¹ [...] but ¹ [...] soul ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] 34 [...] existence ¹ [...] she having ¹ [...] ¹ [...] some second ⁵ powers and [...] ¹ and some third [...] ¹ appear [...] ¹ which [...] ¹ [...] ¹⁰ soul [...] ¹

And the aeons [...] ¹ dwelling place [...] ¹ souls and [...] ¹ gods [...] ¹⁵ higher than god [...] ¹ of the self-begotten ones [...] ¹ Autogenes [...] ¹ first [...] ¹ angel [...] ²⁰ invisible [...] ¹ some [...] ¹ soul and [...] ¹ aeons [...] ¹ and to the souls [...] ²⁵ angel [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ³⁰ [...] 35 she [...] ¹ eternal [...] ¹ times. And [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ and if [...] namely a soul ¹ [...] becomes an ¹ [angel ...], and [...] ¹ world [...] angels and ¹ [...] that holy one ¹⁰ [...] and aeon which ¹ [...] Autogenes has ¹ [...] them, the [...] ¹ [...] archon ¹ [...] they have ¹⁵ [...] difference which ¹ [...] she is not, to speak ¹ [...] ¹ [...] and ¹ [...] divine Autogenes ²⁰ [...] which exists ¹ [...] hear ¹ [...] Autogenes ¹ [...] of ¹ [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] 36 [...] has ¹ [...] existence ¹ [...] life ¹ [...] exist, concerning [the] ⁵ [...] word [...] ¹ the child [...] male ¹ for a generation [...] ¹ [...] ¹ invisible spirit [...] ¹⁰ in the perfect [...] ¹ [...] ¹ and an origin [...] ¹ love and [...] ¹ of Barbelo [...] ¹⁵ and a [...] ¹ the [...] mind [...] ¹

These are two [...] ¹ thought [...] ¹ from the [...] ²⁰ in Barbelo [...] ¹ and the Kalyptos [...] ¹ all these [...] ¹ the ¹ virgin [...] ¹ she [appears] ²⁵ in a [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] 37 in that one [...] power ¹ [...] ¹ [he is not] from [him, but ...] ¹ (is) from the power of that one ⁵ [...] really ... exists], she ¹ [...] is his ¹ [...] they being first ¹ [...] of that one ¹ [...] and he is the ¹⁰ [...] he alone ¹ [...] give him enough ¹ [...] to him ¹ [...] all, he gives ¹ [...] through the ¹⁵ [...] for [because of] him some ¹ [...] in order that he might ¹ [...] and that one which ¹ [...] him ¹ [...] undivided ²⁰ [...] Barbelo ¹ [...] in order that he might ¹ [...] blessedness ¹ [...] ¹ [...] all ²⁵ [...] he comes ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] 38 a [...] of the perfect ¹ [mind ...] and he ¹ [...] perfect spirit ¹ [...] perfect, he lives ⁵ forever [...] ¹ him, and [...] ¹ he ¹ exists [...] ¹ of the [...] ¹ he is [a word] from [...] ¹⁰ which is in [...]

¹ of them all [...] ¹ eternal [...] ¹ [...] in the triple-[powerful ¹ is in the [...] ¹⁵ [...] those which [are ¹ perfect [...] ¹ the Protophanes [...] ¹ mind, but [...] ¹ pure [...] ²⁰ and he [...] ¹ of an image [...] ¹ appear [...] ¹ and the [...] ¹ [...] ²⁵ him [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ³⁰ [...] 39 [...] ¹ [...] namely ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] because of him they ¹ [...] I mark it ¹ [...] he is simple ¹ [...] for he is ¹ [...] as he exists ¹⁰ [...] as to another ¹ [...] that is, ¹ [...] need.

Concerning ¹ [...] triple-male ¹ [...] really exists of ¹⁵ [...] mind knowledge ¹ [...] those who exist ¹ [...] which he has ¹ [...] really exist ¹ [...] and a [...] ²⁰ [...] and she ¹ [...] second ¹ [...] perfect which ¹ [...] appear ¹ [...] in him they ²⁵ [...] Kalyptos ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] species [...] ³⁰ [...] ¹ [...] 40 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ second species [...] ¹ a knowledge [...] ¹ [Protophanes ...] ¹ [male ...] ¹ he has [...] ¹⁰ existence [...] ¹ unborn, they [...] ¹ third [...] ¹ [...] he] has [...] ¹ knowledge and [...] ¹⁵ exist together [...] ¹ all-perfect [...] ¹ blessed since there is not [...] ¹ [...] ²⁰ god [...] ¹ with him [...] ¹ [...] ¹ perfect [...] ¹ of the [...] ²⁵ Kalyptos [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] 41 [...] know ¹ [...] of [...] Protophanes [...] ¹ [...] the mind ⁵ [...] the powers ¹ [...] the all ¹ [...] and he [exists] ¹ [...] this knowledge. ¹

[...] divine, the Autogenes. ¹⁰ [The] divine [Autogenes] ¹ [...] the child ¹ [...] triple-male, this male ¹ [...] is [...] and a species ¹ [...] perfect because it does not have ¹⁵ [...] in a ¹ [...] knowledge like that one ¹ [...] a being of the individuals ¹ [and] a single knowledge of the ¹ individuals [...] according to the all ²⁰ [...] perfect. ¹ But the male [...] mind ¹ the Kalyptos, ¹ [but] the [...] divine Kalyptos ¹ [...] and a power ²⁵ [...] of all these ¹ [...] really [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ³⁰ [Protophanes ...] ¹ [...] 42 [Protophanes ...] ¹ [...] mind ¹ [...] ⁵ she who belongs to the all [...] ¹ unborn [...] ¹ man [...] ¹ they [...] ¹ with that one who [...] ¹⁰ and he who [...] ¹ he who dwells [...] ¹ [...] in the perceptible [world ...] ¹ he is alive with that dead one [...] ¹ [...] all [...] ¹⁵ obtain salvation [...] ¹ that dead one.

And all of them ¹ did not need salvation [...] ¹ first, but they are safe ¹ and exist very humbly. ²⁰ Now (about) the man [of] those who are dead: ¹ his soul, [his mind and ¹ his body all [are dead]. ¹ Sufferings [...] ¹ fathers of [...] ²⁵ material [...] ¹ the fire [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ³⁰ [...] 43 it crosses over. And the second ¹ man is the immortal soul ¹ in those who are dead. ¹ If it is anxious over itself, then ⁵ [when it seeks] those ¹ things which are profitable [according to ...] each one ¹ of them, [then it] experiences ¹ bodily suffering. They ¹ [...] and it ¹⁰

[... because] it has ¹ an eternal god, it ¹ associates with daimons. ¹

Now concerning the man in the ¹ Exile; when ¹⁵ he discovers the ¹ truth in himself, he is far ¹ from the deeds of the others ¹ who exist [wrongly] (and) stumble. ¹ (Concerning) the man who repents: ²⁰ when he renounces ¹ the dead and desires ¹ those things which are because of immortal ¹ mind and his immortal soul, ¹ first he [...] makes ²⁵ an inquiry about it, ¹ not about conduct ¹ but about their deeds, ¹ for from him he [...] ¹ [...] and ³⁰ [...] obtain [...] 44 and the man who can be saved ¹ is the one who seeks him and ¹ his mind and who finds each one ¹ of them. Oh how much power ⁵ he has! And the man ¹ who is saved is the one who has not known ¹ how these [...] ¹ exist, but he ¹ himself by means of [the] word ¹⁰ as it exists [...] ¹ received each one [...] ¹ in every place, having become ¹ simple and one, for then ¹ he is saved because he can ¹⁵ pass through ¹ all [these]. He becomes the [...] ¹ all these. If he ¹ [desires] again, then he parts ¹ from them all, and he ²⁰ withdraws to himself [alone]; ¹ for he can become divine ¹ by having taken refuge in god.' ¹

When I heard this, ¹ I brought a blessing to the living ²⁵ and unborn God ¹ in truth and (to) the unborn Kalyptos ¹ and the Protophanes, ¹ the invisible, male, perfect ¹ Mind, and the invisible ³⁰ triple-male Child ¹ [and to the] divine Autogenes. 45 I said to the child of the child ¹ Ephesek who was with me, "Can ¹ your wisdom instruct me about ¹ the scattering of the man ⁵ who is saved, and (about) ¹ those who are mixed with him, and ¹ who those are who share with him, ¹ in order that the living elect ¹ might know?"

Then the ¹⁰ child of the child Ephesek ¹ told [me ...] openly, ¹ "If he withdraws ¹ to himself alone many ¹ times, and if he comes into being with reference ¹⁵ to the knowledge of the others, ¹ Mind and the immortal [Origin] will not ¹ understand. Then ¹ it has a shortage, [...] ¹ for he turns, has nothing and ²⁰ separates from it and ¹ stands [...] and comes into being ¹ by an alien [impulse ...], ¹ instead of becoming one. ¹ Therefore, he bears many forms. ²⁵ When he turns aside, he ¹ comes into being seeking those things that ¹ do not exist. When he ¹ falls down to them in thought ¹ and knows them in another way ³⁰ because he is powerless, unless perhaps 46 he is enlightened, he becomes ¹ a product of nature. Thus ¹ he comes down to birth because of it ¹ and is speechless because of the ⁵ pains and infiniteness of matter. Although he possesses an ¹ eternal and immortal power, ¹ he is bound within the [movement] ¹ of the body. He is [made] alive ¹⁰ and is bound [always] ¹ within cruel, ¹ cutting bonds ¹ by every evil breath, until ¹ he [acts] again and begins again ¹⁵ to come to his senses.

Therefore, ¹ powers are appointed for their salvation, ¹ and each one of them is ¹ in the world. Within the self-begotten ¹ ones corresponding to each of ²⁰ the [aeons] stand glories ¹ so that one who is in the [world] ¹ might be safe beside them. The glories ¹ are perfect thoughts appearing in ¹ powers. They do not perish because they [are] models ²⁵ for salvation [by] which each ¹ one is saved. ¹ He receives a model (and) ¹ strength from each of them, and ¹ with the glory as a helper ³⁰ he will thus pass out from the world ¹ [and the aeons ...].

These 47 are the guardians of the immortal ¹ soul: Gamaliel and ¹ Strempsouchos, Akramas ¹ and Loel, and Mnesinous. ⁵ [This is the] immortal spirit, Yesseus- ¹ Mazareu[s]-Ye[s]sedekus. ¹ He is [...] of the child ¹ [...] or, the child of the child, and ¹ [...] But Ormos ¹⁰ is [...] on the living seed ¹ and Kam[...]el is the spirit-giving. ¹ There stand before [them] ¹ Seisael and Audael and Abrasax, ¹ the myriads-Phaleris, Phalses, ¹⁵ [and] Eurios, the guardians of ¹ [the] glory-Stetheus, ¹ Theo[pe]mptos, Eurumeneus ¹ and Olsen. Their assistants in ¹ everything are Ba[...]mos, ²⁰ [...]son, Eir[.]n, Lalameus, ¹ Eidomeneus and Authrounios. ¹ The judges are Sumpthar, ¹ Eukrebos and Keilar. ¹ The inheritor is Samblo. ²⁵ The angels who guide ¹ the clouds are the clouds Sappho ¹ and Thouro."

When he had said ¹ these things, he told me about all of those ¹ in the self-begotten ³⁰ aeons. They were all 48 eternal Lights, perfect ¹ because they were perfected individually. ¹ I saw corresponding to each one of ¹ the aeons a living earth, a ⁵ living water, [air made] ¹ of light and a fire [that] ¹ cannot burn, because all of [them ...] are ¹ simple and immutable, ¹ simple and ¹⁰ eternal [living beings], ¹ having [...] of ¹ many kinds, trees ¹ of many kinds that do not ¹ perish, [also] tares ¹⁵ of this sort and all of these: ¹ imperishable fruit, ¹ living men and every species, ¹ immortal souls, ¹ every form and ²⁰ species of mind, ¹ true gods, ¹ angels existing in ¹ great glory, an ¹ indissoluble body, ²⁵ an unborn birth and ¹ an immovable perception. ¹ Also there was the one who ¹ suffers, although he is unable to suffer, ¹ for he was a power of a power.

49 [...] ¹ [...] change ¹ [...] indissoluble ¹ [...] these ⁵ [...] all ¹ [...] they are [...] they ¹ [...] through all] of them ¹ [...] exist] in ¹ [...] exist] ¹⁰ [...] come into being ¹ [...] (lines 12ff do not survive) 50 of [...] ¹ [simple ...] ¹ perfect [...] ¹ eternal [...] ⁵ aeons [...] ¹ and the [...] ¹ receive power [...] ¹ and their [...] ¹ in a [...] ¹⁰ for [...] ¹ [...] not [...] (lines 12ff do not survive)

51 [...] in ¹ [...]thorso[...]s ¹ [...] silence ¹ [...] he is [...] ⁵ [...]

he is god ¹ [...] we were blessing ¹ [...] Geradama[s] ¹ [...] mother] of [...] ¹ [...] she is the glory ¹⁰ [...] our ¹ [...] mother ¹ [...] and Pleistha ¹ [the mother] of the angels with ¹ [the son] of Adam, Se[th] ¹⁵ [Emma]cha Seth, the father of ¹ [the] immovable [race ...] and [...] ¹ [the] four Lights, Arm[osel], ¹ [Oroia]el, Daveithe, Eleleth. ¹ [Each of these] we blessed by name. ²⁰ [We] saw the self-controlled ¹ [glory], the triple [...] ¹ triple-male ¹ [...] majesty, as we said ¹ "You are one, you are ²⁵ [one], you are one, child 52 of [the child] ¹ Yato[...] ¹ exist [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] you are] ¹ one, you [...] ¹ Semelel [...] ¹ Telmachae[...] ¹ omothem[...] ¹⁰ male [...] ¹ [...] he begets [...] the] ¹ self-controlled [glory ...] ¹ can desire him whom [...] ¹ all-perfect [...] ¹⁵ all. Akron [...] ¹ the triple-male, a a [...] ¹ o o o o b + i r e i s e [...] ¹ you are spirit from ¹ spirit; you are light ²⁰ from light; you are [silence ...] ¹ from silence; [you are] ¹ thought from thought, ¹ the son of [god] ¹ the god, seven ... [...] ²⁵ ... let us speak [...] 53 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] word ⁵ [...] the [...] ¹ [...] and the [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] not a time ¹ [...] invisible ¹⁰ Barbelo ¹ [...] the ¹ [...] the triple-male ¹ Prones, and she who belongs to ¹ all the glories, Youel.

¹⁵ [When I was] baptized the fifth ¹ [time] in the name of the ¹ Autogenes by ¹ each of these powers, I ¹ became divine. ²⁰ [I] stood upon the fifth ¹ aeon, a preparation of ¹ all [these], (and) saw all those ¹ belonging to the Autogenes ¹ who really exist. ²⁵ I was baptized five 54 times [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ of the [...] ¹ zareu[s] ⁵ from [...] ¹ that [...] ¹ perfect [...] ¹ and the great [...] ¹ glory, she who belongs to [...] ¹⁰ [...] ¹ god, the [...] ¹ appear [...] ¹ perfect which is doubled [...] ¹ she who belongs to all the species [...] ¹⁵ male, the self-controlled ¹ glory, the mother [...] ¹ [the] glories, Youel, and the ¹ [four] Lights of [the] ¹ [great] Protophanes, ²⁰ Mind, Selmen, [and those] ¹ with him, the ¹ god-[revealers] Zach[thos] ¹ and Yachthos, Sethe[us] ¹ and Antiphan[te]s, [Sel-] ²⁵ dao and Ele[n]nos [...] 55 [...] ¹ [...] go ¹ [...] the ¹ [...] their ⁵ [...] likeness ¹ [...] exist] as ¹ [...] of the ¹ [...], for [...] see [...] ¹ [...] aeon ¹⁰ [...] more ¹ [...] Light ¹ [...] more glories ¹ [...] the following are in accordance with ¹ [each one] of the aeons: a ¹⁵ living [earth] and a ¹ [living] water, and air made of ¹ light and a blazing ¹ fire which cannot ¹ [burn], and living beings and ²⁰ trees and souls ¹ [and] minds and men ¹ [and] all those who are ¹ [with them], but (there are) no gods ¹ [or] powers or ²⁵ angels, for all these 56 are [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ exist [...] ⁵ all [...] ¹ all [...] ¹ [...] all [...] ¹ [...] they being [...] ¹ and they being [...]

¹⁰ [...] and [...] ¹ [and] those [...] ¹ him, the Autogenes. [I] ¹

received a likeness from [all] these. ¹ The aeons [of the] Autogenes ¹⁵ opened (and) a [great Light] ¹ came forth [...] ¹ from the aeons of the [triple-] ¹ male, and they [glorified] ¹ them. The four ²⁰ aeons were desiring ¹ within a [...] aeon ¹ the [...] pattern [...] ¹ single one existing [...] ¹ Then E[phesek], the ²⁵ child of the child [...] 57 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] Yesseus] Maza ¹ [reus Yessede]keus [...] ¹ [...] of ¹ [...] seal [...] upon him ¹ [...] and Gabriel ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] seal ¹ [...] four races ¹

There came before me she who belongs to ¹ [the glories], the male and ¹⁵ [virginal ...] Yoel. ¹ [I] deliberated about the crowns, ¹ (and) she said to me, "Why ¹ [has] your spirit deliberated ¹ [about] the crowns and the ²⁰ [seals] on them ¹ [...] are the crowns which strengthen ¹ every [spirit ...] and every soul, ¹ and [the] seals which are ¹ [upon] the triple races and ²⁵ [...] the invisible spirit 58 are [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ and [...] ¹ [virgin ...] ¹ [...] and [...] ¹ [...] seek [...] ¹ [...] in the [...] ¹⁰ [in] them [...] ¹ [...] and [...] ¹ [...] he [strengthened] ¹ and the seals [...] ¹ race are those belonging to the Autogenes ¹⁵ and the Prophanes ¹ and the Kalyptos.

The [Invisible] ¹ Spirit [is] a psychic ¹ and intellectual power, ¹ a knower and ²⁰ a fore-knower. Therefore ¹ he is with [Gabriel] ¹ the spirit-giver [so that] ¹ when he gives a ¹ holy spirit he might ²⁵ seal him with the crown and crown him, ¹ [having] gods [...] 59 [...] ¹ [...] the ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] the ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] spirit ¹ [...] to one (fem.) ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] they exist ¹ [...] and they were ¹ not [in] them in order that they might ¹ [become] simple ¹⁵ and [might] not be doubled ¹ [according to] any pattern. ¹ [These] then are the ¹ simple, perfect individuals. ¹ [...] and all these ²⁰ [...] of the aeons ¹ [...] him, all these ¹ [...] who exist in a place ¹ [...] all-perfect it required a great ¹ [...] to see them, ²⁵ for [...] 60 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ perfect [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] every [...] ¹ exist [...] ¹ he is [...] ¹⁰ [hear] him [...] ¹ [...] and [...] ¹ in thought [...] ¹ a first thought [...] ¹ since [...] is in a power ¹⁵ she is perfect [...] ¹ it is fitting for you to [...] ¹ about everything, and [...] ¹ those to whom you will listen ¹ through a thought ²⁰ of those higher than perfect ¹ and also those whom you will [know] ¹ in a soul [of] ¹ the perfect ones."

[When] she has said this, she [baptized me] 61 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] the first ¹ [...] and] I received power ¹ [...] ¹⁰ [...] I received the form ¹ [...] received [...] ¹ [...] existing upon my ¹ [...] receive a holy spirit ¹ [I] came into being [really] existing. ¹⁵ Then, she brought me ¹ into the great [aeon] ¹ where the perfect ¹ triple-

male (is).¹ I saw²⁰ the invisible child¹ within an invisible¹ Light. Then¹ [she] baptized me again in 62 [...] [¹ [...] [¹ [...] [¹ [...] [⁵ [...] her [...] [¹ [...] [¹ [and] I [...] [¹ I was able to [...] [¹ [...] the great one [...] [¹⁰ and perfect [...] [¹

Yoel who belongs to all [the glories]¹ said to me,¹ “You have [received] all the [baptisms]¹ in which it is fitting to [be] baptized,¹⁵ and you have become [perfect]¹ [...] the hearing of [...] [¹ all. Now [call] again¹ upon Salamex and [...] [¹ and the all-perfect Ar[...] [²⁰ the Lights of the [aeon]¹ Barbelo and the immeasurable¹ knowledge. They¹ will reveal 63 [...] [¹ [...] invisible¹ [...] [¹ [...] [⁵ [...] [¹ [...] which [...] [¹ [...] virgin] Barbelo¹ [and] the Invisible¹ [triple] powerful Spirit.”

[When]¹⁰ Youel who belongs to all the glories¹ [had said this] to me, she¹ [put me down] and went and stood¹ before the Protophanes.¹ Then, I was¹⁵ [...] over my spirit,¹ [while] praying fervently to the great¹ Lights in¹ thought. I began calling¹ upon Salamex and Se-²⁰ [...] en and the all-perfect¹ [...] e. I saw¹ glories which are¹ greater than powers,¹ [and] they annointed me. I was able 64 [...] [¹ in my [...] [¹ and [...] [¹ [...]

⁵ [...] [¹ she covered [...] [¹ all [...] [¹ Salamex [and] [¹ those [who] have revealed¹⁰ everything [to me] saying,¹ “Zostrianos, [learn]¹ of those things¹ about which you asked.¹ [...] [¹ and [he is] a single one [who]¹⁵ exists before [all] these¹ who really exist [in the]¹ immeasurable and undivided¹ Spirit [...] [¹ [...] the All which [exists]²⁰ in him and the [...] [¹ [...] and that one which [...] [¹ after him. It is he alone¹ who crosses it [...]

65[...] [¹ [...] [¹ [...] [¹ [...] [⁵ [...] all these¹ [...] he is [...] [¹ [...] first [...] [¹ [...] of] thought¹ [...] of every power¹⁰ [...] downward] [¹ [...] he is established¹ [...] stand, he [passes]¹ into the pathway to a place¹ [...] and infinite.¹⁵ He is far higher than¹ every unattainable one, yet he gives¹ [...] greater than any body¹ (and) is purer than every unembodied one,¹ entering every²⁰ thought and every body¹ [because he] is more powerful than everything, every race and species,¹ as their All. 66 [...] exist¹ [...] [¹ [...] [⁵ [...] [¹ to a partial [...] [¹ [...] part [...] [¹ [exist] in a [...] [¹ know her [...] [¹⁰ [...] he is] from him¹ [...] which really exists,¹ who (is) from¹ the Spirit who [really] exists,¹ the one alone [...] [¹⁵ for they are powers of¹ [...] Existence [...] [¹ and Life and¹ Blessedness.

In¹ Existence he exists [as]²⁰ a simple head,¹ his [word] and species.¹ Let the one who will find¹ him come into existence.¹ Existing in²⁵

Life, he is alive [...] 67 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [he having] knowledge ¹ [...] know all these ⁵ [...] him alone ¹ [...] for god [...] ¹ unless [...] ¹ [...] alone, and he [...] ¹ [...] in him [...] ¹⁰ [...] the single [...] ¹ [...] for he exists as [...] ¹ [in] that which is his, which ¹ [exists] as a form of a form, ¹ [...] unity of the ¹⁵ [...]. He exists as [the] ¹ [...] since he is in ¹ [the] mind. He is within ¹ it, not coming forth to any ¹ place because he is a single ²⁰ perfect, simple spirit. ¹ [Because] it is his place and ¹ [...], it is within him and the All ¹ that he comes into being. ¹ It is he who exists, he who 68 [...] ¹ [...] and a [...] ¹ and a [protector] ¹ in him.

Life [...] ⁵ and activity of the ¹ insubstantial [...] the [...] ¹ which exists in him ¹ [exists] in him [...] ¹ exists because of [him ...] ¹⁰ blessed and a [...] ¹ perfect, and [...] ¹ which exist in [...] ¹ which really exists. ¹ The form of the activity ¹⁵ which exists is blessed. ¹ By receiving Existence, ¹ he receives power, the [...] ¹ a perfection [...] ¹ separate forever. Then ²⁰ he exists as a perfect one. Therefore, ¹ he exists as a perfect one ¹ because he is undivided ¹ with his own region, ¹ for nothing exists ²⁵ before him except ¹ the [perfect] unity.

(Pages 69-72 are blank; they may have been numbered.)

73 existence [...] ¹ [...] she is salvation [...] ¹ [all ...] and he [...] ¹ [...] be able, nor does he [...] ⁵ [...] him, if he ¹ [...] him to him, all these [...] ¹ [...] for he [who] ¹ [...] in existence ¹ [...] this one, he totally ¹⁰ [exists] as Life, and in ¹ Blessedness he has knowledge. ¹ If he apprehends the ¹ [glories], he is perfect; ¹ but if he apprehends ¹⁵ [two] or one, he is drunk, ¹ as he has received ¹ [from] him. It is because of [him] ¹ that there exist those with souls ¹ and those without souls; ²⁰ because of him (exist) those who will be saved; ¹ because of him (exist) those who will ¹ [perish] since they have not [received] ¹ from him; because of ¹ [him] (exists) matter and ²⁵ bodies; because of him (exist) non- 74 [...] ¹ [because of] him [...] ¹ every [...] because of [...] ¹ [...] this one [...] who [pre-] ⁵ exists and he [...] ¹ [...] a [simple] head, ¹ [a] single spirit [...] ¹ he is [...], and [...] ¹ existence, form, [...] ¹⁰ [...] of him.

It is [in accordance with] ¹ Activity, that is [...] Life, ¹ and in accordance with perfection, ¹ that is intellectual ¹ power, that she is a [...] Light. ¹⁵ It is at one time that the three stand, ¹ at one time they move. ¹ It is in every place yet ¹ not in any place that the ineffable ¹ unnameable one [...] ²⁰ and produces ¹ them all. [...] ¹ exist from him [...] ¹ resting in him [...] ¹ in her perfection ²⁵ he has not received from [every] form 75 because of him ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] anything

[...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] in existence ¹ [...] dwell in the ¹ [...] of life. But in ¹⁰ perfection and ¹ [knowledge] (is) Blessedness. ¹

All [these] dwell ¹ [in the] indivisibility of ¹ [the] Spirit. Because of ¹⁵ knowledge [...] is ¹ [divinity] and [...] ¹ and blessedness ¹ and life and ¹ knowledge and goodness ²⁰ and unity ¹ and singleness. ¹ In short, all these (are) the ¹ purity of barrenness ¹ [...] pre-exists him ²⁵ [...] all these and the 76 [...] his [...] ¹ [...] in [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ aeon, a [...] ¹ in a [...] ¹ barrenness, he [...] ¹⁰ he always [...] ¹ him when he saw him [...] ¹ It is because he [is] one that he is ¹ simple. Because he is ¹ Blessedness in ¹⁵ perfection [...] one, ¹ perfect and [blessed]. ¹ It is because she was in need of his [...] ¹ that she was in need of this from him, ¹ because he followed [her] ²⁰ with knowledge. ¹ It is outside of him that ¹ his knowledge dwells; ¹ it dwells with the one who ¹ examines himself, ²⁵ a reflection and a [...] 77 [...] be in need of [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] simple ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] and ¹ [...] he [...] ¹ [...] this, she [...] ¹ [...] the pleroma ¹ [...] which she did not desire ¹⁰ for herself.

She has ¹ [...] him outside of the ¹ [perfection], she has divided, ¹ for she is [the] all-perfection ¹ [of] perfection, ¹⁵ existing as thought. ¹ With respect to him ¹ [she] is a begetting which follows ¹ him, and as one from ¹ his ineffable power ²⁰ she has ¹ a first power and ¹ the first barrenness ¹ after him, ¹ because with respect to all the ²⁵ rest a first aeon 78 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [all ...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] of the [...] ¹ [...] and him [...] ¹ know him, he really ¹ exists as an aeon [...] ¹⁰ and in Activity [...] ¹ power and a [...] ¹ she did not begin [...] ¹ time, but she [appeared] ¹ from eternity, ¹⁵ having stood before ¹ him in eternity. ¹ She was darkened by the ¹ majesty of his [...] ¹ She stood ²⁰ looking at him and rejoicing ¹ because she was filled with his ¹ kindness, [...] ¹ but when she had [...] 79 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] she [...] ¹ [...] first existence ¹ [...] insubstantial and ¹ that [...] ¹⁰ It is [from] the undivided one ¹ that [it] moves toward Existence ¹ in activity and [intellectual] ¹ perfection and intellectual life, ¹ which was ¹⁵ Blessedness and ¹ Divinity.

The [whole] Spirit, ¹ perfect, simple ¹ and invisible, ¹ has become singleness ²⁰ in Existence and ¹ activity and a ¹ simple triple-[power], ¹ an invisible spirit, an ¹ image of that which ²⁵ really exists, the one 80 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ of the really [existing] one [...] ¹ [he] exists in a [...] ¹ she being an image [...] ¹ in a turning [...] ¹⁰ power to join with his [...] ¹ she having seen the [...] ¹ which existed [...] ¹ all-perfection [...] ¹ that one, because he [...] ¹⁵ pre-exist and

[...] ¹ rest upon all these, he [...] ¹ pre-exist being known ¹ as triple-powerful.

The ¹ Invisible Spirit has not ²⁰ ever [been] ignorant. He always ¹ knew, but he was always ¹ perfection [and] ¹ blessedness [...] 81 She became ignorant [...] ¹ and she [...] ¹ body and [...] ¹ promise [...] ⁵ light [...] ¹ [...] she exists [...] ¹ [...] in order that ¹ she might not come forth anymore ¹ nor come into existence apart ¹⁰ from perfection. She ¹ knew herself and him. ¹ Having made herself stand, ¹ she was at rest ¹ because of him, ¹⁵ since she was ¹ [from] him who really exists, ¹ {she was from him who ¹ really exists} and all ¹ those. (Thus), she knows herself ²⁰ and him who pre-exists. ¹

By following him ¹ they came into being existing {they ¹ came into being existing} and ¹ appearing through those 82 [who pre-]exist. And ¹ [...] through the ¹ [...] they having appeared ¹ [...] two ⁵ [...] they appeared ¹ [...] the one] who ¹ knows him beforehand, as ¹ an eternal space, ¹ since he had become ¹⁰ his second knowledge, ¹ once again the knowledge of ¹ his knowledge, the unborn ¹ Kalyptos. [They] ¹ stood upon him ¹⁵ who really exists, ¹ for she knew about him, ¹ in order that those who follow ¹ her might come into being having ¹ a place and that ²⁰ those who come forth (from her) ¹ might not be before her but ¹ might become holy ¹ (and) simple. She is the ¹ comprehension of god 83 who pre-[exists. She] ¹ rested [...] ¹ to the simple [...] ¹ salvation ⁵ salvation [...] ¹ [...] he [...] ¹ [...] light which was fore- ¹ [known]. She was called ¹ Barbelo because (of her being) ¹⁰ thought; the triple [race] ¹ (which is) male, virginal ¹ (and) perfect and her ¹ knowledge through which she came ¹ into being in order that they might not ¹⁵ [...] her down and that ¹ she might not come forth anymore ¹ through those ¹ in her and those who follow ¹ her. Rather, she is ²⁰ simple in order that she might ¹ be able to know the god ¹ who pre-exists because ¹ she came into being as a good (product) ¹ of him since she ²⁵ [...] 84 [...] barrenness ¹ [...] third ¹ [...] two ¹ [...] of this way [...] ⁵ [...] and male [...] ¹ [...] and the ¹ [...] barrenness [...] ¹ [...] she is a second [...] ¹⁰ she stood [...] ¹ first of the reality [which] ¹ really exists [...] ¹ [...] the blessedness [...] ¹ of the Invisible [Spirit], ¹⁵ the knowledge [...] the first ¹ existence in the ¹ simplicity of the ¹ Invisible Spirit ¹ in the unity. It is in ²⁰ that pure singleness that ¹ he is similar and [...] ¹ species. And he who [...] ¹ exist [...] 85 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] and knows ¹ [...] and the ¹ [...] and the [perfection] ¹⁰ and [...] produces and ¹ [...] the first Kalyptos ¹ [...] them all, ¹ existence and activity, ¹ divinity, race ¹⁵ and species.

But are powers ¹ one? In what way ¹ (is it) that he is one, that is, ¹ not a partial one, but ¹ (one of) those of the All? What ²⁰ is the unity which is unity? ¹ Is he from ¹ [...] activity [...] life ¹ and [...] of ¹ [...]. And [...] 86 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ power [...] ¹ as [...]

¹⁰ [...] perceptible [...] ¹ [...] all-perfect [...] ¹ [...] she having spoken, [...] ¹ "You are great, Aphr[edon].¹ You are perfect, Neph[redon]." ¹⁵ To his existence she says, ¹ "You are great, Deipha[...]. ¹ She [is] his activity and life ¹ and divinity. ¹ You are great, Harmedon [...], ²⁰ who belongs to all the glories, Epiph[a- ¹ and his blessedness and ¹ the perfection [of] the ¹ singleness [...] ¹ all [...]" 87 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] forever ¹ [...] intellectual ¹ [...] perfect] ¹⁰ [the virgin Barb]elo ¹ through the simplicity ¹ of the blessedness ¹ of the triple powerful ¹ Invisible Spirit. She ¹⁵ who has known him ¹ has known herself. And he, being ¹ one everywhere, being ¹ undivided, having ¹ [...] has [...] and she has known ²⁰ [herself as] his activity ¹ [...] and he has known ¹ [...] knowledge ¹ [...] within 88 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ bless [...] ¹⁰ [...] Be[ritheus, Erignaor], ¹ Or[imeni]os, Ar[amen], ¹ Alph[ege]s, Elilio[upheus], ¹ Lalamenu[s], Noetheus [...] ¹ great is your name [...] ¹⁵ it is strong. He who knows (it) ¹ knows everything. You are ¹ one, you are one, Siou, E[...], ¹ Aphredon, you are the [aeon] ¹ of the aeons of the ²⁰ perfect great one, the first ¹ Kalyptos of the [...] ¹ activity, and [...] ¹ he is [...] ¹ his image [...] ²⁵ of his, he [...]

89 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] existence] ¹⁰ [...] and he ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] in ¹ [...] the glory] ¹⁵ [...] glories ¹ [...] a ¹ [...] in ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁰ [...] ¹ [...] aeon ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] exist [...] ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [and ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹⁵ [...] ¹ [blessed [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [perfect [...] ¹ [...] ²⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁵ [...] 91 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] god ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] first ¹ [...] and powers ¹⁵ [...] all-perfect] ¹ they are [...] ¹ of all these and a ¹ cause of [them] all, a ¹ [...] Barbelo ¹ [...] ²⁰ [...] him and ¹ [...] all these ¹ [...] he not having ¹ [...] and his ¹ [...] become ²⁵ [...] but 92 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹⁰ of [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [and [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹⁵ and a [...] ¹ in a [...] ¹ according to the [thought] which ¹ really [exists [...] which exists as [...] ¹ name [...] ²⁰ [...] ¹ Kalyptos [...] ¹ the [...] ¹ triple [...] ¹ [...] ²⁵ but [...] 93 name him.

All these come, ¹ as it were, ¹ from him who is pure. ¹ If you give glory ⁵ because of him, and if you ¹ [...] existence ¹ [...] his ¹ [...] a ¹ [...] simple ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] he will ¹ [...] ¹ [...] that one ¹⁵ [...] know him ¹ [...] ¹ [...] perfect ¹ he being [...] perfect ¹ and [...] ²⁰ [...] perfect ¹ [...] ¹ [...] his ¹ [...] ¹ [...] him ²⁵ [...] to the ¹ [...] 94 he was not able to see her. ¹ Therefore, it is impossible to receive ¹ him in this way in ¹ majestic purity ⁵ as a perfect head of ¹ [him who] is in [...] ¹ [...] which ¹ [...] know him ¹ concerning [...] say ¹⁰ it [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] which [...] ¹⁵ [...] ¹ which [...] for ¹ [...] ¹ [...] exist together ¹ [...] and [...] ²⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁵ nor [...] 95 differences between these and ¹ angels, and differences ¹ between these and men, ¹ and differences between ⁵ these and existence. ¹ And [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] and [perception] ¹ [...] ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] really ¹ [...] ¹ for [...] the [perceptible] ¹ world [...] like ¹⁵ [...] ¹ existence [...] ¹ for [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ [...] (lines 20ff do not survive) 96 will approach him in knowledge. ¹ He receives power, but he who is ¹ far from him is humbled.” ¹

And I said, “Why ⁵ then have the judges come ¹ into being? What [...] is the [suffering] of ¹ the [...] for [...] ¹ and [...] ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ but [...] ¹ [...] ¹ through [...] who [...] ¹⁵ suffering [...] through [...] ¹ the [...] ¹ [...] exists ¹ [...] she ¹ dwells [...] ²⁰ [...] ¹ [...] (lines 22ff, ca. 4 lines, do not survive) 97 male, since she is knowledge [of] ¹ the triple powerful invisible ¹ great Spirit, the image of ¹ [the first] Kalypotos, the ⁵ [blessedness] in the ¹ [invisible] Spirit, [...] the ¹ [...] ¹ [...] for ¹ [...] he knows ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ fill ¹ [...] she ¹⁵ appears [...] ¹ knowledge [...] she ¹ stands [...] ¹ [...] ²⁰ [...] (lines 21ff, ca. 6 lines, do not survive) 98 [...] a perfect unity of ¹ a complete unity, and ¹ when she divided the All [...] ¹ from the All [...] ⁵ existence and [...] ¹ [...] the thoughts [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] [perception] ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁰ [...] (lines 22ff, ca. 5 lines, do not survive) 99 [...] [existence ...] ¹ [...] in [...] which ¹ [...] ⁵ knowledge ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ she blesses ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] which ¹⁵ [...] ¹ [...] and ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁰ [...] (lines 21ff, ca. 6 lines, do not survive)

100 [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ Arm[ozel] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ is the [...] ¹⁰ [through ...] ¹ power [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹⁵ which [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁰ [...] (lines 22ff, ca. 4 lines, do not survive) 101 [...] invisible [...] ¹ [...] that one [...] ¹ [...] this] is the [...] ¹ [...] ⁵ [...] form ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] of a ¹ [...] ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] Kalypotos ¹ [...] undivided ¹ [...] ¹⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...]

¹ [...] (lines 20ff, ca. 4 lines, do not survive) 102 [...] which exist [...] ¹ [...] the [...] ¹ [...] ¹ and [...] ⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ he [...] ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ those [...] ¹⁵ a [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ some [...] ²⁰ [...] ¹ [...] (lines 22ff, ca. 4 lines, do not survive) 103 [...] origin [...] ¹ [which] really exists [...] ¹ [...] exist [...] essence] ¹ [...] in ⁵ [...] this is ¹ [...] the ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] they ¹ [...] not ¹ [...] ¹⁵ [...] this ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] (lines 20ff, ca. 6 lines, do not survive)

104 [...] she appears ¹ [...] of those who [...] ¹ [...] of the [...] ¹ and [...] ⁵ this [...] ¹ the [...] ¹ [...] ¹ see [...] ¹ [...] ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ he [...] ¹⁵ really [...] ¹ [...] ¹ that [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ [...] ²⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] (lines 24ff, ca. 4 lines, do not survive) 105 are those who [stand [...] ¹ the aeon of [...] ¹ come up to [...] ¹ [...] which ⁵ exist in [...] he ¹ on the one hand [...] ¹ [...] he ¹ [...] one ¹ [...] an origin ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] and ¹ [...] he ¹ [...] matter ¹ [...] single ¹⁵ [...] ¹ [...] exist] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] which ²⁰ [...] and ¹ [...] (lines 22ff, ca. 4 lines, do not survive) 106 [...] and he exists ¹ [...] he is [...] and ¹ [...] mark of a [...] ¹ [...] an ⁵ [...] nor of [...] ¹ [...] he [...] ¹ which [...] ¹ [...] ¹⁰ and [...] ¹ [...] ¹ number [...] ¹ live [...] ¹ according to [...] ¹⁵ which [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁰ which [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] (lines 23ff, ca. 4 lines, do not survive) 107 them [...] ¹ [...] and [...] ¹ existence [...] ¹ [...] and the [...] exist ⁵ as [...] ¹ reflection [...] first ¹ [...] ¹ [...] first ¹ [...] of the ¹⁰ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] he ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹⁵ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁰ [...] ¹ [...] (lines 22ff, ca. 6 lines, do not survive) 108 [...] not, they giving [...] ¹ [...] he who exists [...] ¹ [...] all and ¹ he [...] a multitude ⁵ [...] creation ¹ [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹⁰ the [...] ¹ [...] ¹ in the [...] ¹ these [...] ¹ the [...] ¹⁵ of [...] ¹ alive [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁰ [...] ¹ in [...] ¹ [...]

(Pages 109-112 do not survive)

113 and angels and ¹ daimons and minds and ¹ souls and living beings and ¹ trees and bodies and ⁵ those which are before them: those ¹ of the simple elements ¹ of simple origins, and ¹ those which are in ¹ [...] and unmixed confusion, air ¹⁰ [and] water and earth ¹ and number and yoking ¹ and movement and [...] ¹ and order and breath and ¹ all the rest. They are ¹⁵ fourth powers which are ¹ [in] the fourth aeon, those ¹ which] are in the [...] and ¹ [...] perfect of [...] powers ¹ [...] powers [...] of ²⁰ [...] of ¹ [...] angels ¹ [of the] angels, souls ¹ [of the] souls, living beings ¹ [of the] living beings, trees [of] ²⁵ [the trees [...] ¹ [...] and [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] 114 his own.

There are those ¹ who are as begotten, and ¹ those who are in an unborn ¹ begetting, and there are those ⁵ who are holy and eternal, ¹ and the immutable ones ¹ in death and ¹ destruction in indestructibility; ¹ and there are those who are as ¹⁰ All; there are those [who are] ¹ races and those who are [in] ¹ a world and order; there are ¹ those in [indestructibility], ¹ and there are the first [who stand] ¹⁵ and the second [in] ¹ all of them. [All] those [who] ¹ are from them and [those who] ¹ are [in] them, and [from] ¹ these who [follow] them [...] ²⁰ [...] these [...] ¹ and [the] fourth aeons ¹ stood [...] ¹ [...] they existing [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] 115 in them, he being scattered abroad. ¹ They are not crowded against one another, ¹ but to the contrary they are alive, ¹ existing in themselves and ⁵ agreeing with one another, as ¹ they are from a single ¹ origin. They are reconciled ¹ because they are all ¹ in a single aeon of Kalyptos, ¹⁰ [...] being divided in power, ¹ for they exist in accord with each ¹ of the aeons, standing in ¹ relationship to the one which has reached them. ¹

But Kalyptos is [a] single aeon; ¹⁵ [he] has four different ¹ aeons. In accord with ¹ each of the aeons ¹ they have powers, not ¹ like first and second (powers), ²⁰ for all these [are] ¹ eternities, [but] they are different ¹ [...] and order and glory ¹ [...] which exists ¹ [in ...] four aeons and ²⁵ [...] who pre-exists ¹ [...] god [...] ¹ [...] they are [...] ¹ [...]

116 All of them exist ¹ in one, dwelling together ¹ and perfected individually ¹ in fellowship and ⁵ filled with the aeon which ¹ really exists. There are ¹ those among them (who stand) ¹ as dwelling in essence ¹ and those (who stand) as essence ¹⁰ in conduct or [suffering] because ¹ they are in a second, for ¹ the unengenderedness of the ungenerated ¹ one who really exists ¹ is among them. When the ungenerated ¹⁵ have come into being, their power ¹ stands; there is an ¹ incorporeal essence with [an] ¹ imperishable [body]. The ¹ [immutable one] is [there] ²⁰ who [really] exists. ¹ Because it transforms [through] ¹ change, the [...] in destructible fire ¹ stands with [all] ¹ [these ...] ²⁵ [...] one [...] 117 he stands. It is there that ¹ all living beings dwell, ¹ existing individually (yet) all ¹ joined together. The knowledge ⁵ of the knowledge is there ¹ together with a setting up of ignorance. ¹ Chaos is there ¹ and a perfect place ¹ for all of them, and they are strange. ¹⁰ True Light (is there), ¹ also enlightened darkness together with the one ¹ who does not really exist — ¹ [he] does not really exist. ¹ [...] the non-being who does ¹⁵ not exist at all. But it is he, the ¹ Good, from whom derives ¹ the good and what is pleasant ¹ and the divine; (it is he) from ¹ [whom] comes God and he who ²⁰ [...], he who is great. ¹ For [...] in part ¹ [...] form and

God¹ that [...] and the one [...] ¹ [...] a god [...] ²⁵ [...] all these [...] ¹ [...] darkness [...] ¹ [...] 118 and a race. He has¹ not mixed with anything, but he remains¹ alone in himself and¹ rests himself on his⁵ limitless limit. ¹ He is [the] God of those who¹ really exist, a seer¹ and a revealer of God. ¹

When she had strengthened him who [knew her], ¹⁰ the aeon Barbelo, the¹ knowledge of the Invisible Triple¹ Powerful Perfect Spirit, in order to [...] ¹ her, said, "He [...] ¹ a life. I am alive in [...] ¹⁵ You, the One, are alive. He is alive, [he] ¹ who is three. It is you who are [the] ¹ three who are three [doubled ...] ¹ e e e. The first of seven [...] ¹ the third [...] ²⁰ the second [...] ¹ e e e a a a a a [...] ¹ [...] two, but he [four ...] ¹ [...] knowledge [...] ¹ [...]

²⁵ [...] 119 a part? What kind of mind, and¹ what kind of wisdom? What kind of understanding, ¹ what kind of teaching? His¹ Lights are named (as follows): the first⁵ [is Arme]don and she who is with him, ¹ [...]; the second is¹ Diphane [...] and] she who is with him, Dei-¹ ph[a ...]; the third is¹ [Malsed]on and she who is with him ¹⁰ [...]; the fourth is¹ [...]s and she who is with him, Olmis. ¹

Kalyptos exists having¹ [...] with his Form. ¹ He is invisible to all ¹⁵ these so that they all might be¹ strengthened by him [...] ¹ [...] he exists in¹ [...] all-perfect because¹ [he has] four existing ²⁰ [...] ¹ [...] nor according to a¹ [...] alone¹ [...] B]arbelo [...] ¹ [...] ²⁵ [...] 120 know him and the one who is set¹ over a second. The first¹ of the aeons is Harmedon, ¹ the father-glory. The second⁵ Light (is) one whom [he does] not [know], ¹ but all the [individuals], ¹ wisdom [...] exist¹ in the fourth aeon¹ who has revealed [himself] ¹⁰ and all the glories. [The third] ¹ Light (is) he [...] ¹ not him, as the word of all¹ [the forms] and that other¹ [glory], understanding, [who is] ¹⁵ in the third [aeon]. ¹ There are four in¹ Malsedon and [...] ¹ nios. The fourth¹ Light is the one who [...] ²⁰ of all the forms¹ existing [...] ¹ a teaching and glory [...] ¹ and the truth of the [four aeons], ¹ Olmis, [...] and the [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] 121 fifth.

The first (is the one)¹ who is the second, that is, it is¹ the all-perfect Kalyptos, ¹ for the four Lights⁵ exist. It is Kalyptos who has¹ divided again, and they exist together. ¹ All who know those who¹ exist as glories¹ are perfect. This one ¹⁰ [...] knows everything about¹ them all is all-perfect. ¹ From him is every¹ power, every one and¹ their entire aeon, because they all ¹⁵ come to him and¹ they all come from him, ¹ the power of them¹ all (and) the origin of them all. ¹ When he learned ²⁰ [of them], he became a¹ [...] aeon and a¹ ingenerateness. ¹ [...]

other aeons ¹ [in ...] a [...] ²⁵ [...] ¹ [...] 122 become a Barbelo, he ¹ becomes a first aeon ¹ because of the eternity of the ¹ Invisible Spirit, the second ⁵ ingenerateness.

These are all ¹ the glories: the limitless ¹ Aphredons, [...] the ¹ ineffables, the revealers, ¹ all the [...] immutables, ¹⁰ the glory-revealers, ¹ the twice-revealed ¹ Marsedons, the limitless Solmises, ¹ the self-revealers ¹ who are [full] ¹⁵ of glory, those who [wait for] ¹ glory, the blessers, the M[arse-] ¹ dons, the Kalyptoi who [...] ¹ the limits [...] ¹ upon the limits [...] ²⁰ those who exist [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] (Lines 24ff, 1 or 2, do not survive) 123 ten thousand glories ¹ in them.

Therefore, he is ¹ a perfect glory so that whenever ¹ he can join (another) and ⁵ prevail, he exists as perfect. ¹ Thus, even if he enters ¹ into a body and a death (coming) from ¹ matter, they do not ¹ receive greater honor because of ¹⁰ their all-perfectness from whom ¹ came all these, being perfect, together with ¹ those who are with him. Indeed, each ¹ of the aeons has ¹ ten thousand aeons ¹⁵ in himself, so that by existing together ¹ he may become a perfect ¹ aeon.

He exists in the ¹ [Blessedness] of the Triple ¹ [Powerful] Perfect Invisible ²⁰ [Spirit ...] silence ¹ [...] who became first ¹ [...] and the knowledge ¹ [...] ¹ [...] ²⁵ [...] 124 whole, a silence of the second ¹ knowledge, the first thought ¹ in the will of the Triple ¹ Powerful, because he commanded it ⁵ to know him, so that he might become ¹ all-perfect and perfect ¹ in himself. By simplicity ¹ and blessedness he is ¹ known. [I received] ¹⁰ goodness through that ¹ follower of the Barbelo aeon ¹ who gives being to himself. ¹ [...] is not the power, but she is the one who ¹ belongs to him.

The aeons which really ¹⁵ exist do so in silence. ¹ Existence was inactivity, ¹ and knowledge of the self-established ¹ Kalyptos was ineffable. ¹ Having come [from the] ²⁰ fourth, the [...] ¹ thought, the Protophanes], ¹ as (the) Perfect Male [Mind] ¹ [...] ¹ [...] 125 he is his image, equal to ¹ him in power and glory but ¹ with respect to order higher than ¹ him, (yet not higher) in aeon. ⁵ Like him he has all ¹ these (parts) living (and) dwelling together ¹ in one. Together with the aeon ¹ in the aeons he has ¹ a fourfold difference ¹⁰ with all the rest who ¹ are there.

But ¹ Kalyptos really exists, ¹ and with him is located she who belongs to ¹ all the glories, Youel, the male ¹⁵ virgin glory, through ¹ whom are seen the ¹ all-perfect ones. Those ¹ who stand before him are the triple ¹ [...] child, the triple ²⁰ [...], the Autogenes ¹ [...] He has ¹ [...] in one ¹ [...] the one] again who prevails over the ¹ [...] existing in [...] ²⁵ 126 of ten thousand-fold.

The ¹ first aeon ¹ in him, from whom is ¹ the first Light, (is) Solmis ⁵ and the god revealer, ¹ since he is infinite according to the ¹ type in the Kalyptos aeon ¹ and Doxomedon. ¹ The second aeon (is) Akremon ¹⁰ the ineffable together with ¹ the second Light ¹ Zachthos and Yachtos. The ¹ third aeon is ¹ Ambrosios the virgin together with ¹⁵ the third Light ¹ Setheus and Antiphantes. ¹ The fourth aeon ¹ is the blesser [...] ¹ race with [the] ²⁰ fourth Light [Seldao] ¹ and Elenos.

The [...] ¹ him [...] ¹ [...] Arm[edon] ¹ [...] 127 phoe zoe zeoe ze[...] zosi ¹ zosi zao zeooo zesen zes- ¹ en – the individuals and the four ¹ who are eight-fold are alive. ⁵ eoooo eaeo – you who are before ¹ them, and you who are in them ¹ all. They are within ¹ the perfect male Armedon ¹ Protophanes ¹⁰ of all those who dwell together. ¹ Since all the individuals were ¹ existing as perfect ones, ¹ the Activity of all the ¹ individuals appeared again ¹⁵ as the divine Autogenes.

He ¹ stands within an ¹ aeon because there are within him ¹ four different ¹ self-begotten aeons. The ²⁰ first aeon in him ¹ as the first Light ¹ (is) [Harmoze]l-Orneos-Euthrou- ¹ nios. [He] was called ¹ [...] ²⁵ [...] The] second [aeon as] ¹ [the second Light is] ¹ [Oraiael [...]udas[...]os, Ap[...] 128 Arros[...]. The third (aeon) ¹ of the third Light (is) ¹ Daveithe-Laraneus- ¹ Epiphanios-Eideos. The fourth ⁵ (aeon) as the fourth Light ¹ (is) Eleleth-Kodere- ¹ Epiphanios-Allogenis. But as ¹ for all the rest who are in ¹ matter, they were all left (there). ¹⁰ It was because of knowledge of ¹ greatness, audacity and power that ¹ they came into existence and ¹ comforted themselves. Because they did not ¹ know God, they shall pass away. ¹⁵ Behold, Zostrianos, you have heard ¹ all these things of the gods ¹ are ignorant and (which) seem ¹ infinite to angels.” ¹

I took courage and said, ²⁰ “I am [still] wondering about the Triple ¹ Powerful Invisible Perfect Spirit: ¹ how he exists for himself, [how he causes] ¹ everything [...] who ¹ really exist [...] ²⁵ what is the [...] ¹ [...] and [...] ¹ [...] of [...] 129 very [...] they set [me] down (and) left. ¹

Apophantes and Aphropais, ¹ the Virgin-light, came before me ¹ and brought me into Protophanes, ⁵ (the) great male perfect ¹ Mind. I saw all of them ¹ as they exist ¹ in one. I joined ¹ with them all (and) blessed the ¹⁰ Kalyptos aeon, the ¹ virgin Barbelo and the Invisible ¹ Spirit. I became all-perfect ¹ and received power. I was written ¹ in glory and sealed. ¹⁵ I received there ¹ a perfect crown. I came ¹ forth to the perfect individuals, ¹ and all of them were questioning ¹ me. They were listening to the ²⁰ loftiness of my knowledge. They ¹ were rejoicing and ¹ receiving power. When I again ¹ came down to the aeons of ¹ Autogenes, I received a true ²⁵ image, pure (yet) suitable for ¹ the perceptible (world).

I came ¹ down to the aeon copies ¹ and came down here 130 to the airy-earth. I wrote ¹ three tablets (and) left them ¹ as knowledge for those who would ¹ come after me, the living elect. ⁵ Then I came down to the perceptible ¹ world and put on ¹ my image. Because it was ignorant, ¹ I strengthened it (and) went about ¹ preaching the truth to everyone. ¹⁰ Neither the angelic beings of ¹ the world nor the archons ¹ saw me, for I negated a multitude ¹ of [judgments] which brought me near death. ¹

But an erring multitude ¹⁵ I awakened saying, ¹ “Know those who are alive and the holy ¹ seed of Seth. Do not [show] ¹ disobedience to me. [Awaken] ¹ your divine part to God, and ²⁰ as for your sinless elect soul, ¹ strengthen it. Behold ¹ death here and ¹ seek the immutable ¹ ingenerateness, the [Father] of ²⁵ everything. He invites you, ¹ while they reprove you. Although they ill-treat 131 you, he will not abandon you. ¹

Do not baptize yourselves with death ¹ nor entrust yourselves to those ¹ who are inferior to you instead of to ⁵ those who are better. Flee from the madness ¹ and the bondage of femaleness ¹ and choose for yourselves the salvation ¹ of maleness. You have ¹ not come to suffer; rather, you have ¹⁰ come to escape your bondage.

Release ¹ yourselves, and that which has bound ¹ you will be dissolved. Save ¹ yourselves so that your soul ¹ may be saved. The kind Father ¹⁵ has sent you the Savior ¹ and given you strength. Why ¹ are you hesitating? Seek when you are ¹ sought; when you are invited, ¹ listen, for time is ²⁰ short.

Do not be led ¹ astray. The aeon of the ¹ aeons of the living ones is great, ¹ yet (so also is) the [punishment] ¹ of those who are unconvinced. ²⁵ Many bonds and chastisers ¹ surround you. 132 Flee quickly ¹ before death reaches you. ¹ Look at the Light. Flee ¹ the Darkness. Do not be led ⁵ astray to your destruction. ¹

Zostrianos ¹
 Oracles of Truth of ¹ Zostrianos ¹
 God of Truth ¹
 Teachings of Zoroaster

THE LETTER OF PETER TO PHILIP (VIII,2)

Introduced by

MARVIN W. MEYER

Translated by

FREDERIK WISSE

The Letter of Peter to Philip fills most of the concluding nine pages of Codex VIII. Situated immediately after the tractate Zostrianos, The Letter of Peter to Philip opens with a superscribed title (132,10-11) derived from the letter which forms the first part of the tractate. Like several other tractates in the Nag Hammadi library (Ap. Jas., Treat. Res., Eugnostos), The Letter of Peter to Philip is presented, in part, as a letter. Besides these letters in the Nag Hammadi library, other letters were also in use among the Gnostics (for example, Ptolemy's Letter to Flora, and letters of Valentinus, Monoimus the Arabian, and perhaps Marcion). Furthermore, just as a magnificent epistolary tradition developed around Paul and the Pauline school, so also a more modest collection of letters came to be ascribed to Peter. These Petrine or pseudo-Petrine letters include, in addition to The Letter of Peter to Philip, the catholic letters of Peter in the New Testament, the Epistula Petri ("Epistle of Peter") at the opening of the Pseudo-Clementines, and perhaps another letter of Peter known only from a brief quotation in Optatus of Milevis. Of these letters the pseudo-Clementine Epistula Petri is of special interest, since it shares a number of features with The Letter of Peter to Philip. Not only is it prefixed to a collection of materials relating to Peter; it also seeks to attest the authority of Peter, and as it concludes, the Contestatio begins by referring to the recipient — James the Just — reading and responding to the letter in a manner like that of Philip in the Letter of Peter to Philip 133,8-11. The Letter of Peter to Philip, however, is not to be identified with any of these letters attributed to Peter and must represent a newly discovered work in the Petrine corpus.

In its present form The Letter of Peter to Philip is clearly a Christian Gnostic tractate. Taken as a whole, the tractate is to be seen as a part of the Petrine tradition: Peter is the leader, the spokesman, the preacher among the apostles, and he may very well be described as having his own disciples (139,10). The only other apostle mentioned by name is Philip, who is submissive to the authority of Peter and whose place in the tractate seems intended to highlight the pre-eminent authority of Peter. With their leader, Peter, the apostles gather at Olivet and are taught by the risen Savior; upon returning to Jerusalem, they teach in the temple and perform healings; and eventually they go forth to preach, filled with holy spirit. In other words, not only the place of Peter but also the scenario of the narrative would suggest that The Letter of Peter to Philip shares important features with part of the first (Petrine) section of the Acts of the Apostles (chapters 1-12).

That the author of The Letter of Peter to Philip makes use of Christian traditions cannot be doubted. In particular, numerous parallels between this tractate and the first half of the Acts may be noted, including scenes, themes, and terms which are similar to these two documents. Even the genre of literature they represent – a narrative on Peter and the apostles within which are included revelatory, liturgical, and edificatory materials – is similar, although in the case of The Letter of Peter to Philip the narrative has been prefixed with a letter of Peter. Furthermore, the author of The Letter of Peter to Philip is familiar with other Christian traditions besides Lukan materials. The Savior's second revelatory answer (136,16-137,4) resembles the Johannine Logos hymn (Jn 1:1-18), but the similarities must not be overdrawn. Again, the traditional kerygmatic formulae in the credo of the sermon (139,15-21) show affinities with similar formulae to be found throughout early Christian literature (the parallels in John 19 are particularly close to the credo in The Letter of Peter to Philip), and the little "Pentecost" of The Letter of Peter to Philip (140,1[?]-13) shares features with the Johannine "Pentecost" account (20:19-23). Moreover, the author of this tractate also mentions previous revelatory utterances of the Savior (135,5-6; 138,2-3, 22-24; 139,11-12), utterances frequently said to have been given while Jesus was embodied. Presumably these revelations of the embodied Savior could refer to such teachings as are presented in the canonical gospels, and the "four words" of 140,25 could have been understood as the four gospels to be sent to the four directions. (Hans-Gebhard Bethge suggests that originally the text of 140,25 may have read "the four directions," which eventually could have been modified to read "four words.") Hence, it is clear that the author of The Letter of Peter to Philip is conversant with early Christian materials and desires to establish continuity with these earlier traditions.

Gnostic emphases are clearly visible in the narrative framework of The Letter of Peter to Philip. In particular this observation applies to the gnostic "dialogue," the revelatory discourse of the Savior uttered in answer to the questions of the apostles. The first four revelatory answers (135,8-137,13) are at most marginally Christian, though they have been taken over and legitimated as revelations of the risen Lord. The first answer (135,8-136,15), which provides an abbreviated version of the myth of the mother, illustrates no overtly Christian features at all. It reflects a rather simple version of the myth, and is similar to the Sophia myth of The Apocryphon of John and the Barbelognostics of Irenaeus (Haer. 1.29.1-4) in terminology and general presentation. This set of four revelatory answers furnishes a gnostic perspective on the fall into deficiency and the attainment of fullness, and the imprisonment and the struggle of Gnostics in the world. To this set of answers has been appended an additional question and answer (137,13-138,3) which utilizes different terms and focuses upon the life and mission of the apostles. Gnostic in perspective like the other answers, this additional answer does show Christian concerns, and illustrates a dominant interest of The Letter of Peter to Philip, the suffering of the believer.

In addition to the questions and answers in the gnostic dialogue, other materials similarly used in the tractate may also show gnostic proclivities. The two prayers of the gathered apostles (133,17-134,9) contain traditional terms and themes commonly found in early Christian prayers, but also proclaim a luminosity and glory which make them especially appropriate as the prayers of Gnostic

Christians. Likewise, the description of the resurrected Christ as a light and a voice (134,9-14; 135,3-4; 137,17-19; 138,11-13,21-22) represents a primitive way of depicting the appearances of the risen Lord (Mk 9:2-8 par.; 2 P 1:16-19; Ac 9:1-9; 22:4-11; 26:9-18; 1 Co 15; Rv 1:12-16), but among Gnostic Christians such theophanic descriptions were particularly appreciated.

In the brief sermon of Peter (139,9-140,1[?]) gnōstic tendencies are even more clearly seen. To be sure, a traditional Christian credo constitutes the first part of the sermon (139,15-21), and traditional terms are applied to Jesus ("the Lord Jesus," "the Son," "the author of our life"), but the credo is interpreted according to the Gnostic Christian theology of the author of The Letter of Peter to Philip. From the time of his incarnation Jesus suffered, but he suffered as one who is "a stranger to this suffering" (139,21-22). A Christological tension remains as the sermon stresses both the reality of Jesus' sufferings and the glory of his divinity. In contrast to the suffering illuminator Jesus, the sermon continues, the followers of Jesus suffer because of "the transgression of the mother" (139,23). This phrase is reminiscent of references to the fall of mother Eve, and refers, for the Gnostic Christian author, to the mother often named Sophia in other versions of the myth. She is also called "the mother" at 135,12, and her tragic fall is seen as the source of human sufferings. Hence, this reference to "the transgression of the mother" may provide another point of contact between the figures of Eve and Sophia in gnostic literature.

It is possible, then, to suggest a general outline for the literary history of The Letter of Peter to Philip. On the basis of the parallels with The Apocryphon of John and Irenaeus, we suggest that The Letter of Peter to Philip was written around the end of the second century C.E. or into the third. The author of the text presumably wrote in Greek: such may be intimated by the presence of Greek loan words and Greek idioms. The author apparently was a Christian Gnostic who was well versed in the Christian tradition, and who used and interpreted that tradition in a Christian Gnostic fashion. A gnostic dialogue has been constructed, though it is less a true dialogue than a revelatory discourse of Christ in answer to questions raised by the apostles. Within this dialogue are included gnostic materials which are non-Christian or only marginally Christian; these materials have been adopted as revelatory disclosures of the risen Christ. On the basis of the Christian and gnostic traditions with which the author was familiar, the author compiled a narrative document with a revelatory focus. The letter itself was added at the beginning of this narrative in order to stress the authoritative place of Peter, and The Letter of Peter to Philip subsequently received its present title. Finally, the Greek tractate was translated into Coptic, and found its way into Codex VIII of the Nag Hammadi library.

According to the reports of James M. Robinson and Stephen Emmel, another Coptic text of The Letter of Peter to Philip is to be found in a papyrus codex which, at the present time, is neither published nor available for study.

THE LETTER OF PETER TO PHILIP

VIII 132, 10 – 140, 27

The letter of Peter Which He¹
Sent to Philip¹

“Peter the apostle of Jesus¹ Christ, to Philip our beloved¹ brother and our fellow apostle¹⁵ and (to) the brethren who are with you: greetings!¹ Now I want you to know, our brother [that]¹ we received orders from¹ our Lord and the Savior of¹ the whole world that [we] should come [together]²⁰ to give instruction and¹ preach in the salvation¹ which was promised us by 133 our Lord Jesus Christ. But as for you,¹ you were separate from us, and¹ you did not desire us to come together¹ and to know how we should organize⁵ ourselves in order that we might tell the good news.¹ Therefore would it be agreeable to you, our brother, to¹ come according to the orders of our¹ God Jesus?”

When Philip had received these,¹ and when he had read¹⁰ them, he went to Peter¹ rejoicing with gladness.¹ Then Peter gathered¹ the others also. They went upon¹ the mountain which is called¹⁵ “the (mount) olives,” the place where they used¹ to gather with the blessed¹ Christ when he was in the body.

Then,¹ when the apostles¹ had come together, and had thrown themselves upon²⁰ their knees, they prayed thus¹ saying, “Father, Father,¹ Father of the light, who¹ possesses the incorruptions,¹ hear us just as [thou hast]²⁵ [taken pleasure] in thy holy¹ child Jesus Christ. For he¹ became for us an illuminator 134 in the darkness. Yea hear us.”¹

And they prayed again another time¹ saying, “Son¹ of life, Son of⁵ immortality who is in¹ the light, Son, Christ of¹ immortality, our Redeemer,¹ give us power, for they¹ seek to kill us.”

Then¹⁰ a great light appeared¹ so that the mountain shone¹ from the sight of him who had¹ appeared. And a voice called¹ out to them saying,¹⁵ “Listen to my words that I may speak¹ to you. Why are you asking¹ me? I am Jesus Christ who¹ am with you forever.”

Then¹ the apostles answered²⁰ and said, “Lord,¹ we would like to know the deficiency¹ of the aeons and their pleroma.”¹ And: “How are¹ we detained in this dwelling place?”²⁵ Further: “How did we come to this place?” And: “In what¹ manner shall we depart?” Again: “How do we have 135 [the] authority of boldness?”¹ [And]: “Why do the powers fight against us?”¹

Then a voice came to them out ¹ of the light saying, ⁵ "It is you yourselves who are witnesses ¹ that I spoke all these things to you. ¹ But because of your unbelief ¹ I shall speak again. First ¹ of all concerning [the deficiency] of the aeons, this ¹⁰ [is] the deficiency, when the disobedience ¹ and the foolishness ¹ of the mother appeared ¹ without the commandment of the majesty ¹ of the Father. She wanted ¹⁵ to raise up aeons. And when she ¹ spoke, the Arrogant One followed. ¹ And when she left behind a ¹ part, the Arrogant One ¹ laid hold of it, and it became a ²⁰ deficiency. This is the deficiency ¹ of the aeons. Now when the Arrogant One ¹ had taken a part, he sowed it. ¹ And he placed powers over ¹ it and authorities. ²⁵ And [he] enclosed it in the aeons ¹ which are dead. And all the ¹ powers of the world rejoiced ¹ that they had been begotten. 136 But they do not know the ¹ pre-existent [Father], since they are ¹ strangers to him. But this is the one to whom ¹ they gave power and whom they served ⁵ by praising him. But he, the Arrogant One, ¹ became proud on account of ¹ the praise of the powers. He became ¹ an envier and he wanted to ¹ make an image in the place [of an image] ¹⁰ and a form in the place of a form. ¹ And he commissioned the powers within ¹ his authority to mold ¹ mortal bodies. And they came ¹ to be from a misrepresentation, from ¹⁵ the semblance which had emerged. ¹

Next concerning the pleroma: I am the one who ¹ was sent down in the body ¹ because of the seed which had fallen away. ¹ And I came down into their mortal mold. ²⁰ But they did not ¹ recognize me; they were thinking of me that I ¹ was a mortal man. And I ¹ spoke with him who belongs to me, and he ¹ harkened to me just as you too ²⁵ who harkened today. ¹ And I gave him authority in order that ¹ he might enter into the inheritance ¹ of his fatherhood. And I took 137 [...] they were filled ¹ [...] in his salvation. And since ¹ he was a deficiency, for this reason he ¹ became a pleroma.

It is because of this ⁵ that you are being detained, because you ¹ belong to me. When you strip off ¹ from yourselves what is corrupted, then ¹ you will become illuminators ¹ in the midst of mortal men. ¹⁰

And this (is the reason) that you will fight against the powers, ¹ because [they] do not have rest like ¹ you, since they do not wish ¹ that you be saved."

Then the apostles ¹ worshipped again saying, ¹⁵ "Lord, tell us: In what ¹ way shall we fight against the archons, since ¹ [the] archons are above us?"

Then ¹ [a] voice called out to them from ¹ the appearance saying, ²⁰

“Now you will fight ¹ against them in this way, for the archons are ¹ fighting against the inner man. And you ¹ are to fight against them in this way: Come ¹ together and teach in the world ²⁵ the salvation with a promise. And ¹ you, gird yourselves with the power ¹ of my Father, and let ¹ your prayer be known. And he, the ¹ Father, will help you as he has ³⁰ helped you by sending me. 138 Be not afraid, [I am with you forever,] ¹ as I previously [said to] ¹ you when I was in the body.” Then ¹ there came lighting and ⁵ thunder from heaven, and ¹ what appeared to them in that place was taken ¹ up to heaven.

Then ¹ the apostles gave thanks to ¹ the Lord with every blessing. And ¹⁰ they returned to Jerusalem. ¹ And while coming up they spoke with ¹ each other on the road concerning the light ¹ which had come. And a remark was made ¹ concerning the Lord. It was ¹⁵ said, “If he, our Lord, ¹ suffered, then how much (must) we (suffer)?” ¹

Peter answered saying, ¹ “He suffered on [our] behalf, ¹ and it is necessary for us too ²⁰ to suffer because of our smallness.” ¹ Then a voice came to them ¹ saying, “I have told you ¹ many times: It is necessary for you ¹ to suffer. It is ²⁵ necessary that they bring you to synagogues ¹ and governors, ¹ so that you will suffer. But he ¹ who does not suffer and does not 139 [...] ¹ [...] the Father ¹ [...] in order that he may ¹ [...].”

And the apostles ⁵ rejoiced [greatly] and came up ¹ to Jerusalem. And they came up to the temple and gave ¹ instruction in salvation in the name of ¹ [the] Lord Jesus Christ. And they healed ¹ [a] multitude.

And Peter opened his mouth, ¹⁰ he said to his (fellow) disciples, ¹ “[Did] our Lord Jesus, when he was in the body, ¹ show us everything? For he ¹ came down. My brothers, listen to my voice.” ¹ And he was filled with a holy spirit. ¹⁵ He spoke thus: “Our illuminator, Jesus, ¹ [came] down and was crucified. And he bore ¹ a crown of thorns. And he put on ¹ a purple garment. And he was ¹ [crucified] on a tree and he was buried in ²⁰ a tomb. And he rose from the ¹ dead. My brothers, Jesus is a stranger ¹ to this suffering. But we are ¹ the ones who have suffered through the transgression of the mother. ¹ And because of this, he did everything ²⁵ like us. ¹ For the Lord Jesus, the Son of the immeasurable glory of the ¹ Father, he is the author ¹ of our life. My brothers, let ¹ us therefore not obey these lawless ones ³⁰ and walk in 140 [...] Then] ¹ Peter [gathered together the others also] ¹ saying, [“O, Lord Jesus] ¹ Christ, author [of our] rest, ⁵ give us a spirit of understanding ¹ in order that we also may ¹ perform wonders.”

Then Peter ¹ and the other apostles saw [him] ¹ and they were filled with a holy spirit. ¹⁰ And each one ¹ performed healings. And they parted ¹ in order to preach the Lord ¹ Jesus. And they came together ¹ and greeted each other ¹⁵ saying, "Amen."

Then ¹ Jesus appeared saying ¹ to them, "Peace to you [all] and ¹ everyone who believes in ¹ my name. And when you depart, ²⁰ joy be to you and ¹ grace and power. And be not ¹ afraid; behold, I am with you ¹ forever."

Then the apostles ¹ parted from each other ²⁵ into four words in order to ¹ preach. And they went ¹ by a power of Jesus, in peace.

MELCHIZEDEK (IX,1)

Introduced by

BIRGER A. PEARSON

Translated by

SØREN GIVERSEN and BIRGER A. PEARSON

This tractate is the only writing of the Nag Hammadi corpus that features, or even names, the mysterious “priest of God Most High” encountered by the patriarch Abraham, according to Genesis 14:18 (cf. Ps 110:4). Its title is partially preserved on one of the fragments making up page 1 of Codex IX. Unfortunately, this codex is in a rather bad state of preservation. Only 19 lines of text (out of approximately 745) from the tractate Melchizedek are completely preserved, and less than 50 percent of the total text is recoverable even by means of conjectural restoration. Thus, since there is no other extant copy of this tractate, only a very imperfect picture of its content is possible to attain, and what has been preserved is susceptible to more than one interpretation. The following account must be read with these caveats in mind.

In terms of literary genre, this tractate is an apocalypse, specifically an “apocalypse of Melchizedek.” It contains revelations putatively given by heavenly intermediaries to Melchizedek, who communicates the revelations to a privileged few. Readers are implicitly invited to see themselves as sharing in these special revelations, as members of these privileged few.

The tractate consists of three main parts:

I. 1,1(?)–14,5: The tractate apparently opens with a brief vocative address by Melchizedek to Jesus Christ, but there quickly follows a third revelation addressed to Melchizedek by a heavenly informant whose name has been restored as “Gamaliel” (5,18). An important feature of this revelation, addressed to the “priest of God Most High” (12,10–11; cf. Gn 14:18), is a prophecy of the ministry, death, and resurrection of the Savior, Jesus Christ. It also contains a remarkable passage which predicts the coming of (docetic) heretics who will deny the physical reality of Jesus’ incarnation, death, and resurrection (5,1–11). Melchizedek himself plays a role in this revelation, for a future high-priestly office is prophesied for him (esp. 5,11–17). A prophecy of the final triumph over death concludes this first revelation (14,8–9).

II. 14,15–18,11 (?): Melchizedek then arises with joy, and undertakes several ritual actions which may also provide for us some insights into the cultic life of the community for which the writing as a whole is intended: prayers of thanksgiving, baptism, reception of the priestly name, and a presentation of spiritual offerings. This liturgical section also includes a lengthy set of invocations, each beginning “Holy are you,” addressed to members of the heavenly world (16,16–18,7; cf. 5,27–6,10). What is of special interest here is that most of the names of these divine beings are names that appear in such gnostic texts as The Apocryphon of John and other tractates associated with Sethian Gnosticism. These names include Barbelo, Harmozel, Oroiael, Daveithe, Eleleth, and others.

III. 18,11(?)–27,10: A second set of revelations transports Melchizedek into the future, again centering on the crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus Christ. But this time – if our reconstruction of the fragmentary text is correct – Melchizedek is given to understand that the spiritual triumph of Christ over his enemies will be that of Melchizedek himself!

Our tractate thus presents a number of challenging features of special interest to the historian of religions; it is indeed a mélange of traditions of Jewish, Christian, and Gnostic stamp. Its presentation of the figure of Melchizedek is a case in point: he is not only the ancient “priest of God Most High” known to us from the Bible, but he also returns as an eschatological “high-priest” and “holy warrior.” Such Jewish apocalyptic material as the Melchizedek fragments from Qumran (11QMelch) and 2 (Slavonic) Enoch shed considerable light on these features.

In this tractate, Melchizedek’s appearance in the endtime is tied to the career of Jesus Christ: his incarnation, death, and resurrection. In other words, Jesus Christ is Melchizedek! Such an idea can be understood as rooted in an interpretation of Hebrews 7:3. Moreover, the idea that Melchizedek is the “Son of God” (i.e., identical to Jesus Christ) gained currency in some early Christian circles, particularly in Egypt.

Can anything be determined about the religious community for which our tractate was composed? The fourth-century bishop of Salamis in Cyprus, St. Epiphanius, gives us an account of a Christian sect whose members referred to themselves as “Melchizedekians” (Haer. 55). A comparison of Epiphanius’ account with Melchizedek reveals enough features in common to suggest that the latter may have originated in a group of “Melchizedekians,” features such as the glorification of the priesthood of Melchizedek and a Christology that insisted on the true humanity of Christ. (The Melchizedekians were not Gnostics.)

But what of the gnostic features clearly discernible in the text? These include the divine names from gnostic mythology already mentioned, a fragment of a theogonic myth (9,1–10), a gnostic interpretation of the paradise story (9,28–10,11), and a reference to the “children of Seth” (5,20). One possible explanation of these features is that an earlier form of the text has undergone a process of gnostic editing: the latest redactor was a Gnostic who identified Melchizedek-Christ with the gnostic savior Seth and who interpolated into the text the various gnostic features that are now found in it. The final form of Melchizedek is thus a product of Sethian Gnosticism. Other explanations are, of course, possible.

The tractate Melchizedek was written originally in Greek, probably in Egypt. A third-century date is likely, though it could be earlier (or later).

MELCHIZEDEK

IX 1, 1-27, 10

Melchizedek ¹

Jesus Christ, the Son [of God ¹ . . .] from [. . .] ⁵ the aeons that. I [might tell] ¹ all of the aeons, and in (the case of) ¹ each one of the aeons [that I might tell ¹ the] nature of the aeon, what ¹ it is, and that I might put on ¹ friendship and goodness ¹ as a garment, O brother [. . .] and [. . .] ¹⁹ their end [. . .]. ¹ And he will [reveal ¹ to them] the truth [. . .] in [. . .] ²⁵ proverb(s) [. . . 2 at first] in parables ¹ [and riddles . . .] proclaim ⁵ them. Death will [tremble] ¹ and be angry, not only ¹ he himself, but also his [fellow] ¹ world-ruling archons [and] ¹ the principalities and the authorities, the ¹⁰ female gods and the male gods ¹ together with the archangels. And [. . .] ¹⁶ all of them [. . . ¹ the] world-rulers [. . .] ¹ all of them, and all the ¹ [. . .], and all the [. . .]. ²⁰

They will say [. . . concerning] ¹ him, and concerning [. . .] ¹ and [. . .] ²⁵ they will [. . .] ¹ hidden [mysteries . . .] ³³ out of ¹ [. . .] the All. They will ⁵ [. . .] this the [lawyers] ¹ will [bury] him quickly. ¹ [They will] call him, ¹ “impious man, lawless ¹ [(and) impure].” And [on] the ¹⁰ [third] day he [will rise ¹ from the] dead [. . . 4⁴ holy disciples. And] ¹ the Savior [will reveal] to them [the world] ¹ that gives life to the [All.] ¹

[But] those in the heavens spoke [many] ¹ words, together with ¹ those on the earth [and those] ¹⁰ under the earth. [. . .]. 5

[Which] will happen in his name. ¹ [Furthermore], they will say of him that he is ¹ unbegotten though he has been begotten, (that) he does ¹ not eat even though he eats, (that) he does not drink ⁵ even though he drinks, (that) he is uncircumcised ¹ though he has been circumcised, (that) he is unfleshly ¹ though he has come in flesh, (that) he did not ¹ come to suffering <though> he came to suffering, ¹ (that) he did not rise from the dead ¹⁰ <though> he arose from [the] ¹ dead.

[But] all the [tribes and] ¹ all [the peoples] will speak [the truth], ¹ who are receiving from [you] ¹ yourself, O [Melchizedek], ¹⁵ Holy One, [High-Priest], ¹ the perfect hope [and] ¹ the [gifts of] life. [I am ¹ Gamaliel] who was [sent] ¹ to [. . .] the congregation of [the ²⁰ children] of Seth, who are above ¹ [thousands of] thousands and [myriads] ¹ of myriads [of the] aeons [. . .] essence of the [aeons ¹ a] ba [. . .] aiai ababa. O ²⁵ divine [. . .] of the [. . . ¹ nature . . . ¹ O Mother] of the aeons, [Barbelo, ¹ O first-]born of the aeons, 6 splendid Doxomedon,

Dom[. . .] ¹ O glorious one, Jesus Christ, ¹ O chief commanders of the luminaries, you [powers] ¹ Armozel, Oroiael, Daveithe, ⁵ Eleleth, and you man-of-light, ¹ immortal Aeon Pigeradamas, ¹ and you good god of the ¹ beneficent worlds, Mirocheirothetou, ¹ through Jesus Christ, the Son ¹⁰ of God. This is the one whom I proclaim, ¹ inasmuch as there has [visited ¹ the One who] truly exists ¹ [among those who] exist [. . . ¹ do(es)] not [exist], Abel Baruch — ¹⁵ [that] you (sg.) [might be given] the knowledge [of the truth ¹ . . .] that he is [from ¹ the] race of the High-priest ¹ [which is] above [thousands of thousands] and ¹ [myriads] of myriads of the aeons. The ²⁰ adverse [spirits are] ¹ ignorant of him and (of) their (own) ¹ destruction. Not only (that, but) I have come to ¹ [reveal] to you [the] truth ¹ [which is] within the [brethren.] He included ²⁵ himself [in the] living ¹ [offering] together with your [offspring.] He ¹ [offered] them up as an [offering to ¹ the] All. [For it is not] cattle ¹ [that] you will offer up [for sin(s)] ⁷ of unbelief [and for] ¹ the ignorances [and all the] wicked ¹ [deeds] which they [will do . . .]. ¹ And they do [not] reach ¹ [the] Father of the All [. . .] ¹ the faith [. . .] ²⁷ to receive [baptism . . .] ¹ waters [. . .]. ⁸ For [the waters] which are above ¹ [. . .] that receive baptism ¹ [. . .]. But receive [that baptism ¹ which is] with the water which [. . .] ⁵ while he is coming [. . . ⁹ baptism] as they [. . .] ²⁸ pray for the [offspring of the] ⁹ archons and [all] the angels, together with ¹ [the] seed <which> flowed [forth from ¹ the Father] of the All [. . . ¹ the] entire [. . .] from [. . . ⁵ there were] engendered the [gods and the angels] ¹ and the men [. . .] ¹ out of the [seed] ¹ all of [the ¹ natures], those in [the heavens and] ¹ those upon the earth and [those] ¹⁰ under [the earth . . .] ²⁵ nature of the females [. . .] ¹ among those that are in the [. . .] ¹ they were bound with [. . .] [But this] is [not] (the) true Adam ¹⁰ [nor] (the) true Eve.

[For ¹ when they ate] of the tree [of ¹ knowledge] they trampled [the ¹ Cherubim] and the Seraphim ⁵ [with the flaming sword]. They [. . .] ¹ which was Adam's ¹ [. . . the] world-rulers and ¹ [. . .] them out ¹ [. . .] after they had brought forth ¹⁰ [. . .] offspring of the archons and ¹ [their worldly things], these belonging to [. . .] ²⁵ light [. . .]. ¹ And the females and the [males,] ¹ those who exist with [. . . ¹ hidden] from every nature, [and they will ¹ renounce] the archons [. . . ¹¹ who] receive from him the [. . .]. ¹ For [they] are worthy of [. . . ¹ immortal], and [great . . .] ¹ and [great [. . . ⁵ and] great [. . .] ¹ sons of [men . . .] ¹ disciples . . . ¹ image] and [. . .] ¹ from the [light ¹⁰ . . .] which is holy. ¹ For [. . .] from the ¹ [beginning . . .] a seed [. . .]. ¹²

But I will be silent ¹ [. . .] for we [are ¹ the brethren who] came down from ¹ [the] living [...]. They will [...] ⁵ upon the [...] ⁷ of Adam ¹ [... Abel], Enoch, [Noah ... ¹⁰ you], Melchizedek, [the Priest] ¹ of God [Most High ...] ¹ those who [...] ¹ women [...].

[...] 13 these two who have been chosen will ¹ [at] no time nor ¹ [in] any place will they be convicted, ¹ whenever they have been begotten, ⁵ [by] their enemies, by their friends, ¹ [nor by strangers nor their ¹ [own] kin, (nor) by the [impious] ¹ nor the pious ¹ [All of] the adverse natures will ¹⁰ [...] them, whether ¹ [those that] are manifest, or those that ¹ [are] not [manifest], together with those ¹ [that dwell] in the heavens and those that are ¹ [upon] the earth and those that are under ¹⁵ the earth. They will make [war ...] ¹ every one. ¹ For [...] whether in the [...] ²¹ many [...]. ²⁵ And these in the [...] ¹ every [one] will [...]. ¹ These will [...] ¹ with every blow [...] 14 weaknesses. These will be ¹ confined in other forms [and ¹ will] be punished. [These] ¹ the Savior will take them [away ¹ and] they will overcome everything, [not with] ¹ their mouths and words ¹ but by means of the [...] ¹ which will be done for [them. He will] ¹ destroy Death.

[These things] ¹⁰ which I was commanded ¹ to reveal, these things ¹ reveal [as I (have done)]. ¹ But that which is hidden do not reveal ¹ [to] anyone, unless [it is revealed] ¹⁵ to you (to do so)."

And [immediately ¹ I] arose, [I, Melchizedek], ¹ and I began to [...] ¹ God [...] ¹ that I should [rejoice ...] ²¹ while he [is acting ...] ¹ living [...] ¹ I said], "I [...] ²⁶ and I] will not cease, from [now on ¹ for ever], O Father of the [All, ¹ because] you have had pity on me, and 15 [you have sent the] angel of light ¹ [...] from your [aeons ¹ ... to] reveal [...] ¹ when he came he ⁵ [caused] me [to be raised up] from ignorance ¹ and (from) the fructification ¹ of death to life. For ¹ I have a name, ¹ I am Melchizedek, the Priest ¹⁰ of [God] Most High; I ¹ [know] that it is I who am truly ¹ [the image of] the true High-Priest ¹ [of] God Most High, and ¹ [...] the world. For it ¹⁵ is not [a] small [thing that] ¹ God [...] with [...] ¹ while he [...]. ¹ And [...] the angels that ¹ dwell upon the] earth [...] ²² is the [sacrifice] of [...] ¹ whom Death deceived. ¹ When he [died] he bound them ²⁵ with the natures which are [leading them astray]. ¹ Yet he offered up 16 offerings [...] ¹ cattle [...] ¹ I gave them to [Death ¹ and the angels] and the [...] ⁵ demons [...] ¹ living offering [...] ¹ I have offered up myself to you as an offering, together with those that are mine, to ¹ you yourself, (O) Father of the All, and ¹⁰ those whom you love, who have come forth ¹ from you who are holy (and) [living]. And <according to> ¹ the [perfect] laws I shall pronounce ¹ my name as I receive baptism [now] ¹ (and) for ever, (as a name) among the living (and) ¹⁵ holy [names], and (now) in the [waters], Amen.

[Holy are you], ¹ Holy are [you], Holy are you, O [Father ¹ of the All], who truly exist [...] ¹ do(es) not exist, [Abel Baruch ²⁰ ...] for ever and ever, [Amen]. ¹ Holy are [you, Holy are you], Holy are [you, ¹ ...] before [...] ¹ for ever and] ever, ¹ [Amen]. Holy are [you], Holy are [you, ²⁵ Holy are you, Mother of the] aeon(s), ¹ Barbelo, ¹ for ever and ever, [Amen. ¹ Holy are you], Holy are you, Holy are you, ¹ [First]-born of the aeons, ³⁰ Doxomedon. [...] ¹⁷ for ever] and ever, Amen. ¹ [Holy are you, Holy are you], Holy are you. [...] ⁵ for ever and ever], Amen. ¹ [Holy are you, Holy are you], Holy are you. [...] ⁸ [first] aeon, ¹ [Harmozel, for] ever and ever, ¹⁰ [Amen. Holy are you], Holy are you, ¹ [Holy are you], commander, luminary ¹ [of the aeons], Oriael, for ¹ [ever and ever], Amen. Holy are you, ¹ [Holy are you, Holy are you], commander ¹⁵ [of the aeons], man-of-light, ¹ [Daveithe], for ever ¹ [and ever, Amen]. Holy are you, ¹ [Holy are you, Holy are you, commander-in-chief Eleleth, ... ²⁰ the] aeons [...] for ²⁵ ever and ever], Amen. ¹ [Holy are you], Holy are [you], Holy are you, ¹ good [god of] ¹⁸ the [beneficent] words, ... ¹ Mirocheirothetou, [for] ¹ ever and ever, [Amen. ¹ Holy are] you, [Holy are you, Holy are you], ⁵ Commander-in-chief [of the] ¹ All, Jesus Christ, [for ever and ever], ¹ Amen.

[...]. ⁹ Blessed [...] ¹ confession. [And ...] ¹ confess him [...] ¹ now [...] ¹ then it becomes [...] ¹ fear [and ...] ¹⁵ fear and [...] ¹ disturb [...] ¹ surrounding [them ...] ¹ in the place [which has a] ¹ great darkness [in it ²⁰ and] many [...] ¹ appear [...] ¹ there [...] appear ...] ¹⁹ And ¹ [...] they were clothed with ¹ [...] all and [...] ¹⁰ disturbances. They gave ¹ [...] their words ¹ [...] and they said to me, ¹ [...] Melchizedek, ¹ Priest] of God [Most High ... they] spoke as though [...] ¹ their] mouths [...] ¹ in the All [...] ²⁴ lead astray [...] ²⁰ with his [...] ¹ worship [and ...] ¹ faith [and ...] ¹ his prayers, And [...] ⁶ those that [are his ...] ¹ first [...]. ¹⁰ They did not care that [the ¹ priesthood] which you perform, [which] ¹ is from [...] ¹⁴ in the] counsels of [...] ¹ Satan [...] ¹ the sacrifice ¹ [...] his doctrines [...] ²⁰ of this aeon [...] ²⁵ which] exist(s) [in ...] ¹ lead(s) [astray ...] ²¹ and some [...] ⁴ he gave them to [...] ⁶ and] thirteen [...] ²² throw [him ... ¹ in order that] you might [...] ⁴ for] immediately [...] ¹ by means of ... ¹ on the ground]. The [...] (p. 23 almost completely missing) ²⁴ ² which is above [...] ²⁵ me. And ¹ [...] you (pl.) struck me, ¹ [...] you threw me, ¹ [...] corpse. And ⁵ [you crucified me] from the third hour ¹ [of the Sabbath-eve] until ¹ [the ninth hour]. And after ¹ [these things

I arose] from the ¹ [dead. . . .] came out of ¹⁰ [. . .] into me. [. . .] ¹ my eyes [saw . . . ¹² they did not] find anyone [. . .] 26 greeted [me . . .]. ¹ They said to me, “Be [strong, O Melchizedek], ¹ great [High-priest] ¹ of God [Most High, for the archons], ¹ who [are] your [enemies], ¹ made war; you have [prevailed over them, and] ¹ they did not prevail over you, [and you] ¹ endured, and [you] ¹ destroyed your enemies [. . .] ¹⁰ of their [. . .] ¹ will rest, in any [. . .] ¹ which is living (and) holy [. . .] ¹ those that] exalted themselves against him in [. . .] ¹ flesh.

[. . . 27 with] the offerings, working on that ¹ which is good, fasting ¹ with fasts.

These revelations ¹ do not reveal to anyone ⁵ in the flesh, since they are incorporeal, ¹ unless it is revealed to you (to do so).” ¹

When the brethren who belong to the ¹ generations of life had said these things, they ¹ were taken up to (the regions) above ¹⁰ all the heavens. Amen.

THE THOUGHT OF NOREA (IX,2)

Introduced by

BIRGER A. PEARSON

Translated by

SØREN GIVERSEN and BIRGER A. PEARSON

Comprising only 52 lines of text, this tractate is one of the shortest of the Nag Hammadi corpus. The pages of the manuscript on which it is found are damaged, but they preserve enough text to allow for the restoration of almost the entire tractate. The Coptic text, however, is manifestly corrupt at points, and textual emendation has been deemed necessary here and there (indicated in the translation with pointed brackets).

The tractate bears no title in the manuscript. The one used in this edition is a phrase found in the text itself, at the end of the tractate (29,3). Another title is in use in German scholarship: "Ode on Norea," a designation that also defines the literary genre of this writing: an ode or hymn.

The hymnic features evident in the text include parallelismus membrorum, repetition, and a balanced structure, characteristics of Semitic poetry. Norea does not, however, satisfy the requirements of Greek poetry, for no traditional Greek meter can be ascribed to the original Greek text of which this Coptic version is a translation.

The tractate has a clear fourfold structure:

I. 27,11-20: The tractate begins with an invocation addressed to a divine triad consisting of Father, Mother, and Son, the basic primal triad found in Sethian Gnosticism. The incomprehensible Father is a primal Mind, here also called Adamas (28,30; 27,26), whose Thought (ennoia) is a primal spiritual Mother. Their son is Mind (nous), also called Logos (27,18) and Autogenes (28,6).

II. 27,21-28,12: The invocation is expressly attributed to Norea: "It is Norea who [cries out] to them" (27,21-22). Her cry for deliverance results in her restoration to the divine world, her proper place (= the Pleroma), 27,23; 28,22).

III. 28,12-23: While remaining in the pleroma, Norea also has a saving role to play in propagating "words of Life" (28,13-14).

IV. 28,24-29,5: Norea's own salvation is aided by the intercession of the "four holy helpers" (28,27-28), figures who are easily identifiable as the four "luminaries" of Sethian Gnosticism: Harmozel, Oroiael, Daveithe, and Eleleth (cf., e.g., Melch. IX 6,3-5). Her "thought" (29,3) is the gnosis that brings about for all of her spiritual progeny ultimate reintegration into the godhead. Thus, in saving others, Norea saves herself.

From what has already been said, there can be no doubt that Norea is a gnostic text in the full technical sense of that term. It has justifiably been included among those gnostic texts which are classified as Sethian, in the sense that they share essential features of a discrete gnostic system conveniently labeled as Sethian. (Hans-Martin Schenke is the foremost proponent of this classification, which applies to the following texts of the Nag Hammadi corpus: Ap. John, Hyp. Arch., Gos. Eg., Apoc. Adam, Steles Seth, Zost., Norea, Marsanes, Allogenes, and Trim. Prot.) The Sethian system includes the following essential elements: 1) the gnostic triad of Father, Mother, and Son; 2) the four "luminaries" subordinate to the Son; and 3) the figure of Seth and/or his feminine counterpart, Norea. All of these elements are found in our tractate.

There are no clear indications of Christian influence in this tractate, and such Jewish influence as can be found in it belongs to its prehistory, i.e., the earlier formulations of the Sethian system which is reflected in it.

The most interesting feature of Norea is the savior figure depicted in it, Norea. This figure occurs in a wide range of gnostic literature, Sethian and non-Sethian, with considerable variation in the spelling of her name: Norea, Orea, Noraia, Oraia, Horaia, Nora, Noria, Nuraita, and Nhuraita. She is represented in the literature as the daughter of Adam and Eve, sister-wife of Seth, or as the wife of Noah or Shem. She is sometimes portrayed as the intended victim of rape by the wicked archons, as in The Hypostasis of the Archons (II,4), a text which stands in close relationship with Norea. Comparative analysis of the gnostic texts, together with certain traditions from Jewish aggadah featuring a Cainite woman called Naamah (cf. Gn 4:22), shows that Norea is a gnostic derivative of the figure of Naamah. The original spelling of her name in Greek is Horaia, the semantic equivalent of Hebrew Na'amah ("pleasing, lovely").

Norea thus has a previous career in Jewish legend as a naughty girl, Naamah, cavorting with the fallen "sons of God" (Gn 6:2). A completely opposite picture of Norea is presented in Hyp. Arch., according to which she is an undefiled virgin and a spiritual helper to (gnostic) humankind (II 91,34-92,2; cf. Gn 2:18). It is this picture of Norea that is reflected in our tractate as well. Indeed, in Norea, the saving role of Seth has disappeared completely; it is Norea who is the gnostic "saved savior." As such she can be regarded as a symbolic equivalent of Sophia ("wisdom") as well as a symbol of the gnostic soul in need of redemption and reintegration into the godhead.

It is not possible to come to any definite conclusion as to the tractate's provenance, but Syria or Egypt are the most likely possibilities. A date in the late second, or early third, century is plausible. We have no information on the question of its authorship, but Norea is one of the Nag Hammadi tractates that could easily have been written by a gnostic woman.

THE THOUGHT OF NOREA

IX 27, 11-29, 5

Father of All, [Ennoia] ¹ of the Light ¹ [dwelling in the heights ¹ above the (regions) below, ¹⁵ Light dwelling [in ¹ the] heights, Voice of ¹ Truth, upright Nous, ¹ untouchable Logos, ¹ and [ineffable] Voice, ²⁰ [incomprehensible] Father! ¹

It is Norea who [cries out] ¹ to them. They [heard], ¹ (and) they received her into her place ¹ forever. They gave it ²⁵ to her in the Father of Nous, ¹ Adamas, as well as the voice ¹ of the Holy Ones, 28 in order that she might rest ¹ in the ineffable Epinoia, ¹ in order that <she> might inherit ¹ the first mind ⁵ which <she> had received, and that <she> might rest ¹ in the divine Autogenes, ¹ and that she (too) might generate ¹ herself, just as [she] also has ¹ inherited the [living] Logos, ¹⁰ and that she might be joined to ¹ all of the Imperishable Ones, and [speak] ¹ with the mind of the Father.

And ¹ [she began] to speak with words of ¹ [Life], and <she> remained in the ¹⁵ [presence] of the Exalted One, [possessing ¹ that] which she had received before ¹ the world came into being. ¹ [She has] the [great ¹ mind] of the Invisible One, [and ²⁰ she gives] glory to <her> Father, [and ¹ she] dwells within those who [...] ¹ within the Pleroma, ¹ [and] she beholds the Pleroma. ¹

There will be days when she will ²⁵ [behold] the Pleroma, and ¹ she will not be in deficiency, ¹ for she has the four ¹ holy helpers who intercede ¹ on her behalf with the Father of ³⁰ the All, Adamas. He it is 29 who is within all of the Adams, ¹ possessing the ¹ thought of Norea who speaks ¹ concerning the two names which create ⁵ a single name.

THE TESTIMONY OF TRUTH (IX,3)

Introduced by

BIRGER A. PEARSON

Translated by

SØREN GIVERSEN and BIRGER A. PEARSON

This tractate is unfortunately poorly preserved, owing to the fragmentary condition of the manuscript. Almost half of the text is lost. Even so, enough material is extant or recoverable to enable us to gain a rather good picture of the tractate's content.

It is possible that a title was originally appended to the tractate at the end (as is the case with 21 of the other tractates in the Nag Hammadi corpus); if so, it would have been part of the last inscribed folio of the codex, which is now lost (pp. 75-76). The title now in universal use has been editorially assigned on the basis of content ("word of truth," 31,8; "true testimony," 45,1), and underscores the author's concern to establish "true" faith and praxis while also exposing the false claims of "heretical" opponents.

Indeed, one of the most interesting features of this tractate is that we see in it the other side of the theological arguments we know so well from the ecclesiastical heresiologists. The author is a Christian Gnostic polemicist, with a strict encratic world view and lifestyle. His chief opponents are catholic Christians of the ecclesiastical establishment. Surprisingly, our gnostic author does not spare fellow Gnostics similar polemical treatment, i.e., Gnostics whose lifestyle and ritual practice differ from his own.

The tractate consists of two main parts. The first is a well-constructed homily on truth versus falsehood, addressed to fellow members of a Christian Gnostic community (29,6-45,6). Its purpose is to bolster the convictions of the author's fellow Gnostics and to warn them against the errors of (catholic) Christian opponents. The second part (45,6-end) consists of miscellaneous additions, including elaborations of themes already sounded in the homily itself. It is in this section that the polemics against other Gnostics occur.

1. The homily opens with an exordium in which the author appeals to those endowed with spiritual hearing. An attack is then launched against the Law, which for the author is summed up in the command to procreate. The polemics continue with attacks on those who espouse martyrdom in the belief that there will be a "carnal resurrection" (31,22-38,27). Sexual "defilement" (39,5), i.e., marriage and procreation, is vigorously criticized (38,27-41,4), with Jesus' virgin birth used as a sign that Christians should lead a virginal life (40,5-7). The capstone of the homily as a description of the career of the archetypical Gnostic: his renunciation of the world and his reintegration into the realm of imperishability (41,4-44,30). A peroration sums up the "true testimony": self-knowledge is knowledge of God and leads to the "crown unfading" (44,30-45,6).

II. The appended miscellanea occur in a portion of Codex IX which has sustained considerable damage and loss. It is nevertheless clear that the polemical tone sounded in the homily consists of a gnostic midrash on the serpent of Genesis 3 (45,23-49,10). It retells the paradise story in such a way as to portray the serpent as the revealer of life and knowledge, and God (the Creator) as a malevolent and ignorant demon. This material is probably based on a previously existing source, to which the author of Testim. Truth has added some editorial touches, including an allegorical interpretation of the serpent as a symbol of Christ (49,7).

Another interesting section, unfortunately very fragmentary, consists of polemics against the tenets of such other Gnostics as Valentinus (56,2-5), Basilides and his son Isidore (57,6-8), and the Simonians (58,2-3). It is presumably on the basis of their ethical and ritual practices that those teachers and groups are regarded by the author of Testim. Truth as heretics. For example, the Valentinians are criticized for their use of the sacrament of baptism (55,7-9); water baptism is consistently condemned in Testim. Truth (69,7-24; cf. 30,18-30). The Simonians are criticized for marrying and begetting children (58,2-4), a criticism that would extend to the Valentinians and Basilidians as well.

In short, from beginning to end, our tractate is filled with the polemics of a teacher who earnestly believed that his version of Christian faith and praxis was the only true one, a pamphleteer whose hatred of "heresy" was the match of that of an Irenaeus, a Hippolytus, or a Tertullian. Indeed, our author can be regarded as a mirror-image of the great heresiologists of the Church, representing the other side of the argument.

Who was this man? From what can be gathered from the tractate itself, he was probably an Alexandrian whose Gnostic Christianity was heavily influenced by other Alexandrian gnostic traditions, especially Valentinianism. Yet he rejected certain features of Valentinian doctrine and practice. As it happens, Clement of Alexandria has provided us with information about a gnostic teacher who fits the situation of our author very well: Julius Cassianus. This man had "departed from the school of Valentinus" (Strom. III.93) and espoused a strict encratism, condemning marriage and sexual intercourse. Julius Cassianus, of all the heretics known to us by name from ancient sources, is the most likely candidate for the authorship of Testim. Truth.

Even if Julius Cassianus is not its author, Testim. Truth is most plausibly to be situated in Alexandria and dated to the end of the second century or the beginning of the third.

THE TESTIMONY OF TRUTH

IX 29, 6-74, 30

I will speak to those who know ¹ to hear not with the ears ¹ of the body but with the ears ¹ of the mind. For many have sought ¹⁰ after the truth and have not ¹ been able to find it; because there has taken hold of them [the] ¹ old leaven of the Pharisees ¹ and the scribes [of] ¹⁵ the Law. And the leaven is [the] ¹ errant desire of ¹ the angels and the demons ¹ and the stars. As for the Pharisees ¹ and the scribes, it is they ²⁰ who belong to the archons who ¹ have authority [over them]. ¹

For no one who is under ¹ the Law will be able to look ¹ up to the truth for they will not be ²⁵ able to serve two masters. ¹ For the defilement of the Law ¹ is manifest; 30 but undefilement belongs to the ¹ light. The Law commands ¹ (one) to take a husband (or) to take a wife, and ¹ to beget, to multiply like the sand ⁵ of the sea. But passion which ¹ is a delight to them constrains ¹ the souls of those who are begotten ¹ in this place, those who defile ¹ and those who are defiled, ¹⁰ in order that the Law might ¹ be fulfilled through them. And ¹ they show that they are assisting ¹ the world; and they ¹ [turn] away from the light, ¹⁵ who are unable ¹ [to pass by] the archon of [darkness] ¹ until they pay the last [penny]. ¹

But the Son of Man ¹ [came] forth from Imperishability, ²⁰ [being] alien to defilement. He came ¹ [to the] world by the Jordan ¹ river, and immediately the Jordan ¹ [turned] back. ¹ And John bore witness to the ²⁵ [descent] of Jesus. For it is he ¹ who saw the [power] ¹ which came down upon ¹ the Jordan river; for he knew ¹ that the dominion of ³⁰ carnal procreation had come to an end. The Jordan ¹ river is the power ¹ of the body, that is, the senses 31 of pleasures. The water ¹ of the Jordan is the desire ¹ for sexual intercourse. John ¹ is the archon of ⁵ the womb.

And this is what the ¹ Son of Man reveals to us: ¹ It is fitting for you (pl.) ¹ to receive the word of truth. If ¹ one will receive it ¹⁰ perfectly, — . But as for one who is [in] ¹ ignorance, it is difficult for him ¹ to diminish his works of [darkness] ¹ which he has done. Those who have [known] ¹ Imperishability, [however], ¹⁵ have been able to struggle against [passions . . .] ¹⁷ I have said [to ¹ you], “Do not build [nor] ¹ gather for yourselves in the [place] ²⁰ where the brigands break open, ¹ but bring forth fruit ¹ to the Father.”

The foolish — thinking [in] ¹ their heart [that] ¹ if they confess, “We ²⁵ are Christians,” in ¹ word only (but) not with power, while ¹ giving themselves over to ¹ ignorance, to a ¹ human death, ³⁰ not knowing where they are going 32 nor who ¹ Christ is, thinking that they ¹ will live, when they are (really) in error — ¹ Hasten towards the principalities ⁵ and the authorities. They fall ¹ into their clutches because of the ¹ ignorance that is in ¹ them. For (if) only ¹ words which bear testimony ¹⁰ were effecting salvation, the whole world ¹ would endure this thing ¹ [and] would be saved. ¹ [But it is in this way that they ¹

[drew] error to themselves. [...] ¹⁸ they do] not [know] that they [will destroy] ¹ themselves. If the [Father ²⁰ were to] desire a [human] sacrifice, ¹ he would become [vainglorious]. ¹

For the Son of ¹ [Man] clothed himself with their ¹ first-fruits; he went down to ²⁵ Hades and performed many mighty works. ¹ He raised the dead ¹ therein; and the ¹ world-rulers of darkness became envious 33 of him, for they did not find ¹ sin in him. But ¹ he also destroyed their works ¹ from among men, so that ⁵ the lame, the blind, ¹ the paralytic, the dumb, (and) the ¹ demon-possessed were granted ¹ healing. And he walked ¹ upon the waters of the sea. ¹⁰ For this reason he [destroyed] ¹ his flesh from [...] ¹ which he [...]. And he [became ¹ ...] salvation [...] ¹ his death ... ¹⁹ everyone ...] ²⁰ how many [they are! They are] ¹ blind [guides, like the disciples]. ¹ They boarded [the ship, (and) at about thirty] ¹ stades, they [saw Jesus ¹ walking] on the [sea. These] ²⁵ are [empty] martyrs, ¹ since they bear witness only [to] ¹ themselves. And yet they are ¹ sick, and they are not able to raise 34 themselves.

But when they are ¹ “perfected” with a (martyr’s) death, this ¹ is the thought that they have ¹ within them: “If we ⁵ deliver ourselves over to death ¹ for the sake of the Name we will be saved.” These matters ¹ are not settled in this way. But ¹ through the agency of the wandering ¹ stars they say ¹⁰ that they have “completed” their [futile] ¹ “course,” and [...] ¹ say, [...]. ¹ But these [...] ¹ they have [delivered ¹⁵ themselves ...]. ²³ But they resemble ¹ [...] them. They do not have ²⁵ the word which gives ¹ [life].

[And] some say, ¹ “On the last day ¹ [we will] certainly arise 35 [in the] resurrection.” But they do not ¹ [know what] they are saying, ¹ for the last day ¹ [is when] those belonging to Christ ⁵ [...] the] earth which ¹ is [...]. when the [time] ¹ was fulfilled, he destroyed ¹ [their archon] of ¹ [darkness ...] soul(s) [...] ²⁰ he ¹ stood [...] ¹ they asked [what they have been] ¹ bound with, [and how they] ¹ might properly [release themselves]. ²⁵ And [they came to know] ¹ themselves, [(as to) who they are], ¹ or rather, where they are [now], ¹ and what is the [place 36 in] which they will rest ¹ from their senselessness, [arriving] ¹ at knowledge. [These] ¹ Christ will transfer to [the heights] ⁵ since they have [renounced] ¹ foolishness, (and have) advanced ¹ to knowledge. ¹ And those who [have ¹ knowledge ...] ²¹ the great ¹ [...] the resurrection ¹ ... he has come to] know ¹ [the Son of Man], that ²⁵ [is, he has come to] know [himself. ¹ This] is the perfect life, ¹ [that] man know ¹ [himself] by means of the All. ¹

[Do not] expect, therefore, ³⁰ [the] carnal resurrection, 37 which [is]

destruction, [and they are not ¹ stripped] of [it (the flesh) who] ¹ err in [expecting] ¹ a [resurrection] ⁵ that is empty. [They do] not [know] ¹ the power [of God], ¹ nor do they [understand the interpretation] ¹ of the scriptures [on account of their] ¹ double-mindedness. [The ¹⁰ mystery] which [the Son of Man ¹ spoke about . . .] ¹ in order that [. . .] ¹ destroy [. . .] ¹⁶ man who [. . . book] ¹ which is written [. . .] ¹ for [they] have [. . . ²⁰ blessed . . .] ¹ within [them, and they] ¹ dwell before [God under the ¹ light yoke. Those who do not] ¹ have [the life-giving word] ²⁵ in their [heart will die]; ¹ and in [their] thought ¹ they have become manifest to [the Son] ¹ of Man, according to [the manner of their] ¹ activity and their [error . . .] 38 of this sort. They ¹ [. . .] as he divides the ¹ [. . .] and they [do not] understand ¹ [that the Son] of Man ⁵ is coming from him. ¹

But [when they have come] up to ¹ [. . .] sacrifice, they die ¹ [in a] human [way], and they ¹ [deliver] themselves [. . .] ¹² a death [. . .] ¹⁶ those who ¹ [. . .] they are many ¹ [. . .] each ¹ [one . . .] pervert ²⁰ [. . .] gain ¹ [. . . their] mind. ¹ [Those who receive him] to themselves ¹ [with uprightness] and ¹ [power] and every knowledge ²⁵ [are the ones whom] he will transfer ¹ [to the] heights, unto ¹ [life] eternal.

[But] those who receive ¹ [him] to themselves with ¹ [ignorance], the pleasures 39 which are defiled prevail over [them]. ¹ It is those people who used to [say], ¹ “God created [members] ¹ for our use, for us to [grow in] ⁵ defilement, in order that [we might] ¹ enjoy [ourselves].” ¹ And they cause [God to] ¹ participate with them [in] ¹ deeds of this [sort; and] ¹⁰ they are [not] steadfast [upon] ¹ the earth. [Nor will they reach] ¹ heaven, [but . . .] ¹ place will [. . .] ¹ four [. . .] ¹⁸ unquenchable [. . . ²² word . . .] ¹ upon [the Jordan river] ¹ when he came [to John at] ²⁵ the time he [was baptized]. ¹ The [Holy] Spirit [came] ¹ down upon him [as a] ¹ dove [. . .] ¹ accept for ourselves that [he] was born ³⁰ of a virgin [and] ¹ he took flesh; he [. . . 40 having] received power. ¹ [Were we also begotten from] ¹ [a] virginal state ¹ [or] conceived by the word? ⁵ [Rather, we have been born] again by ¹ [the word]. Let us therefore strengthen ¹ [ourselves] as virgins in the ¹ [. . .].

The males dwell ¹ [. . .] the virgin ¹⁰ by means of ¹ [. . .] in the word ¹ [. . .]. But the word of ¹ [. . .] and spirit [. . .] ¹⁸ is the Father ¹ [. . .] for the man [. . . ²¹ like Isaiah, who was sawed ¹ with a saw, (and)] he became two. ¹ [So also the Son of Man ¹ divides] us by ²⁵ [the word of the] cross. It ¹ [divides the day from] the night and ¹ [the light from the] darkness and the corruptible ¹ [from] incorruptibility, and it ¹ [divides] the males from the females. ³⁰ But [Isaiah] is the type 41 of the body. The saw ¹ is the word of the Son of ¹ Man which separates us from the ¹ error of the angels.

No one ⁵ knows the God of truth ¹ except solely the man who ¹ will forsake all of the ¹ things of the world, having renounced ¹ the whole place, (and) having ¹⁰ grasped the fringe of his garment. ¹ He has set himself up as a [power]; ¹ he has subdued desire in every [way] ¹ within himself. He has [...] ¹ and he has turned to him [...] ¹⁵ having also examined [...] ¹ in becoming [...] ¹ the] mind. And [he ... from] ¹ his soul [...] ¹ there [...] ²⁰ he has [...] ²² in what way [...] ¹ the flesh which [...] ¹ in what way [...] ²⁵ out of it, and ¹ how many [powers does he have]? ¹ And who is the one who has bound him? ¹ And who is the one who will loose him? And what ¹ is the light? And what is the darkness? ³⁰ And who is the one who has created [the earth]? ¹ And who is God? [And who] 42 are the angels? And what is soul? ¹ And what is spirit? And where is ¹ the voice? And who is the one who speaks? And who ¹ is the one who hears? Who is the one who gives pain? ⁵ And who is the one who suffers? And who ¹ is it who has begotten the corruptible flesh? ¹ And what is the governance? ¹ And why are some ¹ lame, and some ¹⁰ [blind], and some ¹ [...], and some ¹ [...], and some ¹ rich, [and] some ¹ poor? And why ¹⁵ are [some powerless, ¹ some] brigands? [...] ²¹ he having ¹ [...] as he again ¹ [...] fighting ¹ against ¹ [thoughts] of the archons ²⁵ and the powers and the demons, ¹ not giving them a place ¹ in which to rest. ¹ [But] he struggled against their passions ¹ [...] he condemned 43 their error. He cleansed his ¹ soul from the transgressions ¹ which he had committed with an alien hand. ¹ He stood up, being upright within ⁵ himself, because he exists in ¹ everyone, and because he has ¹ death and life ¹ within himself, and he exists ¹ in the midst of both of them. ¹⁰ And when he had received the power ¹ he turned towards the parts of the right, ¹ and he entered into the truth, ¹ having forsaken all things pertaining to the left, ¹ having been filled with wisdom, ¹⁵ with counsel, with understanding ¹ and with insight, and an ¹ eternal power. [And] ¹ he broke open his bonds. [Those who had] ¹ formed the whole place ²⁰ [he] condemned. [But they ¹ did not] find [...] hidden ¹ within him.

[And he gave command] ¹ to himself; he [began to] ¹ know [himself and] ²⁵ to speak with his [mind], which ¹ is the father of the truth, concerning the unbegotten ¹ aeons, and concerning ¹ the virgin who brought forth ¹ the light. And he thinks ³⁰ about the power which ¹ flowed over the [whole] place, 44 and which takes hold of him. And ¹ he is a disciple of his mind ¹ which is male. He began ¹ to keep silent within ⁵ himself until the day when ¹ he should become worthy to be received ¹ above. He rejects for himself ¹ loquacity and ¹ disputations, and he endures ¹⁰ the whole place; and he bears up ¹ under them, and he endures ¹ all of the evil things. ¹ And he is patient ¹ with every one; he makes himself equal ¹⁵ to every one, and he also separates ¹ himself from them. And that which someone ¹ [wants, he brings] to him, ¹ [in order that] he might become perfect ¹ [(and) holy]. When the [. . . ²⁰ he] ¹ grasped [him], having bound him ¹ upon [. . .] and he was filled ¹ [with wisdom. He] bore witness to the truth ¹ [. . .] the power, and he went ²⁵ [into] Imperishability, the place ¹ whence he [came] forth, having left ¹ the world which has ¹ the appearance of the [night, ¹ and] those that whirl the ³⁰ [stars in] it.

This, therefore, is 45 the true testimony: When ¹ man comes to know himself ¹ and God who is over the truth, ¹ he will be saved, and he ⁵ will crown himself with the crown ¹ unfading.

John ¹ was begotten by the World through ¹ a woman, Elizabeth; ¹ and Christ was begotten by ¹⁰ the world through a virgin, ¹ Mary. What is (the meaning of) this mystery? ¹ John was ¹ begotten by means of a womb ¹ worn with age, but Christ ¹⁵ passed through a virgin's womb. ¹ When she had conceived she gave birth to ¹ the Savior. Furthermore she ¹ was found to be a virgin again. ¹ Why, then, do you (pl.) [err] ²⁰ and not seek after these mysteries ¹ which were prefigured ¹ for our sake? ¹

It is written in the Law concerning this, ¹ when God gave a command ²⁵ to Adam, "From every [tree] ¹ you may eat, [but] from ¹ the tree which is in the midst of ¹ Paradise do not eat, ¹ for on the day that you eat ³⁰ from it you will surely ¹ die." But the serpent was wiser 46 than all the animals that ¹ were in Paradise, and ¹ he persuaded Eve, saying, ¹ "On the day when you eat ⁵ from the tree which is in the midst ¹ of Paradise ¹ the eyes of your mind will be opened." ¹ And Eve obeyed, ¹ and she stretched forth her hand; ¹⁰ she took from the tree and ¹ ate; she also gave to her husband with ¹ her. And immediately they knew ¹ that they were naked, ¹ and they took some fig leaves ¹⁵ (and) put them on as girdles. ¹

But [God] came at the time of ¹ [evening] walking in the midst ¹ [of] Paradise. When ¹ Adam saw him he hid himself. ²⁰ And he said, "Adam, where are you?" ¹ He answered (and) said, ¹ "[I] have come under the fig tree." And at that very moment ¹ God [knew] that he had ²⁵ eaten from the tree of ¹ which he had commanded him, "Do not ¹ eat of it." And ¹ he said to him, "Who is it 47 who has instructed you?" And Adam answered, ¹ "The woman whom you have ¹ given me." And the woman said, ¹ "It is the serpent who instructed me." ⁵ And he cursed the serpent, and ¹ called him "devil." ¹ And he said, "Behold, Adam has ¹ become like one of us, ¹ knowing evil and ¹⁰ good." Then he said, "Let us ¹ cast him out of Paradise ¹ lest he take from the tree ¹ of life and eat and live for ¹ ever."

But of what sort is ¹⁵ this God? First [he] ¹ maliciously refused Adam from ¹ eating of the tree of knowledge. ¹ And secondly ¹ he said, "Adam, where are you?" ²⁰ God does not have ¹ foreknowledge; (otherwise), would he not know from the ¹ beginning? [And] afterwards ¹ he said, "Let us cast him [out] ²⁵ of this place, lest he ¹ eat of the tree of ¹ life and live for ever." ¹ Surely he has shown ¹ himself to be a malicious ³⁰ grudger. And 48 what kind of a God is this? ¹ For great is the blindness ¹ of those who read, and they did not ¹ know him. And he said, "I am ⁵ the jealous God; I will bring ¹ the sins of the fathers upon ¹ the children until three (and) four generations." ¹ And he said, "I will make ¹ their heart thick, and I will ¹⁰ cause their mind to become blind, that ¹ they might not know nor ¹ comprehend the things that ¹ are said." But these things he has ¹ said to those who believe in him ¹⁵ [and] serve him!

And ¹ [in one] place Moses writes, ¹ "[He] made the devil a serpent ¹ <for> [those] whom he has in his generation." ¹ Also in the book which is ²⁰ called "Exodus," ¹ it is written thus (cf. 7:8-12): "He contended against the ¹ [magicians], when the place was full ¹ [of serpents] according to their [wickedness; and ¹ the rod] which was in the hand of Moses ²⁵ became a serpent, (and) it swallowed ¹ the serpents of the magicians."

Again ¹ it is written (Nm 21:9), "He made a serpent of ¹ bronze (and) hung it upon a pole 49 [...] which [...] ³ for the [one who will gaze] upon ¹ [this] bronze [serpent], none ⁵ [will destroy] him, and the one who will ¹ [believe in] this bronze serpent ¹ [will be saved]."

For this is Christ; ¹ [those who] believed in him ¹ [have received life]. Those who did not believe ¹⁰ [will die].

What, then, is this ¹ [faith? They] do not [serve . . . ²⁸ and you (pl.) . . .] ¹ we [...] 50 and] you [do not understand Christ ¹ spiritually when you say], ¹ "We [believe] in Christ." For [this] ¹ is the [way] Moses [writes] ⁵ in every book. The [book of ¹ the] generation of Adam [is written for those] ¹ who are in the [generation] of [the Law]. ¹ They follow the Law [and] ¹ they obey it, [and . . .] ¹¹ together with the [...]. (pp. 51-54 almost completely missing)

[... , " . . . 55 the] Ogdoad, which is the ¹ eighth, and that we might receive ¹ that [place] of salvation.” ¹ [But they] know not what salvation is, ⁵ but they enter into ¹ [misfortune] and into a ¹ [...] in death, in the ¹ [waters]. This [is] the baptism ¹ [of death which they observe ...] ¹⁶ come to death ¹ [...] and] this is ¹ [...] according to [...] 56 he completed the course [of] ¹ Valentinus. He himself ¹ speaks about the Ogdoad, ¹ and his disciples resemble [the] ⁵ disciples of Valentinus. ¹ They on their part, moreover, [...] ¹ leave the good, [but] they ¹ have [worship of] ¹ the idols [...] ¹⁸ he has spoken [many words, and he has] ¹ written many [books ...] ²⁰ words [...] 57 they are] manifest from ¹ [the] confusion in which they are, ¹ [in the] deceit of the world. ¹ For [they] go to that place ⁵ together with their knowledge ¹ [which is] vain.

Isidore also, ¹ [his son], resembled ¹ [Basilides]. He also ¹ [...] many, and [he ¹⁰ ...] but he did not [...] ¹ this [...] ¹ other disciple(s) ¹ [...] blind [...] ¹ but he] gave them ¹⁵ [...] pleasures [...] 58 they do [not] agree [with] ¹ each other. For the [Simonians] ¹ take [wives] ¹ (and) beget children; but the [...] ⁵ abstain ¹ from their [...] nature ¹ [...] a [passion ...] ¹ the drops [of ...] ¹ anoint [them ...] ¹¹ which we [...] they ¹ agree] with [each other ...] ¹ him [...] they [...] 59 judgment(s) ¹ [...] these, on account of the ¹ [...] them ¹ [...] the heretics ⁵ [...] schism(s) [...] ¹ and the males ¹ [...] are men ¹ [...] will belong ¹ [to the world-rulers] of darkness [...] ¹¹ of [the world ...] ¹³ they have ¹ [...] the [archons ¹⁵ ... power(s) ...] ¹⁷ judge [them ¹ ...]. But [the ...] ¹ word(s) of [...] 60 speak, while they [...] ¹ become [...] ¹ in a fire [unquenchable ...] ¹ they are punished.

[But these] ⁵ who are [from the generation] ¹ of the Son of [Man have revealed] ¹ to the [...] in] all of [the ¹ affairs ...]. ¹¹ But [it is difficult] to [...] ¹ to find [one ...] ¹ and [two ...]. ¹⁶ For the [Savior said to his] ¹ disciples, [...] ¹ one in [...] 61 and] he has ¹ [...] wisdom as well as ¹ [counsel and] understanding and ¹ [intelligence] and knowledge ⁵ [and power] and truth. ¹ [And he has] some ¹ [...] from above ¹ [...] the place where ¹ [the Son of Man ...] ¹² power [...] ¹ guard against [...] 62 he knows [...] ¹ understands [...] ⁴ worthy of him [...] ¹ true [...] ¹ alien [...]. ¹ But [...], together with [...] ¹ evil, in [...] ¹¹ he received [baptism ...] ¹ and those that [...] (pp. 63-64 missing) 65 in] a dream ¹ [...] silver [...]. ¹ But [...] becomes [wealthy ¹ ...] among the [authorities ...]. ⁶ But [the] sixtieth ¹ [...] thus ¹ [...] world ¹ [...] they ¹⁰ [...] gold [...] ²⁹ they] think, [...] ³¹ we have been released from 66 the flesh. [...] ³ not turn him to [...] ¹ Jesus [...] ⁶ the] beginning [...] ¹ a son [...] ⁹ out of [...] which ¹ is] the pattern [...] ¹ light of [...] ²⁸ to find from [...] ¹ defilement which [...] ³¹ they] do not blaspheme

[... 67 them] not, neither is there any [pleasure] ¹ nor desire, nor ¹ [can they] control them. It is fitting ¹ that they should become undefiled, ⁵ in order that they might ¹ [show] to every [one] that they ¹ [are from] the [generation of the] Son of Man, ¹ since it is about [them] that the Savior bore ¹ witness. ¹

But [those who are] from ¹⁰ the seed [of Adam] are manifest ¹ by their [deeds which are] their [work]. ¹ They have not ceased [from desire which is ¹ wicked ...]. ¹ But some ¹⁵ [...] the dogs ¹ [...] the angels ¹ for [...] which they beget ¹ [...] will come [...] with their [...] ²⁸ move as they ¹ [...] on the day when they will beget ³⁰ [children]. Not only that, but they ¹ have intercourse while they are giving suck. 68

But others are caught up in the death of [...]. ¹ They are [pulled] ¹ <every> which way, (and) they are gratified ¹ by unrighteous Mammon. ⁵ They lend money [at interest]; they [waste time]; ¹ and they do not work. But he who is ¹ [father] of [Mammon is (also)] ¹ (the) father of sexual intercourse.

But he who ¹ is able to renounce them ¹⁰ shows [that] he is [from] the generation ¹ of the [Son of Man], (and) has ¹ power to accuse [them]. ¹ ... he] ¹ restrains [...] ¹⁵ part(s) in a [...] ¹ in wickedness [and he makes] the ¹ outer like the [inner. He resembles] an ¹ angel which [...] ²⁰ power [...] ¹ said them. But the one [...]. ²⁷ And having withdrawn [...] he became ¹ silent, having ceased from loquacity ¹ and disputations. 69 But he [who has] found the [life-giving word ¹ and he who] has come to know [the Father of Truth ¹ has come to rest]; he has ceased [seeking], having ¹ [found]. And when he found he became [silent]. ⁵ But few are the things he used to say to those that ¹ [...] with their intellectual mind the ¹ [...].

There are some who, upon entering ¹ the faith, receive a baptism ¹ on the ground that they have [it] as a hope ¹⁰ of salvation, which they call ¹ "the [seal,]" not [knowing] ¹ that the [fathers of] the world are ¹ manifest that [place. But] ¹ he himself [knows that] he is sealed. ¹⁵ For [the Son] of [Man] ¹ did not baptize any of his ¹ disciples. But [...] if those who] are baptized ¹ were headed for life, ¹ the world would become ²⁰ empty. And the fathers of ¹ baptism were defiled. ¹

But the baptism of truth is ¹ something else; it is by renunciation of [the] ¹ world that it is found. [But those who] ²⁵ say [only] with the tongue [that ¹ they] are renouncing it [are lying], ¹ and they are coming to [the place] ¹ of fear. Moreover they are humbled ¹ within it. Just as those to whom it was given, ³⁰ to have been condemned, ¹ [they shall] get something!

They are ¹ wicked in their behavior! Some ¹ of them fall away 70 [to the worship of] idols. [Others] ¹ have ¹ [demons] dwelling with them [as did] ¹ David the king. He is the one who ⁵ laid the foundation of Jerusalem; and his son ¹ Solomon, whom he begat ¹ in [adultery], is the one who ¹ built Jerusalem by means of the demons, ¹ because he received [power]. When he ¹⁰ [had finished building, he imprisoned] the demons ¹ [in the temple]. He [placed them] into seven ¹ [waterpots. They remained] a long [time ¹ in] the [waterpots], abandoned ¹ [there]. When the Romans [went] ¹⁵ up to [Jerusalem] they discovered ¹ [the] waterpots, [and immediately] ¹ the [demons] ran ¹ out of the waterpots as those who ¹ escape from prison. And ²⁰ the waterpots [remained] pure (thereafter). ¹ [And] since those days, [they dwell] with men who are ¹ [in] ignorance, and ¹ [they have remained upon] the earth.

Who, then, is ²⁵ [David]? And who is Solomon? ¹ [And] what is the foundation? And what is the ¹ wall which surrounds Jerusalem? And who ¹ are the demons? And what are the ¹ waterpots? And who are ³⁰ the Romans? But these [are mysteries . . .] 71 ¹² victorious over [. . . the Son] ¹ of Man [. . . ¹⁴ undefiled . . .] ¹⁸ and he [. . .] ¹ when he [. . .]. ²⁰ For [. . .] is a great [. . .] ²² to this nature [. . .] ²⁴ those that [. . .] ¹ all in [a . . .] blessed ¹ and they [. . . like a] ¹ salamander. [It] goes into ¹ the flaming fire which burns ¹ exceedingly; it slithers into the [furnace . . .] 72 ¹⁴ the] furnace [. . .] ¹⁶ the boundaries ¹ [. . .] that they might see ¹ [. . .] and the power ¹ [. . .] sacrifice. Great is the sacrifice [. . .] ²² but] in a ¹ [. . .] aside ¹ [. . .]. And ²⁵ [the Son] of Man [. . .] ¹ and [he has become] manifest through ¹ the bubbling fountain of [immortality. 73 . . .] ¹ he is pure, ¹ [and he] is [. . .]. A free man ¹ [is not] envious. He is set apart from ⁵ everyone, from [every audacity and] envy ¹ the [power of] which is great [. . .] is (a) ¹ disciple [. . .] ¹ pattern of law [. . .] ¹ these [. . .] ¹⁰ only [. . .] ¹³ they placed ¹ him under a[. . .] ¹⁵ a teaching [. . .] ¹⁷ his teaching, saying, "[Even if] an [angel] ¹ comes from heaven, and preaches ²⁰ to you beyond that which we preached ¹ to you, may he be ¹ anathema," (cf. Ga 1:8) not letting the [. . .] ¹ of the soul which [. . .] ¹ freedom [. . .]. ²⁵ For they are still immature [. . .] ¹ they are not able to [keep] ¹ this law which works ¹ by means of these heresies — ¹ though it is not they, but the powers ³⁰ of Sabaoth — by means 74 of the [. . .] ¹ the doctrines [. . .] ¹ as they have been jealous of some [. . .] ¹ law(s) in Christ. Those who will [. . .] ⁵ power [. . .] they reach the [. . .] ¹ the [twelve] ¹ judge [. . .] them ¹ [. . .] the fountain of ¹ [immortality . . .] ¹³ in order that [. . .] ¹⁷ good . . .] ¹ the whole place. ¹ [. . .] there the enemies. ²⁰ He baptized himself, and the ¹ [. . .] he became divine; he flew ¹ [up], (and) they did not grasp him. ¹ [...] there the [enemies ¹ ...] since it was not possible ²⁵ [for them to bring him] down again. ¹ If every [...] grasps him ¹ [with] ignorance, attending ¹ to those who teach in the corners ¹ by means of carved things and ¹ artful tricks, they will not be able [...].

MARSANES (X,I)

Introduced and translated by

BIRGER A. PEARSON

Codex X is extant only in fragments representing considerably less than half of its original content. Codices X and XII are the two Nag Hammadi manuscripts which have suffered the most loss. But, unlike Codex XII, the fragments of Codex X represent literature that is previously unknown; that is to say, there does not exist any other extant copy of the tractate(s) contained in it. We do not even know how large Codex X originally was, for the 68 inscribed pages to which the extant fragments are assigned represent an absolute minimum; the original codex could very easily have consisted of over 90 inscribed pages.

We do not know for sure that Codex X contained only one tractate, though what can be determined of the content of the extant fragments suggests that this is the case. Letter-traces of a tractate title, with decorations, occur on a small fragment of the last inscribed page (68). The proper name "Marsanes" has been restored from these letter-traces; hence the title Marsanes.

Marsanes is the name of a gnostic prophet known from two other sources: the untitled tractate found in the Bruce Codex names Marsanes and Nikotheos as "perfect men" who had seen visions of a divine being called "the triple-powered one," an emanation of the supreme Father (Cod. Bruc. Untitled, ch. 7). Epiphanius of Salamis mentions among the prophets honored by the "Archontic" Gnostics "a certain Martiades and Marsianos, who had been snatched up into the heavens and had come down after three days" (Haer. 40.7.6). ("Marsianos" is simply a Greek variant of "Marsanes.") It is quite possible that the author of the Bruce Codex tractate had access to Marsanes, and our tractate may also have circulated among the "Archontics" discussed by Epiphanius.

In terms of genre, our tractate is an apocalypse, specifically an "apocalypse of Marsanes." "Marsanes" may be a name adopted by the gnostic author (mar means "master" in Syriac). Alternatively, an anonymous author is attributing his writing to a well-known gnostic prophet. In either case, the text contains purported revelations and reports of visionary experiences. There are also passages of a paraenetic character with which the author exhorts and encourages his readers. The text is addressed to members of a gnostic community who have already been initiated (see e.g., 2,19-21; 3,4-9).

The third-century Neoplatonist philosopher, Porphyry, in a biography of his great teacher, Plotinus, refers to certain "sectarians who had abandoned the ancient philosophy" (i.e. Platonism). These sectarians were Gnostics, with whom members of Plotinus' school had come in contact. Porphyry reports that these people "produced apocalypses of Zoroaster and Zostrianos and Nikotheos and Allogenes and Messos and others of this sort" (Vit. Plot. 16). Two of the apocalypses referred to by Porphyry are now available to us in Coptic versions in the Nag Hammadi corpus: Zostrianos (VIII,1) and Allogenes (XI,3). Marsanes, in terms of its content, is very closely related to these two tractates.

Too much of our tractate is now lost to allow us to give a full account of its content, or even to outline its structure. The first ten pages are relatively intact, however. This part of the tractate contains material relating to a gnostic ascent experience, and includes a discussion of the various levels of reality, symbolically referred to as "seals." These levels range from the "worldly" and "material," characterized by corporeal existence (2,16-21), to the realms of the invisible Three-Powered One, the Non-being Spirit, and the unknown Silent One (4,12-23).

The next-best preserved section is from the middle of the codex (pp. 24-42), and contains material on the mystical meaning of the letters of the alphabet and their relation both to the human soul and to the names of the gods and angels of the zodiacal realm and the other spheres of the heavens.

The material at the end of the codex is extremely fragmentary, but there are indications of visionary experiences and a reference to heavenly intermediaries who "spoke like the angels" (63,4). One of these is mentioned by name: Gamaliel (64,19), an angel who appears in a number of Sethian Gnostic sources, including Melchizedek (IX,1:5,18). This part of the tractate also includes references to a kind of baptismal ceremony (55,20; 66,1-5). The tractate ends with a word of encouragement to "those who will know [him]" (68,17, probably referring to the supreme Father; cf. 1,11-25).

Marsanes has been classified as a Sethian writing, on the basis of features in it which relate to the Sethian Gnostic system (as delineated especially by Hans-Martin Schenke). Seth is nowhere mentioned in the extant fragments, but the revelatory role assigned to Marsanes in this tractate makes it possible for us to see in him an avatar of Seth the savior.

There are no hints in our tractate of any Christian elements or influences, and such items of Jewish origin as are reflected must be assigned to its prehistory, i.e., to the Sethian Gnostic system lying behind the text.

Marsanes is one of the Sethian Gnostic tractates in the Nag Hammadi corpus that have been profoundly influenced by Platonist philosophy. The others are The Three Steles of Seth (VII,5), Zostrianos (VIII,1), and Allogenes (XI,3). In fact, both in terms of its metaphysics and its ritual references, Marsanes represents a kind of Platonism which coheres well with that of the Syrian Neoplatonist philosopher, Iamblichus of Chalcis (ca. 250-325 C.E.). For Marsanes, as for Iamblichus, matter is not evil; indeed, it is capable of salvation (see esp. 5,14-26). Here we see a definite attenuation of the radical dualism characteristic of earlier gnostic texts. For Marsanes, as for Iamblichus, the descent of the soul into matter is not regarded as a fall but as a demiurgic function, a doctrine based on Plato's discussion of the soul and its descent in the Timaeus (41a-42b). In Marsanes, the descent of a figure called "the Self-begotten One" (Autogenes) represents symbolically the descending soul in its demiurgic function (5,27-6,16). Similar ideas are expressed in Iamblichus' famous treatise, On the Mysteries of Egypt (De mysteriis VIII.3).

In terms of its ritual allusions, Marsanes is comparable to that variety of late Platonism in which theurgy was cultivated. Theurgy (theourgia: "the works [erga] of the gods [theoi]") is religious ritual whose chief aim is to assist the human soul in its reascent. The Chaldaean Oracles, a second-century collection of revelatory poetry, is the classic authority for theurgy, but Iamblichus is probably the greatest exponent and theorist of theurgy among the philosophers. Study of his great work on religious ritual (De mysteriis, referred to above) opens up some interesting possibilities for understanding the enigmatic ritual allusions in Marsanes. One can thus view Marsanes as a text in which gnostic theurgy plays a crucial role.

Examples of Marsanes' preoccupation with ritual include the material on the "thirteen seals" (2,12-4,23), which is probably related to a gnostic ritual of ascent. (Cf. Steles Seth, which contains prayers and invocations used in such a ritual.) The material on the letters of the alphabet and the nomenclature of the gods and the angels (pp. 19-40) also is related to the ascent ritual, and probably involves ritual chant and special instructions expected to assist the soul in its ascent. An enigmatic reference to "wax images" and "emerald likenesses" (35,1-3) reminds us of Iamblichus' discussion of the use of stones, plants, etc., in theurgic ritual (De mysteriis V.23). Even the baptismal references already mentioned (55,20; 66,1-5) could be understood in association with an ascent ritual. (This is probably the case with the references to baptism in Zostrianos; see e.g., VIII 5,14-7,22.)

The tractate Marsanes was probably written sometime in the third century. There are strong indications of a Syrian background for its gnostic author, but this person could have been active in any number of places in the Mediterranean world, such as Rome or Egypt, though Syria is probably the best guess. From there the original Greek version would have been brought to Egypt and translated into Coptic.

MARSANES

X 1, 1-68, 18

[...] ¹¹ and a [reward]. They [came to know]; they ¹ found him with a pure heart, ¹ (and) they are not afflicted by him ¹ with evils. Those who have received ¹⁵ you (pl.) will be given their ¹ choice reward for ¹ endurance, and he will ¹ ward off [the] ¹ evils from them. [But] let none ²⁰ of us be distressed [and] ¹ think [in] his ¹ heart that the great ¹ Father [...]. ¹ For he looks upon the All [and] ²⁵ takes care of them all. ¹ And [he] has shown to them ¹ his [...]. ¹ Those that [...] ² ¹¹ at first. ¹

But as for the thirteenth ¹ seal, I have established it, ¹ together with [the] summit of ¹⁵ knowledge and the certainty ¹ of rest. The first ¹ [and the] second and the ¹ [third] are the worldly ¹ and the material. I have ²⁰ [informed] you concerning these, that you should ¹ [...] your bodies. And ¹ [a] sense-perceptible [power] ¹ will [...] those who will rest, ¹ and they will be kept ²⁵ [from] passion and division ¹ [of the] union.

The fourth ¹ [and the] fifth which are above, ¹ [these] you have come to know ¹ [. . . divine]. 3 He exists after the [. . .] ¹ and the nature of the [. . .] ¹ that is, the one who [. . .] ¹ three. And [I have ⁵ informed] you of [. . .] ¹ in the three [. . .] ¹ by these [two. I have ¹ informed] you concerning [it, that it] ¹ is incorporeal [. . .] ¹¹ and after [. . .] ¹ within [. . .] ¹ every [. . .] which [. . .] ¹ your [. . .]. The [fifth, ¹⁵ concerning the] conversion [of] ¹ those that are within me, and ¹ concerning those who dwell in that place. ¹

But the sixth, ¹ concerning the self-begotten ones, ²⁰ concerning the incorporeal being ¹ which exists partially, ¹ together with those who exist in ¹ the truth of the All [. . .] ¹ for understanding and ²⁵ assurance. And the [seventh], ¹ concerning the self-begotten power, ¹ which [is the] ¹ third [perfect . . .] 4 fourth, concerning salvation ¹ [and] wisdom. And the eighth, ¹ concerning the mind which is ¹ [male, which] appeared ⁵ [in the beginning], and (concerning) the being ¹ [which is incorporeal] and the ¹ [intelligible] world. The ninth, ¹ [. . .] of the power ¹ [which] appeared [in the ¹⁰ beginning. The] tenth, [concerning ¹ Barbelo, the] virgin [. . .] ¹ of the Aeon. ¹ [The eleventh] and [the ¹ twelfth] speak of the ¹⁵ Invisible One who possesses ¹ three powers ¹ and the Spirit which does not ¹ have being, belonging to ¹ the first Unbegotten (fem.). The ²⁰ thirteenth speaks concerning ¹ [the] Silent One who was not ¹ [known], and the primacy of ¹ [the one who] was not distinguished. ¹

For I am he who has ²⁵ [understood] that which truly exists, ¹ [whether] partially or ¹ [wholly], according to difference ¹ [and same-ness], that they exist from the ¹ [beginning in the] entire place which is 5 eternal, (i.e.) all those that have come into ¹ existence whether without being ¹ or with being, those who are ¹ unbegotten, and the divine aeons ⁵ together with the angels, and the ¹ souls which are without guile, ¹ and the soul-[garments], ¹ the likenesses of [the] ¹ simple ones. And [afterwards they] ¹⁰ have been mixed with [. . .] ¹ them. But still [. . . the] ¹ entire being [. . . which] ¹ imitates the [incorporeal being] ¹ and the unsubstantial (fem.). [Finally] ¹⁵ the entire defilement [was saved] ¹ together with the immortality of ¹ the former (fem.). I have deliberated ¹ and have attained to the boundary of the sense-perceptible ¹ world, <I have come to know> part by part ²⁰ the entire place ¹ of the incorporeal being, and ¹ <I> have come to know the intelligible world. ¹ <I have come to know>, when <I> was deliberating ¹ whether in every respect the sense-perceptible ²⁵ world is [worthy] ¹ of being saved entirely.

[For] ¹ I have not ceased speaking [of the] ¹ Self-begotten One, O [. . .] ¹ became [. . .] 6 part by part the entire place. ¹ He descended; again he descended ¹ <from> the Unbegotten One ¹ who does not have

being, who ⁵ is the Spirit. That one who exists ¹ before all of them reaches ¹ [to the divine] Self-engendered One. ¹ The one having ¹ [being] searches ¹⁰ [...] and he exists ¹ [...] and] he is like ¹ [...] and from ¹ [...] dividing ¹ [...] I became ¹⁵ [...] for many, as it is manifest ¹ that he saved a multitude. ¹

But after all of these things ¹ I am seeking the kingdom ¹ of the Three-Powered One, ²⁰ which has no beginning. Whence ¹ did he appear and ¹ act to fill the ¹ entire place with his power? And ¹ in what way did the unbegotten ones ²⁵ come into existence, since they were not begotten? And ¹ what are [the] differences among the [aeons? ¹ And] as for those who are unbegotten, ¹ how many [are they]? And in what respect ¹ [do they differ] from each other? ⁷

When I had inquired about these things ¹ I perceived that he had worked ¹ from silence. He exists ¹ from the beginning among those that ⁵ truly exist, that belong to the One who ¹ exists. There is another, existing ¹ from the beginning, belonging to the One who ¹ works within the Silent One. ¹ And the silence [...] ¹⁰ him works. ¹ For as much as this one [...] ¹ that one [works from] ¹ the [silence which belongs to the] ¹ Unbegotten One among [the aeons, and from] ¹⁵ the beginning he does not have [being]. ¹ But the energy of ¹ that One <is> the Three-Powered One, ¹ the One unbegotten [before] ¹ the Aeon, not having [being]. ²⁰ And it is possible to behold the supremacy of the ¹ silence of the Silent One, ¹ i.e. the supremacy ¹ of the energy of the ¹ Three-Powered. And the One who ²⁵ exists, who is silent, [who is] ¹ above the [heaven ...], ¹ revealed [the ¹ Three-Powered, First]-Perfect ¹ One.

[When he ...] ⁸ to the powers, they rejoiced. ¹ Those that are within me were perfected ¹ together with all the ¹ rest. And they all blessed ⁵ the Three-Powered, ¹ one by one, who ¹ is [the] First-Perfect One, ¹ [blessing] him in purity, [everywhere] ¹ praising the Lord ¹⁰ [who exists] before the All, ¹ [...] the] Three-Powered. ¹ [...] their worship ¹ [...] myself, ¹ [and I will still go on ¹⁵ inquiring] how they had ¹ become silent. I will understand a ¹ power which I hold ¹ in honor.

The third ¹ power of the Three-Powered, ²⁰ when it (fem.) had perceived him, ¹ said to me, "Be silent ¹ in order that you might know; run, ¹ and come before me. But ¹ know that this One was ²⁵ [silent], and obtain understanding." ¹ For [the power] is attending ¹ [to me, leading] me into ¹ [the Aeon which] is Barbelo, ¹ [the] male [Virgin]. ⁹

For this reason the ¹ Virgin became male, ¹ because she had been divided from the male. The ¹ Knowledge stood outside of him, ⁵ because it belongs to him. ¹ And she who exists, she who sought, ¹ possesses (it), just as ¹ the Three-Powered One possesses. ¹ She withdrew ¹⁰ from them, from [these] two [powers], ¹ since she exists [outside of] ¹ the Great One, as she [...] ¹ who is above [...] ¹ who is silent, [who has] ¹⁵ this [commandment] ¹ to be silent. His knowledge ¹ and his hypostasis ¹ and his activity ¹ are those things of which the power ²⁰ of the Three-Powered spoke, <saying>, ¹ We all have ¹ withdrawn to ourselves. We have [become] ¹ silent, [and] ¹ when we came to know [him, that is], ²⁵ the Three-Powered, [we] ¹ bowed down; we [...] we] ¹ blessed him [...] ¹ upon us." [...]. ¹

[... the] invisible [Spirit] 10 ran up ¹ to his place. The whole place ¹ was revealed; the whole place unfolded ¹ <until> he reached the upper region. ⁵ Again he departed; he caused the ¹ whole place to be illuminated, and the whole ¹ place was illuminated. And [you] (pl.) have been given ¹ the third part of ¹ [the spirit] of the power of the One ¹⁰ [who possesses] the three ¹ [powers]. Blessed is [...]. He said, "O [you ¹ who dwell in these] places, it is necessary ¹ [for you to know] those that are higher ¹⁵ than these, and tell them to the ¹ powers. For you (sg.) will become ¹ [elect] with the elect ones ¹ [in the last] times, ¹ [as] the invisible Spirit ²⁰ [runs] up above. And you ¹ [yourselves], run with him ¹ [up above], since you have ¹ [the] great crown which ¹ [...].

But on the day ²⁵ [...] will beckon ¹ [...] run up above ¹ [...] and the sense-perceptible ¹ [...] visible ¹ [...] and they [...] (pp. 11-12 missing) 13 ¹⁵ the perception. He is for ¹ ever, not having being, ¹ in the One who is, who is silent, ¹ the One who is from the beginning, ¹ [who] does [not] have being ²⁰ [...] part of [...] ¹ indivisible. The [...] ¹ consider a [...] ²⁴ ninth [...] 14 ¹⁵ I [was dwelling] ¹ among the aeons which have ¹ been begotten. As I was permitted, [I] have ¹ come to be among those that were not [begotten]. ¹ But I was dwelling] ¹ among the aeons which have ¹ been begotten. As I was permitted, [I] have ¹ come to be among those that were not [begotten]. ¹ But I was dwelling in the [great] ²⁰ Aeon, as I [...]. ¹ And [...] the] three powers [...] ¹ the One who [possesses] ¹ the [three] powers. The [three] ²⁵ powers ... 15 the] Silent One and the ¹ Three-Powered One [...] the] one that does not have breath. ¹ We took our stand [...] ⁵ in the [...] ¹³ we entered [...] ¹ breath [...] 16 who] does not have breath, ¹ [and he] exists in a [...] ¹ completely]. And I saw ¹ [...] him to the great (fem.) ⁵ [...] they knew [him ...] ¹² limit [...] ¹ and [I ...] ¹ alone [...] 17 is active ¹ [...] why, [again], (does) knowledge ¹ [...] ignorant, and [...] ¹ he runs the risk ⁵ [...] that he become [...] ⁹ on account of [...]. ¹⁵ Those ¹ [...]. But it is necessary that a ¹ [...] does not have form ¹ [...] to this one

¹ [...] exists before ²⁰ [...] the thought ¹ [...] from] the beginning ¹ [...] the one that [...] 18 these [...] ¹ look(ed) at [...] in nine [...] the] ¹ cosmic hebdomad [...] ¹ in a day of [...] ⁵ for ever [...] ¹⁴ and [...] after] ¹ many [years ...] ¹ when I saw the [Father I came to] ¹ know him, and [...] ¹ many [...] ¹ partial [...] ²⁰ for ever [...] ¹ the material ones [...] ¹ worldly [...] ¹ above [...] ¹ in addition [...] 19 ¹³ he [...] ¹⁵ out of [...] ¹ into those that [...] ¹ them into [...] ¹ name ¹ [them. And] (as for) their nomenclature, ²⁰ [bear] witness yourselves ¹ [that you are] inferior to [their ¹ ...] and their [hypostasis]. ¹

But [in addition, when ...] 20 ¹⁴ hidden [...] ¹ the] third ¹ [power]. The blessed Authority (fem.) ¹ said [...] ¹ among these and [...] ¹ i.e. she who [does not have ...]. ²⁰ For there is not glory [...] ¹ nor even the one who [...]. ¹ For indeed the one who [...]. ²⁴ For [...] 21 ¹⁴ and the [signs of the Zodiac ...] ¹ and the [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ which do not have [...] ¹ acquire for [...] ¹ revolution ...]. ²⁰ But [the] soul(s) [...] ¹ there [...] ¹ body(s) of this ¹ [...] soul(s) of heaven [...] ¹ around [...] ²⁵ shape [...] ¹ which is [...] 22 ¹⁵ those that [...] ¹ there [...] ¹⁹ all the likenesses [...] ¹ them [...] ¹ all the forms [...] ¹ shape(s), so that [they ... ¹ and] become [...] ¹ themselves [...] ²⁵ and the [...] ¹ the animals [...] ¹ and the [...] (pp. 23-24 missing) 25 there.

But their ¹ powers, which are the angels, ¹ are in the form of ¹ beasts and animals. ⁵ Some among them are ¹ [polymorphous], and contrary to ¹ [nature] they have ¹ for their names which [...]. ¹ They are [divided] and [...] ¹⁰ according to the [...] ¹ and [...] in [form ...]. ¹ But these that are ¹ [aspects] of sound according to the third ¹ originate from being. ¹⁵ And concerning these, all of ¹ these (remarks) are sufficient, ¹ since we have (already) spoken about them.

For [this] ¹ division takes place ¹ again in these regions in [the manner] ²⁰ we have mentioned from the [beginning]. ¹ However the soul, on the ¹ other hand, [has] ¹ different shape(s). ¹ The shape of the soul exists [in ²⁵ this] form, ¹ i.e. (the soul) that came into ¹ existence of its own accord. The shape ¹ is [the second] 26 spherical part ¹ while the first allows [it], ¹ eēiou, the self-begotten soul, ¹ aeēiouō. ⁵ [The] second schema, ¹ eēiou, ... by those [having] ¹ two sounds (diphthongs), the first being ¹ placed after them [...] ¹² the light.

[Control] ¹ yourselves, receive [the] ¹ imperishable seed, ¹⁵ bear fruit, and ¹ do not become ¹ attached to your possessions. ¹

But know that the oxytones ¹ exist among the vowels ²⁰ and the ¹ diphthongs which are ¹ next to them. But the [short] ¹ are inferior, and the [...] ¹ are [...] ²⁵ by them. Those that [...] ¹ since they are intermediate ¹ [. . .]. The sounds of ¹ [the semivowels] are 27 superior to the voiceless (consonants). ¹ And those that are double are superior ¹ to the semivowels which ¹ do not change. But the aspirates ⁵ are better than the inaspirates (of) ¹ the voiceless (consonants). ¹ And those that are intermediate will [accept] ¹ their combination in which they are; ¹ they are ignorant [of] ¹⁰ the things that are good. They (the vowels) ¹ are combined with the [intermediates] ¹ which are less. [Form] by [form], ¹ <they constitute> the nomenclature of the [gods] ¹ and the angels, [not] because ¹⁵ they are mixed with each other ¹ according to every form, but ¹ only (because) they have ¹ a good function. ¹ It did not happen ²⁰ that <their> will was revealed. ¹

Do not keep on [sinning], ¹ and do not dare to ¹ make use of sin.

But [I] ¹ am speaking to you (sg.) [concerning the ¹ three . . . shapes] ¹ of the soul. [The] ¹ third [shape of the soul] ¹ is [. . .] 28 is a spherical one, put ¹ after it, from the ¹ simple vowels: ¹ eee, iii, ooo, uuu, ððð. ⁵ The diphthongs were ¹ as follows: ai, au, ¹ ei, eu, ēu, ou, ōu, oi, ēi, ¹ ui, ōi, auei, euēu, oiou, ¹ ggg, ggg, ggg, aiau, ¹⁰ [eieu], ēu, oiou, ōu, ggg, ¹ [ggg], aueieu, oiou, ēu, ¹ three times for a male soul. ¹ The third ¹ shape is spherical. ¹⁵ The second shape, being ¹ put after it, has ¹ two sounds. The male soul's ¹ third shape ¹ (consists) of the ²⁰ simple vowels: ¹ aaa, eee, ēēē, iii, ooo, ¹ uuu, ððð, ððð, ððð. ¹ [And] this shape is different ¹ [from] the first, but ²⁵ [they resemble] each other ¹ [and they] make some ¹ [ordinary sounds] of ¹ [this sort: aeē]oð. And 29 from these (are made) the diphthongs. ¹

So also the ¹ fourth and the fifth. ¹ With regard to them, they were not allowed to ⁵ reveal the whole topic, ¹ but only those things that are apparent. ¹ You (pl.) were taught ¹ about them, that you should perceive them ¹ in order that they, too, might ¹⁰ all seek and find [who] ¹ they are, either ¹ by themselves alone [. . .] ¹ or by each other, ¹ or to reveal [destinies] ¹⁵ that have been determined from the beginning, ¹ either with reference to themselves alone [or] ¹ with reference to one another, just as [they] ¹ exist with each other [in] ¹ sound, whether partially ²⁰ or formally.

[They are] ¹ commanded [to] ¹ submit or their ¹ [part] is generated and ¹ formal. Either (they are commanded) by [the ²⁵ long] (vowels) or [by] ¹ those of [dual time value, or] ¹ by [the short (vowels)] ¹ which are small [. . .] 30 or the oxytones or the ¹ intermediates or the barytones. ¹

And <the> consonants ¹ exist with the vowels, ⁵ and individually ¹ they are commanded, ¹ and they submit. ¹ They constitute the nomenclature ¹ [of] the angels. And ¹⁰ [the] consonants are ¹ self-existent, ¹

[and] as they are changed ¹ <they> submit ¹ to the hidden ¹⁵ gods by means of ¹ beat and ¹ pitch and ¹ silence and impulse. ¹ [They] summon the semivowels, ²⁰ all of which ¹ submit to them with ¹ one [accord]; since it is only ¹ the [unchanging] double (consonants) ¹ that coexist with the semivowels. ²⁵

But the aspirates ¹ [and the inaspirates] and the ¹ [intermediates] constitute ¹ [the voiceless (consonants). Again ¹ . . . they] are combined ¹ [with each other, and] they are separate 31 from one another. They are ¹ commanded, and they submit, ¹ and they constitute an ¹ ignorant nomenclature. ⁵ And they become one or ¹ two or three or [four] ¹ or five or six up to ¹ seven having a ¹ [simple] sound, <together with> these which [have] ¹ two [sounds], . . . the place [of the ¹ seventeen consonants. Among] ¹ the first names [some] are ¹ less. And ¹ since [these] do not have being, ¹⁵ either [they] are an aspect [of] ¹ being [or] they divide ¹ the nature [of] the mind ¹ which [is masculine] (and) which is [intermediate]. ¹

And you (sg.) [put] in ²⁰ those that resemble each other [with] ¹ the vowels [and] ¹ the consonants. Some ¹ are: bagadazatha, ¹ begedezethe, [bēgēdē]²⁵zēthē, [bigidizithi, bogo] ¹ dozotho, [buguduzuthu], ¹ bōgō-dōzōthō. [And] ¹ the rest [. . .] ¹ ba[bebēbibobubō]. 32 But the rest are ¹ different: abebēbi¹bob, in order that you (sg.) might [collect] ¹ them, and be separated from the ⁵ angels.

And there ¹ will be some effects. ¹ The first (fem.), ¹ which is good, is from ¹ [the] triad. It [. . .] ¹⁰ has need of [. . .] ¹² their shapes. <The> dyad ¹ and the monad ¹ do not resemble anything, but ¹⁵ they are first to exist. ¹ The dyad, being divided, ¹ is divided [from the] monad, [and ¹ it] belongs to the hypostasis. ¹ But the tetrad received (the) [elements], ²⁰ and the pentad ¹ received concord, and the ¹ [hexad] was perfected by ¹ itself. The ¹ [hebdomad] received beauty, ²⁵ [and the] ogdoad ¹ [received . . .] ¹ ready [. . .] ²⁹ greatly. 33 And the [decad revealed] ¹ the whole place. ¹ But the eleven and the ¹ [twelve] have traversed ⁵ [. . .] not having [. . .] ¹ it [is higher . . .] ¹ seven [. . .] ¹⁵ name(s) . . .] ¹⁷ promise that [. . .] ¹ begin [to separate] ¹ them by means of ²⁰ a mark [and] ¹ a point, the [one which ¹ quarrels] from the one which is [an enemy]. ¹

Thus [. . .] ¹ of being [. . .] ²⁶ the [letters . . .] ¹ in [a 34 holy] or according to a [bond] ¹ existing separately. ¹ [And] <they> exist with each ¹ [other] in generation or [in ⁵ birth. And] according to [. . .] ¹ generation they do not have ¹ [. . .] these [. . .] ¹⁸ one [. . .] speaking ¹ [the] riddle.

Because within ²⁰ [the] sense-perceptible world ¹ there exists the temple ¹ [which measures] seven hundred ¹ [cubits], and a river which ¹ [...] within ²⁵ [...] for] ever, they ¹ [...] three ¹ [...] to the four ¹ [...] seals ¹ [...] clouds 35 [and the] waters, and the [forms ¹ of the] wax images, ¹ [and] some emerald likenesses.

For the rest, I will ⁵ [teach you (sg.)] about them. This is ¹ [the] generation of the names. That (fem.) which [was not] ¹ generated [...] from the] ¹ beginning [...] ¹⁵ with regard to [...] ¹⁸ time(s), when [confinéd], when ¹ spread out, when [diminished]. ²⁰ But there exists the gentle [word], ¹ and there exists another ¹ word which [approaches] ¹ being [...] ¹ in this [manner ...]. ²⁶ And he [...] ¹ the difference [...] ¹ and the [...] 36 the all and a [...] ¹ the [undivided] beings ¹ and the power [...] ¹ having [a] ⁵ share in [the joy] ¹ separately and [...] ¹ whether [...] ¹⁵ power ¹ [...] he] exists ¹ [in] every place [...] ¹ them always. ¹ [He] dwells with the corporeal ²⁰ and the incorporeal ones. ¹

This is the word of the hypostases ¹ that one should ¹ [...] in this way. If ¹ [...] with their ²⁵ [...] helping ¹ [those who stir up] the ¹ [...] manifest ¹ [...] if one 37 knows him, he will ¹ [call] upon him. ¹

But there are words, some ¹ of which are [two ⁵ but others] existing ¹ [separately ... ¹³ and] they [...] ¹⁵ or those which [...] ¹⁷ or according to [those that] have ¹ duration. And [these] ¹ either are separate from [them] ²⁰ or they are joined to one another, ¹ or with themselves, either [the] ¹ diphthongs, or the ¹ simple [vowels], or every [...] ¹ or [...] ²⁵ or [...] exist] just as [...] exist [...] ¹ the [consonants ...] 38 they exist individually ¹ until they are divided ¹ and doubled. Some ¹ have the power ⁵ [...] according to the [letters ¹ that are consonants ...] ¹² become [...] ¹⁵ by themselves ¹ [...] and three (times) ¹ [for the] vowels, ¹ and twice ¹ [for] the consonants, ²⁰ [and] once for ¹ the entire place, and with ¹ ignorance for ¹ [those which] are subject to change ¹ [...] which] became ²⁵ [...] together with the [entire ¹ place ...] finally.

And ¹ [...] they all ¹ [...] they] are 39 hidden, but they were pronounced ¹ openly. They did not ¹ stop without being revealed, ¹ nor did they stop without ⁵ naming the angels. ¹ The vowels ¹ [join] the ¹ [consonants, whether] without ¹ [or] within, ¹⁰ [...] they ¹ said [...] ¹ teach you (sg.) [...] ¹ again [for ever. They were counted] ¹ four times, (and) they were [engendered] ¹⁵ three times, and they became [...]. ¹⁸

For these reasons we have acquired ¹ sufficiency; for it is fitting that ²⁰ each one acquire ¹ power for himself to bear fruit, ¹ and that we ¹ never cast ¹ aspersions [on] the mysteries ²⁵ [...] the [...]. ¹

For [...] which [is ... ¹ the] souls [...] ¹ the] signs of the Zodiac [...] 40 a new hypostasis. ¹

And the reward which will ¹ be provided for such a one ¹ is salvation.
⁵ But the opposite will ¹ happen there to the one ¹ who commits sin.
 [The one who commits] sin ¹ by himself [...] will be ¹ [in a ... in a ...]
¹² in order that ¹ before you (sg.) examine ¹ the one who <...>, one ¹⁵ might [tell] another ¹ [about an] exalted power ¹ and a divine knowledge ¹ and a might which ¹ cannot be resisted. ²⁰ But you shall examine ¹ who is worthy that he should ¹ reveal them, knowing ¹ that [those] who commit sin [...] ¹ down to [...] ²⁵ as they [...] ¹ the Father [...] 41 that which is fitting. Do not desire ¹ to give power to the sense-perceptible world. ¹ Are you (pl.) not attending to me, ¹ who have received salvation ⁵ from the intelligible world? ¹ But (as for) these <words> – watch yourselves – ¹ do not [...] them as a(n) ¹ [...] ¹² understand [...]] and he takes [...] ¹ the rest], ¹ I [will speak of] them. The [perfection ¹⁵
 ...] in order that ¹ it might increase [...] who commit sin [...] ¹⁸ the embodied souls did not understand ¹ them. Those that are upon ²⁰ the earth as well as those outside of ¹ the body, those in heaven, are ¹ more than the angels. The place ¹ which we [talked] about in ¹ [every] discourse, these [...] ²⁵ stars [...] ²⁷ book(s) [...] ¹ whether already [...] ¹ into the [...] ³⁰ blessed is [...] 42 whether he is gazing at the ¹ two or he is gazing at ¹ the seven planets ¹ or at the twelve ⁵ signs of the Zodiac or at ¹ the thirty-[six] Decans [...] ¹² are [...] ¹ these reach up] ¹ to [...] ¹⁶ and ¹ [these] numbers, whether [those in heaven] ¹ or those upon the earth, ¹ together with those that are under the [earth], ²⁰ according to the relationships and ¹ the divisions among ¹ these, and in the rest ¹ [...] parts ¹ [according to kind and] according to ¹ [species ... ²⁷ they] will [submit ¹ since] she has power ¹ [...] above ³⁰ [...] they exist] apart [...] 43⁶ every [...] ²⁰ body(s) [...] ¹ a] place [...] divine Barbelo [...] 44⁴ reveal them [...] ¹ in this [manner ...] ¹ this [...] ²⁰ intelligible angels], as she [...] ¹ intelligible [...] ¹ above [...] ¹ save(d) from [...]] ²⁷ them [...] 45³ world [...] ¹ and [...] ⁶ world [...] ²¹ they came [...]]
²⁴ those who [...] 46⁵ is [...] ¹ like [...] ²⁰ the voice of ¹ [...] name(s)
 [and ... ²³ for] ever [...] ¹ name(s) ¹ ...]. (pp. 47-54 missing)

[...] 55¹⁷ (after) I was silent, [I said], ¹ “Tell [me, ...] ¹ what is the [power ...] ²⁰ will wash [...] ¹ entire generation [...] 56¹⁷ greatly, the ¹ [...] much ¹ [...] he is [...], and ²⁰ [...] all [...] ¹ in the [...] 57¹⁸ knowledge [...] ²⁰ persevere [...] ¹ the great [...] ¹ for I [became ...] 58²⁰ bone(s) of the ¹ [...] in the [worldly ... (pp. 59-60 missing) 61 which is] under [...] your daughters [...] ³ for just as ¹ [...] the] kingdom of [...]. ⁵ But this one [...] ¹² every [...] 62 in the one who [...]]
¹ not. [And ...]. ¹

For it is [...] who [...] ¹ you (pl.) did not] know the [...] ⁵ for the [...] ¹⁰ partially [...] 63 in ¹ [...] remainder ¹ down [...] the] earth. And they ¹ [spoke] like the angels ⁵ [...] he was like the ¹ wild [animals].

And he said, [...] ⁸ for] ever [...] ¹⁷ from [...] ¹ the number [...] ¹ I saw [...] ²¹ and his [...] a [voice ...] ¹ and [...] his 64 I [...] ¹ because I [saw] all of [the lights] ¹ around [me, blazing ¹ with] fire. [And ...] ⁵ me in their midst [...] ¹⁶ angel(s) [who ...] ¹ beside me. [And ...] ¹ the [one ...] ¹ Gamaliel, ²⁰ [the one] who is in command of [the spirits] which [...] 65 the angels ¹ [...] which receive ¹ [all of them ...] ¹ with those whom they [...] ⁵ and] he [took] me ¹ [...] he finished ... ¹⁰ her] members [...] ¹⁴ the [invisible ...] ¹⁷ judgment [...] ¹ thrown ¹ [...] every [...] which is placed ... ²¹ fountain] of ¹ [immortality ...] living ¹ [...] the two ¹ [...] silent ²⁵ ... god(s)] 66 wash it (fem.) from [...] ¹ of God [...] ¹ the one whom they [sealed] ¹ has been adorned [with the ⁵ seal of] heaven. [...] ¹¹ to his [...] ¹ great [...]. ¹⁷

And I [saw ...] ¹⁹ unmixed [...] ¹ those who [...] 67 they will become ¹ [...] of God ¹ [...] a woman ¹ [...] while she is in [travail ⁵ ...] when she gives birth, [...] ¹⁰ with [...] ¹² all of [...] ¹ thing ¹ [...] men [...] and ¹⁵ [...] women [and men ¹ of this kind ...] ¹ no one] <of> those [that are upon the] earth ¹ [knew] that [...] ¹ every [...] them, ²⁰ [and they will] take pity on these, [together with the] ¹ home-[born], for these will [pay ¹ ...] God [...] ²⁴ aeon(s) [...] 68 with those who will [...] ¹ who have [...] ¹ God [...] ¹ from the [beginning ...] ⁵ in [the ...] ¹ fear [...] ⁸ name(s) ... ¹² mysteries] ¹ in [...] ¹ God [...] ¹⁶ manifest [...] ¹ those who will know [him]. ¹

[M]arsanes

THE INTERPRETATION OF KNOWLEDGE (XI,1)

Introduced by

ELAINE H. PAGELS

Translated by

JOHN D. TURNER

The Interpretation of Knowledge offers a unique opportunity to see how a gnostic teacher uses New Testament writings and applies them to the church. Features of style and structure suggest that the text presents a homily intended for delivery in a service of worship. The structure of the discussion follows a common pattern of worship, in which readings from the gospel are followed by readings from the apostle (that is, from Paul). Correspondingly, an early section of The Interpretation of Knowledge (9,21-14,15) uses passages known from Matthew to interpret the Savior's teaching and his passion; the following section (14,15-21,34) uses texts from 1 Corinthians and probably Romans, Colossians, Ephesians, and Philippians to interpret the church as the "body of Christ."

The author is concerned to address a community that is torn by jealousy and hatred over the issue of spiritual gifts. Some members refuse to share their spiritual gifts with one another; others envy those who have received such gifts as prophecy and public speaking and so stand out in the congregation. Some despise others whom they consider ignorant (that is, lacking gnosis); the rest feel slighted and resentful.

The author's concern throughout The Interpretation of Knowledge is to rectify this divisive situation. Having recalled how the Savior taught the oneness of the Father (9,28-29), and, further, how the "great Son" voluntarily accepted humiliation for the sake of his "small brothers" (14,28-29), he now applies the lessons of unity and of humility to the church. First he recalls how the church received redemption; the Savior abolished the "old bond of debt" which enslaved those "condemned in Adam" (14,34-36; cf. Cl 2:14) and proclaimed in its place the "edict of the Father" (14,29-31), offering forgiveness of sins and release from death (14,36-38). From 13,20 through 21,35 the author takes up Paul's metaphor of the body and its members (cf. Ro 12:4-8; 1 Co 12:12-31) and combines it with the images of Christ as the Head of the body, the church (cf. Cl 1:18; 2:19; Ep 4:15-16) in order to remind the members that they all share in the "same body" and the "same Head." Despite the diversity of gifts (cf. 1 Co 12:4), each member shares in the same grace (16,18-24; cf. Ro 12:6); the same power which inspires the speaker enables the listener to understand what he says (16,31-38). Those who receive lesser gifts are not to complain, but to rejoice that they also share in the body (18,28-38; 1 Co 12:14-26). Those who receive greater gifts, such as knowledge (gnosis; cf. 1 Co 12:8) are not to despise others as inferior or ignorant (17,25-26). On the contrary, "you are ignorant when you hate them" (17,27), for those who show hatred and jealousy toward others demonstrate by their attitude that they still resemble the jealous and ignorant demiurge. These attitudes betray their ignorance of God (15,30-33), the true Father, and of his Son.

Amplifying Paul's image of the church as a spiritual organism, the author takes up the metaphor of the plant with roots, branches, and fruits, "the roots have a connection with one another, and their fruits are undivided" (19,31-33). As the roots exist for the sake of the fruits and for another, "let us become like the roots, since we are equal" (19,36-37). The text concludes with warnings of persecution (20,20-38) and the exhortation to overcome sin; those who do overcome it shall receive a "crown of victory, even as our Head was glorified by the Father" (21,30-34).

The author, who identifies himself as a member of the church, shares scriptural texts and terms familiar to us from early Christian orthodoxy, while using Valentinian theology to interpret these to his audience. This teacher envisions the church he addresses as including both psychic and pneumatic Christians; he may have addressed this homily to both, or specifically to the small circle of the elect. This text offers a significant primary source for understanding how some Gnostic Christians — and specifically certain Valentinian Christians — understand the church in the light of Jesus' teaching and of Paul's letters.

THE INTERPRETATION OF KNOWLEDGE

XI 1, 1-21, 35

[. . . ¹⁴ they came to] believe by means of [signs ¹ and] wonders [and fabrications. ¹ The likeness] that came to be through [them ¹ followed] him, but through ¹ [reproaches] and humiliations [before they received ¹ the apprehension] of a vision [they fled ²⁰ without having] heard [that the Christ] ¹ had been crucified. ¹ [But our] generation is fleeing since it does not yet ¹ [even believe that the Christ ¹ is alive. In order] that our faith ²⁵ [may be] holy (and) pure, ¹ [not relying upon] itself actively, but ¹ [maintaining] itself planted in ¹ [him, do not] say: "Whence ¹ [is the] patience to measure faith?", ³⁰ for each one is persuaded ¹ [by the things] he believes. If ¹ he disbelieves them, then [he] would be unable ¹ [to be persuaded]. But it is a great thing ¹ for a man who has ³⁵ faith, since he is [not] in unbelief, ¹ which is the [world].

[Now] the world ¹ [is the place of] unfaith [and ¹ the place of death]. And death [exists as 2 . . . ¹⁵ likeness and] they will [not believe]. ¹ A holy thing is the faith [to see ¹ the likeness]. The opposite is [unfaith ¹ in the likeness]. The things that he will grant [them ¹ will support] them. It was impossible [for them ²⁰ to attain] to the imperishability [. . .] ¹ will [become . . .] ¹ loosen [. . . ²⁴ those who] were sent [. . .]. ¹ For [he who] is distressed [will not believe]. ¹ He [is unable] to bring a [great ¹ church] since it is gathered out of [a small ¹ gathering].

He became an [emanation of] ¹ the trace. For also they say [about] ³⁰ a likeness that it is apprehended [by means of ¹ his trace]. The structure [apprehends by means of ¹ the] likeness, but God [apprehends ¹ by means of] his members. [He knew ¹ them] before they were begotten, [and they ³⁵ will know] him. And the one who [begot ¹ each] one from [the first will ¹ indwell] them. He will [rule over them]. ¹ For it is [necessary] for [each one 3 . . . ²⁶ The] Savior [removed himself] since it is [fitting]. ¹ Indeed, [not ignorant] but [carnal ¹ is the] word who [took him] as a husband. ¹ And it is [he] who exists [as an image], since ³⁰ [that one (masc.)] also [exists], as well as that one (fem.) ¹ [who brought] us forth. [And she caused] him to know ¹ [that] she is [the] Womb. This [is a] marvel of hers ¹ [that she] causes us to transcend [patience. ¹ But this is] the marvel: he [loves ³⁵ the one who] was first to [permit] a virgin ¹ [. . .]. It is fitting to [. . .] her ¹ [. . .] unto death ¹ [. . . desire] to practice 4 [. . .]. ²⁴ Therefore ¹ [she yielded] to him in [her path]. ¹ He was [first to fix] our eye [upon this] ¹ virgin [who is fixed] to the [cross] ¹ that is in those [places. And] we see [that ¹ it is] her water [which] the supreme authority [granted] ³⁰ to the one [in whom] there is [a sign. This ¹ is that] water of [immortality which] ¹ the great [powers] will grant to [him while he is] ¹ below [in the likeness] of [her young son. ¹ She did not stop] on his account. She [. . .] ³⁵ the [. . .] he became [. . .] ¹ in the [. . .] word that [appears] ¹ to the . . . word that [appears] ¹ to the [. . .]. ¹ He [did not . . . 5 . . .] ¹⁴ in [. . .] ¹ through [. . .] ¹ come from those places. [Some fell] ¹ in the path. Others [fell in the rocks]. ¹ Yet still others he [sowed in the thorns]. ¹ And still others [he gave to drink ¹ . . .] ²¹ and the shadow. Behold [. . .] ¹ he [. . . . ²⁵ And] this [is the eternal reality] ¹ before the souls come forth from ¹ [those who] are being killed.

But he was ¹ being pursued in that place ¹ by the trace produced by ³⁰ the Savior. And he was crucified ¹ and he died — not his own [death, ¹ for] he did [not at all] deserve to die ¹ [because ¹ of] the church of mortals. [And he was ¹ nailed] so that [they] might keep ³⁵ him in the church. [He answered] her ¹ [with] humiliations, since [in this] way he had [borne] the suffering ¹ which he had [suffered]. ¹ For Jesus is for us a [likeness] on account of 6 [. . .] ¹⁵ this [. . . ¹ the] entire [structure] and ¹ [. . . the great] bitterness of the [world ¹ . . .] us with the ¹ [. . .] by thieves ²⁰ [. . .] the [slaves ¹ . . . down] to Jericho ¹ [. . .] they [received ¹ . . .]. For [. . . ²⁵ down] to [those who] will wait ¹ while the entire defect restrains [them] ¹ until the [final] reality that is ¹ [their] portion, since he [brought] us down, ¹ having bound us in nets of flesh. ³⁰ Since the body is [a] ¹ temporary dwelling which ¹ the rulers and [authorities] have as [an] abode, ¹ the man within, [after being] ¹ imprisoned in the fabrication, [fell] ³⁵ into [suffering. And] having compelled [him] ¹ to [serve them,] they constrained him to ¹ serve [the] energies. They split ¹ the Church so as to inherit 7 [...] ¹⁰ power to [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ having [touched [...] ¹ before [...] ¹⁷ it is [the] beauty that will [...] ¹ wanted to [...] and] ¹ to be with [...] ²⁰ fighting with [one another [...] ¹ like others [...] ¹ virgin [...] ¹ to destroy [...] ¹ wound [...] ²⁶ but she [...] she likens] ¹ herself to the [...] ¹ her since they had struck [...] ¹ imperishable. This [...] ³⁰ that he remain [...] ¹ virgin. The [...] ¹ her beauty [...] ¹ faithfulness [...] ¹ and therefore [...] ³⁵ her. He hastened [...] ¹ he did not put up with [...] ¹ they despise [...]. ¹ For when the Mother had [8 ... ⁶ the] Mother [...] ⁸ her enemy ¹ [...] the teaching [...] of] ¹¹ the force [...] ¹⁵ nature [...] ¹ behold a maiden ¹ [...] he is unable ¹ [...] first ¹ [...] the] opposite [...]. ²⁰ But how has he ¹ [...] maiden ¹ [...] he was not able ¹ [...] he [became ¹ [...] killed [him ²⁵ [...] alive ¹ [...] he reckoned her [...] ¹ better than life ¹ [...] since he knows that if ¹ [...] world created [him ³⁰ [...] him to raise ¹ [him [...] up from ¹ [...] upon the regions [...] ¹ those] whom they rule [...]. But [...] emitted him ³⁵ [...] he dwells in him ¹ [...] the Father of the All ¹ [...] be more to her [...] ¹ him. He [9 ...] ⁹ like [...] ¹ into [...] he [has] ¹ them [...] ¹ them [...] each [one will be] ¹ worthy [...] take him and [...] ¹⁵ the] teacher should hide himself [as if ¹ he were] a god [who] would embrace [his works] ¹ and destroy them. For [he] also ¹ spoke with the Church [and] he [made himself] ¹ her teacher of immortality, and [destroyed] ²⁰ the arrogant [teacher] by [teaching] ¹ her to [die].

[And this teacher made a ¹ living] school, for [that teacher has] ¹ another school: while [it teaches us about] ¹ the [dead] writings, he, on the other hand, was causing us to [remove ourselves] ²⁵ from the [surfeit] of the world; ¹ we were being taught about our death ¹ through them.

Now this is his teaching: ¹ Do not call to a father upon ¹ the earth. Your Father, who is in heaven, is one. ³⁰ You are the light of ¹ the world. They are my brothers and my fellow ¹ companions who do the will ¹ of [the] Father. For what use is it if you ¹ gain the world and you forfeit your ³⁵ soul? For when we were in the dark ¹ we used to call many "father," since we were ¹ ignorant of the true Father. And ¹ this is the great conception of [all] the sins 10 [...] ⁹ pleasure. We are like [What] now is the [faith laid down] ¹ by the master who [released] him [from the great] ¹⁵ ignorance [and] the [darkness of the ignorant eye?] ¹ He reminded him of the good things ¹ [of his Father] and the race. For he said ¹ [to him], "Now the world is not yours; ¹ [may you not esteem] the form that is in it [as] advantageous; ²⁰ [rather (it is) disadvantageous] and a [punishment]." Receive ¹ now the [teaching of the one who was] reproached – ¹ an advantage and [a profit] for the soul – ¹ [and] receive [his shape. It is the] shape ¹ [that] exists in the presence [of the Father], the word ²⁵ and the height, that let you know him ¹ before you have been led astray while in (the) flesh ¹ of condemnation. Likewise I became very small ¹ so that through my humility I ¹ might take you up to the great height, whence ³⁰ you had fallen. You were taken ¹ to this pit. If now you believe ¹ in me, it is I who shall take you ¹ above through this shape that you see. ¹ It is I who shall bear you upon my shoulders. Enter ³⁵ through the rib whence you came ¹ and hide yourself from the beasts. ¹ The burden that you bear ¹ now [is] not yours. Whenever [you (fem.)] go 11 [...] ¹⁵ from his glory [...] ¹ from the first. ¹ From [being counted] with the female, ¹ sleep [brought labor] and the [sabbath] ¹ which [is the] world. ²⁰ For from [being counted] with the Father, ¹ sleep brought [the sabbath] and [the exodus] ¹ from the [world of the beasts]. ¹ For the [world] is from <the> [beasts] ¹ and it is a [beast]. Therefore [he] ²⁵ that is lost [has been reckoned to the] crafty one, and [that one] ¹ is from [the beasts] that came forth. They put upon [him a] garment of condemnation, ¹ for the female [had no] other ¹ garment [for clothing] her seed ³⁰ except the one she first brought ¹ on the sabbath. For no beast ¹ exists in [the] Aeon. For the Father does not ¹ keep the sabbath but actuates the Son, ¹ and through the Son he continued ³⁵ to provide himself with the Aeons. The Father has ¹ living rational elements ¹ from which he puts on ¹ my [members] as garments. The man 12 [...] ¹² this] ¹ is the name. The [...] he] ¹ emitted [himself and] he ¹⁵ emitted the [reproached one. The one ¹ who] was reproached changed (his) name ¹ and, [along with that which would be] like the reproach ¹ he [appeared] as flesh. And ¹ [the humiliated one has no] equipment. He has [no] need ²⁰ of the [glory that] is [not his]; he has ¹ his own [glory] with the ¹ [name], which is the [Son]. Now he came that we might ¹ become glorious [through the] humiliated one ¹ [that] dwells in the [places of humiliation. ²⁵ And through [him] who was reproached ¹ we receive the [forgiveness] of sins. ¹ And through the one [who] was reproached ¹ and the one who [was redeemed] we receive ¹ grace.

¹ [...] him to [...] ¹ soul [...] men who [...] ¹ the [dwelling] place. ¹

But who [is it] that redeemed ³⁰ the one who was reproached? It is [the] emanation ¹ of the name. For just as the flesh has need ¹ of a name, so also is [the] flesh an Aeon ¹ that Wisdom has emitted. It ¹ received the majesty that is descending, ³⁵ so that the Aeon might enter ¹ the one who was reproached, that we might escape ¹ the disgrace of the carcass and be regenerated ¹ in the flesh [and] blood of 13 [...] ⁹ destiny. He [...] ¹ and the Aeons [...] ¹ they] accepted the Son [although he was] ¹ a complete mystery [...] ¹ each one] of his [members [...] ¹ grace. [When ¹⁵ he cried out, he] was separated ¹ from the Church like [portions of] ¹ the darkness from the Mother, while his [feet] ¹ provided him traces, and [these] ¹ scorched the path of [the] ascent ²⁰ to the Father.

But [what is the way and manner (in) which] ¹ it (fem.) became [their Head]? Well, it (fem.) made the [dwelling place to bring forth] ¹ the light [to those] who dwell within ¹ him so that [they might] see the [ascending] Church. ²⁵ For the Head drew ¹ itself up from the pit; it ¹ was bent over the cross and [it] ¹ looked down to Tartaros so that ¹ those below might look above. ³⁰ Hence, for example, when someone ¹ looks at [someone], then the face of the one ¹ who looked down looks up; ¹ so also once the Head looked ¹ from the [height] to its members, our ³⁵ members [went] above, where the Head ¹ was. And it, the cross, ¹ was [undergoing] nailing for the members, ¹ and solely that they might be able 14 [...] ⁸ have [...] ¹ because they were [like [...] ¹⁰ slave. The consummation [is ¹ thus: He whom] she indicated ¹ [will be completed] by the [one who] indicated. ¹ And the seeds [that remain will endure] ¹ until the All is separated [and takes] ¹⁵ shape.

And thus the decree ¹ will be fulfilled, for just as the woman ¹ who is honored until death ¹ [has] the advantage of time, ¹ [so too will it] give birth. And this offspring ²⁰ [will] receive [the body] appointed for it ¹ [and] it [will become perfect]. He has ¹ a generous [nature since] the Son of ¹ God dwells in [him]. And whenever ¹ he acquires the All, whatever ²⁵ he possesses will <be dissolved> in the ¹ fire because it greatly despised and ¹ outraged the Father. ¹ the] ¹ Christ removed himself [from] ¹ all these, since he loves [his members] ¹ with all his heart. [One who is jealous sets] ²⁰ his members against [one another. If] ¹ he is [not] jealous, [he will not] be removed from (the) [other members and the] ¹ good which [he] sees. [By having a] ¹ brother [who] regards us [as he] ²⁵ also is, one glorifies the [one who gives us] ¹ grace. Moreover, it is fitting for [each] ¹ of us to [enjoy] the gift ¹ that he has received from [God, and] ¹ that we not be jealous, since we know that ³⁰ he who is jealous is an obstacle in his (own) [path], ¹ since he destroys only himself ¹ with the gift and he is ignorant ¹ of God. He ought to rejoice [and] ¹ be glad and partake of grace and ³⁵ bounty. Does someone have a ¹ prophetic gift? Share it without ¹ hesitation. Neither approach ¹ your brother jealously nor 16 [...] ⁹ chosen as they [...] ¹ empty as they [escape . . .] ¹ fallen from their [...] ¹ are ignorant that ¹ [...] in this way they] have ¹ [...] them in ¹⁵ [...] in order that they may ¹ [reflect] perforce upon the things that you want ¹ [them to think] about when [they ¹ think about] you. [Now] your brother ¹ [also has his] grace: ²⁰ [Do not] belittle yourself, but ¹ [rejoice and give] thanks spiritually ¹ [and] pray for that ¹ [one in order that] you might share the grace ¹ [that dwells] within him. So do not consider [him ²⁵ foreign] to you, rather, (as) one ¹ who is yours, whom each ¹ [of] your <fellow> members received. ¹ By [loving] the Head who possesses them, ¹ you also possess the one from whom it is that ³⁰ these outpourings of gifts exist ¹ among your brethren.

Moreover, when the great Son was sent ¹ after his small brothers, he spread ³⁰ abroad the edict of the Father and proclaimed ¹ it, opposing the All. And he ¹ removed the old bond of debt, the one of ¹ condemnation. And this [is the] edict ¹ that was: Those who made themselves ³⁵ enslaved have become condemned ¹ in Adam. They have been [brought] from ¹ death, received forgiveness for their ¹ sins and been redeemed by 15 [...] ¹⁰ since we are worthy [...] ¹ and [...] ¹ but I say [...] ¹⁴ and these [...]. ¹ For [...] is worthy to [...] ¹ God. And the Father [...

But is someone ¹ making progress in the Word? Do not ¹ be hindered by this; do not say: ¹ "Why does he speak ³⁵ while I do not?", for what he ¹ says is (also) yours, ¹ and that which discerns the Word and ¹ that which speaks is the same power. The [Word 17 . . . ¹⁴ eye] or a [hand only, although they are] ¹ a [single] body. [Those who belong to us] ¹ all serve [the Head] together. ¹ And] each one [of the members reckons] ¹ it as a member.

[They can] not ¹ all become [entirely a foot] ²⁰ or entirely an eye [or entirely a hand since] ¹ these members will not [live alone]; ¹ rather they are dead. We [know that they are being put to] ¹ death. So] why [do you love] ¹ the members that are still dead, [instead of those that] ²⁵ live? How do you know [that someone] ¹ is ignorant of the [brethren]? ¹ For [you] are ignorant when you [hate them] ¹ and are jealous of them, since [you will not receive] ¹ the grace that dwells within [them], ³⁰ being unwilling to reconcile them to [the] ¹ bounty of the Head. You ought to [give] ¹ thanks for our members and [ask] ¹ that you too might be granted ¹ [the] grace that has been given to them. ³⁵ For the Word is rich, ¹ generous, and kind. Here he ¹ gives away gifts to ¹ his men without jealousy according to 18 [...] ¹² appeared ¹ in each] of the members ¹ [...] himself ¹⁵ [...] since they do not fight ¹ [at all with one another] on account of [their] difference(s). ¹ [Rather] by laboring with ¹ [one another they will] work with one another, ¹ [and if] one of them ²⁰ [suffers, they will] suffer with him, and ¹ [when each one] is saved, they are saved ¹ [together].

Moreover, [if they] would wait for ¹ [the exodus] from the (earthly) harmony, they will ¹ [come to the Aeon]. If they are fit to share ²⁵ [in] the (true) harmony, how much the more ¹ [those who] derive from the [single] unity? ¹ They ought to be reconciled with one ¹ another. Do not accuse your Head ¹ because it has not appointed you as an eye but rather as ³⁰ a finger. And do not ¹ [be] jealous of that which has been put in the ¹ class of an eye or a hand or a foot, ¹ but be thankful that you do not exist ¹ outside the body. On the contrary, you have ³⁵ the same Head on ¹ whose account the eye exists as well as the hand ¹ and the foot and the rest of the ¹ parts. Why do you despise 19 the one that is appointed as [...] ¹ it desired to [...] ¹ you slandered [...] ¹ does not embrace [...] ⁵ unmixed [body ...] ¹ chosen [...] ¹² dissolve [...] ¹ of the Aeon [...] ¹ descent [...] ¹⁵ however [plucked] ¹ us from <the> [Aeons that exist in] ¹ that place. [Some] ¹ exist in the [visible] Church – ¹ those who exist in the [Church] ²⁰ of men – and [unanimously] they proclaim [to one another] the Pleroma of [their aeon]. ¹ And some exist [for death in] ¹ the Church on whose behalf [they] ²⁵ go – she for whom they are [death] – ¹ while others are for life. Therefore ¹ they [are] lovers of abundant life. And ¹ each of the rest [endures] ¹ by his own root. ³⁰ He puts forth fruit ¹ that is like him, since the roots [have] ¹ a connection with one ¹ another and their fruits are undivided, ¹ the best of each. ³⁵ They possess them, existing for them ¹ and for one another. So let us become ¹ like the roots since we are equal 20 [...] ¹ that Aeon [...] ¹ those who are not ours ¹ [...] above the [...] ⁵ grasp him [...] ¹³ since ¹ [...] your soul. He will [...] ¹⁵ we gave you to him [...]. ¹ If you purify ¹ [it, it abides in] me. If you enclose ¹ [it, it belongs to the] Devil. ¹ [Even] if you [kill] his forces that ²⁰ [are active, it will] be with you. For if ¹ [the soul] is dead, still ¹ it [was enacted upon] (by) the rulers and ¹ [authorities].

What, now, do you think ¹ [of] as spirit? Or ²⁵ [why] do they persecute men of ¹ [this] sort to death? Are ¹ they not satisfied to be with the soul ¹ and (so) seek it? ¹ For every place is [excluded] from them by ³⁰ [the] men of God so long as they ¹ exist in flesh. And when they ¹ cannot see them, since they (the men of God) live by ¹ the spirit, ¹ they tear apart what appears ³⁵ as if thus they can ¹ find them. But what is the profit for them? ¹ They are senselessly mad! They rend ¹ their surroundings! They dig the earth! 21 [...] ³ him [...] ¹ hid [...] ⁵

⁵ exists [...] ¹ purify [...] ¹⁶ however [...] ¹ after God [...] ¹ seize us [...] ²⁰ but we walk [...]. ¹ For if the sins [are many, how much] ¹ the more now is the [jealousy of the Church] ¹ of the Savior. For [each one] ¹ was capable of [both (types)] ²⁵ of transgression, [namely that of an adept] ¹ and (that of) an ordinary person. It is [still] a ¹ single [ability] that they possess. And ¹ as for us, we are adepts [at] ¹ the Word. If we sin against [it], ³⁰ we sin more than Gentiles. ¹ But if we surmount every sin, ¹ we shall receive the crown of ¹ victory, even as our Head was ¹ glorified by the Father. ³⁵

The Interpretation of Knowledge

A VALENTINIAN EXPOSITION (XI,2), with
ON THE ANOINTING, ON BAPTISM A AND B, and
ON THE EUCHARIST A AND B

Introduced by ELAINE H. PAGELS

Translated by
JOHN D. TURNER

A Valentinian Exposition expounds the origin of the creation and the process of redemption in terms of Valentinian theology, specifically in terms of the myth of Sophia. The tractate thus offers the only original Valentinian account of that myth: The Tripartite Tractate (I,5) recounts another version that features the Logos instead of Sophia.

The author begins by promising to reveal “my mystery,” and follows the account with baptismal and eucharistic prayers and benedictions. This suggests that A Valentinian Exposition offers a kind of secret catechism for candidates being initiated into gnosis. Following the revelation of the mystery, the candidate is invited to participate in anointing, baptism, and the eucharist, as Gnostic Christians understand these sacraments.

Besides relating the Sophia myth and referring to sacramental rituals, A Valentinian Exposition has a third remarkable feature: it gives firsthand evidence of theological controversies among different groups of Valentinian theologians. The heresiologists attest that gnostic teachers disagree among themselves on the interpretation of fundamental doctrines; thus A Valentinian Exposition demonstrates the truth of Tertullian’s statement that Valentinian Christians “disagree on many specific issues, even with their own founders” (Praescr. 42). Irenaeus, Hippolytus, and others mention several such issues involving the story of Sophia: the interpretation of the primordial source (in what sense is it monadic or dyadic), of Limit (what are his functions) and the passion of Sophia (what motivated it). While the church fathers sketch out various positions taken on these issues, the author of A Valentinian Exposition engages each issue, challenging certain views and advocating others.

Valentinian theologians disagreed, first of all, on the question of whether the primordial root of all is a monad or a dyad. According to Irenaeus, Valentinus himself and the followers of his student Ptolemy said that the primal source is a dyad consisting of the Father of the All and his feminine counterpart, Silence, the Mother of all things (Haer. 1.11.1). But this author insists, on the contrary, that the Father is one, singular, a monad; and that the Silence, far from being the Father's dyadic syzygy, was merely the state of tranquility in which the Father reposed in his original solitude.

Second, this author discusses the function of Limit: he himself maintains that Limit possesses four powers, while other Valentinians attribute to Limit only two of those four powers. As this author interprets the story, Limit first separated Sophia's passion from the pleroma, and so protected and confirmed the aeons against the violation her transgression incurred. Yet Limit also restrained Sophia from being absorbed into the Father, and, finally, he separated her passions from her and confirmed her as well.

A third issue of controversy among Valentinian theologians concerned the interpretation of Sophia's suffering. According to Irenaeus' account, some Valentinians said that Sophia, in transgressing her role in the pleroma, only expressed the involuntary longing of all the aeons for closer communion with the Father (Haer. 1.2.2); others said that she willfully and audaciously attempted to rise above the condition of interdependence she shared in common with all the other aeons, and dared to imitate the Father himself (Haer. 1.2.3). The author of A Valentinian Exposition apparently takes a position closer to the latter view, which indicates that Sophia willfully violated the pleromic harmony, and later repented of this as she turned back to the Father.

This text goes on to describe how Sophia, after suffering in isolation, repented and received Christ, who descended to become her divine counterpart. Their divine reunion demonstrates the Father's will that "nothing . . . happen in the pleroma apart from a syzygy" (i.e., that all beings except himself be interdependent); and shows how all things "will come to be in unity and reconciliation."

Finally, this text offers what appear to be liturgical fragments of a Valentinian celebration of baptism and the eucharist: in this respect, as in others mentioned above, the text offers a unique and valuable opportunity to investigate various forms of Valentinian thought and ritual practice.

A VALENTINIAN EXPOSITION

XI 22, 1-39, 39

[...] ¹ enter [...] ¹ the abundance [...] ⁵ those who [...] ¹⁶ I will speak] my mystery ¹ [to those who are] mine and ¹ [to those who will be mine]. Moreover it is these who ¹ [have known him who] is, the Father, that ²⁰ [is, the Root] of the All, the ¹ [Ineffable One ¹ who] dwells in the Monad. ¹ [He dwells alone] in silence, ¹ [and silence is] tranquility since, after all, ¹ [he was] a Monad and no one ²⁵ [was] before him. He dwells ¹ [in the Dyad] and in the Pair, and his ¹ Pair is Silence. And he possessed ¹ the All dwelling within ¹ him. And as for Intention and ³⁰ Persistence, Love and Permanence, ¹ they are indeed unbegotten.

God ¹ came forth: the Son, Mind of the All, ¹ that is, it is from the Root ¹ of the All that even his Thought stems, ³⁵ since he had this one (the Son) in ¹ Mind. For on behalf of the All he received ¹ an alien Thought ¹ since there was nothing before him. From ¹ that place it is he who moved 23 [...] ¹⁸ a] gushing [spring]. ¹ Now this [is the] Root [of the All] ²⁰ and Monad without any [one] ¹ before him. Now the second [spring] ¹ exists in Silence and [speaks] ¹ with him alone. And the [Fourth] ¹ accordingly is he [who] ²⁵ restricted himself [in the] ¹ Fourth: while dwelling in the ¹ Three-hundred-sixtieth, he first brought ¹ himself (forth), and in the Second [he] revealed ¹ his will [and] ³⁰ in the Fourth he spread ¹ himself [out].

While these things are ¹ due to the Root of the All, let us for our part ¹ [enter] his revelation ¹ and his goodness and his ³⁵ descent and the All, that ¹ is, the Son, the Father of the All, and ¹ the Mind of the Spirit; ¹ for he was possessing this one before 24 [...]. ¹⁸ He [is] a [spring]. ¹ He is [one] who appears ²⁰ [in Silence], and [he is] Mind of the All ¹ dwelling secondarily with ¹ [Life]. For he is the projector ¹ [of] the All and the [very] hypostasis ¹ of the Father, that is, [he is] the [Thought] ²⁵ and his descent below.

When he willed, ¹ the First Father revealed himself ¹ in him. Since, after all, because ¹ [of him] the revelation is available to the ³⁰ All, I for my part call the All ¹ "the desire of the All." And he took ¹ such a thought concerning the All — ¹ I for my part call the thought "Monogenes." ¹ For now God has brought ³⁵ Truth, the one who glorifies the Root of the ¹ All. Thus it is he who ¹ revealed himself in Monogenes, ¹ and in him ¹ he revealed the Ineffable One 25 [...] ¹⁸ the Truth. [They] ¹ saw him [dwelling] in the Monad [and] ²⁰ in the Dyad [and] in the Tetrad. [He] ¹ first brought forth [Monogenes ¹ and Limit]. And Limit [is the ¹ separator] of the All [and the confirmation ¹ of the All], since they are [...] ²⁵ the hundred [...]. ¹ He is the [Mind ...] ³⁰ the Son. [He is] completely [ineffable] ¹ to the All, and he is the confirmation ¹ and [the] hypostasis of the All, the [silent veil], ¹ the [true] High Priest, ¹ [the one who has] ³⁵ the authority to enter ¹ the Holies of Holies, revealing ¹ the glory of ¹ the Aeons and bringing forth the ¹ abundance to <fragrance>. The East 26 [...] ¹⁸ that is] in [him. He is the one who ¹ revealed himself as] the ²⁰ primal [sanctuary] and [the] treasury of ¹ [the All]. And [he] encompassed the All, ¹ [he] who is higher [than the] All. These for their part ¹ [sent] Christ [forth to ¹ establish her] just as [they] were established [before ²⁵ her] descent. [And they say ¹ concerning] him: [...] ²⁹ He is not manifest, but ¹ invisible] to [those remaining within Limit]. ¹

And he possesses four ¹ powers: a separator [and a] ¹ confirmer, a form-provider [and a ¹ substance-producer]. Surely [we alone] ³⁵ would discern ¹ their presences and the time ¹ and the places which [the] ¹ likenesses have confirmed because they have 27 [...] ¹⁸ from these [places ¹ ...] the love [...] ²⁰ is emanated [...] ¹ the] entire Pleroma [...]. ¹ The persistence [endures] ¹ always, and [...] ¹ for also [...] ²⁵ the time [...] ¹ more [...] ²⁹ that is], the proof of his [great ¹ love].

So why a ¹ [separator] and a confirmer ¹ and a substance-producer and a ¹ form-provider as others have ¹ [said]? For [they] say concerning ³⁵ [Limit] that he has two powers, [a] <separator> and ¹ [a confirmer], since it separates ¹ [Depth] from the Aeons, in order that 28 [...] ¹⁸ These, then [...] ²⁰ of [Depth ...]. ¹ For [...] is] the form [...] ¹ the Father of the [Truth ... ¹ say] that Christ [...] ¹ the Spirit [...] ²⁵ Monogenes [...] ¹ has [...]. ²⁹

[It is a great and] ¹ necessary thing for us to [seek with] ¹ more diligence and [perseverance] ¹ after the scriptures and [those who] ¹ proclaim the concepts. For about [this] ¹ the ancients say, ³⁵ “[They] were proclaimed ¹ by God.” So [let us] ¹ know his unfathomable ¹ richness! [he wanted 29 ... ¹⁸ servitude ...] ²⁰ he [did not] become ¹ [...] of their life ¹ [...] they look] steadfastly ¹ [at their book] of knowledge ¹ and [they regard ²⁵ one another’s appearance].

[That] Tetrad ¹ [projected the Tetrad ¹ which is the one consisting of] Word and [Life ¹ and Man and] Church. ¹ [Now the Uncreated One] projected ³⁰ Word and Life. Word ¹ is [for] the glory of the Ineffable One ¹ while Life is for the glory of ¹ [Silence], and Man is for his ¹ own glory while Church ³⁵ is [for] the glory of Truth. This, then, ¹ is the [Tetrad] begotten ¹ according to [the likeness] of the Uncreated (Tetrad). ¹ And [the] Tetrad is begotten 30 [...] ¹⁶ the Decad (i.e., ten)) ¹ from [Word and Life] ¹ and the Dodecad (i.e., twelve) from Man], and [Church became a] ²⁰ Triacontad (i.e., thirty). [Moreover], it is the one [from the Triacontad] ¹ of the [Aeons who bear fruit] ¹ from [the Triacontad]. ¹ [They] enter [jointly ¹ but they] come forth [singly, ²⁵ fleeing from] the Aeons [and the Uncontainable Ones. ¹ And] the Uncontainable Ones, [once they had] ¹ looked [at him, glorified Mind] ¹ since [he is an Uncontainable One that exists] ¹ in the [Pleroma].

[But ³⁰ the Decad] from ¹ Word and Life brought forth ¹ decads so as to make the Pleroma ¹ become a hundred, and ¹ the Dodecad from Man ³⁵ and Church [brought] forth and [made] ¹ the Triacontad so as to make [the three] hundred ¹ sixty become the Pleroma of the ¹ year. And the year of the Lord 31 [...] ¹⁸ perfect ...] ¹ perfect [...] ²⁰ according to [...] ²² Limit] and ¹ [...] Limit [...] ²⁷ the] greatness ¹ which [...] the ¹ [goodness [...] him. Life ³⁰ [...] suffer ¹ [...] by ¹ the face [...] in the presence of ¹ the [Pleroma [...] which he wanted ¹ [... And] he wanted ³⁵ to [leave] the Thirtieth – ¹ being [a syzygy] of Man and ¹ Church, that is, Sophia – to surpass [the Triacontad and] bring the Pleroma 32 [...] ¹⁶ his [...] ¹ but [...] and] ¹ she [...] ²² the [All [...] ²⁸ but [...] ¹ who [...] the All [...]. ³² He made [...] the thoughts ¹ and [...] the] Pleroma ¹ through the Word [...] his ³⁵ flesh. These, then, [are the Aeons that] are like ¹ them. After the [Word] entered ¹ it, just as [I] said before, ¹ also [the one who comes to be] with ¹ the Uncontainable One [brought] forth 33 [...] ¹¹ before they ¹ [...] forth [...] ¹ hide him from ¹ [...] the syzygy and ¹⁵ [...] the movement and ¹ [...] project the ¹ Christ [...] and the seeds ¹ [...] of the cross ¹ since [...] the imprints] of the nail ²⁰ wound [...] perfection. ¹ [Since it is] a perfect form ¹ [that should] ascend into ¹ [the Pleroma], he did not [at all] want ¹ [to] consent to the suffering, ²⁵ [but he was] detained ¹ [...] him by Limit, ¹ that is, by the syzygy, ¹ since her correction will ¹ not occur through anyone except ³⁰ her own Son, ¹ whose alone is the fullness ¹ of divinity. He willed ¹ within himself bodily ¹ to leave the powers and he descended. ³⁵ And these things (passions) Sophia suffered ¹ after her son ascended from ¹ her, [for] she knew ¹ that she dwelt in a 34 [...] ¹⁰ in unity] ¹ and [restoration. They were] ¹ stopped [...] ¹ the brethren [...] ¹ these. A [...] did not [...] ¹⁵ I became [...]. ¹ Who indeed [are] they? [The ...], on the one hand, ¹ stopped her [...], on the other hand, [...] ¹ with the [...] ¹ her. These [moreover are those who were] looking at me, ²⁰ these who [...] these] ¹ who considered [...] the ¹ [death]. They were stopped [...] her ¹ and she repented [and she] ¹ besought the Father of the [truth], saying, ²⁵ “Granted that I have [renounced] ¹ my consort. Therefore [I am] ¹ beyond confirmation as well. I deserve ¹ the things (passions) I suffer. ¹ I used to dwell in the Pleroma ³⁰ putting forth the Aeons and ¹ bearing fruit with my consort.” ¹ And she knew what she was ¹ and what had become of ¹ her.

So they both suffered; ³⁵ they said she laughs since she remained ¹ alone and imitated the Uncontainable ¹ One, while he said she [laughs] since ¹ she cut herself off from her consort. 35 [...] ¹⁰ Indeed [Jesus and] Sophia ¹ revealed [the creature]. Since, after all, ¹ the seeds [of] Sophia are ¹ incomplete [and] formless, ¹ Jesus [contrived] a creature of this ¹⁵ [sort] and made it of the ¹ seeds while Sophia worked with ¹ him. [For] since they are seeds ¹ and [without form], he descended ¹ [and brought] forth that ²⁰ pleroma [of aeons] which are in that ¹ place, [since even the uncreated ones of] ¹ those [Aeons are of] the pattern of the [Pleroma] ¹ and the [uncontainable] Father. ¹ The Uncreated One ²⁵ [brought forth the pattern] of the uncreated, ¹ for it is from the uncreated ¹ that the Father brings forth ¹ into form. But the creature ¹ is a shadow of pre-existing ³⁰ things. Moreover, this Jesus created ¹ the creature, and he worked ¹ from the passions ¹ surrounding the seeds. And he ¹ separated them from one another, ³⁵ and the better passions he introduced ¹ into the spirit and the worse ones ¹ into the carnal.

Now ¹ first among [all] those passions 36 [...] ⁹ nor [...] ¹ him, [since, after all], Pronoia ¹ caused [the] correction to ¹ project shadows and ¹ images of [those who] exist [from] the ¹ first and [those who] are [and] ¹⁵ those who shall be. This, [then, is] the ¹ dispensation of believing ¹ in Jesus for the sake of [him who] inscribed ¹ the All with [likenesses and] ¹ images [and shadows]. ²⁰

After Jesus brought [forth further] ¹ he brought [forth] for ¹ the All those of the Pleroma ¹ and of the syzygy, that [is, the] ¹ angels. For simultaneously with the ²⁵ [agreement] of the Pleroma ¹ her consort projected ¹ the angels, since he abides in ¹ the will of the Father. For this ¹ is the will of the Father: ³⁰ not to allow anything to happen in the ¹ Pleroma apart from a syzygy. ¹ Again, the will of the Father is: ¹ always produce ¹ and bear fruit. That she should suffer, ³⁵ then, was not the will ¹ of the Father, for she dwells ¹ in herself alone without ¹ her consort. Let us 37 [...] ⁹ another one [...] ¹ the Second [...] ¹ the son of another [...] ¹ is the Tetrad of the world. [And] ¹ that Tetrad put forth [fruit] ¹ as if the Pleroma [of the world were] ¹⁵ a Hebdomad. ¹ And [it] entered [images] ¹ and [likenesses and angels] ¹ and [archangels, divinities] ¹ and [ministers]. ²⁰

When all [these things were brought to pass ¹ by] Pronoia [...] ¹ of Jesus who [...] ¹ the seeds [...] ¹ of Monogenes [...]. ²⁵ Indeed they are [spiritual] ¹ and carnal, ¹ the heavenly and the ¹ earthly. He made them ¹ a place of this sort and ³⁰ a school of this sort for ¹ doctrine and for form. ¹

Moreover this Demiurge ¹ began to create a ¹ man according to his image on the one hand ³⁵ and on the other according to the likeness of those who ¹ exist from the first. It was this sort of ¹ dwelling place that she used ¹ for the seeds, namely 38 [...] ¹⁰ separate ¹ [...] God. When they ¹ [...] in behalf of man, ¹ [since] indeed [the Devil] is one ¹ [of] the divine beings. He removed himself ¹⁵ and seized the entire [plaza] ¹ of the gates and he ¹ [expelled] his [own] root ¹ from [that] place ¹ [in the body] and ²⁰ [carcasses of flesh], for [he is enveloped] by ¹ [the man] of God. And [Adam ¹ sowed] him. Therefore [he acquired] ¹ sons who [angered ¹ one another. And] Cain [killed] ²⁵ Abel his brother, for [the Demiurge] ¹ breathed into [them] ¹ his spirit. And there [took place] ¹ the struggle with the apostasy ¹ of the angels and mankind, ³⁰ those of the right with those of the left, ¹ those in heaven with those on earth ¹ the spirits with the carnal, ¹ and the Devil against God. ¹ Therefore the angels lusted ³⁵ after the daughters of men ¹ and came down to flesh so that ¹ God would cause a flood. ¹ And he almost ¹ regretted that he had created the world 39 [. . . ¹⁰ the consort] ¹ and [Sophia and her Son] ¹ and the angels [and the seeds]. ¹ But the syzygy is the [complete one] ¹ and Sophia and Jesus and [the angels] ¹⁵ and the seeds are [images ¹ of] the Pleroma. Moreover the Demiurge ¹ [cast a shadow over] ¹ the syzygy and [the] Pleroma, ¹ and Jesus and [Sophia] and the [angels] ²⁰ and the seeds. [The complete one ¹ glorifies] Sophia; the image ¹ [glorifies] Truth. [And] the glory [of ¹ the seeds] and Jesus [are] those of [Silence ¹ and] Monogenes. [And] ²⁵ the [angels] of the males and [the ¹ seminal ones] of the females ¹ [are] all Pleromas. ¹ Moreover whenever Sophia [receives] ¹ her consort and Jesus ³⁰ receives the Christ and the seeds ¹ and the angels, then [the] ¹ Pleroma will receive Sophia ¹ joyfully, and the All will ¹ come to be in unity and ³⁵ reconciliation. For by this ¹ the Aeons have been increased; ¹ for they knew that ¹ should they change, they are ¹ without change.

ON THE ANOINTING

XI 40, 1-29

[. . .] ⁹ according to [. . .] ¹⁰ the type of [. . .] ¹ see him. It is fitting for ¹ [you at this time] to send thy Son ¹ [Jesus] Christ and anoint ¹ us so that we might be able ¹⁵ to trample [upon] the ¹ [snakes] and [the heads] of the scorpions ¹ and [all] the power of the Devil ¹ since he is the shepherd of [the ¹ seed]. Through him we [have ²⁰ known] thee. And we [glorify] thee: ¹ [Glory] be to thee, the Father in the [Son, the ¹ Father] in the Son, the Father [in the] ¹ holy [Church and in the] ¹ holy [angels]! From ²⁵ now on he abides [forever ¹ in] the perpetuity of the Aeons, ¹ forever until the [untraceable] Aeons ¹ of the Aeons. ¹ Amen.

ON BAPTISM A

XI 40, 30-41, 38

[This] is the fullness of the summary ¹ of knowledge which (summary) ¹ was revealed to us by ¹ our Lord Jesus Christ, ¹ the Monogenes. These are the ³⁵ sure and necessary (items) ¹ so that we may walk ¹ in them. But they are ¹ those of the first baptism 41 [. . . ¹⁰ The first] ¹ baptism [is the forgiveness] ¹ of sins [. . .] ¹ <who> said, [. . .] ¹ you to the [. . .] ¹⁵ your sins the [. . . is] ¹ a pattern of the [. . .] ¹ of the Christ [which ¹ is the] equal of the [. . . within] ¹ him. [. . .] ²⁰ For the [. . .] of Jesus [. . .] ¹ Moreover, the first [baptism] ¹ is the forgiveness [of ¹ sins. We] are brought [from ¹ those] by [it ²⁵ into] those of the right, [that ¹ is], into the [imperishability ¹ which is] the Jo[r]dan. ¹ But] that place is [of] ¹ the world. So we have [been sent] ¹ out [of the world] ¹ into the Aeon. For [the] ¹ interpretation of John ¹ is the Aeon, while the interpretation ¹ of that which [is] the Jord[an] ³⁵ is the descent which is [the upward progression], ¹ that [is, our exodus] ¹ from the world [into] ¹ the Aeon.

ON BAPTISM B

XI 42, 1-43, 19

[. . . ¹⁰ from the] world ¹ [into the Jordan] and from ¹ [the blindness] of the world ¹ [into the sight of] God, from ¹ [the carnal] into the spiritual, ¹⁵ [from] the physical ¹ [into the] angelic, from ¹ [the created] into the Pleroma, ¹ [from] the world ¹ [into the Aeon], from the ²⁰ [servitudes] into sonship, ¹ [from] entanglements [into ¹ one another], from [the desert ¹ into] our village, from [the cold ¹ into] the hot, [from ²⁵ . . .] into a [. . .] ¹ and we [. . .] ¹ into the [. . . ¹ thus] we were brought [from] ¹ seminal [bodies into ³⁰ bodies] with a perfect form. ¹ [Indeed] I entered by way of example ¹ [the remnant] for which the Christ ¹ [rescued] us in the ¹ [fellowship] of his Spirit. And ³⁵ [he brought] us forth who are ¹ [in him, and] from now on the souls ¹ [will become] perfect spirits. ¹

Now [the things] granted to us ¹ [by the first] baptism 43 [. . . ¹⁵ invisible . . .] which is his, since [. . . ¹⁸ speak] about . . .]

ON THE EUCHARIST A

XI 43, 20-38

[We give] thanks [to you and we ¹ celebrate the eucharist], O Father, [remembering ¹ for the sake of] thy Son [Jesus Christ ¹ that they] come forth [...] ¹ invisible [...] ²⁶ thy [Son ...] ¹ his [love ...] ³⁰ to [knowledge ¹ ...] they are doing thy will ¹ [through the] name of Jesus Christ ¹ [and] will do thy will ¹ [now and] always. They are complete ³⁵ [in] every spiritual gift and [every] ¹ purity. [Glory] be to thee through thy Son ¹ [and] thy offspring Jesus Christ ¹ [from now] forever. Amen.

ON THE EUCHARIST B

XI 44, 1-37

[...] ¹⁴ in the ¹ [...] ¹ the [word] of the [...] ¹ the holy one it is [...] ¹⁹ food and ¹ [drink ...] Son, since you [...] ¹ food of the [...] ¹ to us the [...] ¹ in the [life ...] ²⁶ he does [not boast ¹ ...] that is [...] ¹ Church [...] ¹ you are pure [...] ³¹ thou art the Lord. [Whenever] ¹ you die purely, [you] ¹ will be pure so as to have him [...] ¹ everyone who will [guide] ³⁵ him to food and [drink]. ¹ Glory be to thee forever. ¹ Amen.

ALLOGENES (XI,3)

Introduced by

ANTOINETTE CLARK WIRE

Translated by

JOHN D. TURNER and ORVAL S. WINTERMUTE

The tractate Allogenes is a revelation discourse in which a certain Allogenes receives divine auditions and visions and records them for his "son" Messos. The fictive nature of this repeated address of Allogenes to Messos is indicated by the name Allogenes, which means "stranger," "one of another race," and often in this period designates Seth or a representative of the Sethian spiritual race. The reader is thus encouraged to identify with Messos and learn from Allogenes how to overcome the fear and ignorance Allogenes initially feels, how to meditate on each step of revealed knowledge, and ultimately how to ascend into full realization of one's spiritual self within the divine.

Although Allogenes presents itself as a single revelation discourse, it can be divided into two parts. Part One (45,1-57,23) highlights five revelations of the female diety Youel to Allogenes. Her revelations are complex mythological descriptions of the divine powers, particularly the aeon of Barbelo. Part Two (57,24-69,19) describes in more philosophical language the ascent of Allogenes as a progressive revelation by the heavenly luminaries. Its final stage, the "primary revelation of the Unknown One," reveals the transcendent God as invisible, unfathomable, incomprehensible, "the spiritual, invisible Triple Power" which is "the best of the best" and exists, paradoxically, as "the nonbeing Existence."

The differences between these two parts of Allogenes can be explained in terms of different sources being used or in terms of the one writer's purpose. Source theories try to determine where certain traditions come from and how they have already developed. The Barbelo mythology of Part One is found also in The Apocryphon of John (BG 8502,2; NHC II,1; III,1; IV,1) where it is associated with an account of how Sophia brought deficiency into the universe. Allogenes' Barbelo Gnosticism, like that of Zostrianos (VIII,1) and The Three Steles of Seth (VII,5), is not interested in how evil began but in positive revelation of divine reality. Part Two of Allogenes also parallels The Apocryphon of John to the extent of a full-page description of the transcendent God in terms of what God is not. But again it departs from this tradition in the same direction as do Zostrianos and The Three Steles of Seth by presenting this knowledge as an ascent ritual in a way parallel to Hermetic Gnosticism (Corp. Herm. I,24-26 and NHC VI,6). Apparently the author has taken both Barbelo Gnosticism and philosophical monism from the same general tradition as The Apocryphon of John and put them in sequence with certain linking passages for a single purpose.

Assuming that the reader has already been released from evil, the writer in the persona of Allogenes leads on up the heavenly path, praising the divine, into the blessing of knowledge, the vitality of life and finally the existence that is nonexistence. The ascent rituals of Hermetism refer occasionally to community life, and The Three Steles of Seth uses the first person plural to praise God at each ascent level. But here the instructions are spoken to a single person who is reading and could be meant as self-help in an individual's search for God.

This tractate has attracted wide interest because the Neoplatonist Porphyry said that Plotinus attacked certain Gnostics who "produced revelations by Zoroaster and Zostrianos and Nicotheos and Allogenes and Messos and other such people" (Vit. Plot. 16). If this quote does indeed refer to this book named Allogenes, and to documents close to it (Zostrianos VIII,1 bears a coded subtitle, "Words of Zoroaster") as many are proposing, it suggests a somewhat different relation of the Gnostics to later Platonism than is commonly assumed. Not only did Gnostics clearly borrow many philosophical themes from Platonism, but Platonists and Neoplatonists were being forced to deal with Gnostic schools as rivals to their own. And though Plotinus in his own tractate against the Gnostics does his best to ridicule their dualism, cult, and jargon, it is clearly the monistic Gnostics of the Allogenes sort who challenge him most. It is they who attribute to revelation the truths he is convinced that they have derived from Plato; it is they who believe that through self-knowledge they become superior to the heavenly bodies (Enn. II. 9.5-11). The question that remains is whether the Gnostics may not have had a reverse influence on Neoplatonism, specifically whether these gnostic texts could be the source of a certain existence-life-thought triad which is not attested in Neoplatonism before Proclus in the fifth century (Theol. 101-03).

An Alexandrian origin of the original Greek text of Allogenes not long after 300 C.E. would allow time for its Greek circulation and its Coptic translation before it was placed in the Nag Hammadi library early in the next century.

ALLOGENES

XI 45, 1-69, 20

[...] ⁶ since they are ¹ [perfect individuals and dwell] ¹ all [together, joined with] the ¹ [mind], the guardian [which I provided, ¹⁰ who] taught you (sg.). [And] it is [the power that ¹ exists] within you that often [extended itself ¹ as word] ¹ from the Triple-Powered One, [that One ¹ of] all [those] who [truly] exist ¹⁵ with the [Immeasurable One], the ¹ eternal [Light of] the Knowledge ¹ that appeared, the ¹ male virginal [Youth, ¹ the first] of the Aeons from ²⁰ [a] unique triple-[powered Aeon], ¹ [the] Triple-Powered One who ¹ [truly exists], for when [he was stilled, ¹ <he> was extended] and ¹ [when he was extended], he became [complete ²⁵ and] he received [power] from ¹ all of [them]. He knows [himself¹ and the perfect] Invisible [Spirit].¹ And he [came to be¹ in an] Aeon who knows³⁰ [that] she knows That One.¹ [And] she became Kalytpos¹ [who] acted in those whom she¹ knows.¹ He is a perfect,³⁵ invisible, noetic¹ Protophanes-Harmedon. [And] empowering¹ the individuals, she is a Triple-Male.¹ And being individually 46 [...] 6 Individual on the one hand, they are together]¹ on the other hand, [since she] is an existence of [theirs], and she [sees]¹ them all [also] truly <existing>.¹⁰ [She] contains the¹ divine Autogenes.

“When she [knew]¹ her [Existence]¹ and when she stood, [she brought]¹ This One (masc.), since he saw them [all]¹⁵ existing individually as [he]¹ is. And [when they]¹ become as he is, [they shall]¹ see the divine Triple-Male,¹ the power that is [higher than]²⁰ God. [He is] the [Thought]¹ of all these who [exist]¹ together. If he [ponders them,¹ he] ponders [the]¹ great male [...] 25 noetic Protophanes, the [procession¹ of] these. When [he]¹ sees it, [he sees¹ also those who truly exist]¹ and the procession [of those who are]³⁰ together. And when he [has seen¹ these], he has seen the [Kalyptos].¹ And if he [sees]¹ one of the hidden ones, [he]¹ sees the Aeon of Barbelo. And as for [the]³⁵ unbegotten offspring of [That One],¹ if one [sees]¹ how he [lives 47 [...] 5 you have heard about the¹ abundance of] each one¹ of them [certainly].

[But] concerning¹ the invisible, spiritual¹ Triple-Powered One, hear! [He exists] as an¹⁰ Invisible One who is incomprehensible¹ to them all. He¹ contains them all within [himself],¹ for [they] all exist because of¹ [him]. He is perfect, and he is¹⁵ [greater] than perfect, and he is¹ blessed. [He is] always [One]¹ and [he] exists¹ [in] them all, being inflexible,¹ unnameable,²⁰ [being One] who exists through¹ [them all] — he whom,¹ [should] one discern¹ [him, one would not desire] anything that¹ [exists] before him among those²⁵ [that possess] existence,¹ for [he is] the [source¹ from which they were all emitted].¹ He is prior to¹ perfection. He was prior³⁰ to every] divinity,¹ [and] he is prior [to]¹ every blessedness since he¹ provides for every power. And¹ he <is> a nonsubstantial substance,³⁵ since he is a God over whom there is no¹ divinity, the¹ transcending of whose¹ greatness and <beauty> 48 [...] 6 power. It is not impossible for them]¹ to receive a [revelation of] these things¹ if [they] come together.¹ Since it is impossible for¹⁰ the [individuals] to comprehend the Universal One¹ [situated in the] place that is higher than perfect,¹ they apprehend by means of¹ a First [Thought] —¹ (it is) not as Being (alone), [but]¹⁵ it is along with the¹ latency of Existence that he confers Being. He [provides]¹ everything for [himself] since it is ¹ he who shall come to be when he ¹ recognizes himself]. And he is [One] ²⁰ who subsists as a [cause]¹ and source [of Being] and [an] ¹ immaterial [material and an] ¹ innumerable [number and a formless] ¹ form and a [shapeless] ²⁵ shape and [a powerlessness and ¹ a power and an insubstantial ¹ substance and a motionless motion and an inactive ¹ activity. [Yet he is ³⁰ a] provider of [provisions ¹ and] a divinity [of] ¹ divinity – but whenever ¹ they apprehend, they participate ¹ the first Vitality and ³⁵ an undivided activity, ¹ an hypostasis of the First One ¹ from the One who truly exists. ¹ And a second 49 activity [...] ¹ however, is the [...]. ⁵ He is endowed with ¹ blessedness] and ¹ goodness, because [when he is] ¹ recognized [as the] traverser ¹ of the boundlessness of the ¹⁰ Invisible Spirit [that ¹ subsists] in him, it (the boundlessness) turns him to [it (the Invisible Spirit) ¹ in] order that it might know what is ¹ within him and ¹ how he exists. And ¹⁵ he was becoming salvation for ¹ every one by being a ¹ point of departure for those who truly exist, ¹ for through him ¹ his knowledge endured, ²⁰ since he is the one who knows what ¹ he is. But they brought forth nothing ¹ beyond themselves, neither ¹ power nor rank nor ¹ glory nor aeon, ²⁵ for they are all ¹ eternal. He is Vitality and ¹ Mentality and That-Which-Is. ¹ For then That'-Which-Is constantly possesses its ³⁰ Vitality and Mentality, ¹ and {Life has} ¹ Vitality possesses ¹ {non}-Being and ¹ Mentality. Mentality ³⁵ possesses Life and That-Which-Is. ¹ And the three are one, ¹ although individually they are three.

Now after ¹ I heard these things, my son 50 [Messos, I was] afraid, and ¹ [I turned toward the] multitude ¹ [...] thought [...] ⁶ gives] power to [those who] are capable of knowing ¹ these things [by] a revelation ¹ that is much [greater]. And I ¹ was capable], although flesh was ¹⁰ upon [me. I] heard from you about these things ¹ and about the doctrine ¹ that is in them since the thought ¹ which is in me distinguished [the things that are] ¹ beyond measure as well as the unknowables. ¹⁵ Therefore I fear that ¹ my doctrine may have become ¹ something beyond what is fitting.

And ¹ then, my ¹ son Messos, the all-glorious One, ²⁰ Youel, spoke to me again. She made a revelation ¹ to me and said, “No ¹ one is able to hear [these things] ¹ except the great powers alone, ¹ O Allogenes. ²⁵ A great power was put upon you, which ¹ the Father ¹ of the All, the Eternal, put upon you ¹ before you came to this place, in order that ¹ those things that are difficult to distinguish ³⁰ you might distinguish and those things ¹ that are unknown to ¹ the multitude you might know, ¹ and that you might escape (in safety) ¹ to the One who is yours, who ³⁵ was first to save and ¹ who does not need to be saved. 51 [. . . ⁶ to] you [a] ¹ form [and a revelation of] ¹ the invisible, spiritual Triple-Powered One ¹ outside of which [dwells] ¹⁰ an undivided, incorporeal, ¹ [eternal] knowledge. ¹

“As with all the Aeons, ¹ the Aeon of Barbelo exists, ¹ also endowed with the types ¹⁵ and forms of those who truly ¹ exist, the image of ¹ Kalyptos. And endowed ¹ with the intellectual Word of ¹ these, he bears the ²⁰ noetic male Protophanes like ¹ an image, and he acts ¹ within the individuals either with ¹ craft or with skill ¹ or with partial instinct. ²⁵ He is endowed with the ¹ divine Autogenes like ¹ an image, and he knows ¹ each one of these. He ¹ acts separately and ³⁰ individually, continuing to rectify ¹ the failures ¹ from nature. He is endowed with ¹ the divine Triple-Male ¹ as salvation for them all ³⁵ (and) in cooperation with the Invisible Spirit. ¹ He is a word from a ¹ counsel, <he> is the perfect Youth. ¹ And this hypostatis is a 52 [. . .].

[. . . ⁷ my soul went slack] and ¹ I fled [and was] very disturbed. ¹ And [I] turned to myself ¹⁰ [and] saw the light ¹ that [surrounded] me and the ¹ Good that was in me, I became divine. ¹

And ¹ the all-glorious One, Youel, anointed me again ¹⁵ and she gave power to me. She said, “Since ¹ your instruction has become complete ¹ and you have known the Good that is within you, ¹ hear concerning ¹ the Triple-Powered One those things that you will ²⁰ guard in great ¹ silence and great mystery, ¹ because they are not spoken to ¹ anyone except those who are worthy, ¹ those who are able ²⁵ to hear; nor is it fitting ¹ to speak to an ¹ uninstructed generation concerning ¹ the Universal One that is higher than perfect. ¹ But you have <these> because of ³⁰ the Triple-Powered One, the One who exists ¹ in blessedness ¹ and goodness, the One ¹ who is responsible for all these. ¹

“There exists within him ³⁵ much greatness. ¹ Inasmuch as he is One in a 53 [. . .] ⁶ of the [First Thought, which] ¹ does not fall away [from those who dwell] ¹ in comprehension [and knowledge] ¹ and [understanding. And] ¹⁰ That One moved motionlessly ¹ in that which ¹ governs, lest he sink ¹ into the boundless by means of ¹ another activity of ¹⁵ Mentality. And he entered ¹ into himself and he appeared, ¹ being all-encompassing, ¹ the Universal One that is higher than perfect. ¹

“Indeed it is not through me ²⁰ that he is to such a degree anterior to knowledge. ¹ Whereas there is no possibility for complete ¹ comprehension, he is (nevertheless) known. ¹ And this is so because of the ¹ third silence of Mentality ²⁵ and the second ¹ undivided activity which appeared ¹ in the First Thought, ¹ that is, the Aeon of Barbelo, ¹ together with the Indivisible One of ³⁰ the divisible likenesses and the Triple-¹ Powered One and the non-substantial Existence.” ¹

〈And〉 the power ¹ appeared by means of an activity ¹ that is at rest ³⁵ and silent, although it uttered ¹ a sound thus: zza ¹ zza zza. But when she heard ¹ the power and she was filled 54 [...] ⁶ thou art ¹ [...] Solmis! ¹ [...] according to the Vitality, ¹ [that is thine, and] the first activity ¹⁰ which derives from ¹ divinity: Thou art great, ¹ Armedon! Thou art perfect, ¹ Epiphaneus!

“And according to ¹ that activity of thine, the second power ¹⁵ and the Mentality ¹ which derives from blessedness: ¹ Autoer, Beritheus, ¹ Erigenaor, Orimenios, Aramen, ¹ Alphleges, Elelioupheus, ²⁰ Lalameus, Yetheus, Noetheus! ¹ Thou art great! He who knows [thee] ¹ knows the Universal One! Thou art One, ¹ thou art One, He who is good, Aphredon! ¹ Thou art the Aeon of ²⁵ Aeons, He who is perpetually!” ¹

Then she praised ¹ the Universal One, saying, ¹ “Lalameus, Noetheus, Senaon, ¹ Asine[us, . . .]riphanios, ³⁰ Mellephaneus, Elemaoni, ¹ Smoun, Optaon, He Who ¹ Is! Thou art He Who Is, ¹ the Aeon of Aeons, the ¹ Unbegotten, who art higher than the unbegotten (ones), ³⁵ Yatomenos, thou alone ¹ for whom all the unborn ones were begotten, ¹ the Unnameable One! 55 [...] ¹¹ knowledge.” ¹

[Now after I] heard these things, I ¹ [saw the glories of the perfect] individuals ¹ [and] the all-perfect ones ¹⁵ [who exist] together, and the ¹ [all-perfect ones who] are before the perfect ¹ ones.

[Again the greatly] glorious One, ¹ Youel, said to me, ¹ “[O Allogenes], in an ²⁰ [unknowing knowledge] you know that the ¹ [Triple-Powered One] exists before ¹ [the glories]. They do not exist ¹ [among those who exist]. They do not exist ¹ [together] with those who exist ²⁵ [nor (with) those who] truly exist. ¹ [Rather all these] exist ¹ [as divinity] and ¹ [blessedness and] existence, ¹ [and as] nonsubstantiality and ³⁰ non-being [existence].” ¹

[And then I] prayed that ¹ [the revelation] might occur to me. ¹ [And then ¹ the all-[glorious One], Youel, said to me, ³⁵ “[O Allogenes], of course, ¹ [the Triple-] Male ¹ [is something beyond] substance. ¹ Yet [were he insubstantial 56 . . .] ¹⁰ those who exist [in association] ¹ with the [generation of those] ¹ who [truly] exist. ¹ [The self-begotten ones exist] ¹ with the [Triple-Male]. ¹⁵

“If you [seek with a ¹ perfect] seeking, [then] ¹ you shall know [the Good that is] ¹ in you; then [you will know yourself] ¹ as well, (as) one who [derives from] ²⁰ the God [who truly pre-exists]. ¹ [For] after [a hundred] ¹ years there shall [come to you] ¹ a revelation [of That One] ¹ by means of [Salamex] ²⁵ and Semen [and . . . the] ¹ Luminaries [of the Aeon of] ¹ Barbelo. And [that beyond what] ¹ is fitting for you, [you shall not know] ¹ at first, so as not [to forfeit your] ³⁰ kind. [And if so], ¹ then when [you receive] ¹ a conception [of That One, then ¹ you] are filled [with] ¹ the word [to completion]. ³⁵ Then [you become divine] ¹ and [you become perfect. You receive] ¹ them [...] ⁵⁷ the seeking [...] ¹ the Existence [...] ¹ if it [apprehends] ¹ anything, it is [apprehended by] ¹ that one and by ¹⁰ the very one who is comprehended. ¹ And then he ¹ becomes greater ¹ who comprehends and knows than ¹ he who is comprehended and ¹⁵ known. But if ¹ he descends to his nature, ¹ he is less, for the ¹ incorporeal natures have not associated with ¹ any magnitude; having ²⁰ this power, they are everywhere ¹ and they are nowhere, ¹ since they are greater than every magnitude, ¹ and less than every exiguity.” ¹

Now after ²⁵ the all-glorious One, Youel, said these things, ¹ she separated from me and left ¹ me. But I did not despair ¹ of the words that I heard. ¹ I prepared myself ³⁰ therein and I deliberated ¹ with myself for a hundred years. ¹ And I rejoiced exceedingly, ¹ since I was in a great ¹ light and a blessed path ³⁵ because those whom I was ¹ worthy to see as well ¹ as those whom I was worthy to hear ¹ (are) those whom it is fitting ¹ that the great powers alone ⁵⁸ [...] ⁶ of [God]. ¹

[When ¹ the completion of] the one hundred years [drew nigh, ¹ it brought] me a blessedness ¹⁰ of the eternal hope ¹ full of auspiciousness. ¹ I saw the good divine Autogenes; ¹ and the Savior ¹ who is the ¹⁵ youthful, perfect Triple-Male Child; and his ¹ goodness, the ¹ noetic perfect Protophanes-Harmedon; ¹ and the blessedness ¹ of the Kalyp-tos; and the ²⁰ primary origin of the blessedness, ¹ the Aeon of Barbelo ¹ full of divinity; ¹ and the primary origin of ¹ the one without origin, the ²⁵ spiritual, invisible Triple-Powered ¹ One, the Universal One that ¹ is higher than perfect.

When (I) was taken by the ¹ eternal Light out of ¹ the garment that was upon ³⁰ me, and taken up to ¹ a holy place whose ¹ likeness can not be ¹ revealed in the world, ¹ then by means of a ³⁵ great blessedness I ¹ saw all those about whom I had ¹ heard. And I ¹ praised all of them and I ⁵⁹ [stood] upon my knowledge and [I ¹ inclined to] the knowledge [of] ¹ the Universals, the Aeon of Barbelo. ¹

And I saw [holy] powers ⁵ by means of the [Luminaries] ¹ of the virginal male Barbelo ¹ [telling me ¹ that] I would be able to test what ¹ happens in the world: “O ¹⁰ Allogenes, behold your blessedness ¹ how it silently abides, ¹ by which you know ¹ your proper self and, ¹ seeking yourself, withdraw to the Vitality ¹⁵ that you will ¹ see moving. And although it is ¹ impossible for you to stand, fear ¹ nothing; but if you ¹ wish to stand, withdraw ²⁰ to the Existence, and you will ¹ find it standing and ¹ at rest after the likeness of the One ¹ who is truly at rest ¹ and embraces all these ²⁵ silently and ¹ inactively. And when you receive ¹ a revelation of him by ¹ means of a primary revelation ¹ of the Unknown One – ³⁰ the One whom if you should ¹ know him, be ignorant ¹ of him – and you become ¹ afraid in that place, ¹ withdraw to the rear because of the ³⁵ activities. And when you become ¹ perfect in that place, ¹ still yourself. And ¹ in accordance with the pattern that indwells ¹ you, know likewise 60 [that] it is this way in [all such (matters)] ¹ after this (very) pattern. And ¹ [do not] further dissipate, [so that] ¹ you may be able to stand, ⁵ and do not desire to [be active] ¹ lest you fall [in any way] ¹ from the inactivity in [you] ¹ of the Unknown One. Do not ¹ [know] him, for it is impossible; ¹⁰ but if by means of an ¹ enlightened thought you should know ¹ him, be ignorant of him.” ¹

Now I was listening to these things as ¹ those ones spoke them. There ¹⁵ was within me a stillness ¹ of silence, and I heard the ¹ Blessedness ¹ whereby I knew <my> proper self. ¹

And I withdrew to the ²⁰ Vitality as I sought <myself>, and ¹ I joined into it, ¹ and I stood, ¹ not firmly but ¹ silently. And I saw ²⁵ an eternal, intellectual, undivided motion ¹ that pertains to all the ¹ formless powers, (which is) unlimited ¹ by limitation.

And when ¹ I wanted to stand firmly, ³⁰ I withdrew to ¹ the Existence, which I found ¹ standing and at rest ¹ like an image and ¹ likeness of what is conferred upon ³⁵ me by a revelation ¹ of the Indivisible One and the One who ¹ is at rest. I was filled ¹ with revelation by means ¹ of a primary revelation 61 of the Unknowable One. [As though] ¹ I were ignorant of him, I [knew] ¹ him and I received power [by] ¹ him. Having been permanently strengthened ⁵ I knew the One who ¹ exists in me and the Triple-Powered One ¹ and the revelation of ¹ his uncontainableness. [And] ¹ by means of a primary ¹⁰ revelation of the First One (who is) unknowable ¹ to them all, the God ¹ who is beyond perfection, I ¹ saw him and the Triple-Powered One that exists ¹ in them all. I was seeking ¹⁵ the ineffable ¹ and Unknowable God – ¹ whom if one should ¹ know him, he would be absolutely ¹ ignorant of him – the Mediator of ²⁰ the Triple-Powered One who subsists in ¹ stillness and silence and is ¹ unknowable.

And when I was confirmed ¹ in these matters, ¹ the powers of the Luminaries said to me,²⁵ "Cease hindering the inactivity¹ that exists in you¹ by seeking¹ incomprehensible matters; rather hear¹ about him in so far as it is³⁰ possible by means of a primary¹ revelation and a revelation.¹

"Now he is¹ something insofar as he exists in that he either¹ exists and will become,³⁵ or acts or knows, although he lives¹ without Mind¹ or Life or Existence¹ or Non-Existence,¹ incomprehensibly. 62 And he is something along with¹ his proper being.¹ He is not left over in¹ some way, as if he yields⁵ something that is assayed or purified [or that]¹ receives or gives. And he is not¹ diminished in any way,¹ [whether] by his own desire¹ or whether he gives or receives through¹⁰ another. Neither does [he] have¹ any desire of himself¹ nor from another;¹ it does not affect him.¹ Rather neither does he give¹⁵ anything by himself¹ lest he become diminished¹ in another respect;¹ nor for this reason does he need.¹ Mind, or Life, or²⁰ indeed anything at all. He is superior to the¹ Universals in his privation¹ and unknowability,¹ that is, the non-being existence,¹ since he is endowed with²⁵ silence and stillness lest¹ he be diminished by¹ those who are not diminished.¹

"He is neither divinity¹ nor blessedness³⁰ nor perfection. Rather¹ it (this triad) is an unknowable entity of him,¹ not that which is proper to him; rather¹ he is another one¹ superior to the blessedness and³⁵ the divinity and¹ perfection. For he is not¹ perfect but he is another thing 63 that is superior. He is neither¹ boundless, nor¹ is he bounded by¹ another. Rather he is something [superior].⁵ He is not corporeal.¹ He is not incorporeal.¹ He is not great. [He is not] small.¹ He is not a number. He is not a [creature].¹ Nor is he something¹⁰ that exists, that¹ one can know. But¹ he is something else of himself that is superior, which¹ one cannot know.¹

"He is primary revelation¹⁵ and knowledge of himself,¹ as it is he alone who knows himself.¹ Since he is not one of those¹ that exist but is another thing,¹ he is superior to (all) superlatives²⁰ even in comparison to (both) what is (properly) his and¹ not his. He neither participates in¹ age nor¹ does he participate in time.¹ He does not receive anything from anything²⁵ else. He is not diminishable,¹ nor does he diminish¹ anything, nor is he undiminishable.¹ But he is¹ self-comprehending, as something³⁰ so unknowable¹ that he exceeds those who excel¹ in unknowability.¹

"He is endowed with blessedness¹ and perfection³⁵ and silence – not <the blessedness>¹ nor the perfection –¹ and stillness. Rather¹ it (these attributes) is an entity of him that exists,¹ which one cannot 64

[know], and which is at rest. ¹ Rather they are entities ¹ of him unknowable to them ¹ all.

“And he is much higher in ⁵ beauty than all those ¹ [that] are good, and he is thus ¹ unknowable to all of them ¹ in every respect. And ¹ through them all he is ¹⁰ in them all, not ¹ only as the unknowable knowledge ¹ that is proper to him. And ¹ he is united with the ¹ ignorance that sees him. Whether <one sees> ¹⁵ in what way he is unknowable, ¹ or sees ¹ him as he is ¹ in every respect, or ¹ would say that ²⁰ he is something like ¹ knowledge, he has sinned against him, ¹ being liable to judgment because he did not ¹ know God. He will not ¹ be judged by ²⁵ That One who ¹ is neither concerned for anything nor ¹ has any desire, ¹ but it (judgment) <is> from ¹ himself because he did not find the origin ³⁰ that truly exists. He was blind ¹ apart from the eye ¹ of revelation that is at rest, ¹ the (one) that is activated, ¹ the (one) from the Triple- ³⁵ Power of the First Thought ¹ of the Invisible Spirit. ¹ This one thus exists from 65 [...] ¹⁶ something [...] set firmly on the [...] a] ¹ beauty and a [first emergence] ¹ of stillness and silence ²⁰ and tranquility and ¹ unfathomable greatness. When he appeared, ¹ he did not need ¹ time nor <did he partake> of eternity. ¹ Rather of ²⁵ himself he is unfathomably ¹ unfathomable. He does not activate ¹ himself so as to become ¹ still. He is not an ¹ existence lest he ³⁰ be in want. Spatially he is corporeal, ¹ while properly he is incorporeal. ¹ He has ¹ non-being existence. ¹ He exists for all of them unto himself ³⁵ without any desire. ¹ But he is a greater summit ¹ of greatness. And he is ¹ higher than his stillness in order that 66 [...] ¹⁶ he] saw [them] ¹ and [empowered them all], although they do not ¹ concern [themselves] with That One at ¹ all, nor, if one should ²⁰ receive from him, does he receive power. ¹ Nothing activates him in accordance with ¹ the Unity that is at rest. ¹ For he is unknowable; ¹ he is an airless place of ²⁵ the boundlessness. Since ¹ he is boundless and powerless ¹ and nonexistent, he was not giving ¹ Being. Rather he contains ¹ all of these in himself, being at rest ³⁰ (and) standing out of ¹ the one who stands ¹ continually, since there had appeared ¹ an Eternal Life, the ¹ Invisible and Triple-Powered Spirit ³⁵ which is in all of these ¹ who exist. And it surrounds ¹ them all, being higher than ¹ them all. A shadow 67 [...] ¹⁷ he [was filled with power. And ¹ he] stood [before them], ¹ empowering them all, and he filled ²⁰ them all.”

And ¹ concerning all of these (things) you have heard ¹ certainly. And do not ¹ seek anything more, ¹ but go. ²⁵ We do not know whether ¹ the Unknowable One has ¹ angels or ¹ gods, or whether the One who is at rest ¹ was containing ³⁰ anything within himself except ¹ the stillness, which is he, ¹ lest he be diminished. ¹ It is not fitting to ¹ spend more ³⁵ time seeking. It was ¹ appropriate that you (pl.) <alone> know ¹ and that they speak ¹ with another one. But you will receive them 68 [. . . ⁶ and he said to me], “Write down ¹ [the things that I] shall [tell] you and ¹ of which I shall remind you for the sake of ¹ those who will be worthy ²⁰ after you. And you will leave ¹ this book upon a mountain ¹ and you will adjure the guardian: ¹ ‘Come Dreadful One.’” ¹

And after he said these (things), he separated ²⁵ from me. But I was full ¹ of joy, and I wrote ¹ this book which was appointed ¹ for me, my son Messos, in order ¹ that I might disclose to you the (things) ³⁰ that were proclaimed before me in ¹ my presence. And at first I received ¹ them in great silence and ¹ I stood by myself, preparing ¹ myself. These are the things that ³⁵ were disclosed to me, O my son 69 [Messos . . . ¹⁴ proclaim ¹ them, O my] ¹ son [Messos, as the] ¹ seal [for] all [the ¹ books of] ¹ Allogenes. ²⁰

Allogenes

HYP SIPHRONE (XI,4)

Introduced and translated by

JOHN D. TURNER

Hypsiphron, which means “high-minded one” or perhaps “she of exalted thought,” is the fourth and last treatise of Codex XI of the Coptic library from Nag Hammadi. It presently consists of four large and two small fragments containing the lower portions of the inner and outer margins of two papyrus leaves, which must have originally contained the entirety of this short treatise. It is written in the same script as the much longer and better preserved treatise of that Codex, Allogenes, although there is no discernible further relationship beyond these two treatises. Hypsiphron is written in an apparently standard Sahidic Coptic dialect, unlike the other treatises of Codex XI. It bears the superscript title “Hyp-siph[rone],” the remainder of the title being restored from other occurrences within the treatise; since the conclusion of the treatise is not extant, it may or may not have borne a subscript title.

Apart from the poor condition of the treatise, even its cryptic title affords little insight into its content. The incipit “The book (or scroll) [concerning the things] that were seen [by] Hypsiphron being [revealed] in the place of [her] virginity” adds little more. Although there is mentioned a plurality of persons speaking with one another, the treatise does not appear to be a dialogue. Instead, the whole is presented as a speech of Hypsiphron who reports the receipt of certain revelations during her descent from the “place of her virginity” into the world. The only figure mentioned by Hypsiphron is one Phainops, “he of the gleaming eye,” who apparently presides over a fount of blood into which he breathes, and which seems to produce a fiery effect.

One may conjecture that Hypsiphron represents some form of the personified thought of a high deity who leaves her dwelling in the transcendental realm, where there are no distinctions of gender, to descend to the earthly realm at the time of the creation of humankind. There she encounters Phainops, probably in the act of creating humankind, who apparently produces “a [man in the likeness] of blood” from his fiery fount of blood.

In spite of the paucity of text, what remains seems to have some affinity with the group of gnostic texts generally designated as Sethian. To judge from the name Hypsiphron, one may have to do here with the Sethian figure of Eleleth, called Phronesis in Hyp. Arch. (93,8-97,21), one of the traditional Sethian Four Illuminators, whose name might be derived from Aramaic ʿillith, “the tall one,” which could be rendered by Greek hypsiphron.

The fount of blood may refer to the heavenly Adamas or heavenly archetype of Adam, described in Orig. World (108,2-31) as the “enlightened bloody one” (based on the Hebrew pun on ʾadam, “man,” and dam, “blood”). In this case, Hypsiphron would be the Illuminator Eleleth, who in some Sethian texts is regarded as the abode of Sophia and certain “repentant souls” and in others (Trim. Prot., Gos. Eg.) is held responsible for the act usually ascribed to Sophia: that of producing the demiurge Yaldabaoth. Eleleth/Hypsiphron would also be responsible for the projection below of Adamas, the image of God after whom the earthly Adam is modeled. In any case, Hypsiphron is certainly a figure similar to that of the descending and restored Sophia. Phainops, "radiant-faced one," might then be a name for either the enlightened archetypal Adamas, or, since he seems to be distinguished from the "fount of blood," for the fiery angel Sabbaoth, the brother of the evil demiurge produced by the breath of Zoe, Pistis Sophia's daughter, in an effort to imprison the demiurge (Hyp. Arch. 95,5-96,4). Thus, although it bears no trace of the traditional Sethian names for these figures, Hypsiphron may in fact be very closely related to the other Sethian texts.

HYPHSIPHRONE

XI 69, 21-72, 33

Hypsiphron¹

The book [concerning the things] that were¹ seen [by] Hypsiphron¹ being [revealed] in²⁵ the place of [her] virginity.¹ [And she listens] to¹ her brethren [...] Phainops¹ and [...] and¹ they speak [with one another]³⁰ in a [mystery].

Now I¹ [was first by individual] ranking [...] 70¹⁴ I came [forth¹⁵ to the place] of my [virginity]¹ and I went down¹ to the [world. Then I] was told¹ [about] them (by) those who abide¹ in [the place] of my [virginity].²⁰

And I went¹ down [to the world] and they said¹ to [me, "Again] Hypsiphron¹ [has withdrawn] outside¹ the [place of her] virginity."²⁵ Then the one [who] heard,¹ Phainops, [who breathes] into¹ [her fount of] blood, spread [out]¹ for her.

[And] he said,¹ ["I am Phainops [...] 71¹⁸ err [...] 20 desire [...] the number]¹ of just the [human] remnants¹ or that I may see a [man, the blood-likeness¹ or [...] 25 of a [...] fire] and a [...] in] his¹ hands.

Then [as for me, I said¹ to] him, ["Phainops] has not [come] upon¹ me; he [has not]³⁰ gone astray. [...] see] a¹ man [...] him [...] 72¹⁸ For [...] which he¹ said [...] Phainops²⁰ this [...].

I saw him¹ and [he said] to me, "Hypsiphron,¹ [why do you dwell] outside me?¹ [Follow me] and I will¹ tell [you about them]." So I²⁵ followed [him], for [I] was¹ in [great] fear. And¹ he [told me] about a fount of [blood]¹ that is [revealed by] setting afire¹ [...] he said [...].

THE SENTENCES OF SEXTUS (XII,1)

Introduced and translated by

FREDERIK WISSE

Before the discovery of the fragments of the Coptic version in Nag Hammadi Codex XII, The Sentences of Sextus were known through Latin, Syriac, Armenian, and Georgian translations, as well as through two manuscripts in the original Greek. Apart from some patristic quotations, the Coptic version is by far the oldest witness to this collection of wisdom sayings. It appears to be a faithful and consistent translation from the Greek, and it stands closer to the critical text provided by Henry Chadwick (The Sentences of Sextus; A Contribution to the History of Early Christian Ethics, Texts and Studies 5, Cambridge: The University Press, 1959) than the two Greek witnesses and the other versions. As such it is of considerable value for the study of the text and of the character of the document.

Of the approximately thirty-nine original pages of the tractate, ten survive. This assumes that the Coptic version did not contain more than the 451 sentences included in the Latin translation of Rufinus. The numeration of the sentences follows Chadwick's edition.

Though most of the sentences are of non-Christian origin, they enjoyed considerable popularity in Christian circles. Their presence among the Nag Hammadi tractates is not surprising. They share an ascetic outlook with many other writings in the collection. Indeed, the overwhelmingly ascetic tone of the entire Nag Hammadi library may indicate that the compilers and users of these books were part of the early monastic movement in Egypt. For a discussion of the moral teaching of Sextus, the reader is referred to Chadwick's edition.

THE SENTENCES OF SEXTUS

XII 15, 1-16, 28; 27, 1-34, 28

(157) is [a sign] of ignorance. ¹

(158/159) [Love] the truth, and the lie ¹ [use] like poison. ¹

(160) [May] the right time precede your words. ⁵

(161/162) [Speak] when it is not proper ¹ [to be silent], but [speak concerning] the things you know ¹ (only) then [when] it is fitting. ¹

(163a) [The] untimely [word ¹ is characteristic] of an evil mind. ¹⁰

(163b) [When it is] proper to act, do not ¹ [use a] word.

(164a) Do not wish ¹ [to speak] first in the midst of ¹ [a crowd].

(164b) [While it is] a skill ¹ [to speak], it is also [a] skill ¹⁵ [to be silent].

(165a) It is [better] for you to be defeated ¹ [while speaking the truth], than to be victorious ¹ [through deceit].

(165b) [He] who is victorious through ¹ [deceit] is [defeated] by the truth. ¹

(165c) [Untrue words] are ²⁰ [characteristic of] evil persons.

(165d) [There has to be] a great [crisis ¹ before] the lie [is necessary]. ¹

(165e) [When there is] someone, while you speak ¹ [the truth], even if ¹ [you lie there is no sin].

(165f) Do not deceive ²⁵ [anyone, especially] him who needs ¹ [advice].

(165g) [If you speak] after ¹ [many (others) you will see better] what is profitable. ¹

(166) [Faithful] is he who is first with ¹ all [good works]. 16

(167) Wisdom leads [the soul] ¹ to the place of [God].

(168) [There is no] ¹ kinsman of the [truth except] ¹ wisdom.

(169) [It is not] possible for a [believing] ⁵ nature to [become fond of] ¹ lying.

(170) A fearful [and slavish] nature ¹ will [not] be able to partake in ¹ faith.

(171a) When you are [faithful, what] ¹ it is fitting to say [is not of greater value than] ¹⁰ the hearing.

(171b) When you [are] ¹ with believing persons, desire [to listen rather than] ¹ to speak.

(172) A pleasure-[loving] man ¹ is useless [in everything]. ¹

(173) When there is no [(accounting of) sin, do not speak] ¹⁵ in anything (which is) from [God].

(174) [The] sins ¹ of those who are [ignorant are] ¹ the shame of those who have [taught them]. ¹

(175) Those on account of whom [the name of God] is blasphemed ¹ [are dead] ²⁰ before God.

(176) [A wise man ¹ is] a doer of good works after ¹ God.

(177) [May your life] ¹ confirm [your words before those who] ¹ hear.

(178) What it is [not right to do], ²⁵ do not even consider [doing it].

(179) [What you do not] ¹ want to [happen to you, do not do it] ¹ yourself [either].

(180) [What] ¹ it [is] shameful [to do, is also] (pp. 17-26 are missing) 27

(307/308) He is [a wise man who commends ¹ God] to men, ¹ [and God] thinks more highly of ¹ the wise man than his own [works]. ⁵

(309) [After] God, no one is as free ¹ as the wise man. ¹

(310) [Everything] God possesses ¹ the wise man has also.

(311/312) The ¹ wise man shares in the ¹⁰ [kingdom] of God; an evil man ¹ does not want the foreknowledge ¹ of God to come to pass.

(313) An evil soul ¹ flees from God. ¹

(314) Everything bad ¹⁵ is the enemy of God.

(315) What thinks ¹ in you, say with your mind ¹ that it is man.

(316) Where ¹ your thought is, ¹ there is your ²⁰ goodness.

(317) Do not seek goodness ¹ in flesh.

(318) He who does [not] harm ¹ the soul neither does (so) to ¹ man.

(319) After God, ¹ honor a [wise] man, ²⁵ [since he] is the servant ¹ [of God].

(320) [To make] the body of your ¹ [soul] a burden ¹ is [pride], but to be able to ¹ [restrain] it 28 [gently] when [it is necessary ¹ is] blessedness.

(321) [Do not become] ¹ guilty [of] your own death. ¹ Do not be [angry at him] who will take you [out of] ⁵ (the) body and kill you. ¹

(322) If someone brings [the wise man] ¹ out of the body wickedly, ¹ he rather [does what is] ¹ good for him, [for] he has been released ¹⁰ from bonds.

(323) The fear of [death] ¹ grieves man because of ¹ the ignorance of the soul.

(324) <It were better> ¹ for you had [the] man-killing sword ¹ not come into being; but when it comes, ¹⁵ say with your mind that it does ¹ not exist.

(325/326a) Someone who says, "I ¹ believe," even if he spends a long ¹ time pretending, ¹ he will not prevail, but he will ²⁰ fall; as ¹ your heart is, (so) will be ¹ your life.

(326b) A godly heart ¹ produces a blessed life. ¹

(327) He who will plot ²⁵ evil against another, [he is] ¹ the first [. . .]. ¹

(328) [Let not] an ungrateful man ¹ cause you to cease to do [good]. 29

(329) [Do not say with] your mind that [these ¹ things] which were asked, (and) ¹ [you] gave immediately, are more valuable than ¹ [the] receiver.

(330) You will use ⁵ [great] property, if you give to the ¹ [needy] willingly. ¹

(331) Persuade a senseless brother ¹ [not to] be senseless; if he is mad, ¹ protect him.

(332/334) Strive eagerly ¹⁰ to be victorious over every man in ¹ prudence; maintain self-sufficiency. ¹

(333) You cannot receive understanding unless ¹ you know first that you possess <it>. ¹ In everything there is again this sentence.

(335) The ¹⁵ members of the body are a burden ¹ to those who do not use them. ¹

(336) It is better to serve ¹ others than to make others ¹ serve you.

(337) He whom God ²⁰ will not bring out of (the) body, ¹ let him not burden himself. ¹

(338) Not only do not hold an opinion ¹ which does not benefit the needy, ¹ [but also do not] listen to it.

(339) He who gives ²⁵ [something without] respect commits an outrage. ¹ [...].

(340) If you take on the ¹ [guardianship of] orphans, you will be ¹ [the] father of many children (and) you will be 30 beloved of God.

(341) He [whom you serve] ¹ because of [honor, you have] ¹ served for a wage.

(342) If you [have given] ¹ that which honors you ... , [you have] ⁵ given not to man, but [you have given] ¹ for your own pleasure.

(343/344) Do not [provoke] ¹ the anger of a mob. [Know, then], ¹ what is fitting for the fortunate man to [do]. ¹

(345) It is better to die [than] ¹⁰ to darken the soul because of [the] ¹ immoderation of the belly.

(346) Say with [your] ¹ mind that the body [is] the garment of ¹ your soul; keep it, therefore, ¹ pure since it is innocent.

(347) Whatever the soul ¹⁵ will do while it is in (the) body, it has ¹ as witnesses when it goes into ¹ judgment.

(348/349) Unclean demons ¹ do lay claim to a ¹ polluted soul; a faithful (and) ²⁰ good soul evil demons ¹ will not be able to hinder in the ¹ way of God.

(350) Do not give the word of ¹ God to everyone.

(351) For [those who] ¹ are corrupted by [glory] ²⁵ it is not assuring to [hear] ¹ about God.

(352/353) It is not a small [danger] ¹ for us to [speak the] truth ¹ about God; [do not say 31 anything about] God before ¹ [you have] learned from [God]. ¹

(354/356) [Do not] speak with a godless person ¹ [about] God; if you are polluted ⁵ [on account of] impure works, ¹ [do not] speak about God. ¹

(357) [The] true [word] about God ¹ is [the] word of God.

(355) Speak ¹ concerning the word about God ¹⁰ as if you were saying it in the presence of God. ¹

(358) If first your mind is persuaded ¹ that you have been god-loving, ¹ then speak to whomever you wish ¹ about God. ¹⁵

(359) May your pious works ¹ precede every word about ¹ God.

(360) Do not wish to speak ¹ with a crowd about ¹ God.

(361) Be (more) sparing with a word about ²⁰ God (than) about a soul.

(362) It ¹ is better to dispose of a soul than to discard ¹ at random a word about ¹ God.

(363a) You conceive the body ¹ of the god-loving man, but you will not be able to ²⁵ rule over his speech.

(363b) The lion also ¹ rules over the body of ¹ [the wise man]; also the tyrant rules ¹ [over it] alone.

(364) If a tyrant 32 threatens you, [then, especially], ¹ remember God.

(365) [He who speaks] ¹ the word of God [to those for whom] ¹ it is not lawful, he is [the betrayer] ⁵ of God.

(366) It is better [for] ¹ you to be silent about the word of [God] ¹ than to speak recklessly. ¹

(367/368) He who speaks lies about ¹ God is lying to ¹⁰ God; a man who does not have ¹ anything truthful to say about [God] ¹ is abandoned by God.

(369) [It is not] ¹ possible for you to know God when you ¹ do not worship him.

(370) A man who ¹⁵ does evil to someone will not be able to worship ¹ God.

(371) The love of man ¹ is the beginning of godliness. ¹

(372) He who takes care of men while ¹ praying for all of them – this is ²⁰ the truth of God.

(373/374) It is God's business ¹ to save whom he wants; ¹ on the other hand, it is the business of the pious man ¹ to beseech God to save ¹ everyone.

(375) When you ²⁵ pray for something and it happens ¹ to you through God, then ¹ say with your mind that [you have 33 . . .]. ¹

(376a) [A man who] is worthy of God, ¹ [he] is God among ¹ [men], and [he is] the son of God. ⁵

(376b) Both the great one exists ¹ and he who is next ¹ to the great one exists.

(377/378) It is better for ¹ man to be without anything ¹ than to have many things ¹⁰ while not giving to the needy; so also you, ¹ if you pray to God, ¹ he will not give to you.

(379) If you, from your ¹ whole heart, give your bread to ¹ the hungry, the gift is small, ¹⁵ but the willingness is great ¹ with God.

(380) He who thinks ¹ that no one is in the presence of ¹ God, he is not humble towards God. ¹

(381) He who makes his mind like unto ²⁰ God as far as he is able, he ¹ is the one who honors God greatly. ¹

(382) God does not need anything, ¹ but he rejoices over those who give to the ¹ needy.

(383) The faithful do not speak many ²⁵ words, but their works are numerous. ¹

(384) It is a faithful person fond of learning ¹ who is the worker of the truth. 34

(385) [Adjust . . . the] calamities ¹ in order that [. . .].

(386) [If you] ¹ do not do evil to anyone, you will not be afraid ¹ of anyone.

(387) The tyrant will ⁵ not be able to take away happiness. ¹

(388) What it is right to do, do it ¹ willingly.

(389a) What it is not right to do, ¹ do not do it in any way.

(389b) Promise ¹ everything rather than ¹⁰ to say, "I am wise." ¹

(390) What you do well, say ¹ with your mind that it [is] God ¹ who does it.

(391) No man ¹ who <looks> down upon the earth ¹⁵ and upon tables is wise. ¹

(392) The philosopher who is an ¹ outer body, he is not the one ¹ to whom it is fitting to pay respect, but (the) ¹ philosopher according to the inner ²⁰ man.

(393) Guard yourself from lying: there is ¹ he who deceives and there is he who is ¹ deceived.

(394/395) Know who God is, ¹ and know who is the one who ¹ thinks in you; a good man ²⁵ is the good work ¹ of God.

(396) They are miserable ¹ because of whom the [word] is blasphemed. ¹

(397) Death will [not] be able to destroy (pp. 35-end are missing).

FRAGMENTS (XII,3)

Introduced and translated by

FREDERIK WISSE

It is uncertain whether the two fragments presented here in translation come from the same tractate. With no title and only one substantial fragment surviving, the character of the tractate remains obscure. It seems to present ethical teaching within a religious context. The first person singular and plural are used, and the speaker refers to "my Father," which suggests that he may be Jesus. The speaker contrasts himself and his followers with others, referred to in the third person plural, who live in wickedness and do evil deeds. Nothing in the fragments suggests that the tractate was gnostic. There is no reason to doubt that the Coptic represents a translation from the Greek.

FRAGMENTS

XII 1A, 6-29

1B, 6-29

2A, 24-29

2B, 24-29

(Fragment 1A) [...] ¹⁰ us as it is ¹ [fitting. ...] each other, but ¹ [...] a crowd to receive ¹ [...] they speak ill ¹ [...] live by wickedness ¹⁵ [...] the [...] ¹ work evil things to ¹ [...] the good things, and they ¹ [...] do their own things ¹ [...] strangers. There are ²⁰ [...] do their own things ¹ [...] works which [...] we] ourselves do [...] works] of those [...] ¹ evil works [...] ²⁵ that which we shall [...] ¹ the] works which [...] ¹ that which [...] ¹ every one [...]

(Fragment 1B) [...]. ⁹ For I speak the [...] ¹ know [God ...] ¹ gave their [...] ¹ error. But [...] ¹ they are worthy of the [...] ¹ into God [...]. ¹⁵ And already they have [...] ¹ the ignorance [...] ¹ the righteousness [...] ¹ these were worthy [of ...]. ¹ He [...] ²⁰ my Father who is [...] ¹ not to them a father [...] ¹ I think that [...] ¹ this which the [...] ¹ I give again to the [...] ²⁵ they forgive [...] ¹ spoke it [...] ¹ it [...]

(Fragment 2A) [...] ²⁶ philosopher [...] ¹ they are not able to [...] ¹ philosopher ¹ [...] world [...]

(Fragment 2B) [...] ²⁷ her [...] ¹ begot him [...] ¹ think that [...]

TRIMORPHIC PROTENNOIA (XIII,1)

Introduced and translated by

JOHN D. TURNER

Trimorphic Protennoia ("The Three-formed [Divine] First Thought") is, in its form, a Barbeloite treatise which has undergone both Sethian and Christian revisions. It is roughly contemporaneous with The Apocryphon of John (mid-second century C.E.), which it resembles in certain interesting ways, and is distinguished by a number of striking parallels to the Fourth Gospel and especially its prologue.

The underlying basis of Trimorphic Protennoia can be seen in the series consistent "I am" self-predicatory aretalogies, in which Protennoia recites her divine identity and role in the creation and salvation of the world. These are structured into an introductory aretalogy (35,1-32) identifying Protennoia as the divine First Thought followed by three similar aretalogies in the same style, the second and third of which form separately titled subtrates in the Trimorphic Protennoia: First, Protennoia is the Voice of the First Thought who descends first as light into darkness to give shape to her fallen members (35,32-36,27; 40,29-41,1). Second, Protennoia is the Speech of the Thought who descends to empower her fallen members by giving them spirit or breadth (42,4-27; 45,2-12; 45,21-46,3). Third, Protennoia is the Word or Logos of the Thought who descends in the likeness of the powers, assumes a human appearance, introduces the illuminatory baptismal rite of the Five Seals and restores her members into the light (46,5-6; 47,5-22; 49,15-22; 50,9-12,18-20).

One cannot fail to notice here a striking resemblance, not only to the language and structure of the Johannine prologue's narration of the descents of the Logos, but also to the similar first-person aretalogy on the three descents of Pronoia found at the end of the longer version of the Apocryphon of John (II,1:30,11-31,25), with which the Trimorphic Protennoia may even be genetically related.

The underlying tripartite aretalogy has been expanded by means of six narrative doctrinal insertions (36,27-40,29; 41,1-42,2; 42,27-45,2; 46,7-47,5; 47,22-49,15; 49,22-50,9). Three of these insertions, whose third-person expository prose breaks the otherwise smooth flow of Protennoia's self-referential speech, are designated as "mysteries" which Protennoia is said to have communicated to the sons of the light.

Essentially, the scheme of the divine First Thought's triple descent into this world is a derivative of speculation at home in the Hellenistic Jewish wisdom schools responsible for the personification of the figure of the divine wisdom and the development of the myth concerning her role in the creation of the world and in the subsequent enlightenment of mankind as it is found especially in 1 Enoch 42, Sirach 24, Wisdom 7-8, and in Philo. It seems that Sophia's two unsuccessful descents in 1 Enoch 42 and her successful one in Sirach 24 were combined into a total of three descents into the lower world, two resulting in partial liberation, and the third resulting in the final awakening and salvation of those who received her. This is the same pattern that underlies the Johannine prologue, which, though not a Barbeloite composition, was likely also a product of a similar form of wisdom speculation. The unique contribution of the Barbeloites seems to have been the interpretation of the three revelatory descents: first, in terms of a primal divine triad of Father, Mother and Son, second in terms of a theory of progressive revelation in which each successive appearance of the revealer is characterized by an increasing degree of articulateness and finality (Voice, Speech, and Word) and third, the association of the final descent with a Logos figure who confers final enlightenment in the form of transcendentalized baptismal rite called the Five Seals.

It is clear that the Trimorphic Protennoia has been secondarily Christianized. Three glosses identifying the Autogenes Son as the Christ in the first subtractate (37,[31]; 38,22; 39,6-7) probably derive from the traditional Barbeloite theogonical material common to The Apocryphon of John and Irenaeus, Haer. 1.29, upon which the author drew for the first narrative insertion. These Christian glosses would have been suggested by an equation between the Christian designation of Christ as monogenes and what seems to be a pre-Christian designation for the third member of the Barbeloite Father-Mother-Son triad, namely the Self-Begotten (autogenes) Son.

The third subtractate narrates the incognito descent of Protennoia as the Word disguised in the form of the sovereignties, powers, and angels, culminating in the final revelation of herself in the human form of her members below, but it seems to have been supplemented by an alien and tendentious Christological interpretation. In the third subtractate, traditional Christological titles such as Christ, Beloved, Son of God (i.e., "Son of the Archigenetor") and Son of Man are polemically interpreted in a consciously docetic fashion so as to suggest that these titles were inappropriately applied to the human Jesus by the apostolic church. By implication, the apostolic Jesus is shown actually to be the Christ of the evil archons; the apostolic beloved is actually the Beloved of the archons; the apostolic Son of God is the Son of the ignorant world creator; and the apostolic Son of Man is only a human being among the sons of men.

It is interesting that most of these reinterpretations of the Christology of the apostolic church in the Trimorphic Protennoia seem to depend on key passages from the Gospel of John to score their point in any acute fashion. It seems that the key to the relationship between these two texts lies in the recognition that Trimorphic Protennoia has undergone at least three stages of composition. First, there was the original triad of the aretalogical self-predications of Protennoia as Voice, Speech, and Word that were probably built up out of the Jewish wisdom tradition and maybe out of The Apocryphon of John's similar Pronoia aretalogy itself sometime during the first century C.E.; there is little here that seems specifically gnostic or Christian or Sethian or Barbeloite. Second, this was supplemented, whether by the same or by a different author, by various narrative doctrinal passages based upon traditional Barbeloite theogonical materials similar to those of The Apocryphon of John and Irenaeus, Haer. 1.29. After circulation as a mildly Christian Barbeloite text in this form, the third and last stage of composition seems to have involved a deliberately polemical incorporation of Christian, specifically Johannine Christian, materials into the aretalogical portion of the third subtractate. One might assign the third compositional stage of Trimorphic Protennoia to the period of struggle over the interpretation of the Christology of the Fourth Gospel witnessed by the New Testament letters of John, perhaps the first quarter or half of the second century.

TRIMORPHIC PROTENNOIA

XIII 35, 1-50, 24

[I] am [Protennoia, the] Thought that ¹ [dwells] in [the Light. I] am the movement ¹ that dwells in the [All, she in whom the] All takes ¹ its stand, [the first]-born ⁵ among those who [came to be, she who exists] before ¹ the All. [She (Protennoia) is called] by three names, although she ¹ dwells alone, [since she is perfect]. I am ¹ invisible within the Thought of the Invisible ¹ One. I am revealed in the immeasurable, ¹⁰ ineffable (things). I am incomprehensible, ¹ dwelling in the incomprehensible. I ¹ move in every creature.

I am the life ¹ of my Epinoia that dwells within ¹ every Power and every eternal movement ¹⁵ and (in) invisible Lights and ¹ within the Archons and Angels and ¹ Demons and every soul dwelling ¹ in [Tartaros] and (in) every material soul. ¹ I dwell in those who came to be. I move in ²⁰ everyone and I delve into them all. ¹ I walk uprightly, and those who ¹ sleep I [awaken]. And I ¹ am the sight of those who dwell in sleep. ¹

I am the Invisible One within the All. ²⁵ It is I who counsel those who are hidden, since I know ¹ the All that exists in it. ¹ I am numberless beyond everyone. I ¹ am immeasurable, ineffable, yet ¹ whenever I [wish, I shall] reveal myself ³⁰ of my own accord. I [am the head of] the All. I exist ¹ before the [All, and] I am the All, ¹ since I [exist in] everyone.

I am a Voice ¹ [speaking softly]. I exist ¹ [from the first. I dwell] within the Silence ³⁵ [that surrounds every one] of them. 36 And [it is] the [hidden Voice] that [dwells within] ¹ me, [within the] incomprehensible, ¹ immeasurable [Thought, within the] immeasurable Silence. ¹

I [descended to the] midst of the underworld ⁵ and I shone [down upon the] darkness. It is I who ¹ poured forth the [water]. It is I who am hidden within ¹ [radiant] waters. I am the one who ¹ gradually put forth the All by my ¹ Thought. It is I who am laden with the Voice. It ¹⁰ is through me that Gnosis comes forth. [I] ¹ dwell in the ineffable and ¹ unknowable ones. I am perception and knowledge, ¹ uttering a Voice by means of ¹ thought. [I] am the real Voice. ¹⁵ I cry out in everyone, and they recognize ¹ it (the voice), since a seed indwells [them]. ¹ I am the Thought of the Father and through ¹ me proceeded [the] Voice, ¹ that is, the knowledge of the everlasting things. I ²⁰ exist as Thought for the [All] — being joined ¹ to the unknowable and incomprehensible Thought — ¹ I revealed myself — yes, I — among ¹ all those who recognize me. For it is I ¹ who am joined with everyone by virtue of ²⁵ the hidden Thought and an exalted <Voice>, even a Voice from ¹ the invisible Thought. And it is immeasurable, ¹ since it dwells in the Immeasurable One. It is a mystery; ¹ it is [unrestrainable] ³⁰ by [the Incomprehensible One]. It is invisible ¹ [to all those who are] visible ¹ in the All. [It is a Light] dwelling in ¹ Light.

It is we [also who] alone [have separated] ¹ [from the] visible [world] ³⁵ since we [are saved by the] ¹ hidden [wisdom by means of the] 37 ineffable, immeasurable [Voice]. And he who is ¹ hidden within us pays the tributes of his fruit ¹ to the Water of Life.

Then ¹ the Son who is perfect in every respect — that is, ⁵ the Word who originated through that ¹ Voice; who proceeded from the height; who ¹ has within him the Name; who is ¹ a Light — he (the Son) revealed the everlasting things and ¹ all the unknowns were known. ¹⁰ And those things difficult to interpret ¹ and secret, he revealed, and ¹ as for those who dwell in Silence with the First ¹ Thought, he preached to them. And ¹ he revealed himself to those who dwell in darkness, and ¹⁵ he showed himself to those who dwell in the abyss, ¹ and to those who dwell in the hidden treasures he told ¹ ineffable mysteries, ¹ and he taught unrepeatable doctrines ¹ to all those who became Sons of ²⁰ the Light.

Now the Voice that originated ¹ from my Thought exists as three ¹ permanences: the Father, the Mother, the Son. Existing ¹ perceptibly as Speech, it (Voice) has ¹ within it a Word endowed with ²⁵ every <glory>, and it has ¹ three masculinities, three powers, ¹ and three names. They exist in the ¹ manner of Three □ □ □ — which are quadrangles — ¹ secretly within a silence ³⁰ of the Ineffable One.

[It is he] alone who came to be, ¹ that [is, the Christ. And] as for me I anointed him ¹ as the glory [of the] Invisible [Spirit] with ¹ [goodness]. Now [the Three] I established ¹ [alone in] eternal [glory] over ³⁵ [the Aeons in the] Living [Water], that ¹ [is, the glory that surrounds him] 38 who first came forth to the Light ¹ of those exalted Aeons, and it is in glorious ¹ Light that he firmly perseveres. And [he] ¹ stood in his own Light ⁵ that surrounds him, that is, the Eye of the Light ¹ that gloriously shines on me. ¹ He perpetuated the Father of all <the> Aeons, who am

I, ¹ the Thought of the Father, Protennoia, ¹ that is, Barbelo, the [perfect] Glory ¹⁰ and the [immeasurable] Invisible One who is hidden. ¹ I am the Image of the Invisible Spirit ¹ and it is through me that the All took shape, ¹ and (I am) the Mother (as well as) the Light which she appointed ¹ as Virgin, she who is called ¹⁵ Meirothea, the incomprehensible Womb, the ¹ unrestrainable and immeasurable Voice.

Then ¹ the Perfect Son revealed himself to his ¹ Aeons who originated through him, ¹ and he revealed them and glorified them and ²⁰ gave them thrones and stood in ¹ the glory with which he glorified himself. ¹ They blessed the Perfect Son, the Christ, the ¹ only-begotten God. And they gave glory, saying, "He is! He is! The Son ²⁵ of God! The Son of God! It is he who ¹ is! The Aeon of Aeons beholding the ¹ Aeons which he begot! For thou hast ¹ begotten by thine own desire! Therefore [we] ¹ glorify thee: ma mō ō ō ēia ei on ei! The [Aeon] ³⁰ of [Aeons! The] Aeon which he gave!"

Then, ¹ moreover, the [God who was begotten] gave them (the Aeons) ¹ a power of [life on which they might rely] and [he] ¹ established [them. The] first ¹ Aeon, he established [over the first]: Arme-don, ³⁵ Nousa[nios, Armozēl; the] second ¹ he established [over the second Aeon]: 39 Phaionios, Ainios, Oroiael; the third ¹ over the third Aeon: Mellephaneus, ¹ Loios, Daveithai; the fourth ¹ over the fourth: Mousanios, Amethes, ⁵ Eleleth. Now those Aeons were begotten ¹ by the God who was begotten — the ¹ Christ — and these Aeons received ¹ as well as gave glory. They were the first to appear, ¹ exalted in their thought, and each ¹⁰ Aeon gave myriads of glories within ¹ great untraceable lights and ¹ they all together blessed the Perfect ¹ Son, the God who was begotten.

Then there ¹ came forth a word from the great ¹⁵ Light Eleleth and said, "I ¹ am King! Who belongs to Chaos and who ¹ belongs to the underworld?" And at that instant his Light ¹ appeared radiant, endowed ¹ with the Epinoia. The Powers of the Powers ²⁰ did not entreat him and likewise immediately ¹ there appeared the great Demon ¹ who rules over the lowest part of the underworld ¹ and Chaos. He has neither form ¹ nor perfection, but on the contrary possesses ²⁵ the form of the glory of those ¹ begotten in the darkness. Now he is called ¹ "Saklas," that is, "Samael," "Yaltabaoth," ¹ he who had taken power; who had snatched ¹ it away from the innocent one (Sophia); who had earlier overpowered ³⁰ her who is the Light's Epinoia (Sophia) ¹ who had descended, her from ¹ whom he (Yaltabaoth) had come forth originally.

Now when the ¹ Epinoia of the [Light] realized ¹ that [he (Yalta-baath)] had begged him (the Light), ¹ for another [order, even though he was lower] than she, she said, ³⁵ "Grant [me another order so that] you may become for me ¹ [a dwelling place lest I dwell] in disorder ¹ [forever." And the order of the] entire house of 40 glory [was agreed] upon her ¹ word. A blessing was brought for ¹ her and the higher order released it ¹ to her.

And the great Demon ⁵ began to produce ¹ aeons in the likeness of the real Aeons, ¹ except that he produced them out of his own power. ¹

Then I too revealed ¹ my Voice secretly, ¹⁰ saying, "Cease! Desist, ¹ (you) who tread on matter; for behold ¹ I am coming down to the world ¹ of mortals for the sake of my portion that was in ¹ that place from the time when ¹⁵ the innocent Sophia was conquered, she who ¹ descended, so that I might thwart ¹ their aim which the one revealed ¹ by her appoints." ¹ And all were disturbed, ²⁰ each one who dwells ¹ in the house of the ignorant light, ¹ and the abyss trembled. And ¹ the Archigenetor of ignorance ¹ reigned over Chaos and the underworld and ²⁵ produced a man in my likeness. But he neither ¹ knew that that one would become ¹ for him a sentence of dissolution nor ¹ does he recognize the power in ¹ him.

But now I have come down ³⁰ and reached down to Chaos. And ¹ I was [with] my own who ¹ were in that place. [I am hidden] within ¹ them, empowering [them and] giving ¹ them shape. And [from the first day] until ³⁵ the day [when I will grant mighty power] ¹ to those who [are mine, I will reveal myself to] ¹ those who have [heard my mysteries], 41 that is, the [Sons] of [the] Light.

I ¹ am their Father and I shall tell you a ¹ mystery, ineffable and indivulgeable ¹ by [any] mouth: Every bond ⁵ I loosed from you, and the ¹ chains of the Demons of the underworld, I broke, ¹ these things which are bound on my members, restraining them. And ¹ the high walls of darkness I overthrew, ¹ and the secure gates of ¹⁰ those pitiless ones I broke, and I smashed ¹ their bars. And the evil Force and ¹ the one who beats you, and the one who hinders ¹ you, and the Tyrant, and the Adversary, ¹ and the one who is King, and the present Enemy, ¹⁵ indeed all these I explained to those ¹ who are mine, who are the Sons of the light, ¹ in order that they might nullify them all ¹ and be saved from all those bonds ¹ and enter into the place where they were at ²⁰ first.

I am the first one who descended ¹ on account of my portion which remains, that is, ¹ the Spirit that (now) dwells in the soul, (but) which originated ¹ from the Water of Life and out ¹ of the immersion of the mysteries, and I spoke, ²⁵ I together with the Archons and Authorities. ¹ For I had gone down below their ¹ language and I spoke my mysteries to ¹ my own — a hidden mystery — and ¹ the bonds and eternal oblivion were nullified. ³⁰ And I bore fruit in them, that ¹ is, the Thought of the unchanging Aeon, and ¹ my house, and their [Father]. And I went ¹ down [to those who were mine] from the first and ¹ I [reached them and broke] the first strands ³⁵ that [enslaved them. Then] ¹ everyone [of those] within me shone, and 42 I prepared [a pattern] for those ineffable Lights that are ¹ within me. Amen. ¹

The Discourse of Protennoia: [One] ¹

I am the Voice that appeared through ⁵ my Thought, for I am “He who is syzygetic,” ¹ since I am called “the Thought of the Invisible One.” ¹ Since I am called “the unchanging Speech,” ¹ I am called “She who is syzygetic.”

I am a single ¹ one (fem.) since I am undefiled. I am the Mother [of] ¹⁰ the Voice, speaking in many ways, completing ¹ the All. It is in me that knowledge dwells, ¹ the knowledge of <things> everlasting. It is I [who] ¹ speak within every creature and I was known ¹ by the All. It is I who lift up ¹⁵ the Speech of the Voice to the ears of those who ¹ have known me, that is, the Sons of the Light. ¹

Now I have come the second time in the likeness ¹ of a female and have spoken with them. And ¹ I shall tell them of the coming end of the Aeon ²⁰ and teach them of the beginning of the Aeon ¹ to come, the one without change, ¹ the one in which our appearance will be changed. ¹ We shall be purified within those Aeons from which I ¹ revealed myself in the Thought ²⁵ of the likeness of my masculinity. I settled ¹ among those who are worthy in the Thought of my ¹ changeless Aeon.

For I shall tell you a ¹ mystery [of] this particular Aeon and ¹ tell you about the forces that are in it. ³⁰ The birth beckons: [hour] begets ¹ hour, [day begets day]. The months ¹ made known the [month. Time] has [gone round] ¹ succeeding [time]. This particular Aeon 43 was completed in [this] fashion, and it was estimated, and ¹ it (was) short, for it was a finger that released a ¹ finger and a joint that was separated from ¹ a joint. Then when the great Authorities knew ⁵ that the time of fulfillment had appeared — ¹ just as in the pangs of the parturient it (the time) had drawn near, ¹ so also had ¹ the destruction approached — all together the elements ¹ trembled, and the foundations of the underworld and the ceilings ¹⁰ of Chaos shook and a great fire shone ¹ within their midst, and the rocks and the earth ¹ were shaken like a reed shaken by the wind. ¹ And the lots of Fate and those who apportion ¹ the domiciles were greatly disturbed over ¹⁵ a great thunder. And the thrones of ¹ the Powers were disturbed since they were overturned, and their ¹ King was afraid. And those who pursue Fate ¹ paid their allotment of visits to the path, and ¹ they said to the Powers, "What is this disturbance ²⁰ and this shaking that has come upon us through ¹ a Voice <belonging> to the exalted Speech? ¹ And our entire habitation has been shaken, and the entire ¹ circuit of our path of ascent has met with ¹ destruction, and the path upon which we go, ²⁵ which takes us up to the Archigenetor ¹ of our birth, has ceased to be established for us." ¹ Then the Powers answered, saying, ¹ "We too are at a loss about ¹ it since we did not know what was responsible for it. But ³⁰ arise, let us go up to the Archigenetor ¹ and ask him." And the ¹ Powers all gathered and went up to the Archigenetor. ¹ [They said to] him, "Where is your boasting ¹ in which [you boast]? ³⁵ Did we not [hear you say], 'I ¹ am God [and I am] your Father 44 and it is I who [begot] you and there is no [other] ¹ beside me'? Now behold, there has appeared ¹ [a] Voice belonging to that invisible Speech ¹ of [the Aeon] (and) which we know not. And ⁵ we ourselves did not recognize to whom we ¹ belong, for that Voice which we listened to ¹ is foreign to us, and we do not recognize ¹ it; we did not know whence it was. It came ¹ and put fear in our midst and weakening ¹⁰ in the members of our arms. So now let ¹ us weep and mourn most bitterly! ¹ As for the future, let us make our entire flight ¹ before we are imprisoned perforce and ¹ taken down to the bosom of the underworld. For already ¹⁵ the slackening of our bondage has approached, ¹ and the times are cut short and the days have shortened ¹ and our time has been fulfilled, and the weeping ¹ of our destruction has approached us so that ¹ we may be taken to the place we recognize. ²⁰ For as for our tree from which we grew, a fruit ¹ of ignorance is what it has; and ¹ also its leaves, it is death that dwells in them, ¹ and darkness dwells under the shadow of its ¹ boughs. And it was in deceit ²⁵ and lust that we harvested it, this (tree) through ¹ which ignorant Chaos became for us a dwelling place. ¹ For behold, even he, the Archigenetor ¹ of our birth, about whom we boast, ¹ even he did not know this Speech."

So now, ³⁰ O Sons of the Thought, listen to me, to the Speech ¹ of the Mother of your mercy, for you have ¹ become worthy of the mystery hidden from (the beginning of) ¹ the Aeons, so that [you might receive] it. And the consummation ¹ of this [particular] Aeon [and] of the evil life ³⁵ [has approached and there dawns 45 the] beginning of the [Aeon to come] which [has ¹ no change forever].

I am ¹ androgynous. [I am Mother (and) I am] Father since [I ¹ copulate] with myself. I [copulated] with myself ⁵ [and with those who love] me, [and] ¹ it is through me alone that the All [stands firm]. I am the Womb ¹ [that gives shape] to the All by giving birth to the Light that ¹ [shines in] splendor. I am the Aeon to [come. ¹ I am] the fulfillment of the All, that is, Me[iroth]jea, ¹⁰ the glory of the Mother. I cast [voiced] Speech ¹ into the ears of those who know ¹ me.

And I am inviting you into the exalted, perfect Light. ¹ Moreover (as for) this (Light), when you enter ¹ it you will be glorified by those [who] ¹⁵ give glory, and those who enthrone will ¹ enthrone you. You will accept robes from ¹ those who give robes and the Baptists ¹ will baptize you and you will become ¹ gloriously glorious, the way you first were ²⁰ when you were <Light>. ¹

And I hid myself in everyone and revealed [myself] ¹ within them, and every mind seeking ¹ me longed for me, for it is I ¹ who gave shape to the All when it had no form. ²⁵ And I transformed their forms ¹ into (other) forms until the time when a form ¹ will be given to the All. It is through me that the Voice ¹ originated and it is I who put the breath ¹ within my own. And I cast into ³⁰ them the eternally holy Spirit and ¹ I ascended and entered my Light. ¹ [I went up] upon my branch and ¹ sat [there among the] Sons of the [holy] Light. ¹ And [I withdrew] to their dwelling place 46 which [...] ³ become [glorious Amen]. ¹

[On Fate: Two] ⁵

I am [the Word] who dwells [in the] ineffable [Voice]. ¹ I dwell in undefiled [Light] ¹ and a Thought [revealed itself] ¹ perceptibly through [the great] ¹ Speech of the Mother, although it is a male offspring [that supports me] ¹⁰ as my foundation. And it (the Speech) exists from the beginning ¹ in the foundations of the All.

But there is a Light [that] ¹ dwells hidden in Silence and it was first to [come] ¹ forth. Whereas she (the Mother) alone exists as Silence, ¹ I alone am the Word, ineffable, ¹⁵ unpolluted, immeasurable, inconceivable. ¹ It (the Word) is a hidden Light, bearing a Fruit of ¹ Life, pouring forth a Living Water from ¹ the invisible, unpolluted, immeasurable ¹ Spring, that is, the unreproducible Voice of the glory ²⁰ of the Mother, the glory of the offspring ¹ of God; a male Virgin by ¹ virtue of a hidden Intellect, that is, ¹ the Silence hidden from the All, being unreproducible, ¹ an immeasurable Light, the source of the All, ²⁵ the Root of the entire Aeon. It is the Foundation that supports ¹ every movement of the Aeons that ¹ belong to the mighty Glory. It is the Foundation of every foundation. ¹ It is the Breath of the Powers. It is the Eye of the ¹ Three Permanences, which exist as Voice ³⁰ by virtue of Thought. And it is a Word ¹ by virtue of Speech; it was sent ¹ to illumine those who dwell in the [darkness]. ¹

Now behold [I will reveal] ¹ to you [my mysteries] since ³⁵ you are my fellow [brethren, and you shall] know ¹ them all [. . .]. ⁴⁷ I [told all of them about ¹ my mysteries] that exist in [the ¹ incomprehensible], inexpressible [Aeons]. I taught [them the mysteries] ¹ through the [Voice that ¹ exists] within a perfect Intellect [and ¹⁰ I] became a foundation for the All, and [I ¹ empowered] them.

The second time I came in the [Speech] ¹ of my Voice. I gave shape to those who [took] shape ¹ until their consummation.

The third ¹ time I revealed myself to them [in] ¹⁵ their tents as Word and I ¹ revealed myself in the likeness of their shape. And ¹ I wore everyone's garment and ¹ I hid myself within them, and [they] did not ¹ know the one who empowers me. For I dwell within ²⁰ all the Sovereignities and Powers and within ¹ the Angels and in every movement [that] exists ¹ in all matter. And I hid myself within ¹ them until I revealed myself to my [brethren]. ¹ And none of them (the Powers) knew me, [although] ²⁵ it is I who work in them. Rather [they thought] ¹ that the All was created [by them] ¹ since they are ignorant, not knowing [their] ¹ root, the place in which they grew.

[I] ¹ am the Light that illumines the All. I ³⁰ am the Light that rejoices [in my] ¹ brethren, for I came down to the world [of] ¹ mortals on account of the Spirit that remains [in] ¹ that which [descended] (and) came forth [from] the ¹ innocent Sophia. [I came] and I delivered ³⁵ [. . .] and I [went] to ⁴⁸ [. . .] ⁶ which he had [formerly and ¹ I gave to him] from the Water [of Life, which ¹ strips] him of the Chaos [that is ¹ in the] uttermost [darkness] that exists [inside] ¹⁰ the entire [abyss], that is, the thought of [the corporeal] ¹ and the psychic. All these I ¹ put on. And I stripped him of it ¹ and I put upon him a shining Light, that ¹ is, the knowledge of the Thought of the Fatherhood. ¹⁵

And I delivered him to those who give robes – ¹ Yammon, Elasso, Amenai – and they [covered] ¹ him with a robe from the robes of the Light; ¹ and I delivered him to the Baptists and they ¹ baptized him – Micheus, Michar, ²⁰ Mn[e]sinous – and they immersed him in the spring of the [Water] ¹ of Life. And I delivered him to those who ¹ enthrone –

Bariel, Nouthan, Sabenai — and ¹ they enthroned him from the throne of glory. ¹ And I delivered him to those who glorify — ²⁵ Ariom, Elien, Phariel — and they glorified ¹ him with the glory of the Fatherhood. And ¹ those who snatch away snatched away — Kamaliel. ¹ [...]anen, Samblo, the servants of <the> great ¹ holy Luminaries — and they took him into ³⁰ the light-[place] of his Fatherhood. And ¹ [he received] the Five Seals from ¹ [the Light] of the Mother, Protennoia, and ¹ it was [granted] him [to] partake of [the mystery] of ¹ knowledge, and [he became a Light] in ³⁵ Light.

So, now, [...] ⁴⁹ I was] dwelling in them [in the form ¹ of each] one. [The Archons] thought ¹ [that I] was their Christ. Indeed I [dwell ¹ in] everyone. Indeed within those in whom [I revealed ¹⁰ myself] as Light [I eluded] ¹ the Archons. I am their beloved, [for] ¹ in that place I clothed myself [as] ¹ the Son of the Archigenetor, and I was like ¹ him until the end of his decree, which is ¹⁵ the ignorance of Chaos. And among the ¹ Angels I revealed myself in their likeness, ¹ and among the Powers as if I were one ¹ of them, but among the Sons of Man as if ¹ I were a Son of Man, even though I am ²⁰ Father of everyone.

I hid myself within them ¹ all until I revealed myself among my members, ¹ which are mine, and I taught them about the ineffable ¹ ordinances, and (about) the brethren. But they are inexpressible ¹ to every Sovereignty and every ruling ²⁵ Power except to the Sons of the Light ¹ alone, that is, the ordinances of the Father. These are ¹ the glories that are higher than every glory, that is, [the Five] ¹ Seals complete by virtue of Intellect. He ¹ who possesses the Five Seals of these ³⁰ particular names has stripped off <the> garments ¹ of ignorance and put on ¹ a shining Light. And nothing ¹ will appear to him that belongs to the Powers ¹ of the Archons. Within those of this sort ³⁵ darkness will dissolve and [ignorance] will die. ¹ And the thought of the creature ¹ which [is scattered will] present a single appearance ¹ and [dark Chaos] will dissolve and ⁵⁰ [...] ³ and the [...] ¹ incomprehensible [...] ⁵ within the [...] ¹ until I reveal myself [to all my fellow ¹ brethren] and until I gather [together] ¹ all [my fellow] brethren within my [eternal ¹ kingdom]. And I proclaimed to them the ineffable [Five ¹⁰ Seals in order that ¹ I might] abide in them and they also ¹ might abide in me.

As for me, I put on ¹ Jesus. I bore him from the cursed ¹ wood, and established him in the dwelling places ¹⁵ of his Father. And those who watch over ¹ their dwelling places did not recognize me. ¹ For I, I am unrestrainable together with my ¹ Seed, and my Seed, which is mine, I shall [place] ¹ into the Holy Light within an ²⁰ incomprehensible Silence. Amen. ¹

The Discourse of the Appearance: Three Trimorphic Protennoia, in three parts ¹
A Sacred Scripture written by the Father ¹ with perfect Knowledge

THE GOSPEL OF MARY (BG 8502,1)

Introduced by

KAREN L. KING

Translated by

GEORGE W. MACRAE and R. McL. WILSON

Edited by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

The extant text of The Gospel of Mary can easily be divided into two parts. The first section (7,1-9,24) describes the dialogue between the (risen) Savior and the disciples. He answers their questions concerning matter and sin. Relying on an exegesis of Romans 7, as Anne Pasquier has shown, the Savior argues, in effect, that sin is not a moral category, but a cosmological one; it is due to the improper mixing of the material and the spiritual. In the end all things will be resolved into their proper root. After finishing his discourse, the Savior gives them a final greeting, admonishes them to beware of any who may try to lead them astray and commissions them to go and preach the gospel of the kingdom. After he departs, however, the disciples are grieved and in considerable doubt and consternation. Mary Magdalene comforts them and turns their hearts toward the Good and a consideration of the Savior's words.

The second section of the text (10,1-23; 15,1-19,2) contains a description by Mary of special revelation given to her by the Savior. At Peter's request, she tells the disciples about things that were hidden from them. The basis for her knowledge is a vision of the Lord and a private dialogue with him. Unfortunately four pages of the text are missing here so that only the beginning and end of Mary's revelation are extant.

The revelation is in the form of a dialogue. The first question Mary asks the Savior is how one sees a vision. The Savior replies that the soul sees through the mind which is between the soul and the spirit. At this point the text breaks off. When the text resumes at 15,1, Mary is in the midst of describing the Savior's revelation concerning the rise of the soul past the four powers. The four powers are most probably to be identified as essential expressions of the four material elements. The enlightened soul, now free of their bonds, rises past the four powers, overpowering them with her gnosis, and attains eternal, silent rest.

After Mary finishes recounting her vision to the disciples, Andrew and then Peter challenge her on two grounds. First of all, Andrew says, these teachings are strange. Secondly, Peter questions, would the Savior really have told such things to a woman and kept them from the male disciples. Levi admonishes Peter for contending with the woman as against the adversaries and acknowledges that the Savior loved her more than the other disciples. He entreats them to be ashamed, to put on the perfect man, and to go forth and preach as the Savior had instructed them to do. They immediately go forth to preach and the text ends.

The confrontation of Mary with Peter, a scenario also found in The Gospel of Thomas, Pistis Sophia, and The Gospel of the Egyptians, reflects some of the tensions in second-century Christianity. Peter and Andrew represent orthodox positions that deny the validity of esoteric revelation and reject the authority of women to teach. The Gospel of Mary attacks both of these positions head-on through its portrayal of Mary Magdalene. She is the Savior's beloved, possessed of knowledge and teaching superior to that of the public apostolic tradition. Her superiority is based on vision and private revelation and is demonstrated in her capacity to strengthen the wavering disciples and turn them toward the Good.

The text belongs to the genre of the gnostic dialogue. It has, however, also been classified as an apocalypse due to several characteristics it shares with other texts of that genre: revelation dialogue, vision, an abbreviated cosmogony, a description of otherworldly regions and the rise of the soul (though there is no heavenly journey as such), final instructions, and a short narrative conclusion. The difficulty in determining genre is due in part to the fact that the text has undergone secondary redaction. Most scholars agree that the two parts of the text described above were originally separate pieces (oral or written) that were artificially combined to form the present whole. The role of Mary at the end of the first section and the altercation among the disciples at the end provide the narrative connection.

The Gospel of Mary was originally written in Greek some time in the second century. Unfortunately the two extant copies of The Gospel of Mary are extremely fragmentary. The earliest text comprises only a single, fragmentary leaf written in Greek, dated to the early third century (P. Rylands III 463 [22:16,1-19,4]). A longer portion of the text is extant in an early fifth-century Coptic codex (P. Berolinensis 8502,1), though considerable portions of the text are missing there too. Of eighteen pages, only eight are extant (7-10 and 15-19,5). Though the text of the Greek fragment varies considerably from the Coptic version, it parallels the Coptic pages 17,5-21 and 18,5-19,5 and hence does not provide any new material.

THE GOSPEL OF MARY

BG 7, 1-19, 5

[...] (pp. 1-6 missing) will matter then ¹ be [destroyed] or not?" The Savior said, ¹ "All natures, all formations, all creatures ¹ exist in and with one another, ⁵ and they will be resolved again into ¹ their own roots. For the ¹ nature of matter is resolved into the (roots) of ¹ its nature alone. He who has ¹ ears to hear, let him hear." ¹⁰

Peter said to him, "Since you have ¹ explained everything to us, tell us this also: ¹ What is the sin of the world?" ¹ The Savior said, "There is no sin, ¹ but it is you who make sin when ¹⁵ you do the things that are like the nature of ¹ adultery, which is called 'sin.' ¹ That is why the Good came ¹ into your midst, to the (essence) of every nature, ¹ in order to restore it ²⁰ to its root." Then he continued and ¹ said, "That is why you ¹ [become sick] and die, for [...] ⁸ of the one who [...] He who] ¹ understands, let him understand. [Matter gave birth to] a ¹ passion that has no equal, ¹ which proceeded from (something) contrary to nature. ⁵ Then there arise a disturbance in ¹ the whole body. That is why I said to ¹ you, 'Be of good courage,' ¹ and if you are discouraged ¹ (be) encouraged in the presence of the different forms ¹⁰ of nature. He who has ears ¹ to hear, let him hear." ¹

When the blessed one had said this, he ¹ greeted them all, saying, ¹ "Peace be with you. Receive ¹⁵ my peace to yourselves. Beware that no one ¹ lead you astray, saying, ¹ 'Lo here!' or 'Lo ¹ there!' For the Son of Man ¹ is within you. Follow ²⁰ after him! Those who seek him will ¹ find him. Go then and preach ¹ the gospel of the kingdom. Do not ⁹ lay down any rules beyond what ¹ I appointed for you, and do not give ¹ a law like the lawgiver lest ¹ you be constrained by it." ⁵ When he had said this, he departed.

But they ¹ were grieved. They wept greatly, ¹ saying, "How shall we go ¹ to the gentiles and preach ¹ the gospel of the kingdom of the Son ¹⁰ of Man? If they did ¹ not spare him, how will ¹ they spare us?" Then Mary ¹ stood up, greeted them all, ¹ and said to her brethren, "Do not weep ¹⁵ and do not grieve nor be ¹ irresolute, for his grace will be ¹ entirely with you and will protect ¹ you. But rather let us ¹ praise his greatness, for he has ²⁰ prepared us and made us into men." When ¹ Mary said this, she turned their hearts ¹ to the Good, and they began ¹ to discuss the words ¹ of the [Savior]. 10

Peter said to Mary, "Sister, ¹ we know that the Savior loved you ¹ more than the rest of women. ¹ Tell us the words of the Savior which you ⁵ remember — which you know ¹ (but) we do not, nor have we heard them." ¹ Mary answered and said, ¹ "What is hidden from you I will proclaim to you." ¹ And she began to speak to them ¹⁰ these words: "I," she said, "I ¹ saw the Lord in a vision and I ¹ said to him, 'Lord, I saw you ¹ today in a vision.' He answered and ¹ said to me, 'Blessed are you, that you did not waver ¹⁵ at the sight of me. For where the mind ¹ is, there is the treasure.' I said ¹ to him, 'Lord, now does he who sees the ¹ vision see it <through> the soul <or> through ¹ the spirit?' The Savior answered and ²⁰ said. 'He does not see through the soul! nor through the spirit, but the mind which [is] ¹ between the two – that is [what] ¹ sees the vision and it is [...].’ (pp. 11-14 missing)

“[...] ¹⁵ it. And desire that, ¹ ‘I did not see you descending, ¹ but now I see you ascending. ¹ Why do you lie, since you belong to ⁵ me?’ The soul answered and ¹ said, ‘I saw you. You did not see me ¹ nor recognize me. I served ¹ you as a garment, and you did not know me.’ ¹ When it had said this, it went away rejoicing ¹⁰ greatly.

“Again it came to the ¹ third power, which is ¹ called ignorance. [It (the power)] ¹ questioned the soul saying, ¹ ‘Where are you going? In ¹⁵ wickedness are you bound. ¹ But you are bound; do not judge!’ And ¹ the soul said, ‘why do you judge ¹ me although I have not judged? I was bound ¹ though I have not bound. I was not ²⁰ recognized. But I have recognized that ¹ the All is being dissolved, both the ¹ earthly (things) ¹⁶ and the heavenly.’

When the soul ¹ had overcome the third power, ¹ it went upwards and saw ¹ the fourth power, (which) took ⁵ seven forms. The first form ¹ is darkness, the second ¹ desire, the third ¹ ignorance, the fourth is the excitement of ¹ death, the fifth is the kingdom of the flesh, ¹⁰ the sixth is the foolish wisdom ¹ of flesh, the seventh is the ¹ wrathful wisdom. These are the seven ¹ [powers] of wrath. They ask ¹ the soul, ‘Whence do you come, ¹⁵ slayer of men, or where are you going, ¹ conqueror of space?’ The soul answered ¹ and said, ‘What binds ¹ me has been slain, and what surrounds ¹ me has been overcome, and my desire ²⁰ has been ended, and ignorance ¹ has died. In a [world] I was released ¹⁷ from a world, [and] in a ¹ type from a heavenly type, ¹ and (from) the fetter of oblivion which ¹ is transient. From this time on ⁵ will I attain to the rest of the ¹ time, of the season, of the aeon, in ¹ silence.’”

When Mary had said ¹ this, she fell silent, since it was to this point that the Savior ¹ had spoken with her. ¹⁰ But Andrew answered and said ¹ to the brethren, “Say what you (wish to) say ¹ about what she has said. ¹ I at least do not believe that ¹ the Savior said this. For certainly these teachings ¹⁵ are strange ideas.” ¹ Peter answered and spoke concerning ¹ these same things. He ¹ questioned them about the Savior: “Did he really ¹ speak with a woman without our ²⁰ knowledge (and) not openly? Are we to ¹ turn about and all listen ¹ to her? Did he prefer her to us?” ¹⁸

Then Mary wept and said to ¹ Peter, “My brother Peter, what do you ¹ think? Do you think that I ¹ thought this up myself in my ⁵ heart, or that I am lying about the Savior?” ¹ Levi answered and said to Peter, ¹ “Peter, you have always been ¹ hot-tempered. Now I see you ¹ contending against the woman like ¹⁰ the adversaries. But if the ¹ Savior made her worthy, who are you ¹ indeed to reject her? Surely ¹ the Savior knows her ¹ very well. That is why he loved her more ¹⁵ than us. Rather let us be ashamed and ¹ put on the perfect man ¹ and acquire him for ourselves ¹ as he ¹ commanded us, and preach ¹ the gospel, not laying down ²⁰ any other rule or other law ¹ beyond what the Savior said.” When 19 [. . .] and they began to ¹ go forth [to] proclaim and to preach.

[The] Gospel ¹
according to ⁵
Mary

THE ACT OF PETER (BG 8502,4)

Introduced by

DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

Translated by

JAMES BRASHLER and DOUGLAS M. PARROTT

The Act of Peter is a narrative about how the virginity of Peter's daughter was preserved and the soul of one Ptolemy saved, by divine intervention exercised through Peter. The setting of Act Pet. is a Sunday (the place is not mentioned; cf. discussion below), when, it appears, it was customary for Peter to conduct his healing ministry. A challenge by one of the bystanders leads Peter to employ the power of God to heal his daughter of paralysis, which healing he immediately reverses (128,7-131,9). Peter's narrative, which constitutes most of the remainder of Act Pet., begins with an explanation of how his daughter came to be paralyzed. When she had grown to sexual maturity, the girl was so attractive that a rich man named Ptolemy burned with desire to marry her. Her mother refused permission, whereupon Ptolemy abducted her. If the operative law was Jewish, Ptolemy's purpose may well have been to force the girl's parents to allow him to marry her (see Dt 22:28-29). Peter's prayers caused her to be paralyzed before Ptolemy could have intercourse with her, and hence her virginity was preserved (131,12-135,17). Ptolemy went blind with grief, but a vision spared him from suicide, revealed his guilt, and sent him to Peter, where his sight was restored and his soul was made to see also (135,17-138,10). Thereafter he lived an exemplary life and gave Peter and his daughter a parcel of land when he died. This Peter sold and gave the proceeds to the poor (138,12-139,17). Peter draws the moral that God cares for his own, and the whole account ends with Peter distributing bread to the crowd and retiring to his home.

Although the physical setting is not mentioned in the text, it is reasonable to think of Jerusalem, since Peter's home is spoken of (141,6), where he lives with his wife and daughter (135,1-6). Another possibility is Rome, but there is a tradition in The Acts of Peter, mentioned below, that he goes alone to Rome. In addition, as noted above, the operative law appears to be Jewish.

The Act of Peter probably was part of the otherwise lost beginning third of a collection of apocryphal narratives known as The Acts of Peter. There is extensive conceptual and literary agreement between The Act of Peter and the remaining Acts of Peter. Whether there is a close enough relationship between The Act of Peter and the Nag Hammadi Acts of Peter and the Twelve Apostles (VI,1) to make it likely that the latter was also part of The Acts of Peter remains to be seen.

Conceptually, the emphasis of The Act of Peter is moderately encratite. Marriage itself is not denounced (note that Peter was married and still living with his wife). What is denounced is Ptolemy's lust, which leads him to attempt to deprive a Christian maiden of her virginity by force (137,1-11). Thus, the encratism in this tractate consists in its advocacy of rigorous sexual self-control, which was a view common among Christians in the second century. There is no doubt, however, that the lack of any statement about the meaning of the narrative would have allowed it to be interpreted in a more extreme sense.

It has been suggested that the reason for the inclusion of The Act of Peter in a codex containing three explicitly gnostic tractates is that the scribe needed to fill up the pages after copying the first three tractates, and thus he was attracted to The Act of Peter by its appropriate length and the encratite tendencies in it. Considering the large amount of explicitly gnostic writing available, one wonders why he chose a work only marginally related. The editor might have been influenced by the immediately preceding tractate, The Sophia of Jesus Christ, which has in its conclusion, when Christ disappears from the disciples, the statement that they "began to preach the Gospel of God, the eternal Father" (129,5-9). He might have thought that an account of apostolic activity would be appropriate. But since many similar accounts would also have been circulating, there may be a further reason for the choice of this particular tractate.

The Act of Peter may have been chosen because of the rich possibilities for allegorization that it would have presented to Gnostics. Ptolemy could have represented the soul, whose attraction to the things of the world (represented by the beauty of Peter's daughter) leads to ignorance (represented by grief and blindness), and would have led to death except for the coming of the light of true knowledge (in Act Pet., the vision of light and the voice of Christ [136,17-137,17]), which removes blindness (138,7-10). The paralysis of the daughter could have represented the power of divine knowledge over the powers of this world; and, of course, the daughter could also have been seen as a type of the fallen Sophia. (For related gnostic views in BG, cf. Soph. Jes. Chr. [BG,3] 103,10-106,9; 117,13-126,16). It may thus have been the deeper meanings seen in this text that attracted the gnostic compiler to it and led him to use it in the codex.

Act Pt. are dated toward the end of the second century. Hence Act Pet. would have been extant by that time, although it might well have had an earlier, independent existence.

THE ACT OF PETER

BG 128, 1-141, 7

Now on the first (day) of the week, ¹ which is the Lord's day, ¹ a crowd gathered and ¹ brought to Peter ⁵ many who were ¹ sick, in order that he might ¹ heal them. And a person ¹ from the crowd made bold ¹ to say to Peter, ¹⁰ "Peter, behold, in ¹ our presence you have caused many ¹ blind to see, and you have ¹ caused the deaf to hear, ¹ and you have caused the lame to ¹⁵ walk. And you have helped ¹ the weak and have given them ¹ strength. But your ¹ virgin daughter, who ¹ has grown up to be beautiful and who has 129 believed in the name of God, ¹ why have you not helped her? ¹ For behold, one ¹ side of her is completely paralyzed and she lies ⁵ crippled there in the corner. ¹ Those whom you have healed are seen (about us); ¹ but your daughter ¹ you have neglected.”

Then Peter ¹ smiled and said to him, ¹⁰ “My son, it is apparent to ¹ God alone why ¹ her body is not healthy. ¹ Know, then, that ¹ God was not weak or ¹⁵ unable to give ¹ his gift to my daughter. ¹ But so that your soul ¹ may be persuaded and those who are ¹ here may have more faith – .” 130 Then he looked at ¹ his daughter and said to her, ¹ “Arise from your place! Let ¹ nobody help you except Jesus ⁵ alone, and walk restored in ¹ the presence of all these (people)! ¹ Come to ¹ me!” And she arose ¹ and went over to him. ¹⁰ The crowd rejoiced on account of ¹ what happened. ¹ Peter said to them, “Behold, ¹ your hearts have been persuaded ¹ that God is not powerless ¹⁵ regarding anything ¹ we ask of him.” Then ¹ they rejoiced even more and praised ¹ God.

Peter said 131 to his daughter, ¹ “Go to your place, sit down, ¹ and become an invalid ¹ again. For this ⁵ is beneficial for you and me.” ¹ The girl went back again, ¹ sat down in her ¹ place, and became again as she ¹ was before. The whole crowd ¹⁰ wept and begged Peter ¹ to make her healthy. ¹ Peter said to them, ¹ “As the Lord lives, this ¹ is beneficial for her and me. ¹⁵ For on the day she was born ¹ to me I saw a vision and ¹ the Lord said ¹ to me, ‘Peter, there has been born ¹ to you today a great 132 trial. For this (daughter) ¹ will wound many ¹ souls if her body ¹ remains healthy.’ ⁵ But I ¹ thought the vision ¹ was mocking me.

“When ¹ the girl became ten ¹ years old, many were ¹⁰ tempted by ¹ her. And a man rich ¹ in property, Ptolemy, ¹ after he had seen the ¹ girl bathing ¹⁵ with her mother, sent ¹ for her so that he might take her for his ¹ wife. Her mother was not ¹ persuaded. He sent for her many ¹ times. He could not cease [...]. (pp. 133-34 are lost. The sense of these pages can be recovered from the context with the aid of a brief notice by Augustine in his treatise against Adimantus, in which he refers to an apocryphal work “about the daughter of Peter himself who became paralysed through the prayers of her father.” It appears, then, that Ptolemy, in his passionate desire, abducted the girl and was about to have intercourse with her by force when she was suddenly paralysed by a divine act that had been sought by Peter in prayer.) 134 ¹⁹

“[The men-servants of] 135 Ptolemy [returned] the girl, ¹ and put her down ¹ before the house, and departed. ¹ And when I and her mother realized it, ⁵ we went down ¹ and found the girl ¹ with one whole side of her body, ¹ from her toes to her ¹ head, paralyzed and withered. ¹⁰ We picked her up, praising the ¹ Lord who had ¹ saved his servant from defilement, ¹ [and] pollution, and [destruction]. ¹ This is the cause of ¹⁵ [the fact] that the girl ¹ [remains] thus to this ¹ day.

“Now then, it is ¹ fitting for you to know ¹ the (subsequent) deeds of Ptolemy. 136 He was smitten ¹ in his heart and grieved ¹ night and ¹ day on account of what ⁵ happened to him. And ¹ because of (the) many tears he ¹ shed he became ¹ blind. He intended ¹ to go and ¹⁰ hang himself. And behold ¹ in the ninth hour ¹ of that day, ¹ and when he was alone ¹ in his bedroom, [he] ¹⁵ saw a great light ¹ shining in the whole house, ¹ and heard ¹ a voice saying 137 to him, ‘Ptolemy, ¹ God did not ¹ give his vessels for ¹ corruption and pollution. ⁵ But it was necessary ¹ for you, since you believed ¹ in me, that you not defile ¹ my virgin, whom ¹ you should have recognized as your sister, ¹⁰ since I have become ¹ one Spirit for you both. ¹ But arise ¹ and go quickly to ¹ the house of Peter the ¹⁵ apostle and you will see ¹ my glory. He will explain ¹ the matter to you.’

“And Ptolemy ¹ did not hesitate. He ¹ commanded his men-servants 138 to lead him ¹ and to bring him to me. ¹ And when he had come ¹ to me he narrated everything that ⁵ had happened to him ¹ in the power of Jesus ¹ Christ our Lord. Then he ¹ saw with the eyes ¹ of his flesh and the ¹⁰ eyes of his soul. And ¹ many hoped ¹ in Christ. He did ¹ good things for them ¹ and he gave them ¹⁵ the gift of God. ¹

Afterwards Ptolemy ¹ died. ¹ He departed from life and ¹ went to his Lord. 139 And [when he made] his ¹ will, he wrote in a ¹ piece of land in the name of my ¹ daughter, since because of her ⁵ he believed in God ¹ and was saved. I myself ¹ took care of the administration ¹ entrusted to me most carefully. ¹ I sold ¹⁰ the land. And ¹ God alone ¹ knows, neither I, nor ¹ my daughter, {I sold the land} ¹ kept anything ¹⁵ back from the price of the land. ¹ But I sent the ¹ entire sum of money to the poor. ¹

“Know, then, O servant of ¹ Christ Jesus, that God 140 [watches over those who] ¹ are his and he prepares ¹ what is good for ¹ each one. But we ⁵ think that ¹ God has forgotten us. ¹ Now then, brothers, let ¹ us be penitent and ¹ watchful, and pray. ¹⁰ And the goodness ¹ of God will look ¹ down upon us — and we ¹ wait for it.” And ¹ {all} other teachings ¹⁵ Peter spoke in the ¹ presence of them all. ¹ Praising the name 141 of the Lord Christ, ¹ he gave them all ¹ bread. ¹ When he had distributed it, ¹ he ⁵ arose and went ¹ into his house. ¹

Afterword

THE MODERN RELEVANCE OF GNOSTICISM

by

RICHARD SMITH

“The Gnostics,” Edward Gibbon informed the late eighteenth century, “were distinguished as the most polite, the most learned, and the most wealthy of the Christian name.” Why would Gibbon have told such a mischievous lie? There is nothing in the primary sources available to him on which to base his claim. Gibbon, nevertheless, in that notorious fifteenth chapter of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, avoids the old hostilities. In his witty, malicious – today we might add revisionist – style, Gibbon portrays the Gnostics with such impartiality that his chapter becomes, if not an advertisement for heresy, then at least a subversion of orthodoxy. His catty remarks on the early Christian church were later bowdlerized, yet the most unkind words he has for the Gnostics is to describe their “vain science” as “sublime but obscure.” Hardly the rascals of tradition, we can imagine Gibbon’s Gnostics gracing one of Mme Geoffrin’s salons.

Other philosophes might have welcomed their presence as well, for, as part of the Enlightenment attack on Christianity, the ancient dualist heretics of the early church found their cause promoted. The method, or perhaps the battle order (Gibbon’s Memoirs speak of shooting the shaft and sounding the alarm), was revealed by Gibbon when he fondly praised that patron saint of the Enlightenment, Pierre Bayle. Bayle “balances the false religions in his sceptical scales, til the opposite quantities annihilate each other.” Bayle’s Historical and Critical Dictionary had no entry on Gnostics or Gnosticism (a brand new word in his day), but gathered all of the old dualists together under the heading of Manichaeans. The Manichaean movement had been the final flourish of Gnosticism, and had survived through various geographical wanderings until its flare up in southern France in the Middle Ages when it was eliminated by a crusade. Until the eighteenth century revived an interest in the older sects now called gnostic, the term Manichaean was used for all dualist heresies.

For Voltaire, another of Bayle's devotees, the catchword was also Manichaeism. Candide depicts the adventures of a few silly optimists in a wicked world; a world in which Christian priests are among the most villainous troublemakers. Peter Gay has even described the book as "a declaration of war on Christianity." Yet in the midst of all the chaos Voltaire includes one sympathetic character; a wandering scholar named Martin who introduces himself to Candide as "a Manichaeism." When Candide protests that there are no more Manichaeisms in the world, Martin simply says, "I cannot think any other way. I think that God has abandoned this globe, or rather this globule, to some maleficent being." The events of the novel confirm Martin's assessment. Bayle had said that the gnostic belief in several eternal beings, some good, some bad, in perpetual conflict, "is not so unlikely" to "men who think and reason." Voltaire says, in his own Philosophical Dictionary discussing the Gnostics and Manichaeisms, "to have imagined two all-powerful beings fighting each other" is not a "trivial" notion. He slyly describes Basilides' myth of "the creation of the world by god's lowest angels, and that these, not being skillful, arranged matters as we see them." In his story, Plato's Dream, Voltaire tells a nightmarish version of creation by an incompetent genie called Demogorgon. Dualist stories seem to have appealed to Voltaire's own sense of conflict. There is in his writings, as Roland Barthes puts it, "a kind of Manichaeism struggle between stupidity and intelligence." Or, as David Hume summed up the opposition in one breath, "Stupidity, Christianity, and Ignorance."

The Enlightenment writers created a sympathetic picture of the Gnostics because heterodoxy suited their anti-orthodoxy. They emphasized the dualist critique of the world, but ignored the dualist promise of transcendent escape. The philosophes thus created a version of the Gnostics that was, like themselves, secular. It is because we are still the heirs of that secular agenda that an assessment of any modern relevance of Gnosticism properly begins in the eighteenth century. There was, certainly, an interest in unorthodox, esoteric, and even occult matters in earlier centuries. In the Renaissance, for example, there was something of the spirit of exploration and conquest in such studies. Disparate traditions, hermetic and cabalistic, were appropriated and harmonized with Christianity. Ficino, Agrippa, Dee, and Bruno all considered themselves Christians. They were not at all, moreover, interested in the ancient Gnostics. The eighteenth-century philosophes regarded Gnosticism as a counter-tradition and wielded it as a weapon in their outflanking tactics to overthrow the received tradition.

That the "candid but rational inquiry" (the words with which Gibbon opens his chapter on Christianity) was often a relativist pose was mostly lost on following generations. The irony was ignored and Reason itself was regarded as absolutist and a threat to the human imagination. William Blake named the enemy in his poem Milton:

... this Newtonian Phantasm
 This Voltaire & Rousseau: this Hume & Gibbon
 ... the Reasoning Power in Man
 This is a false Body: an Incrustation over my Immortal Spirit; a Selfhood, which must be put off & annihilated away ...
 I come in Self-annihilation & the grandeur of Inspiration
 To cast off Rational Demonstration by Faith in the Saviour
 To cast off the rotten rags of Memory by Inspiration To cast off Bacon, Locke & Newton from Albion's covering
 To take off his filthy garments, & clothe him with Imagination

This is a new use of dualist language. For Blake, salvation was the free expression of his own visionary imagination. Only a few months before his death, he wrote to a friend that he was "very near the gates of death ... but not in spirit and life, not in the real man, the imagination, which liveth for ever. In that I am stronger and stronger, as this foolish body decays." Throughout his life, Blake expressed this vision in poetic myths with a strong gnostic character. The evil demiurge of these poems he calls Urizen, a polysemous figure who suggests so much more than the creator of the physical world, Jehovah. He is also, as "prince of Light," Satan and the "Enlightenment" as his name (your Reason) signifies. He is evil for Blake because his creation limits (Horizen, his name implies, too) and his primary symbol is "the golden compasses." Like the bearded figure in Blake's famous print "The Ancient of Days," Urizen leans out of eternity and reaches down into the dark void with his compasses to measure, to divide, and to imprison. In The Four Zoas Blake describes the creation in images that echo and parody, like some gnostic texts, both Genesis and Plato's Timaeus:

... First the Architect divine his plan Unfolds, The wondrous scaffold reard all round the infinite Quadrangular the building rose the heavens squared by a line ...
 A wondrous golden Building; many a window many a door
 And many a division let in & out into the vast unknown
 Cubed in window square immoveable, within its walls & cielings
 The heavens were closed and spirits mournd their bondage night and day

When he finishes his creation Urizen, like Yaldabaoth, claims, "Am I not God. Who is Equal to me."

Then he began to sow the seed he girded round his loins
With a bright girdle & his skirt filld with immortal souls
Howling & Wailing fly the souls from Urizen's strong hand

This evil creator depicted by Blake in his later poems helps remove some of the ambiguity from the question he had posed in "The Tyger": "What immortal hand or eye, / Dare frame thy fearful symmetry?" Where William Blake read or heard about the Gnostics is not exactly clear, but some of his views certainly echo them consciously. With the Gnostics he separates the true God from nature, and regards the creator of the natural universe as evil. Crabb Robinson, a friend of Wordsworth, talked with Blake and kept a diary. Discussing Wordsworth's "eloquent descriptions of Nature," Blake told Robinson that Wordsworth didn't believe in God, "For Nature is the work of the Devil." When Robinson pointed out the creation of the earth by God in Genesis, Blake "repeated the doctrine of the Gnostics with sufficient consistency" that his interviewer was silenced.

Harold Bloom, a contemporary interpreter of the Romantic tradition, compares Blake's Tyger with Melville's Moby Dick. Both beasts represent nature, and "nature is death." Nature "painted like a harlot," Melville wrote, "God's great, unflattering laureate, Nature." The material universe is, for Ahab, "but a mask," a cosmetic behind which lies death, like a white shroud, like the albino whale. In a short poem he called "Fragments of a Lost Gnostic Poem," Melville wrote "Matter in end will never abate / His ancient brutal claim." Two years before the publication of Moby Dick, Herman Melville purchased a copy of Piere Bayle's old Dictionary. What he read there (and elsewhere) found its way into the novel, and whether Ahab shakes his angry harpoon at a monstrous creature or a malicious gnostic creator is not distinct. "An inscrutable malice," Ahab says, "is chiefly what I hate; and be the white whale agent, or be the white whale principal, I will wreak that hate upon him. Talk not to me of blasphemy, man." Ishmael, attempting to explain this fury, compares Ahab's feelings to those of a sect of ancient Gnostics. These were the Ophites, a group that today's scholarship calls the Sethians, associated with several of our Nag Hammadi texts. Ahab, says Ishmael, deliriously transferred the idea of "that intangible malignity which has been from the beginning . . . which the ancient Ophites of the east revered . . . to the abhorred white whale." In the final pages of the book Ahab flings an accusation at the creator that conjures Yaldabaoth's ignorance of his own mother.

Thou knowest not how came ye, hence callest thyself unbegotten: certainly knowest not thy beginning, hence callest thyself unbegun. I know that of me, which thou knowest not of thyself, oh, thou omnipotent. There is some unsuffusing thing beyond thee, thou clear spirit, to whom all thy eternity is but time, all thy creativeness mechanical.

In these passages from Blake and Melville, the physical world is a barrier. Romantic writers regard that barrier with feelings from discomfort to open hostility. The present collection of texts from Nag Hammadi shows us that what we call Gnosticism can range between a hierarchical monism to strict dualism. In a similar manner texts from the Romantic tradition depict, with varying degrees of conflict, a drama of separation and reintegration. The "fall into Division," Blake wrote, "and Resurrection to Unity." Salvation consists in what Harold Bloom describes as "the post-Enlightenment passion for Genius and the Sublime." "The power of the mind," as Coleridge had put it, "over the universe of death." Scholars have found examples of "Gnosticism" in the writings of Baudelaire, Rimbaud, the early Flaubert (in The Temptation of Saint Antony, a book much inspired by his reading of Pierre Bayle), the French Symbolists, the German Idealists, the American Transcendentalists, Carlyle, and so on. "Indeed," writes Bloom, "it could be argued that a form of Gnosticism is endemic in Romantic tradition." His primary example of this gnostic tendency is W.B. Yeats. Yeat's lyrics internalize the dualism and dramatize a conflict between various aspects of the self. In such poems as "A Dialogue of Self and Soul," the two speakers, Bloom argues, "are precisely the pneuma and the psyche of Gnostic formulation. The place of the Gnostic alien or transmundane true God in Yeats is taken by the imagination, which in Yeats is closer to Gnostic transcendence than it is to the Romantic Sublime."

If but imagination scorn the earth
And intellect its wandering
To this and that and t'other thing, Deliver from the crime of death and birth.

This internalized antithetical conflict is more boldly stated in "Sailing to Byzantium":

Consume my heart away; sick with desire
And fastened to a dying animal
It knows not what it is; and gather me
Into the artifice of eternity.
Once out of nature I shall never take My bodily form from any natural thing.

Yeats's strange and famous poem "The Second Coming" historicizes this antithesis and envisions the approach of a world spirit signaling a new, post-Christian age.

Surely some revelation is at hand;
 Surely the Second Coming is at hand.
 The Second Coming! Hardly are those words out
 When a vast image out of Spiritus Mundi Troubles my sight . . .
 . . . but now I know
 That twenty centuries of stony sleep
 Were vexed to nightmare by a rocking cradle,
 And what rough beast, its hour come round at last,
 Slouches towards Bethlehem to be born?

How are we to read these difficult images? Is Yeats afraid, or simply struck with wonder? Have the twenty Christian centuries been a nightmare? And how much can we make of the antithesis between "know" and "sleep"? A lot. The rough beast's slumber recalls "Urizen laid in a stony sleep." Yeats, after all, had edited Blake's poems for publication. The turning of the ages was recorded by Yeats, acting as amanuensis to his wife who was in mediumistic trance, and published as A Vision. The anti-Christian tone is not unrelated to his involvement in various occult groups while he lived in London and to his membership in The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, which enthusiastically circulated exotic religious writings including gnostic texts.

What Yeats and the Golden Dawn read as "gnostic" were often greco-roman magical texts. He also read gnostic sources in the books published by his long time acquaintance G.R.S. Mead. Mead devoted his life to publishing English translations of the gnostic sources available at the turn of the century. In books like Fragments of a Faith Forgotten he promoted an interest in the subject among nonscholarly readers. Mead and Yeats had met as members of the esoteric section of the Theosophical Society, which gathered at the London flat of H.P. Blavatsky in the 1880s.

It was Madame Blavatsky who first claimed the Gnostics as precursors for the occult movement. In her program to divide speculative learning into esoteric and exoteric, truth and religion, the Gnostics were an obvious opposition to what she called "Churchianity." She absorbed the Gnostics, in her universal free-associative style, into a great occult synthesis:

Ialdabaoth, the creator of the material world, was made to inhabit the planet Saturn according to the Ophites. From Ialdabaoth emanate six spirits who respectively dwell with their father in the seven planets. . . . These seven planets are identical with the Hindu Sapta-lokas, the seven places or spheres, or the superior and inferior worlds; for they represent the kabalistic seven spheres. With the Ophites they belong to the lower spheres. The monograms of these Gnostic planets are also Buddhistic, the latter differing, albeit slightly, from those of the usual astrological "houses."

This, from Isis Unveiled, is a typical sample of Blavatsky's treatment of the Gnostics. There is an esoteric tradition, Blavatsky felt, within every religion teaching her "secret doctrine." "The Gnosis, or traditional secret knowledge, was never without its representatives in any age or country," she writes. The esoteric tradition within Christianity is represented by the Gnostics, but "it is the intense and cruel desire to crush out the last vestige of the old philosophies by perverting their meaning, for fear that their own dogmas should not be rightly fathered on them, which impels the Catholic Church to carry on such a systematic persecution in regard to Gnostics. Alas, alas!"

H.P. Blavatsky and her Theosophical Society wrote the book on secret traditions. Most esoteric movements ever since have found it almost impossible to step outside of her (sometimes unconscious) influence. A few recent groups calling themselves gnostic have appealed to an underground yet pervasive "gnosis" rather than to the ancient historical gnostic sects. This is true of La Asociacion Gnostica which is widespread throughout Latin America, as well as the Los Angeles based Ecclesia Gnostica.

Indeed, in our century there have been several appropriations of gnostic motifs. The psychologist, C.G. Jung, continually refers to the Gnostics in his writings and was often photographed "wearing his gnostic ring." His lifelong interest in the subject was rewarded in 1952 when the Jung Institute in Zurich purchased and presented to him on his birthday a recently discovered gnostic papyrus manuscript. This "Jung Codex" is now our Nag Hammadi Codex I. Jung wrote so much about the Gnostics simply because he liked them. In Psychological Types he writes of "the vastly superior [compared to that of the Church] intellectual content of gnosis, which in the light of our present mental development has not lost but has considerably gained in value." He goes on to praise its "Promethean and creative spirit . . . we find in Gnosticism what was lacking in the centuries that followed: a belief in the efficacy of individual revelation and individual knowledge. This belief was rooted in the proud feeling of man's affinity with the gods, subject to no human law, and so overmastering that it may even subdue the gods by the sheer power of gnosis."

In 1916, before he wrote his major works, during a period when he believed his house to be filled with parapsychological phenomena, Jung wrote a visionary piece called The Seven Sermons to the Dead and ascribed it pseudonymously to Basilides, the second-century Alexandrian Gnostic:

In the night the dead stood along the wall and cried:
We would have knowledge of god. Where is god?
Is god dead?
God is not dead. Now, as ever, he liveth.
This is a god whom ye know not, for mankind forgot it.
We name it by its name ABRAXAS.
Abraxas standeth above the sun and above the devil.
It is improbable probability, unreal reality.
Had the pleroma a being, Abraxas would be its manifestation.
The dead now raised a great tumult for they were Christians.

But Jung's Basilides preaches on:

Abraxas begetteth truth and lying, good and evil, light and darkness, in the same word and in the same act.
Wherefore is Abraxas terrible.
It is love and love's murder.
It is the saint and his betrayer.
It is the brightest light of day and the darkest night of madness.

In the early 1950s Dr. Jung defended himself against an attack by Martin Buber. Under discussion was the entire body of Jung's work, but Buber pointed a particularly snide finger at "his little Abraxas opus." The criticism was that Jung had overstepped the boundaries of psychology into religion, and had located God in the unconscious (rather than in Buber's transcendent "Thou"). This god of the self was, he complained, "the Gnostic god who unites good and evil in himself." Jung took all of this seriously. "Why is so much attention devoted to the question of whether I am a Gnostic?" He apologized for "once having perpetrated a poem, a sin of my [41-year-old] youth . . . I am a psychiatrist," he responded, "whose prime concern is to record and interpret his empirical material, to investigate facts and make them more generally comprehensible." Jung's "empirical" defense was later to be complicated by the description in his autobiography of his composition of the Septem Sermones. "All my works, all my creative activity, has come from those initial fantasies . . . Everything that I accomplished in later life was already contained in them, although at first only in the form of emotions and images."

The paradoxical Abraxas of the early poem thus prefigures "the self" which Jung discussed over the next four decades as "a complexio oppositorum." Self-knowledge is achieved through the conscious assimilation of the contents of the unconscious, including its dark "shadow" side, towards a goal of "wholeness." Jung, therefore, was deeply interested in the gnostic insistence on evil as an active principle as opposed to the incomplete Christian view of evil as the privatio boni, the absence of good. "The Gnostics," he writes with approval, "exhaustively discussed the problem of evil," and he quotes the famous question of Basilides, "Whence comes evil?" Their answer was to oppose "the good, perfect, spiritual God by an imperfect, vain, ignorant and incompetent demiurge." In his book Aion, Jung performs a telling psychoanalytic turn on this myth. "The ignorant demiurge who imagined he was the highest divinity illustrates the perplexity of the ego when it can no longer hide from itself the knowledge that it has been dethroned by a supra-ordinate authority . . . that indescribable whole consisting of the sum of conscious and unconscious processes, the antithesis of the subjective ego-psyche, what I have called the self." Jung pushes this interpretation to claim that "for the Gnostics – and this is their real secret – the psyche existed as a source of knowledge . . . that many of the Gnostics were nothing other than psychologists." C.G. Jung, indeed, saw his own work as "a link in the Aurea Catena" (the Golden Chain) from Gnosticism through philosophical alchemy to the modern psychology of the unconscious. The chain had been broken by the Enlightenment with its "devilish developments, anti-christianity and rationalistic hybris." The tradition was then revived "by Freud, who had introduced the classical Gnostic motifs of sexuality and the wicked paternal authority." Freud, however, left out "that other essential aspect of Gnosticism: the primordial image of the spirit as another, higher god who gave mankind the vessel of spiritual transformation, a feminine principle." Jung compensates by reintegrating these motifs and thus creating a version of psychic unity that not only paralleled his reading of Gnosticism, but was inspired by it. Jung's psychology portrays a version of the self that is fragmented, as do many gnostic texts, and like them finds an image of divinity among these fragments. Unlike gnostic texts, however, Jungian psychology does not see salvation as a separation of that divine fragment from the mundane, and its removal to the divine. Rather, Jung takes the entire dualist myth and locates it within the psyche. The result, as his own judgment states, is "that my leanings are therefore towards the very reverse of dualism."

Many of our century's fiction writers have portrayed versions of this psychologized Gnosticism. Herman Hesse's Demian, published in 1925, was written right after Hesse had undergone Jungian analysis. The characters and events of the novel constitute an allegory of the Jungian archetypes. The strongest character, Demian, appears to blur all distinctions of age, gender, or ethics. He is "unimaginably different." Demian tells the hero "dismaying" gnostic revisions of scripture to point out that the "people with character tend to receive the short end of the stick in biblical stories." Like a (Jungian) Gnostic also, Demian pushes the hero to transcend his limited view of reality. "Who would be born must first destroy a world," he says, and fly to God, a God whose "name is Abraxas, uniting the godly and devilish elements." That Demian represents an aspect of the hero's own self is clarified as the novel ends by blurring the distinction between the "other" and the "inner." In a mystical, homoerotic vision, the two characters merge into one. Hesse's next novel, Steppenwolf, portrays a character dwelling in "this alien world . . . the homeless Steppenwolf, the solitary." Steppenwolf, with an allusion to ancient Gnosticism's most stunning image, sees "the whole of human life as a violent and ill-fated abortion of the primal mother, a savage and dismal catastrophe of nature." At conflict with "nature" (Hesse identifies this with "bourgeois convention") is "the spirit . . . driven to God." In the course of the novel Steppenwolf is to discover that the conflict is more complicated, that there are not two but a thousand souls clamoring within him, "a chaos of potentialities and impulses." In answer to his striving, Steppenwolf is given a very psychologizing, very modern message. "You have a longing to forsake this world and to penetrate to a world beyond time. You know, of course, where this other world lies hidden. Only within yourself exists that other reality . . ."

These novels of Hermann Hesse are early versions of a genre that has been important throughout this century: stories of conflict between the outer world and the inner reality discovered by journeying through psychological realms. It is not surprising that some of these writings are read as "gnostic." Some, such as Doris Lessing's Briefing for a Descent into Hell, are devastating in their criticism of normal life. Rather than promoting any integration towards a total personality, her novel valorizes the hero's dissociated psychic fantasies at the expense of his mental "health." His inner journey takes the hero to mythological lands, to outer space, and back to earth – his “descent into hell” – as a messenger of the gods. The character’s struggle to hold on to this reality, against the drugs and shock therapy of his psychiatrists, is described with the classical gnostic metaphors (and with the typically gnostic reversal) of sleeping and waking, forgetting and remembering.

Although they vary in the radicalness of their dualism, all of these psychological writings agree that meaning is not to be discovered in the manifest world. By situating meaning within the human psyche, and implicitly ignoring any transcendent location for meaning, these works are definitely modern. Other types of “immanent” salvation have also been described as “modern Gnosticism.” A vast description of modern Gnosticism – including psychology in its scope – was the predominate theme of the political philosopher Eric Voegelin. Beginning in 1952 with The New Science of Politics and in many further books such as Science, Politics and Gnosticism, Voegelin identifies “the essence of modernity as the growth of gnosticism.” He understands Gnosticism to be “the experience of the world as an alien place . . . a horror of existence and a desire to escape from it.” Rather than the ancient Gnostic achronic salvation from above, however, Voegelin sees modern Gnosticism promising salvation in the future, by means of the historical process. For this radically immanent salvation, without transcendental interruptions, he faults the eighteenth century, and has some harsh words especially for Condorcet and Voltaire. Voegelin proceeds, like some unhinged biblical prophet, to trace and decry the course of modern Gnosticism: Comte, “the first high priest of a new religion, positivism”; Hegelianism (although as early as 1835 Ferdinand Christian Baur had argued for the similarity between German idealism and Gnosticism, calling it “the philosophy of religion, the Godhead’s evolving self-knowledge through man”); Marxism, “the self-salvation of man, an intellectual swindle”; Communism, “left-wing gnosticism”; National Socialism, “right-wing gnosticism”; totalitarianism, “the end of the Gnostic search for a civil theology”; progressivism, “scientism and the immanentist pride in the variants of salvation through physics, economics, sociology, biology, and psychology.” All, all of this, Eric Voegelin calls Gnosticism. He appeals for “repressing Gnostic corruption and restoring the forces of civilization,” and concludes, “fate is in the balance.”

Voegelin’s writings could be regarded as silly were it not for their strong impact within and beyond his own field of political science. Academicians from various disciplines have gathered at conferences such as “Gnosticism and Modernity,” where they discussed such topics as "The Gnosticism of Lincoln's Political Rhetoric." The literary critic, Cleanth Brooks, having absorbed Voegelin's version of Gnosticism, described Walker Percy's novel Lancelot as "modern Gnosticism." The main character of this book, Lancelot Lamar, is confronted by his wife's and daughter's ongoing orgy with a group of sex and drug enthusiasts from Hollywood. In a fury of crazed self-righteousness, Lancelot decides to take matters into his own hands (immanent salvation) and burns down his house with everyone in it. It would appear that Voegelin's influence has removed the distinction between "Gnosticism" and what we call "apocalypticism."

Voegelin portrays Gnosticism as an attempt to solve the ills and evils of this world by the promise of a revolutionary new realm. An ironic complement to this portrait, and a tribute to the complexity and contradictions of the ancient sects, is that the rejection of this world and disentanglement from it is only one gnostic attitude. An ascetic withdrawal is one ethical response to anti-cosmic dualism, and one which characterizes most of the Nag Hammadi texts ("The World Haters," Time magazine headlined its report on the present translation project). An opposite stance is to immerse oneself in worldly sins and pleasures, these being, after all, alien and uncorrupting things. This attitude, not found in our texts but attested in ancient descriptions of the gnostic sects, has inspired several recent novels of Lawrence Durrell. His four novels that make up The Alexandria Quartet depict a gnostic "cabal" led by a "homosexual goat" named Balthazar. "Indulge but refine" is Balthazar's doctrine, which he claims to be uniquely Alexandrian, "a town of sects and gospels. And for every ascetic she has always thrown up one religious libertine – Carpocrates [the second-century gnostic], Anthony [the Christian monk] – who was prepared to founder in the senses as deeply and truly as any desert father in the mind It is the national peculiarity of the Alexandrians to seek a reconciliation (between extreme sensuality and intellectual asceticism). That is why we are hysterics and extremists. That is why we are the incomparable lovers we are." One character, Justine, plays out on this earth the drama of the gnostic Wisdom goddess, "bending over the dirty sink with the foetus in it [like] poor Sophia of Valentinus." Are we, she wonders, "the work of an inferior deity, a Demiurge, who wrongly believed himself to be God? Heavens, how probable it seems." Justine quotes Balthazar, who in turn quotes E.M. Forster. Forster's book Alexandria: A History and a Guide was the main source of Durrell's understanding of Gnosticism, with its tragic combination of physical love and theology. Here is Forster's lovely retelling of the creation myth of Valentinus: "He imagines a primal God, the centre of a divine harmony, who sent out manifestations of himself in pairs of male and female. Each pair was inferior to its predecessor, and Sophia the female of the thirtieth pair, least perfect of all. She showed her imperfection not, like Lucifer, by rebelling from God, but by desiring too ardently to be united to him. She fell through love . . . and the universe is formed out of her agony and remorse." Durrell went on in later novels like Monsieur to describe yet another modern sect of Egyptian Gnostics. In Monsieur the amorous interplay of genders and geometries is complex enough to rival any ancient gnostic cosmogony. "I am amazed," wrote Durrell's long time friend, that modern apostle of experience, Henry Miller, "that there has been no revival of this sect." Forster had attempted an answer: "it was pessimistic, imaginative, esoteric – three great obstacles to success."

One interpretation of ancient Gnosticism, combined with an assessment of its modern relevance, has won the favor of many scholarly specialists in gnostic studies. In the 1920s Hans Jonas was a student of both the philosopher Martin Heidegger and the New Testament scholar Rudolf Bultmann. He was thus in a unique position to participate, as a Bultmannian, in this century's investigation of ancient gnostic sources and, as a Heideggerian, in the philosophy of existentialism. Throughout his long career, Jonas has played these two themes against each other. The link between the two is provided by dualism. "Gnosticism," he claims "has been the most radical embodiment of dualism ever to have appeared on the stage of history. It is a split between self and world, men's alienation from nature, the metaphysical devaluation of nature, the cosmic solitude of the spirit and the nihilism of mundane norms." It is "a lasting paradigm of the human condition." Likewise, "the essence of existentialism is a certain dualism, an estrangement between man and the world." Existentialism also contains a "depreciation of the concept of nature." Gnosticism, therefore, has "an analogical modernity." In his book The Gnostic Religion, Jonas focuses on one specific image that is used by both the ancients and the moderns to describe "the self-experience of existence," the image of "having been thrown." Here is Heidegger in Being and Time: "This characteristic of Dasein's Being . . . we call it the 'thrownness' (Geworfenheit). This downward plunge into and within the groundlessness of the inauthentic Being, is characterized by temptation, tranquillizing, alienation . . ." Jonas compares this to the famous ancient Valentinian formula that freedom is the knowledge of, among other things, "wherein we have been thrown." He made this comparison before the availability of the Nag Hammadi translations, which describe how Yaldabaoth and the archons “threw” mankind into matter and distraction. Jonas expertly draws attention to the dissimilarities as well: “Gnostic man is thrown into an antagonistic, anti-divine, and therefore anti-human nature, modern man into an indifferent one.” The modern version is more nihilistic, “a dualism without metaphysics.” Thrownness is, in both systems, however, “an existential mode of the past,” nor is there, he argues, a mode of genuine existence in the future. Genuine existence, freedom, dwells “only in the crisis between past and future, the razor’s edge of decision, the existential present of the moment.”

Hans Jonas presents a compelling argument, and the similarities between ancient Gnosticism and modern existentialism do seem at least “analogical.” We should keep in mind, however, the surprising condemnation of Gnosticism made by Albert Camus. Gnosticism, he claims in The Rebel, is conciliatory. It alters the course of metaphysical rebellion by developing the theory of a wicked, inferior god against whom to direct its attack, and exalts a superior god. “The vast number of aeons invented by Valentinus,” for instance, “are the equivalent of the intermediary truths to be found in Hellenism. Their aim is to diminish the absurdity of an intimate relationship between suffering humanity and an implacable god.”

Existentialist alienation and modern versions of visionary romanticism have combined to give Gnosticism a powerful literary expression. Jack Kerouac and Allen Ginsberg, fellow students at Columbia University in the 1940’s, were introduced to Gnosticism by their professor Raymond Weaver. John Tytell, an historian of “the Beat Generation,” has shown that an interest in gnostic themes voiced itself in Kerouac’s 1959 novel Doctor Sax. This mythic reverie of a book (“Memory and dream are intermixed in this mad universe”) describes Doctor Sax, “the King of Anti Evil,” and his attempts to save the world from “the Great World Snake of evil” with its “moo mouth maw of death.” The snake, with its “scaly ululating back,” is “an unforgettable flow of evil and wrath and of Satan”; and Doctor Sax, in “his slouched hat” (like Ahab’s — Kerouac’s professor had been a Melville scholar), searches the world “for herbs that he knew someday he would perfect into an alchemic-almost poison art . . . that would make the Snake drop dead.” The novel climaxes in a grand nightmare that seems to draw in every stock character from both sides of the conflict between good and evil. Allen Ginsberg also employs gnostic imagery to voice his hatred of evil in the world. In his nuclear protest poem "Plutonian Ode," written in 1978 after reading Jonas's book on Gnosticism, he confronts our "Radioactive Nemesis . . . named for Death's planet." Ginsberg's poem, in the form of an exorcistic chant, evokes the planetary archons of the Gnostics:

I salute your dreadful presence lasting majestic as the Gods, Sabaot, Jehova, Astapheus, Adonaeus, Elohim, Iao, Ialdabaoth, Aeon from Aeon born ignorant in an Abyss of Light, Sophia's reflections glittering thoughtful galaxies, whirlpools of star-spume silver-thin as hairs of Einstein!

Gnostic motifs have been identified in that most visionary of our modern literary genres, science fiction. Historian William Irwin Thompson sees the gnostic myth in Nicholas Roeg's film The Man Who Fell to Earth and in Zena Henderson's novel Pilgrimage. Both of these stories are about characters whose sojourn on this planet is a tragic separation from their true home. Painfully alienated, they struggle through memory to regain identification with their higher origins. Superman, too, although he is not homesick, is an alien battling against the forces of evil. Good and evil in "The Myth of Superman," Umberto Eco has written, are "clearly divided into zones of Manichaen incontrovertibility." It is, however, in the science fiction novels of the prolific writer Philip K. Dick that Gnosticism is most consciously employed. In Valis, published in 1981, a year before Dick's death, the main character has an encounter with the divine which "fires information into his head by a beam of pink light." The divine is "Mind," but Mind divided against itself, as two contending principles, like the schizophrenic main character of the novel. "From loss and grief the Mind has become deranged," he says. "Therefore we, as parts of the universe, the Brain, are partly deranged." This character, called Horselover Fat, has the following conversation with his therapist:

"Do you believe man is created in God's image?"

"Yes," Fat said, "but the creator deity, not the true God."

"What?"

Fat said, "That's Yaldabaoth. Sometimes called Samael, the blind god. He's deranged."

"What the hell are you talking about?"

Fat is talking about On the Origin of the World from the first edition of The Nag Hammadi Library published in 1977, which Dick quotes elsewhere in the novel. "A lunatic blind creator and his screwed-up world" explained, for Dick, the "irrational, whacked out, psychotic" universe.

In the course of the novel, Fat attempts to recapture, beyond the irrational god (and beyond his own schizophrenia), the true God. This science fiction novel and its sequel, The Divine Invasion, tell a cosmic story where mental psychoses play out a drama of madness and intelligence, where fragments of divinity lose and remember themselves in human minds. It might be supposed that the Nag Hammadi texts inspired these novels, but Gnosticism, it seems, is never so simple. "Horselover Fat" is a multilingual pun for the author's own name, and Philip K. Dick claimed that Valis was autobiographical, that he, like his character, had an encounter with a beam of divine pink light in 1974. The publication of the Nag Hammadi translations only confirmed his revelation.

A quite self-conscious incorporation of Nag Hammadi texts into a science fiction novel appeared in Harold Bloom's 1979 novel The Flight to Lucifer: A Gnostic Fantasy. In it the reincarnated Valentinus and his companions fly to a planet called Lucifer. Quoting our gnostic texts, the heroes wage a violent battle against Saklas, the Demiurge who is worshipped in his "Saklaseum." Bloom, more successful as an interpreter of literature, later confessed that The Flight to Lucifer reads as though Walter Pater were writing Star Wars. But, then, so does much ancient gnostic writing.

Harold Bloom's strongest appropriation of Gnosticism is in his theoretical books of literary criticism. He describes his "mode of interpreting literary texts as a Valentinian approach," that is, "an antithetical and revisionist way of reading." In a series of books beginning with The Anxiety of Influence in 1973 he studies "the anxiety that blocks creativeness" when a writer faces his great precursors. "In Yeats," for instance, the precursor is "the Spectre of Blake." Bloom's argument is that literary influence always proceeds by "a deliberately perverse misreading . . . an act of creative correction, of distortion, of perverse, willful revisionism whose purpose is to clear away the precursor so as to open a space for oneself." A text is therefore "a psychic battlefield" where influence fights to move backwards. Bloom's model for this is "Gnosticism, the religion of belatedness." "Valentinus," he argues, "is troping upon and indeed against his precursor authorities, to reverse his relationship to the Bible and to Plato, by joining himself to an asserted earlier truth that they supposedly have distorted." In 1982, in Agon, Bloom "misread" his gnostic precursors and claimed them for the latest school of literary criticism: "Gnosticism was the inaugural and most powerful of Deconstructions because it undid all genealogies, scrambled all hierarchies, allegorized every microcosm/macrocosm relation, and rejected every representation of divinity as non-referential." Bloom's willfulness and enthusiasm bowl the reader over. "Abandon Heidegger for Valentinus," he calls out. If his creative misprision is successful, it will be measured by our inability to read these old texts without feeling Harold Bloom's influence upon them.

By turning reading into an activity upon the text, or rather, by his re-situating of meaning within the intertextual relationship between texts, Bloom has shifted the discussion of Gnosticism away from the modern into the postmodern situation. Ihab Hassan's 1987 book The Postmodern Turn draws on Bloom and many other theorists to discuss a "New Gnosticism" characterized by the dematerialization of existence. The "New Gnosticism does not revert directly to the ancient cults," yet it was "prefigured by the ancient Gnostics, authors of a passionate subjectivity." Contemporary philosophy and literary criticism are on "a gnostic journey into subjectivity, that leaves texts behind and vanishes into consciousness." Our own mental constructs, he claims, are our knowledge. Human beings are becoming "gnostic creatures constituting themselves, determining their universe by symbols of their own making," and he indicates science fiction and fantasy literature as examples. As with the ancient Gnostics, the traditional codes no longer determine our meaning. The traditional canon of texts no longer has authority. Hassan sees "a vast, revisionary will" at work in our culture, unsettling and heterogeneous, and he quotes Jean-François Lyotard's now famous clarion call of postmodernism: "Let us wage a war on totality."

This postmodern appreciation of Gnosticism seems indeed to have an affinity with ancient sectarianism and revisionary mythologizing. Ihab Hassan considers "immanence" to be one of the main characteristics of the "New Gnosticism," a quality of both modern and postmodern theory. Thus, as Charles Jencks describes postmodern art and architecture, we have personal invented mythology and metaphors with no shared metaphysical substance. Anatole France (himself a writer who never made it into modernism) wrote an eloquent version of immanent gnostic salvation in his 1914 novel The Revolt of the Angels:

The God of old is dispossessed of His terrestrial empire, and every thinking being on this globe disdains Him or knows Him not. But what matter that men should be no longer submissive to Ialdabaoth if the spirit of Ialdabaoth is still in them; if they, like Him, are jealous, violent, quarrelsome, and greedy, and the foes of the arts and of beauty? What matter that they have rejected the ferocious demiurge? It is in ourselves and in ourselves alone that we must attack and destroy Ialdabaoth.

How much do these attempts to see modern, or even postmodern, relevance in Gnosticism help us to understand our ancient texts? or do they misuse the evidence? The evidence, in any case, is conflicting, as James M. Robinson declares in the opening sentences of the introduction to this book. It has also been pointed out that none of the Nag Hammadi texts use “gnostic” as a term of self-designation. Other ancient sources tell us that “gnostic” was used by some sects as a self-designation, but certainly not by all of the various sects that came to be called Gnosticism. We might also notice that the only mention of the famous gnostic heresiarchs in this library (in The Testimony of Truth) is as opponents, and “they” are attacked as heretics! With the publication of the Nag Hammadi library the study of ancient Gnosticism has become increasingly problematic, so likewise its relevance. The frequently attempted etymological definition (gnostic comes from the Greek word for know) is frustratingly inadequate. We do better to avoid generalizations and to marvel at the variety of the sources. The variety was brought about more by the mundane issues of time and space, than by theological debates. The first issue was the authority of tradition against revealed interpretations; the other was hierarchical unification against sectarianism. By taking the wrongheaded side of both these issues, the sects and our texts were excluded, and “Gnosticism” became a symbol of heresy. Interpretive appropriations of Gnosticism have all used this element of otherness: the Gnostics as anti-Christians, as visionaries, as esotericists, as symbolists of the psyche, as alienated, and as violent misinterpreters and revisers.

The recent availability of this large number of primary texts has opened up new ways of discussing, new relevances for, the ancient sects we call gnostic. By their skewed readings, by animating the relationship between tradition and imagination, these texts capture our attention. If cultures define themselves not at their calm centers, but at their peripheral conflicts of inclusion and exclusion, then Gnosticism, whatever we mean by it, is more than an antiquarian curiosity. It stands as a continuing testament to difference in the face of our cultural tendencies toward closed homogeneity.

THE DEFINITIVE COLLECTION OF THE Gnostic WRITINGS, INCLUDING SUCH CONTROVERSIAL WORKS AS THE GOSPEL OF THOMAS AND THE GOSPEL OF MARY

This definitive edition of The Nag Hammadi Library is the only complete, one-volume, English-language edition of the renowned library of fourth-century manuscripts discovered in Egypt in 1945. It includes the Gospel of Thomas, the Gospel of Mary, and other Gnostic gospels and sacred texts. First published in 1978 and revised, expanded, and updated in 1988, The Nag Hammadi Library launched modern Gnostic studies and exposed a movement within Christianity whose teachings are in many ways—as bestselling author Elaine Pagels has shown—as relevant today as they were centuries ago.

This edition takes into account recent developments in Gnostic scholarship, including the significance of the Gospel of Thomas as a source of the authentic sayings of Jesus. The translators include such prominent scholars as Elaine Pagels, Marvin Meyer, Helmut Koester, and Bentley Layton.

Praise for The Nag Hammadi Library:

“Opens the secrets of a religion, which the Gnostics themselves had hoped would be kept sealed until the Last Day.”—The New York Review of Books

“This fascinating collection will become as welcome an addition to the understanding of the formative years of the early Christian Church as the books on the Dead Sea Scrolls.”—The Washington Star

“A tremendous achievement.”—Chicago Theological Seminary Register

“A significant event.”—Journal of the American Academy of Religion

General editor JAMES M. ROBINSON is Arthur J. Letts Professor Emeritus of Religion at the Claremont Graduate University. Professor Robinson is one of the world's great scholars of the New Testament and early Christianity and the leader of research on the Nag Hammadi codices and the Q Gospel. He was the founder and director of the Institute for Antiquity and Early Christianity in Claremont, California.

Cover design: Adrian Morgan, redletterdesign.biz

HarperSanFrancisco
A Division of HarperCollinsPublishers

THE APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH
R. H. CHARLES

3 1761 02093419 6

830
33A3

MANUEL

*The Library
of Victoria University.*

Source Purchase

Accession No. 11,766

Class No.

Book No.

9.5.99

THE APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH

OTHER WORKS BY THE SAME EDITOR

The Book of Enoch.—Translated from Dillmann's Ethiopic Text (emended and revised in accordance with hitherto uncolated Ethiopic MSS. and with the Gizeh and other Greek and Latin Fragments), with Introduction, Notes, and Indices. 8vo. 16s.

The Ethiopic Version of the Hebrew Book of Jubilees.—Edited from four MSS. and critically revised, emended, and restored in accordance with the Hebrew, Syriac, Greek, and Latin Fragments of this Book. 4to. 12s. 6d.

The Book of the Secrets of Enoch.—Translated from the Slavonic by W. R. Morfill, M.A., and edited with Introduction, Notes, and Indices by R. H. Charles, M.A. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE CLARENDON PRESS, OXFORD.

THE
APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH

TRANSLATED FROM THE SYRIAC

CHAPTERS I.-LXXVII. FROM THE SIXTH CENT. MS. IN THE AMBROSIAN LIBRARY OF MILAN

AND

CHAPTERS LXXVIII.-LXXXVII.—THE EPISTLE OF BARUCH
FROM A NEW AND CRITICAL TEXT BASED ON TEN MSS. AND PUBLISHED HEREWITH

EDITED, WITH INTRODUCTION, NOTES, AND INDICES

BY

R. H. CHARLES, M.A.

TRINITY COLLEGE, DUBLIN, AND EXETER COLLEGE, OXFORD

LONDON
ADAM AND CHARLES BLACK

1896

25
1830
B3
A3

EMMANUEL

11,766

TO

MY WIFE

PREFACE

THE Apocalypse of Baruch is a composite work written in the latter half of the first century of the Christian era. It is thus contemporaneous with the chief writings of the New Testament. Its authors were orthodox Jews, and it is a good representative of the Judaism against which the Pauline dialectic was directed.

In this Apocalypse we have almost the last noble utterance of Judaism before it plunged into the dark and oppressive years that followed the destruction of Jerusalem. For ages after that epoch its people seem to have been bereft of their immemorial gifts of song and eloquence, and to have had thought and energy only for the study and expansion of the traditions of the Fathers. But when our book was written, that evil and barren era had not yet set in; breathing thought and burning word had still their home in Palestine, and the hand of the Jewish artist was still master of its ancient cunning.

And yet the intrinsic beauty of this book must to a great degree fail to strike the casual reader. Indeed, it could hardly be otherwise. For the present English version is a translation of the Syriac; the Syriac was a translation of the Greek, and the Greek in turn a translation from the Hebrew original. In each translation we may feel assured the original work was shorn in large and growing measure of its ancient vigour, and this is certainly the case in the version now before the reader. For the translator, having the interests of scholars before his eyes, has made it his aim to give a literal reproduction of the Syriac. And yet, even so, much of its native eloquence has survived, so that to be prized it needs only to be known, and our appreciation of its beauty, its tragic power and worth, must grow in the measure of our acquaintance with it.

The Apocalypse of Baruch has had a strange history. Written by Pharisaic Jews as an apology for Judaism, and in part an implicit polemic against Christianity, it gained nevertheless a larger circulation amongst Christians than amongst Jews, and owed its very preservation to the scholarly cares of the Church it assailed. But in the struggle for life its secret animus against Christianity begat an instinctive opposition in Christian circles, and so proved a bar to its popularity. Thus the place it would naturally have filled was taken by the sister work, 4 Ezra. This latter work having been written in some degree under Christian influences, and forming, in fact, an unconscious confession of the failure of Judaism to redeem the world, was naturally more acceptable to Christian readers, and thus, in due course, the Apocalypse of Baruch was elbowed out of recognition by its fitter and sturdier rival.

In this edition of Baruch—which is also the editio princeps—no pains have been spared as regards the criticism and emendation of the text, its interpretation, and the determination of its various sources.

As regards the text, the facts are briefly as follows: The first seventy-seven chapters, as appears on the title-page, are found only in one MS., namely, c. For the concluding nine chapters—the Epistle of Baruch—I have made use of c and nine other MSS. Of these I have collated eight—several of these for the first time. Through the kindness of the publishers I have been enabled to print on pp. 125-167 a critical text of this Epistle based on those MSS. As Ceriani and Lagarde contented themselves each with reproducing a single unamended MS., scholars will, I think, be grateful for this attempt to grapple with all the Syriac MSS. available. By this comparative study of c and the remaining nine MSS. in the chapters common to both, I have been able to ascertain the value of c in the chapters in which c stands alone. The trustworthiness of the MS. c, which we have thus established, is further confirmed by a Greek work, which borrows largely from our Apocalypse, the Rest of the Words of Baruch.

There are, of course, corruptions in the text. Some of these that are native to the Syriac have been removed by Ceriani, others by the editor; others are provisionally emended, or else reproduced in the English translation. But many still remain. Of these some are manifestly peculiar to the Greek, and have been dealt with accordingly. But the rest are not so, and are, in fact, incapable of explanation save on the hypothesis of a Hebrew original. To this hypothesis, which marks a new departure in the criticism of this book, I have been irresistibly led in the course of my study. In many passages I have by its means been able to reduce chaos to order. For details the reader should consult the Introduction, pp. xlv.-liii.

The interpretation of this book has been the severest task as yet undertaken by the editor. Insuperable difficulties confronted on every side, till at last he awoke to the fact that these were due to plurality of authorship. When once this fact was recognised and the various sources determined, the task of interpretation was materially lightened, and the value of the work for New Testament and Jewish scholars became every day more manifest. As my studies in this direction began in 1891, my conclusions are, save in a few cases, the result of long study and slowly matured conviction.

A special study of the relations subsisting between this Apocalypse and 4 Ezra will be found on pp. lxxvii.-lxxvi., where it is shown that whereas 4 Ezra is in many respects non-Jewish, our Apocalypse is a faithful exponent of the orthodox Judaism of the time. To this subject I may return in an edition of the former work.

Scholars are at last coming to recognise that the study of the literature to which this book belongs is indispensable for the interpretation of the New Testament. Thus Dr. Sanday and Mr. Headlam write in their recent work on the Epistle to the Romans (p. vii.): "It is by a continuous and careful study of such works that any advance in the exegesis of the New Testament will be possible."

My knowledge of Talmudic literature, so far as it appears in this book, is derived from Weber's Lehren des Talmuds, Edersheim's Life and Times, etc., Wunsche's translations of the various treatises of the Babylonian Talmud, Schwab's French translation of the Jerusalem Talmud, and in passages where translations were wanting, I had the ready help of Dr. Neubauer.

My thanks are also due to Mr. Buchanan Gray, for his revision of my proofs of the Hebrew original of Baruch.

17 BRADMORE ROAD, OXFORD,

September 1896.

CONTENTS

	PAGE
INTRODUCTION	xv-lxxxiv
§ 1. Short Account of the Book (pp. xv.-xvi.)—§ 2. Other Books of Baruch (pp. xvi.-xxii.)—§ 3. The Syriac MSS.—only one MS. c for chapters i.-lxxvii., but nine other MSS. for lxxviii.-lxxxvi. A comparative study of these MSS. in relation to c (pp. xxii.-xxx.)—§ 4. Previous Literature on the Apocalypse of Baruch. Reprint of MS. c —Ceriani; of b —Lagarde. Edition of lxxviii.-lxxxvi.—Walton and Paris Polyglots. Translation—Ceriani, Fritzsche (pp. xxx.-xxxiii.) Critical Inquiries—Langen, Ewald, Hilgenfeld, Wieseler, Fritzsche, Stähelin, Hausrath, Renan, Drummond, Kneucker, Dillmann, Edersheim, Rosenthal, Stanton, Schürer, Thomson, Kabisch, De Faye, Ryle (pp. xxxiii.-xliii.)—§ 5. The Syriac—a Translation from the Greek (pp. xliii.-xliv.)—§ 6. The Greek—a Translation from a Hebrew Original; for (1) The Quotations from the Old Testament are from the Massoretic text. (2) Hebrew Idioms survive in the Syriac. (3) Unintelligible expressions in the Syriac can be explained and the Text restored by Re-translation into Hebrew. (4) Many Paronomasiae discover themselves by such Re-translation (pp. xlv.-liii.)—§ 7. The different Elements in the Apocalypse of Baruch with their respective Characteristics and Dates. Of these elements $A^1 = \text{xxvii.-xxx. 1}$, $A^2 = \text{xxxvi.-xl}$, $A^3 = \text{liii.-lxxiv.}$ are Messiah Apocalypses written by different Authors before 70 A.D. (pp. liii.-lviii.) B^1 , B^2 , B^3 were written after 70 A.D. These are derived from different authors. They agree in expecting no Messiah, but are severally differentiated from each other by many characteristics. B¹ is the earliest—soon after 70 A.D., and B³ is probably the latest. B¹=i.-ix. 1; xliii.-xliv. 7; xlv.-xlvi. 6; lxxvii.-lxxxii.; lxxxiv.; lxxxvi.-lxxxvii. B²=xiii.-xxv.; xxx. 2-xxxv.; xli.-xlii.; xlv. 8-15; xlvii.-lii.; lxxv.-lxxvi.; lxxxiii. B³=lxxxv. x. 6-xii. 4, which I have called S, is probably from a source distinct from the rest (pp. lviii.-lxv.)—§ 8. The lost Epistle to the two and a half Tribes, on many grounds is probably identical with, or is the source of the Greek Baruch iii. 9-iv. 29 (pp. lxv.-lxvii.)—§ 9. The Relations of our Apocalypse with 4 Ezra. (a) The composite nature of 4 Ezra. (b) Conflicting characteristics of 4 Ezra and Baruch, the former to some extent non-Jewish in its teaching on the Law, Works, Justification, Original Sin and Freewill. (c) 4 Ezra from a Hebrew Original. (d) Relations of the respective Constituents of our Apocalypse and 4 Ezra. A¹ is older than E of 4 Ezra, and both A¹ and A² than M. B¹ older than E², and both B¹ and B² than S (pp. lxvii.-lxxvi.)—§ 10. Relation of this Apocalypse to the New Testament. Bulk of parallels in these books can be explained as being drawn independently from pre-existing literature, or as being commonplaces of the time; but others may point to dependence of Baruch on the New Testament (pp. lxxvi.-lxxix.)—§ 11. Value of our Apocalypse in the Attestation of the Jewish Theology of 50-100 A.D., and in the Interpretation of Christian Theology for the same Period: The Resurrection, Original Sin and Freewill, Works and Justification, Forgiveness (pp. lxxix.-lxxxiv.)

THE APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH. TRANSLATION AND CRITICAL AND EXEGETICAL NOTES	1-167
APPENDIX	168
INDEX I.—PASSAGES FROM THE SCRIPTURES AND ANCIENT WRITERS	169
INDEX II.—NAMES AND SUBJECTS	173

INTRODUCTION

§ 1. SHORT ACCOUNT OF THE BOOK

THIS beautiful Apocalypse, with the exception of nine chapters towards its close,¹ was lost sight of for quite 1200 years.

Written originally in Hebrew, it was early translated into Greek, and from Greek into Syriac. Of the Hebrew original every line has perished save a few still surviving in rabbinic writings. Of the Greek Version nothing has come down to us directly, though portions of it are preserved in the Rest of the Words of Baruch, a Greek work of the second century, and in a late Apocalypse of Baruch recently discovered in Greek and in Slavonic. Happily, the Syriac has been preserved almost in its entirety in a sixth century MS., the discovery of which we owe to the distinguished Italian scholar Ceriani. Of this MS., Ceriani published a Latin translation in 1866, the Syriac text in 1871, and the photo-lithographic facsimile in 1883. Though there are no adequate grounds for assuming a Latin Version, it is demonstrable that our Apocalypse was the foundation of a Latin Apocalypse of Baruch, a fragment of which is preserved in Cyprian.

¹ These chapters under the title "The Epistle of Baruch," or a similar one, were incorporated in the later Syriac Bible.

The Apocalypse of Baruch belongs to the first century of our era. It is a composite work put together about the close of the century, from at least five or six independent writings. These writings belong to various dates between 50 and 90 A.D., and are thus contemporaneous with the chief New Testament writings. It is this fact that constitutes the chief value of the work. We have here contemporaneous records of the Jewish doctrines and beliefs, and of the arguments which prevailed in Judaism in the latter half of the first century, and with which its leaders sought to uphold its declining faith and confront the attacks of a growing and aggressive Christianity.

Over against many of the Pauline solutions of the religious problems of the day, Jewish answers are here propounded which are frequently antagonistic in the extreme. It was this hidden hostility to Christianity that no doubt brought it into discredit. As early as the sixth century it seems to have passed out of circulation.

§ 2. OTHER BOOKS OF BARUCH

In addition to our Apocalypse, a considerable literature arose and circulated under Baruch's name, sometime before and after the Christian era. It will be sufficient for our present purpose to touch briefly on the different books belonging to it.

1. The Apocryphal Baruch in the LXX.—This book falls clearly into two parts—i.-iii. 8 being the first part, and iii. 9-v. constituting the second. The first part was originally written in Hebrew, the second is generally held to be of Greek origin, but this is doubtful. The first part of the book is said by Ewald and Marshall to have been composed three centuries before the Christian era, by Fritzsche and Schrader in the Maccabean period, by Kneucker and Schürer after 70 A.D. Most writers agree in assigning the second half of the book to the last-mentioned date. The second half, however, may also be composite. Thus Professor Marshall differentiates iii. 9-iv. 4 from iv. 5-v. 9, and regards the former as originally written in Aramaic, and the latter in Greek. The chief authorities on this book are Fritzsche, Exeget. Handbuch zu den Apocryphen, part i., pp. 165-202, 1851; Kneucker, Das Buch Baruch, 1879; Gifford, Speaker's Commentary, Apocrypha, ii. 241-286, 1888. On the probability that i. 1-3; iii. 9-iv. 29 of this book are a recast of a lost portion of our Apocalypse, i.e. "the Letter to the two and a half Tribes," see § 8, pp. lxv.-lxvii. There is no verbal borrowing between our Apocalypse and the Greek Baruch, but in the following passages there is a similarity of diction or of thought or of both. This list could be enlarged.

Apoc. of Baruch.	Book of Baruch.
i. 1 (mention of Jeconiah).	i. 3.
x. 16.	iv. 10, 14.
lix. 7.	iii. 12.
lxxvii. 10.	ii. 26.
lxxviii. 7.	iv. 36, 37 (v. 5, 6).
lxxix. 2.	i. 17, 18.
lxxx. 5.	ii. 13.
lxxxiv. 2-5.	i. 19 ; ii. 2.
lxxxvi. 1, 2.	i. 14.

2. The Rest of the Words of Baruch.—This book was written in Greek in the second century of our era. It seems in parts to be a Jewish work recast. The Greek text was first printed at Venice in 1609, next by Ceriani in 1868 under the title “Paralipomena Jeremiae” in his Monumenta Sacra, v. 11-18, and recently it has been critically edited by Rendel Harris in 1889. This book exists also in the Ethiopic Bible. The Ethiopic Version was edited from three MSS. by Dillmann in his Chrestomathia aethiopica in 1866. As these MSS. are inferior, and as no attempt was made by Dillmann to revise his text by means of the Greek, the present writer hopes in due time to edit a critical text from eleven Ethiopic MSS., accompanied with translation and notes. In this edition account will be taken of all the important variations of the Greek text.

This book is deeply indebted to our Apocalypse and attests the accuracy of the Syriac text in the following passages :—

Apoc. Bar.	Rest of the Words.
ii. 1.	i. 1, 3, 7.
ii. 2.	ii. 2.
v. 1.	i. 5 ; ii. 7 ; iii. 6 ; iv. 7.
vi. 1.	iv. 1.
vi. 4, 5, 6, 8, 10.	iii. 2, 5, 8, 14.
viii. 2, 5.	iv. 1, 2, 3, 4.
x. 2, 5, 6, 7, 18.	iv. 3, 4, 6, 9.
xi. 4, 5.	iv. 9.
xxxv. 2.	ii. 4.
lxxvii. 21, 23, 26.	vii. 3, 10, 12.
lxxx. 3.	i. 5 ; iv. 7.
lxxxv. 2.	ii. 3.
lxxxv. 11.	vi. 3.
lxxxvii.	vii. 8, 30.

3. The Gnostic book of Baruch.—Of this book large fragments are found in the Philosophumena of Hippolytus, v. 24-27. But these fragments are wholly out of relation with the remaining literature of Baruch.

4. A Latin book of Baruch is quoted in one MS. of Cyprian's Testimonia, iii. 29. As this book is clearly based on our Apocalypse, I will give the passage in full. Item in Baruch: "Veniet enim tempus, et quaeretis me et vos et qui post vos venerint, audire verbum sapientiae et intellectus, et non inuenietis" (cf. Apoc. Bar. xlvi. 36). "Nationes autem cupient videre sapientem praedicantem, et non obtinget eis: non quia deerit aut deficiet sapientia hujus saeculi terrae, sed neque deerit sermo legis saeculo. Erit enim sapientia in paucis vigilantibus et taciturnis et quietis" (cf. Apoc. Bar. xlvi. 33), "sibi confabulantes et in cordibus suis meditantes quoniam quidam eos horrebunt et timebunt ut malos. Alii autem nec credunt verbo legis Altissimi: alii autem ore stupentes non credent et credentibus erunt contrarii et impediētes spiritum veritatis. Alii autem erunt sapientes ad spiritum erroris et pronuntiantes sicut Altissimi et Fortis edicta" (cf. Apoc. Bar. xlviii. 34; lxx. 5; observe also that the titles of God here are characteristic of our Apoc., see vii. 1, note; xxi. 3, note). "Alii autem personales fidei. Alii capaces et fortes in fide Altissimi et odibiles alieno."

In 5 Ezra xvi. 64, 65 (which James ascribes to the third century) we have a clear use of our text. Thus: "Certe Hic novit . . . quae cogitatis in cordibus vestris. Vae peccantibus et volentibus occultare peccata sua: propter quod Dominus scrutinando scrutinabit omnia opera eorum et traducet vos omnes," is based on lxxxiii. 3, which = "Et scrutinando scrutinabit cogitationes arcanas et quidquid in penetralibus omnium hominis membrorum positum est et in apertum coram omnibus cum increpatione educet." We should observe that not only is the thought of the two passages the same, but that the actual diction is borrowed, i.e. the Hebraism "scrutinando scrutinabit" and "traducet," which = "in apertum cum increpatione educet" (cf. also "quae cogitatis in cordibus" with "cogitationes arcanas").

5. The Greek Apocalypse of Baruch, or, as Mr. James names it, Apocalypsis Baruch Tertia.—This book belongs to the second century, for, on the one hand, it is based largely on the Slavonic Enoch, and on the other, it is mentioned by Origen, de Princip. ii. 3. 6: "Denique etiam Baruch prophetae librum in assertionis hujus testimonium vocant, quod ibi de septem mundis vel caelis evidentius indicatur." This Greek Apocalypse of Baruch was discovered some years ago by Mr. James in a British Museum MS. Through his kindness I have been permitted to examine his copy of this MS. His edition of the text will, we believe, shortly appear. The Slavonic Version of this book has been known for some time, and was published in the Starine, vol. xviii. pp. 205-209, 1886, by Novakovic. A German translation, preceded by a helpful introduction by Professor Bonwetsch, appeared this year in the Nachrichten der K. Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen, 1886, Heft i. An English translation will shortly appear by Mr. Morfill in Mr. James's Cambridge edition. The Slavonic is less trustworthy and full than the Greek. This Greek is dependent in certain respects on the Rest of the Words of Baruch, and is thus of service in determining the date of the latter. With our Apocalypse it has only one or two points of contact. Thus with vi. 2, "I was grieving over Zion and lamenting over the captivity which had come upon the people," compare the opening words of the Greek Apocalypse, 'Αποκάλυψις Βαρούχ, ὃς ἔστιν . . . κλαίων ὑπὲρ τῆς αἰχμαλωσίας Ἱερουσαλήμ: and with x. 5, "I, Baruch, . . . sat before the gates of the temple and I lamented with that lamentation over Zion," and xxxv. 1, "And I, Baruch, went to the holy place, and sat down upon the ruins and wept," compare the words already quoted together with καὶ οὕτως ἐκάθητο ἐπὶ τὰς ὡραίαις πόλεις, ὅπου ἔκειτο τὰ τῶν ἁγίων ἄγια. Perhaps liv. 8-9, "Even so I could not give Thee the meed of praise, or laud Thee as is befitting. . . . For what am I amongst men . . . that I should have heard all those marvellous things from the Most High?" may be the source of the following words towards the close of the Greek Apocalypse—δόξαν ἔφερον τῷ θεῷ τῷ ἀξιόσαντί με τοιούτου ἀξιώματος.

6. Finally, another book of Baruch, distinct from the above, and belonging to the fourth or fifth century of our era, is mentioned in the Altercatio Simonis Judaei et Theophili Christiani, published by Harnack (Texte und Untersuchungen, Bd. 1, Heft 3, 1883). In this work Theophilus makes the following quotation from the book of Baruch: "Quomodo ergo prope finem libri sui de nativitate ejus et de habitu vestis et de passione ejus et de resurrectione ejus prophetavit dicens: Hic unctus meus, electus meus, vulvae incontaminatae jaculatus, natus et passus dicitur."

Above all the foregoing works which circulated under Baruch's name, the Apocalypse of Baruch stands head and shoulders alike in respect of form or matter or real worth to the student of Judaism and Christianity.

§ 3. THE SYRIAC MSS.

For chapters i.-lxxvii. of this book we have only one MS., the famous sixth-century Peshitto MS. which was found by Ceriani in the library in Milan. For convenience we shall call this MS. c. In 1871 Ceriani edited the Syriac text from this MS. in his Monumenta Sacra et Profana, vol. v. Fasc. 2, pp. 113-180. Of chapters lxxviii.-lxxxvi., which constitute the Epistle of Baruch, many MSS. were known to exist, and of three of them (i.e. a, b, d) Ceriani made collations and inserted these in their appropriate place below the printed text of c. He made no attempt, however, to correct the text of c by their means. This task was attempted in a haphazard fashion by Fritzsche (Libri Apocryphi Vet. Test. Graece, 1871, pp. 690-699) in an emended edition of Ceriani's Latin translation of these chapters.

It is manifest that, if we wish to ascertain the value of c in those chapters in which it stands alone, i.e. i.-lxxvii., we can do so only by an exhaustive examination of its text in those chapters which it attests in common with a, b, d, e, f, g, h, i, k, i.e. lxxviii.-lxxxvi., and by a determination of its critical value in respect to them. When we have discharged this task we shall know the real worth of c in i.-lxxvii., and familiar with its strength and its weakness shall approach with some confidence the critical problems it presents. With this end in view I have made use of all the Syriac MSS. of lxxviii.-lxxxvi. attainable. These are ten, and are as follows:—

a called A in Ceriani.

b Add. 17,105 in the Brit. Mus., Fol. 116^a-121^a. Sixth century.

c The Milan MS., Fol. 265^b-267^b. Sixth century.

d called d in Ceriani.

e No. 1 Syr. MSS., Bodley, Fol. 430-432. 1627.

f Egerton 704 Brit. Mus., Fol. 373^a-374^a. Seventeenth century.

g Add. 12,172 Brit. Mus., Fol. 192^b-195^b. Tenth or eleventh century.

h Add. 18,715 Brit. Mus., Fol. 242^b-244^a. Twelfth century.

i No. 2 Syr. MSS., Bodley, Fol. 492-493. 1614.

k No. 20 Syr. MSS., Bodley, Fol. 37-38.

All these MSS. with the exception of k contain the complete Epistle of Baruch. k has only lxxxiii. 7-lxxxiv. 1. Of the ten MSS. I have collated directly b, e, f, g, h, i, k. b had already been collated and published by Lagarde. I did it, however, afresh, and found only one important error in his work. For a knowledge of a, d I am indebted to Ceriani's collations. Of c my knowledge is derived directly from the photolithographic reproduction of that MS. In addition to the above MSS., I have found excerpts from the Epistle of Baruch in the three following MSS., from which I have drawn various readings.

l Add. 12,178 Brit. Mus., Fol. 111^b. Ninth or tenth century.

m 14,482 Brit. Mus., Fol. 47^b-48^a. Eleventh or twelfth century.

n 14,684 Brit. Mus., Fol. 24. Twelfth century.

W and P stand for the Walton and Paris Polyglots.

Of the foregoing MSS. a, b, d, e, f, g, h, i, k, l, m, n represent one type of text as c represents another. But although the former belong to one family they are of very different values. To the more ancient and trustworthy belong a, b, g, h, k to the latter and less trustworthy d, e, f, i. For convenience' sake we shall denote the parent of a, b, g, h, k by the symbol β , that of d, e, f, i by γ , and the ancestor of both by a. First of all we shall study the general relations of c to a and to the sub-groups β and γ .

c stands frequently alone alike when it is right and when it is wrong. In lxxviii. 1; lxxxi. 4; lxxxii. 7; lxxxv. 1, 7; lxxxvi. 3; lxxxvii., it is right against a, i.e. a, b, d, e, f, g, h, i; and most probably also in lxxix. 2, 3; lxxxiii. 3, 7, 8; lxxxiv. 1, 9; lxxxv. 15. On the other hand, it is frequently wrong. Thus it attests a corrupt text against a in lxxviii. 1, 2, 3, 4, 7 (?); lxxx. 1, 2, 3; lxxxi. 3; lxxxii. 2 (twice), 3, 4, 5; lxxxiii. 2, 3, 4, 5, 8, 13, 15, 16, 18, 19, 21; lxxxiv. 1, 2, 8, 10; lxxxv. 7, 8, 12, 13; lxxxvi. 1. Thus we see that whereas c independently preserves the true text in many passages, a preserves it in thrice as many.

Again, as we have already remarked, the MSS. a, b, d, e, f, g, h, i, k are of very different values. Thus a, b, g, h agree with c in attesting the true text against d, e, f, i in lxxviii. 3, 5; lxxix. 1; lxxx. 3; lxxxi. 4; lxxxiv. 4, 6, 7, 10; lxxxv. 6, 11. In lxxxii. 1 a, b, g, h agree alike against c and d, e, f, i. Only in lxxxiii. 17 do d, e, f, i agree with c against a, b, g, h. In the above passages k is wanting, but where it exists it belongs as a rule to β , and agrees with a more than with any other member of this group. Thus if we represent a, b, d, e, f, g, h, i, k by a, and a, b, g, h, k by β , and d, e, f, i by γ , as we have already arranged, we arrive at the following genealogy:—

ORIGINAL SYRIAC TRANSLATION

We have also seen from what precedes that c often agrees with β in giving the true text against γ , but c and γ never agree in attesting the true text against β , except perhaps in lxxxiii. 17.

l, m, n , so far as they exist, support a as against c , and where the attestation of a is divided they generally agree with γ against β , i.e. with d, e, f, i against a, b, g, h, k .

Having now learnt in some measure the relations of the various groups of MSS. to each other, we have still to study those of the individual MSS., so far as our materials admit. The special study of c we reserve till later.

Amongst a, b, g, h, b and g are closely related. They agree against all else in lxxx. 4; lxxxi. 3; lxxxii. 2, 3; lxxxiii. 2, 9, 11; lxxxv. 12; but this combination is generally wrong. b is never right when it stands alone. a and h are excellent authorities when supported by c . Thus a, c are right in lxxxiii. 4; lxxxiv. 6; lxxxv. 9. They agree in the wrong in lxxix. 2; lxxx. 7; lxxxv. 9. a agrees also with b, c, g against all else in lxxxv. 14, and with c, h against all in lxxxiv. 3. h stands alone with c in lxxx. 4 ; lxxxiv. 4 ; lxxxv. 13 ; but the combination is untrustworthy. From these facts we infer that amongst a, b, g, h, b and g are very closely related, but that no such close relations exist between a and h or between either of these with b, g. Thus the relations of the sub-group to each other might be represented as follows :—

As regards the γ group, we have learnt above that it is quite untrustworthy when it stands alone against c. Yet it is upon two of the members of this group that the text of the Walton and Paris Polyglots is based.

The text of these Polyglots may be shortly described as follows. In all cases where it stands in opposition to c, WP follow a except in lxxxii. 8, lxxxv. 10, where their text is most probably due to conjecture as they here stand alone. Secondly, in cases where γ is opposed to $c\beta$, WP agree with γ . Thirdly, within the group γ , WP are most closely associated with, and in all probability are based upon, e, f. For they agree with e against all other MSS. in lxxx. i., lxxxii. 9 in omitting “and,” in lxxx. 2 in giving an impossible form, and in lxxxiii. 14 in omitting half the verse. But WP are not based on e alone; for though e omits a word in lxxxv. 5, it is given in WP. This defect of e was made good from f; for we find that *f*WP stand alone in lxxx. 7. It is of no little interest to have traced the sources of the text in the Polyglots; for, as their editors have given no information on the subject, scholars have hitherto been quite in the dark in this respect. We are now in a position to give the genealogy of the MSS. dealt with above. This is as follows:—

ORIGINAL SYRIAC TRANSLATION

Special Study of c.—It is now time to study the special characteristics of c. We have already seen that c has independently preserved the true text in many passages against corruptions in a. (A list of these passages will be found above, where also it is shown that a has preserved the true text much more frequently than c.) I have found c trustworthy when supported by a in lxxxiii. 4; lxxxiv. 6; lxxxv. 9; but not so in lxxix. 2; lxxx. 7; lxxxv. 9; or by a, b, g in lxxxv. 14; or by a, h in lxxxiv. 3; or by b, g in lxxxv. 1. But the character of c appears more clearly in its errors. Thus it is wrong (1) through omission in lxxx. 1, 2 (omission due here to an attempted emendition); lxxxii. 2, 3 ; lxxxiii. 4, 5, 16, 18 ; lxxxiv. 1, 10 ; lxxxv. 4 (through homoioteleuton), 12. Cf. li. 16 and lvi. 14 for omissions of the negative. (2) Through additions to the text in lxxviii. 2 ; lxxxiii. 5 ; lxxxv. 8, 9, 15. (3) Through transposition of words or letters whereby the sense is generally destroyed. Transposition of letters in lxxxii. 4 whereby "drop" becomes "pollution"; lxxxiii. 21 where "by truth" becomes "in silence." For similar transpositions in the earlier chapters see xiv. 6 ; lxx. 8. Transposition of words in lxxx. 3 ; lxxxii. 2, 3 ; lxxxiii. 5 ; lxxxiv. 8. For similar transpositions see xiv. 11 ; xxi. 16. (4) Through clerical errors in lxxviii. 3 (for a similar error see xxiv. 4), 4 ; lxxx. 3 ; lxxxii. 5 ; lxxxiii. 2, 3, 13, 15, 16, 19 ; lxxxiv. 1 (observe that there is the same erroneous pointing in lxx. 5), 3, 8 ; lxxxv. 12, 13. In lxxxiv. 2 we have an intentional variation. Cf. in earlier chapters li. 1.

We have now completed our study of the MSS. The knowledge which we have thus gained from our comparative criticism of c and the other MSS. helps to secure us against the characteristic errors of the former in the chapters where the friendly aid of the latter cannot be invoked. We can thus address ourselves with a certain degree of confidence and skill to the obscurities and corruptions that arise in these chapters. As a further result of this examination, we have come to feel that so long as we follow its guidance, we can nowhere greatly err from the sense of the Hebrew original.

Date of the Common Ancestor of c and a.—Since c and b are both of the sixth century, we find that already at that date there existed two distinctly developed types of text, both of which must have been for no brief period in existence, owing to the variety of readings already evolved. Further, though b belongs to the sixth century, many of its readings are decidedly later than c and even than a and h. In fact, a, h represent the text at an earlier period than b. The common parent, therefore, of a, h, and b was probably not later than the fifth century. Such a variety of related yet different MSS. as a, b, g, h, k could not well have arisen from an MS. of a later date. This being so, the common progenitor of c and a can hardly be sought later than the fourth century.

§ 4. PREVIOUS LITERATURE ON THE APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH

The Syriac Text.—As we have seen in the foregoing section, we have only one MS., i.e. c, for chapters i.-lxxvii. For Ceriani's edition of this MS. see pp. xxii.-xxiii. Of the text of the remaining chapters, which form the Epistle of Baruch, many editions have appeared:—
 (1) That which is published in the Walton and Paris Polyglots. This text is, as we have shown above (pp. xxvii.-xxviii.), founded on two indifferent MSS., e and f.
 (2) Lagarde's edition of b, pp. 88-93 of his Libri Vet. Test. Apocryphi Syriace, 1861. This is merely b in a printed form, and not an edition of the Syriac text based on the Nitrian MSS. in the British Museum, as is everywhere wrongly stated both by German and English writers. Though b is a very old and valuable MS., we have now several MSS. at our disposal containing a more ancient text (see pp. xxvi.-xxvii.) (3) Ceriani's published text of c, to which he has appended collations of a, b, d in his Monumenta Sacra et Profana, vol. v. Fasc. 2, pp. 167-180. As we have already remarked, Ceriani has contented himself with printing the text of c, and has not sought to correct it by means of a, b, d.

Translations.—Only one translation of our Apocalypse has hitherto appeared, i.e. the Latin translation of Ceriani in the Monumenta Sacra et Profana, vol. i. Fasc. 2, pp. 73-98, 1866. This is certainly a model translation in point of style, and considering the fact that Ceriani was not a specialist in Apocalyptic literature, it is also very accurate. Not quite accurate, indeed, as Ceriani himself was aware in 1871 when he wrote—“Omisi tamen plenam revisionem meae versionis Latinae . . . quia omnino in meis occupationibus tempus me deficit, et quidquid corrigere opus erit, alii ex textu per se poterunt.” Some of the errors are as follows:—In xiii. 8 we must expunge “enim est.” In verses 4-5 of the same chapter we find the peculiar construction “ut . . . dic.” In xv. 6 read “transgressus est” for “fecit.” In xix. 1 for “te” read “vos.” In xxv. 4 for “terrae” read “terram.” In xxxii. 4 for “coronabitur” read “perficietur.” In xl. 1 for “qui tunc” read “illius temporis.” In xlix. 3 for “vestient” read “induent.” In lv. 1 expunge “ejus.” In lx. 1 add “eorum” after “magiarum.” In lxii. 2 add “et” before “idololatria.” In lxxii. 2 for “vivificabit” read “parcet.” In lxxxv. 9 for “veritatem cujuspiam” read “veritas quodpiam.” In lxxxvi. 12 for “viae” read “recreationis” (= ἀνέσσεως); “viae” is a rendering of d but not of c, Ceriani’s text. Although Ceriani made no critical study of the text of c, he has nevertheless made some most felicitous emendations in x. 14; xiv. 6; li. 1; lvi. 4, 14; lx. 2; lxix. 1, 4; lxx. 8. A critical study of the text and matter would have helped him to deal with the corruptions of the Syriac in xxiv. 4; xlviii. 32; li. 16; lxvii. 2; lxx. 5; lxxii. 1, etc.

As Ceriani did not believe in a Semitic original of our Apocalypse, he was naturally unable to deal with corruptions that were not native to the Syriac Version, but had already appeared in the Hebrew text or had arisen through the misconceptions of the Greek translator.

Ceriani’s Latin translation was republished by Fritzsche in his Libri Apocryphi Vet. Test. Graece, 1871, pp. 654-679. Though Fritzsche introduces several changes into Ceriani’s translation, hardly any of these can be justified. Sometimes he makes the change because he has failed to understand the text; thus in xx. 4; xxi. 9, 10, he has emended Ceriani’s “investigabiles” into “ininvestigabiles”; but “investigabilis” in the Vulgate frequently means “unsearchable.” The change of “omne” into “vanum” in xix. 8 is quite wanton. The Latin text also is carelessly edited;

thus for "ego" there is "ergo" in lxxxiv. 1; for "ibi" there is "tibi" in lxxxv. 13; and "opulus" for "populus" in xlviii. 24. In the critical notes on pp. 690-699 there are many confusions and mis-statements of authorities. It is needless to add that none of Ceriani's actual errors were corrected by Fritzsche, for the Syriac text had not yet been published.

Notwithstanding all these defects, every scholar who has used Fritzsche's book is rightly grateful to him for making Ceriani's translation so generally accessible.

Critical Inquiries.—Langen, De Apocalypsi Baruch anno superiori primum edita commentatio, Friburgi in Brisgovia, 1867. This treatise, which consists of twenty-four quarto pages, maintains that our Apocalypse was written in Greek in the reign of Trajan. Although no grounds worthy of consideration are advanced in support of a Greek original, Langen's view has been universally accepted. Only two scholars have expressed a doubt on the subject, Mr. Thomson and Professor Ryle of Cambridge. This fact in itself serves to show how inadequately hitherto this Apocalypse has been studied. In other respects, Langen's work is admirable.

Ewald, Göttinger Gel. Anzeigen, 1867, pp. 1706-1717, 1720; Gesch. des Volkes Israel, vii. 83-87 (English trans. vol. viii. 57-61). In a short but interesting article Ewald assigns the date of our author to the reign of Domitian. He regards 4 Ezra and this Apocalypse as the work of one and the same author.

Hilgenfeld, Zeitschrift für wissensch. Theologie, 1869, pp. 437-440; Messias Judaeorum, pp. 63-64. Hilgenfeld ascribes our Apocalypse to the earlier years of Vespasian, possibly to 72 A.D. Vespasian is the leader mentioned in xl. The Baruch Apocalypse is subsequent to 4 Ezra.

Wieseler, "Das Vierte Buch Ezra," Theol. Stud. und Kritiken, 1870, p. 288. This writer criticises Hilgenfeld's date. The seven weeks (xxviii. 2) are to be reckoned from the fall of Jerusalem to 119 A.D. The two weeks in that verse point to the years 105-119, i.e. to the time of Trajan.

Fritzsche, Libri Apocryphi Vet. Test. 1871, pp. xxx.-xxxii. On Fritzsche's reprint of Ceriani's Latin translation see pp. xxxii.-xxxiii.

Stähelin, "Zur paulinischen Eschatologie," Jahrbücher für Deutsche Theologie, 1874, pp. 211-214.

Hausrath, Neutestamentl. Zeitgesch. 2nd ed. iv. 88-90, 1877.

Renan, "L'Apocalypse de Baruch," Journal des Savants, 1877, pp. 223-231; Les Évangiles, 1877, pp. 517-530. Renan regards this Apocalypse as an imitation of 4 Ezra and in part designed as a correction of it, as, for instance, on the question of original sin (cf. also Langen). The latter was written in Nerva's reign, the former in the last year of Trajan's. The sombre clouds which obscured the last months of Trajan roused the hopes of the Jews and gave birth to the furious revolt of 117, of which this book is a monument. The fact that this book was accepted amongst the Christians excludes a later date. No Jewish product later than Hadrian gained currency in Christian circles.

Drummond, The Jewish Messiah, 1877, pp. 117-132. Dr. Drummond is of opinion that, "notwithstanding the Hebraic colouring of its thoughts and language, this book may very well have been written in Greek." Its author was a Jew: there is "not a single expression which betrays a Christian hand." It is probably subsequent in date to 4 Ezra, and is divided into the following groups of chapters—i.-ix.; x.-xii.; xiii.-xx.; xxi.-xxx.; xxxi.-xliii.; xliv.-xlvi.; xlviii.-lxxvi.; lxxvii.-lxxxvii.

Kneucker, Das Buch Baruch, 1879, pp. 190-196. Kneucker believes that the Apocryphal Book of Baruch is the letter which Baruch undertakes in ch. lxxvii. to send by "three men" to the brethren in Babylon. This view needs to be greatly modified; as it stands, he has found none to follow it. The present book, he holds, is defective.

Dillmann, art. "Pseudepigraphen" in Herzog's Real-Enc. 2nd ed. xii. 356-358. Baruch, according to Dillmann, was undoubtedly later than 4 Ezra, and was written under Trajan. The writer was an orthodox Jew and wrote in Greek. Dillmann rightly thinks that parts of the book are lost, but he is wrong in supposing it to be not more truly Jewish than 4 Ezra. He falls also into the same mistake as so many other scholars in supposing Lagarde's edition of MS. b to be an edition of the Syriac text, based on the Nitrian MSS.

Edersheim, The Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah, 2nd ed. 1884, ii. p. 658.

Rosenthal, Vier Apocryphische Bücher, 1885, pp. 72-103. This writer has made a painstaking study of Ceriani's Latin translation. He has likewise given no little thought to the subject matter, and discovered many connections between our book and Talmudic literature. It cannot, however, be said that he has thrown much light on the difficult problems of this book. In most respects Rosenthal follows the traditional lines of interpretation. The work is from the hand of one author. It was written in Greek in the reign of Trajan. Like previous writers Rosenthal regards our Apocalypse as subsequent to 4 Ezra, and as designed in some respects to correct its statements. He accepts Wieseler's interpretation of xxviii., and reckons the seven weeks there mentioned as dating from 70 A.D. Hence $70 + 49 = 119$ and the two last weeks point to the years 105-119, the period of the last woes. 119 is the year of the Messiah's advent. But Rosenthal thinks he can determine the exact year of the book's publication. Thus the letter to the Jews in Babylon shows that it was written before the rebellion of the Jews in Cyrene, Egypt, Cyprus, Babylon, and their extermination by Quietus in 116. On the other hand, he believes that the great earthquake in Syria, which did not affect Palestine in December 115, is referred to in lxx. 8-lxxi. 1. Thus the book was written in the beginning of 116. With many of Dr. Rosenthal's statements, in which he departs from the traditional interpretation of this book, the present writer dissents strongly. Some of these statements are as follows:—The Messiah, he says, has a less active rôle in 4 Ezra than in Baruch. The real facts are that a passive rôle is assigned to the Messiah in xxix. 3 of this Apocalypse and in vii. 28-29 of 4 Ezra, and a highly active rôle in xxxix.-xl. and lxx.-lxxii. of this Apocalypse and xii. 32-34 and xiii. 32-50 of 4 Ezra. Rosenthal charges our author with being an ignorant man and unacquainted with Scripture. This is strange, seeing that in every instance save one the quotations from the Old Testament are made from the Hebrew and not from the LXX., and that a large and accurate knowledge of Jewish history is shown throughout the work. Again, he says our author makes the resurrection from the dead depend on faith therein, and then quotes as a proof xxx. 1, which says nothing of the kind, and further adduces lxxv. 1, where he alleges Manasseh is reproved for not believing in the future, “dass er an keinen Zukunft glaubte!” This last assertion rests on a strange misconception of the Latin translation—“cogitabat tempore suo quasi ac futurum non esset ut Fortis inquireret ista.” This is, of course, “he thought that in his time the Mighty One would not inquire into these things!” “Futurum” cannot mean “the future.”

Stanton, The Jewish and Christian Messiah, 1886, pp. 72-75. This writer ascribes our Apocalypse to the years immediately subsequent to 70 A.D. He divides the book as follows—i.-ix; x.-xii.; xiii.-xx.; xxi.-xxx.; xxxi.-xliii.; xliv.-lxxvi.; lxxvii.-lxxxvii.

Schürer, A History of the Jewish People in the Time of Jesus Christ (translated from the second and revised edition of the German), 1886, vol. iii. Div. ii. pp. 83-93. We have here an admirable account of our Apocalypse. Schürer regards it as written shortly after 70 A.D., and argues strongly for its priority to 4 Ezra. After citing passages on the question of original sin from both books, he proceeds: "Here, then, we have not even an actual difference of view, far less a correction of the one writer on the part of the other. Further, such other reasons as have been advanced in favour of the priority of Ezra and the dependent character of Baruch are merely considerations of an extremely general kind which may be met with considerations equally well calculated to prove quite the reverse." "My own opinion is that . . . it is precisely in the case of Baruch that this problem is uppermost, i.e. How is the calamity of Israel and the impunity of its oppressors possible and conceivable? while in the case of Ezra, though this problem concerns him too, still there is a question that lies almost yet nearer his heart, i.e. Why is it that so many perish and so few are saved? The subordination of the former of these questions to the other, which is a purely theological one, appears to me rather to indicate that Ezra is of a later date than Baruch." It must be admitted that these arguments are as conclusive as are the counter-arguments of Ewald, Langen, Hilgenfeld, Hausrath, Stähelin, Renan, Drummond, and Dillmann for the priority of 4 Ezra. And beyond this impasse it is impossible for criticism to advance until it recognises the composite nature of both books. Schürer appends a valuable bibliography.

Baldensperger, Das Selbstbewusstsein Jesu, 1888, pp. 23-24, 32-35. The composition of Baruch is here assigned to a Jew living in Palestine in the reign of Trajan.

Thomson, Books which Influenced our Lord and His Apostles, 1891, 253-267, 414-422. This writer believes with Schürer in the priority of Baruch, but his hardihood goes still farther: he assigns the date of its composition to 59 B.C. Such a date of necessity argued a Semitic original, and this Mr. Thomson contends for, and we hold rightly, though his reason may be wrong. This his sole reason is that in v. 5 we find the proper name Jabish יַבִּישׁ. "This," he says, "almost certainly represents 'Ιαβήης of the Septuagint, 1 Chron. iv. 9, 10 (Heb. יַבֶּנֶץ, Syriac ܝܒܒܥܝ)." There is no ground for this identification; in fact, everything is against it; and even if the identification were right, it would not necessarily prove a Hebrew original. Jabish or Jabesh, for the Syriac is unpunctuated, implies a Greek form Iabēs or Iabēs, and this in turn יַבֶּשׁ. Here, as elsewhere, I have had occasion to regret that Mr. Thomson acquainted himself inadequately with the facts before he gave loose rein to his vigorous imagination.

Kabisch, "Die Quellen der Apocalypse Baruchs," Jahrbücher f. Protest. Theol. 1891, pp. 66-107. With this writer the criticism of Baruch enters on a new stage. So long, indeed, as it pursued the old lines, finality on the question of the chronological relations of our Apocalypse and 4 Ezra was impossible, and the champions of the one book with excellent reasons demolished their rivals, and with reasons just as excellent were demolished in turn. The explanation is obvious: both books are composite, and if some parts of 4 Ezra are older than certain parts of Baruch, no less certainly are some parts of Baruch older than some of 4 Ezra.

Kabisch emphasises at the outset certain facts which point to a plurality of authorship. Thus he shows that we find in Baruch side by side, on the one hand, a measureless pessimism and world-despair which look for neither peace nor happiness in this world; and, on the other hand, in the same work, a vigorous optimism and world-joy which look to a future of sensuous happiness and delight, of perfect satisfaction and peace.

Kabisch further points out that the same subjects are treated several times, and often without any fresh contribution to the subject at issue. Thus the Messianic Kingdom is twice delineated, the advent of the Messiah twice foretold, and the Messianic woes just as often depicted. Yet the latter are neither so identical as to point to the same author, nor are the novelties so great as to justify the repetition of the whole complex statement already once given.

On these grounds he shows that the book is derived from at least three or four authors. Thus he distinguishes i.-xxiii.; xxxi.-xxxiv.; lxxv.-lxxxvii. as the groundwork written subsequently to 70 A.D., since the destruction of the temple is implied throughout these chapters. Further, these sections are marked by a boundless despair of this world of corruption, which fixes its regards on the afterworld of incorruption. In the remaining sections of the book, however, there is a faith in Israel's ultimate triumph here, and an optimism which looks to an earthly Messianic Kingdom of sensuous delights. In these sections, moreover, the integrity of Jerusalem is throughout assumed. Kabisch, therefore, rightly takes these constituents of the book to be prior to 70 A.D. These sections, however, are not the work of one writer, but of three, two of them being unmutilated productions, i.e. the Vine and the Cedar Vision, xxxvi.-xl., and the Cloud Vision, liii.-lxxiv., but the third a fragmentary Apocalypse, xxiv. 3-xxix. Finally, these different writings were incorporated in one book by a Christian contemporary of Papias, and to this editor are probably due xxviii. 5 ; xxx. 1 ; xxxii. 2-4 ; xxxv. ; lxxvi. 1. With the bulk of this criticism I have no reason for variance, as by independent study, and frequently on different grounds, I have arrived at several of these conclusions. But taken as it stands, Kabisch's criticism is only an additional stage on the way. It is far from being final, as a more prolonged study would have convinced this writer. Thus, as we shall presently learn (see pp. liii.-lxiv.), the so-called groundwork of Kabisch is as undoubtedly composite as the whole work is composite, and edited from at least two or three distinct writings. In this and in other respects the criticism of our book is indefinitely more difficult than Kabisch conceives it. But we must not anticipate our conclusions here. Kabisch's work is based on the Latin translation of Ceriani. He follows the traditional views of a Greek original. The possibility of a Semitic original does not seem to have occurred to him.

De Faye, Les Apocalypses juives, 1892, pp. 25-28, 76-103, 192-204. It is interesting to find that some of Kabisch's conclusions were reached by this French scholar independently. Thus De Faye, like Kabisch, distinguishes xxxvi.-xl. and liii.-lxxv. as distinct works written before 70 A.D. The rest of his analysis is not likely to gain acceptance. His main conclusions are as follows:—i.-xxxii. 7 constitute an Apocalypse of Baruch written after 70 A.D.; i.-v. and vi.-xxxii. 7, however, were originally derived from two hands (pp. 193-196). Another quite distinct work was the Assumption of Baruch, which consists of xlviii.-lii.; xli.-xliii. 2; lxxvi. 1-4 (p. 97 note). The date of this work is also after 70 A.D. xliii. 3-xlvii. is for the most part the work of the final editor. They are much later in date than the Apocalypse or the Assumption. Thus the following chapters and verses are derived from the final editor: xxxii. 7-xxxv.; xliii. 3-xlvii.; lxxvi. 5-lxxxvii. (pp. 201-202). Much praise is due to M. de Faye for the abundant scholarship and pains he has expended on this book; but his work is unconvincing: a profounder study would have led him to abandon many of the positions which are maintained by him.

Ryle, "The Book of Baruch," Dictionary of the Bible, ed. Smith, 1893, vol. i. pp. 361-362. Professor Ryle regards our Apocalypse as written shortly after the destruction of Jerusalem, and possibly in Hebrew. He reverts to Ewald's idea of the common authorship of this book and 4 Ezra as a means of explaining their manifold points of identity and similarity. He divides it into the following sections: i.-xii.; xiii.-xx.; xxi.-xxxiv.; xxxv.-xlvi.; xlvii.-lii.; liii.-lxxvi.; lxxvii.-lxxxv.

§ 5. THE SYRIAC—A TRANSLATION FROM THE GREEK

That the Syriac text is a translation from the Greek is to be concluded on several grounds. 1. It is so stated in the sixth-century MS. c. 2. There are certain corruptions in the text which are explicable only on the hypothesis that the translator misinterpreted the Greek, or else found the corruption already existing there. Thus in iii. 7 (see note) the Syrian translator renders "ornament" where the text requires "world." It is obvious here that he followed the wrong sense of κόσμος. The corrupt readings in xxi. 9, 11, 12; xxiv. 1, 2; lxii. 7 are to be explained on this principle (see notes in loc.). 3. Imitations of Greek constructions are found. In lxv. 1 we have hau = the Greek article in connection with a proper name. 4. We have frequent transliterations of Greek words, as in vi. 4, 7; x. 17; xvii. 4; xxi. 7, etc. It is possible, of course, that these borrowed Greek words may have been part of the current language when the translation was made. In lxxvii. 14, however, we have a Greek word transliterated which gives no sense in its context. Hence this word was not written first-hand by a Syriac writer, but was taken by the Syriac translator from the Greek text before him. 5. The Rest of the Words of Baruch is largely based on our Apocalypse, and frequently reproduces it word for word. This book was written in Greek by a Christian Palestinian Jew in the second century. It implies, therefore, the existence of our Apocalypse in a Greek form, and preserves important fragments of the Greek Version.

§ 6. THE GREEK—A TRANSLATION FROM A HEBREW ORIGINAL

It is hard to understand how such an unbroken unanimity has prevailed amongst scholars on the question of a Greek original. Indeed, it is impossible to explain it, save on the hypothesis that they gave the subject the most cursory notice, or more probably none at all. In fact, since the discovery of the book not a single serious attempt has been made to grapple with this problem, and yet, in nearly every instance, scholars have spoken with an assurance on this subject that only a personal and thorough study of the subject could justify. To this strong and unanimous tradition of the learned world I bowed without hesitation at the outset of my studies, but with an awakening distrust and an ever-growing reluctance during the subsequent years in which the present Translation and Notes were completed. In fact, the feeling grew steadily stronger that only a Hebrew original could account for many of the phenomena of the text. And yet my gathering certainty on this head did not lead to action till the MSS. of the Translation and Notes were partially in type. I then felt that I could no longer stay my hand, and with the kind permission of my publishers I have been enabled to introduce the necessary changes into the Translation and Notes. The facts which have obliged me to maintain a Hebrew original may be summarised as follows:—1. The quotations from the Old Testament agree in all cases but one with the Massoretic text against the LXX. 2. Hebrew idioms survive in the Syriac text. 3. Unintelligible expressions in the Syriac can be explained and the text restored by retranslation into Hebrew. 4. There are many paronomasiae which discover themselves on retranslation into Hebrew. 5. One or two passages of the book have been preserved in Rabbinic writings.

1. The quotations from the Old Testament agree in all cases but one with the Mass. text against the LXX.—See vi. 8; xxxviii. 2; xli. 4; li. 4; lviii. 1, with notes in loc. In two other passages our text departs alike from the Mass. and LXX.: thus in iv. 2 it agrees with the Syriac Version of Is. xlix. 16 against the Mass., LXX., and Vulg.; and in xxxv. 2 it reproduces Jer. ix. 1, freely and independently. Finally, in lxxxii. 5 only does it agree with the LXX. of Is. xl. 15. It is to be observed, however, that neither does the Vulgate in that passage agree with the Mass. The Mass.= יִשְׁרֹף; the LXX.= ὡς σίελος λογισθήσονται= נִרְשָׁב; Vulg.=“quasi pulvis exiguus.” Here the Vulg. omits יִשְׁרֹף and the LXX. replaces it by repeating a previous verb. Hence this passage is inconclusive, as the text of Isa. xl. 15 seems to have been uncertain.

2. Hebrew idioms survive in the Syriac text.—We shall treat this section under four heads.

(a) Survival of the familiar Hebrew idiom of the infinitive absolute combined with the finite verb.—The Syriac equivalent of this Hebraism is frequently found in this Apocalypse: cf. xiii. 3 (note); xxii. 7; xli. 6; xlviii. 30; l. 2; lvi. 2; lxxv. 6; lxxvi. 2; lxxxii. 2; lxxxiii. 1, 2, 3, 6; lxxxiv. 2. In this circumstance alone we have sufficient evidence to establish a Hebrew original. This idiom is, it is true, also found in original Syriac, but is comparatively rare. It is not, however, with original Syriac that we have here to do, but with a Syriac translation. We shall now proceed to show that in a Syriac translation of a Hebrew or a Greek text this idiom does not appear except as a rendering of the corresponding idiom in the Hebrew or Greek before it.

In order to prove this statement we shall examine the Peshitto Version of Genesis and Exodus. In these two books I have found fifty-seven instances of the occurrence of the infinitive absolute with the finite verb in the Massoretic text.

As we shall require presently to know the usage of the LXX. in this matter, we shall now give a table furnishing the facts we are in search of from both versions.

Syriac-Peshitto.	Genesis-Massoretic Text.	LXX.
Noun and verb.	ii. 17.	Noun and verb.
Infinitive and verb.	iii. 4.	„
„	iii. 16.	Participle and verb.
„	xvii. 12.	Noun and verb.
„	xviii. 18.	Participle and verb.
Finite verb only.	xix. 9.	Noun and verb.
Infinitive and verb.	xxii. 17 (twice).	Participle and verb.
„	xxvi. 11.	Finite verb only.
„	xxvi. 13.	Different text followed.
„	xxvi. 28.	Participle and verb.
Finite verb only.	xxvii. 30.	Finite verb only.
Infinitive and verb.	xxviii. 22.	Noun and verb.
„	xxx. 16.	Finite verb only.
Finite verb only.	xxxi. 15.	Noun and verb.
Infinitive and verb.	xxxi. 30.	„
„	„	Finite verb only.
„	xxxii. 12.	Adverb and verb.
„	xxxvii. 8 (twice).	Participle and verb.
„	xxxvii. 10.	„
Different text followed.	xxxvii. 33.	Different text followed.
Infinitive and verb.	xl. 15.	Noun and verb.
„	xlili. 2.	„
„	xlili. 6.	Participle and verb.
„	„	Finite verb only.
Finite verb only.	xlvi. 4.	Different text followed.
Infinitive and verb.	l. 24 (twice).	Noun and verb.

Thus in Genesis there are twenty-nine instances of this idiom. These are rendered by the Peshitto as follows: twenty-three by the infinitive and verb; one by cognate noun and verb; four by finite verb only; and in one case a different text is followed. In the case of the LXX., eleven by cognate noun and verb; nine by participle and verb; five by finite verb only; while in four a different text is followed.

An examination of Exodus supplies the following evidence :—

Syriac-Peshitto.	Exodus-Massoretic Text.	LXX.
Infinitive and verb.	iii. 7.	Participle and verb.
„	iii. 16.	Noun and verb.
Different text followed.	xi. 1.	„
Infinitive and verb.	xiii. 19.	„
„	xviii. 18.	„
Finite verb only.	xix. 12.	„
Infinitive and verb.	xxi. 12, 15, 16, 17.	„
Different text followed.	xxi. 19.	Finite verb only.
Infinitive and verb.	xxi. 20, 22, 28.	Noun and verb.
Finite verb only.	xxi. 36.	Finite verb only.
Infinitive and verb.	xxii. 6, 14.	„
„	xxii. 16, 19.	Noun and verb.
Finite verb only (twice) } Infinitive and verb }	xxii. 23 (thrice).	{ Noun and verb (twice). Participle and verb.
Infinitive and verb.	xxiii. 4.	Participle and verb.
„	xxiii. 5.	Finite verb only.
„	xxiii. 22, 24.	Noun and verb.
„	xxxi. 14.	„
„	xxxi. 15.	Finite verb only.

Thus in Exodus there are twenty-eight instances of this idiom. These are rendered in the Peshitto: twenty-two by the infinitive and verb; four by finite verb only; in two cases a different text is followed. In the LXX., nineteen by cognate noun and verb; three by participle and verb; and six by the finite verb only. By combining the facts on both books, we arrive at the following results. The Hebrew idiom occurs fifty-seven times. In the Peshitto forty-five are rendered by infinitive and verb; one by cognate noun and verb; eight by finite verb only; in three cases a different text is followed. In the LXX., thirty are rendered by cognate noun and verb; twelve by participle and verb;

eleven by finite verb only; in four cases a different text is followed. Finally, we should mention here that in no case have we found this idiom in the Syriac Version where the same idiom was not also present in the Hebrew from which it was derived, and the same holds true of the LXX. save in one case, i.e. Exod. xxiii. 26.

From the above results obtained from the Peshitto Version of Genesis and Exodus we learn that whereas the Syriac translator on the one hand never inserts this idiom unless as an equivalent of the corresponding Hebrew idiom before him, on the other he has failed to render it in eight cases out of fifty-seven. In these he gives the finite verb only. Thus the irresistible conclusion is: if we find this idiom occurring at all in a Syriac translation, it is a presumption that it existed in the language from which the translation was made; whereas if we find it frequently (as in our Apocalypse) the presumption changes to a certainty.

The above conclusions drawn from a study of the Peshitto Version of the Hebrew text of Genesis and Exodus may be further confirmed and extended in their application by a short consideration of the corresponding phenomena in the New Testament. So far as I can discover, the Peshitto Version of the New Testament in no case inserts this idiom where it does not already exist in the Greek. This idiom occurs, as we know, at least six times: see Matt. xiii. 14; xv. 4; Luke vii. 34; xxii. 15; Acts vii. 34; Hebrews vi. 14. Five of these passages are quotations from the LXX., and thus the idiom goes back to the Hebrew. In the remaining one, Luke xxii. 15, it implies undoubtedly an Aramaic or Hebrew original. The Peshitto renders these instances by the infinitive and verb except in Matt. xiii. 14, where it misses the point, and in Luke xxii. 15, where it gives the noun and verb. In both these verses the Sinaitic MS. gives the infinitive and verb.

The Syriac translator therefore is so far from inserting this idiom, unless it exists already in the Hebrew or Greek text before him, that, as we found above, he occasionally fails to do so when he ought. The bearing of this conclusion on our present investigation is obvious. This idiom is found fifteen times in our Apocalypse; we can therefore conclude with confidence that it occurred at least fifteen times in the Greek, and in all likelihood oftener.

Having now found that this idiom occurred frequently in the Greek, we have now to ask, could it have appeared there for the first time, i.e. in an original Greek writing?

The answer does not require a long investigation. The idiom is thoroughly Semitic, and is only once found in all Greek literature, and that in Lucian. In the New Testament there is no instance of it unless in a quotation from the Old Testament; in the Old Testament only once, Exod. xxiii. 26, without a Semitic background.

Hence we conclude that its frequent occurrence in our Apocalypse is in itself demonstrable evidence of a Hebrew original. Further, it is probable that it occurred in the Hebrew original more frequently than in the Greek translation; for we found above that out of fifty-seven instances of this idiom in Genesis and Exodus, the LXX. failed to render eleven.

(b) The survival of various Hebraisms.—In xx. 2 (see note); xxiv. 2, where Syriac for “throughout all generations” = ἐν πάσῃ γενεᾷ καὶ γενεᾷ = בכל־דור ודור; cf. Ps. cxlv. 13; the same idiom is found in xxix. 7, where I render “every morning”; xxxviii. 4, where “from my (earliest) days” is the Hebrew idiom found in 1 Kings i. 6.

(c) Probable survival of Hebrew order against Syriac idiom.—In xiii. 12 (see notes); lxiii. 8. In connection with the notes on xiii. 12 it is worth observing that, in Western Aramaic, unlike Syriac, the order of the participle and the substantive verb in the compound past imperfect indicative is indifferent. Thus in Dan. v. 19; vi. 4, 5, 11, 15, etc., the substantive verb precedes, whereas in Dan. ii. 31; iv. 7, 10, 26; vii. 2, 6, 8, etc., the participle.

(d) Probable survival of syntactical idioms against Syriac idiom.—For omission of relative see xx. 3, note; imperative used as jussive, xi. 6, note; Hebrew perfect with strong vav in xxi. 21, and the voluntative with weak vav in xlvi. 6, reproduced literally but not idiomatically.

3. Unintelligible expressions in the Syriac can be explained and the text restored by retranslation into Hebrew.—In xxi. 9, 11, 12; xxiv. 2; lxii. 7, I have been able to explain and restore an unintelligible text by retranslation first into Greek and thence into Hebrew. The Syriac in these verses is the stock rendering of δικαιοῦσθαι, and this in turn of צדק. But צדק also = δίκαιος εἶναι, and this is the meaning required in the above passages (see notes in loc.), but the Greek translator erroneously adopted the more usual rendering.

Again in xlv. 12 we have another interesting restoration through the same means. There we find in the Syriac "on its beginning" set over anti-thetically against "to torment." Here the context requires "to its blessedness." Now the corrupt text = בראשו, which by the transposition of the single letter ר gives us the text באשרו = "to its blessedness." Again in lxxxv. 12 we have another instance of the Greek translator following the wrong of two alternative meanings.

Again in xi. 6; xx. 3; xxi. 21; xxix. 5; xlviii. 6, we are obliged by the context to translate not the Syriac text but the Hebrew text presupposed by the Syriac, but mistranslated by the Greek translator, and, therefore, of necessity by the Syriac. See notes in loc.; also 2 (d) above, p. xlvii. For other restorations the reader should consult the notes on x. 13; lxx. 6; lxxx. 2. Finally in lxxvii. 14 we have a transliteration of the Greek word ἔλγ. ἔλγ is either a corruption or a mistranslation of some Hebrew word. It could not have been written for the first time in Greek. I have hazarded a conjecture in the note on the passage.

4. Many paronomasiae discover themselves on re-translation into Hebrew.—We have in xv. 8 (see note) one that is already familiar to us in Isaiah and Ezekiel. As many as three spring into notice in xlviii. 35 (see note), and probably two in lxxxiv. 2. The most interesting perhaps are those on the proper names, Hezekiah and Sennacherib, in lxiii. 3, 4 (see notes). In the case of the former, I had the good fortune to conjecture the existence of the same paronomasia in Ecclus. xlviii. 22, and to restore the Hebrew there as it actually stood before Dr. Neubauer's discovery of the Hebrew MS. of Ecclus. xl. 1.

5. One or two passages of this book have been preserved in rabbinic writings (see notes on x. 18; xxxii. 2-4; lxiv. 3). ✓

§ 7. THE DIFFERENT ELEMENTS IN THE APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH WITH THEIR RESPECTIVE CHARACTERISTICS AND DATES.

As we have seen above, the composite nature of this book has already been recognised independently by Kabisch and De Faye. And the more thoroughly we study it, the more conscious we become of the impassable gulf which sunders the world-views which underlie the different parts. In one class of the passages there is everywhere manifest a vigorous optimism as to Israel's ultimate well-being on earth; there is sketched in glowing and sensuous colours the blessedness which awaits the chosen people in the kingdom of the Messiah which is at hand (xxix.; xxxix.-xl.; lxxiii.-lxxiv.), when healing will descend in dew, and disease and anguish and lamentation will flee away; when strife and revenge and hatred will go into condemnation; when gladness will march throughout the earth, the reapers not grow weary, nor they that build toil-worn; when child-birth will entail no pangs, and none shall die untimely (lxxiii.-lxxiv. 1); when Israel's enemies shall be destroyed (xxxix.-xl.; lxx. 7-lxxii.), and to God's chosen people will be given a world-wide empire with its centre at Jerusalem (xl. 2; lxxiii.-lxxiv.). Over against these passages which ring with such assurance of coming victory and untold blessedness stand others wherein, alike to Israel's present and its future destiny on earth, there is written nothing save "lamentation and mourning and woe." These veritable cries from the depths give utterance to a hopeless pessimism—a bottomless despair touching all the things of earth. This world is a scene of corruption, its evils are irremediable; it is a never-ceasing toil and strife, but its end is at hand; its youth is past; its strength exhausted; the pitcher is near to the cistern, the ship to the port, the course of the journey to the city, and life to its consummation (lxxxv.). The advent of the times is nigh, the corruptible will pass away, the mortal depart, that that which abides for ever may come, and the new world which does not turn to corruption those who depart to its blessedness (cf. xxi. 19; xliv. 9-15; lxxxv.).

Thus we discover that whereas (1) optimism as to Israel's future on earth is a characteristic of some sections of the book, pessimism in this respect characterises others. The former are the Messiah Apocalypses, xxvii.-xxx. 1 ; xxxvi.-xl. ; liii.-lxxiv. (which for convenience I designate respectively as A^1 , A^2 , A^3), and a short original Apocalypse of Baruch, B^1 . The remaining sections are B^2 , B^3 . The contents of these we shall determine presently. Again (2), A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , B^1 , agree in teaching the advent of the Messianic kingdom, but this doctrine is absolutely relinquished in B^2 , B^3 .

Thus, A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , B^1 , agree in presenting an optimistic view of Israel's future on earth, and in inculcating the hope of a Messianic kingdom ; whereas in B^2 , B^3 , such expectations are absolutely abandoned, and the hopes of the righteous are directed to the immediate advent of the final judgment and to the spiritual world alone. But at this point a difference between A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , and B^1 , emerges. The former look for a Messiah and a Messianic kingdom, the latter for a Messianic kingdom without a Messiah.

As we pursue our study, other features, one by one, disclose themselves which belong to A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , but not to B^1 , B^2 , B^3 , and thus differentiate them from the latter. Some of these are: (1) In A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , Jerusalem is still standing — hence they were written before 70 A.D. ; whereas in B^1 , B^2 , B^3 , it is already destroyed (for details see pp. 49, 61, 87, 101, 111). In B^1 , Jerusalem is to be restored ; (2) in A¹, A², A³, the advent of the Messiah is looked for, but not in B¹, B², B³; (3) in A¹, A², A³, it is only to the actual inhabitants of Palestine that the promise of protection is given in the time of the Messianic woes (see xxix. 2; xl. 2; lxxi. 1)—thus the Jews are still in Palestine; but in B¹, B², B³, the Jews are already carried into exile. In B¹ they are to be ultimately restored.

These conclusions as to the different authorship of A¹, A², A³, and B¹, B², B³, are confirmed by the following facts:—

(1) According to the scheme of the final editor of this book (see v. 7; ix. 2; pp. 36, 61), events proceed in each section in a certain order: first a fast, then a divine disclosure, then an announcement or address to the people based on this disclosure. This being so, it is significant that in the various addresses in v. 5; x. 4; xxxi. 2-xxxiv.; xliv.-xlvi.; lxxvii. 1-17, there is not a single reference to these Messianic Apocalypses, A¹, A², A³. (2) From (1) it follows that A¹, A², A³, have no real organic connection with the rest of the book, B¹, B², B³. And a detailed examination of their immediate contents shows that the removal of A¹ (= xxvii.-xxx. 1), A² (= xxxvi.-xl.), A³ (= liii.-lxxiv.) serves to restore some cohesion to the text (see xxx. 2, note; xli. 1, note; lxxv.-lxxvi., note).

Having thus seen that A¹, A², A³, were written prior to 70 A.D., and are of different authorship to B¹, B², B³, which were written subsequent to that date, we have next to deal with the relations in which A^1 , A^2 , A^3 stand to each other.

A^1 , A^2 , A^3 ; their relations to each other and dates.
—On pp. 61, 87, we have shown that A^1 is of distinct authorship to A^2 and A^3 , on the ground that in A^1 the Messiah pursues an entirely passive rôle, and does not appear till the enemies of Israel are destroyed and the kingdom established; whereas, in A^2 and A^3 , it is the Messiah that destroys the enemies of Israel and establishes the Messianic kingdom. As regards the date of A^1 , all that can be said with safety is that it was composed before 70 A.D.

It is hard to determine with certainty the relation of A^2 and A^3 . In many points they are at one: their differences are few. Some of these are: A^2 has more affinities in matter and character with the older Jewish Apocalyptic, i.e. that of Daniel; A^3 is more nearly related in form and spirit to later Judaism, to the rabbinic type of thought. Further, whereas in xl. 2, it is the Messiah that defends the inhabitants of the Holy Land, in lxxi. 1, it is the Holy Land itself; and whereas in A^2 (= xxxvi.-xl.) the law is only passingly alluded to, in A^3 (= liii.-lxxiv.) its importance is frequently dwelt upon. The latter difference may partly be due to their diversity in subject and method as well as to the brevity of A^2 . On the whole, we are inclined to regard A^2 and A^3 as springing from different authors; but the evidence is not decisive.

As to the date of A^2 we are unable to say anything more definite than that it was composed before 70 A.D. The case of A³ is different. Like A¹ and A², it was written before 70 A.D., as we have seen above (see also p. 87 and lxviii. 6, note). The earlier limit of composition is fixed by lix. 5-11. In the notes on that passage we have shown that in our Apocalypse there is a transference of Enoch's functions to Moses, and an attribution to Moses of revelations hitherto ascribed to Enoch (see also xiii. 3, note). This glorification of Moses at Enoch's expense is a clear sign of Jewish hostility to Christianity, and a tribute to Enoch's influence in the Christian Church of the first century. This acceptance of Enoch as a prophet in Christian circles became the ground of his rejection by the Jews, and of a hostility which was unswervingly pursued for several centuries. This aggressive attitude of Judaism could not have originated before the open breach of Christianity with the Synagogue, which was brought about by the Pauline controversy. Hence A³ cannot be earlier than 50 A.D. Thus the limits of its composition are 50-70 A.D.

B¹, B², B³, the later constituents of Baruch, their characteristics and dates.—We have seen above the grounds on which we are obliged to ascribe B¹, B², B³, to a different authorship and later date than A¹, A², A³. We have now to study the relations which subsist between B¹, B², B³. We shall consider B³ first, as it consists of a single chapter.

B³ = lxxxv. This chapter agrees with B¹, B², in being written after 70 A.D.; but differs from B¹ and agrees with B² in despairing of a national restoration, and in looking only for spiritual blessedness in the world of incorruption. But, again, it differs from B³ also, in that B² was written in Jerusalem or Judæa, whereas B³ was written in Babylon or some other land of the Dispersion—in the former most probably ; for it was written in Hebrew (cf. lxxxv. 2, 3, 12, notes). Again, whereas, according to B², Jeremiah was with the captivity in Babylon, it is here definitely stated that the righteous and the prophets are dead, and that the exiles have none to intercede for them (see notes on pp. 154, 156). B³ was thus written after 70 A.D. in Hebrew, and most probably in Babylon.

B¹, B².—After the removal of A¹, A², A³, and B³, the remaining chapters, when submitted to a searching scrutiny, betray underlying suppositions, statements, and facts which are mutually irreconcilable.

Thus certain sections, i.-ix. 1 ; xliii.-xliv. 7 ; xlv.-xlvi. 6 ; lxxvii.-lxxxii. ; lxxxiv. ; lxxxvi.-lxxxvii., are optimistic and hopeful as to this world, whereas certain others, ix.-xii. (?) ; xiii.-xxv. ; xxx. 2-xxxv. ; xli.-xlii. ; xliv. 8-15 ; xlvii.-lii. ; lxxv.-lxxvi. ; lxxxiii., are decidedly of an opposite character. The former sections we have named B¹, and the latter B². That B¹ and B² are derived from different authors will be clear from the following considerations :—

(1) In B¹ the earthly Jerusalem is to be rebuilt (i. 4, note ; vi. 9, note ; lxxviii. 7, note), but not so in B², where it is said that Jerusalem is removed with a view to usher in the judgment (see xx. 1, 2).

(2) In B¹ the exiles are to be restored, but not in B²; see notes cited in (1).

(3) In B¹ an earthly felicity or a Messianic kingdom is expected (i. 5; xlv. 6; lxxvii. 12), whereas in B² no earthly consolation of any kind is looked for (xliv. 8-15), and the judgment is close at hand (xlviii. 39; lxxxiii.).

(4) In B² there is a strongly ascetic tone (see xv. 8, note); but this is wholly absent from B¹.

(5) In B¹, Baruch is to die an ordinary death, whereas in B² he is to be taken up or translated and preserved till the last day, to testify against the Gentile oppressors of Israel (see xiii. 3, note).

(6) In B¹, Jeremiah is not sent to Babylon, but in B² he is (see x. 2, note; xxxiii. 2, note; lxxvii. 12, note).

(7) In B¹, Jerusalem is destroyed by angels lest the enemy should boast; this idea seems foreign to B² (see lxvii. 6, note).

(8) In B¹ the main interest of the writer is engaged in dealing with the recent destruction of Jerusalem; in tracing this calamity to the nation's sins; in exhorting to renewed faithfulness; and in inculcating the sure and certain hope of Israel's restoration. In B² the writer has relinquished all hopes of national restoration, and is mainly concerned with theological problems and questions of the schools.

In x. 6-xii. 4 it is not improbable, as we have shown in the notes on the passage, that we have a fragment of a Sadducean writing, which I have marked by the symbol S. It may possibly belong to B²; it cannot to B¹. Having now recognised that the groundwork is in the main derived from the two sources B¹ and B², and having already acquainted ourselves with the leading characteristics of each, it is next incumbent on us to consider the use made of these sources.

B¹, its extent in this book.—It is not difficult to ascertain the extent to which B¹ has been put in requisition by the final editor. Thus i.-ix. 1, with the exception of the interpolation iv. 2-7, clearly belongs to it, as it discovers most of the characteristics which belong to B¹ as over against their contraries in B². B² begins clearly with x. 1.-5, for these verses give the account of Jeremiah's departure to Babylon, which is peculiar to B²; ix. 2 and other references to fasts of seven days are probably due in their present positions to the final editor. The next fragments of B¹ are xliii.-xliv. 7; xlv.-xlvi. 6 (see pp. 68, 69, for detailed criticism), and the rest that are drawn from this source are lxxvii.-lxxxvii., with the exception of lxxxiii. = B² and lxxxv. = B³ (see pp. 119, 140, 154, 156).

B², its extent in this book.—Criticism encounters its chief difficulty in dealing with the source B², and with the use to which it has been put by the final editor. From B¹ the editor borrowed materials and used them in a straightforward fashion, but those from B² he mutilated and transposed in every imaginable way. This will be manifest to every serious student of xiii.-xxv. It was my sheer inability to write any connected or reasonable commentary on these chapters in their present order, that led me at last to recognise the true nature of the case. Then I came to see that these chapters could not have been written originally as they stand at present, and further study made it clear that we had here a most complete but instructive example of the perverse ingenuity of a redactor, by which the original text was dislocated and transposed, the original development of thought arrested and inverted, questions frequently recorded after their specific answers had already been given in full, and passages torn from their original setting in Baruch's address to the people and inserted in Baruch's prayers to God, where they are bereft of all conceivable meaning.

The reader will find a list of these logical anacoloutha and inversions on pp. 20, 21, and likewise an attempt to restore these chapters to their original order in B². With the paucity of materials at our disposal, this can only be partially satisfactory. The original order was probably xiii. 1-3*a*; xx.; xxiv. 2-4; xiii. 3*b*-12; xxv.; xiv.-xix.; xxi.-xxiv. 1.

The next fragment from B² is xxx. 2-5, which forms a good sequel to xxiv. 1. Of the intervening chapters xxvii.-xxx. 1 is an independent Apocalypse, as we have already found, i.e. A¹ and xxvi. is an addition of the editor; xxxi.-xxxv.; xli.-lii., with the exception of xliii.-xliv. 7; xlv.-xlvi. 6, which belong to B¹ and xxxii. 2-4; xlv. 7, which are due to the editor, are also fragments of B² (see pp. 57, 58, 66, 68, 69, 74). These chapters from B² have met with no better treatment at the hands of the editor than those already mentioned. Thus we find that xxxi.-xxxii. 6, which contains an address of Baruch to the people, presupposes xlii.; xlviii.; lii. to be already in the background; for the subject of each address is founded on a previous revelation (see p. 57). Thus xxxi.-xxxv. was read originally after xlviii.-lii., but not immediately, for lxxv. intervened (see p. 117), forming the natural sequel to lii. when A³, i.e. liii.-lxxiv. is removed; xli.-xlii. appear to have followed close on xxx. (see p. 66). Thus so far the order roughly was: xxx. 2-5; xli.-xlii.; xlviii.-lii.; lxxv.; xxxi.-xxxv. But there are grounds for regarding xlv. 8-15; lxxxiii. as intervening after xxxii. 6. Finally, the last fragment of B² is found in lxxvi., but this cannot have formed the end of B². It was probably closed with an account of the Assumption of Baruch.

For further disarrangements of the text by which words used originally by Baruch in addressing the people, are used in their present context in an address to God, though quite impossible in that connection, and the probable restoration of these fragments, see xlviii. 48-50; lii. 5-7; liv. 16-18, notes. The surviving fragments of B², which we have just dealt with, may be restored as follows to what seems to have been their original order in their source: xiii. 1-3a; xx.; xxiv. 2-4; xiii. 3b-12; xxv.; xiv.-xix.; xxi.-xxiv. 1; xxx. 2-5; xli.-xlii.; xlviii. 1-47; xlix.-lii. 3; lxxv.; xxxi.-xxxii. 6; liv. 17, 18; xlviii. 48-50; lii. 5-7; liv. 16; xlv. 8-15; lxxxiii.; xxxii. 7-xxxv.; lxxvi.

S, its relation to B¹ and B².—We have adjourned to the present the treatment of x. 6-xii. 4, which in the notes on this passage we have assigned to a Sadducean author, S. However this may be, I cannot but regard it as of different authorship to B¹ and B². Several grounds for this conclusion will be found in pp. 14-19. We might further observe that although, in vividness of grief and the still overwhelming consciousness of national calamity, S has features in common with B¹, it is sundered from it as resigning all hope of the restoration of the temple and its sacrifices, and as presenting the most hopeless pessimism in the book. And again, whereas S is related to B² in its world despair, it is no less certainly sundered from it in its complete absorption in the present wreck of the nation's material interests. Of this subject as now far distant B² recks little, and gives its chief energies and affections to religious problems and the conservation of Israel's spiritual interests.

Dates of S, B¹, B², B³.—In respect of date, S seems to have been written immediately after the fall of Jerusalem, in 70 A.D.; B¹ soon after this date, when the destruction of Israel and its hoped-for restoration were still the supreme subject of interest and speculation. B² is much later; its interests have passed from the material to the spiritual world; patriotic aims have ceased to affect it. B³ is probably still later than B².

Date of editing entire book.—Since the author of the Rest of the Words of Baruch has used portions of ii., v., vi., viii., x., xi., xxxv. 2 (?), lxxvii., lxxx., lxxxv., lxxxvii. of our Apocalypse, it is clear that he had the present form of our book before him in Greek. Thus, as this Christian Apocalypse was written between 130 and 140 A.D., the date of the Greek translation of our Apocalypse may be taken as not later than 130. The editing of the Hebrew may have been one or more decades earlier.

§ 8. THE LOST EPISTLE TO THE TWO AND A HALF TRIBES

A portion of this letter is probably to be found in the Apocryphal Book of Baruch, i.e. in i. 1-3 ; iii. 9-iv. 29. This section corresponds in many respects with the writings we are in search of. Thus (1) the lost Epistle was addressed to Judah and Benjamin in exile (lxxvii. 12, 17). Now it is clear that iii. 9-iv. 29 was also addressed to Judah and Benjamin in exile. It is Judah and Benjamin that are addressed ; for throughout iv. 5-29 it is Jerusalem that is represented as being deprived of her children. Further, it is Judah and Benjamin in exile, for they are said to be "sold to the nations and delivered to their enemies" (iv. 6), and Jerusalem describes herself as robbed of her sons and daughters (iv. 16), and the writer asks in iii. 10 : "Why is it, Israel, that thou art in thine enemies' land, and that thou art waxen feeble (so Kneucker) in a strange country ?"

(2) The lost Epistle was "an epistle of doctrine and a scroll of good tidings" (lxxvii. 12). This forms an admirable description of iii. 9-iv. 29, which is essentially a writing of consolation and encouragement.

(3) The lost Epistle was to hold out the promise of return (lxxvii. 6); this is done in iv. 22-24.

(4) The lost Epistle was written by Baruch to Babylon (lxxvii. 12, 17).

Now i. 1-3; iii. 9-iv. 29, which purport to have been written by Baruch in Babylon and addressed to the exiles there, appear rather to have been written by Baruch in Jerusalem and addressed to the exiles in Babylon; for (a) the speaker does not identify himself with those who are in exile. Cf. iii. 10: "Why is it, Israel, that thou art in thine enemies' land"; and iv. 5, 6, where he calls them the remnant dispersed among the nations; (b) the speaker rather identifies himself with Jerusalem; at all events, in iv. 9-29 he personifies Jerusalem, and represents her as addressing the neighbouring peoples, and then her own children as they are being led into captivity, and promising them a safe return to her.

(5) Finally, in B¹, to which the lost Epistle belongs, the blamelessness of Jerusalem over against her children is insisted on (cf. lxxvii. 8). The same thought would naturally recur in some form in the lost Epistle. And so, in fact, we find it underlying iv. 8-29. And as in B¹ it is taught that Israel is punished only as a chastisement (cf. i. 5; lxxix. 2), the same idea would most probably appear in the lost Epistle as an encouragement to the exiles. Now this is emphatically declared to be so in iv. 6.

On the above grounds to which others could be added, I am inclined to regard iii. 9-iv. 29 as a recast of, or, at all events, as based upon the lost Epistle. This Epistle was probably introduced by some form of i. 1-3. These verses are, as Kneucker has shown, corrupt in their present form.

iv. 39-v. 9, which consists of a direct address to Jerusalem, is derived by the final editor from a different source, mainly from the eleventh of the Psalms of Solomon.

§ 9. THE RELATIONS OF THIS APOCALYPSE WITH 4 EZRA

In this section we shall deal with the following questions:—

- (a) The composite nature of 4 Ezra.
- (b) Conflicting characteristics of 4 Ezra and Baruch, the former to some extent non-Jewish.
- (c) 4 Ezra from a Hebrew original.
- (d) Relations of the respective constituents of our Apocalypse and 4 Ezra.

(a) The composite nature of Ezra.—Into this question this is not the place to enter. I shall content myself with expressing my acceptance in the main of Kabisch's masterly criticism¹ of this work. Though many of his positions cannot be maintained, the greater number of them will, I believe, be ultimately accepted as final. The work is very unequal.

¹ Kabisch, Das vierte Buch Esra, 1889, Göttingen.

In it there stand side by side numerous instances of extremely fine insight and not a few gross misapprehensions and bizarre conclusions. His analysis is as follows :—

S = an Apocalypse of Salathiel written circ. 100 A.D. at Rome, preserved in a fragmentary condition : iii. 1-31 ; iv. 1-51 ; v. 13*b*-vi. 10 ; vi. 30-vii. 25 ; vii. 45-viii. 62 ; ix. 13-x. 57 ; xii. 40-48 ; xiv. 28-35.

E = an Ezra Apocalypse, circ. 31 B.C., written in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem : iv. 52-v. 13*a* ; vi. 13-25, 28 ; vii. 26-44 ; viii. 63-ix. 12.

A = Adlergesicht—an Eagle Vision, written 90 A.D. by a Zealot : x. 60-xii. 40.

M = Menschensohn—a Son-of-Man Vision, written in Jerusalem about the time of Pompey : xiii., but much interpolated by R.

E² = an Ezra fragment, circ. 100 : xiv. 1-17*a*, 18-27, 36-47.

R = the Editor—a Zealot, circ. 120 : iii. 1. (qui et Ezras), 32-36 ; vi. 11, 12, 26, 27, 29 ; x. 58, 59 ; xii. 9, 34, 37-39, 49-51 ; xiii. 13*b*-15, 16-24, 26*b*, 29-32, 54-58 ; xiv. 8, 17*b*, 48-50, as well as parts of iv. 52 ; vi. 20, etc.

The above analysis may be taken as a good working hypothesis. Among other grounds which Kabisch might have pressed to show that the book as it stands has been edited from various independent sources and edited most ignorantly, I will adduce only one. The title, Dominator Domine, which in the Apocalypse of Baruch is used only of God, and rightly so, in 4 Ezra is a designation of God in five instances—iii. 4 ; v. 23 ; vi. 38 (in Syr., Eth., and Arm. Versions) ; xii. 7 ; xiii. 51 ; but of an angel in six—iv. 38 ; v. 38 ; vi. 11 ;

vii. 17, 58, 75. The attribution of this divine title to an angel can only be due to gross confusions or interpolations in the text (see note on iii. 1 of our text). It is to be observed that this phenomenon is found only in the late source S and R.

(b) Conflicting characteristics of 4 Ezra and Baruch, the former to some extent non-Jewish.—On the following doctrines the teaching of our Apocalypse represents faithfully the ordinary Judaism of the first century, whereas that of 4 Ezra holds an isolated position or is closely related to Christianity.

1. The Law.—From an exhaustive comparison of the passages dealing with this subject in the two books (see xv. 5, note) it is clear that the possession of the law by Israel is less a subject of self-gratulation in 4 Ezra than in Baruch. In the latter, especially in B², it protects the righteous (xxxii. 1), justifies them (li. 3), is their hope (li. 7) and never-failing stay (xlviii. 22, 24). This is decidedly orthodox Judaism. In 4 Ezra, on the other hand, man trembles before the law; he needs mercy, not the award of the law, for all have sinned (viii. 35); it has served rather unto condemnation; for only a very few are saved through good works (vii. 77) or the divine compassion (vii. 139). It is hardly necessary to point out that this conception of the law approximates to the Pauline view. p. 20

2. Works.—In my note on xiv. 7 I have contrasted the teaching of the two books on this subject, and arrived at the conclusion that in 4 Ezra the Paul doctrine of works as it is found in Baruch can hardly be said to exist. Here again Baruch represents traditional Jewish orthodoxy, but 4 Ezra not. We should observe also that the latter guards carefully against the doctrine of salvation by works by making salvation depend on works and faith combined (cf. ix. 7; xiii. 23; cf. St. James ii. 14-26).

3. Justification, i.e. by the law or by works.—This subject might have more logically been treated under the preceding head. For my own convenience I have given it separately. On p. 39 I have shown that justification by the law, though taught in Baruch, is absent from 4 Ezra. In this respect again the latter is non-Jewish.

4. Original Sin and Freewill.—On pp. 92-93, from a study of the passages in 4 Ezra bearing on these subjects, we have found that there was in man to begin with a wicked element ("granum seminis mali," iv. 30); and that through Adam's yielding to this evil impulse a hereditary tendency to sin was created, and the cor malignum developed (iii. 21-22). The evil element having thus gained the mastery over man, only a very few are saved through mercy (vii. 139; viii. 3); hence the writer of vii. 118 naturally charges Adam with being the cause of the final perdition of man.

In the face of such a hopeless view of man's condition, human freewill cannot be maintained: practically man has none, for only a handful out of the whole human race are saved (vii. 51-61; ix. 16); theoretically he is said to have it, but this is to justify his final condemnation (see p. 93).

This teaching is practically unique in Judaism between 1-300 A.D.—in fact it is not Jewish but Christian doctrine. In Baruch, on the other hand, conformably to early Rabbinic teaching, it is declared that Adam is not the cause of man's perdition, but that each man is the Adam of his own soul (liv. 19). There is not, moreover, a trace of Ezra's elaborate theory, and the doctrine of original sin is stoutly denied in liv. 15, 19—not a trace save only in xlviii. 42, where spiritual death is traced to Adam. Elsewhere—xvii. 3; xxiii. 4; liv. 15—it is only physical death that is ascribed to Adam's transgression. But in Ezra, as we might expect from what precedes, both spiritual and physical death are always traced to Adam—iii. 21, 22; iv. 30; vii. 118-121.

Thus on various grounds we see that whereas Baruch is a pure product of the Judaism of the time, 4 Ezra is the result of two influences at work, first and mainly a Jewish, and secondly a Christian. It was no doubt owing to this Christian element in the latter that it won and preserved a high position in the Christian Church. It constitutes, in fact, a confession of the failure of Judaism.

The above peculiarities of doctrine in 4 Ezra discover themselves almost universally in S. The author of S was undoubtedly a Jew, but a Jew who had been impressed and imbued to some extent by Christian teaching, probably by Pauline.

(c) 4 Ezra from a Hebrew Original.—Though this question could only be settled by an exhaustive study of the text presupposed by the Versions, I am convinced that a Hebrew groundwork underlies at all events the greater part of this book. I might call attention here to the frequent occurrence of the Hebraism—the finite verb combined with the cognate infinitive—as evidence in this direction. Thus in iii. 33 we have “pertransiens pertransivi”; iv. 13, “festinans festinavit”; iv. 26, “proficiscens profectus sum”; v. 30, “odians odisti”; v. 45, “viventes vivent”; vi. 32, “auditu audita est”; vii. 5 “volens voluerit,” and so on in vii. 14, 21, 67, 70, 75; viii. 8, 15, 58; ix. 1; x. 32; xi. 45; xiv. 3, 29. All these appear in the Syriac Version, save five—iv. 26; vii. 5, 14; x. 32; xiv. 29. Still more are omitted in the Ethiopic Version. On the weight to be assigned to this feature of the text as evidence of a Hebrew background, see pp. xliv.-li. I may add that in the late work 5 Ezra xv. 9; xvi. 65, this idiom is found; but in the latter passage it is a quotation from our Apocalypse (see p. xx.), and in the former it is apparently a quotation also.

(d) Relations of the respective constituents of our Apocalypse and 4 Ezra.—My present purpose does not call for an exhaustive list of the passages common to the two books. This will be given elsewhere. It will be sufficient to indicate the direction such an inquiry should pursue, and to mention some of the chief grounds for determining the relations in which the various constituents of Baruch stand to those of 4 Ezra. These determinations must, however, pending further investigation, be regarded as provisional.

Of the multitude of thoughts, phrases, and commonplaces that are common to both books, a large number already occur in previously existing literature; and as these may possibly be drawn independently from such sources by both books, they are not helpful at the outset in determining the priority of either book or of their respective constituents. Again, of many other common passages, the sources, it is true, are no longer found; yet that such did exist in certain cases we have ample grounds for believing; see the note on xxix. 4 for the common original of 4 Ezra vi. 49-52 and of our Baruch xxix. 4. Thus we must be on our guard against tracing relations of dependence where both books have been borrowing independently from the same lost source.

We shall now point out the relations in which A¹, A², A³, B¹, B² stand to Ezra. I shall refer to the following constituents of the latter, S, E, E², M (according to Kabisch's analysis on p. lxviii.).

A¹.—A¹ and S are apparently related in only one passage: Bar. xxix. 4 and 4 Ezra vi. 49-52. But this relation is not of dependence on either side, but of common derivation from the same lost source; see xxix. 4, note. As regards A¹ and the E constituent of Ezra, xxix. 3b-6 of the former, "The Messiah will then begin to be revealed . . . and those who hungered will rejoice; moreover also they will behold marvels," and vii. 27b-28 of the latter, "Videbit mirabilia mea ; revelabitur enim filius meus . . . et jocundabit qui relictus sunt," are certainly connected. If we add to these connections in thought and diction the fact that only in A¹ and E in the Baruch and Ezra literature is the passive rôle assigned to the Messiah, we may reasonably conclude that there is a direct relation of dependence between them. A¹, I think, is earlier than E; both are prior to 70 A.D. Finally, A¹ and M may be connected in xxix. 3 and xiii. 16-20. The thought seems earlier and more vigorous in A¹. In M it is threshed out; but such considerations are indecisive. If there is a relation of dependence between them, A¹ is probably earlier than M, for in A¹ the Messiah has a passive rôle, in M an active one. The idea of a passive Messiah conceived as early as 160 B.C. was not likely to hold its ground in later times when the needs of the people called for an active leader and combatant in the Messiah.

A².—A² and M, i.e. xiii. of 4 Ezra, are related. Cf. xl. 2, "My Messiah will convict him of all his impieties . . . and set before him all the works of his hosts," with 4 Ezra xiii. 37, "Ipse autem filius meus arguet quae advenerunt gentes impietates eorum . . . et improperebit" ("improperebit" is a mistaken rendering; read "ordinabit" with Syr. and Eth.) "coram eis mala cogitamenta eorum." The connection is manifest.

The first halves of these sentences agree verbally, so likewise do the second; for "set before him" = παραστήσει κατὰ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ = יערך לעיניו; and “improperabit” (or “ordinabit,” Syr. and Eth.) “coram eis” = ἐπιστοιβάσει κατὰ πρόσωπον αὐτῶν = יַעֲרֶךְ לְעֵינֵיהֶם; for παριστάναι and ἐπιστοιβάζειν are both LXX. renderings of עָרַךְ. The phrase is derived from Psalm xlix. 22 (cf. also Leviticus i. 1, 7, 8, 12; vi. 12).

A number of features into which I cannot enter here show that it is M that is dependent on A², and not vice versa.

The verse just dealt with reappears in xii. 32, in the Eagle Vision designated A by Kabisch, in a form which shows it dependent on M. A² is thus earlier than M and A in 4 Ezra.

A³.—Although there are many points of contact between A³ and 4 Ezra, there are none that necessitate the theory of dependence on either side save in liv. 15, 19. These verses which represent the teaching of orthodox Judaism circ. 50-70, were before the writer of the S element in 4 Ezra (cf. iii. 21-22; iv. 30; vii. 48), where a non-Jewish turn is given to the borrowed thoughts and phrases.

B¹.—Although there are many similar and identical thoughts and phrases in B¹ and 4 Ezra, these are not sufficiently characteristic or definite to furnish grounds for determining the dependence of either. This question must be settled on other grounds, i.e. chronological. From the use of like thought or diction, one might argue, on the one hand, that B¹ is dependent on the E element of 4 Ezra; compare iii. 7 with vii. 30; on the other, that B¹ is a source of E² of 4 Ezra; compare lxxvii. 3-6 with xiv. 30-33, and lxxvii. 14 with xiv.

20; that it is likewise a source of S; compare lxxxiv. 10 with x. 24. In these latter passages a different turn is given to the phrases found first in Baruch.

B².—Between B² and 4 Ezra there are almost innumerable points of contact, but the bulk of them are indecisive for our purposes. With the older elements of 4 Ezra its points of similarity are few and unimportant; but the relations between B² and S are very close. The fact of man's sinning consciously is frequently emphasised in B² and S (cf. Bar. xv. 6; xix. 3; xlviii. 40; and 4 Ezra viii. 56, 58-60; vii. 72). The doctrine that the world was made for man is confined to B² and S; see notes on xiv. 18; xv. 7. Their teaching on the law and on works and justification is allied—in some particulars identical but as a whole at variance, owing to Christian influences at work in S; see pp. lxix.-lxx. In B² we have an exposition of the views of orthodox Judaism 70-100 A.D.; in S we find much of the actual teaching in B² recast under Christian influences. S seems to us in every respect to be later than B².

§ 10. RELATION OF THIS APOCALYPSE WITH THE NEW TESTAMENT

The points of contact between this Apocalypse and the New Testament are many in number. The most of these, however, are insufficient to establish a relation of dependence on either side; for the thoughts and expressions in question could be explained from pre-existing literature, or were commonplaces of the time.

Of these a list will be given immediately, followed by another list of passages which seem to show that our text may in a few instances be derived from the New Testament.

New Testament.	Parallels in our Apocalypse.	Probable source of both.
Mt. iii. 16.—Lo, the heavens were opened.	xxii. 1. — Lo, the heavens were opened.	Ezek. i. 1.
Mt. iii. 17 (xvii. 5; John xii. 28). — A voice from heaven.	xiii. 1; xxii. 1.— A voice from the height.	Dan. iv. 31.
Mt. iv. 8.	lxxvi. 3.	Deut. xxxiv. 1-4.
Mt. xxiv. 7 (Mk. xiii. 8; Luke xxi. 11).—Famines . . . and earthquakes.	xxvii. 6, 7.	Commonplaces of Jewish Apocalyptic.
Mt. xxiv. 11, 24. — Many false prophets.	xlvi. 34 (see note).	...
Mt. xxiv. 19 (Luke xxiii. 29).	x. 13, 14 (resemblance slight).	Isa. liv. 1.
Mt. xxvi. 24.— It had been good for that man, etc.	x. 6.—Blessed is he who was not born, etc.	A Jewish Commonplace.
Mt. xxiv. 27.— For as the lightning . . . so shall be the coming of the Son of Man.	liii. 9. — Now that lightning shone exceedingly so as to illuminate the whole earth. (The lightning here symbolises the Messiah.)	A coincidence (?).
Luke xx. 36.— Equal unto the angels.	li. 10.	Eth. En. civ. 4, 6.
Luke xxi. 28 (1 Pet. iv. 7).—Your redemption draweth nigh.	xxiii. 7.—My redemption has drawn nigh.	Eth. En. li. 2.— The day of their redemption has drawn nigh.

New Testament.	Parallels in our Apocalypse.	Probable source of both.
Acts xv. 10 (where the law is spoken of as a "yoke"; cf. Gal. v. 1).	xli. 3.—The yoke of Thy law.	A current expres- sion.
Rom. ii. 14, 15.	xlvi. 40 (see note).	A Jewish Com- monplace.
Rom. viii. 18 (2 Cor. iv. 17).—The sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be com- pared with the glory, etc.	xv. 8.—This world is to them a trouble and a wear- iness . . . and that which is to come, a crown with great glory.	A Jewish Com- monplace (?).
1 Cor. iv. 5 (Heb. iv. 13).	lxxxiii. 3.	(Cf. Eth. En. ix. 5).
2 Cor. iv. 17 (Rom. viii. 18).	xv. 8.	A Jewish Com- monplace.
1 Tim. i. 2.— Mercy and peace.	lxxviii. 2.— Mercy and peace.	A coincidence.
2 Peter iii. 9.	xxi. 20.	A coincidence.
2 Peter iii. 13 (Mt. xix. 28 ; Rev. xxi. 1).—New heavens and a new earth.	xxxii. 6.—Re- newed His creation.	Isa. lxxv. 17, etc.
Rev. xx. 12.— The books were opened.	xxiv. 1.—The books will be opened.	Dan. vii. 10.

In the following passages our text is dependent on the New Testament, or on some lost common source :—

Mt. xvi. 26.—For what shall a man be profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and forfeit his soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

Luke i. 42.—Blessed art thou among women, etc.

li. 15.—For what then have men lost their life or for what have those who were on the earth exchanged their soul?

liv. 10.—Blessed be my mother among those that bear, etc. (probably interpolated).

1 Cor. xv. 19.—If in this life only we have hoped in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.

1 Cor. xv. 35.—How are the dead raised? and with what manner of body do they come?

James i. 2.—Count it all joy when ye fall into manifold temptations.

Rev. iv. 6.—In the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, four living creatures.

xxi. 13.—For if there were this life only . . . nothing could be more bitter than this.

xlix. 2.—In what shape will those live who live in that day?

lii. 6.—Rejoice ye in the suffering which ye now suffer.

li. 11.—The living creatures which are beneath the throne.

§ 11. VALUE OF OUR APOCALYPSE IN THE ATTESTATION OF THE JEWISH THEOLOGY OF 50-100 A.D., AND IN THE INTERPRETATION OF CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY FOR THE SAME PERIOD.

This book presents us with a vivid picture of the hopes and beliefs of Judaism during the years 50-100 A.D. As it was written at different dates during this period and by different authors, its composition was thus contemporaneous with that of the New Testament. It is, therefore, of very great value to the New Testament student, as it furnishes him with the historical setting and background of many of the New Testament problems. We are thereby enabled to estimate the contributions made in these respects by Christian thought, as well as to appreciate the world's need of the Pauline dialectic. For the purpose of illustrating our meaning we shall first of all draw attention to the doctrine of the Resurrection in our Apocalypse. Of the Jewish doctrine here set forth, St. Paul's teaching on this subject will be seen to be in some respects a development. Secondly, we shall briefly advert to the doctrines of Original Sin and Freewill, Works and Justification, Forgiveness, in which the Jewish teaching and the Christian stand in strong antagonism.

(a) The Resurrection.—In xlix. 2-li. a view of the resurrection is expounded, which sets forth first the raising of the dead with their bodies in exactly the same form in which they had been committed to the earth with a view to their recognition by those who knew them, and next their subsequent transformation with a view to a spiritual existence of unending duration. In my notes on pp. 83, 84, I have shown that the Pauline teaching in 1 Cor. xv. 35-50 is in many respects not an innovation, but a developed and more spiritual exposition of ideas already current in Judaism.

(b) Original Sin and Freewill.—According to our Apocalypse,¹ the penalties which man has incurred through Adam's sin affect only his physical existence. He still preserves his freewill; whether he is saved or lost, it is his own doing. Adam's sin is limited in spiritual consequences to himself; every man is the Adam of his own soul (see pp. 44-45, 93).

¹ Only in B², xlviii. 42, is spiritual death traced to Adam. This passage may be interpolated; for (1) in all other passages in B² it is only physical death that is so traced. (2) It conflicts with the presupposition underlying B² that man can work righteousness and acquire merit as against God (see xiv. 7, note). (3) In A³ (see liv. 15, 19) original sin is denied and freewill asserted in the clearest terms. (4) The doctrine of original sin is unknown to the Talmud (see Weber, 217, 240; Edersheim, Life and Times, etc., i. 165). We have shown elsewhere (pp. lxix.-lxxi.) that the teaching of 4 Ezra on this subject is largely non-Jewish.

St. Paul's doctrine is strongly antagonistic. Both physical and spiritual death are due to Adam's sin. Owing to that sin man is henceforth dominated by a power (= original sin) which makes his fulfilment of law and therefore his realisation of righteousness impossible. He is not, however, robbed wholly thereby of freewill, but retains it in a degree only sufficient to justify his condemnation.

Works and Justification.—In our Apocalypse the righteous are saved by their works (li. 7), and their righteousness is of the law (lxvii. 6). In the consciousness of their justification by the law (li. 3) they can with confidence approach God and look to Him for the fulfilment of their prayers because of their works wherein they trust (lxiii. 3, 5; lxxxv. 2), and owing to the same ground of confidence they depart from this world full of hope (xiv. 12). But their works are not limited to themselves in their saving influences. So long as the righteous live, their righteousness is a tower of strength to their people (ii. 2), and after their death it remains to their country a lasting ground of merit (xiv. 7; lxxxiv. 10); see notes on xiv. 7; xxi. 9.

With every position here maintained Christianity is at variance, and rabbinic teaching in full accord.

Forgiveness.—How far did this doctrine exist in Pharisaic Judaism, and in what relation does it stand to the Christian doctrine of forgiveness? In Phari-saic Judaism forgiveness was a wholly subordinate conception, and can only be considered in conjunction with its views on merit and demerit. If we wish to discover the Pharisaic doctrine of forgiveness we must have recourse to the Talmud; for that the Pharisaic views of the first century on this subject were those which later prevailed in the Talmud, is to be inferred on these grounds:—(1) In Matt. iii. 9 the words “Think not to say within yourselves, we have Abraham to our father,” show that the doctrine of the vicarious righteousness of Abraham was a popular belief. Now this latter doctrine at once presupposes and forms an organic part of the Talmudic doctrine. (2) The teaching on works in our Apocalypse and partially also in 4 Ezra, as well as that of St. Paul’s Jewish antagonists, belong also organically to the Talmudic doctrine of works and forgiveness.

The Talmudic doctrine of works may (see Weber, pp. 267-300) be shortly summarised as follows:—Every good work—whether the fulfilment of a command or an act of mercy—established a certain degree of merit with God, while every evil work entailed a corresponding demerit. A man’s position with God depended on the relation existing between his merits and demerits, and his salvation on the preponderance of the former over the latter. The relation between his merits and demerits was determined daily by the weighing of his deeds (see Eth. En. xli. 1; lxi. 8; Weber, 272). But as the results of such judgments were necessarily unknown, there could not fail to be much uneasiness, and to allay this the doctrine of the vicarious righteousness of the patriarchs and saints of Israel was developed, not later than the beginning of the Christian era (cf. Matt. iii. 9). A man could thereby summon to his aid the merits of the fathers, and so counterbalance his demerits.

It is obvious that such a system does not admit of forgiveness in any spiritual sense of the term. It can only mean in such a connection a remission of penalty to the offender, on the ground that compensation is furnished, either through his own merit or through that of the righteous fathers. Thus, as Weber vigorously puts it: "Vergebung ohne Bezahlung gibt es nicht."¹ Thus, according to popular Pharisaism, God never remitted a debt until He was paid in full, and so long as it was paid it mattered not by whom.

It will be observed that with the Pharisees forgiveness was an external thing; it was concerned not with the man himself but with his works—with these indeed as affecting him, but yet as existing independently without him. This was not the view taken by the best thought in the Old Testament. There forgiveness dealt first and chiefly with the direct relation between man's spirit and God; it was essentially a restoration of man to communion with God. When, therefore, Christianity had to deal with these problems, it could not accept the Pharisaic solutions, but had in some measure to return to the Old Testament to authenticate and develop the highest therein taught, and in the person and life of Christ to give it a world-wide power and comprehensiveness.

¹ In certain extraordinary cases, the divine forgiveness was conceived possible where no merit was at hand, see 4 Ezra viii. 36; Weber, 292, 300.

We thus see that forgiveness was conceived as (1) the restoration of man to communion with God; (2) the remission of penalty on the receipt of certain equivalents. Of these two the former alone is taught in the Gospels. In the Pauline Epistles, however, the writer maintains indeed the former as the essential element in forgiveness, but he also incorporates in some degree the latter conception, and not unnaturally as having been originally a Pharisee of the Pharisees. Thus in his doctrine of the Atonement, he introduces the Pharisaic conception by representing the penalty due to man's sin as endured by Christ. This is undoubtedly a more spiritual form of the Pharisaic doctrine, and rightly interpreted it preserves the element of truth which underlies the Pharisaic teaching. It needs, however, to be kept in complete subordination to the former. But that it has not been so kept is obvious from every page of the history of this doctrine since the Christian era. In every age this Pharisaic error has won an evil eminence in the Church—before the eleventh century in representing Christ's death as a debt paid to the devil in lieu of the latter's claim on man, and in the subsequent centuries as a sacrifice to the alleged unforgiveness of God. Wherever or whenever this evil leaven has appeared, it has been followed by shallowness, unreality, and every vice of the unspiritual life.

THE APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH

[TRANSLATED FROM THE GREEK INTO SYRIAC]

I. AND it came to pass in the twenty-fifth year of I.-IV. 1=B¹.

THE FIRST SECTION

I.-V. 6. These chapters constitute the first of the seven sections into which, according to the scheme of the final editor, the book was originally divided by fasts. These sections were divided by fasts which generally lasted seven days (see v. 7, note; ix., note). In each section there is a definite movement or order of events observed. This order briefly is: first a fast, then a divine command or revelation, and finally the publication of the command or matter so revealed. In some cases a prayer follows the fast, and a lamentation the publication of the divine disclosure (see notes already referred to).

It will be observed that iv. 2-7 is interpolated probably from B².

In this section the word of the Lord comes to Baruch announcing the coming, though temporary, destruction of Jerusalem on account of the wickedness of the two tribes (i.); with a view to this destruction Baruch is to bid Jeremiah and the remaining righteous to withdraw (ii.); Baruch then in his alarm asks, will this destruction be final? will chaos return and the number of souls be completed (iii.)? God replies that the punishment is only temporary (iv. 1). Yet, rejoins Baruch, even so, the enemy will, by the pollution and fall of Zion, glory before their idols over the nation loved of God (v. 1). Not so, answers God; judgment must be executed on Judah, yet the heathen will have no cause to glory, for it is not they that will destroy Zion (v. 2, 3). Baruch thereupon assembled the people in the Cedron valley, and delivered the divine message; and the people wept (v. 5, 6).

I. [Translated from Greek into Syriac.] These words are found in their above position in the Syriac MS. As they were placed there either by the Syriac translator or a subsequent scribe, I have bracketed them. The statement they convey, however, is borne out by all other evidence. Thus we find (1) transliterations of Greek words; (2) renderings explicable only on the hypothesis that the translator followed the wrong meaning of the Greek word before him.

I. 1. In the twenty-fifth year of Jeconiah. Jeconiah was eighteen years when he began to reign in 599 (2 Kings xxiv. 8). After reigning three months he was carried into Jeconiah king of Judah, that the word of the Lord came to Baruch the son of Neriah, and said to him: 2. "Hast thou seen all that this people are doing to Me; that the evils which these two tribes which remained have done are greater than (those of) the ten tribes which were carried away captive? 3. For the former tribes were forced by their kings to commit sin, but these two of themselves have been forcing and compelling their kings to commit sin. 4. For this reason, behold I bring evil upon this city, and upon its inhabitants, and it will be removed from before Me for a time, and captivity. Yet during his captivity he is still called king (2 Kings xxv. 27; Jer. xxix. 2; Ezek. i. 2). Thus his twenty-fifth year would be 592, or two years before the approach of Nebuchadrezzar. It is no objection to this that, according to vi. 1, only one day and not two years should elapse between the prediction and its fulfilment; for in like manner the siege of Jerusalem, which lasted two years, is represented as lasting one day. The unities of time are sacrificed to suit the dramatic purposes of the writer. Why the writer spoke of Jeconiah and not of Zedekiah here, I cannot say. It was not from ignorance of the latter (cf. viii. 5).

The Lord. This title of God is found in iii. 1, 4; iv. 1; v. 2; x. 4, 18; xi. 3; xv. 1; xvii. 1; xxiv. 3; xxviii. 6; xlviii. 2; liv. 1, 20; lxxv. 1; lxxvii. 3. It is, therefore, not peculiar to any of the different elements of the book. This, however, may be due in part to the final editor. See note on iii. 1.

Baruch the son of Neriah. Cf. Jer. xxxii. 12; xxxvi. 4; Bar. i. 1.

2. The ten tribes. Elsewhere in this Apocalypse called "the nine and a half tribes." See lxxviii. 1, note.

3. Forced by their kings. I.e. by Jeroboam and others of the kings of Israel.

These two . . . compelling their kings to commit sin. It was in some instances the princes of Judah, and not Zedekiah, that resisted the teaching and prophecy of Jeremiah: cf. Jer. xxxviii.; and Josephus, Ant. x. 7. 2, ὁ δὲ Σεδεκίας ἐφ' ὅσον μὲν ἤκουε τοῦ προφήτου ταῦτα λέγοντος, ἐπέιθετο αὐτῷ, καὶ συνήδει πᾶσιν ὡς ἀληθεύουσι . . . διέφθειραν δὲ πάλιν αὐτὸν οἱ φίλοι, καὶ διήγον ἀπὸ τῶν τοῦ προφήτου πρὸς ἅπερ ἤθελον.

4. I bring evil upon this city, and upon its inhabitants (2 Kings xxii. 16; 2 Chron. xxxiv. 28; Jer. vi. 19; xix. 3, etc.)

Will be removed from before Me (2 Kings xxiii. 27; xxiv. 3; Jer. xxxii. 31).

For a time. This phrase recurs in iv. 1; vi. 9; xxxii. 3. Since we must on other grounds regard xxxii. 2-4 in its present context as an interpolation, this phrase is peculiar to i.-viii., i.e. to B¹. Although Jerusalem has fallen under the Romans, the writer of these chapters believes that its desolation will be but "for a time." The future restoration of

I will scatter this people among the Gentiles that they may do good to the Gentiles. 5. And My people will be chastened, and the time will come when they will seek for the prosperity of their times.

II. "For I have said these things to thee that thou mayst say (them) to Jeremiah, and to all those who are like you, in order that ye may retire from this city. 2. Because your works are to this city as a firm pillar, and your prayers as a strong wall."

Jerusalem is implied also in lxxvii. 6; lxxviii. 7, where the return of the ten tribes is foretold. In B², i.e. ix.-xxvi.; xxxi.-xxxv.; xli.-xliii.; xlv. 9-15; xlvii.-lii.; lxxxiii.; B³, i.e. lxxxv., no such restoration is looked for; Jerusalem is removed, xx. 2 (see note in loc.), in order to usher in the judgment more speedily; in x. 10 the writer abandons all hope of a restored Jerusalem.

Scatter this people, etc. Jer. xxx. 11; Ezek. xxxvi. 19.

Do good to the Gentiles. This seems to mean to make proselytes of the Gentiles. Cf. xli. 4; xlii. 5; see also xiii. 12.

5. My people will be chastened. Cf. xiii. 10; xiv.; lxxix. 2; Pss. Sol. vii. 3; x. 1-3; xiii. 6-8; xviii. 4.

Seek for the prosperity of their times. The writer looks forward to a Messianic kingdom or period of blessedness for Israel on earth.

II. 1. According to Jer. xxxviii. 13, 28, Jeremiah was a prisoner in the court of the guard till the capture of Jerusalem.

Jeremiah is mentioned again in v. 5; ix.; x. 2, 4.

Those who are like you. This phrase is found in three of the sections of this book (cf. xxi. 24; lvii. 1; lix. 1; lxvi. 7). Cf. 4 Ezra iv. 36; viii. 51, 62; xiv. 9, 49.

Withdraw from the city. This reappears in the Rest of the Words of Baruch i. 1: "Jeremiah . . . go forth from this city." Cf. also i. 3, 7. The reason for this command appears in the Talmud. Thus, as in Taanith, 19, we are told that a house cannot fall so long as a good man is in it; so in Pesikta, 115b (Buber's edition, 1868), it is said: "So long as Jeremiah was in Jerusalem, it was not destroyed, but when he went forth from it, it was destroyed."

2. Your works are to this city as a firm pillar, etc. We have here quite an illegitimate application of Jer. vi. 27: "I have made thee a tower and a fortress among my people." It is, however, a natural inference from Gen. xviii. 23-33. This verse is reproduced in the Rest of the Words of Baruch i. 2: αἱ γὰρ προσευχαὶ ὑμῶν ὡς στῦλος ἐδραῖος ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῆς, καὶ ὡς τεῖχος ἀδαμάντινον περικυκλοῦν αὐτήν. It will be remarked that the reference to "works" is omitted by this latter book, as we should naturally expect in a work of Christian authorship.

Your works. On the doctrine of works taught in this book see note on xiv. 7.

III. And I said: "O LORD, my Lord, have I come into the world for this purpose that I might see the evils of my mother? not (so) my Lord. 2. If I have found grace in Thy sight, first take my spirit that I may go to my fathers and not behold the destruction of my mother. 3. For two things vehemently constrain me: for I cannot resist Thee, and my soul,

III. 1. O LORD, my Lord. This title of God is found also in xiv. 8, 16; xvi. 1; xxiii. 1; xxxviii. 1; xlvi. 4, 5, and is thus, except in one instance, confined to B and B¹. It is remarkable that, whereas it is used only of God in the Apocalypse of Baruch, in 4 Ezra it is a designation of God in five instances (iii. 4; v. 23; vi. 38 (in Syriac, Eth., and Arm. versions); xii. 7; xiii. 51), and of an angel in six (iv. 38; v. 38; vi. 11; vii. 17, 58, 75). This fact makes it probable that the introduction of the angel in 4 Ezra is the work of the final editor. The usual titles used in addressing an angel in that book are dominus meus (iv. 3, 5; v. 33; vii. 3; x. 34). This is applied also to Ezra in ix. 41; domine (iv. 22, 41; v. 34, 35, 41, 56; vii. 10, 53, 132; viii. 6, 20, 36, 63). These last two titles are probably equivalents of אֲדֹנָי which is employed in Dan. x. 17, 19, in addressing an angel. The words אֲדֹנָי אֱלֹהֵינוּ are to be rendered O LORD, my Lord as above and not Dominator Domine, as we find in Ceriani and Fritzsche. Linguistically indeed either rendering is right, but the frequent occurrence of this phrase in the Syriac Version of 4 Ezra enables us to see that the suffix is not moribund but living; for it appears in the Ethiopic Version and occasionally in the Armenian. The Syriac is a translation either of δέσποτα κύριέ μου or κύριε κύριέ σου; these in turn would point either to אֲדֹנָי יְהוָה, as in Gen. xv. 2, 8, or אֲדֹנָי יְהוֹה. Since such titles could only be used of God, we can with certainty conclude that their attribution to an angel in 4 Ezra is due to gross confusions or interpolations in the text.

My mother. Cf. iii. 2, 3; x. 16; Baruch iv. 9-16. This was a very natural term for a Jew to apply to Jerusalem. We find the correlative expression in Isa. xlix. 21; Matt. xxiii. 37; Gal. iv. 25. It is the earthly Jerusalem that is referred to here, for the writer of B¹ looks for a restored earthly Zion (see note on i. 4). Again the same title is applied to the fallen Jerusalem in 4 Ezra x. 7: "Sion mater nostra omnium," though there the writer looks for the restoration of Zion. In Gal. iv. 26 St. Paul uses it of the heavenly Jerusalem; for he has no further interest in the earthly. The earthly was the mother of Jews, but the heavenly of Christians. The earthly Jerusalem, as we should expect, in Matt. v. 35 is still "the city of the great King."

O Lord. See i. 1, note.

2. If I have found grace. xxviii. 6; 4 Ezra v. 56; vii. 102; viii. 42; xii. 7.

Take my spirit. An O. T. expression (cf. Ps. xxxi. 13; Jer. xv. 15).

Go to my fathers. xlv. 2; cf. also xi. 4; lxxxv. 9; Gen. xv. 15.

moreover, cannot behold the evils of my mother. 4. But one thing I will say in Thy presence, O Lord. 5. What, therefore, will there be after these things? for if Thou destroyest Thy city, and deliverest up Thy land to those that hate us, how shall the name of Israel be again remembered? 6. Or how shall one speak of Thy praises? or to whom shall that which is in Thy law be explained? 7. Or shall the world return to its nature (of aforetime), and the age revert to primeval silence? 8. And shall the multitude of souls be taken away, and the nature of man not again be named? 9. And where is all that which Thou didst say to Moses regarding us?"

IV. And the Lord said unto me: "This city will be delivered up for a time, and the people will be 4-IV. 1. Baruch asks God if the end of all things will follow on the delivery of Jerusalem into the hands of its enemies; will Israel be blotted out? will there be no longer any students of the law? will all men die and chaos return? In iv. 1 God answers that Jerusalem will again be restored; the chastisement of its people soon be accomplished and chaos will not return. The writer thus looks forward to the returning felicity of Jerusalem.

III. 6. To whom shall that which is in Thy law be explained? The real answer to this question is given in Baruch's own words in xlv. 4.

7. We should observe that the Syriac word ܐܡܝܢ, here translated "world," really means "ornament." Thus the translator followed a wrong sense of κόσμος here.

Revert to primeval silence. Cf. 4

Ezra vii. 30. In. iv. 1 this is answered in the negative, but in xlv. 9 (i.e. B²) in the affirmative.

IV. 2-7. In these verses we have an undoubted interpolation. The earthly Jerusalem, the restoration of which has just been promised, is here derided. This of itself is suspicious. When, however, we turn to vi. 9 and see there that the very Jerusalem that is now delivered up to its foes will hereafter be restored, and that for ever, the incongruity of these verses with their present context emerges still more clearly. This incongruity is still further emphasised when we observe that the actual vessels of the earthly temple are committed to the earth by an angel, that they may be preserved for future use in the restored Jerusalem (vi. 7-9). The vessels of the heavenly Jerusalem would naturally be of a heavenly kind, and are in fact already there (iv. 5).

chastened during a time, and the world will not be given over to oblivion. 2. [Dost thou think that this is that city of which I said: 'On the palms of My hands have I graven thee'? 3. It is not this building which is now built in your midst; (it is) that which will be revealed with Me, that which was pre-

2. It is noteworthy that the words "On the palms of My hands," etc., which are taken from Isa. xlix. 16, agree letter for letter with the Syriac Version, which here stands alone against the Mass., LXX., and Vulg., in presupposing על כפות יד instead of Mass. על כפים. This fuller phrase which the Syriac presupposes is the usual one (cf. 1 Sam. v. 4; 2 Kings ix. 35; Dan. x. 10).

3. It is not this building . . . (it is) that which will be revealed. These words represent one of the final stages of a movement which had already its beginnings in the O. T. Throughout the O. T. Jerusalem had always been singled out as the one place on earth in which it had pleased God to dwell, and with which He had inseparably connected His name. But from the growing transcendence and enlargement of the idea of God, combined with the deepened consciousness of sin, and the consequent sense of the unfitness of Jerusalem as God's habitation, the doctrine of a heavenly Jerusalem complete in all its parts came to be evolved.

Of the existence indeed of heavenly antitypes of the Tabernacle and its furniture we are told already in the Priest's Code (Exod. xxv. 9, 40, cf. Heb. viii. 5). It needed only a step further to postulate the existence of the heavenly temple and city. That the earthly copies needed to be purified or even wholly renewed, we are taught in Isa. lx.; Ezek. xl.-xlviii.; but that nothing else could suffice save the actual descent of the heavenly Jerusalem to the earth was not concluded till the revival of religion under the early Maccabees. In Isa. liv. 11 and Tob. xiii. 16, 17, there are highly figurative accounts of the rebuilding of Jerusalem, but it is the earthly. The first actual emergence of the idea of the heavenly seems to be in the Eth. En. xc. 28, 29, where the old Jerusalem is removed and the new is brought and set up by God Himself, though even there a prior existence is not assigned to the latter. This would be about 164 B.C. But the older ideas still held their ground. Thus in the Psalms of Solomon xvii. 25, 33 (circ. 70-40 B.C.), as in the oldest part of the Eth. En. x. 16-19; xxv. 1 (circ. 180 B.C.), the purification of Jerusalem is all that appears needful to the writers as a preparation for the Messianic kingdom. Even when we come down to the first century of the Christian era, such purification is deemed sufficient for the temporary Messianic kingdoms depicted in Apoc. Bar. xxix.; xxxix.-xl.; lxxii.-lxxiv.; Ezra vii. 27-30 (for vii. 26 is an interpolation, as Kabisch points out); xii. 32-34; and possibly in xiii. 32-50, where xiii. 36 seems also an intrusion. In all these passages a Messiah is expected. In B¹ of the Apoc. Bar. i.e. vi. 9, Jerusalem is to be restored pared beforehand here from the time when I took counsel to make Paradise, and showed it to Adam before he sinned, but when he transgressed the commandment, it was removed from him, as also Paradise. 4. And after these things I showed it to My and to be established for ever, but this is not the new Jerusalem coming down from heaven. The latter is mentioned in xxxii. 2-4. It was indeed a very current conception in the latter half of the first century A.D. Thus we find it in Gal. iv. 26; Heb. xii. 22; Rev. iii. 12; xxi. 2, 10. In Gal. iv. 26 the heavenly Jerusalem is a symbol of the spiritual commonwealth of which the Christian is even now a member. But in Rev. iii. 12; xxi. 2, 10, it is an actual city, the counterpart of the earthly Jerusalem, with its own buildings and vessels. Here we should probably class the passage in Test. Dan. v. This city was to descend from heaven, but this expectation does not apparently lie at the base of Heb. xii. 22. Similar conceptions to that found in Rev. iii. 12; xxi. 2, 10, appear in 4 Ezra viii. 52, 53; x. 44-59; and also in vii. 26 and xiii. 36, though we must regard one or both of the last two as interpolated. With these last we might reckon also the heavenly Jerusalem mentioned in the text. The heavenly Jerusalem is variously described as the vēa (Test. Dan. v.), ἡ ἄνω (Gal. iv. 26), καινή (Rev. iii. 12; xxi. 2), ἐρουπάριος (Heb. xii. 22). It was created in the beginning of creation, and preserved in heaven. It was shown to Adam before he sinned. To Adam indeed the heavens had been open originally (Slav. En. xxxi. 2; Philo, Quaest. xxxii. in Gen.; Book of Adam and Eve, i. 8); but when he transgressed the commandment the vision of the heavenly Jerusalem was taken from him and likewise the possession of Paradise. Among the Rabbins the heavenly Jerusalem was called ירושלים של כעלה (= ἡ ἄνω Ἱερουσαλήμ). For the various Rabbinic conceptions regarding it, see Schöttgen, de Hieros. Coelest. in his Horae Hebr. 1205 sqq.; Meuschen, N.T. ex Talm. ill. p. 199 sqq.; Bertholdt, Christologia, 217-220; Eisenmenger, Entdecktes Judenthum, ii. 839-845; Weber, Lehren d. Talmud, 356-359, 386.

Took counsel to make Paradise. Which Paradise is this? The context might support either. For we might regard it as the Paradise which is kept in heaven like the heavenly Jerusalem. Adam could see both before his fall, but after it he lost the vision of both. It may, however, be the earthly Paradise in which he was placed at the first. The period to which the creation of the earthly Paradise is assigned varies. In Gen. ii. 8-17 it is apparently one of the last works of the creation. When, however, we come down to the Christian era, its creation was attributed to the third day (Jub. ii. 7; Slav. En. xxx. 1). The heavenly Paradise, on the other hand, is described as already existing before the creation of the world either actually or in the mind of God (see Pesach. 54a; Beresh. 20 in Weber L. d. T. 191).

4. I showed it to My servant Abraham. There is naturally no mention of this in Gen. xv. 9-21; but in the Beresh. rabba on Gen. xxviii. 17 we are told that this servant Abraham by night among the portions of the victims. 5. And again also I showed it to Moses on Mount Sinai when I showed to him the likeness of the tabernacle and all its vessels. 6. And now, behold, it is preserved with Me, as also Paradise. 7. Go, therefore, and do as I command thee.”]

V.-IX. 1=B¹.

V. And I answered and said: “I shall, therefore, be in great straits in Zion, because Thine enemies will come to that place and pollute Thy sanctuary, and lead Thine inheritance into captivity, and will lord it over those whom Thou hast loved, and they will depart again to the place of their idols, and will boast before them. And what wilt Thou do for Thy great name?” 2. And the Lord said unto me: “My name and My glory have an eternal duration; My judgment, moreover, will preserve its rights in its own time. 3. And thou wilt see with thine eyes that the enemy will not overthrow Zion, nor burn Jerusalem, but be subservient to the judge for a time. 4. But do thou go and do whatsoever I have said unto thee.” 5. And I went and took Jeremiah, and Adu, and Seriah, and Jabish, vision was accorded to Jacob when sleeping at Bethel.

5. Cf. Exod. xxv. 9, 40.

6. See note on verse 3.

7. As I command thee. A frequently recurring phrase (cf. v. 4; x. 4; xxi. 1; 4 Ezra v. 20; xii. 51).

V. 1. Thine inheritance. Deut. iv. 20; ix. 26, etc.; Rest of Words of Baruch, ii. 7; iii. 6.

Whom Thou hast loved. Ephes. xxi. 20; 4 Ezra iv. 23.

Boast before them. Cf. vii. 1; lxxvii. 2, 7; lxxx. 3; Rest of Words of Baruch, i. 5; iv. 7.

What wilt Thou do, etc. Joshua vii. 9; cf. 4 Ezra iv. 25; x. 22.

2. My name and My glory, etc. Ps. cxxxv. 13.

My judgment, moreover, will preserve its rights. This phrase in a slightly different form recurs in xlvi. 27, and lxxxv. 9.

3. This is carried out in vi. 5; vii.

4. This refers to the command given in ii. 1.

5. Adu. There is a priest of this name who went up with Zerubbabel (Neh. xii. 4). According to Mass. he is called Iddo, but both the and Gedaliah, and all the honourable men of the people, and I led them to the valley of Cedron, and I narrated to them all that had been said to me. 6. And they lifted up their voice, and they all wept. 7. And we sat there and fasted until the evening.

VI. And it came to pass on the morrow that, lo!

Syriac and Vulgate give Addo. In Ezra viii. 17 another Iddo is mentioned who returned with Ezra from Babylon.

Seriah. This Seriah was brother of Baruch and chief chamberlain of Zedekiah. He went with the latter to Babylon (see Jer. li. 59, 61).

Jabish. This name has been identified with 'Iγαβής = יָבִישׁ (1 Chron. iv. 9), but both the form of the name and the time of Jabez are against this identification.

Gedaliah. This is Gedaliah the son of Ahikam (see Jer. xl. 14). But Gedaliah might also be from Γεδολλας = גֶּדְוָלָהּ (cf. 1 Chron. viii. 26) a companion of Ezra (see Ezra viii. 7). Gedaliah is again mentioned in xlv. 1 in a fragment of B¹.

Cedron, i.e. קְרִדּוֹן (2 Sam. xv. 23). The valley of the Cedron is again the scene of Baruch's fast in xxi. 1, and of an assembly of the people in xxxi. 2.

Narrated to them, etc. After most of the revelations which Baruch receives, he makes known their disclosures to his friends and the elders of the people (see x. 4; xxxi. 3-xxxii. 7; xlv. xlv. 1; lxxvii. 1-17). There is no need of such a disclosure in the second section, i.e. v. 7-viii., and such disclosure is forbidden in the fourth, i.e. xii. 5-xx.

THE SECOND SECTION

V. 7-VIII. This is a short section. First there is the fast of one day (v. 1). Thereupon to Baruch in his grief (vi. 2) is disclosed a vision. In this he sees the sacred vessels committed to the earth for a season and the city destroyed by angels, lest the enemy should triumph (vi. 3-vii.) The realisation of this vision which follows thereupon dispenses with the need of its publication by Baruch (viii.)

7. Fasted until the evening. The other fasts mentioned are of seven days. Of these there are four (see ix. 2; xii. 5; xxi. 1; xlvii. 2). The symmetry of the book would require another such fast after xxxv. For the scheme of the final editor is first a fast, then generally a prayer, then a divine message or revelation, then an announcement of this either to an individual, as in v. 5; x. 4, or to the people (xxx. 2-xxxiv.; xlv. xlv. 1-17), followed occasionally by a lamentation. In xx. 5, at the close of the fourth section, Baruch is bidden to make no announcement.

It will be observed that this scheme is broken through in the fifth section only, i.e. in xxi. xlv., where there is a fast, a prayer, an address to the people followed by a lament over Zion, a revelation and an address to the people (see ix. 2, note). In 4 Ezra there are four fasts of seven days (see v. 20; vi. 35; ix. 26, 27; xii. 51).

VI. 1. On the following morning, etc. These words are reproduced in Rest of Words (iv. 1).

the army of the Chaldees surrounded the city, and at the time of the evening I, Baruch, left the people, and I went forth and stood by the oak. 2. And I was grieving over Zion, and lamenting over the captivity which had come upon the people. 3. And, lo! suddenly a strong spirit raised me, and bore me aloft over the wall of Jerusalem. 4. And I beheld, and lo! four angels standing at the four angles of the city, each of them holding a lamp of fire in his hands. 5. And another angel began to descend from heaven, and said unto them: "Hold your lamps, and do not light them till I tell you. 6. For I am first sent to speak a word to the earth, and to place in it what the Lord the Most High has commanded me." 7. And I saw him descend into the Holy of Holies, and take from thence the veil,

By the oak. This oak is outside the city; for in ii. 1 Jeremiah and all that were like him were bidden to leave the city. This they and Baruch did in v. 5, and they fasted in the valley of the Cedron. On the following day the Chaldees surround the city. On that day Baruch left Jeremiah and the rest and went forth (probably from the cavern in the Cedron valley mentioned in xxi. 1) and stood by the oak. The oak thus appears to be near or in the Cedron valley, and thus in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem. This oak is mentioned again in lxxvii. 18. We are not, therefore, to compare this oak with the well-known one at Hebron, as Fritzsche, who compares LXX.; Gen. xiii. 18; xiv. 13; xviii. 1.

It is noteworthy that no mention of this oak appears in B². In B¹ it is found twice (vi. 1 and lxxvii.

18). A tree is referred to in A³ in lv. 1.

3. As the Chaldeans encompassed Jerusalem, Baruch was unable to draw near to the wall. But a strong angel lifts him on high above the wall.

4. Cf. Rev. vii. 1, "I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth"; Rest of Words of Bar. iii. 2.

5. Cf. Rev. vii. 2; Rest of Words, iii. 4.

6. The office of the angel here is executed by Jeremiah in Rest of Words, iii. 8.

The Lord the Most High. Occurs here only in this book. It is not found in 4 Ezra.

7. Take from thence, etc. According to Josephus, Bell. V. 5, 5, the Holy of Holies in Herod's temple was empty.

See Appendix for a similar account and the holy ephod, and the mercy-seat, and the two tables, and the holy raiment of the priests, and the altar of incense, and the forty-eight precious stones, wherewith the priest was adorned, and all the holy vessels of the tabernacle. 8. And he spake to the earth with a loud voice: "Earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the mighty God, and receive what I commit to thee, and guard them until the last times, so that, when thou art ordered, thou mayst restore them, so that strangers may not get possession of them. 9. For the time comes when Jerusalem also will be delivered up for a time, until it is said, that it is again restored for ever. 10. And the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them up."

VII. And after these things I heard that angel sayin Macc. The veil, i.e. פֶּתַח (Exod. xxvi. 31). The ephod, i.e. אֵפֹד (Exod. xxix. 5).

Mercy-seat, כַּפֹּרֶת (Exod. xxv. 17). Forty-eight precious stones. How this number is made up I cannot discover. There were twelve stones on the breastplate (Exod. xxviii. 15-21), and two on the ephod (Exod. xxviii. 9).

The altar of incense. The Syriac implies θυμιατήριον, which in Josephus and Philo = מִזְבֵּחַ הַקְטֹרֶת. See Appendix.

According to Bammidbar rabba, 15, five things were taken away and preserved on the destruction of Solomon's temple: the candlestick, the ark, the fire, the Holy Spirit, and the cherubim.

8. In the Rest of Words, iii. 8, these words in a greatly altered shape are attributed to Jeremiah.

Earth . . . of the mighty God; drawn from Jer. xxii. 29. Text agrees with Mass., Syr., Vulg., against LXX., which gives "earth" only twice.

Mighty God. This title recurs in vii. 1, and xiii. 2, 4. It is not found in 4 Ezra.

Guard them until the last times. Cf. Rest of Words, iii. 8, "Preserve the vessels of worship until the coming of the Beloved."

That . . . thou mayst restore them, i.e. for use in the temple of the rebuilt Jerusalem.

That strangers may not get possession of them (cf. x. 19). For a slightly different reason see lxxv. 2.

9. For a time. See i. 4, note.

Restored for ever. It is not necessary to take the phrase "for ever" literally. In any case a Messianic kingdom of indefinite duration is looked forward to with Jerusalem as its centre, and likewise the temple in which the sacred vessels of the former temple will again be used. During this kingdom the dispersion will again return to Palestine (lxxvii. 6; lxxviii. 7, notes).

ing unto those angels who held the lamps: "Destroy, therefore, and overthrow its walls to its foundations, lest the enemy should boast and say: 'We have overthrown the wall of Zion, and we have burnt the place of the mighty God.'" 2. And the Spirit restored me to the place where I had been standing before.

VIII. Now the angels did as he had commanded them, and when they had broken up the angles of the walls, a voice was heard from the interior of the temple, after the wall had fallen, saying: 2. "Enter ye enemies, and come ye adversaries; for He who kept the house has forsaken (it)." 3. And I, Baruch, departed. 4. And it came to pass after these things that the army of the Chaldees entered and seized the house, and all that was around it. 5. And they led the people away captive, and slew some of them, and bound Zedekiah the king, and sent him to the king of Babylon.

VII. 1. Destroy, therefore, and overthrow, etc. Cf. v. 3; lxxx. 1.

Boast. Cf. v. 1; lxvii. 2, 7; lxxx. 3; Rest of Words, i. 5; Ps. xxxv. 19; xxxviii. 16; Eccclus. xxiii. 3; Pss. Sol. xiii. 7, ἐν περιστολῇ παιδεύεται δίκαιος, ἵνα μὴ ἐπιχαρῇ ὁ ἁμαρτωλὸς τῷ δικαίῳ.

Mighty God. See vi. 8, note.

2. And the Spirit restored me. I have here made a necessary emendation of the text. Thus I have emended ⲙⲉⲛⲟⲩⲟⲩⲛ = "and you have seized it," into ⲙⲟⲩⲟⲩⲛ ⲙⲉⲛⲟⲩⲟⲩ, "And the spirit restored me." The unamended text gives no sense, whereas the change just made restores the harmony of the context. Thus in vi. 31, "a strong spirit" carried Baruch aloft in order to see the vision. After the vision this spirit restores him to where he had been before. From this place Baruch departs in viii. 3.

VIII. 1. Cf. vii. 1; lxxx. 1.

2. Cf. Rest of Words, iv. 1. He who kept the house has forsaken (it). Cf. Josephus, De Bello Jud. vi. 5. 3: μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα (ἀντιλαβέσθαι) καὶ φωνῆς ἀθρόας μεταβαλῶμεν ἐντεῦθεν.

Tacitus, Hist. v. 13, "Et apertae repente delubri fores et audita major humana vox, excedere deos."

5. Led . . . away captive. lxxx. 4; Rest of Words, iv. 2.

Bound Zedekiah the king, and sent, etc. Whatever explanation we give of i. 1, it is clear from these words that the writer was acquainted with the history of the kings of Judah and the captivity of Judah under Zedekiah.

IX. And I, Baruch, came, and Jeremiah, whose heart was found pure from sins, who had not been captured in the seizure of the city. 2. And we rent our garments, and wept, and mourned, and fasted seven days.

IX. 2-X. 5 =
E and B².

X. And it came to pass after seven days, that the word of the Lord was upon me, and said unto me: "Tell Jeremiah to go and confirm the captivity of the Bound and sent to the king of Babylon. Cf. lxxx. 4.

IX. 1. Heart . . . pure from sin. Contrast the "wicked heart" in 4 Ezra iii. 20, 21, 26; iv. 4, etc. In Pss. Sol. xvii. 41, the Messiah is said to be καθαρὸς ἀπὸ ἀμαρτίας.

THE THIRD SECTION

IX. 2-XII. 4. We have first the fast of seven days amid the ruins of Zion (ix., cf. x. 3). Then the word of the Lord comes to Baruch and bids him to tell Jeremiah to go to Babylon (x. 2), and promises a revelation of what should be in the end (x. 3). Then follows Baruch's announcement of the divine message to Jeremiah (x. 4). The section closes with Baruch's lament before the gates of the temple over Zion (x. 5-xii. 4).

We have shown below that x. 6-xii. 4 comes probably from the hand of a Sadducean priest.

IX. 2. Fasted seven days. See v. 7, note. This is the first fast of seven days. It is observed amid the ruins of Zion (cf. x. 3). There are three others to follow, though, as we have shown in the note just referred to, there should be four. The insertion of the fasts in their present positions is the work of the final editor. There seem to have been fasts in his sources (B¹ and B²).

Fasting was the usual preparation for the reception of supernatural communications (cf. Dan. ix. 3, 20-21, and all the instances in this book and 4 Ezra cited in note on v. 7). In Test. Jos. iii. there is likewise a fast of seven days (Armenian Version), and in 2 Macc. xiii. 12, and Ass. Mosis ix. 6, of three days.

The scene of the first and fourth fasts is Cedron; of the second and sixth, Mount Zion; of the third, the gates of the temple; the account of the fourth is lost.

X. 1. God. This word is found only twice again, i.e. liv. 12; lxxxii. 9. Its use is more frequent in 4 Ezra (see vii. 19, 20, 21, 79; viii. 58; ix. 45; x. 16).

2. The divine communication that follows on the fast consists of a command to be given through Baruch to Jeremiah. Jeremiah is bidden to go to Babylon. We have here a violation of historical truth. According to Jer. xliii. 4-7, both Jeremiah and Baruch were carried down into Egypt. In the Apocryphal Baruch i. 1, Baruch is represented as being in Babylon five years after the capture of Jerusalem. In the Rest of Words, iv. 5, Jeremiah was dragged an unwilling captive to Babylon, whereas in our text he goes there at the bidding of God. The words "go and confirm the captivity" recur in xxxiii. 2.

people unto Babylon. 3. But do thou remain here amid the desolation of Zion, and I will show to thee after these days what will befall at the end of days."

4. And I said to Jeremiah as the Lord commanded me.

5. And he, indeed, departed with the people, but I, Baruch, returned and sat before the gates of the temple, and I lamented with that lamentation over Zion and

X. 6.-XII. 4 = said: 6. "Blessed is he who was not born, or being B² or S.

It is probable that the references to Jeremiah in connection with Babylon belong to B²; for it is noteworthy that in lxxvii. 17, 19; lxxx. 4; lxxxv. 6, Baruch always speaks of writing to the brethren in Babylon, but never to Jeremiah. This would be strange if the writer believed Jeremiah to be there. The people also urge Baruch in lxxvii. 12 to write to their brethren in Babylon to confirm them. Now if Jeremiah were in charge of the people there, as x. 2, 5; xxxiii. 2, clearly imply, any letter of Baruch to Babylon would have been addressed to him. As a matter of fact, in the Rest of Words of Baruch, when Baruch writes to Babylon, he directs the letter to Jeremiah.

It is probable, therefore, that the account of B¹ does not conflict with Jer. xliii., where Johanan takes Jeremiah with him down into Egypt.

3. Baruch is commanded to remain among the ruins of Zion, and is promised a revelation of what will befall in the last days. The words "after these days" show that this revelation will be accorded on a future occasion, after a fast, no doubt.

At the end of days. Cf. xxv. 1.

5. Before the gates of the temple. This is the scene of the following lamentation of Baruch, and probably of the fast in xii. 5. It is again the scene of his lamentation in xxxv. 1.

A passage in the beginning of the Apoc. Bar. Tert. seems to be derived from our text: οὕτως ἐκάθητο ἐπὶ τὰς ὥρας πύλας θοῦ ἐκεῖτο τὰ τῶν ἀγίων ἄγια. Mount Zion, on the other hand, is the scene where revelations are accorded to him (cf. xiii. 1; xxi. 2; xlvii. 2).

X. 6-XII. 4. This fragment appears to be the work of a Sadducee—probably a Sadducean priest writing just after the fall of the temple. For (1) in x. 6 and xi. 7 we have a thoroughly Sadducean sentiment, i.e. it were best not to be born at all, or, being born, to die; for the dead enjoy a sorrowless rest and a tranquil sleep (xi. 4); they know not the anguish of the living (xi. 5). No resurrection of the individual or of the nation is looked for, but only that retribution in due course may come upon the enemies of Israel (xii. 4). (2) The conception of Sheol in xi. 6 is Sadducean. (3) In x. 6-xii. 4 we have the saddest dirge in the Jewish literature of the time. This might well be; for for the priesthood there was no future. As false stewards they relinquish their charge and restore the keys of the temple to God (x. 18). Never again should sacrifices be offered in Zion (x. 10).

X. 6. Blessed is he who was not born, etc. Similar expressions of pessimism and despair return time and again in the later literature of Judaism. But in this passage and in xi. 7 the born has died. 7. But as for us who live, woe unto us, because we see the afflictions of Zion, and what has befallen Jerusalem. 8. I will call the Sirens phrase is used with a significance that severs it from all other instances of its occurrence. For whereas repeatedly elsewhere, as we shall see presently, it is said that it were better man had never been born because of sin and future condemnation, here non-existence or death is said to be preferable to witnessing the present woes of Jerusalem. Lest we should suppose this to be an accidental exaggeration, we should observe that it recurs in an intensified form in xi. 7, where the state of the dead in Sheol is said to be better than that of the living. Such a sentiment was impossible for the Pharisaic author of B², or indeed for any of the authors of this Apocalypse. It is a genuinely Sadducean sentiment, and the conception of Sheol in xi. 6, 7 is likewise Sadducean—practically that of the O. T. or of Hades in the Greek world. To a Pharisee no condition of earthly life could in any way approach the horrors of the existence of the wicked in the after-world.

In 4 Ezra and elsewhere, as we have remarked, quite a different turn is given to the expression in our text. There it is said that it were better man had not been at all than be born and have to face future torment and judgment. Thus in vii. 66 the writer declares: "It is much better for them (i.e. the beasts of the field) than for us; for they expect not a judgment and know not of torments." Again in vii. 116, 117, it is urged that "it would have been best not to have given a body to Adam, or, that being done, to have restrained him from sin; for what profit is there that man should in the present life live in heaviness and after death look for punishment?" Finally, in iv. 12 the nexus of life, sin and suffering, just referred to is put still more strongly: "It were better we had not been born at all than that we should be born and live in sin and suffer." A perfect parallel to the last passage is found in the Slav. En. xli. 2: "Blessed is the man who was not born, or, having been born, has never sinned . . . so that he should not come into this place (i.e. hell);" and to 4 Ezra vii. 116, 117, in the Eth. En. xxxviii. 2, where it is said, in reference to the future destiny of the wicked: "It had been good for them if they had not been born." For a N. T. parallel see Matt. xxvi. 24. It is worth observing that there is a perfect parallelism of thought between the passage in our text and in Sophocles, Oed. Col., 1220—μη φῦναι τὸν ἅπαντα νι-κᾶ λόγον · τὸ δ', ἐπεὶ φανῇ, βῆναι κείθεν ὄθεν περ ἤ-κει, πολὺ δεύτερον ὡς τάχιστα, and in Theognis, 425—

πάντων μὲν μὴ φῦναι ἐπιχθονίοισιν ἄριστον, μὴ εἶσιδεν αὐγὰς ὀξέος ἡελίου · φύντα δ' ὅπως ὤκιστα πύλας Αἰδαο περῆσαι, καὶ κείσθαι πολλὴν γῆν ἐπαμεισάμενον.

8. Sirens. These are said in the Eth. En. xix. 2 (Greek Version) to have been the wives of the angels who went astray. It is strange that we have here the Greek conception of the Sirens, Σειρῆνες, i.e. that of sea-nymphs. But with the Greek translators of the O. T. it had quite a different meaning. Thus it is a from the sea, and ye Lilin, come ye from the desert, and ye Shedim and dragons from the forests: awake and bind your loins unto mourning, and take up with me lamentation, and mourn with me. 9. Ye husbandmen, sow not again; and thou, earth, wherefore givest thou the fruits of thy produce? keep within thee the sweets of thy sustenance. 10. And thou, vine, why further dost thou give thy wine? for an offering will rendering of בנות יענה = ostriches in Isa. xiii. 21; Jer. l. 39; Mic. i. 8; of הנים or הנן = jackals in Isa. xxxiv. 13; xliii. 20. It is similarly used by Symmachus, Theodotion, and Aquila in rendering the above words.

Lilinto. These are the Lilin (לילין) from the singular Lilith (לילית). Male and female demons named Lil and Lilit belong to Assyrian and Babylonian demonology. They were thought, as were also the Lilin (Shabbath, 151b), to attack men and women in their sleep (Lenormant, La Magie, p. 36). The Lilith, or night demon, is mentioned in Isa. xxxiv. 14, along with the satyr שִׁטְרִי. The Lilin, according to the Talmud, were female demons corresponding to the Shedim or male demons. They were partly the offspring (Erub, 18b; Beresh. 42) of Adam and Lilith, Adam's first wife, a demon, and partly were derived from the generation that God dispersed (Gen. xi.), for God (Jalkut Shim., Beresh. 62) transformed that generation into Shedim, Ruchin, and Lilin. These Lilin inhabited desert places. They were said to kill children. They have been compared with the Lamiae and Striges; δνοκένταυροι is the LXX. rendering of the word in Isa. xxxiv. 14. For further details on the subject see Weber, Lehren d. Talm., pp. 245, 246, 248; Bochart, Hieroicoicon; iii. 829-831; Eisenmenger, Entd. Judenthum, ii. 413-426, 452.

Shedim. These were male demons to which various origins were assigned. Their souls were created by God, but as the Sabbath intervened before they received bodies they had to remain without them (Beresh. rabba, c. 7); or they were sprung from Adam and a demon wife, or from Eve and a demon husband (Beresh. rabba, c. 24); or were originally the generation that God transformed into Shedim, Ruchin, and Lilin. Their place of resort is the wilderness. For an account of their activities, see Weber, 245, 246.

Dragons. The word דִּרְגָּן is found in the Peshitto of Isa. xiii. 22 as a translation of הנים. Levy (Neuhebräisches Wörterbuch, ii. 265) defines it as "Drache oder sonst ein Thier mit klagendem, heulendem Tone." The word frequently occurs in the Targums and later Hebrew as ירור (ירור).

10. The writer of x. 6-xii. 4 resigns absolutely all hope of the restoration of Jerusalem. This is throughout the attitude of B² (see i. 4, note).

With the thought of this verse, cf. Kethuboth 112a: "O land, land, let thy fruit shrivel: for whom art thou producing thy fruit? is it not not again be made therefrom in Zion, nor will first-fruits again be offered. 11. And do ye, O heavens, withhold your dew, and open not the treasures of rain. 12. And do thou, O sun, withhold the light of thy rays; and do thou, O moon, extinguish the multitude of thy light; for why should light rise again where the light of Zion is darkened? 13. And you, ye bridegrooms, enter not in, and let not the brides adorn themselves with garlands; and, ye women, pray not that ye may bear. 14. For the barren shall rejoice more, and those who have no sons shall be glad, and those who have sons shall have anguish. 15. For why should they bear in pain and bury in grief? 16. Or wherefore, again, should mankind have sons; or wherefore should the seed of their nature again be named, where that mother is desolate, and her sons are led into captivity? 17. From this time forward speak not of beauty and discourse not of gracefulness. 18. Moreover, ye priests, take ye the keys of the sanctuary and cast them into the height of heaven, and give them to the

for the Gentiles who rose up against us because of our sins?

13. Cf. Jer. vii. 34; xvi. 9; xxv. 10; Baruch ii. 23.

Brides. Syriac gives "virgins," but this idea is out of place in verses 13-16, where everything refers to marriage. The first right mention of virgins is in verse 19. The wrong text may be explained by a corruption of כלות into בחולות or עלמות. In the original Hebrew we should then have a paronomasia, כלילים אל חקרינה כלות. In Gît. 7a, and in Shabbath, 59b, bridegrooms are forbidden to use garlands.

14. Cf. Matt. xxiv. 19; Luke xxiii. 29: "Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the breasts that never gave suck" (cf. Isa. liv. 1).

16. That mother. See iii. 1, note

18. The priesthood have proved faithless to their duty, and the charge of the temple is no longer theirs. Cf. Rest of Words, iv. 3, 4, where another turn is given to the text: "And thereupon Jeremiah took the keys of the temple . . . and cast these keys before the sun, saying: 'I say unto thee, O sun, take the keys of the house of God and keep Lord, and say: 'Guard Thy house Thyself, for lo! we are found false stewards.' 19. And you, ye virgins, who spin fine linen and silk with gold of Ophir, hasten and take all things and cast (them) into the fire, that it may bear them to Him who made them, and the flame send them to Him who created them, lest the enemy get possession of them."

XI. Moreover, I, Baruch, say this against thee, Babylon: "If thou hadst prospered, and Zion had dwelt in her glory, it would have been a great grief to us that thou shouldst be equal to Zion. 2. But now, lo! the grief is infinite, and the lamentation measureless, for lo! thou art prospered and Zion desolate. 3. Who will be judge regarding these things? or to whom shall we complain regarding that which has befallen us? O Lord, how hast Thou borne (it)? 4. Our fathers went to rest without grief, and lo! the righteous sleep in the earth in tranquillity. 5. For them till the days when the Lord shall ask thee concerning them. For we are not worthy to keep them; for we have been found false stewards.'"

This verse reappears in the Talkut Shim, on Isa. xxi. as follows: "The flower of the priests . . . gathered together . . . the keys of the court and the sanctuary and said before God: 'Lord of the universe, we are not fit to be stewards before Thee (לא זכינו להיות גוברים לפניך). Behold Thy keys are returned to Thee.' And they cast them aloft" (quoted by Rosenthal).

19. Fine linen and silk. Cf. Ezek. xvi. 10.

Lest the enemy get possession. Cf. vi. 8.

XI. 1. Babylon stands here for Rome, as in Rev. xiv. 8; xvi. 19; xvii. 5; xviii. 2.

Prospered. Cf. xii. 1-3.

3. How hast Thou borne (it)? Cf. 4 Ezra iii. 30: "I have seen how Thou dost bear with them that sin." In Pss. Sol. ii. 1 and 4 Ezra iii. 8 the writers complain that God did not prevent such wrong-doing. With the latter cf. Isa. xiv. 6.

4. Our fathers went to rest. Cf. lxxxv. 9.

Sleep in the earth. Cf. xxi. 24; while the diction corresponds to Dan. xii. 2, "sleep in the dust of the earth," the thought is Sadducean and belongs to the earlier sphere of O.T. thought, presupposed in such a phrase as "slept with his fathers" (1 Kings ii. 10; xi. 21, they knew not this anguish, nor yet had they heard of that which had befallen us. 6. Would that thou hadst ears, O earth, and that thou hadst a heart, O dust, that ye might go and announce in Sheol, and say to the dead: 7. 'Blessed are ye more than we who are living.'"

XII. But I will say this as I think, and I will speak against thee, O land, which art prospering. 2. The noonday does not always burn, nor do the constant rays of the sun (always) give light. 3. Do not conclude or expect that thou wilt always be prosperous and rejoicing, and be not greatly uplifted and boastful. 4. For assuredly in its own season wrath will awake against thee, which now in long-suffering is held in as it etc.) There is no ground for supposing with Kabisch (Das vierte Buch Ezra, 68, 69) that this phrase in the mouth of a Pharisee of this period implied a capacity of life as still existing in the body even when interred. That "to sleep in the earth" and "to be in Sheol" are equivalent expressions for a Pharisee, is clear from Eth. En. li. 1 and 4 Ezra vii. 32. The former phrase, "to sleep in the earth," is merely a figure of speech, and must not be pressed. Yet see l. 2, note. These phrases are equivalents in verses 6, 7. Sadducean thought admitted of no resurrection; hence "life in Sheol" or "sleep in the earth" were interchangeable expressions for the same fact.

5. To a Pharisee this would be a trifling pain compared with the torments of the damned. But the Sadducee looked for no retribution in the world to come, but, like most of the writers in the O.T. and in Ecclesiasticus, only for a shadowy existence in Sheol.

6. That ye might go, etc. The Syriac = "and go ye." Here we have a Hebrew idiom, i.e. an imperative is used instead of a jussive in order to express the intention signified by the preceding verb (see Driver, Hebrew Moods and Tenses, p. 82).

Sheol. We have here the O.T. conception of Sheol—the eternal abode of the shades. This view of Sheol was maintained in N.T. times by the Sadducees. In xxiii. 5; xlvi. 16; lii. 2; lvi. 6, Sheol seems to be the abode of all departed souls prior to the final judgment. This also may be its meaning in xxi. 23 and in 4 Ezra iv. 41. In 4 Ezra viii. 53 it seems to bear the meaning of "hell." For a history of the various meanings borne by this word see Eth. En. lxiii. 10, note.

7. The condition of the shades was for the writer undoubtedly more blessed than that of the living (cf. x. 6, note).

XII. 3. Boastful. I have here emended  = "do (not) oppress" into  = "be (not) boastful."

XII. 5=E.

were by reins. 5. And when I had said these things, I fasted seven days.

XIII.-XXV.=
B².

XIII. And it came to pass after these things, that

THE FOURTH SECTION

XII. 5-XX. This section begins with a fast of seven days (xii. 5). Then follows a long revelation to Baruch (xiii. 2-xx. 2). (Owing to the complete disarrangement and confusion of the text, this revelation cannot be summarised here. For a discussion of these chapters see pp. 20-34.) Contrary to the usual procedure, Baruch is bidden not to publish this revelation (xx. 3).

XII. 5. On the fasts of Baruch see v. 9, note; ix. 2, note.

XIII.-XXV. The text of these chapters is inexplicable as it stands. The difficulties are due not to corruption, though that undoubtedly exists, but to a recasting of the original text by the final editor. In this process many passages were torn from their original contexts and placed in settings which are quite unsuitable. Some of the incongruities thus produced are as follows: (1) The words "those prosperous cities" are represented as speaking in xiii. 4 without a single note of introduction. (2) In the next verse the words, "thou and those like thee who have seen," are similarly unexplained, and are in fact inexplicable in their present context; for though Baruch was to be preserved till the consummation of the times, his contemporaries were not, and hence they could not see the future retribution of the Gentiles. If, however, xxiv. 2 originally preceded xiii. 3b-5, the words, "thou and those like thee who have seen," would be perfectly intelligible. (3) Again the retribution of the Gentiles referred to in xiii. 4, 5 has not been mentioned before, though the text presupposes some such mention. It is intelligible if xxv. or xxiv. 4 precedes where Baruch asks what will befall the enemies of Israel. (4) In xiv. 1 Baruch replies that God has shown him "the method of the times," whereas in xx. 6 this appears not to have been yet done, and it seems that a revelation of "the method of the times" is still to come. (5) In xxiv. 4 Baruch asks what retribution awaits the enemies of Israel, and when will the judgment be? In xxv. we find the answer to the latter question, whereas the answer to the former is already given in xiii. 4-12. (6) I can discover no adequate explanation of the "therefore" with which xx. 1 begins in its present context. If xx. were read immediately after xiii. the text would at once become clear. On these and other grounds we must attempt to restore the original order of the chapters before they were broken up and rearranged, mutilated, and interpolated by the final editor. Owing to the paucity of materials the attempt to restore the original order can only be partially successful. This order was probably xiii. 1-3a; xx.; xxiv. 2-4; xiii. 3b-12; xxv., xiv.-xix.; xxi.-xxiv. 1; xxx. 2. To reassure Baruch, who is plunged in grief over Jerusalem (xiii. 3a), God declares (xx. 1, 2) that the days and years will speed more quickly by in order to usher in the judgment which will right all wrongs, and that even Jerusalem was removed with this end in view. On the "method of the times" Baruch is then promised disclosures (xx. 6), and "he and many with him" will see the mercy of God on those that sinned and were righteous

I, Baruch, was standing upon Mount Zion, and lo! a voice came from the height and said unto me: 2. 'Stand upon thy feet, Baruch, and hear the word of the mighty God. 3. Because thou hast been astonished at what has befallen Zion, thou shalt therefore be assuredly preserved to the consummation of the times, (xxiv. 2). Baruch, thereupon, asks two questions (xxiv. 4): (a) what will befall Israel's enemies? (b) when will God judge the world (of which event He had already spoken, xx. 2)?

The answer to (a) is given in xiii. 3b-12. But the first words of this answer are lost. In these words there was a statement of this nature: "retribution will come upon the prosperous cities of your enemies" (cf. xiii. 4). Baruch, moreover (xiii. 3b-12), will be preserved until those days for the express purpose of testifying the reason of the retribution that has befallen these cities, and the date of its consummation. "He and those like him who have seen" (cf. xxiv. 2) should answer the remonstrances of the tormented Gentiles. And in answer to Baruch's second question, he is informed (xxv. 1, 2) that he shall likewise be preserved till the sign of the last days has come. This sign will be a stupor that shall seize the inhabitants of the earth (xxv. 3, 4). Baruch, thereupon, acknowledges: "Behold Thou hast shown me the method of the times" (xiv. 1). After this the thought advances connectedly through xiv. - xix.; xxi. - xxiv. 1; xxx. 2. For like rearrangements of already existing texts by the final editor, see my edition of the Eth.En. pp. 189, 260, 267, 268, 270, 274.

XIII. 1. Mount Zion. Mount Zion is the scene of the revelation in xiii.-xx.; of the prayer in xxi. 4-25 (cf. xiii. 1; xx. 6; xxi. 2); of the revelation in xxii.-xxx.; of the seven days' fast in xlvii. 2; and of the prayer and revelation that follow xlviii.-lii.

A voice. Cf. xxii. 1, note.

2. Stand upon thy feet. Ezek. ii. 1.

The mighty God. Cf. vi. 8; vii. 1; xiii. 4.

3. Thou shalt therefore be assuredly preserved, etc. This promise recurs twice again in B², i.e. in xxv. 1 and lxxvi. 2. Baruch is thus to be preserved as a testimony or a sign against the inhabitants of the earth in the last days (see also xiv. 2). This assumption and preservation of Baruch till the last judgment is the teaching of B². With the above passages compare also xlviii. 30 and xlvi. 7, where the last is due to the final editor. In B¹, on the other hand, Baruch is to die a natural death (lxxviii. 5; lxxxiv. 1); he is to go the way of all flesh (xliv. 2) and to forget all corruptible things and the affairs of mortals (xliii. 2). Thus we have two conflicting accounts touching the destiny of Baruch. It is noteworthy that we have in the text a transference of a distinct Enochic function to Baruch. For in Jubilees iv. 24 it is stated: "(Enoch) was set as a sign there (in Eden), and that he should testify against all the children of men;" and again in x. 17: "As a testimony to the generations of the world the office was ordained for Enoch of recounting all the deeds of generation unto generation till the day of judgment" (see also Slav. En. xl. 13; liii. 2; lxiv. 5).

that thou mayst be for a testimony. 4. So that, if ever those prosperous cities say: 'Why hath the mighty God brought upon us this retribution?' 5. Thou and those like thee may say to them (even) ye who have seen: 'This evil and (these) retributions which

This robbing of Enoch to benefit Baruch is a clear sign of Jewish hostility to Christianity, and a tribute to the influence that Enoch enjoyed in the Christian Church of the first century. Enoch's acceptance amongst Christians as a Messianic prophet was the ground for his rejection by the Jews. So thoroughgoing, indeed, was this rejection that, although he was the chief figure next to Daniel in Jewish Apocalyptic prior to 40 A.D., in subsequent Jewish literature his functions and achievements are assigned to others, such as Moses, Ezra, or Baruch, and, with the exception of two or three passages, his name in subsequent Jewish literature is henceforth studiously ignored. The observation of this tendency of Jewish thought becomes of practical value to us when we come to lix. 4-11, as we are thus enabled to conclude that a document which on other grounds is prior to 70 A.D., is posterior to the rise of Christianity because it manifests clear signs of this tendency.

Assuredly be preserved. The Syriac lit. = σασθεις σασθησει, a familiar Hebraism שָׁחַד תִּשָּׁחַד. This idiom recurs frequently in this book (see xxii. 7; xli. 6; xlviii. 30; l. 2; lvi. 2; lxxv. 6; lxxvi. 2; lxxxii. 2; lxxxiii. 1, 2, 3, 6; lxxxiv. 2). That we have herein indubitable evidence of a Hebrew original we have shown in the Introduction.

4. Those prosperous cities. The abruptness with which these cities are introduced, though not heretofore mentioned, and their complaints about the retribution that has befallen them, though no such retribution has as yet been recorded, shows either that the text preceding these words has been lost, or else that xiii. 3b-12 should be read after xxiv. 2-4. In fact, since in xiii. 3b-12 we have an answer to xxiv. 4, we must assume that xiii. 3b-12 originally followed after xxiv. 4, and since xiii. 4 presupposes that a statement about the retribution that is to come upon the prosperous enemies of Israel has already been made, and since no such statement is found, we must further assume the loss of such words immediately preceding xiii. 3b (see note on xxiv. 3, 4). It might be possible to explain xiii. 4 by xxv. 3, and accordingly regard xiii. 3b-12 as following originally upon xxiv. 2-xxv. But many difficulties beset this interpretation. The cities here spoken of are of course Gentile cities (cf. ver. 11).

Brought upon us this retribution. The same phrase practically is applied to Israel in lxxvii. 4, but here the "us" refers to the "prosperous cities." The retribution intended by the editor seems to be that threatened in xii. 4.

5. Thou and those like thee who have seen it. These words are hardly capable of interpretation as they stand. They clearly mean Baruch's contemporaries; observe "ye who have seen"; but as the time is that of the end, they cannot be his contemporaries; for only are coming upon you and upon your people (are sent) in its time that the nations may be perfectly chastened.' 6. And then they will expect. 7. And if they say at that time: 'When?' 8. Thou wilt say to them: 'Ye who have drunk the strained wine, drink ye also of its dregs, the judgment of the Lofty One who has no respect of persons.' 9. On this account He had before no mercy on His own sons, but afflicted them as His enemies, because they sinned. 10. They were therefore chastened then that they might receive mercy. 11. But now, ye peoples and nations, ye are debtors. because all this time ye have trodden down the earth, Baruch is to be preserved till that date. If, however, xiii. 3b-12 was originally preceded by xxiv. 2-4, we can trace the phrase back to xxiv. 2—"thou wilt see and many who are with thee."

That the nations may be perfectly chastened. That this chastisement is vindictive and not corrective is clear from verse 7; the nations are to "drink of the dregs, the judgment of the Lofty One"; and also from verses 10, 11, where the implication obviously is that, whereas Israel is punished with a view to its ultimate pardon, it is otherwise with the Gentiles. The vindictive punishment therefore of the Gentiles is dealt with in this chapter. But so far as I know 𐤁𐤓𐤁 = "chasten" is never used in the sense of vindictive punishment. This difficulty might be surmounted by supposing 𐤁𐤓𐤁𐤀 = "may be chastened," corrupt for 𐤁𐤓𐤁𐤀 = "may be dispersed" (cf. Isa. xxxiii. 3). In the next chapter, however, in xiv. 1, the retribution spoken of by God is to be of service to the Gentiles. But see note in loc. On the other hand, it might be possible to understand 𐤁𐤓𐤁𐤀 = "nations," "peoples," of Israel, as in xlii. 5 (if the text is right there). But in this case it would be better to emend 𐤁𐤓𐤁 into 𐤁𐤓𐤁𐤀𐤁𐤓𐤁𐤀 = "that the people may be chastened."

6. The Gentiles will wait for or look forward to the consummation of their chastisement. This verse might by a slight change be understood of Israel (cf. xiv. 3).

8. Cf. Ps. lxxv. 7, 8: "God is the judge. . . . For in the hand of the Lord there is a cup . . . surely all the wicked of the earth . . . shall drink them."

The Lofty One. Here only in this book (see 4 Ezra iv. 34; Isa. lvii. 15).

Has no respect of persons. Cf. xliv. 4.

10. Chastened. Cf. i. 5.

11. Trodden down. I.e. in the sense of oppressing it, a frequent meaning in the O.T.

and used the creation unrighteously. 12. For I have always benefited you, and ye have always denied the beneficence."

XIV. And I answered and said: "Lo! Thou hast shown me the method of the times, and that which will be after these things, and Thou hast said unto me, that the retribution, which has been spoken of by Thee, will be of advantage to the nations. 2. And now I know that those who have sinned are many, and they have lived in prosperity, and departed from the world, but that few 12. Cf. i. 4.

I have . . . benefited you. The Syriac is ܐܢܝܢ ܐܬܝܒܬܝܢܐ, but this order of the words, with this meaning, is highly irregular; for Syriac idiom all but universally requires the participle before the substantive and not as here, and in lxiii. 8, the converse order. This exceptional order may be due to the survival of the Hebrew order in the Syriac translation, i.e. הָיִיתָ מְבַרֵךְ. For this seems to be the explanation of two out of the three instances where I have observed this irregularity in the Peshitto O.T., i.e. Gen. iv. 17 and 2 Sam. viii. 15. In the third (1 Sam. xviii. 13) I can offer no explanation, and the abnormality is there all the more striking, as three verses later the same phrase recurs in its right order. This irregularity (which is not noticed in Duval's Grammar, and only passingly mentioned in Nöldeke's) is not found, so far as I am aware, in the Peshitto N.T.

Ye have . . . denied. The Syriac is ܐܢܝܢ ܐܬܝܒܬܝܢܐ, which, according to Syriac idiom, is an imperative = "deny ye." The converse order = "ye have denied." This irregularity, as in the last instance, I would trace to a survival of the Hebrew idiom through the Greek.

XIV. 1. The final editor is again greatly to blame here. According to the text Baruch says: "Thou hast shown me the method of the times and that which will be after these things." Now this has not been done. In the preceding chapter instruction has been given as to the reason of the retribution which has come upon the cities of the Gentiles, and likewise as to the date when their chastisement will be consummated. "The method or scheme of the times" would imply such information as we find in xxiv. 2-xxv. taken in conjunction with xiii. or to xxvii.-xxx. In xx. 6 certain disclosures are promised regarding "the method of the times." The phrase is found also in xlvi. 1.

The retribution . . . spoken of by Thee. These words probably refer to xiii. 5, and yet the retribution in question is first mentioned, not by God but by the cities (xiii. 4), unless we suppose xxv. 3 to precede xiv.

Will be of advantage to the nations. In xiii. 5-11 the context is against the idea of a remedial chastisement of the Gentiles, which seems to be asserted here. Here, again something seems wrong, nations will be left in those times, to whom those words shall be said which Thou didst say. 3. For what advantage is there in this, or what (evil), worse than what we have seen befall us, are we to expect to see? 4. But again I will speak in Thy presence: 5. What have they profited who confessed before Thee, and have not walked in vanity as the rest of the nations, and have not said to the dead: 'Give us life,' but always feared Thee, and have not left Thy ways? 6. And lo! they have been carried off, nor on their account hast Thou had mercy on Zion. 7. And if others did evil, it was

2. Few nations will be left in those times to whom, etc. Do these words refer back to xiii. 3? In that case Baruch complains that few of the Gentile nations will be alive to whom the words in xiii. 5, 7-11 are to be addressed.

3. These words seem to point to xiii. 6; cf. "they will expect" and "what . . . are we to expect to see?" But here they undoubtedly refer to Israel, whereas there they naturally refer to the Gentiles.

4-19. Of what profit has been the righteousness of the righteous? Of none; for it has helped neither them nor their city, though the last was at least their due (verses 4-7). Seeing this is so, man cannot understand Thy judgment (verses 8, 9), for he is but a breath; his birth is involuntary, and his end a mystery (verses 10, 11); for that end the righteous indeed may hope, for they have treasures in heaven, but for us there is only woe, here and hereafter (verses 12-14). Hence what Thou hast done on Thy servants' behalf Thou knowest, but we cannot discover. The world indeed Thou didst say was made for man. But how can this be? We pass away and the world abides (verses 15-19).

5. Confessed before Thee. I have here emended אָדָּנָיִם = "knew" into אָדָּנָיִם = "confessed."

Walked in vanity. Jer. ii. 5.

Have not said to the dead, etc. Cf. Isa. viii. 19b: "On behalf of the living should they seek unto the dead?"

6, 7. In these verses the destruction of Zion seems to be far in the background.

6. Have been carried off. Cf. lxxxv.

3. I have here followed Ceriani's emendation of אֲדָמָה into אֲדָמָה, who rightly compares xv. 2.

Nor on their account hast Thou had mercy on Zion. This was a great difficulty to the Jew. The presence of ten righteous men would have preserved Sodom; why then did Zion fall? Moreover, the preservation of the world, according to the Talmud (Weber, 201), depended on Israel. See xiv. 18, note.

7. We have here ideas which in some respects resemble those in Gen. xviii. 23-33. But whereas it due to Zion, that on account of the works of those who wrought good works she should be forgiven, and should not be overwhelmed on account of the works of those who wrought unrighteousness. 8. But who, O LORD, my Lord, will comprehend Thy judgment, or who will find out the profoundness of Thy path? or who will think out the gravity of Thy way? 9. Or who will be able to think out Thy incomprehensible counsel? or who of those that are born has ever found is taught there that God would spare a city because of the righteous persons in it, here and in ii. 2 it is the works of the righteous considered in themselves that are put forward as the ground of such mercy. On the question of good works the thought of the writers in this book, i.e. between 50 and 80 A.D., is to be described as follows: (a) The righteous are saved by their works (li. 7); they are justified by the law (li. 3); for righteousness is by the law (lxvii. 6). (b) Their works impart confidence to the righteous with respect to God when they pray for themselves or others. Thus Hezekiah trusted in his works and was hopeful in his righteousness, and so God heard him (lxiii. 3, 5); and the prophets also were heard because they trusted in their works (lxxxv. 2). (c) But the works of the righteous avail not themselves only; they are a defence; also to the unrighteous among whom they dwell (ii. 2), and even after their death their works are regarded as a lasting merit on the ground of which mercy should be shown to Zion (xiv. 7; lxxxiv. 10). (d) Again these works are conceived as going before them to the next world, and being there guarded in the treasure chambers of God (xiv. 12), where they will be kept safely till the final judgment (xxiv. 1); hence the righteous hope for the end and leave the world without fear (xiv. 12). (On the teaching of this book as to faith, see note on liv. 21.) In 4 Ezra the doctrine of works as it is found in Baruch can hardly be said to exist. To (b) and (c) we find no parallels and only seeming parallels to (a), such as men "will be able to escape by their works or their faith in which they have believed" (ix. 7), and that "God will guard those who have works and faith in the Most Mighty" (xiii. 23). It will be observed that the doctrine of salvation by works is carefully guarded against by the addition of the words "and faith." To (d) we have good parallels in vii. 77, where Ezra is said to have "a treasury of works laid up with the Most High," and in viii. 33, where "the righteous are those who have many works laid up with Thee: from their own works will they receive reward."

Though the doctrine of justification as taught in Baruch should naturally be discussed here, we must refer the reader to the note on xxi. 9.

8. O LORD, my Lord. See iii. 1, note.

the beginning or end of Thy wisdom? 10. For we have all been made like a breath. 11. For as the breath ascends from the heart, and returning not is extinguished, such is the nature of men, who depart not according to their own will, and know not what will befall them in the end. 12. For the righteous justly hope for the end, and without fear depart from this habitation, because they have with Thee a store of works preserved in treasuries. 13. On this account also these without fear leave this world, and trusting with joy they hope to receive the world which Thou hast promised them. 14. But unto us there is woe, who also now are shamefully entreated, and at that time look forward

10. See references on next verse.

11. Ascends from the heart, and returning not is extinguished. Cf. Ps. lxxviii. 39: "a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again;" Ps. cxlvi. 4; Job vii. 7; James iv. 14. This rendering rests on a slight change of order in the text, i.e.

על לב סגור הפך instead of גבול על לב סתפך. Ceriani and Fritzsche render the text, "ascendit quin procedat de corde et restinguitur."

Depart not according to their own will. Man does not settle the hour of his departure from this life. Cf. xlviii. 15; 4 Ezra viii. 5, "convenisti enim obaudire" (read volens with Syr. for obaudire) et profecta es nolens."

Know not what, etc. Cf. Slav. En. ii. 1; vii. 5.

12. The righteous justly hope. Eth. En. cii. 4.

A store of works, etc. The text reads סגור, גבול = "a force or supply of works." But it also = "a store of works." Cf. 4 Ezra vii. 77, where we find "a treasure of works." In Shabbath, 31b, a man is spoken of as having זכיות, "a treasure of merits" in heaven. Cf. Matt. vi. 19, 20; Pss. Sol. ix. 9, ὁ ποιῶν δικαιοσύνην θησαυρίζει ζωὴν ἐαυτῷ παρὰ κυρίῳ. See note on verse 7.

13. The world which Thou hast promised. This is clearly the spiritual world. Thus in li. 3 the righteous after death are to "receive the world which does not die, which is then promised to them;" in xlv. 13, 15 "theirs is the inheritance of the promised time," "for unto them will be given the world to come;" and in xv. 7, 8 "the world which is to come" is said to be on their account. Cf. 4 Ezra ix. 13. It is referred to again in xxi. 25 and lxxiii. 5 under the general name of something promised. Throughout B² there is no promise of an earthly felicity, but only of spiritual transmundane blessedness.

14. There is woe. Cf. for diction lxxiv. 11; 4 Ezra xiii. 16.

(only) to evils. 15. But Thou knowest accurately what Thou hast made on behalf of Thy servants; for we are not able to understand by means of any good thing that Thou art our Creator. 16. But again I will speak in Thy presence, O LORD, my Lord. 17. When of old there was no world with its inhabitants, Thou didst devise and speak with a word, and forthwith the works of creation stood before Thee. 18. And Thou didst say that Thou wouldst make for Thy world man as the administrator of Thy works, that it might be known that he was by no means made on account of the world, but the world on account of him.

Evils. These words refer back to xiv. 3, and their subject is again touched upon in xv. 1. What these are is given in xliv. 15; lxxxv. 13.

15. What Thou hast made (or done) on behalf of Thy servants. I.e.

ܫܠܢ ܕܒܢܝ ܕܒܪܝܐ. If my rendering is right, the entire verse appears to be in its wrong place, and should be read after verse 16. The sense then would be excellent: "Thou knowest what good things Thou hast created on behalf of Thy servants; but we know of none: yet Thou didst say that Thou didst make the world for man," etc. (verses 15, 17, 18). But the Syriac may be translated, "what Thou hast made out of Thy servants," or if we neglect the diacritic point, "what Thou has wrought out of Thy works." Ceriani translates the verse: "Tu autem recte nosti quid feceris de servis tuis: quia nos non possumus intelligere aliquid boni, quomodo tu sis fctor noster." Before aliquid we should read "per."

17. Speak with a word, etc. Cf. Gen. i. 6, 7; Ps. xxxiii. 6; Heb.

xi. 3; 2 Peter iii. 5; Slav. En. xxiv. 5; xxv. 1; 4 Ezra vi. 38.

18. Thou wouldst make for Thy world man, etc. Cf. Gen. i. 26, 28; Ps. viii. 6; 4 Ezra vi. 54.

The world on account of him. So far as I am aware this exalted view of man's dignity in respect of the world is not found earlier than the first century of the Christian era. It recurs frequently in the literature of this time: cf. xiv. 19; xv. 7; xxi. 24 (this doctrine is thus confined to B² in this book); Assumpt. Mosis i. 12; 4 Ezra vi. 55, 59; vii. 11; viii. 44; ix. 13. In these passages the statement of the reason for the creation of the world assumes three forms: First, the world was created on account of man (Apoc. Bar. xiv. 18; 4 Ezra viii. 1, 44). But the writers of these books if pressed, would at once have withdrawn this statement in favour of two diverging statements: the one, that the world was created on account of Israel (4 Ezra vi. 55, 59; vii. 11; Assumpt. Mosis i. 12); the other that the world was created on account of the righteous in Israel

19. And now I see that as for the world which was made on account of us, lo ! it abides, but we, on account of whom it was made, depart."

XV. And the Lord answered and said unto me :
 "Thou art rightly astonished regarding the departure of man, but thou hast not judged well regarding the evils which befall those who sin. 2. And as regards what thou hast said, that the righteous are carried off and the impious are prospered, 3. And as regards what thou hast said: 'Man knows not Thy judgment'—
 4. On this account hear, and I will speak to thee, and hearken, and I will cause thee to hear My words.
 5. Man would not rightly have understood My judgment, if he had not accepted the law, and if his fear (Apoc. Bar. xiv. 19 ; xv. 7 ; xxi. 24). Either of the latter forms the real Jewish view from the Christian era onwards. Thus in the Talmud, it is either Israel, or the righteous in Israel, that were the cause of the world's creation and its subsequent preservation. Thus in Bammidbar rabba, ii., "if Israel were not, the world would not exist"; in the Shemoth rabba, xxviii., "The world was created owing to the merits of Israel, and upon Israel stands the world." See Weber, pp. 201, 202, for other passages of the same import. See also note on xv. 7.

19. See note on last verse. That the "us" and the "we" here are the righteous is clear from xv. 7. This verse shows that the writer believed in the view that the safety of the world was bound up with that of the righteous.

In Pesikta 200b God is said to have created the world on account of Abraham's merit (Weber, p. 295).

XV. 1. Astonied regarding the de- parture of man. These words refer to xiv. 19. The Syriac noun translated "departure" is derived from the verb translated "depart" in xiv. 19. In xiii. 3 Baruch was "astonied" about the fate of Jerusalem.

Not judged rightly regarding the evils, etc. See xiv. 3, 14.

2. See xiv. 6.

3. See xiv. 8, 9.

5. The law. The law was the centre round which Jewish thought and life revolved. To a limited extent the Messianic expectation was likewise a centre. Frequently we find that in proportion as the one is emphasised the other falls into the background. This will receive illustration as we proceed to examine the position assigned to the law and the Messiah respectively in the five main constituents of this book. Thus in B¹ (written after 70 A.D.) where the restoration of Jerusalem is looked for, but no Messiah, the law is spoken of as had not been (rooted) in understanding. 6. But now, follows : God gave the law to Israel (lxxvii. 3) ; for transgressing it they were sent into exile (lxxvii. 4 ; lxxxiv. 2) ; but let not Israel withdraw from the law (xliv. 3), but obey it (xlvi. 5) ; let them remember it (lxxxiv. 8) ; for if they do so, they will see the consolation of Zion (xliv. 7), and a son of the law will never be wanting (xlvi. 4), nor a lamp nor a shepherd (lxxvii. 16) ; for lamps and shepherds are from the law, and though these depart the law stands (lxxvii. 15) ; if they remember it, they will see the consolation of Zion (xliv. 7). In B² where there is no Messiah and no expectation of the restoration of Jerusalem, the law is still further glorified. Thus Moses brought the law to Jacob (xvii. 4) ; this conveyed a knowledge of the judgment of God (xv. 5), and entailed retribution on the consciously disobedient (xv. 6 ; xix. 3 ; xlviii. 40) ; it will exact all its rights (xlvi. 27), and repay the transgressor (xlvi. 47) ; apostates from it (xli. 3) will be specially dealt with (xlii. 4). On the other hand it will protect those who receive it in their hearts (xxxii. 1 ; xlviii. 24) ; by it they will be justified (li. 3), and in it will be the hope of the righteous (li. 7) ; the law is with Israel, and so long as they obey it they will not fall (xlvi. 22, 24). They have received one law from One (xlvi. 24). In B³ (which is akin to xiii. 2 in this respect) Israel has nothing save the Mighty One and the law (lxxxv. 3) ; they have one law by one (lxxxv. 14). When, however, we turn to the Messiah Apocalypses A¹ (= xxvii.-xxx. 1), A² (= xxxvi.-xl.), A³ (= liii.-lxxiv.), and to S. (= x. 6-12) which form more than a third of the entire book, we find no mention at all of the law in A¹ and S. In A² there is only one mention of it, i.e. God's law is life (xxxviii. 2). In A² it naturally becomes more prominent, as A³ gives a brief history of God's dealings with Israel. The law and the tradition were observed by Abraham and his sons (lvii. 2). Thus, through the agency of Moses, its light shone on those in darkness (lix. 2). God imparted to Moses certain studies of the law (lix. 3). Josiah alone was faithful to it in his time (lxvi. 5). Such as loved it not perished (liv. 14). Righteousness comes by the law (lxvii. 6). Thus we observe that in purely eschatological descriptions such as A¹, there is not a single allusion to the law : the Messiah is the entire centre of interest. This is practically true in A² also ; for the reference in xxxviii. 2 does not belong to the account of the last things. In A³ finally, most of the references are to historical incidents, though it is true that in A² great store is set by the law. The law was the centre of Jewish life, the source of righteousness, and in fact its spiritual schoolmaster, till the advent of the Messiah had arrived. Thenceforward (lxx.-lxxiv.) there is not even an allusion to it. The same phenomena are observable in the various constituents of 4 Ezra. Thus in the three or four distinct Messiah Apocalypses in that book (according to Kabisch's critical analyses) the law is only mentioned two or three times. The only strong expression regarding it is in xiii. 38, and there the text is doubtful. In the groundwork of the book (circa 100 A.D.) however, where we find no hope of a Messiah nor of a restored Jerusalem, the law, as might be expected, has a more important rôle to play. Thus God gave the law to Jacob (iii. 19). He sowed it in them that they might keep it (ix. 32), but it bore no fruit owing to because he transgressed though he knew, yea, on account of this also, he shall be tormented because he knew. 7. And as regards what thou didst say touching the righteous, that on account of them has this world come, nay more, even that which is to come is on their account. 8. For this world is to them the evil heart (iii. 20); they neglected it (vii. 20), did not keep it (ix. 32), rejected it (vii. 72), despised it (vii. 24; viii. 56), yet the law cannot perish (ix. 37.) Some did try to keep the law perfectly in this life (vii. 89), and God bore testimony to them because they did so (vii. 94); these acquired a store of good works (vii. 77; viii. 33), and from these they received their reward (viii. 33); and yet none can claim heaven purely as the reward of their righteousness, for all men have sinned (viii. 35).

462

It is obvious at a glance that the possession of the law by Israel is less a subject of self-gratulation in 4 Ezra than in Baruch. In the latter, especially in B² (written, like the groundwork in 4 Ezra, after 70 A.D., and having no expectation of the Messiah or a restored Jerusalem) the law is everything: it protects the righteous (xxxii. 1), justifies them (li. 3), is their hope (li. 7), and so long as it is with Israel, Israel cannot fall (xlviii. 22, 24). In Ezra, on the other hand, the law has begotten in the writer such a sense of sin that he trembles before it. Man needs mercy, not the award of the law; for all have sinned (viii. 35), and all but a very few would perish, but for the divine compassion (vii. 139).

5, 6. If his fear had not been (rooted) in understanding. But now, because he transgressed though he knew, etc. Here Ceriani followed by Fritzsche has mistranslated ⲁⲃⲓ (= transgressus est) by "fecit," thus taking it for ⲁⲃⲓ. This thought partially recurs in xix. 3; xlviii. 40, "Each of the inhabitants of the earth knew when he was committing iniquity" (see note in loc.), lv. 2; and almost a perfect parallel is found in 4 Ezra vii. 72: "Qui ergo commorantes sunt in terra hinc cruciabuntur quoniam sensum habentes iniquitatem fecerunt." Cf. Luke xii. 48.

7. As regards . . . has this world come. See note on xiv. 18. Nowhere in the present book are these words given as a divine utterance. The same statement is again made in xxi. 24. From a similar statement in 4 Ezra vi. 55, at the close of the short hexæmeron there, it is probable that some such statement was originally included in that hexæmeron in its independent form. On this hexæmeron see xxix. 4, note. Cf. 4 Ezra vi. 55; vii. 11.

Seeing that this world is "a trouble and a weariness" to the righteous, it is hard to understand such a belief unless we suppose that it was designed to be their discipline for the future life. Cf. lii. 6. On the world which is to come, see xiv. 13, note.

8. This world is to them a trouble . . . with much labour. Cf. xlviii. 50; li. 14; 4 Ezra vii. 3-14; Rom. viii. 18; 2 Cor. iv. 17. This world is evidently regarded by the a trouble and a weariness with much labour; and that accordingly which is to come, a crown with great glory."

XVI. And I answered and said: "O LORD, my Lord, lo! the years of this time are few and evil, and who is able in this little (space) to acquire that which is measureless?"

XVII. And the Lord answered and said unto me: "With the Most High account is not taken of much time nor of a few years. 2. For what did it profit Adam that he lived nine hundred and thirty years, and transgressed that which he was commanded? 3. Therefore the multitude of time that he lived did not profit him, but brought death and cut off the years of those who were born from him. 4. Or wherein did Moses suffer loss in that he lived only one hundred and twenty years, and, inasmuch as he was subject to Him who formed him, brought the law to the writer of B² but not of B¹ as a scene of trial and sorrow: a man must give himself to an ascetic life here if he is to attain blessedness hereafter. There is a more ascetic tone about 4 Ezra. In the Eth. En., however, still stronger statements are found. Thus in xlviii. 7 the Messiah "preserveth the lot of the righteous because they have hated and despised this world of unrighteousness," and in cviii. 7 God recompenses "the spirits of the humble and of those who afflict their bodies," and likewise those (cviii. 10) who, though "trodden under foot of wicked men," "loved heaven more than their life in this world."

Crown with great glory. Cf. 1 Pet. v. 4. We should expect "crown of great glory." Observe that if we retranslate these words into Hebrew, we have a paronomasia already familiar from Isa. lxii. 3; Ezek. xvi. 12; xxiii. 42, i.e. עֲטָרָה בְּתַפְאָרָה רַבָּה.

XVI. 1. Years . . . few and evil. Gen. xlvii. 9.

XVII. 1. The Most High. This title belongs to B¹, B², B³, and A³. See xxv. 1; liv. 9, 17; lvi. 1; lxiv. 6, 8; lxvii. 4, 7; lxix. 2; lxx. 7; lxxvi. 1; lxxvii. 4, 21; lxxx. 1, 3; lxxxi. 2, 4; lxxxii. 2, 6; lxxxiii. 1; lxxxv. 8, 12.

3. Brought death, etc. See xxiii. 4, note.

4. Brought the law, etc. Cf. 4 Ezra iii. 19. "Give the law to the seed of Jacob, and the commandment to the race of Israel."

seed of Jacob, and lighted a lamp for the nation of Israel."

XVIII. And I answered and said: "He that lighted has taken from the light, and there are but few that have imitated him. 2. But those many whom he has lighted have taken from the darkness of Adam, and have not rejoiced in the light of the lamp."

XIX. And He answered and said unto me: "Wherefore at that time he appointed for them a covenant, and said: 'Behold I have placed before you life and death,' and he called heaven and earth to witness against them. 2. For he knew that his time was but short, but that heaven and earth endure always. 3.

Lighted a lamp. Cf. lix. 2, "lamp of the eternal law." The thought in both phrases is drawn from Ps. cxix. 105, "Thy word is a lamp," etc. Cf. xviii. 2.

XVIII. 1. Has taken from the light, i.e. has chosen the light. In the next verse the many are said to have chosen the darkness of Adam.

2. The law and Adam are in this passage symbolical names for the opposing powers of light and darkness. This thought is foreign to the O.T. though Gen. i.-iii. has prepared the way for it. Adam is here, as in the Slav. En., represented as the primary source of human transgression, whereas in the Eth. En. and Jubilees human depravity is traced mainly to the angels that sinned with the daughters of men. Again, as in the Slav. En., the writer does not teach the doctrine of original sin and inherited spiritual incapacities. He implies rather that man is left to determine his own destiny, to choose light or take darkness for his portion, just as in much later times it was said: "God does not determine beforehand whether a man shall be righteous or wicked, but puts this into the hands of the man himself" (Tanchuma, Pikkude 3). See Slav. En. xxx. 15, 16, notes. The same view is enforced in A³, i.e. liv. 15, 16. See notes in loc.

XIX. 1, 2. Because few chose light and many chose darkness, Moses showed further that their choice of light or darkness was likewise a choice of life or death. xix. 1-3 looks like an addition of the final editor. The answer to xviii. seems to begin with xix. 4.

Behold I have placed, etc., Deut. xxx. 19. Called heaven, etc., Deut. iv. 26; xxx. 19; xxxi. 28. Cf. lxxxiv. 2; Ass. Mos. iii. 12.

Later times seem to have drawn from Deut. xxx. 19 the conclusion that the permanence of the law was bound up with that of heaven and earth. Cf. ver. 2; Matt. v. 18. Contrast Luke xvi. 17; Mark xiii. 31.

For after his death these sinned and transgressed (the covenant), though they knew that they had the law reproving (them), and the light in which nothing could err, also the spheres, which testify, and Me. 4. Now regarding everything that is it is I that judge, but do not thou take counsel in thy soul regarding these things, nor afflict thyself because of those which have been. 5. For now it is the consummation of time that is sought, whether of business, or of prosperity, or of shame, and not the beginning thereof. 6. Because if a man be prospered in his beginnings and shamefully entreated in his old age, he forgets all the prosperity that he had. 7. And again, if a man is shamefully entreated in his beginnings, and at his end is prospered, he remembereth not again his evil entreatment. 8. And again hearken : though each one were prospered all that time—all the time from the day on which death was decreed against those who transgress—and

3. Transgressed. This word recurs in the same connection (lxxxiv. 2) where it has as its object "the law." We must supply this or "the covenant" from ver. 1.

4. These words deal with Baruch's difficulties in xviii. 1, 2. Do not distress thyself with such problems ; the end of all things is at hand.

5. Here only the end of all things is looked for—not an earthly felicity in a rebuilt Jerusalem.

6-8. The end of all things is at hand, and the only important question is : How does it find a man ? will it bring him shame or honour ? We are strongly reminded here of the well-known words of Solon in Herodotus i. 32 σκοπέειν δὲ χρόν παντὸς χρήματος τὴν τελευτήν, κῆ ἀποβήσεται. πολλοῖσι γὰρ δὴ ὑποδέξας ὄλβον ὁ θεὸς προορρίζουσ ἀνέτρεψε. It was a familiar Hellenic theme. Cf. Soph. Trach. 1-3 ; Oed. Rex, 1494-97 ; Eurip. Androm. 100-103, etc.

8. Though a man . . . vanity. This seems the natural rendering of the passage. Ceriani renders : "Omne tempus istud a die quo decreta fuit mors contra eos qui praetereunt in isto tempore, si unusquisque prosperatus esset, et in fine suo in vanitatem corrumperetur, esset omne." Fritzsche quite wrongly writes "vanum" for "omne."

On which death was decreed, etc. See xxiii. 4, note.

in his end was destroyed, in vain would have been everything."

XX. Therefore, behold! the days will come, and the times will hasten more than the former, and the seasons will speed on more than those that are past, and the years will pass more quickly than the present (years). 2. Therefore have I now taken away Zion, in order that I may the more speedily visit the world in its season. 3. Now therefore hold fast in thy heart everything that I command thee, and seal it in the recesses of thy mind. 4. And then I will

XX. 1. Therefore. It is not clear that this word follows upon anything in xix. It could be taken closely with xviii. So far as I can see it is best to regard it as following directly on xiii. 3a. Jerusalem has fallen, therefore the years intervening before the judgment will be shortened. Cf. liv. 1, "Against the works of the inhabitants of the earth Thou dost hasten the beginnings of the times"; Matt. xxiv. 22. For the probable order of the text originally see pp. 20, 119.

The days will come. Cf. xxiv. 1; xxxi. 5; xxxix. 3; 4 Ezra vi. 18. A familiar O.T. phrase. Cf. Jer. xxiii. 7; xxx. 3, etc.

The times will hasten. Cf. lxxxiii. 1, 6, where almost the same thoughts and diction recur. Cf. liv. 1; 4 Ezra iv. 26.

2. The fall of Jerusalem is one of the steps preparatory for the final judgment. See xxi. 21. There is no hope here of a restored Jerusalem. See i. 4, note.

Speedily visit. The Syriac literally = σπεύσω καὶ ἐπισκέψωμαι, a Hebraism, אסתר ואפקר, Visit. Cf. xxiv. 4; lxxxiii. 2.

This word seems to be used in Baruch in a bad sense of the penal visitation of God, as in Exod. xx. 5; Ps. lxxxix. 32; Jer. vi. 15; ix. 25; xi. 22, etc.; also in 4 Ezra v. 56; vi. 18; ix. 2; Pss. Sol. xv. 14. The word (ῥῆς = ἐπισκέπτεσθαι) has generally a good sense in the O.T., as in Gen. xxi. 1; Exod. iv. 31; Job x. 12; Pss. viii. 4; lxxx. 14; also in Ecclus. xvi. 14; Wisdom vii. 7, 13; Pss. Sol. iii. 14; x. 5(?); xi. 2, 7; always in the N.T., as in Luke i. 68, 78; vii. 16; xix. 44; Acts xv. 14; 1 Peter ii. 12. It is noteworthy that whereas in the N.T. the thought of God's visitation is one of joy, its associations in 4 Ezra and Baruch are fear and wrath to come.

3. Everything that I command thee. The relative is omitted in the Syriac, but both the sense and the Syriac idiom require it. If the text is right, we must take it as a Hebraism; for the Hebrew admits the omission of the relative. We must then suppose this Hebraism misunderstood by the Greek translator; for neither does the Greek allow of the omission of the relative.

show thee the judgment of My might, and My ways which are past finding out. 5. Go therefore and sanctify thyself seven days, and eat no bread, nor drink water, nor speak to any one. 6. And afterwards come to that place, and I will reveal Myself to thee, and speak true things with thee, and I will give thee commandment regarding the method of the times; for they will come and will not tarry.

THE PRAYER OF BARUCH THE SON OF NERIAH

XXI. And I went thence and sat in the valley of Cedron in a cave of the earth, and I sanctified my

4. Show thee the judgment of My might. In lxxxiii. 7 we have a nearly related phrase, "The consummation . . . will show the great might of its ruler."

6. That place. See xiii. 1, note.

Method of the times. See xiv. 1, note.

Will come and will not tarry. Hab. ii. 3. Cf. xlviii. 39 of text.

people assembled in Cedron (xxxi.-xxxiv.). At the close of xxxiv. there should follow a fast of seven days. The sixth section should open with this fast, but all mention of it has disappeared from the present text. After the fast comes a vision (xxxvi.-xl.) and a revelation regarding apostates and proselytes (xli. xlii.) with some further disclosures (xliii.); then the sixth section duly closes with an address to the people (xliv.-xlv.)

THE FIFTH AND SIXTH SECTIONS

XXI.-XLVI. This constitutes the fifth section of the book according to the present text, but in reality the fifth and sixth sections (see v. 7, note). For according to the scheme of the final editor, events proceed in each section in a certain order: thus first we find a fast, then generally a prayer or lamentation, then a divine message or disclosure followed by an announcement to the people. Thus we have here the fast of seven days in Cedron (xxi. 1); the prayer on Mount Zion (xxi. 4-26); the revelation (xxii. - xxx.); address to the

It will be observed that xxi.-xlv. embrace material from a variety of sources. Thus xxvi.-xxx. 1 = A¹, and xxxvi.-xl. = A² are independent Messiah apocalypses, and xliii. xlv. 7; xlv. xlv. are derived from B¹. What remains of B² has been completely rearranged according to the views of the final editor. For what was probably the original order of B² see p. 119, and the Introduction, pp. lxi.-lxiii.

XXI. 1. Cedron. See v. 5. On the fasts of Baruch see notes on v. 7 and ix.

Cave. Cf. Assumpt. Mos. ix. 6.

soul there, and I eat no bread, yet I was not hungry, and I drank no water, yet I thirsted not, and I was there till the seventh day, as He had commanded me. 2. And afterwards I came to that place where He had spoken with me. 3. And it came to pass at sunset that my soul took much thought, and I began to speak in the presence of the Mighty One, and said: 4. "O Thou that hast made the earth hear me, that hast fixed the firmament in its fulness, and hast made firm the height of the heaven by the spirit, that hast called from the beginning of the world that which did not yet exist, and they obey Thee. 5. Thou that hast commanded the air by Thy nod, and hast seen those things which are to be as those things

2. That place. Probably Mount Zion. Cf. xx. 6 and xiii. 1; otherwise the temple, x. 5. But this and some other such place determinations may be due to the final editor. The scene of the fast, the prayer, and the revelation was probably the same. See xlvii. 1, note.

3. The Mighty One. This is the first time this title occurs. It is found in B¹, B², A³, but not in A¹, A². See xxv. 4; xxxii. 1, 6; xxxiv. 3, 6; xlv. 1, 4; xlvii. 1; xlviii. 1, 38; xlix. 1; liv. 1; lv. 6; lvi. 2, 3; lix. 3; lxi. 6; lxiii. 3, 5, 6, 8, 10; lxiv. 3, 4; lxv. 1; lxvi. 1, 5, 6; lxvii. 2; lxx. 2, 5; lxxvii. 11, 26; lxxx. 4; lxxxii. 5; lxxxiv. 1, 6, 7, 10; lxxxv. 2, 3.

4. By the spirit. Have we here a reference to Gen. ii. 1, "The spirit of God," or does the whole phrase, "made firm . . . by the spirit," show a connection partly with the LXX. of Ps. xxxiii. 6, τῷ λόγῳ κυρίῳ οἱ οὐρανοὶ ἐστερεώθησαν καὶ τῷ πνεύματι τοῦ στόματος κτλ.

Hast called . . . that which did not yet exist. Cf. xlviii. 8, "with a word Thou quickenest that which was not." We seem to have here creation ex nihilo. On the other hand the words above are found in Philo, de Justitia, τὰ γὰρ μὴ ὄντα ἐκάλεσεν εἰς τὸ εἶναι. This may be accidental. At any rate the fundamental principles of the two writers are different; for, except in the De Somno, i. 13, Philo taught the formation of the world from pre-existent elements. See Slav. En. xxiv. 2; xxv. 1, notes. Such expressions as that in the text spring from the repeated "and God said," Gen. i. Cf. Ps. cxlviii. 5; Philo, de sacrif. Abel et Cain, ὁ γὰρ θεὸς λέγων ἅμα ἐποίησεν, μηδὲν μεταξὺ ἀμφοῖν τιθεῖς. In 2 Pet. iii. 5, "There were heavens from of old, and an earth compacted out of water . . . by the word of God," we have the same teaching, with the additional idea that the solid earth was made from the water, as in the Slav. En. xxviii. 2.

which Thou art doing. 6. Thou that rulest with great thought the powers that stand before Thee: (yea) rulest with indignation the holy living creatures, who are without number, which Thou didst make from the beginning, of flame and fire, which stand around Thy throne. 7. To Thee only does this belong that Thou shouldst do forthwith whatsoever Thou dost wish. 8. Who causest the drops of rain to rain by number upon the earth, and alone knowest the consummation of the times before they come: have respect unto my prayer. 9. For Thou alone art able to sustain all who are, and those who pass away, and those who are to be, those who sin, and those who are righteous [as

6. Powers that stand before Thee. Cf. xlviii. 10; 4 Ezra viii. 21a, "cui adstat exercitus angelorum."

Creatures, who are without number. lix. 11.

Which Thou didst make from the beginning. In Jub. ii. 2, the creation of the angels is assigned to the first day—evidently on the ground of Job xxxviii. 7. According to Targ. Jer. I. on Gen. i. 26, and Shemoth rabba, 15, God created the angels on the second day. So also Slav. En. xxix. 1.

7. Pss. cxv. 3; cxxxv. 6; Jonah i. 14.

8. The drops of rain to rain by number. Cf. lix. 5; Ecclus. i. 2; Slav. En. xlvii. 5, note.

Alone knowest the end of the times. Cf. liv. 1.

9. Those who sin, and those who are righteous. For "who are righteous" the Syriac reads here and in xxiv. 2 ܐܠܝܢ ܕܝܫܝܡ = "who are justified" = οἱ δικαιοσύνας, and in xxi. 11, 12; lxii. 7, ܕܝܫܝܡ = "have been justified" = δεδικαιωμένοι εἰσιν.

In all these passages the Syriac is at fault, but its error is to be traced to the Greek Version; for the Greek translator mistranslated the Hebrew before him, which was in the former case הצדקים, and in the latter צדקן. The grounds for this conclusion are as follows: (i.) The antithesis to "those who sin" is not "those who are justified," but "those who do righteousness" or "are righteous." (ii.) If "those who are justified" was the true text, then its antithesis would not be "those who sin," as we find it in xxi. 9, 11, 12; xxiv. 2, but "those who are condemned," as in li. 1 and 4 Ezra iv. 18. (iii.) But since "those who sin" is undoubtedly original, the error must lie in the phrase "those who are justified." (iv.) Now this error is easy to explain. From the LXX. we know that צדק was generally rendered by δικαιοσύνη, and only in a few cases by δικαίος εἶναι (Job ix. 2, 15; x. 15; xv. 14; xxv. 4; xxxiii. 12; xxxiv. 5; living (and) being past finding out]. 10. For Thou alone dost live immortal and past finding out, and knowest the number of mankind. 11. And if in time many have sinned, yet others not a few have been righteous. 12. Thou knowest where Thou preservest xxxv. 36). The Greek translator, not appreciating the right meaning of צַדִּיק in our Apocalypse, gave it the sense he was most familiar with, and so mistranslated it by δικαιόσθαι. (v.) The above conclusions receive confirmation from the fact that the antithesis in our emended text is actually found in Job x. 15 and xxxv. 36, 37. I have emended the text accordingly in xxi. 9, 11, 12; xxiv. 1, 2; lxvii. 2.

The doctrine of justification in this Apocalypse differs from that taught in 4 Ezra.

(1) In Baruch men are justified by the law: thus the text in li. 3 = ἐδικαιώθησαν ἐν τῷ νόμῳ μου (where μου = τοῦ θεοῦ), and in lxvii. 6 it = ἡ δικαιοσύνη ἡ ἐκ τοῦ νόμου, and in lxxx. 7 it = ἐσώθησαν ἐν τοῖς ἔργοις αὐτῶν. In Ezra, on the other hand, the expression "salvation by works" is qualified by the addition of "and by faith." Cf. ix. 7; xiii. 23. In fact we do not find there either expressed or implied the doctrine of justification by works. (2) Quite in keeping with what precedes is the absolute assurance of salvation on the part of Baruch. He never personally dreads condemnation: he looks forward calmly to a life of future blessedness. Cf. xiii. 3; xxv. 1; xlv. 7; lxxvi. 2. Ezra, on the other hand, continually assumes his future woe till assured otherwise in viii. 47-49, 51-54. 4 Ezra xiv. does not belong to the rest of the book. There is a pessimistic outlook in Ezra as there is an optimistic one in all Baruch save S (i.e. x. 6-xii.). The note on xiv. 7 of this book will confirm the view above taken.

In 4 Ezra "to justify" preserves its ordinary meaning of "to declare just" in iv. 18 and xii. 7. It is used in this sense also in Ecclus. i. 22; vii. 5; x. 29; xiii. 22; xviii. 22; xxxi. 5; xlii. 2. In 4 Ezra, however, we find another use: thus in x. 16 it = "to vindicate as just." So also in Ps. li. 4; Isa. xlii. 21 (?); Pss. Sol. ii. 16; iii. 5; iv. 9; viii. 7, 27, 31; ix. 3; Luke vii. 29; Apoc. Baruch lxxviii. 5. On the word δικαιούν the reader can consult with advantage Sanday and Headlam's Romans, pp. 28-31. On the teaching on faith in A³, i.e. chaps. liii.-lxxiv., see liv. 25, note.

As living . . . out. This I bracket as a dittography. See next line.

10. Knowest the number of mankind. Gen. xxiii. 4, 5 ; xlviii. 4, 6.

11. Men many have sinned, but many also have been justified.

Others not a few have been righteous. This statement differs strongly from that given in 4 Ezra viii. 3 where it is said plainly that whereas "multi quidem creati sunt, pauci autem salvabuntur," and that the ratio of the saved to the lost is as the amount of gold in the earth to that of the clay in it (viii. 2). This optimism which we have observed already (see xxi. 9, note) differentiates Baruch from Ezra. The latter is in the main pessimistic both with regard to his own destiny (till otherwise reassured by God) and that of the vast bulk of mankind.

12, 13. But this life is not all ; sin and righteousness have further the end of those who have sinned, or the consummation of those who have been righteous. 13. For if there were this life only, which here belongs to all men, nothing could be more bitter than this. 14. For of what profit is strength that turns to weakness, or the food of plenty that turns to famine, or beauty that turns to a hateful (thing)? 15. For the nature of man is always changeable. 16. For we have by no means been from the beginning what we now are, and what we now are we shall not afterwards remain. 17. For if a consummation had not been prepared for all, in vain would have been their beginning. 18. But regarding everything that comes from Thee, do Thou inform me, and regarding everything about which I ask Thee, do Thou enlighten me. 19. How long will that which is corruptible remain, and how long will the time of issues; else the life of the righteous here were a crowning bitterness.

13. This verse may be drawn from 1 Cor. xv. 19, or else both from a common source. Of what worth is life? for (1) it is subject to constant change (xxi. 14, 15); and (2) is likewise mortal (xxi. 16, 17, 22).

14. Strength that turns, etc. lxxxiii. 11.

Beauty that turns to a hateful (thing). lxxxiii. 12.

15. There is no fixity in the being of man: he is the creature of change. In ver. 22, which should follow verses 17, 18, man is by appointment mortal.

16. The text is corrupt. The above rendering rests on an emendation of the text. Thus for וְהָיָה כְּעֵצ׃ אֲשֶׁר יִשְׁׁלַח הָאֱלֹהִים לְעֹלָם׃

I have read וְהָיָה כְּעֵצ׃ אֲשֶׁר יִשְׁׁלַח הָאֱלֹהִים לְעֹלָם׃ This restores, I believe, the original sense (cf. ver. 15). As the text stands it="aut nihil, sicuti quod sumus, est enim ab initio, nunc non sumus" (Ceriani).

17. Ver. 22 may have originally followed this verse.

19. How long will that which is corruptible remain? If this question comes from the final editor, its answer will be found in xl. 3; lxxiv. 3. But if it belongs to B², its answer would naturally be found in xxiii. 7-xxiv. 1; xxxi. 5. The writers of this book (particularly the writer of B²) are greatly impressed with the corruptibility of the present world. The whole present world, the olam hazzeh, belongs mortals be prospered, and until what time will those who transgress in the world be polluted with much wickedness? 20. Command therefore in mercy, and accomplish all that Thou saidst Thou wouldst bring, that Thy might may be made known to those who think that Thy long-suffering is weakness. 21. And show to those who know not, and let them see that it has befallen us and our city until now according to the long-suffering of Thy power, because on account of Thy name Thou hast called us a beloved people. 22. Every nature therefore from this onward is mortal.

to the sphere of corruption. Even so does the Messianic kingdom if it falls within the olam hazzeḥ, as it does in A¹, A², and A³ in this book. Thus in A² the Messianic reign forms the end of the world of corruption (xl. 3), and in A³, the end of corruption and the beginning of incorruption (lxxiv. 3). In B² all that has been is doomed to corruption (xxxi. 5); all that is corruptible will perish (xliv. 9); the new world that awaits them will not turn them to corruption (xliv. 12). In B³ what the righteous have lost was corruptible, but what they will receive is incorruptible (lxxxv. 5). The only reference to this subject in B¹ is where Baruch is told that he will pass away from the earth and forget all that is corruptible (xliii. 2). As to the remaining passages where this word recurs, the text is doubtful in xlviii. 29, and probably interpolated in xxviii. 5. In 4 Ezra vii. 113, the day of judgment is the end of this period and the beginning of the next immortal period. See also iv. 11; vii. 111.

Who transgress. These words could be rendered "who pass away," as in verse 9.

20. This is a prayer for the hastening of the final judgment (cf. 2 Pet. iii. 4-9).

21. The text is unintelligible as it stands: "Show to those who know not, and they have seen what has befallen us and our city until now according to the longsuffering," etc. Merely by the emendation of וַיִּסְמְכוּ = "and they have seen," into וַיִּסְמְכוּ = "and that it has been," we arrive at a perfectly consistent text. The fall of Jerusalem was brought about in the mercy of God to hasten the final judgment. See verse 23; xx. 2.

But, if the text is correct, it = καὶ ἐπαράσσω = וְרָאוּ. Have we here an instance of the Hebrew perfect with strong waw used as a continuation of the imperative? In that case the original may have been וְרָאוּ אֶת אֲשֶׁר נִקְרָה לָנוּ . . . = "Show . . . and let them see that it has happened to us." I have emended accordingly.

A beloved people. Cf. v. 1.

22. It is obvious that this verse breaks the connection of thought. It should be read after verse 17 as

23. Reprove therefore the angel of death, and let Thy glory appear, and let the might of Thy beauty be known, and let Sheol be sealed so that from this time forward it may not receive the dead, and let the treasures of souls restore those which are enclosed in them. 24. For there have been many years like those that are desolate from the days of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, and of all those who are like them, who sleep in the earth, on whose account Thou didst say that Thou hadst created the world. 25. And now quickly show Thy glory, and do not defer suggested above. It is possible that לִשְׁמִי is corrupt for לְשׁוֹן. We should then translate, "Every one, therefore, according to this law is mortal" (cf. ver. 15).

23. The writer in 20, 21, urged God to bring on the final judgment, that His power might be made known, and that men might learn that Israel's calamities had befallen them in the mercy of God. With a view to this final judgment the writer prays to God to put an end to death, to let His glory appear, and the dead arise.

23. The angel of death. Cf. Rev. vi. 8. On the prominent rôle played by this angel in later Jewish writings, see Testament of Abraham (ed. James); Weber, 239-242, 244, 247, 262, 321, 322, 373; Eisenmenger, Entdecktes Jud. i. 854, 855, 862-879.

Sheol. See xi. 6, note.

Be sealed. Cf. Isa. v. 14.

Treasures of souls. Only the righteous souls were admitted to these treasures or chambers. I have preserved the literal meaning of the original word. These are the places in which God treasures His righteous ones, or their righteous acts. After the death of a righteous man his soul was permitted during seven days to behold the seven ways of the righteous and the seven ways of the wicked. After so doing, the soul entered these chambers (4 Ezra vii. 101; iv. 35). These chambers were in Sheol (4 Ezra iv. 41); only righteous souls could enter them (4 Ezra vii. 80); they were guarded by angels, and were full of rest (Eth. En. c. 5; 4 Ezra vii. 95); at the final judgment they were to restore the souls committed to them (Apoc. Bar. xxi. 3; xxx. 2; 4 Ezra vii. 32, 80). It is to be observed that as there were treasures of righteous souls, so there were treasures of righteous works (see xxiv. 1).

It is strange that only the righteous souls are here mentioned. The reference to the wicked may be lost.

24. This verse should in all probability be read after ver. 19. It would there form a good link between vers. 19 and 20. If this is not so the text seems corrupt.

Sleep in the earth. See xi. 4, note.

On whose account, etc. See xv. 7, note; xiv. 18, note.

what has been promised by Thee." 26. And it came to pass that when I had completed the words of this prayer that I was greatly weakened.

XXII. And it came to pass after these things that lo! the heavens were opened, and I saw, and power was given to me, and a voice was heard from on high, and it said unto me: 2. "Baruch, Baruch, why art thou troubled? 3. He who travels by a road but does not complete it, or he who departs by sea but does not arrive at the port, can he be comforted? 4. Or he who promises to give a present to another, but does not fulfil it, is it not robbery? 5. Or he who sows the earth, but does not reap its fruit in its season, does he not lose everything? 6. Or he who plants a plant, unless it grows till the time suitable to it, does he who planted it expect to receive fruit from it? 7. Or a woman who has conceived, if she bring forth untimely, does she not assuredly slay her infant? 8. Or he who builds a house, if he does not roof it and com-

25. What has been promised by Thee. I.e. "the world which Thou hast promised them" (xiv. 13; cf. lxxxiii. 5). The new world would become the dwelling of the righteous after the judgment.

26. I was greatly weakened. This weakness follows again on the prayer in xlvi. 25; cf. 4 Ezra v. 14.

XXII. 1. The heavens were opened and I saw. Ezek. i. 1; cf. Matt. iii. 16; John i. 52; Rev. iv. 1; Acts vii. 56.

A voice was heard, etc., i.e. the bath-qôl. Cf. xiii. 1; Matt. iii. 17; xvii. 5; Rev. iv. 1.

3-8. In xxii. 3, 5, God rejoins that no man undertakes a work without hoping to enjoy its results, and that no work can be duly judged till it is completed (xxii. 8). Thus Baruch's depreciation of this life (xxi. 13-17, 22) is in some fashion answered. Things must be judged in the light of their consummation. Again, in reply to Baruch's request to hasten the period of judgment (xxi. 19, 24, 20, 21, 23, 25), God rejoins that, for the due accomplishment of any work, time is needed (xxii. 6, 7). Finally, to Baruch's plea for the fulfilment of the divine promise (xxi. 25), God acknowledges the obligation of that promise (xxii. 4).

7. Does . . . assuredly slay. A Hebraism. Text = הרוג יורג. Cf. xiii. 3; xli. 6; xlvi. 30, etc.

plete it, can it be called a house? Tell me that first."

XXIII. And I answered and said: "Not so, O LORD, my Lord." 2. And He answered and said unto me: "Why therefore art thou troubled about that which thou knowest not, and why art thou ill at ease about things in which thou art ignorant? 3. For as thou hast not forgotten the people who now are and those who have passed away, so I remember those who are remembered, and those who are to come. 4. Because when Adam sinned and death was decreed against those who should be born, then XXIII. 1, 2. Baruch having admitted the justice of the divine reasons, God rejoins in the words of xxii. 3, "Why therefore art thou troubled?" for Baruch thereby acknowledges his ignorance of the things in question.

3. It is hard to see the relevance of this verse to any of Baruch's representations. Baruch has never doubted the ultimate fulfilment of the divine promises.

Who are remembered and those who are to come. The Syriac here

ܐܠܝܢܐ ܕܡܝܬܐ ܕܡܝܬܐ ܕܡܝܬܐ seems corrupted from ܐܠܝܢܐ ܕܡܝܬܐ ܕܡܝܬܐ = "who are appointed to come."

4. When Adam sinned and death was decreed against, etc. There are two different conceptions of man's original destiny and of the physical effect of Adam's sin upon it in two of the different constituents of this book. (1) Thus in B², i.e. in xvii. 3; xix. 8; xxiii. 4, Adam's sin brought in physical death, otherwise man would have been immortal. We find the same view in Ecclus. xxv. 24 ἀπὸ γυναικὸς ἀρχὴ ἁμαρτίας, καὶ δι' αὐτὴν ἀποθνήσκουσιν πάντες, though this view cannot be reconciled with the main teaching and tendencies of that book, which are to the effect that man was mortal from the outset (cf. xiv. 17; xvii. 1, 2; xl. 11). The conditional immortality of man appears next in Eth. En. lxix. 11; Book of Wisdom i. 13, 14; ii. 23, 24; Slav. En. xxx. 16, 17 (see notes in loc.); in 4 Ezra iii. 7, "Et huic (sc. Adamo) mandasti diligentiam unam tuam: et prae-terivit eam, et statim instituisti in eum mortem et in nationibus ejus." It is likewise the Pauline view (cf. Rom. v. 12; 1 Cor. xv. 21). In the Talmud this was the prevailing view; thus, according to the Beresh. rabba, c. 9, Adam was not originally destined for death (Pesikta, 76a); if Adam had not sinned he would have lived for ever (see Weber, 214, 215, 239). (2) In A³, i.e. in liv. 15; lvi. 6, Adam is said to have brought in only pre-mature death. This seems to be the view underlying Gen. ii., iii., though many, it is true, take it to be conditional immortality. But such an interpretation is difficult in the face the multitude of those who should be born was numbered, and for that number a place was prepared where the living might dwell and the dead might be guarded. 5. Unless therefore the number aforesaid is fulfilled, the creature will not live again [for My spirit is the creator of life], and Sheol will receive the dead. 6. And again it is given to thee to hear what things are to come after these times. 7. For truly My redemption has drawn nigh, and is not far distant as aforetime.

of Gen. iii. 19. (3) It may be well to add here that a third view is occasionally taught in the Talmud. Death came into the world in consequence of divine predestination (see Edersheim, Life and Times, etc., i. 166; Weber, 238, 239). On the spiritual effects of Adam's sin on his posterity, see xlviii. 42, note. On the whole question, see Sanday and Headlam, Romans, 136-138.

The multitude of those who should be born was numbered. This was a secret known only to God (xxi. 10; xlviii. 46). How this number was fixed upon is not recorded. It could not be added to or diminished; for the judgment could not come till it was completed (xxiii. 5; 4 Ezra iv. 33-43).

For that number a place was prepared. Cf. Slav. En. xlix. 2: "There has not been even a man in his mother's womb, for whom a place has not been prepared for every soul"; and lviii. 5: "There is a special place for mankind for all the souls of men according to their number." So in the Tractate Chagiga, fol. 15, col. 1; Torath Adam, fol. 101, col. 3; Avodath hakkodesh, fol. 19, col. 1, it is said that a place is prepared for every man either in Paradise or hell (Eisenmenger, ii. 315).

The dead might be guarded. The righteous were in "the treasuries of souls" guarded by angels (Eth. En. c. 5; 4 Ezra vii. 85, 95); the wicked in places of punishment guarded likewise by "those who keep the keys and are the guardians of the gates of hades standing like great serpents, and their faces are like quenched lamps, and their eyes fiery" (Slav. En. xlii. 1).

5. Not till the secret number of mankind is fulfilled can the resurrection take place. In Rev. vi. 11 and 4 Ezra iv. 36 the consummation of the world will follow, not when the number of mankind, but of the saints, is fulfilled. According to the Shemoth rabba, c. 39 (cf. Aboda Sara, 5a), all the generations of mankind were contained in a register called the ספר חיליות of Adam. And (Beresh. rabba, c. 24; Wajjikra rabba, c. 15) not until all the souls still dwelling in the תוך הנשמות, and included in the above register, had been born in the flesh should the Messiah come (i.e. the end of the world). See Weber, 335.

Sheol will receive. Cf. xxi. 23; xi. 6, note.

7. Cf. lxxxii. 2; Luke xxi. 28; 1 Pet. iv. 7.

XXIV. "For behold! the days come and the books will be opened in which are written the sins of all those who have sinned, and again also the treasures in which the righteousness of all those who have been

XXIV. 1. Behold! the days come. See xx. 1, note.

The books will be opened. Dan. vii. 10; Eth. En. xc. 20; Rev. xx. 12; 4 Ezra vi. 20. The books mentioned here contain only a record of the sins of sinners, as in Eth. En. xc. 20. This is probably the case also in Rev. xx. 12: "And books were opened." In the last passage the succeeding words have to do with the lot of the righteous: "And another book was opened which (is the book) of life." This book of life is mentioned also in Eth. En. xlvii. 3; cviii. 3. The books that are spoken of in Dan. vii. 10; 4 Ezra vi. 20, may be records both of the righteous and the wicked.

The treasures in which, etc. See xxi. 23, note. Divine "treasures" or "storehouses" are a familiar idea in the O.T. Thus we have treasures of rain (Deut. xxviii. 12), of snow and hail (Job xxxviii. 22), of wind (Jer. x. 13; li. 16; Ps. cxxxv. 7), of the sea (Ps. xxxiii. 7); see also Eth. En. lx. 11, 19, 20, 21; 4 Ezra vi. 40. Again the idea of laying up spiritual things in store is found in the LXX. Thus in Prov. i. 18 θησαυρίζουσιν ἑαυτοῖς κακά, and still more clearly in Pss. Sol. ix. 9 θησαυρίζει ζωὴν ἑαυτῷ παρὰ κυρίῳ. The last passage belongs to a time when heaven had come to be regarded as the true home and destination of the righteous. Naturally, when this was the belief of the faithful, their highest thoughts, aspirations, and efforts would be directed thither, and thus Ezra is assured: "Tibi thesaurus operum repositus apud Altissimum" (4 Ezra vii. 77), and the righteous are those qui fidem thesaurizaverunt (vi. 5); they would lay up treasures in heaven (Matt. vi. 19, 20). By a faithless life, on the other hand, men "treasured up for themselves wrath against the day of wrath" (Rom. ii. 5). Finally, the deeds of the righteous were regarded as gathered in "treasures," as in our text. The expression is found in another sense in xlv. 14. We should observe that אוצר and θησαυρός alike mean a treasure and the place where it is stored.

The righteousness of all, etc. As Dr. Sanday writes (Romans, p. 29): "For a Jew the whole sphere of righteousness was taken up by the Mosaic Law. His one idea of righteousness was that of conformity to this law. Righteousness was for him essentially obedience to the law." That these words are true of the conception of righteousness entertained by the writers of this book will be seen by a perusal of the note on xiv. 7. But naturally the conception of righteousness varied accordingly as it was used by the legalistic or the prophetic wing, if I may so speak, of Pharisaism. With the strict Legalists righteousness meant the fulfilment first and mainly of ceremonial observances, and secondly, but only in a very subordinate degree, of works of mercy. See, for instance, the Book of Jubilees. With the prophetic wing, from which emanated most of the Messianic Apocalypses, righteousness was taken in its large sense as the fulfilment of righteous in creation is gathered. 2. For it will come to pass at that time that thou shalt see—and many that are with thee—the long-suffering of the Most High, which has been throughout all generations, who has been long-suffering towards all those born that sin and are righteous.” 3. And I answered and said: “But, behold! O Lord, no one knows the number of those things which have passed nor yet of those things which are to come. 4. For I know indeed that which has befallen us, but what will happen to our enemies I know not, and when Thou wilt visit Thy works.”

moral duties and only in a very secondary degree of ceremonial. The Ethiopic and Slavonic Books of Enoch are illustrations of the latter statement. In some books it is hard to determine the pre-eminence of either tendency.

Who have been righteous. See note on xxi. 9.

2. I have already shown on p. 20 that xxiv. 2-4 probably followed originally on xx.

Thou shalt see—and many, etc. See note on xiii. 5.

Sin and are righteous. Both verbs depend on the same subject.

3, 4. In the preceding verse God had just assured Baruch that he and many with him should ultimately see the long-suffering of God. Baruch rejoins when that time of recompense will be no man knows (ver. 3), but there is one thing he knows well, i.e. the present calamities of Israel. Hence he wishes to know (a) what fate is in store for the Gentiles who inflicted these, and (b) when will it take effect. The answer to (a) is given in xiii. 3b-12. Just before xiii. 3b some statement such as “retribution will come upon your enemies who are now prospering,” has been lost. Then follows xiii. 3b-12, in which Baruch is told that a special rôle is assigned him in reference to the enemies of Israel. He is to be preserved till the end of the times to testify to these cities, when the threatened retribution has befallen them, the reason of such retribution, the thoroughness with which it will be carried out, and the time of its consummation. Then in xxv. comes the answer to Baruch’s second question: “When wilt Thou visit Thy works?” Baruch is to be preserved to play a part in this respect also (xxv. 1).

Befallen us. For  = “what has befallen me,” I have read  = “what has befallen us?” The same corruption of the suffix appears in this MS. in lxxviii. 3 over against the right text in nine MSS.

Visit Thy works. xx. 2, note. The reference here is to the final judgment.

XXV. And He answered and said unto me :
 "Thou too shalt be kept safely till that time till that sign which the Most High will work for the inhabitants of the earth in the end of days. 2. This therefore will be the sign. 3. When a stupor shall seize the inhabitants of the earth, and they shall fall into many tribulations, and again when they shall fall into great torments. 4. And it will come to pass when they will say in their thoughts by reason of their much tribulation : 'The Mighty One doth no longer remember the earth'—yea, it will come to pass when they abandon hope, that the time will then awake."

XXVI.=E.

XXVI. And I answered and said : "Will that tribulation which is to be continue a long time, and will that necessity embrace many years ?"

XXVII.-
 XXX. 1=A¹.

XXVII. And He answered and said unto me :

XXV. In this chapter we have an answer to Baruch's question :
 "When wilt Thou visit Thy works?"

XXV. 1. In xiii. 3b Baruch was to be preserved to testify against the Gentiles. He has also a further function : observe the "too."

Till that time till that sign which.
 The sign is the stupor that will come on the inhabitants of the earth.

The inhabitants of the earth.
 This phrase is always used in a bad ethical sense in Baruch. Cf. xxv.
 2 ; xlviii. 32, 40 ; liv. 1 ; lv. 2 ;
 lxx. 2, 10 ; generally in 4 Ezra ; cf.
 iii. 34, 35 ; iv. 39 ; v. 6 ; vi. 24 ;
 vii. 72 ; x. 59 ; xiii. 30 ; but in vi.
 18, 26 ; xi. 5, 32, 34 ; xii. 24, the sense of the phrase is merely geographical. For the various meanings of this phrase in the Eth. En. and Rev., see Eth. En. pp. 43, 111.

3, 4. When stupor and despair have seized the inhabitants of the earth, the time of the judgment has come.

3. Stupor. Cf. lxx. 2. This is rendered excessus mentis in 4 Ezra xiii. 30. For the diction, cf. Jer.
 viii. 21.

4. At the end of the tribulation and torments of the inhabitants of the earth the time of the judgment has come (cf. xiii. 8). This leaves no room for the Messianic kingdom in xxix., which precedes the judgment.

XXVI. This chapter is an addition of the final editor in order to introduce xxvii.-xxx. 1. xxv. was originally followed by xiv.-xix.

XXVII.-XXX. 1. We have here a fragment of a Messiah Apocalypse which for convenience of reference we designate A¹. Its (1) chief “Into twelve parts is that time divided, and each one of them is reserved for that which is appointed for it. 2. In the first part there will be the beginning of commotions. 3. And in the second part (there will be) slayings of the great ones. 4. And in the third part (there will be) the fall of many by death. 5. And in the fourth part the sending of desolation. 6.

characteristics, (2) its date, and (3) its points of divergence from B¹ and B² are as follows :—(1) After a terrible period of tribulation (i.e. the travel pains of the Messiah) (xxvii.-xxviii. 1) which should imperil the salvation even of the elect (xxviii. 3), and should prevail over all the earth (xxviii. 7-xxix. 1), a glorious kingdom, accompanied with every possible blessing, was to be established under the Messiah (xxix. 3-8), who after a reign of indefinite duration should return in glory into heaven (xxx. 1a). Thereupon the resurrection was to follow (xxx. 1b). The outlook is hopeful and thoroughly optimistic. (2) The later limit of composition is easy to determine. (a) Since the kingdom is to be established in Palestine, and only those Jews who are found there are to share in it, it is clear that there has been no dispersion of the Jews ; for had there been, as it was in the case of B¹, we should here be told of a return from exile. Hence this fragment was written before 70 A.D. (b) Again, since Palestine is the scene of the kingdom, Jerusalem must still be standing ; for in case it had fallen, we should here be told of its restoration, as in B¹, or of the setting up of the new Jerusalem, as in 4 Ezra xiii. 36. The Messianic kingdom could not be set up over the ruins of the holy city. Hence, again, we conclude that A¹ was written before 70 A.D. (3) Its points of divergence from B¹ and B² are obvious. In the latter, Jerusalem is destroyed and its people in exile ; whereas in A¹ Jerusalem is standing and the Jews are in their own land. Again, whereas the law is the centre of interest and expectation in B², and in a somewhat less degree in B¹ (see xv. 5, note), it is the Messiah that is such in A¹. Further, whereas there is not a single allusion to the Messiah in B¹ and B², there is not a single allusion to the law in A¹. This, indeed, may be partly due to the shortness of this fragment.

XXVII. 1. In A³, i.e. liii.-lxxiv. and 4 Ezra xiv. 11, 12, there are similar twelvefold divisions ; but in these it is the entire history of the world that is so divided, whereas in our text it is only the time of troubles preceding the advent of the Messiah. These troubles were popularly conceived as the travail pains of the Messiah הבלי המשיח. We find a list of such woes (ᾠδῶνες, Matt. xxiv. 8) in xlviii. 31-37 ; lxx. 2-10 ; Matt. xxiv. 6-29, with synoptic parallels ; 2 Tim. iii. 1 ; Jubilees xxiii. 13, 16-25 ; 4 Ezra v. 1-12 ; vi. 14-18, 20-24 ; Orac. Sibyl. iii. 796-807 ; see Weber, 336 ; Schürer, Div. II., vol. ii. 154-156. In the Gospels, however, these woes are to precede the second coming of Christ or the end of the world.

5. Cf. 4 Ezra v. 8 ; vi. 22. For desolation we might also render “the sword” ; cf. 5 Ezra xv. 5.

And in the fifth part famine and the withholding of rain. 7. And in the sixth part earthquakes and terrors. 8. [Wanting.] 9. And in the eighth part a multitude of portents and incursions of the Shedim. 10. And in the ninth part the fall of fire. 11. And in the tenth part rapine and much oppression. 12. And in the eleventh part wickedness and unchastity. 13. And in the twelfth part confusion from the mingling together of all those things aforesaid. 14. For these parts of that time are reserved, and will be mixed one with another and will minister one to another. 15. For some will of themselves be of service, and they will receive from others, and from themselves and others they will be perfected, so that those may not understand who are upon the earth in those days of this consummation of the times.

XXVIII. "Nevertheless, whosoever shall understand will then be wise. 2. For the measure and reckoning of that time are two parts weeks of seven weeks." 3. And I answered and said: "It is good for a man

6. Famine. As a sign of the end, cf. lxx. 8; Matt. xxiv. 7; Mark xiii. 8; Luke xxi. 11.

7. Earthquakes. Cf. lxx. 8; Matt. xxiv. 7; Mark xiii. 8; Luke xxi. 11.

9. Portents. Cf. 4 Ezra vi. 21: "Et anniculi infantes loquentur vocibus suis, et praegnantes immaturos parient infantes, etc." But owing to the next words it would perhaps be better to render  = ḥav-tarai as "spectres."

The Shedim. See x. 8, note.

10. The fall of fire. Cf. lxx. 8; 4 Ezra v. 8. If with the reviser of the MS. we delete the  before  we should render "the fire will fall."

15. These verses are obscure. They are possibly corrupt. For "of this . . . times" we can equally well render "that this is the consummation of the times."

XXVIII. 1. This verse recalls Dan. xii. 10: "the wise shall understand."

2. I cannot interpret this verse.

3. This verse expresses the difficulty of faithfulness in the times just described. Cf. 4 Ezra xiii. 16-20: "Vae qui derelicti fuerint in diebus illis, et multo plus vae his to come and behold, but it is better that he should not come lest he fall. 4. [But I will say this also. XXVIII. 4-5 = E. 5. 'Will he who is incorruptible despise those things which are corruptible, and whatever befalls in the case of those things which are corruptible, so that he might look only to those things which are not corruptible?'] 6. But if, O Lord, those things shall assuredly come to pass which Thou hast foretold to me; if, moreover, I have found grace in Thy sight, show this also unto me. 7. Is it in one place or in one of the parts of the earth that those things are to come to pass, or will the whole earth experience (them)?"

XXIX. And He answered and said unto me: "Whatever will then befall will belong to the whole earth; therefore all who live will experience (them). 2. For at that time I will protect only those who are found in those self-same days in this land. 3. And it qui non sunt derelicti! Qui enim non sunt derelicti, tristes erunt, intelligentes quae sunt reposita in novissimis diebus et non occurrentes eis . . . adtamen facilius est periclitantem venire in haec quam pertransire . . . et non videre quae contingent in novissimo." Only the righteous, the fittest survive. Cf. xli. 1; lxxv. 5; 4 Ezra vii. 46, 47; Matt. xxiv. 22; Mark xiii. 21. This verse looks forward to the blessings described in xxix. 4-8.

4, 5. I have bracketed these verses as an interpolation of the final editor. They break the connection of thought. Further, no account is taken of them either by Baruch to whom they are assigned, or by God to whom they are addressed. They are unreasonable and out of place in the presence of the sensuous picture of Messianic bliss which meets us in the next chapter. The real answer to Baruch's question here can be gathered from xliii. 2.

6. If I have found grace, etc. A familiar O.T. phrase (Gen. vi. 8; xix. 19, etc.; 4 Ezra v. 56; vii. 102; viii. 42; xii. 7).

XXIX. 2. I will protect, etc. Here God protects His people who are found in the Holy Land, whereas in A² it is the Messiah (xl. 2) in A³ the Holy Land itself (lxxi. 1). In B² it is the law that protects the faithful, irrespective of their place of habitation (xxxii. 1; cf. 6 Ezra vii. 122).

Found . . . in this land. Cf. xl. 2; lxxi. 1; 4 Ezra xiii. 48, 49. A special blessing attached to residence in Palestine. It alone was to escape the woes that should befall will come to pass when all is accomplished that was to come to pass in those parts, that the Messiah will then all the earth besides. But this thought is found only in the sections of this book written prior to 70 A.D. Such ideas as to the sacrosanct and inviolable character of Palestine seem to have disappeared for a time from Jewish speculation with the desecration and destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, unless where the Messiah was expected. Hence in B² it is the law that protects the faithful (xxxii. 1), and in 4 Ezra vii. 122 it is the glory of God; and this protection avails them irrespective of their place of dwelling. The special privileges attaching to the Holy Land reappear in the Talmud, but in another form. Thus three will inherit the world to come: he who dwells in the land of Israel, he who brings up his sons to the study of the law, and he who repeats the ritual blessing over the appointed cup of wine at the close of the Sabbath (Pesachim, fol. 113a). Again the merits of the fathers will not avail a man who leaves the land of Israel for an outside land (Baba bathra, fol. 91a). Further, those who died in the Holy Land should rise first in the resurrection (Weber, pp. 64, 352); hence it is called "the land of the living" (Beresh. rab. 74); if the righteous died in any other land their bodies would have to roll (תהולות) through underground passages (תהלות) till they came to Palestine before they could be raised (Weber, 352; Eisenmenger, ii. 920, 921). It was for this reason that Jacob and Joseph (Eisenmenger, ii. 925) and the Rabbis, who were specially honoured (Weber, 64), were buried in Canaan. Nay more, residents in the land of Israel could procure the resurrection of their relatives who died among the Gentiles (Eisenmenger, ii. 900). That the righteous who were buried outside the limits of Palestine should rise is also stated (Weber, 352).

3. The rôle here assigned to the Messiah is a passive one like that in Eth. En. xc. 37, 38; 4 Ezra vii. 28, 29. In this respect it differs from that represented in A² and A³, i.e. xxxvi.-xl.; lii.-lxxiv.; and in Eth. En. xxxvii.-lxx.; Pss. Sol. xvii., xviii.; 4 Ezra xii. 32-34; xiii. 32-50, where the Messiah fights either with spiritual or material weapons on behalf of Israel, destroys its enemies, and sets up the Messianic kingdom.

The Messiah will then begin to be revealed. The phrase "begin to be revealed" seems corrupt. We should perhaps have "the principate of the Messiah will be revealed," as in xxxix. 7. We can get this by reading instead of

Cf. xli. 3. Or by simply reading

"Messiah the prince will be revealed." In this case the phraseology might be due to Dan. ix. 25. From a comparison of this verse and xxx. 1 the Messiah appears to be in heaven and is to be revealed from thence; but in other passages the implication of such language as "will be revealed" is merely that the Messiah may be already on earth and yet be unknown.

This emergence of the Messiah from concealment was a current view. Thus we find it in 4 Ezra vii. 28; xiii. 32; also in John vii. 27: "When the Christ cometh, no man knoweth whence he is." This concealment of the Messiah is mentioned also in Targum Jon. on Zech-begin to be revealed. 4. And Behemoth will be revealed from his place, and Leviathan will ascend from ariah iii. 8; vi. 12. In the Targum on Micah iv. 8 it is said to be due to the sins of the people. From Justin's Dial. c. Tryph. 8, it appears that though the Messiah may be already born, yet He may be unknown, and not even know His own calling till Elijah anoints and reveals Him. Χριστὸς δέ, εἰ καὶ γεγένηται καὶ ἔστι πῶ, ἀγνωστὸς ἔστι καὶ οὐδὲ αὐτὸς πῶ ἐάντων ἐπίσταται οὐδὲ ἔχει δύναμιν τινα, μέχρις ἂν ἔλθῶν Ἡλίας χρίσῃ αὐτὸν καὶ φάνερον πᾶσι ποιήσῃ. Cf. also c. 110.

According to the Talmud, the Messiah was born at Bethlehem on the day of the destruction of the temple, was named Menahem, and afterwards suddenly carried away by a storm (Hieros. Berachoth, p. 5). His temporary abode, according to later writers, was to be Rome (Sanhedrin, 98a). On this subject see Lightfoot's Horae on Matt. ii. 1; Oehler's Messias in Herzog's R.E. ix. 668; Drummond, The Jewish Messiah, 293, 294; Schürer's N.T. Times, Div. II., vol. ii. 163, 164; Weber, 342, 343; Wünsche, Die Leiden des Messias, 57-59.

4. And Behemoth will be revealed, etc. The full form of this myth is given in 4 Ezra vi. 49-52: "Et tunc conservasti duo animalia, nomen uni vocasti Behemoth et nomen secundi vocasti Leviathan, Et separasti ea ab alterutro, non enim poterat septima pars ubi erat aqua congregata capere ea. Et dedisti Behemoth unam partem quae siccata est tertio die, ut inhabitet in ea, ubi sunt montes mille; Leviathan autem dedisti septimam partem humidam: et servasti ea ut fiant in devorationem quibus vis et quando vis." From a comparison of verse 4 with the verses just cited, it is clear that the words "from his place" and "from the sea" imply the account in these verses of Ezra. This is confirmed by the fact that not only is the thought the same, but also almost word for word the diction in the Syriac Versions of the two clauses: "Servasti ea ut fiant in devorationem" (4 Ezra vi. 52) and "kept them until that time and then they will be for food." Thus so far 4 Ezra would seem to be the source of our text. But if in these respects Baruch presupposes 4 Ezra, 4 Ezra in turn presupposes Baruch in the clauses: "Quibus vis et quando vis" (4 Ezra vi. 52) over against "for all that are left" in verse 4—the words "those who are left" being a technical phrase to express those who should survive to participate in the Messianic kingdom. We are thus led to assume that a short hexaameron, closely resembling that found in 4 Ezra vi. 38-54, existed at one time independently, and that the writers of Ezra vi. 30-vii. 25 and Bar. xxvii.-xxx. laid it under contribution for their own purposes. (For a probable additional fragment of this hexaameron, see xv. 7, note.) This assumption gains confirmation from the facts (1) that this hexaameron cannot originally have proceeded from the writer of the Salathiel Apocalypse (i.e. the groundwork of 4 Ezra); for the latter looked for no Messianic kingdom, whereas the writer of this hexaameron did as is obvious from vi. 52 compared with xxix. 4 of our text; and (2) that whereas A¹ of Baruch was written prior to the fall of Jerusalem, the Salathiel Apocalypse was written subsequently to it.

4. Behemoth . . . and Leviathan. In addition to the references in the preceding note, see Eth. En. lx. 7-9, 24, notes; Targ. Jon. on Gen.

the sea, those two great monsters which I created on the fifth day of creation, and I kept them until that time; and then they will be for food for all that are left. 5. The earth also will yield its fruit ten thousand-fold, and on one vine there will be a thousand branches,

i. 21: "And God created great beasts Leviathan and his wife which were prepared for the day of consolation;" see also the Targum on Ps. 1. 10; Weber, 156, 195, 370, 384; Buxtorf, Lexicon Chald. rabb. Talmud, and Levy, Chaldäisches Wörterbuch und Neuhebräisches Wörterb. in loc.

All that are left. This is in fact "the remnant" that survives to share in the Messiah's kingdom. This remnant is frequently referred to in this sense (cf. xl. 2; 4 Ezra vi. 25; vii. 28; ix. 7; xii. 34; xiii. 48).

5. We have here another fragment of an old Apocalypse, of which we find a Latin version in Irenaeus, v. 33. This Apocalypse Papias, according to Irenaeus, assigned to our Lord. It is recounted in the fourth book of his Δογμῶν κυριακῶν ἐξηγήσεις. The passage in question is: "Venient dies, in quibus vineae nascentur, singulae decem millia palmitum habentes, et in uno palmite dena millia brachiorum, et in uno vero palmite dena millia flagellorum, et in unoquoque flagello dena millia botrum, et in unoquoque botro dena millia acinorum et unumquodque acinum expressum dabit vigintiquinque metretas vini. Et quum eorum apprehenderit aliquis sanctorum botrum, alius clamabit: Botrus ego melior sum, me sume, per me Dominum benedic." Scholars have taken our text to be the original of this passage. That this is unlikely, and that both may be derived from the same original source, I will now proceed to show. In the first place, the passage in Irenaeus contains two additional sentences: "Dena millia brachiorum . . . palmitum," and "Et quum eorum . . . benedic." Hence a fuller text is presupposed than we have in Bar. xxix. 5. In the next place, immediately after the words just cited, the text in Irenaeus proceeds: "Similiter et granum tritici decem millia spicarum generaturum, et unamquamque spicam habituram decem millia granorum, et unumquodque granum quinque bilibres simulae clarae mundae." With these words compare the Eth. En. x. 19, where, in an account of Messianic bliss, we find "The vine that is planted thereon will yield wine in abundance, and of all the seed which is sown thereon will each measure bear ten thousand." From this we conclude that for a long time prior to Christianity there existed either in tradition or in writing a sensuous description of Messianic felicity. In this description not only the fruitfulness of the vine was dwelt upon, but also of all seeds and fruit-bearing trees. Of this description the largest survival is in Irenaeus, v. 33, preserved through the agency of Papias; the fragmentary survivals in the Eth. En. x. 19 (see above) and in our text form complimentary portions of this tradition.

Finally, the text presents a syncretistic appearance. In xxix. 4 one description of food—a flesh diet—is provided for the members of the Messianic kingdom; and in the next verse quite another—a vegetable diet; and in xxix. 8 a heavenly food, i.e. manna. The second is a more ancient view than the first and and each branch will produce a thousand clusters, and each cluster will produce a thousand grapes, and each grape will produce a cor of wine. 6. And those who have hungered will rejoice: moreover, also, they will behold marvels every day. 7. For winds will go forth from before Me to bring every morning the fragrance of aromatic fruits, and at the close of the day clouds distilling the dew of health. 8. And it will come to pass at that self-same time that the treasury of manna will again descend from on high, and they will eat of it in those years, because these are they who have come to the consummation of time.

the most reasonable, being a return to the food of Adam in Paradise.

As to the origin of the 10,000-fold yield of the corn and wine, etc., Mr. Rendel Harris (Expositor, 1895, pp. 448, 449) offers a most ingenious and probable suggestion. He derives it from the blessing of Isaac (Gen. xxvii. 28), where he conjectures that in the statement רב הין ותירש = "plenty of corn and wine," the word רב was taken as רבו = 10,000. He points out that the context in Irenaeus (see above), in which the story of Papias and the elders is given, supports his contention; for that it follows a discussion of the blessing in question.

Each branch . . . each cluster . . . each grape. Instead of "each" the Syriac in all three cases gives "one." But the sense requires "each," and in the Latin Version of this passage preserved in Irenaeus (see above) "each" is found in the three phrases, i.e. "unoquoque flagello, unoquoque botro, unoquoque acinum." The explanation is not far to seek. The Hebrew אחר which = εἰς, one, occasionally also = ἕκαστος, each. The former meaning was wrongly followed by the Greek translator. Hence the wrong turn in the Syriac.

A cor. This represents κόρος which in turn is a translation of כּר or חֶקֶר. The cor was equal to about 120 gallons. Cf. Joseph. Ant. xv. 9, 2 ὁ δὲ κόρος δύνатаι μεδύμους ἄπτικους δέκα.

6. Rejoice. This is a characteristic of the members of the kingdom. Cf. 4 Ezra vii. 28; xii. 34.

Behold marvels. The belief that the Messiah would signalise His advent by marvels was general. Cf. 4 Ezra vii. 27; xiii. 50; Matt. xi. 4-6; Luke vii. 22, 23; John vii. 31.

8. The treasury of manna will again descend, etc. In Ps. lxxviii. 25 manna is called angels' food. In Or. Sibyl. vii. 149 it is to be the food of the members of the Messianic kingdom Μάννην τὴν δροσερὴν λευκοῖσιν ὁδοῦσι φάγονται, and in Rev. ii. 17 the idea is spiritualised: the faithful are to receive "hidden manna."

These are they, etc. These are "the remnant" of verse 4.

Consummation of time. This

XXX. 2-
XXXV. = B².

XXX. "And it will come to pass after these things, when the time of the advent of the Messiah is fulfilled, and He will return in glory, then all who have fallen asleep in hope of Him shall rise again. 2. And it will come to pass at that time that the treasures will be opened in which is preserved the number of the souls of the righteous, and they will come forth, and a multitude of souls will be seen together in one assemblage of one thought, and the first will rejoice and the last will not be grieved. 3.

phrase is found in xxvii. 15. The Messianic age forms the "consummation of the time or times" = ἡ συντελεία τοῦ αἰῶνος or τῶν αἰώνων. We should observe that this phrase has a different meaning in xxx. 3; but there we have the work of B².

XXX. 1. When the time of the advent of the Messiah is fulfilled, etc. This can have only one meaning, and this is that, at the close of His reign, the Messiah will return in glory to heaven. The word translated "advent" is אָדָמְתָא which in turn was an ordinary rendering of παρουσία. Now παρουσία can mean not only "coming" or "advent," but also "presence" (cf. 2 Cor. x. 10; 2 Macc. xv. 21, and probably 2 Cor. vii. 6, 7; 2 Thess. ii. 9). Hence we should render: "When the time of the presence of the Messiah is fulfilled."

Return in glory. These words imply that the Messiah pre-existed in heaven before His advent. He returns whither He had come. This is also the teaching of Eth. En. xlvi. 1, 2; xlviii. 3 (see note); lxii. 7; 4 Ezra xii. 32; xiii. 26 (?); xiv. 9. This seems also to be the legitimate interpretation of Pss. Sol. xviii. 6 εἰς ἡμέραν ἐκλογῆς ἐν ἀνάξει χριστοῦ αὐτοῦ. In 4 Ezra vii. 29, 30, the Messiah and the righteous die at the close of the Messianic kingdom.

Then all who have fallen asleep in hope of Him shall rise again. The resurrection follows immediately on the return of the Messiah into heaven; on his death in 4 Ezra vii. 29, 30. The words "of him" cannot be original. The text was probably "those who have fallen asleep in hope." Cf. LXX. of Ps. xvi. 9 ἡ σὰρξ μου κατασκηνώσει ἐπ' ἐλπίδι. The corruption could have arisen easily in the Syriac by a change of אָדָמְתָא into אָדָמְתָא.

Fallen asleep. Cf. xi. 4, note. As A¹ is fragmentary, we are not told what befalls the living righteous. In the following verses of B² only the destinies of souls are dealt with. The complementary half of this doctrine is given in l, li.

2. With this verse we return to B², resuming the text that ended with xxiv. 1. We have here an account of the general resurrection (cf. xlii. 8; l. 2).

Treasures. See xxi. 23, note; xxiv. 1, note.

For he knows that the time has come of which it is said, that it is the consummation of the times. 4. But the souls of the wicked, when they behold all those things, shall then waste away the more. 5. For they will know that their torment has come and their perdition has arrived."

XXXI. And it came to pass after these things that I went to the people and said unto them: "Assemble unto me all your elders and I will speak

3. The consummation of the times. This phrase means here the final judgment; in A¹ it means the Messianic age (cf. xxvii. 15; xxix. 8).

4. Waste away. Cf. li. 5; 4 Ezra vii. 87.

5. This verse does not mean that the wicked souls have not hitherto suffered, but that their suffering hitherto is as nothing compared to the torments they shall now endure. Similarly, the righteous have in the treasures of souls had rest and peace, but they too (cf. ver. 3) know that their real blessedness has now come. See xxxvi. 10.

XXXI.-XXXV. Baruch assembles and addresses the elders of the people (xxx. 1-3); he exhorts them not to forget the anguish of Zion (xxx. 4), and announces the coming end of all that is corruptible (xxx. 5); and, in case they observe the law, their safety amid the convulsions which will accompany the renewal of the entire creation (xxx. 1); they are not to grieve so much for the past as for the coming time; for then the strife and stress will exceed all that has been before when God renews creation (xxx. 1, 5, 6). Thereupon, when Baruch seeks to dismiss the people (xxx. 7), they remonstrate against his forsaking them (xxx. 8-xxxiii.) Baruch rejoins that he is not forsaking them, but only going to the Holy Place to get light from God (xxxiv.) He then proceeds thither and laments over Zion (xxxv.) A fast of seven days should follow here.

The subject on which Baruch addresses the people is to be found in each instance in the previous divine revelation (see v. 5; x. 4); but it will be observed that this address (xxx. 3-xxxii. 6) is wholly out of relation to all that has gone before. There is therefore something wrong. The gist of this address is: (a) The end of all things corruptible is at hand; (b) if ye prepare your hearts to obey the law ye will then be safe in this time of crisis; (c) for the entire creation must be shaken, and give place to a new and incorruptible creation. Now these questions are discussed later in the dialogues between God and Baruch. Thus, for (a), see xlii. 6-8; for (b), see xlviii. 22-24, 38-41; for (c), see xlviii. 49; lii. 3, 8-9, 16. We therefore hold that xxxi.-xxxv. was read after lii. originally. Finally, xlv. 8-15 really forms the conclusion of Baruch's address in xxxi., xxxii.; it should be read immediately after xxxii. 6 (see p. 69).

XXXI. 1. All your elders. See xlv. 1, note.

words unto them." 2. And they all assembled in the valley of the Cedron. 3. And I answered and said unto them: "Hear, O Israel, and I will speak to thee, and give ear, O seed of Jacob, and I will instruct thee. 4. Forget not Zion, but hold in remembrance the anguish of Jerusalem. 5. For lo! the days come, when everything that exists will become the prey of corruption and be as though it had not been.

XXXII. "But ye, if ye prepare your hearts, so as to sow in them the fruits of the law, it will protect you in that time in which the Mighty One is to shake the whole creation. [2. Because after a little time the building of Zion will be shaken in order that it

XXXII. 2-4 =
E.

2. Cedron. See v. 5, note.

3. Hear, O Israel . . . and give ear, O seed of Jacob. Cf. xvii. 4; Jobi. 4; 4 Ezra ix. 30. For the combination "hear . . . and give ear," see Isa. i. 2.

5. Will become the prey of. Literally = "will be taken to corruption." See xxi. 19, note.

XXXII. 1. Prepare your hearts. An O.T. phrase (cf. 1 Sam. vii. 3; Jobi. xi. 13; Ps. lxxviii. 8). It is a favourite expression in B¹ and B² of this book; cf. xlvi. 5; lii. 7; lxxxiii. 8; lxxxv. 9, 11.

The fruits of the law. Cf. 4 Ezra iii. 20; ix. 32; see note on xv. 5.

It will protect. See xxix. 2, note. These words point back to xlviii. 22-24; cf. xlv. 13, 14; xlviii. 38-41.

Shake the whole creation. I.e. with a view to a new heavens and a new earth (see ver. 6). The thought comes originally from Haggai ii. 6; cf. Heb. xii. 26.

2-4. I have bracketed these verses as an interpolation; for in verse 2 it is announced that the temple will be destroyed after a little time; but, according to all B² as well as B¹, the temple has already been destroyed, and this is the presupposition of xxxi. 4. Again, verses 2-4 break the connection of thought in the text. Observe the awkwardness of "Because after a little time," etc., following on verse 1; and, on the other hand, how appropriately verse 5 follows on xxxi. 4-xxxii. 1. We should observe that there is nothing inconsistent in the idea of a heavenly Jerusalem being established on a new and incorruptible earth. Indeed, it is not impossible that iv. 2-7 originally followed xxxii. 6. We have a close parallel to xxxii. 2-4 in Beresh rab. 2, and Pesikta, 145a, where it is said that the temple was built in glory, destroyed, again rebuilt, but in mean fashion; finally, it should again be rebuilt in glory.

2. Zion will be shaken. I.e. in 588 by Nebuchadnezzar; but according to xxxi. 4; xxxii. 5; xxxiii. 2, 3; xxxv. 1, this is already in the past.

may again be built. 3. But that building will not remain, but will again after a time be rooted out, and will remain desolate until the time. 4. And afterwards it must be renewed in glory, and it will be perfected for evermore.] 5. Therefore we should not be distressed so much over the evil which has now come as over that which is still to be. 6. For there will be a greater trial than these two tribulations when the Mighty One will renew His creation. 7. And now do not draw near to me for a few days, nor seek me till I come to you." 8. And it came to pass when I had spoken to them all these words, that I, Baruch, went my way, and when the people saw me setting out, they lifted up their voice and lamented and said:

In order that it may again be built. I.e. by Ezra and Nehemiah.

3. Again . . . be rooted out. I.e. by the Romans in 70 A.D.

4. On the heavenly Jerusalem. See iv. 3, note.

5. We should . . . be distressed. I have here followed Bensly's emendation of 𐤁𐤏𐤁𐤏 into 𐤁𐤏𐤁𐤏𐤁𐤏.

Otherwise, we should render with Ceriani, "Non ergo debet nos constare hoc omne super malo quod supervenit," etc.

The evil which has now come. The fall of Jerusalem.

6. Two tribulations. I.e. those accompanying the destruction of Jerusalem and the renewal of creation. But the more natural rendering is: "For there will be a greater trial than the two tribulations when," etc. If we must accept this, the words "than the two tribulations" are an addition of E, and without them the text would run: "For the trial will be great when," etc.

Renew His creation. This signifies an incorruptible world which was to take the place of the corruptible (cf. xxxi. 5; xlv. 12; lvii. 2). It was a current expectation from the times of the captivity (cf. Isa. lxxv. 17; lxxvi. 22; Eth. En. xlv. 4, note; lxxii. 1; xci. 15, 16; 4 Ezra vii. 75; Matt. xix. 28; 2 Pet. iii. 13; Rev. xxi. 1). This announcement of Baruch is the presupposition of li, lii., and the truth correlative to the renewal and transformation of the righteous in li.

7. Do not draw near, etc. 4 Ezra v. 19. This verse was preceded originally by xlv. 8-15 (see p. 69).

For a few days. These words refer to the interval in which the next fast of seven days should take place. The mention of this fast at the beginning or close of xxxv. has through some accident been omitted (see v. 7, note; ix. 2, note).

9. "Whither departest thou from us, Baruch, and forsakest us as a father who forsakes his orphan children, and departs from them?"

XXXIII. "Are these the commands which thy companion, Jeremiah the prophet, commanded thee, and said unto thee: 2. 'Look to this people till I go and confirm the rest of the brethren in Babylon, against whom has gone forth the sentence that they should be led into captivity?' 3. And now if thou also forsakest us, it were good for us all to die before thee, and then that thou shouldst withdraw from us."

XXXIV. And I answered and said unto the people: "Far be it from me to forsake you or to withdraw from you, but I will only go unto the Holy of Holies to enquire of the Mighty One concerning you and concerning Zion, if in some respect I should receive more illumination: and after these things I will return to you."

XXXV. And I, Baruch, went to the holy place, and sat down upon the ruins and wept, and said: 2. "Become ye springs, O mine eyes, and ye, mine eyelids, a fount of tears. 3. For how shall I lament

9. Cf. 4 Ezra v. 18.

XXXIII. 1, 2. See x. 2, note, where I have shown that, according to B¹, Jeremiah does not seem to have gone to Babylon.

3. For another form of the same thought, cf. 4 Ezra xii. 44.

XXXIV. Far be it from me to forsake you. Cf. 4 Ezra xii. 48: "Si ergo tu nos dereliqueris, quanto erit nobis melius, si essemus succensi et nos in incendio Sion."

Holy of Holies. This is practically the same place as is mentioned in x. 5; in xxxv. 1 it is simply called the holy place. It is where the altar stood. See xxxv. 4.

XXXV. 1. The holy place, and sat down upon the ruins. See preceding note, and x. 5, note.

2. From Jer. ix. 1; cf. Eth. En. xcv. 1.

for Zion, and how shall I mourn for Jerusalem? 4. Because in that place where I am now prostrate, the high priest of old used to offer holy sacrifices, and to place thereon the smoke of the incense of fragrant odours. 5. But now our glorying has been made into dust, and the desire of our soul into sand."

XXXVI. And when I had said these things I fell XXXVI.-XL.
=A².

THE SIXTH SECTION

XXXVI.-XLVI. This in reality forms the sixth part of this book. For the symmetry of the book as constructed by the final editor requires, as we have already shown (see v. 7, note, introduction to the fifth section, p. 36, and xxxii. 7, note), the insertion of a seven days' fast after xxxv., or possibly even before it. The omission of this fast may have been an original oversight of the editor, or may have been due to a careless copyist. The structure of this part is as follows:—First, the omitted fast, then a Messiah vision and its interpretation (xxxvi.-xl.), with further disclosures regarding apostates and proselytes (xli. 2-xlii. 8), and the announcement of Baruch's coming death (xliii.) Finally, Baruch's address to the people (xliv.-xlvi.)

This section is of very composite origin. Thus xxxvi.-xl. is a Messiah Apocalypse written prior to 70 A.D.; xliii.-xliv. 8; xlv.-xlvi. 6 belongs to B¹; the rest of the section mainly to B².

XXXVI.-XL. We have here the second Messiah Apocalypse A². (a) Date of A² and its Relation to B¹ and B². A² is quite distinct in its world-view and date from B¹ and B². We shall first establish the difference of date. Now whereas we have seen that B¹ and B² were written subsequent to the fall of Jerusalem, it is clear that A² was written prior to that event. For whereas, in a short historical outline from the rise of Babylon to the reign of the Messiah (xxxix. 2-xl. 2), the first destruction of Jerusalem is mentioned (xxxix. 3), there is not even a hint given as to its destruction by Rome, although the Roman oppression of Palestine is clearly indicated (xxxix. 5, 6). Again the Messiah makes Zion His capital (xl. 1). If it were in ruins, its restoration would of necessity be mentioned. Finally, as there is no allusion in A² to the second destruction of Jerusalem, so there is none to the subsequent dispersion after that event, and none to a return of the exiles. Consequently, as we find, the remnant of Israel is still in Palestine (xl. 2). It is wholly otherwise in B¹ and B².

As regards their difference of world-view, it will be sufficient here to remark that whereas there is no Messiah in B¹ and B², the Messiah is the centre of expectation and the stay of Israel in A². And whereas B² is pessimistic as regards this world, A² is optimistic. And whereas in B², and in a less degree in B¹, the law is the centre and the end of life, in A² this place is occupied by the Messiah.

(b) Relation of A² to A¹. The two writings come from different authors. In A¹ the Messiah has only a passive rôle assigned to Him; He does not appear till the enemies asleep there, and I saw a vision in the night. 2. And lo! a forest of trees planted on the plain, and lofty mountains surrounded it and precipitous rocks, and that forest occupied much space. 3. And lo! over against it arose a vine, and from under it there went forth a fountain peacefully. 4. Now that fountain came to the forest and was (stirred) into great waves, and those waves submerged that forest, and suddenly they rooted out the multitude of (the trees) of that forest, and overthrew all the mountains which were round about it. 5. And the height of the forest began to be made low, and the top of the mountains was made low, and that fountain prevailed greatly, so that it left nothing of that great forest save one cedar only. 6. Also when it had cast it down and had destroyed and rooted out the multitude of (the trees of) that forest, so that nothing was left of it, nor could its place be recognised, then that vine began to come with the fountain in peace and great tranquillity, and it came to a place which was not far from the cedar, and they brought the cedar which had been cast down to it. 7. And I beheld and lo! that vine opened its mouth and spake and said to that cedar: "Art thou not that cedar which was left of the forest of wickedness, and by whose means wickedness persisted, and was wrought all those years, and goodness never. 8.

of Israel are destroyed. In A², on the other hand, the destruction of the wicked and the vindication of Israel is the sole work of the Messiah.

XXXVI. 1. It will be remarked that these visions are only found in A² and A³. Elsewhere we have direct revelations.

I fell asleep. Cf. lii. 8.

And thou didst keep conquering that which was not thine, and to that which was thine thou didst never show compassion, and thou didst keep extending thy power over those who were far from thee, and those who drew nigh thee thou didst hold fast in the toils of thy wickedness, and thou didst uplift thyself always as one that could not be rooted out! 9. But now thy time has sped and thy hour is come. 10. Do thou also therefore depart, O cedar, after the forest, which departed before thee, and become dust with it, and let your ashes be mingled together. 11. And now recline in anguish and rest in torment till thy last time come, in which thou wilt come again, and be tormented still more."

XXXVII. And after these things I saw that cedar burning, and the vine growing, itself and all around it, the plain full of unfading flowers. And I indeed awoke and arose.

XXXVIII. And I prayed and said: "O LORD, my Lord, Thou dost always enlighten those who are led by understanding. 2. Thy law is life, and Thy

8. Rooted out. This phrase is constantly used in the Talmud with reference to the future fate of Rome. The word is רקע.

11. In anguish, etc. See xxx. 5, where as here the intermediate state is one involving certain degrees of happiness or pain.

XXXVII. Unfading flowers. Cf. Apoc. Pet. τὴν γῆν αὐτὴν ἀνθοῦσαν ἀμαράντοις ἀνθεσι.

XXXVIII. 1. O LORD, my Lord. See note on iii. 1. It is God Himself who interprets this vision for Baruch, but Ramiel who does so in A³ (see lv. 3).

2. Thy law is life. Cf. xlv. 2; Ecclus. xlv. 5 νόμον ζωῆς καὶ ἐπιστήμης (also xvii. 11). With this sentiment cf. Hillel's words (Aboth. ii. 7): "The more law the more life . . . he who gains a knowledge of the law gains life in the world to come." As correlative expressions might be cited (John vii. 49), "This people, which knoweth not the law, is accursed," and Hillel's saying: "An unlearned man cannot be wisdom is right guidance. 3. Make known to me therefore the interpretation of this vision. 4. For Thou knowest that my soul hath always walked in Thy law, and from my (earliest) days I departed not from Thy wisdom."

XXXIX. And He answered and said unto me: "This is the interpretation of the vision which thou hast seen. 2. As thou hast seen a great forest which lofty and precipitous mountains surrounded, this is the world. 3. Behold! the days come, and this kingdom will be destroyed which once destroyed Zion, and it will be subjected to that which comes after it. 4. Moreover, that also again after a time will be destroyed, and another, a third, will arise, and that also will have dominion for its time, and will be destroyed. 5. And after these things a fourth kingdom will arise, whose power will be harsh and evil far beyond those which were before it, and it will rule many times as the forests on the plain, and it will hold fast the times, and will pious" (לא עם הארץ חסיד). He was even excluded from the resurrection (see Weber, 42-44). The words in the text, however, are far from being as strong as these statements. So we infer from the parallel, "Thy wisdom, etc."

Thy wisdom is right guidance. This is based upon the Massoretic text of Ecclesiastes x. 10, where the Versions take directions of their own. Thus the Heb. is יתרון הבשר, הבנה. The LXX. καὶ περισσολα τοῦ ἀνδρείου σοφία, and the Syr. = "et sapientia sollertibus emolumentum."

4. From my (earliest) days. This is the Hebrew idiom כִּי־יָמַי.

Cf. 1 Kings i. 6; 1 Sam. xxv. 28.

XXXIX. 3-5. Of the four world empires here mentioned there can be no doubt as to the first and fourth. The first is of course the Babylonian, for it is that which effected the first destruction of Jerusalem in 588 (see ver. 3). The fourth (in verses 5-7; cf. xxxvi. 5-10) is just as clearly Rome. The second and third empires are probably the Persian and the Græco-Egyptian and Syrian. The fourfold division of world empires in the text is due no doubt to Dan. vii. On these four empires, see Tanchuma, Terumah, 7.

exalt itself more than the cedars of Lebanon. 6. And by it the truth will be hidden, and all those who are polluted with iniquity will flee to it, as evil beasts flee and creep into the forest. 7. And it will come to pass when the time of his consummation that he should fall has approached, then the principate of My Messiah will be revealed, which is like the fountain and the vine, and when it is revealed it will root out the multitude of his host. 8. And that which thou hast seen, the lofty cedar, which was left of that forest, and with regard to this fact, that the vine spoke those words with it which thou didst hear, this is the word.

XL. "The last leader of that time will be left alive, when the multitude of his hosts will be put to the sword and be bound, and they will take him up to Mount Zion, and My Messiah will convict him of all his impieties, and will gather and set before him all the works of his hosts. 2. And afterwards he will put

6. The truth will be hidden. Cf. 4 Ezra v. 1, where, in connection with Rome, the same statement is made: "abscondetur veritatis via."

7. The principate of My Messiah, etc. See xxix. 3, note.

XL. 1. Who this last leader is we cannot determine; it may be any emperor or general from 70 A.D. back till Pompey's time. Since the personal wrong-doings of this leader are dwelt upon, it is possible that it is actually Pompey that is here referred to. The words "his impieties" = מַעֲשֵׂי אֲשֶׁר עָשָׂה, might favour this view (cf. Pss. Sol. ii. 24-35).

According to the Talmud, a single leader was to "unite in himself all hatred and hostility against God's people. He was to be called Armilus, and to be the אַרְמִילֵס קַט' ἐξοχήν." See Weber, 348, 349.

My Messiah. As we have already remarked (pp. 52, 61), the Messiah here plays an active part as compared to the Messiah in A¹, i.e. xxvii.-xxx. 1. The protection of the remnant of Israel and the destruction of their enemies, which are here the work of the Messiah, are there assigned to God Himself, and the Messiah does not appear till these tasks are completed (see xxix. 3).

Will convict . . . of . . . impieties. So 4 Ezra xii. 32; xiii. 37.

him to death, and protect the rest of My people which shall be found in the place which I have chosen. 3. And his principate will stand for ever, until the world of corruption is at an end, and until the times aforesaid are fulfilled. 4. This is thy vision, and this is its interpretation."

XXI.-XLII. =
B².

XXI. And I answered and said: "To whom will these things be, and how many (will they be)? or who will be worthy to live at that time? 2. For I will speak before Thee everything that I think, and I will ask of Thee regarding those things which I meditate. 3. For lo! I see many of Thy people who have withdrawn from Thy covenant, and cast from them the yoke of Thy law. 4. But others again I

2. Protect the rest, etc. See xxix. 2, note.

3. Until the world of corruption is at an end. The Messianic kingdom is only of temporary duration; it belongs to the olam hazze (see xxi. 19, note).

XXI., XLII. These two chapters appear to belong to B², and to have followed originally after xxx. The same world-view is presented as in B². Thus the times (xlii. 6) are hastened, as in xx., in order to usher in the end, when corruption will disappear and the life of incorruption set in through the resurrection (xlii. 7, 8).

The chief topics discussed in these chapters are two: First, the ultimate destiny of the apostates; and secondly, that of the proselytes.

Thus hitherto the portions of this book derived from B², and their original order, appear to have been ix. 2-xii. (?); xiii. 1-3a; xx. 2-4; xiii. 3b-12; xxv. 4; xiv.-xix.; xxi.-xxiv. 1; xxx. 2-5; xli.-xlii.

XXI. 1. Baruch's question goes back to xxx. 2-5, with which they originally stood in connection in B². For a similar question, cf. lxxv. 5.

To live. The life referred to here is the spiritual life subsequent to the resurrection (cf. xlix. 2; lxxvi. 5; 4 Ezra xiv. 22).

3. The apostates here dealt with may be Christians.

Yoke of Thy law. On the "law" see xv. 5, note. The term "yoke" as expressing "obligation" is common in Jewish writings (cf. Ecclus. li. 26), τὸν τράχηλον ὑμῶν ὑπόθετε ὑπὸ ζυγόν (Pss. Sol. vii. 8; xvii. 32; Acts xv. 10; Gal. v. 1). In later Judaism such expressions as "yoke of the law," "yoke of the precept," "yoke of the kingdom of heaven," are frequent. See Schöttgen, Hor. Hebr. i. 115-120. Contrast Matt. xi. 29, 30.

4. The proselytes, i.e. the גרים. Cf. 4 Ezra vii. 133: "Et miserator have seen who have forsaken their vanity, and fled for refuge beneath Thy wings. 5. What therefore will be to them? or how will the last time receive them? 6. Or perhaps the time of these will assuredly be weighed, and as the beam inclines will they be judged accordingly?"

XLII. And He answered and said unto me: "These things also I will show unto thee. 2. As for what thou didst say—'To whom will these things be, and how many (will they be)?'—to those who have believed there will be the good which was spoken of aforetime, and to those who despise there will be the contrary of these things. 3. And as for what thou didst say regarding those who have drawn near and those who have withdrawn, this is the word. 4. As for those who were before subject, and afterwards withdrew and mingled themselves with the seed of mingled peoples, in eo quod miseretur illis qui conversionem faciunt in lege ejus."

Their vanity. I.e. their idols (cf. Deut. xxxii. 21).

Fled for refuge beneath Thy wings. Exactly the sense of Ps. xxxvi. 8, בָּזַל כְּנֶפֶךְ יְחִסִּין; and of lvii. 1, where in both cases the LXX. renders חָסָה by ἐλπίζειν and the Syr. by two different words meaning "to hide." This tends to show that the writer used the Hebrew text independently. For other instances of the same metaphor, cf. Ps. xvii. 8; lxiii. 8; Deut. xxxii. 11.

But in our text the above phrase is technically used of proselytes גֵּרִים. This technical sense is derived from Ruth ii. 12, where, in reference to Ruth, it is said: "The God of Israel under whose wings thou art come to take refuge" (לְחֹסֶה תַּחַת-כְּנָפָיו).

In the Aboda (Sara, 13b, Shabbat, 31a, the proselyte is said to have come under the wings of the Shekinah; and in the Jer. Sanh. ii. 20c, it is stated that "Solomon loved many strange women in order to bring them under the wings of the Shekinah."

5. The last time. I.e. that described in xxx. 2-5.

XLII. 2. Those who believed. See liv. 5, note, also xxi. 9, on the doctrine of justification in Baruch.

4. The sense seems to be that the apostates have only this world.

Mingled peoples. This is a rendering of עֲרָבָה (cf. Jer. xxv. 20, 24). The Greek translation of it is found in Pss. Sol. xvii. 17 ἐθνῶν συμμικτρῶν.

the time of these is the former, and I am meditating deep things. 5. And as for those who before knew not but afterwards knew life, and mingled (only) with the seed of the people which had separated itself, the time of these (is) the former, I am meditating deep things. 6. And time will succeed to time and season to season, and one will receive from another, and then with a view to the consummation will everything be compared according to the measure of the times and the hours of the seasons. 7. For corruption will take those that belong to it, and life those that belong to it. 8. And the dust will be called, and there will be said to it: 'Give back that which is not thine, and raise up all that thou hast kept until its time.'

XLIII.-XLIV.  XLIII. "Moreover, do thou, Baruch, strengthen thy 7=B.¹

5. Of the people. The text  = "of the peoples" I have emended into , for it would be strange to speak of Israel as "the peoples" or "the nations."

Which had separated itself. I.e. the legalistic Israel by means of the "fence" of the law (cf. xlviii. 23). The "separatists" are the Pharisees, the פרושין.

The former. This seems corrupt, and probably, as Kabisch proposes, we should have "the latter." This would admit the proselytes to all the blessings of the world to come. On the treatment of "proselytes" in the Talmud, see Weber, 55, 73 f., 98, 107, 183, 254, 257 f., 282 f., 368 f.

6. This verse is obscure. Cf. 4 Ezra iv. 37.

7. Cf. xxxi. 5. See note on xxi. 19.

8. Give back, etc. Cf. 1. 2. The earth gives back the body; Sheol gives back the soul.

XLIII.-XLVI. Of these chapters xliii.-xlv. 7; xlv.-xlv. 6 belong to B¹. Not to B², for (1) in xliii. 2; xlv. 2, as in lxxviii. 5; lxxxiv. 1, Baruch is to die an ordinary death and go the way of all the earth and forget all the concerns of mortals, whereas in B² he is not to die an ordinary death, but to be taken up and preserved till the last day; he is not to forget human affairs, for he is in the last days to testify against the Gentile oppressors of Israel (xiii. 3, note; xxv. 1; xlviii. 30). (2) The people are assured of good tidings in store for them (xlv. 6) just as in lxxvii. 12; they are bidden to look for the consolation of Zion (i.e. its restoration), as we infer from lxxxi. 1, 4, taken together with i. 4; vi. 9, whereas in B² there is no consolation of any kind to be looked for in this world. (3) In heart for that which has been said to thee, and understand those things which have been shown to thee; for there are many eternal consolations for thee.

2. For thou wilt depart from this place, and thou wilt pass from the regions which are now seen by thee, and thou wilt forget whatever is corruptible, and wilt not again recall those things which happen among mortals.

3. Go therefore and command thy people, and come to this place, and afterwards fast seven days, and then I will come to thee and speak with thee."

XLIV. And I, Baruch, went from thence, and xliv. 7 and xlviii. 38 the same phrase, i.e. as to a "change of the times," is found; in the former with an optimistic, in the latter with a pessimistic reference. (4) xlv. 5 vividly recalls the scene depicted in vi.-viii. As all the intervening chapters deal with questions of the school, xliii.-xlvi. probably stood originally in close juxtaposition with vi.-viii.

The fragment xlv. 8-15 belongs to B², for just as in B² expectation is fixed not on an earthly felicity but only on the world to come (xliv. 15), the inheritance of the promised time (xliv. 13), the time that passeth not away (xliv. 11), the new world which turneth not to corruption those who enter it (xliv. 12), (2) the whole present world, the entire olam hazzeḥ is hopeless; it is defiled with evil (xliv. 9), and with its corruption it will pass away (xliv. 8). (3) In xlv. 9 the present world is to be committed to oblivion. This is in flat contradiction to iv. 1.

The original position of xlv. 8-15. This seems easy to determine. The main statements in this address of Baruch to the people really presuppose xlviii.-lii. as their background.

They express shortly some of the main conclusions of these chapters. It is not reasonable to suppose that Baruch makes known to the people the very truths which, according to the present order of the book, are revealed to him later by God. We have already seen that xxxi.-xxxv. were originally subsequent to xlviii.-lii. (see p. 57). Since therefore both these passages form the address or part of the address of Baruch that was based upon previous disclosures of God, it is obvious that xlv. 8-15 followed originally on xxxii. 6 and formed the natural sequel to the closing words of that verse.

XLIII. 1. These words have no reference to the preceding chapters. They refer probably to some lost passage of B¹.

2. Thou wilt depart. Both the context and the word "depart" point to an ordinary death here. See xlii. 3, note. The word rendered "depart" is šāḥ. It is found also in xiv. 19; xv. 1; xlv. 2.

Whatever is corruptible. Cf. xxi. 19, note.

3. Parts of this verse relating to the fast, etc., are probably due to the final editor. See xlvii. 1, note.

came to my people, and I called my first-born son and the Gedaliahs my friends, and seven of the elders of the people, and I said unto them: 2. "Behold, I go unto my fathers according to the way of all the earth. 3. But withdraw ye not from the way of the law, but guard and admonish the people which remain, lest they withdraw from the commandments of the Mighty One. 4. For ye see that he whom we serve is just, and our Creator is no respecter of persons. 5. And see ye what hath befallen Zion, and what hath happened to Jerusalem. 6. For the judgment of the Mighty One will (thereby) be made known, and His ways, which, though past finding out, are right. 7. For if ye endure and persevere in His fear, and do not forget His law, the times will change over you for good, and ye will see the consolation of Zion. 8. Because whatever is now

XLIV. 8-15=
B².

XLIV. 1. My first-born son.
Elsewhere mentioned only in xlvi. 1.

The Gedaliahs—possibly a corruption for Gedaliah. Cf. v. 1. Gedaliah is mentioned only in B¹.

Seven of the elders of the people.
In v. 5 Baruch assembled all the elders or honourable amongst the people. This is natural, as it is prior to the destruction of the city. That seven should be summoned now that the bulk of the population is carried into exile is equally fitting. We must bear in mind that in xxxii. 1 we have the work of a different author, else the writer might seem to have been guilty of an inconsistency.

2. Cf. iii. 2. See xiii. 3, note. The text is drawn from Gen. xv. 15 and Joshua xxiii. 14; 1 Kings ii. 2.

3. Way of the law. See xv. 5, note.

Commandments of the Mighty One. Cf. xlviii. 38; lxxxiv. 7.

4. No respecter of persons. Cf. xiii. 8.

5. These words as we have observed above (p. 69) vividly recall vi.-viii., and seem to show that these chapters followed much more closely on vi.-viii. than they do now.

6. Which, though . . . right. The text=which are past finding out and right.

7. The times will change over you for good. Contrast the use of this phrase in xlviii. 38.

The consolation of Zion. I.e. its restoration; cf. lxxxi. 1, 4; for the temple was to be rebuilt (i. 4; vi. 9) according to B¹. The announcement of this future in store for Zion is called good tidings in xlvi. 6; lxxvii. 12; lxxxi. 1.

is nothing, but that which will be is very great. 9. For everything that is corruptible will pass away, and everything that dies will depart, and all the present time will be forgotten, nor will there be any remembrance of the present time, which is defiled with evils. 10. For that which runs now runs unto vanity, and that which prospers will quickly fall and be humiliated. 11. For that which is to be will be the object of desire, and on that which will come afterwards do we place our hope; for it is a time that will not pass away. 12. And the hour comes which will abide for ever, and the new world which does not turn to corruption those who depart to its blessedness, and has no mercy on those who depart to torment, and will not

8-15. These verses should be read after xxxii. 6 (see p. 69).

8. In xxxii. 6 God has declared His purpose to renew creation; the reason is given here; for all things that now are are nothing.

9. Corruptible. Cf. xxi. 19, note; xxxi. 5.

All the present time will be forgotten. In iv. 1 this is denied, but iv. 1 is from B¹ (cf. Isa. lxv. 17).

11. A time that will not pass away. This is set over against xlvi. 50: "this world which passeth away."

12. The new world, etc., implied in the new creation (xxxii. 6). In li. 3 it is the world which dies not, nor ages those who come to it (lii. 9, 16).

Who depart to its blessedness.

The text here בְּחַיַּת אֲנִי = "who depart on its beginning" is corrupt. This clause should describe the destination of the righteous, as the antithetical clause in the next line, "those who depart to torment," describes that of the wicked. The error thus lies in the words "in its beginning." In the next place, we can reason back to what should stand here instead of these words. For the corresponding phrase in the other clause, i.e. "to torment," requires as its antithesis, not the meaningless "on its beginning," but "to blessedness." That is, over against "those who depart to torment," the sense needs "those who depart to blessedness." This conclusion as to the original text is confirmed by the fact that the erroneous text can be explained by the transposition of a single letter in the Hebrew original. Thus "in its beginning" = בְּרֵאשִׁית, but this arose from a false transcription of בְּאַשְׁרֵי, i.e. by wrongly transposing the ר. Now בְּאַשְׁרֵי = "to its blessedness," I have emended accordingly.

lead to perdition those who live in it. 13. For these are they who shall inherit that time which has been spoken of, and theirs is the inheritance of the promised time. 14. These are they who have acquired for themselves treasures of wisdom, and with them are found stores of understanding, and from mercy have they not withdrawn, and the truth of the law have they preserved. 15. For to them will be given the world to come, but the dwelling of the rest who are many will be in the fire.

XLV.-XLVI.
6=B¹.

XLV. "Do ye therefore so far as ye are able instruct the people, for that labour is ours. 2. For if ye teach them, ye will quicken them."

XLVI. And my son and the elders of the people answered and said unto me: "Has the Mighty One humiliated us to such a degree as to take thee from us quickly? 2. And truly we shall be in darkness, and there will be no light to the people who are left. 3. For where again shall we seek the law, or who will distinguish for us between death and life?" 4. And I said unto them: "The throne of the Mighty One I cannot resist: nevertheless, there shall not be wanting to Israel

13. The inheritance . . . time = "the world to come" in verse 15.

14. This verse presupposes li. 3, 7. The "treasures" here mentioned differ from those in xxiv. 1.

15. Those described in the preceding verse are to receive the world to come, just as those who are similarly described in li. 3 are to receive the world that dies not. On the contrast of this world and the world to come, see xv. 8, note.

In the fire. Cf. xlviii. 39, 43; lix. 2; lxiv. 7; lxxxv. 13.

XLV. B¹ reappears here. The connection with xlv. 7 is all that could be desired. There it is said, "If ye keep faithful to the law ye will see the consolation of Zion"; "do ye therefore . . . instruct the people . . . for if ye teach them ye will quicken them."

2. If ye teach, etc. Cf. xxxviii. 2; Ps. cxix. 50, 93. This is the work of the true scribe. Pharisaism teaches obedience to the law, God will do the rest (cf. xlv. 7).

XLVI. 2. For similar diction, cf. lxxvii. 14; 4 Ezra xiv. 20.

a wise man nor a son of the law to the race of Jacob. 5. But only prepare ye your hearts, that ye may hear the law, and be subject to those who in fear are wise and understanding; and prepare your soul that ye may not depart from them. 6. For if ye do these things, good tidings will come unto you, which I before told you of; nor will ye fall into the torment, of which I testified to you before."

[7. But with regard to the word that I was to be taken, I did not make (it) known to them or to my son.]

XLVI. 7 = E.

XLVII. And when I had gone forth and dismissed them, I went thence and said unto them: "Behold! I go to Hebron: for thither the Mighty One hath sent me."

XLVII.-LII. = B².

4. There shall not be wanting . . . a son of the law. This is really an answer to the question put in iii. 6. The expression "son of the law" seems to occur here first in existing literature. Its earliest occurrence elsewhere in the Talmud appears to be in Baba Mezia, 96a. See Levy, Neuhebräisches Wörterbuch, i. 258. The term בן מצוה was used in the Middle Ages as a designation of a full-grown Israelite. See Schürer, Div. II., vol. ii. 51 (note). For the parallelism Israel . . . Jacob, cf. xvii. 4; xxxi. 3.

5. Prepare ye your hearts. See xxxii. 1, note.

Obedience to the law and the Rabbis is here enforced.

6. Here the promise in xlv. 7 is enforced anew.

Good tidings. Cf. lxxvii. 12.

7. This verse is an addition of the final editor in order the better to adapt the fragment of B¹ just given to its new context. It belongs in spirit to B².

I was to be taken. Cf. xiii. 3, note; xlviii. 30. In lxxxv. 9 the phrase has a different meaning. נצח is a rendering of ἀναλαμβάνειν (also of μεταθέναι in Gen. v. 24). The former is the usual word in the sense of the text. The idea of the ascension into heaven of great heroes in Jewish history was a familiar one. Thus it is told of Elijah in the LXX. of 2 Kings ii. 11, καὶ ἀνελήμφθη . . . εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν: Ecclus. xlviii. 9, ὁ ἀναλημφθεὶς ἐν λαίλαπι πυρός: also in Eth. En. lxxxix. 52; xciii. 8; 1 Macc. ii. 58; of Enoch in Ecclus. xlv. 16; Eth. En. lxx. 1; lxxxvii. 3, 4; Slav. En. lxvii. 2; Jubilees, iv. 24; of Moses, Assumpt. Mos. x. 12; of Baruch, Apoc. Bar. xiii. 3; xxv. 1; xlv. 7; xlviii. 30; lxxvi. 2; of Ezra, 4 Ezra viii. 20; xiv. 49; of many unnamed heroes, 4 Ezra vi. 26. ἀναλαμβάνειν is well-known in the N.T. in this sense (cf. Mark xvi. 19; Acts i. 2, 11, 22; 1 Tim. iii. 16). The substantive ἀνάληψις is rare. Ryle and James (Pss. Sol.) take iv. 20 of those Pss. to be the first known instance of its use; see also Luke ix. 51, and Test. Levi xviii. In the last passage it is a late Christian interpolation.

2. And I came to that place where the word had been spoken to me, and I sat there, and fasted seven days.

PRAYER OF BARUCH

XLVIII. And it came to pass after the seventh day, that I prayed before the Mighty One and said :
 2. "O my Lord, Thou summonest the advent of the times, and they stand before Thee ; Thou causest the power of the ages to pass away, and they do not resist Thee ; Thou arrangeest the method of the seasons, and they obey Thee. 3. Thou alone knowest the goal of the generations, and Thou revealest not Thy mysteries to many. 4. Thou makest known the multitude of the fire, and Thou weighest the lightness of the wind.

THE SEVENTH SECTION

XLVII.-LXXXVII. First, we have Baruch's fast of seven days (xlvi. 2), followed by his prayer (xlviii. 2-24). Then in the dialogue that ensues various revelations are made to Baruch touching the coming woes and the judgment (xlvi. 26-41), and the resurrection (l.-lii.) On these revelations follows a Messiah Apocalypse (liii.-lxxiv. = A³). In lxxvi. Baruch is told of his approaching translation, and in lxxvii. he calls the people together and addresses them.

This section is composite : xlviii.-lii. being derived from B² ; liii.-lxxiv. from A³ ; lxxv., lxxvi. from B² ; and lxxvii. from B¹.

XLVII. 1. The purposeless journey to Hebron spoken of here must be derived from an original source. According to the scheme of the final editor it has no business here. Further, no such command has been given to Baruch in the existing text.

Hence this entire verse must be regarded as drawn from B¹ or B², and the next verse, which conflicts with it, as due to the final editor, as also xliii. 3. It is noteworthy, too, that the words "and dismissed them" must be corrupt ; for "and when I had gone forth and dismissed them, I went thence and said unto them" is absurd. Baruch goes forth from some place (here undefined) and dismisses the people ; then he departs thence and speaks to them. It is possible then that "when I had gone forth" refers to "the cavern in the earth" in xxi. 1. It will be remembered that of chapters xxi.-xlv., xxi.-xxiv. 1, xxx. 2-5, xli., xlii. belong to B². These form in some sense a whole, and the scene with which they are connected may be the "cavern" in xxi. 1. If this is so, xlvii. 1 belongs to B².

2. Cf. xliii. 3 ; v. 7, note ; ix., note ; xxi. 2, note.

XLVIII. 2. Method of the seasons. Cf. xiv. 1, note ; xx. 6.

5. Thou explorest the limit of the heights, and Thou scrutinisest the depths of the darkness. 6. Thou carest for the number which pass away that they may be preserved, and Thou preparest an abode for those that are to be. 7. Thou rememberest the beginning which Thou hast made, and the destruction that is to be Thou forgettest not. 8. With nods of fear and indignation Thou givest commandment to the flames, and they change into spirits, and with a word Thou quickenest that which was not, and with mighty power Thou holdest that which has not yet come. 9. Thou instructest created things in the understanding of Thee, and Thou makest wise the spheres so as to minister in their orders. 10. Armies innumerable stand before Thee and minister in their orders quietly at Thy nod. 11. Hear Thy servant and give ear to my petition. 12. For in a little time are we born, and in a little time do we return. 13. But with Thee hours are as a time, and days as generations. 14. Be not therefore wroth with man; for he is nothing, and take not account of our works. 15. For what are we? for lo! by Thy gift do we come

6. See xxiii. 4, note.

Thou carest . . . preserved. The text which here = "Thou commandest the number which passes away and it is preserved" is nonsense as it stands, but, if retranslated into Hebrew, it supplies us at once with the true text. Retranslated it = אתה פקד את המספר העובר וישקר. Here clearly the Greek translator followed the wrong meaning of פקד, and mistranslated the weak vav with the voluntative imperfect. The translation required by the context is given above.

8. With a word . . . which was not. Cf. xxi. 4, note; 4 Ezra iv. 37. Flames . . . spirits. Cf. Ps. civ. 4; Heb. i. 7.

9. The spheres . . . in their orders. Cf. Eth. En. ii. 1; Slav. En. xxx. 2, 3; Pss. Sol. xix. 2, 3.

10. Cf. Slav. En. xvii.; Test. Levi iii. In their orders. There were ten orders of angels according to the Jews; nine according to the Christians (see Slav. En. xx. 1, 3, note).

13. We should expect rather: "time is as a (few) hours, and generations as days."

into the world, and we depart not of our own will. 16. For we said not to our parents, 'Beget us,' nor did we send to Sheol and say, 'Receive us.' 17. What therefore is our strength that we should bear Thy wrath, or what are we that we should endure Thy judgment? 18. Protect us in Thy compassions, and in Thy mercy help us. 19. Behold the little ones that are subject unto Thee, and save all that draw nigh unto Thee, and destroy not the hope of our people, and cut not short the times of our aid. 20. For this is the nation which Thou hast chosen, and these are the people, to whom Thou findest no equal. 21. But I will speak now before Thee, and I will say as my heart thinketh. 22. In Thee do we trust, for lo! Thy law is with us, and we know that we shall not fall so far as we keep Thy statutes. 23. In this at least we are always blest that we have not mingled with the Gentiles. 24. For we are all named one people, who have received one law from One, and the law which is amongst us will aid us, and the surpassing wisdom which is in us will help us." 25.

15. Depart not, etc. In xiv. 11 men are said to "come not of their own will"; in 4 Ezra viii. 5 the two statements are combined.

16. Sheol. See xi. 6, note.

18. See lxxv. 6.

19. That are subject to Thee. Cf. xlii. 4.

All that draw nigh. Are these proselytes? (see xli. 4; xlii. 3).

20. Cf. xxi. 21; 4 Ezra v. 27.

The nation. So I have emended by reading |ΔΩΔ| for the unmeaning |ΔΩΔ|. This gives a good parallel to "people" (|ΔΩΔ|). Ceriani proposes |ΔΩΔ| = "servant."

21. Say as my heart thinketh. Cf. xli. 2.

22. See xv. 5, note.

23. Cf. xlii. 5.

24. One law from One. lxxxv. 14. This is directed polemically against the Christians.

The law . . . will aid us. Cf. xxix. 2, note; xxxii. 1; xv. 5, note; cf. De singularitate cler. 15 (Cyprian, Ed. Hartel. ii. 190), "sicut Esaias ait, legem inquit in adiutorium dedit."

And when I had prayed and said these things, I was greatly weakened. 26. And He answered and said unto me: "Thou hast prayed simply, O Baruch, and all thy words have been heard. 27. But My judgment exacts its own and My law exacts its rights. 28. For from thy words I will answer thee, and from thy prayer I will speak to thee. 29. For this is as follows: he that is corrupted is not at all; he has both wrought iniquity so far as he could do anything, and has not remembered My goodness, nor been grateful for My long-suffering. 30. Therefore thou shalt surely be taken up, as I before told thee: and the time is coming of which I told thee. 31. For that time will arise which brings affliction; for it will come and pass by with quick vehemence, and it will be turbulent coming in the heat of indignation. 32. And it will come to pass in those days that all the inhabitants of the earth will be moved one against another, because they know not that My judgment has drawn nigh. 33. For there will not be found many wise at that time, and the intelligent will be but a few: moreover, 25. I was greatly weakened. Cf. xxi. 26. The same phenomenon accompanies the visions in Dan. vii. 28; viii. 27; x. 8, 16.

27. Cf. v. 2; lxxxv. 9.

29. For this . . . is not at all. The text which is unintelligible runs:

וְהָיָה כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' אֶת-בְּרָכִי
וְיִשְׁמַע ה' אֶת-בְּרָכִי
וְיִשְׁמַע ה' אֶת-בְּרָכִי.

30. See xlvi. 7, note.

31-41. The last woes and the final judgment. Cf. xxvii.-xxix. 1; lxx. 2-10.

32. The inhabitants of the earth. See xxv. 1, note.

Will be moved one against another.

The text וְיִשְׁמַע ה' אֶת-בְּרָכִי = "will rest" is meaningless. It seems corrupted from וְיִשְׁמַע ה' אֶת-בְּרָכִי or וְיִשְׁמַע ה' אֶת-בְּרָכִי, either of which can be rendered as above.

33. Cf. lxx. 5. This verse seems to be the source of the following words which Cyprian (Testim. iii. 29) quotes as from Baruch: "erit enim sapientia in paucis vigilantibus et taciturnis."

even those who know will most of all be silent. 34. And there will be many rumours and tidings not a few, and the works of portents will be shown, and promises not a few will be recounted, (and) some of them (will prove) idle, and some of them will be confirmed. 35. And honour will be turned into shame, and strength humiliated into contempt, and probity destroyed, and beauty will become a scorn. 36. And many will say to many at that time: 'Where hath the multitude of intelligence hidden itself, and whither hath the multitude of wisdom removed itself?' 37. And whilst they are meditating these things, then zeal will arise in those of whom they thought not, and passion will seize him who is peaceful, and many will be roused in anger to injure many, and they will rouse up armies in order to shed blood, and in the end they will perish together with them. 38. And it will come to pass at the self-same time, that a change of times will manifestly appear to every man, by reason of which in all those times they were polluted and practised oppression, and walked every man in his own works, and remembered

34. Joseph, Ant. xx. 5. 1; 8. 6, tells of many impostors who so deceived the people (cf. Matt. xxiv. 11, 24). This verse seems to be the source of Cyprian's (Testim. iii. 29) quotation from Baruch: "alii autem sapientes ad spiritum erroris et pronuntiantes sicut Altissimi et Fortis edicta."

35. Cf. lxx. 3. It is remarkable that if we retranslate this verse into Hebrew we have a series of paronomasiae. Thus "honour will be turned into shame" = כבוד יהפך

ללקן, "strength humiliated into contempt" = עו יורד אל בו, and "beauty will become a scorn" = יופי יהיה לרפי.

36. Cf. 4 Ezra v. 9-11. This seems the source of Cyprian's quotation from Baruch (Testim. iii. 29): "Quaeritis me et vos et qui post vos venerint audire verbum sapientiae et intellectus et non inveniatis."

37. Cf. lxx. 6.

38. A change of times. Cf. xliv. 7. Walked every man, etc. Cf. 4 Ezra iii. 8.

not the law of the Mighty One. 39. Therefore a fire will consume their thoughts, and in flame will the meditations of their reins be tried; for the Judge will come and will not tarry. 40. Because each of the inhabitants of the earth knew when he was committing iniquity, and they have not known My law by reason of their pride. 41. For many will then assuredly weep, yea, over the living more than over the dead." 42. And I answered and said: "O Adam, what hast thou done to all those who are born from thee?"

Remembered not the law of the Mighty One. Cf. xlv. 3, 7; lxxxiv. 7.

39. A fire will consume, etc. Cf. verse 43; xlv. 15; lix. 2, note.

The Judge will come and will not tarry. Cf. xx. 6, note.

40. Knew when he was committing, etc. See xv. 6, note; lv. 2. Cf. Ep. Barn. v. 4 δικαίως ἀπολείται ἄνθρωπος ὃς ἔχων ὁδοῦ δικαιοσύνης γινώσκῃ ἐαυτὸν εἰς ὁδὸν σκοποῦς ἀποσυνέχει. In xv. 6 men are to be tormented because, though knowing the law, they transgressed it. In that passage the words, therefore, may be limited to Israel, but here they are obviously descriptive of the Gentiles: "the inhabitants of the earth" (see xxv. 2, note). The writer thus holds that all men alike possessed a conscience or faculty for moral judgment. We have, therefore, in this verse a statement in some degree parallel to Rom. ii. 14, 15: "For when Gentiles, which have no law, do by nature the things of the law, these, having no law, are a law unto themselves: in that they shew the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience bearing witness therewith, etc."

Have not known My law by reason of their pride. These words seem to point to the rejection of the law by the Gentiles; for according to an oft-repeated statement in the Talmud (see Weber, 19, 56, 57, 65), the law was originally designed for all nations, but the Gentiles rejected it (see 4 Ezra vii. 72, 73).

41. Since the sin of the world is intensified towards its close, so naturally the sinners then surviving will meet with severer judgment than the less guilty of earlier times.

42-50. What havoc Adam and Eve have wrought by the spiritual death and torments which they have brought upon their posterity. Yet God knows all that is in man, for He created him; He knows likewise the number of men that are to be, and their sins (verses 42-46). But since the law will give all these their due in the judgment, let inquiry be made rather after the blessedness of the righteous; for though they have endured much weariness in this passing world, in the world to come they shall have abundant light.

42. Spiritual death is here traced to Adam and Eve, but in xvii. 3; xxiii. 4; liv. 15 it is only physical death. See notes on xxiii. 4; liv. 15-19. In 4 Ezra both spiritual and what will be said to the first Eve who hearkened to the serpent? 43. For all this multitude are going to corruption, nor is there any numbering of those whom the fire devours. 44. But again I will speak in Thy presence. 45. Thou, O LORD, my Lord, knowest what is in Thy creature. 46. For Thou didst of old command the dust to produce Adam, and Thou knowest the number of those who are born from him, and how far they have sinned before Thee, who have existed and not confessed Thee as their Creator. 47. And as regards all these their end will convict them, and Thy law which they have transgressed will requite them on Thy day. [48. But now let us dismiss the wicked and enquire about the righteous. 49. And I will recount their blessedness and not be silent in celebrating their death and physical are always traced to Adam (iii. 21, 22; iv. 30; vii. 118-121).

43. Fire devours. Cf. verse 39; xliv. 15; lxiv. 7.

46. Command the dust to produce Adam. 4 Ezra iii. 4, 5; vii. 116.

The number of those who are born. See xxiii. 5, note.

47. Thy law . . . will requite. See v. 2, note.

48-50. These verses were used originally in B² by Baruch in addressing the people, or by God in addressing Baruch, but not by Baruch in addressing God as the present text implies. That they could not have been addressed by Baruch to God is clear; for Baruch could not say to God, "In this world . . . in which ye live" (ver. 50). Two facts are in favour of their being God's words to Baruch: (1) The very same contrast between the two worlds is found in God's reply to Baruch in xv. 7; and (2) the very same change of subject is enjoined and the same word "inquire" used in reference to the righteous in 4 Ezra ix. 13: "tu ergo adhuc noli curiosus esse quomodo impii cruciabuntur sed inquire quomodo iusti salvabuntur." But the plural in verse 48 is against this view; and secondly, the words "I will not be silent in celebrating, etc.," while hardly conceivable on the divine lips, are appropriate on Baruch's. Hence we must regard xlviii. 48-50 as a fragment of an address delivered by Baruch to the people. Another fragment of this same address which originally preceded xlviii. 48-50 is to be found in liv. 16-18, and yet another which followed it in liv. 16-18.

49. Will not be silent in celebrating. A Hebrew idiom = לא אחרל לשבח.

glory, which is reserved for them. 50. For assuredly as in a little time in this world which passeth away, in which ye live, ye have endured much labour, so in that world to which there is no end, ye shall receive great light.”]

XLIX. “Nevertheless, I will again ask from Thee, O Mighty One, yea, I will ask mercy from Him who made all things. 2. ‘In what shape will those live who live in Thy day? or how will the splendour of those who (are) after that time continue? 3. Will they then resume this form of the present, and put on these entrammeling members, which are now involved in evils, and in which evils are consummated, or wilt Thou perchance change these things which have been in the world as also the world?’”

L. And He answered and said unto me: “Hear,

50. Cf. xv. 8 for the same contrast and largely the same diction.

Light. This does not seem the right word.

XLIX. 2. In what shape, etc. Cf. 1 Cor. xv. 35: “How are the dead raised? and with what manner of body do they come?”

Live. See xli. 1, note.

The splendour of those who (are) after that time. For “splendour” we might perhaps render “appearance.” The text is בְּהַרְגֵּם וְעֵלְמָם בְּהַרְגֵּם וְעֵלְמָם.

3. Entrammeling members, lit. members of bonds.

L.-LI. The nature of the resurrection body. The teaching here as to the nature of the resurrection proceeds on the line suggested in xlix. 3: “Wilt thou perchance change these things (i.e. man’s material body) which have been in the world as also the world?” The world was to be renewed (xxxii. 6), and in this renewal from being transitory and verging to its close (xlvi. 50; lxxxv. 10), it becomes undying (li. 3) and everlasting (xlvi. 50); from being a world of corruption (xl. 3; lxxiv. 2; xxi. 19; xxxi. 5, etc.) it becomes incorruptible (lxxiv. 2) and invisible (li. 8). As these conceptions are in germ and principle as old as Isa. lxxv. 17-lxxvi., the same doctrine of renewal and transformation that was taught touching the world was naturally applied in due course to those destined to live in it. This is done partially in Isa. lxxv. 17-25, but the developed form appears in Dan. xii. 2, where the risen righteous are to shine as the stars for ever and ever; in Eth. En. they are to joy as the angels (civ. 4)

Baruch, this word, and write in the remembrance of thy heart all that thou shalt learn. 2. For the earth will then assuredly restore the dead, which it now receives, in order to preserve them, making no change in their form, but as it has received, so will it restore them, and as I delivered them unto it, so also shall it raise them. 3. For then it will be necessary to show to the living that the dead have come to life again, and that those who had departed have returned (again). 4. And it will come to pass, when they have severally and to become angels in heaven (li. 4) and companions of the heavenly hosts (civ. 6), and to be clad in garments of life (lxii. 15, 16) and in raiment of light (cviii. 12); see also xc. 38. We thus see that long before the time of the writers of Baruch the Pharisees were familiar with the idea of the spiritual transformation of the body after the resurrection; and that to some extent the Pauline teaching on the resurrection in 1 Cor. xv. 35-50 was not an innovation, but an able and developed exposition of ideas that were current in the Judaism of the time. 1 Cor. xv. 35-50 is in one of its aspects the logical sequel of Isa. lxxv. 17.

Over against this spiritual view of the future life we must remember that a materialistic one prevailed not only popularly, but also in Rabbinic circles. According to the latter the blessed should beget children and eat the flesh of the Leviathan. See Weber, 383, 384.

L. 2. Cf. xi. 4, note; xlii. 8, note; Eth. En. li. 1, note. In the resurrection soul and body were to be united. On the scene of the resurrection see xxix. 2, note. The soul's abode was Sheol (see xxi. 23 note); the body rested in the earth (xlii. 8). According to the text the body was to be restored in exactly the same form in which it had been committed to the earth. The following speculations of later Judaism on this subject are instructive. According to the Othioth, 17c, of R. Akiba (Weber, 352, 353), God was to sound a trumpet seven times at the end of the world. At the first blast the whole world was to be moved, at the second the dust was to be separated, at the third the bones of the dead were to be gathered together, at the fourth their limbs were to be warmed, at the fifth they were to be covered with skin, at the sixth the souls and spirits were to enter their bodies, in the seventh they were to become living and stand upon their feet, clad in their clothes. According to another account (Beresh. rab. 28) the resurrection body was built up from a small fragment of the backbone which was in all cases indestructible. This was called נֶפֶשׁ. See Levy, Neuhebräisches Wörterb. ii. 481; see verse 4, note.

L. 3. Those who are to be judged are the living righteous, and sinners, and the risen dead.

4. The object with which the dead are raised is for common recognition.

recognised those whom they now know, then judgment will grow strong, and those things which before were spoken of will come.

LI. "And it will come to pass, when that appointed day has gone by, that then shall the aspect of those who are condemned be afterwards changed, and the glory of those who are justified. 2. For the aspect of those who now act wickedly will become worse than is that of such as suffer torment. 3. Also (as for) the glory of those who have now been justified in My law, who have had understanding in their life, and who have planted in their heart the root of wisdom, then their splendour will be glorified in changes, and the form of their face will be turned into the light of their beauty, that they may be able to acquire and receive the world which does not die, which is then promised to them. 4. For

There is nothing corresponding to this in the N.T. In later Judaism the resemblance of the risen was to be so carefully preserved that they were to be raised in the same clothes in which they were buried. This was proved Sanhedrin, 90b (Weber, 353) by the analogy of a grain of corn which comes up from the earth, not naked but clothed. The Rabbis, therefore, on the approach of death, gave careful directions as to their grave-clothes. According to the Beresch. rab. 95 (Weber, 353), men were to be raised with all their bodily defects, such as blindness, lameness, etc., in order that their identity might be established. Thereupon, in the case of the righteous these infirmities were healed.

LI. 1. This transformation of the living is mentioned in 1 Cor. xv. 51.

Aspect. I have here followed

Ceriani's emendation of $\rho\sigma\lambda\omicron\delta\epsilon$ into $\rho\sigma\lambda\omicron\delta\epsilon$.

Condemned . . . justified. See xxi. 9, note. The word "justify" has here its ordinary meaning of "to declare righteous."

3. Justified in My law. See xv. 5, note; xxi. 9, note.

Root of wisdom. lix. 7; Eccus. i. 6, 20, $\rho\lambda\iota\alpha$ σοφίας; Wisdom iii. 15.

Their splendour, etc. The righteous will undergo successive transformations till their bodies are assimilated to their new environment, or to use the words of the text, "that they may be able . . . to receive the world that does not die."

The world that does not die. Cf. xlviii. 50; li. 8; lxxiv. 2, for various characteristics of the olam habba or future world.

Then promised. See xiv. 13, note.

over this above all will those who come then lament, that they rejected My law, and stopped their ears that they might not hear wisdom or receive understanding.

5. When therefore they see those, over whom they are now exalted, (but) who will then be exalted and glorified more than they, they will respectively be transformed, the latter into the splendour of angels, and the former will mainly waste away in wonder at the visions and in the beholding of the forms. 6. For they will first behold and afterwards depart to be tormented. 7. But those who have been saved by their works, and to whom the law has been now a hope, and understanding an expectation, and wisdom a confidence, to them wonders will appear in their time. 8. For they will behold the world which is now invisible to them, and they will behold the time which is now hidden from them. 9. And again time will not age them. 10. For in the heights of that world shall they dwell, and they shall be made like unto the angels, and be made

4. The wicked here include not only the faithless Israelites, but also the Gentiles.

Stopped their ears that they might not hear. Zech. vii. 11. The LXX. renders differently: τὰ ὦτα αὐτῶν ἐβάρυναν κτλ.

5. The splendour. This word |ο| here, and in xlix. 2; li. 3, might also be rendered by "appearance."

Will waste away, or will be dissolved. Cf. xxx. 4; 4 Ezra vii. 87. The latter reference as well as our text show that the writer here was not thinking of annihilation, though this view is found later. Cf. Weber, 374, 375.

7. Saved by their works. See xiv. 7, note.

9. Cf. verse 3, note, and the phrase in verse 16: "The world which ages not those." After this verse we should probably read verses 13 and 14. Verse 12 would then form a fitting close and climax to li. 1-9, 13, 14, 10, 11.

10. The condition of the risen righteous is very spiritually conceived. Thus they have passed from a world of tribulation (li. 14) and enter a world that is everlasting (li. 3), invisible (li. 8); they live in the high places thereof (li. 10); they are made equal to the stars (li. 10), equal to the stars, and they shall be changed into every form they desire, from beauty into loveliness, and from light into the splendour of glory. 11. For there will be spread before them the extents of Paradise, and there will be shown to them the beauty of the majesty of the living creatures which are beneath the throne, and all the armies of the angels, who [are now held fast by My word, lest they should appear, and] are held fast by a command, that they may stand in their places till their advent comes. 12. Moreover, there will then be excellency in the righteous surpassing that in the angels. 13. For the first will receive the last, those whom they were expecting, and the last those of whom they used to hear that they had passed away. 14. For they have been delivered from this world of tribulation, and laid down the burthen of anguish. 15. For what then have men lost their life, and for what have those who were on the earth exchanged their soul? 16. For then they chose (not) for themselves that time, which, beyond the reach of and their glory is greater than that of the angels (x. 12).

Made equal to the stars. Cf. 4 Ezra vii. 97, 125.

11. Living creatures which are beneath the throne. Cf. Rev. iv. 6.

Armies of the angels who . . . are held fast, etc. These angels are probably the armed host mentioned in lxx. 7; Slav. En. xvii.; and in Test. Lev. 3: ἐν τῷ τρίτῳ εἰσὶν αἱ δυνάμεις τῶν παρεμβολῶν, οἱ ταχθέντες εἰς ἡμέραν κρίσεως, ποιῆσαι ἐκδίκησιν ἐν τοῖς πνεύμασι τῆς πλάνης καὶ τοῦ Βελιάρ. I have bracketed one of the clauses in this verse as a gloss.

13, 14. These two verses seem to be wrongly transposed from their place after verse 9.

13. Cf. 4 Ezra v. 42: "Coronae adsimilabo iudicium meum; sicut non novissimorum tarditas, sic nec priorum velocitas"; also Matt. xix. 30.

14. See xv. 8, note.

15. Cf. Matt. xvi. 26.

16. I have added a negative in the first clause as the sense requires it. In lvi. 14 there is a similar loss of the negative, as Ceriani has already observed. Which ages not, etc. (cf. ver. 9).

anguish, could not pass away, and they chose for themselves that time, whose issues are full of lamentations and evils, and they denied the world which ages not those who come to it, and they have rejected the time and the glory, so that they shall not come to the honour of which I told thee before."

LII. And I answered and said: "How do those forget for whom woe is then reserved? 2. And why therefore again do we mourn for those who die? or why do we weep for those who depart to Sheol? 3. Let lamentations be reserved for the beginning of that coming torment, and let tears be laid up for the advent of the destruction of that time. 4. But even in the face of these things I will speak. [5. And as for the righteous, what will they do now? 6. Rejoice ye in the suffering which ye now suffer: for why do ye look for the decline of your enemies? 7. Make ready your soul for that which is reserved for you, and prepare your souls for the reward which is laid up for you.]"

LIII. And when I had said these things I fell asleep there, and I saw a vision, and lo! a cloud was

LII. 1, 2. Considering the terrible destiny in store for the wicked after the resurrection, our grief should be reserved for those who shall suffer its torments, and not for those who depart to Sheol. And yet there is a certain degree of pain and torment in Sheol as we have seen (cf. xxx. 5; xxxvi. 10).

5-7. These verses cannot have been addressed by Baruch to God. Like xlvi. 48-50, they are part of his address to the people. They would form an appropriate sequel to xlviii. 48-50 (see note on liv. 16-18).

6. Cf. lxxviii. 6. These words recall James i. 2: "Count it all joy, my brethren, when ye fall into manifold temptations." The sentiment looks Christian.

7. Make ready . . . prepare your souls. See xxxii. 1, note. One half of this verse seems to be a gloss on the other.

8. Cf. xxxvi. 1.

LIII. - LXXIV. This constitutes ascending from a very great sea, and I kept gazing upon it, and lo! it was full of waters white and black, and there were many colours in those self-same waters, and as it were the likeness of great lightning was seen at its summit. 2. And I saw that cloud passing swiftly in quick courses, and it covered all the earth. 3. And it came to pass after these things the third Messiah Apocalypse=A³ embodied by the final editor in this book. It will be sufficient here to indicate (a) its date; (b) its relation to the other constituents of the book; and to touch on (c) the question of its integrity; (d) and of its author.

(a) Its date. It was written prior to 70 A.D. (see lxviii. 5, note), and subsequent to 50 A.D. (see lix. 5-11, note).

(b) Relations of A³ to B¹, B², A¹, A². It is distinct from B¹, and B² in date, as these were composed subsequently to the fall of the temple. It is distinct in character from B¹ and B²; for whereas in the latter there is no expectation of the Messiah, in A³ the Messiah is the centre of interest. Other points of difference will be dealt with in the notes. A³ is distinct from A¹. In the latter the Messiah does not appear till the enemies of Israel are destroyed; in A³, on the other hand, the Messiah is the agent of their destruction. A³ may be distinct from A²; contrast lxxi. 1 with xl. 2. If xl. 1, 2 refers to Pompey, it was written prior to his death, and A² would in that case be much earlier than A³, which was composed between 50 and 70 A.D.

(c) Integrity. A³ is handed down in tolerable preservation. liv. 17, 18 is an interpolation, and possibly lxx. 9. The text has been badly tampered with in lxxii. 1 and lxxxiv. 4 by the final editor.

(d) The author. A³ is of extreme interest, as it is the oldest writing in which full justice is done alike to the claims of the Messiah and those of the law in moulding the world's history. The author belongs to the Rabbinical school, and assigns to certain elements of the law and tradition (cf. lvii., notes) the pre-Mosaic origin attributed to them in Jubilees. On the other hand, he recognises the popular aspiration for God's kingdom on earth as a legitimate outcome of prophecy, and gives it complete development in his forecast of history. Thus A³ is the oldest literary evidence of the fusion of early Rabbinism and popular Messianic expectation.

LIII. In this vision a cloud is seen coming up from the sea and covering the whole earth with its summit crowned with lightning. And soon it began to discharge black waters, and then clear, and again black waters, and then clear, and so on till this succession of black and bright waters had occurred six times. And at the end of these twelve showers there was yet another shower of black waters, blacker than had been all before. Thereupon the lightning on the summit of the cloud flashed forth and healed the earth, and twelve streams came up from the sea and were subject to that lightning.

1. A very great sea. Cf. Dan. vii. 2.

that that cloud began to pour upon the earth the waters that were in it. 4. And I saw that there was not one and the same likeness in the waters which descended from it. 5. For in the first beginning they were black exceedingly for a time, and afterwards I saw that the waters became bright, but they were not many, and after these things again I saw black (waters), and after these things again bright, and again black and again bright. 6. Now this was done twelve times, but the black were always more numerous than the bright. 7. And it came to pass at the end of the cloud, that lo! it rained black waters, and they were darker than had been all those waters that were before, and fire was mingled with them, and where those waters descended, they wrought devastation and destruction. 8. And I saw after these things that lightning which I had seen on the summit of the cloud, that it held it fast and made it descend to the earth. 9. Now that lightning shone exceedingly, so as to illuminate the whole earth, and it healed those regions where the last waters had descended and wrought devastation. 10. And it took hold of the

6. For the twelvefold division of history see 4 Ezra xiv. 11, 12: "XII enim partibus divisum est saeculum, et transierunt ejus X jam et dimidium Xmae partis, Superant autem ejus duae post medium decimae partis." Cf. Hilgenfeld, Mess. Jud. 104.

7. These black waters are interpreted in lxix., lxx. They symbolise the travail pains of the Messiah.

8. The lightning on the cloud symbolises the Messiah. The imagery is derived from Dan. vii. 13. It was from the last passage that the Messiah was named עֲנַנִי = "the cloud-man," or בֶּרֶךְ נִפְלִי = "the son of the cloud." See Levi, Neuhebräisch. Lex. iii. 271, 422.

9. Lightning shone . . . so as to illuminate the whole earth. Cf. Matt. xxiv. 27: "For as the lightning cometh forth from the east, and is seen even unto the west, so shall be the coming of the Son of man."

whole earth and had dominion over it. 11. And I saw after these things, and lo! twelve rivers were ascending from the sea, and they began to surround that lightning and to become subject to it. 12. And by reason of my fear I awoke.

[PRAYER OF BARUCH]

LIV. And I besought the Mighty One, and said :
 "Thou alone, O Lord, knowest of aforetime the deep things of the world, and the things which befall in their times Thou bringest about by Thy word, and against the works of the inhabitants of the earth Thou dost hasten the beginnings of the times, and the end of the seasons Thou alone knowest. 2. For whom nothing is too hard, but Thou doest everything easily by a nod. 3. To whom the depths as the heights are accessible, and the beginnings of the ages minister to Thy word. 4. Who revealeth to those who fear Him what is prepared for them, that He may thereby console them. 5. Thou showest great acts to those

10. We have here symbolised the Messiah's reign.

11. Do these twelve rivers symbolise the Gentile nations submitting themselves to the Messiah, or the twelve tribes of Israel?

LIV. 1. Against the works, etc. . . . hasten the beginnings of the times. See xx. 1, note.

The end of the seasons Thou alone knowest. Cf. xxi. 8.

2. For whom nothing is too hard. This is a rendering of the phrase found in Gen. xviii. 14; Jer. xxxii. 17, 27. By comparing the text with the Peshitto of Luke i. 37, we see that the Greek was here $\pi\alpha\rho' \hat{\omega} \rho\eta\mu\alpha \text{ } \omicron\upsilon\kappa \text{ } \acute{\alpha}\delta\upsilon\nu\alpha\tau\epsilon\acute{\iota}$. This is the LXX. of Gen. xviii. 14 $\mu\eta \acute{\alpha}\delta\upsilon\nu\alpha\tau\epsilon\acute{\iota} \pi\alpha\rho\grave{\alpha} \tau\hat{\omega} \theta\epsilon\hat{\omega} \rho\eta\mu\alpha$, but not of Jer. xxxii. 17, 27, where we find (xxxix. 17, 27 in LXX.) $\omicron\upsilon \mu\eta \acute{\alpha}\pi\omicron\kappa\rho\upsilon\beta\eta\acute{\iota} \acute{\alpha}\pi\omicron \varsigma\omicron\upsilon \omicron\theta\acute{\epsilon}\nu$. This is the rendering of the Peshitto also in Gen. xviii. 14 and Jer. xxxii. 17, 27. From this verse in itself, therefore, we cannot conclude for or against the influence of the LXX. on the writer.

5. Great acts or "wonders."

who know not; Thou breakest up the enclosure of those who are ignorant, and lightest up what is dark, and revealest what is hidden to the pure, who in faith have submitted themselves to Thee and Thy law. 6. Thou hast shown to Thy servant this vision; reveal to me also its interpretation. 7. For I know that as regards those things wherein I besought Thee, I have received a response, and as regards what I besought, Thou didst reveal to me, and didst show me with what voice I should praise Thee, or from what members I should cause praises and hallelujahs to ascend to Thee. 8. For if my members were mouths, and the hairs of my head voices, even so I could not give Thee the meed of praise, or laud Thee as is befitting, nor could I recount Thy praise, nor tell the glory of Thy beauty, 9. For what am I amongst men, or why am I reckoned amongst those who are more excellent than I, that I should have heard all those marvellous things from the Most High, and good tidings numberless from Him who created me? 10. Blessed be my mother amongst those that bear, and praised among women be she that bare me. 11. For I will not be silent in praising the Mighty One, and with the voice of praise I will recount His marvellous deeds. 12. For who doeth like unto Thy marvellous deeds, O God, or who comprehendeth Thy deep thought of

In faith. See note on liv. 21.

8. In the Shir ha-Shirim rabba, i. 3 we find the hyperbolic statements of this verse far outdone: "R. Eliezer said: 'if all the seas were ink, and all the reeds were pens, and heaven and earth were rolls, and all men were scribes, yet the law could not be written down which I have taught.'"

10. An interpolation? it breaks life? 13. For with Thy counsel Thou dost govern all the creatures which Thy right hand has created, and Thou hast established every fountain of light beside Thee, and the treasures of wisdom beneath Thy throne hast Thou prepared. 14. And justly do they perish who have not loved Thy law, and the torment of judgment will await those who have not submitted themselves to Thy power. 15. For though Adam the connection. Cf. Luke i. 42 ; xi. 27 ; Judges v. 24.

13. Thou dost govern. Cf. verse 22.

14. A deliberate rejection of the law of God is here implied as in xlviii. 40, see note.

15, 19. In xxiii. 4 the physical effects of sin are referred to ; in xlviii. 42 the spiritual effects. The former consisted according to B² (see xxiii. 4, note) in man's subjection to physical death. According to A³ (see liv. 15 ; lvi. 6), however, man was already subject to physical death, and the penalty of sin consisted in premature death.

The main question, however, which concerns us here is that of predestination and free will. In order to understand the position of the writers of this book, it will be helpful to draw attention to the chief statements which appear on these subjects in Jewish non-canonical literature. In Ecclesiasticus these antinomies are stated unconditionally, not indeed in immediate contrast, but in distinct passages. Thus in xv. 11, 12, 14, 15, 17, 20, we have the freewill of man strongly affirmed : μη εἴπῃς ὅτι διὰ κύριον ἀπέστην . . . μη εἴπῃς ὅτι αὐτός με ἐπλάνησεν· οὐ γὰρ χρεῖαν ἔχει ἀνδρὸς ἁμαρτωλοῦ . . . αὐτὸς ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἐποίησεν ἄνθρωπον, καὶ ἀφῆκεν αὐτὸν ἐν χειρὶ διαβουλίου αὐτοῦ. ἐὰν θέλῃς, συντηρήσεις ἐντολάς. . . ἐναντι ἀνθρώπων ἡ ζωὴ καὶ ὁ θάνατος καὶ ὃ ἐὰν εὐδοκήσῃ δοθήσεται αὐτῷ. . . καὶ οὐκ ἐνετείλατο οὐδενὶ ἀσεβεῖν. Cf. also xviii. 6. The doctrine of predestination is absolutely maintained in xxxvi. 10, 12, 13, καὶ ἄνθρωποι πάντες ἀπὸ ἐδάφους καὶ ἐκ γῆς ἐκτίσθη Ἀδάμ· ἐξ αὐτῶν εὐλόγησεν καὶ ἀνύψωσεν . . . ἀπ' αὐτῶν κατηράσατο καὶ ἐταπείνωσεν καὶ ἀνέστρεψεν αὐτοὺς ἀπὸ στάσεως αὐτῶν. ὡς πηλὸς κεραμέως ἐν χειρὶ αὐτοῦ, πᾶσαι αἱ ὁδοὶ αὐτοῦ κατὰ τὴν εὐδοκίαν αὐτοῦ· οὕτως ἄνθρωποι ἐν χειρὶ τοῦ ποιήσαντος αὐτοὺς ἀποδοῦναι αὐτοῖς κατὰ τὴν κρίσιν αὐτοῦ. Cf. also xxiii. 20 ; xxxix. 20, 21. These two doctrines which are thus separately affirmed in Ecclus., are given by Josephus as co-ordinate articles of the Pharisaic creed. Thus in Bell. Jud. ii. 8, 14, he says : Φαρισαῖοι . . . εἰμαρμένην τε καὶ θεῷ προορῶντες πάντα καὶ τὸ μὲν πράττειν τὰ δίκαια καὶ μὴ κατὰ τὸ πλείστον ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀνθρώποις κεῖσθαι, βοηθεῖν δὲ εἰς ἕκαστον καὶ τὴν εἰμαρμένην. Ant. xiii. 5, 9 : οἱ μὲν οὖν Φαρισαῖοι τινὰ καὶ οὐ πάντα τῆς εἰμαρμένης εἶναι λέγουσιν ἔργον, τινὰ δ' ἐφ' ἑαυτοῖς ὑπάρχειν, συμβαλεῖν τε καὶ μὴ γίνεσθαι (Ant. xviii. 1. 3) πράσσεισθαι τε εἰμαρμένῃ τε πάντα ἀξιοῦντες, οὐδὲ τοῦ ἀνθρωπείου τοῦ βουλούμενον τῆς ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ὁρμῆς ἀφαιροῦνται, δοκῆσαν τῷ θεῷ κρᾶσιν γενέσθαι καὶ τῷ βουλευτῇ βουλευτηρίῳ καὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων τῷ θελήσαντι προσ-

first sinned and brought untimely death upon all, yet of those who were born from him each one of them has χωρεῖν μετ' ἀρετῆς ἢ κακίας. The same paradoxical creed appears in the Pirke Aboth. iii. 24 (ed. Taylor p. 73): "Everything is foreseen; and freewill is given. And the world is judged by grace: and everything is according to work"; and possibly also in the Pss. Sol. ix. 7 τὰ ἔργα ἡμῶν ἐν ἐκλογῇ καὶ ἐξουσίᾳ τῆς ψυχῆς ἡμῶν τοῦ ποιῆσαι δίκαιοσύνην καὶ ἀδικίαν (see Ryle and James's edition, pp. 95, 96).

This co-ordination of fate and freewill as articles of faith was nothing more or less than an attempt on the part of the Pharisees to embody in their creed the two O.T. doctrines of God's omnipotence and man's responsibility. That theoretically such a creed was current may reasonably be concluded from the passages just cited, as well as from the attestation it receives in Pauline teaching in Rom. ix.-xi. (see Sanday and Headlam's Romans, pp. 347-350). Its acceptance, too, would, no doubt, be furthered by the pressure of the rival creeds of the Sadducees and the Essenes, who were the champions, respectively, of freewill and of fate (Joseph. Bell. Jud. ii. 8. 14; Ant. xiii. 5. 9). With the disappearance of Sadduceism, however, the paradoxical character of Pharisaic belief seems to have disappeared also. Henceforth the Rabbinic schools teach mainly man's freedom of the will and limit God's predestinating action to his external lot.

The two doctrines of fate and freewill, though seen to be mutually exclusive, were, as we have already remarked, accepted theoretically as equally imperative by the Pharisees. The only instance where these two doctrines are developed into irreconcilable fulness and results and applied to religious questions in the first century is to be found in St. Paul's teaching (see above). In every other attempt to grapple with these problems a compromise is effected which results either in a vigorous or else in a very attenuated doctrine of freewill. Of this wavering attitude among the Pharisees in the first century we have sufficient evidence. Thus man's freewill is maintained in the Slav. En. xxx. 15: "And I gave him his will, and I showed him the two ways, the light and the darkness . . . that I should know whether he has love for Me or hate"; though in the next verse it is recognised that his freewill is hampered by his incorporation in the body, and his ignorance of its good and evil impulses. But the best evidence in this direction is furnished by the Apocalypse of Baruch and 4 Ezra. From our comparative study hitherto of these two works (see notes on xiv. 7; xxi. 9; xlviii. 42), we should expect that man's freewill and capacity for doing God's will, despite Adam's sin, would be emphasised in the former, and that man's helplessness and practical incapacity for righteousness in consequence of his original defects or Adam's sin would be conspicuous in the latter, and this we do find as a matter of fact. First as to 4 Ezra. In 4 Ezra the bulk of mankind was predestined to destruction (viii. 1-3); for from the beginning there was in man a wicked element (i.e. צר הרע) called here granum seminis mali (4 Ezra iv. 30): "Quoniam granum seminis mali seminatum est in corde Adam ab initio, et quantum impietatis generavit usque nunc et prepared for his own soul torment to come, and again each one of them has chosen for himself glories to come.

generabit usque cum veniat area"; through Adam's yielding to this evil element a hereditary tendency to sin was created and the cor malignum developed (iii. 21, 22). Cor enim malignum baiolans primus Adam transgressus et victus est, sed et omnes qui ex eo nati sunt. Et facta est permanens infirmitas, et lex in corde populi cum malignitate radice, et discessit quod bonum est, et mansit malignum. We should observe that baiolans in iii. 21 just cited represents φωρέσας: for both the Syriac and Ethiopic Versions = cum vestivit. Hence Adam "clothed himself" with a wicked heart by yielding to the evil impulse which was in him when created. Adam was created with two impulses: "the good impulse" (יצר הטוב) implied in the words discessit quod bonum est (iii. 22), and "the evil impulse" already referred to. This subject is further pursued in iii. 25, 26: "Et deliquerunt qui habitabant civitatem, In omnibus facientes sicut fecit Adam et omnes generationes ejus, utebantur enim et ipsi cor malignum." As a result of Adam's transgression, the evil impulse having been developed into the cor malignum, and having thus obtained the mastery over man, the writer of vii. 118 naturally charges Adam with being the cause of the final perdition of mankind: "O tu quid fecisti Adam? si enim tu peccasti, non est factum solius tuus casus sed et nostrum qui ex te advenimus." Naturally in the face of such a hopeless view of man's condition no real doctrine of freewill could be maintained. In fact, in 4 Ezra only sufficient freewill is accorded to man to justify his final condemnation. Cf. 4 Ezra viii. 56, 58-60, "Nam et ipsi accipientes libertatem spreverunt Altissimum et legem ejus contempserunt. . . . Et dixerunt in corde suo non esse deum, et quidem scientes sciunt quoniam moriuntur. . . . Non enim Altissimus voluit hominem disperdi; Sed ipsi qui creati sunt coinquinaverunt nomen ejus qui fecit eos." vii. 72, "Qui ergo commorantes sunt in terra hinc cruciabuntur, quoniam sensum habentes iniquitatem fecerunt et mandata accipientes non servaverunt ea et legem consecuti fraudaverunt eam quam acceperunt." ix. 11, Fastidierunt legem meam cum adhuc erant habentes libertatem.

Turning now to the present Apocalypse, we find in all its sections, even in the gloomiest, B², a view of man's present capacities and future destiny that is optimistic when set side by side with 4 Ezra. Whereas in A³, according to liv. 15, 19, the effects of Adam's sin are limited to physical results; his descendants must die prematurely. On the nature of these physical results in other sections see xxiii. 4, note. As to spiritual results, each man is the Adam of his own soul, and can choose for himself either bliss or torment; he can work out his own salvation and even make God his debtor (see xiv. 7, note). Only in xlviii. 42 is spiritual death traced to Adam.

The view set forth in the text as to man's condition is exactly that which prevails in the Talmud. In fact, Weber's summing up on this question would serve admirably for an exposition of the text: "Der freie Wille auch in Bezug auf das Verhalten gegen Gott ist dem Menschen auch nach dem Fall geblieben. Es

LIV. 16-
18=B².

[16. For assuredly he who believeth will receive reward. 17. But now, as for you, ye wicked that now are, turn ye to destruction, because ye will speedily be visited, in that from time to time ye have rejected the understanding of the Most High. 18. For His works have not taught you, nor has the skill of His creation which is at all times persuaded you.] 19. Adam is gibt eine Erbschuld, aber keine Erbsünde: der Fall Adam's hat dem ganzen Geschlecht den Tod, nicht aber die Sündigkeit im Sinne einer Nothwendigkeit zu sündigen verursacht; die Sünde ist das Ergebnis der Entscheidung jedes Einzelnen, erfahrungsgemäss allgemein, aber an sich auch nach dem Fall nicht schlechthin nothwendig" (Lehren d. Talmud, p. 217).

Only one statement in this citation seems untrustworthy, i.e. Es gibt eine Erbschuld. I can see nothing in Weber's learned work to justify this statement, but everything to show that there was neither hereditary sin nor hereditary guilt. Moreover, on p. 240 this statement is actually made: "Wenn die Sünde und Schuld nicht erblich ist, kann dann die Strafe erblich sein? . . . Diese Antinomie hat die jüdische Theologie durch drei Sätze auszugleichen versucht."

15. Untimely. See note on xxiii. 4. The phrase rendered "untimely" is בְּעֵתוֹ כְּכֹנֶה. It recurs in lvi. 6 and lxxiii. 3.

16-18. These verses are clearly an interpolation for the same reasons as xlviii. 48-50 and lii. 5-7. These three passages seem to have been addressed by Baruch to the people, and to have formed part of one and the same discourse. The original order appears to have been: first, liv. 17, 18, where the wicked are menaced with the final judgment; then xlviii. 48-50, in which the destiny of the wicked is dismissed and that of the righteous described; next, lii. 5-7, where a line of conduct is prescribed to the righteous on the ground of that destiny, and a preparation of their souls for the reward laid up for them; and finally, liv. 16, where the faithful are assured of that reward.

It will be observed (1) that these verses break the sense of the context; (2) that a direct address to the wicked could not occur in a prayer to God.

18. In liv. 14 it is implied that the wicked there described knew the law. This is intelligible from the standpoint of the Jewish belief that the Gentiles were offered the law but refused it. But in this verse no such view is implied. Their knowledge of God could only arise from reflection on His works in nature. The same argument is found in Rom. i. 20. This argument "is as old as the Psalter, Job, and Isaiah (Pss. xix. 1; xciv. 9; cxliii. 5; Isa. xlii. 5; xlv. 18; Job xii. 9; xxvi. 14; xxxvi. 24; Wisdom ii. 23; xiii. 1, 5). It is common to Greek thought as well as Jewish (Arist. De Mundo, 6; Philo, De Praem. et Poen. 7" (Sanday and Headlam, Rom. p. 43).

19. See note on verse 15. The real force of this verse is that a man's guilt and sin are not derived erefore not the cause, save only of his own soul, but ch one of us has been the Adam of his own soul.

 . But do Thou, O Lord, expound to me regarding use things which Thou hast revealed to me, and form me regarding that which I besought Thee. 21.
 r at the consummation of the world there will be ngeance taken upon those who have done wickedness according to their wickedness, and Thou wilt glorify the ithful according to their faithfulness. 22. For those ho are amongst Thine own Thou rulest, and those ho sin Thou blottest out from amongst Thine own."

LV. And it came to pass when I had finished peaking the words of this prayer, that I sat there under a tree, that I might rest in the shade of the branches. 2. And I wondered and was astonished, and pondered in my thoughts regarding the multitude of goodness which sinners who are upon the earth from Adam, but are due to his own action. The evil impulse (יצר הרע) does not constitute guilt or sin unless man obeys it. As the Talmudists say, it was placed in man to be overcome (Weber, 210).

21. The faithful according to their faith. Faith in this passage is contrasted with unrighteousness ("שם = avopula). Hence we should take it here as equivalent either to "righteousness" or "fidelity to the law." In liv. 16 the verb "believe" may mean "to be faithful." But the context is doubtful. Elsewhere in Baruch faith = "belief." Thus in lix. 2 those who "believe" are opposed to those who "deny"; in xlii. 2 to those who "despise."
 This is the meaning also in liv. 5; lvii. 2; lxxxiii. 8. In 4 Ezra vi. 5 faith seems to mean "righteousness," the result of fidelity to the law (as in Apoc. Bar. liv. 21); for the righteous are those qui fidem thesaurizaverunt; possibly also in

 v. 1; vi. 28; it means fidelity to the law in vii. 34, as incredulitas in vii.
 114 = "disloyalty." In ix. 7, 8; xiii. 23, faith and works are combined and appear nearly synonymous. For a most instructive note on the various meanings of "faith," see Sanday and Headlam's Romans, pp. 31-34.

Faith in the Talmud is in one of its aspects regarded as a work which as the fulfilment of the law produces merit. In the Beresh. rabba, lxxiv. the merit arising from faith and the merit arising from the law are co-ordinated. See Weber, pp.
 292, 295, 298.

have rejected, and regarding the great torment which they have despised, though they knew that they should be tormented because of the sin they had committed. 3. And when I was pondering on these things and the like, lo! the angel Ramiel who presides over true visions was sent to me, and he said unto me: 4. "Why does thy heart trouble thee, Baruch, and why does thy thought disturb thee? 5. For if by the hear say which thou hast only heard of judgment thou art so moved, what (wilt thou be) when thou shalt see it manifestly with thine eyes? 6. And if with the expectation wherewith thou dost expect the day of the Mighty One thou art so overcome, what (wilt thou be) when thou shalt come to its advent? 7. And, if the word of the announcement of the torment of those who have done foolishly thou art so wholly distraught, how much more when the event will reveal marvellous things? 8. And if thou hast heard tidings of the good and evil things which are then coming and art grieved, what (wilt thou be) when thou shalt behold what the majesty will reveal, which will convict these and cause those to rejoice?

LV. 2. Despised, though they knew. See xv. 6, note; xlviii. 40, note.

3. Ramiel. Cf. lxiii. 6; this angel is mentioned in the Eth. En. xx. 7 (Greek) 'Ρεμειήλ ὁ εἰς τῶν ἁγίων ἀγγέλων ὃν ἔταξεν ὁ Θεὸς ἐπὶ τῶν ἀνισταμένων: also in 4 Ezra iv. 36, where the Syriac Version = "And the angel Ramiel answered and said unto them" (i.e. the righteous souls in the soul-treasuries); for "Ramiel" the Latin gives Hieremihel. Finally, in Or. Sibyl. ii. 215-217, Ramiel is one of the five angels appointed by God to bring the souls of men to judgment: 'Αρακιήλ 'Ραμυήλ Οὐριήλ Σαμυήλ 'Αζαήλ τε . . . ἀνθρώπων ψυχὰς . . . ἐς κρῖσιν ἀξουσιν πάσας. The function of Ramiel in the text agrees to some extent with that assigned to him in 4 Ezra.

5. And art so moved. I have followed Ceriani's suggestion here in supplying ο before יִנָּחֵם.

LVI. "Nevertheless, because thou hast besought the Most High to reveal to thee the interpretation of the vision which thou hast seen, I have been sent to say to thee. 2. And the Mighty One hath assuredly made known to thee the methods of the times that have passed, and of those that are destined to pass in His world from the beginning of its creations even unto its consummation, of those things which (are) deceit and of those which (are) in truth. 3. For as thou didst see a great cloud which ascended from the sea, and went and covered the earth, this is the duration of the world (= ai'ōn) which the Mighty One made when He took counsel to make the world. 4. And it came to pass when the word had gone forth from His presence, that the duration of the world had come into being in a small degree, and was established according to the multitude of the intelligence of Him who sent it. 5. And as thou didst previously see on the summit of the cloud black waters which descended previously on the earth, this is the transgression wherewith Adam the first man transgressed. 6. For owing to his transgression untimely death came into being, and grief was named

LVI. 2. And the Mighty. We should expect That the Mighty.

3. A great cloud . . . this is the duration of the world. This cloud is divided into thirteen parts: the first twelve parts of alternate black and bright waters (see liii. 5, 6), and the thirteenth of the blackest waters of all (see liii. 7). These symbolise the thirteen periods into which the history of the world is divided prior to the Messiah's kingdom. This kingdom is foreshadowed by the lightning that shone on the extremity or summit of the cloud.

4. Was established. I have followed Ceriani here in reading  instead of .

6. Owing to his transgression. The text literally is "when he transgressed."

Untimely. See liv. 15, note.

and anguish was prepared, and pain was created, and trouble perfected, and boasting began to be established, and Sheol to demand that it should be renewed in blood, and the begetting of children was brought about, and the passion of parents produced, and the greatness of humanity was humiliated, and goodness languished. 7. What therefore can be blacker or darker than these things? 8. This is the beginning of the black waters which thou hast seen. 9. And from these black (waters) again were black derived, and the darkness of darkness produced. 10. For he was a danger to his own soul: even to the angels was he a danger. 11. For, moreover, at that time when he was created, they enjoyed liberty. 12. And some of them descended, and mingled with women. 13. And then those who did so were tormented in chains. 14. But the rest of the multitude of the angels, of which there is no number, restrained themselves. 15. And those who dwelt on the earth perished together (with them) through the waters of the deluge. 16. These are the black first waters.

Sheol to demand, etc. For this hunger of Sheol, cf. Prov. xxvii. 20; Isa. v. 14. On Sheol, see note on xi. 6.

10. He was a danger, etc. This must mean that man's physical nature was a danger to his spiritual; for it was the physical side of man that proved a danger to the angels who fell through lust. Man's physical nature was dangerous; for in it resided the "evil impulse" (see note on liv. 15, 19).

11-13. They enjoyed liberty, i.e. the angels. This liberty, according to the ancient myth, they abused by taking to themselves wives of the daughters of men (see Eth. En. vi. 2, note; Slav. En. xviii. 4-6; Jubilees v. 1-11; x. 1-13).

14. No number. The MS. omits the negative, but wrongly, as Ceriani has already observed (cf. xxi. 6; lix. 11). For a still more obvious loss of the negative see li. 16, though strangely enough it has not hitherto been remarked.

LVII. "And after these (waters) thou didst see bright waters: this is the fount of Abraham, also his generations and advent of his son, and of his son's son, and of those like them. 2. Because at that time the unwritten law was named amongst them, and the works of the commandments were then fulfilled, and belief in the coming judgment was then generated, and hope of the world that was to be renewed was then built up, and the promise of the life that should come hereafter was implanted. 3. These are the bright waters, which thou hast seen.

LVIII. "And the black third waters which thou

LVII. 1. The first bright period embraces human history from the time of Abraham to that of the twelve sons of Jacob and their righteous contemporaries or immediate successors.

2. The unwritten law. This statement proceeds from the same spirit which animates the entire Book of Jubilees, and which seeks to trace traditionalism and its observances to the times of the patriarchs. In later Judaism there were manifold attempts of this nature. Thus in the Avoda-sara, 36b, according to Gen. xxxviii. 24, impurity was forbidden by the Rabbinic tribunal of Shem; in the Beresh. rabba, xciv., Shem and Eber are said to have handed on certain traditions to Jacob; in the Joma, 28b, Abraham is said to have observed the whole Torah and the traditional or unwritten law. To Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob the three daily times of prayer are traced back in the Berachoth, 26b. The above statements are drawn from Herzfeld, Geschichte Israels, p. 226. For a detailed description of the traditional law from the earliest times down to Hillel, see op. cit. iii. 226-263; Weber, 255.

Works of the commandments were then fulfilled. See preceding note.

Belief. See note on liv. 21.

Hope of the world to be renewed. See note on xxxii. 6. In the earlier Messiah-Apocalypses in this book, i.e. in A¹ and A², the renewal of the world is to take place at the close of the Messianic kingdom, for in these writings this kingdom belongs to this world $\delta\ \alpha\iota\omega\omicron\nu\ \omicron\upsilon\tau\omicron\varsigma$ (Matt. xii. 32) = $\eta\eta\ \epsilon\beta\gamma\eta$; whereas in A³ with which we are at present dealing it is said (lxxiv. 2) to form the close of the present world and the beginning of the next (i.e. $\delta\ \alpha\iota\omega\omicron\nu\ \delta\ \mu\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\lambda\omega\nu$ or $\delta\ \epsilon\rho\chi\acute{o}\mu\epsilon\nu\omicron\varsigma$ = $\eta\eta\ \epsilon\beta\gamma\eta$). If we are to take (lxxiv. 2) literally, then the renewal of the world is to take place during the Messiah's reign. But this is unlikely. In 4 Ezra vii. 28-30; xii. 32-34, the Messiah's kingdom belongs to this world. In xiii. 32-50 to the next, if xiii. 36 is genuine. In the older literature the Messianic kingdom belongs to the next world (cf. Eth. En. xxxvii.-lxx.)

hast seen, these are the mingling of all sins, which the nations afterwards wrought after the death of those righteous men, and the wickedness of the land of Egypt, wherein they did wickedly in the service wherewith they made their sons to serve. 2. Nevertheless, these also perished at last.

LIX. "And the bright fourth waters which thou hast seen are the advent of Moses and Aaron and Miriam and Joshua the son of Nun and Caleb and of all those like them. 2. For at that time the lamp of the eternal law shone on all those who sat in darkness, which announced to them that believe the promise of their reward, and to them that deny, the torment of fire which is reserved for them. 3. But also the heavens at that time were shaken from their place, and those who were under the throne of the Mighty One were perturbed, when He was taking Moses unto Himself. 4. For He showed him many admonitions together with the principles of the laws and the consummation of time, as also to thee, and likewise the pattern of Zion and its measures, which was to be LVIII. 1. The service wherewith they made their sons to serve. Exod. i. 14 is here closely followed: בל-עבדתם אשר-עבדו בהם. As the LXX. has here πάντα τὰ ἔργα ὧν καταδουλοῦντο αὐτούς, it is clear that the original writer had the Hebrew text and not the LXX. before him.

LIX. 2. The eternal law. Cf. xvii. 6. See xv. 5, note.

The lamp . . . darkness—a Rabbinic application of Isa. ix. 2. Isa. ix. 2 was a favourite passage in N.T. times (cf. Matt. iv. 16; Luke i. 79).

That believe. See liv. 21, note.

Torment of fire. Cf. xlv. 15; xlviii. 39; lxxxv. 13. It will be observed that these passages suggest a material fire in which the wicked are to be tormented after the resurrection, i.e. after they have resumed their bodies.

4. The pattern of Zion and its measures. Cf. Exod. xxv. 40; xxvi. 30; Heb. viii. 5.

Which was to be made, etc. A very slight change in the Syriac would give a good text: "In the made in the pattern of the sanctuary of the present time. 5. But then also He showed to him the measures of the fire, also the depths of the abyss, and the weight of the winds, and the number of the drops of rain. 6. And the suppression of anger, and the multitude of long-suffering, and the truth of judgment. 7. And the root of wisdom, and the riches of understanding, and the fount of knowledge. 8. And the height of the air, and the greatness of Paradise, and pattern of which the sanctuary of the present time was to be made."

5-11. It is of importance to observe, with a view to determining the date of A³, that in these verses we have a transference of Enoch's functions to Moses, and that the revelations hitherto attributed to Enoch are here for the first time assigned to Moses. It is noteworthy that another of Enoch's chief functions is ascribed to Ezra in 4 Ezra xiv. 50. This opposition to Enoch is unswervingly pursued in the Talmud. Thus, whereas in pre-Christian Judaism, Enoch, and Enoch only, is described as the scribe of the deeds of men (Jub. iv. 23; x. 17; Slav. En. xl. 13; liii. 2; lxiv. 5), this office is assigned to various Jewish heroes in later Judaism. Thus according to Ruth rabba, 33a, it is Elijah; according to Esther rabba, 86d, it is the angels; according to Jalkut Shim., Beresh. 141, it was formerly the prophets, but now it is only Elijah and the Messiah (Weber, 272). We have already drawn attention to this phenomenon in the note on xiii. 3, and have there pointed out that this hostility to Enoch is the outcome of Jewish hostility to Christianity as a whole; for as we know from manifold evidence the writings of Enoch enjoyed a singular influence on early Christianity. This aggressive attitude of Judaism could hardly have originated before the open rupture of Christianity with the Synagogue and the Pauline controversy. Hence this writing was not earlier than A.D. 50. From lxviii. 5 it is clear that it is prior to A.D. 70. Therefore the limits of its composition are A.D. 50-70.

5. The depths of the abyss. A frequent subject in both books of Enoch: Eth. En. xviii. 11; xxi. 7-10, etc.; Slav. En. xxviii. 3.

The weight of the winds. The weighing of the winds is described in the Slav. En. xl. 11; cf. also Eth. xli. 4.

The number of the drops of rain. Slav. En. xlvii. 5; Eccclus. i. 2.

7. Root of wisdom. See li. 3, note.

Riches of understanding. lxi. 4.

The fount of knowledge. Bar. iii. 12; 4 Ezra xiv. 47.

8. The height of the air. Slav. En. xl. 12: "I have written down the height from the earth to the seventh heaven."

The greatness of Paradise. The measures of Paradise are taken by the angels for Enoch. Cf. Eth. En. lxi. 1-4; lxx. 3, 4.

the consummation of the ages, and the beginning of the day of judgment. 9. And the number of the offerings, and the earths which have not yet come. 10. And the mouth of Gehenna, and the station of vengeance, and the place of faith, and the region of hope. 11. And the likeness of future torment, and the multitude of innumerable angels, and the powers of the flames, and the splendour of the lightnings, and the voice of the thunders, and the orders of the chiefs of the angels, and the treasuries of light, and the changes of the times, and the investigations of the law. 12. These are the bright fourth waters which thou hast seen.

LX. "And the black fifth waters which thou hast

The consummation of the ages. This subject is discussed in every section of the Enochic literature.

The beginning of the day of judgment. This date is fixed according to a definite reckoning in the Slav. En. xxxii. 2-xxxiii. 2; lxxv. 7-10; according to certain indefinite measures in Eth. En. lxxxiii.-xc.; xci.-civ.

10. The mouth of Gehenna. Eth. En. xxvii. 2, 3; liv.; lxii. 12; xc. 26, 27.

The station of vengeance. Many places of vengeance are described in the two books of Enoch: Eth. En. xviii. 12-16; xix.; xxi.; xxii. 10-13; liv. 1-6; xc. 24-27; Slav. En. x.; xl. 12.

The place of faith, and the region of hope. These seem to be the places of intermediate bliss. Cf. Eth. En. xxii. 5-9.

11. The likeness of future torment. Slav. xl. 12.

The multitude of innumerable angels. See lvi. 14, note. Of early Jewish literature, it is only in Enoch that the angels are described at length.

The splendour of the lightnings, and the voice of the thunders. Eth. En. xli. 3; xliii. 1, 2; xliv.; lix.; lx. 13-15; Slav. En. xl. 9.

The orders of the chiefs of the angels. I have here read the plural  instead of the singular . Ceriani renders the text: "ordines principatus angelorum." The Jews believed in ten orders of angels, the Christians in nine. These orders are mentioned and in part enumerated in the Slav. En. xx. 1, 3 (see note); cf. also Eth. lxi. 10; lxxi. 7-9.

The treasuries of light. This expression is unexampled.

The changes of the times, i.e. the seasons. Slav. En. xiii. 5; xl. 6; Eth. En. lxxxii. 11-20.

seen raining are the works which the Amorites wrought, and the spells of their incantations which they wrought, and the wickedness of their mysteries, and the mingling of their pollution. 2. But even Israel was then polluted by sins in the days of the judges, though they saw many signs which were from Him who made them.

LXI. "And the bright sixth waters which thou didst see, this is the time in which David and Solomon were born. 2. And there was at that time the building of Zion, and the dedication of the sanctuary, and the shedding of much blood of the nations that sinned then, and many offerings which were offered then in the dedication of the sanctuary. 3. And peace and tranquillity existed at that time. 4. And wisdom was heard in the assembly, and the riches of understanding were magnified in the congregations. 5. And the holy festivals were fulfilled in goodness and in much joy. 6. And the judgment of the rulers was then seen to be without guile, and the righteousness of the precepts of the Mighty One was accomplished with truth. 7. And because the land was then beloved at that time, and because its inhabitants sinned not, it was glorified beyond all lands, and the city Zion ruled then over all lands and regions. 8. These are the bright waters which thou hast seen.

LX. 1. Mingling of their pollution. Cf. Pss. Sol. ii. 14, ἐν φνυμῶ ἀναμύξεως.

Ceriani in correcting  (="of judgment") into .

LXI. 4. Riches of understanding.

2. Of the judges. I here follow lix. 7.

perish, for the multitude also of the nations which were with him. 3. When, moreover, Hezekiah the king heard those things which the king of Assyria was devising, (i.e.) to come and seize him and destroy his people, the two and a half tribes which remained : nay, more he wished to overthrow Zion also : then Hezekiah trusted in his works, and had hope in his righteousness, and spake with the Mighty One and said : 4. 'Behold, for lo ! Sennacherib is prepared to destroy us, and he will be boastful and uplifted when he has destroyed Zion.' 5. And the Mighty One heard him, for Hezekiah was wise, and He had respect unto his prayer, because he was righteous. 6. And thereupon the Mighty One commanded Ramiel His angel who speaks with thee. 7. And I went forth and destroyed their multitude, the number of whose chiefs only was a hundred and eighty-five

3. Hezekiah trusted in his works. See xiv. 7, note. Observe the play on Hezekiah's name in these words when retranslated into Hebrew, חזקיה החזק על. There appears to have been one also in Ecclus. xlviii. 22, ἐποίησεν γὰρ 'Εzekias . . . καὶ ἐνίσχυσεν. This conjecture as to the probable text in Ecclus. was made in March. It is now (June 20) confirmed by Dr. Neubauer's discovery last week in the Bodley of the Hebrew text of Ecclus. xl. 1. To his kindness and that of Mr. Cowley I owe the following passages where this play on the name occurs twice :—Ecclus. xlviii. 17, עֲשֵׂה יְחֻקֵּיהוּ חֹזֶק עִיר, 'Εzekias ὥχρῳσεν τῇ πόλει αὐτοῦ, and xlviii. 22, (כִּי עֲשֵׂה יְחֻקֵּיהוּ אֶת הַטּוֹב (וְיִתְחַזֵּק)

בררכי רור = ἐποίησεν γὰρ 'Εzekias τὸ ἄρεστον κυρίως, καὶ ἐνίσχυσεν ἐν ὁδοῖς Δαυὶδ.

4. Lo, Sennacherib is prepared to destroy us. There was a play here on the name Sennacherib in the Hebrew, והנה סנחריב עתיד להחריב אותנו.

5. In Sifre, 12*b*, and Jalkut Shim., Beresh. 27, it is taught that men are heard by God on the ground either of their own merit or on that of others (Weber, 284, 285).

7. In 2 Kings xix. 35 ; Isa. xxxvii. 36, 185,000 is the complete number of the slain. In 2 Chron. xxxii. 21, only the slaughter of the chiefs is mentioned. From these two accounts the writer has worked up the present.

thousand, and each one of them had an equal number (at his command). 8. And at that time I burned their bodies within, but their raiment and arms I preserved outwardly, in order that the still more wonderful deeds of the Mighty One might appear, and that thereby His name might be spoken of throughout the whole earth. 9. Moreover, Zion was saved and Jerusalem delivered: Israel also was freed from tribulation. 10. And all those who were in the holy land rejoiced, and the name of the Mighty One was glorified so that it was spoken of. 11. These are the bright waters which thou hast seen.

LXIV. "And the black ninth waters which thou hast seen, this is all the wickedness which was in the days of Manasseh the son of Hezekiah. 2. For he wrought much impiety, and he slew the righteous, and he wrested judgment, and he shed the blood of the innocent, and wedded women he violently polluted, and he overturned the altars, and destroyed their offerings, and drove forth the priests lest they should minister in the sanctuary. 3. And he made an image with five faces: four of them looked to the LXIV. 3. He made an image with five faces: four of, etc. This is a very peculiar version of 2 Chron. xxxiii. 7. וַיַּעַשׂ אֱתֹנֶסֶת הָאֵלִים—"he set the graven image of the idol." The LXX. implies the Hebrew just given. The Syriac, however, exhibits an early gloss which prepares the way for our text. Thus it gives מַעֲבֹדִים אֲרְבָּעָה וְאֶחָד

אַחַד = "and he set the four-fronted image." The Arabic goes still further; it="and he set a statue having four heads with four faces." But the form of the tradition nearest to the text is found in the Talmud, Sanh. 103b: "At first he made for it (the idol) one face and in the end he made for it four faces, that the Shechinah might see and be provoked."

four winds, and the fifth on the summit of the image as an adversary of the zeal of the Mighty One. 4. And then wrath went forth from the presence of the Mighty One to the intent that Zion should be rooted out, as also it befell in your days. 5. But also against the two tribes and a half went forth a decree that they should also be led away captive, as thou hast now seen. 6. And to such a degree did the impiety of Manasseh increase, that it removed the praise of the Most High from the sanctuary. 7. On this account Manasseh was at that time named 'the impious,' and finally his abode was in the fire. 8. For though his prayer was heard with the Most High, finally, when he was cast into the brazen horse and the brazen horse was melted, it served as a sign unto him

6. Removed the praise of the Most High from the sanctuary. This may be explained by the statement in Sanh. 103b, that Manasseh erased the divine name and overturned the altar.

7. This verse runs counter to 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11-19, where it is clearly implied that Manasseh was really forgiven on his repentance. This writer declares, on the other hand, that Manasseh's experience in the brazen horse was only a foretaste of his future sufferings in hell. In the fire. See xlv. 15, note.

8. His prayer. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 19; The Prayer of Manasseh in the Apocrypha.

Cast into the brazen horse and the brazen horse was melted. This tradition appears in the Targum of Chronicles after 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11: "And the Chaldeans made a copper mule and pierced it all over with little holes, and shut him up therein and kindled fire all around him. . . . And he turned and prayed before the Lord his God. . . . And He shook the world with His word, and the mule burst asunder and he went forth therefrom." Traces of this tradition are also found in the Apostolic Constitutions ii. 22: καὶ ἐπήκουσε τῆς φωνῆς αὐτοῦ κύριος . . . καὶ ἐγένετο περὶ αὐτὸν πλῆξ πυρός καὶ ἐτάκῃσαν πάντα τὰ περὶ αὐτὸν σίδηρα. Also in Anastasius on Ps. vi. (Canisius, Thesaur. Monum. iii. 112) φασὶ οἱ ἀρχαῖοι τῶν ἱστοριογράφων, ὅτι ἀπενεχθεὶς Μανασσῆς κατεκλείσθη εἰς ζώδιον χαλκοῦν ἀπὸ βασιλέως Περσῶν καὶ ἔσω ὢν ἐν τοιοῦτῳ ζώδιῳ προσήύξατο μετὰ δακρύων. In Suidas (see Μανασσῆς): αἰχμάλωτος ἀπήχθη καὶ ἐς τὸ χαλκοῦν ἀγαλμα καθείρχθη . . . ἐδέηθη τοῦ κυρίου . . . καὶ τὸ μὲν ἀγαλμα θεία δυνάμει διεργάγη.

Served as a sign. See note on ver. 7.

at the time. 9. For he did not live perfectly, for he was not worthy—but that thenceforward he might know by whom finally he should be tormented. 10. For he who is able to benefit is also able to torment.

LXV. "Thus, moreover, did Manasseh act impiously, and thought that in his time the Mighty One would not inquire into these things. 2. These are the black ninth waters which thou hast seen.

LXVI. "And the bright tenth waters which thou hast seen: this is the purity of the generations of Josiah king of Judah, who was the only one at that time who submitted himself to the Mighty One with all his heart and with all his soul. 2. And he cleansed the land from idols, and hallowed all the vessels which had been polluted, and restored the offerings to the altar, and raised the horn of the holy, and exalted the righteous, and glorified all that were wise in understanding, and brought back the priests to their ministry, and destroyed and removed the magicians and enchanters and fortune-tellers from the land. 3. And not only did he slay the impious that were living, but they also took from the sepulchres

9. Text is corrupt.

LXVI. 1. The writer thus appears to have believed that though Manasseh prayed, yet he did not really repent. This view is found in Sanh. 101: "Our Rabbis have taught: there are three who came with cunning (before God): they are Cain, Esau, and Manasseh. . . . Manasseh at first called upon many gods, and at last upon the God of his fathers" [Rashi: "He said:

"If Thou save me not, what doth it profit me that I have called on Thee, more than the other gods?""] (quoted by Ball in his Comm. on The Prayer of Manasses). In Sanh. x. three kings are said to have no part in the future life, i.e. Jeroboam, Ahab, and Manasseh. Yet in the Debarim rabba, ii., salvation is ultimately said to be in store for Manasseh (Weber, 328).

the bones of the dead and burned them with fire. 4. [And the festivals and the sabbaths he established in their sanctity], and their polluted ones he burnt in the fire, and the lying prophets which deceived the people, these also he burnt in the fire, and the people who listened to them when they were living, he cast them into the brook Cedron, and heaped stones upon them. 5. And he was zealous with the zeal of the Mighty One with all his soul, and he alone was firm in the law at that time, so that he left none that was uncircumcised, or that wrought impiety in all the land, all the days of his life. 6. This, moreover, is he that shall receive an eternal reward, and he shall be glorified with the Mighty One beyond many at a later time. 7. For on his account and on account of those who are like him were the inestimable glories, of which thou wast told before, created and prepared. 8. These are the bright waters which thou hast seen.

LXVII. "And the black eleventh waters which thou hast seen: this is the calamity which is now befalling Zion. 2. Dost thou think that there is no anguish to the angels in the presence of the Mighty One, that Zion was so delivered up, and that lo! the Gentiles boast in their hearts, and assemble before their idols and say: 'She is trodden

4. The words which I have bracketed are either interpolated or misplaced. It would perhaps be best to read them after "to their ministry" in verse 2. In that case for "festival" we should read "festivals."

7. See note on xiv. 18.

LXVII. 2. Boast. Cf. v. 1; vii. 1; lxxx. 3. Assemble. The text  = "crowds" is corrupt. I have emended it into  = "assemble."

down who oftentimes trod down, and she has been reduced to servitude who reduced (others)?' 3. Dost thou think that in these things the Most High rejoices, or that His name is glorified? 4. But how will it serve towards His righteous judgment? 5. Yet after these things shall those that are dispersed among the Gentiles be taken hold of by tribulation, and in shame shall they dwell in every place. 6. Because so far as Zion is delivered up and Jerusalem laid waste, and idols prosper in the cities of the Gentiles, and the vapour of the smoke of the incense of righteousness which is by the law is extinguished in Zion and in the region of Zion, lo! in every place there is the smoke of impiety. 7. But the king of Babylon will arise who has now destroyed Zion, and he will boast over the people, and he will speak great things in his heart in the presence of the Most High. 8. But

5. "The dispersed" here seem to be the nine and a half tribes.

6-7. With the destruction of Jerusalem, godlessness is triumphant everywhere. In all the references in A³ to this destruction of Jerusalem, i.e. in lxiv. 4; lxvii. 2, 6, 7, there is no trace of consciousness in the mind of the writer that there was any divine interposition to save the sacred vessels of the temple and to destroy Zion by the agency of angels after the manner described in B¹, i.e. in vi. 4-10; lxxx. 1-3. If, further, we remark that the declared object of this interposition was to prevent the enemies of Zion boasting before their idols that they had laid it waste and burnt the temple (vii. 1; cf. v. 1; lxxx. 3), and if at the same time we observe that the writer of A³ represents the angel Ramiel as admitting that the Gentiles are boasting before their idols of their destruction of Zion (lxvii. 2), and that the king of Babylon makes the same vaunt (lxvii. 7), we can with tolerable certainty conclude that the ideas in B¹, i.e. in v. 1; vi. 4-vii. 1; lxxx. 1-3, were either unknown to him or else unacknowledged. These ideas seem foreign to B² also. This writer would have sympathised with the remonstrance in 4 Ezra v. 30: "Et si odians odisti populum tuum, tuis manibus debet castigari." In the Assumpt. Mosis (iii. 2) the capture of the sacred vessels by Nebuchadnezzar is acknowledged.

Righteousness which is by the law. See xv. 5, note.

he also shall fall at last. 9. These are the black waters.

LXVIII. "And the bright twelfth waters which thou hast seen: this is the word. 2. For after these things a time will come when thy people shall fall into distress, so that they shall all run the risk of perishing together. 3. Nevertheless, they will be saved, and their enemies will fall in their presence. 4. And they will have in (due) time much joy. 5. And at that time after a little interval Zion will again be builded, and its offerings will again be restored, and the priests will return to their ministry, and again the Gentiles will come to glorify it. 6. Nevertheless, not fully as in the beginning. 7. But it will come to pass after these things that there will be the fall of many nations. 8. These are the bright waters which thou hast seen.

LXIX. "For the last waters which thou hast seen which were darker than all that were before them, those which were after the twelfth number, which were collected together, belong to the whole world. 2. For the Most High made division from the beginning, because He alone knows what will befall. 3.

LXVIII. 2, 3. The danger the Jews encountered according to the book of Esther, and their subsequent triumph over their enemies. We have here the second earliest allusion to this O. T. book. The earliest is in 2 Macc. xv. 36.

5. The rebuilding of the temple (535-515).

6. On the lower estimation in which the second temple was held see Mal. i.-ii.; Eth. En. lxxxix. 73, 74; Assumpt. Mos. iv. 8. This temple, therefore, was standing when chapters liii.-lxxiv. were written.

LXIX. 1. Last. I have here adopted Ceriani's suggestion and read [𐤋𐤕𐤍] instead of [𐤋𐤕] = "other."

The last waters, etc. See liii. 7.

For as to the enormities of the impieties which should be wrought before Him, He foresaw six kinds of them.

4. And of the good works of the righteous which should be accomplished before Him, He foresaw six kinds of them, beyond those which He should work at the consummation of the age. 5. On this account there were not black waters with black, nor bright with bright; for it is the consummation.

LXX. "Hear therefore the interpretation of the last black waters which are to come [after the black]: this is the word. 2. Behold! the days come, and it will be when the time of the age has ripened, and the harvest of its evil and good seeds has come, that the Mighty One will bring upon the earth and its inhabitants and upon its rulers perturbation of spirit and stupor of heart. 3. And they will hate one another, and provoke one another to fight, and the mean will rule over the honourable, and those of low degree will be extolled above the famous. 4. And the many will be delivered into the hands of the few, and those who are nothing will rule over the strong, and the poor will have abundance beyond the rich, and the impious

3, 4. This division of the periods of the world into six good and six evil recalls Ecclus. xlii. 24 πάντα δισσά ἐν καρέναντι τοῦ ἐνός (cf. also xxxiii. 15).

4. Foresaw. So Ceriani rightly emends from "foresees"—merely a change of pointing.

Beyond those which, etc. These woes—the travail pains of the Messiah—are developed at length in lxx.-lxxii. (see liii. 7; lxix. 1).

LXX. 1. I have bracketed the words "after the black" as interpolated. They misrepresent the scheme of the writer; for the "last black waters" come after the bright twelfth waters in lxviii.

2. Its inhabitants. See xxv. 2, note. Stupor of heart. Cf. xxv. 2.

3-10. With this notable description of the last woes, cf. xxv. 2-4; xxvii.; xlviii. 31-39; 4 Ezra v. 1-12; vi. 20-24; ix. 1-9; xiii. 29-31 (see xxvii. 1, note).

3. Cf. xlviii. 37; Jubilees xxiii. 19; 4 Ezra vi. 24.

will exalt themselves above the heroic. 5. And the wise will be silent, and the foolish will speak, neither will the thought of men be then confirmed, nor the counsel of the mighty, nor will the hope of those who hope be confirmed. 6. Moreover, it will be when those things which were predicted have come to pass, that confusion will fall upon all men, and some of them will fall in battle, and some of them will perish in anguish, and some of them will be destroyed by their own. 7. Then the Most High will reveal to those peoples whom He has prepared before, and they will come and make war with the leaders that shall then be left. 8. And it will come to pass that whosoever gets safe out of the war will die in the earthquake, and whosoever gets safe out of the earthquake will be burned by the fire, and whosoever gets safe out of the fire will be destroyed by famine. [9. And it will come to pass that whosoever of the victors and

5. Cf. xlvi. 33, 36; 4 Ezra v. 9-11.

The mighty. The text which here reads ܠܠܡܝܬܝܢ = "the Mighty One," is wrong. We must read the plural ܠܠܡܝܬܝܢ = "the mighty." In lxxiv. 1 we must change the plural into the singular.

The hope of those who hope, etc. Cf. 4 Ezra v. 12.

6. Destroyed, etc. Cf. Mic. vii. 6; Matt. x. 35, 36; Luke xii. 53. The Syriac text = "will be hindered" is corrupt; for the context requires a strong expression. The corruption is traceable to the Hebrew. Thus "will be hindered" = καλυθῆσονται, which would be the usual LXX. rendering of יִכָּלֵם. That ܠܠܡܝܬܝܢ is a corruption of יִכָּלֵם = "will be destroyed" is clear from the fact that these two verbs are often confused in Hebrew, combined with the further fact that יִכָּלֵם = "will be destroyed" gives the exact sense we require.

7. Whom He has prepared before. Are these the hosts of Gog and Magog? if text in verse 9 is genuine.

8. In the earthquake. Cf. xxvii. 7; 4 Ezra ix. 3.

The fire. Cf. xxvii. 10; 4 Ezra, v. 8.

Will be destroyed. I have here followed Ceriani's emendation of ܠܡܝܬܝܢ = "he will add," into ܠܡܝܬܝܢ.

Famine. Cf. xxvii. 6.

9. I have with some doubt bracketed this verse as an inter-the vanquished gets safe out of and escapes all these things aforesaid will be delivered into the hands of My servant Messiah.] 10. For all the earth will devour its inhabitants.

LXXI. "And the holy land will have mercy on its own, and it will protect its inhabitants at that time. 2. This is the vision which thou hast seen, and this is the interpretation. 3. For I have come to tell thee these things, because thy prayer has been heard with the Most High.

LXXII. "Hear now also regarding the bright lightning which is to come at the consummation after these black (waters): this is the word. 2. After the signs have come, of which thou wast told before, when the potation. The appearance of the Messiah is premature. His advent does not really take place till lxxii. 2. Again verse 10 is the natural sequel to verse 8. Further, the extermination of the Gentiles is here implied, but only their partial destruction in lxxii. 4-6. Finally, since the Messiah is the defender of the righteous, lxxi. 1 is rather inappropriate. But lxxi. 1 is fitting if the Messiah has not yet come.

LXXI. See notes on xxix. 2. Observe that whereas God protects the inhabitants of Palestine in xxix. 2, and the Messiah protects them in xl. 2, it is the land that protects them here.

2. These words which should not occur till the end of the interpretation show that the text is dislocated. This will be obvious on other grounds as we proceed.

3. Cf. liv. 1.

LXXII. 1. The bright lightning = כִּנְוָה נֹרָא. So I have emended by means of liii. 8 the impossible text קְלָא נֹרָא = "the bright waters." It will be remembered that in the vision in liii. the last blackest waters (liii. 7) were not succeeded by bright waters, but by the lightning which illuminated and healed the earth and ruled over it (liii. 8-11). The lightning thus symbolised the Messiah. But in the interpretation of the close of the vision, the lightning is not even mentioned according to the present text, but in its place bright waters are spoken of, though in the vision in liii. none such are seen and none such contemplated throughout the entire interpretation up to the present chapter. The scheme of the writer of A³ was as we have seen above: twelve periods evil and good alternately, symbolised by black and bright waters respectively, followed by a period of woes—the blackest waters; and finally, the Messiah's kingdom which was prefigured by the lightning. The same emendation must be made in lxxiv. 4.

nations become turbulent, and the time of My Messiah is come, He will both summon all the nations, and some of them He will spare, and some of them He will slay. 3. These things therefore will come upon the nations which are to be spared by Him. 4. Every nation which knows not Israel, and has not trodden down the seed of Jacob, shall indeed be spared. 5. And this because some out of every nation will be subjected to thy people. 6. But all those who have ruled over you, or have known you, shall be given up to the sword.

LXXIII. "And it will come to pass, when He has brought low everything that is in the world, and has sat down in peace for the age on the throne of His kingdom, that joy will then be revealed, and rest appear. 2. And then healing will descend in dew, and disease will withdraw, and anxiety and anguish

Throughout lxxii. 1 the plurals are changed into the singular to agree with the singular subject.

4-6. The Messiah was to extend His dominion over the Gentiles (Ps. lxxii. 11, 17; Isa. xiv. 2; lxvi. 12, 19-21; Zech. xiv.; Eth. En. xc. 30; Pss. Sol. xvii. 32 καὶ ἔξει λαοὺς ἐθνῶν δουλεύειν αὐτῷ). But in the first century B.C. to which the Pss. Sol. belong, a harsher view of the destiny of the Gentiles began to prevail. In Eth. En. xxxvii.-lxx. and Assumpt. Mos. x. it seems to be that of annihilation; it is undoubtedly so in 4 Ezra xiii. 37, 38, 49, and all but universally in later Judaism; cf. Weber, 364-369, 376. A middle line is pursued in the text.

The Messiah here, as in xxxix. 7-xl.; 4 Ezra xii. 32, is a warrior who slays the enemies of Israel with His own hand. This view appears in the Targum of Jon. on Isa. x. 27, and of the pseudo-Jon. on Gen. xlix. 11. In Eth. En. lxii. 2; Pss. Sol. xvii. 27; 4 Ezra xiii. 38; as in Isa. xi. 4, He destroys them by the word of His mouth. But in the Eth. En. xc. 37; Ap. Bar. xxix. 2; 4 Ezra vii. 28, the conception of the Messiah is weak; he does not appear till evil has run its course; he has no active rôle; he reigns but does not rule.

LXXIII. 1. Cf. 1 Cor. xv. 24, 25.

Joy will be revealed. The text reads "will be revealed in joy," but this destroys the parallelism with "rest will appear." I have omitted the preposition before "joy."

2. Healing will descend in dew. Cf. xxix. 7.

and lamentation will pass from amongst men, and gladness will proceed through the whole earth. 3. And no one shall again die untimely, nor shall any adversity suddenly befall. 4. And judgments, and revilings, and contentions, and revenges, and blood, and passions, and envy, and hatred, and whatsoever things are like these shall go into condemnation when they are removed. 5. For it is these very things which have filled this world with evils, and on account of these the life of man has been greatly troubled. 6. And wild beasts will come from the forest and minister unto men, and asps and dragons will come forth from their holes to submit themselves to a little child. 7. And women will no longer then have pain when they bear, nor will they suffer torment when they yield the fruit of the womb.

LXXIV. "And it will come to pass in those days that the reapers will not grow weary, nor those that build be toilworn; for the works will of themselves speedily advance with those who do them in much tranquillity. 2. For that time is the consummation of that which is corruptible, and the beginning of that which is not corruptible. 3. Therefore those things which were predicted will belong to it: therefore it is far away from evils, and near to those things which die not. 4. This is the bright lightning which came after the last dark waters."

3. Untimely. See liv. 15.

4. Cf. Or. Sibyl. iii. 376-380, 751-755.

6. Cf. Isa. xi. 6-9; lxv. 25; Or. Sibyl. iii. 620-623, 743-750.

LXXIV. 2. Cf. xl. 2.

4. This is the bright lightning. Emended from "these are the last bright waters." See lxxii. 1, note.

LXXV. And I answered and said: "Who can understand, O Lord, Thy goodness? for it is incomprehensible. 2. Or who can search into Thy compassions, which are infinite? 3. Or who can comprehend Thy intelligence? 4. Or who is able to recount the thoughts of Thy mind? 5. Or who of those that are born can hope to come to those things, unless he is one to whom Thou art merciful and gracious? 6. Because, if assuredly Thou didst not have compassion on man, those who are under Thy right hand, they could not come to those things, but those who are in the numbers named can be called. 7. But if, indeed, we who exist know wherefore we have come, and submit ourselves to Him who brought us out of Egypt, we shall come again and remember those things which have passed, and shall rejoice regarding that which has

LXXV.- LXXVI. = B².

LXXV.-LXXVI. With these chapters we return again to B². We should observe that according to lxxv. 1 Baruch replies to the last speaker who has interpreted the vision in liii. for him. This speaker Baruch addresses as God. But the last speaker was not God but the angel Ramiel from whom is derived lv. 4-lxxiv. Thus we see that lxxv. does not belong to liii.-lxxiv.

LXXV. 1. Can understand. I have emended 𐤀𐤁𐤁𐤁𐤁 = "can be likened to" into 𐤀𐤁𐤁𐤁 = "can understand," and omitted the 𐤁 in 𐤁𐤁𐤁𐤁𐤁.

2. The mercies of God are not dwelt upon much in this book. The righteous are fully conscious of their worth (cf. xiv. 7, note). We have, however, a prayer for God's mercy in xlvi. 18, and an acknowledgment of God's long-suffering in xxiv. 2, but this is shown alike to the righteous and the wicked. God is merciful (lxxvii. 7) and His compassions are infinite (lxxv. 2); He has dealt with Baruch according to the multitude of the tender mercies (lxxxi. 4); if God had not compassion on man, he could not attain to the world to come (lxxv. 5, 6). For references to mercy in 4 Ezra, see vii. 132-134; viii. 31, 32, 36, 45; xii. 48.

5, 6. Those things. Probably the blessed immortality described in li.

6. Who are under Thy right hand. Cf. Ps. lxxx. 17.

7. We shall come again, i.e. in the resurrection described in l. This verse deals with the destiny of the obedient and the righteous; the next with that of the disobedient.

been. 8. But if now we know not wherefore we have come, and recognise not the principate of Him who brought us up out of Egypt, we shall come again and seek after those things which were now, and be grieved with pain because of those things which have befallen."

LXXVI. And He answered and said unto me: ["Inasmuch as the revelation of this vision has been interpreted to thee as thou besoughtest], hear the word of the Most High that thou mayest know what is to befall thee after these things. 2. For thou shalt surely depart from this earth, nevertheless not unto death but thou shalt be preserved unto the consummation of the times. 3. Go up therefore to the top of that mountain, and there will pass before thee all the regions of that land, and the figure of the inhabited world, and the top of the mountains, and the depth of the valleys, and the depths of the seas, and the number of the rivers, that thou mayest see what thou art leaving, and whither thou art going. 4. Now this will befall after forty days. 5. Go now therefore during LXXVI. 1. The earlier half of this verse is probably due to the final editor.

Hear the word of the Most High. This same mode of speech in which God speaks of Himself in the third person is found in xiii. 2: "Hear the word of the Mighty God," and also in xxv. 1, where the same statements are made in each case.

2. See note on xiii. 3.

Thou shalt be preserved until the consummation of the times. The Syr. here ܕܢܩܝܬܐ ܕܝܡܝܢܐ = "unto the observance of the times." If we compare the parallel passage, xxv. 1, we see that the above must be emended into ܕܢܩܝܬܐ ܕܝܡܝܢܐ, "thou shalt be preserved unto the times," or else into the fuller form we find in xvii. 3. I have done the latter in the text.

3. Cf. Deut. xxxiv. 1-3; Matt. iv. 8. Is the mountain here Nebo as in Deuteronomy?

4. Forty days. Cf. Exod. xxiv. 18; xxxiv. 28; Deut. ix. 9, 18. Analogous to this forty days to be these days and instruct the people so far as thou art able, that they may learn so as not to die at the last time, but may learn in order that they may live at the last times."

LXXVII. And I, Baruch, went thence and came to the people, and assembled them together from the greatest to the least, and said unto them: 2. "Hear, ye children of Israel, behold how many ye are who remain of the twelve tribes of Israel. 3. For to you and to your fathers the Lord gave a law beyond all peoples. 4. And because your brethren transgressed the commandments of the Most High, He brought vengeance upon you and upon them, and He spared not spent by Baruch in teaching the people are the forty days assigned to Ezra, in which he was to restore the O.T. Scriptures (cf. 4 Ezra xiv. 23, 42, 44, 45).

LXXVII.-
LXXXII.=B¹.

5. Live. See xli. 1, note.

In LXXVIII. - LXXXVII. we have the conclusion of B¹. But of these chapters two are from other sources; LXXXIII. is from B², and LXXXV. from B³. For the grounds for these conclusions, see the notes in loc. For a comprehensive treatment of the two sources, B¹ and B², the reader must consult the Introduction. The chief differences between B¹ and B² are: In the former an earthly felicity is looked for, in the latter not; in the former the dispersion is to return, in the latter not; in the former the earthly Jerusalem is to be rebuilt, in the latter not; in the former Baruch is to die, in the latter to be translated; in the former Jeremiah is not sent to Babylon, in the latter he is. Thus the portions derived respectively from B¹ and B² are as follows:—

From B¹ i.-iv. 1; v.-ix. 1; xliii.-xliv. 7; xlv.-xlv. 6; lxxvii.-lxxxii.; lxxxiv., lxxxvi., lxxxvii. From B² ix. 2-xii. (?); xiii. 1-3a; xx.; xxiv. 2-4; xiii. 3b-12; xxv., xiv.-xix.; xxi.-xxiv. 1; xxx. 2-5; xli., xlii.; xlviii. 1-47; xlix.-lii. 3; lxxv.; xxxi.-xxxii. 6; liv. 17, 18; xlviii. 48-50; lii. 5-7; liv. 16; xlv. 8-15; lxxxiii.; xxxii. 7-xxxv.; lxxvi. The portions derived from B² are restored to what seems to have been their original order in that source.

LXXVII. 1. From the greatest to the least. A favourite expression in Jeremiah (cf. vi. 13; viii. 10; xxxi. 34; xlii. 1, 8; xlv. 12; 4 Ezra xii. 40). Only in these it runs: "From the least to the greatest."

2. The twelve tribes which are here mentioned are treated of in their two main divisions in verse 4. Cf. lxxviii. 4; lxxxiv. 3.

3. A law. See xv. 5, note.

4. Upon you. I.e. the 2½ tribes = "the former" in the next line.

Upon them. The 9½ tribes = "the latter" in the next line.

the former, and the latter also He gave into captivity, and left not a residue of them. 5. And behold! ye are here with me. 6. If therefore ye direct your ways aright, ye also will not depart as your brethren departed, but they will come to you. 7. For He is merciful whom ye worship, and He is gracious in whom ye hope, and He is true, so that He shall do (you) good and not evil. 8. Lo! have ye not seen what has befallen Zion? 9. Or do ye perchance think that the place had sinned, and that on this account it was overthrown, or that the land had wrought foolishness, and that therefore it was delivered up? 10. And know ye not that on account of you who did sin, that which sinned not was overthrown, and, on account of those who wrought wickedly, that which wrought not foolishness was delivered up to (its) enemies." 11. And the whole people answered and said unto me: "So

Hath not left a residue of them. I.e. of the $9\frac{1}{2}$ tribes. This denies the Samaritan claim.

5. Cf. lxxx. 5; 4 Ezra xiv. 33. 4 Ezra xiv. 30-33 seems to be dependent on lxxvii. 3-6. Those who are left with Baruch are a remnant of the $2\frac{1}{2}$ tribes.

6. As your brethren departed. "The brethren" here embrace the $2\frac{1}{2}$ tribes, and so we interpret the subsequent words, "and they will come to you." On the return of the $9\frac{1}{2}$ tribes see note on lxxviii. 7.

7. Do (you) good and not evil. Cf. Jer. xxi. 10; Amos ix. 4.

8. = xliv. 5. Cf. x. 7; xiii. 3; lxxix. 1.

9. It was not the place that sinned. Hence it was destroyed by the hands of angels before it was delivered over to the king of Babylon, lest he should glory over it. Cf. v.-viii., lxxx.; see note on lxvii. 6.

10. Observe that the fall of Jerusalem is here attributed not only to the sins of the $2\frac{1}{2}$ tribes but also of the $9\frac{1}{2}$. This view appears first in Jer. xi. 17: "For the Lord of hosts that planted thee hath pronounced evil against thee, because of the evil of the house of Israel and of the house of Judah." Cf. Bar. ii. 26 καὶ ἔθηκας τὸν οἶκον οὗ ἐπεκλήθη τὸ ὄνομά σου ἐπ' αὐτῷ, ὡς ἡ ἡμέρα αὐτῇ, διὰ πονηρίαν οἰκοῦ Ἰσραὴλ καὶ οἰκοῦ Ἰούδα. Assumpt. Moyseos, iii. 5, where the two tribes say to the ten: "justus et sanctus Dominus, quia enim vos peccastis, et nos pariter abducti sumus vobiscum. Cf. also Targ. Jon. on Isa. liii. 5.

far as we can recall the good things which the Mighty One has done unto us, we do recall them; and those things which we do not remember He in His mercy knows. 12. Nevertheless, do this for us thy people: write also to our brethren in Babylon an epistle of doctrine and a scroll of good tidings, that thou mayest confirm them also before thou dost depart from us. 13. For the shepherds of Israel have perished, and the lamps which gave light are extinguished, and the fountains have withheld their stream whence we used to drink. 14. And we are left in the darkness, and amid the briers of the forest, and the thirst of the wilderness." 15. And I answered and said unto them: "Shepherds and lamps and fountains came (to us) from the law: and though we depart, yet the law abideth. 16. If therefore ye have respect to the law, and are intent upon wisdom, a lamp will not be wanting, and a shepherd will not fail, and a fountain will not dry up. 17. Nevertheless, as ye said unto me, I will write also unto your brethren in Babylon, 12. To our brethren in Babylon, i.e. the 2½ tribes. Cf. verse 19; lxxxv.

6. Observe that the writer does not conceive here of Jeremiah being at Babylon. If he had, he would have directed the letter to him. In the Rest of the Words of Baruch, on the other hand, the writer, conceiving Jeremiah to be in Babylon, directs to him the letter intended for the exiles there. This letter (cf. lxxvii. 17, 19; lxxxv. 6) to the 2½ tribes is lost.

Good tidings. Cf. xlvi. 6.

Depart. This refers to an ordinary death (cf. xliii. 2, note; see also xliii. 3, note; lxxviii. 5; lxxxiv. 1).

14. We are left in darkness. xlvi. 2; cf. 4 Ezra xiv. 20.

Briers. The text is מִשְׁרֵי = ὕλη, which is the LXX. rendering of שִׁמְרִי in Isa. x. 17. I have supposed a similar rendering here. Or ὕλη may be a rendering of עֵץ = "trees," and this a corruption of צִי = "thorns." Something is wrong.

15. The law. See xv. 5, note.

16. Shepherd. The text reads לֵבָיִי = "mind," which Ceriani has rightly emended into לֵשָׁיִי = "shepherd."

and I will send by means of men, and I will write in like manner to the nine tribes and a half, and send by means of a bird." 18. And it came to pass on the one and twentieth day in the eighth month that I, Baruch, came and sat down under the oak under the shadow of the branches, and no man was with me, but I was alone. 19. And I wrote these two epistles: one I sent by an eagle to the nine and a half tribes; and the other I sent to those that were at Babylon by means of three men. 20. And I called the eagle, and spake these words unto it: 21. "The Most High hath made thee that thou shouldst be higher than all birds. 22. And now go and tarry not in (any) place, nor enter a nest, nor settle upon any tree, till thou hast passed over the breadth of the many waters of the river Euphrates, and hast gone to the people that dwell there, and cast down to them this epistle. 23. Remember, moreover, that, at the time of the deluge, Noah received from a dove the fruit of the olive, when he sent it forth from the ark. 24. Yea, also the ravens ministered to Elijah, bearing him food, as they had been commanded. 25. Solomon also, in the time

17. A bird. This is an eagle (cf. ver. 20). It is worth observing that whereas an eagle carries this letter to the $9\frac{1}{2}$ tribes here, in the Rest of the Words of Baruch vii. it is an eagle that carries Baruch's letter to Jeremiah in Babylon.

18. The oak. See vi. 1, note; cf. 4 Ezra xiv. 1.

21. Cf. Rest of Words of Baruch vii. 3: "Elect above all the birds of heaven."

22. The $9\frac{1}{2}$ tribes were carried away to Assyria and placed in Halah, and in Habor, on the river of Gozan (2 Kings xvii. 6). Their abode, according to 4 Ezra xiii. 40, 45, was Arzareth, i.e. ארץ אחרת Deut. xxix. 28; Joseph. Ant. xi. 5, 2.

23. Cf. Gen. viii. 11; Rest of Words of Baruch vii. 10: "Be like the dove which three times brought back word to Noah."

24. Cf. 1 Kings xvii. 6.

of his kingdom, whithersoever he wished to send or seek for anything, commanded a bird (to go thither), and it obeyed him as he commanded it. 26. And now let it not weary thee, and turn not to the right hand nor to the left, but fly and go by a direct way, that thou mayest preserve the command of the Mighty One, according as I said unto thee."

26. Cf. Rest of Words vii. 12.

THE EPISTLE OF BARUCH WHICH HE WROTE TO THE NINE AND A HALF TRIBES

LXXVIII. These are the words of that epistle which Baruch the son of Neriah sent to the nine and a half tribes, which were across the river Euphrates, in which these things were written. 2. Thus saith Baruch the son of Neriah to the brethren carried into captivity: "Mercy and peace." 3. I bear in mind, my brethren, the love of Him who created us, who loved LXXVIII. 1. The nine and a half tribes. In this book the tribes of Israel carried away by the king of Assyria are, except in i. 2, always so designated (cf. lxii. 5; lxxvii. 19). In 4 Ezra xiii. 40 they are called "the ten tribes" only in the Latin Version, but "the nine and a half tribes" in the Syriac and Arabic Versions; in Asc. Isa. iii. 2 and in the Ethiopic Version of 4 Ezra xiii. 40 they are called the "nine tribes."

2. Mercy and peace. 1 Tim. i. 2.

3. It is noteworthy that in the genuine parts of B¹ in chaps. lxxvii.-lxxxvii. Baruch speaks frequently in the first person sing. (see lxxvii. 1, 5, 11, 15, 17-20, 26; lxxviii. 3, of Baruch the scribe'; kP, 'the Epistle of Baruch'; mn, 'the first Epistle of Baruch.'

LXXVIII. 1. אלה האלה 'these are,' c; ואלה 'and these,' abdegghiWP; f, אלה. אלה 'of that Epistle,' c; wrongly om. by abdegghiWP. אלה אלה abcgh; defWP, אלה. אלה 'Euphrates,' abdegghiWP. c om.

2. אלה אלה c; abdegghiWP, אלה אלה; g, אלה אלה. ואלה 'and peace,' abdegghiWP; c. reads אלה אלה 'and peace be unto you.'

3. אלה 'who created us,' abdegghilWP; c wrongly אלה

בִּי הָיָה כְּחֵץ לִי LXXVIII.
 רָחֵם . הַחַיִּים לְעַבְדֶּךָ
 1 אֱלֹהִים . שְׁלֵמֵךָ אֲנִי
 אֱלֹהִים בְּיָדְךָ
 שֶׁנִּתְּנָה בְּיָדְךָ בְּיָדְךָ
 לְעַבְדֶּךָ אֱלֹהִים .
 שְׁלֵמֵךָ אֲנִי אֱלֹהִים
 כְּדָבָרְךָ שֶׁנִּתְּנָה . בְּיָדְךָ אֱלֹהִים
 2 אֱלֹהִים בְּיָדְךָ . שְׁלֵמֵךָ
 אֱלֹהִים בְּיָדְךָ .
 לְעַבְדֶּךָ אֱלֹהִים .
 שְׁלֵמֵךָ .
 3 חֲסִידְךָ אֲנִי אֱלֹהִים
 בְּיָדְךָ אֱלֹהִים

For some account of the MSS. abcdefghiklmn see the General Introduction.

TITLE.—I have here given c, though what the title was is uncertain. a reads אֱלֹהִים בְּיָדְךָ אֱלֹהִים בְּיָדְךָ אֱלֹהִים; so g, but that it om. אֱלֹהִים and b, but that it om. אֱלֹהִים, אֱלֹהִים and אֱלֹהִים. di give אֱלֹהִים בְּיָדְךָ אֱלֹהִים בְּיָדְךָ אֱלֹהִים; so w, but that it om. אֱלֹהִים and בְּיָדְךָ before אֱלֹהִים, and ef, but that they om. אֱלֹהִים and אֱלֹהִים. l, אֱלֹהִים בְּיָדְךָ אֱלֹהִים בְּיָדְךָ אֱלֹהִים 'the first Epistle of Baruch, the son of Neriah'; h, 'the Epistle us from of old, and never hated us, but above all educated us. 4. And truly I know that behold all we the twelve tribes are bound by one chain, inasmuch as we are born from one father. 5. Wherefore I have been the more careful to leave you the words of this epistle before I die, that ye may be comforted regarding the evils which have come upon you, and that ye may be grieved also regarding the evil that has befallen your brethren: and again, also, that ye may justify His judgment which He has decreed against you that ye should be carried away captive—for what ye have suffered is disproportioned to what ye have done—in order that, at the last times, ye may be found

4, 5; lxxx. 7; lxxxi. 2, 4; lxxxii. 1; lxxxiv. 1, 6, 7; lxxxvi. 3; lxxxvii.) In the interpolated portions this is not so.

4. Twelve tribes. lxxvii. 2; lxxxiv. 3.

5. Before I die. See xiii. 3, note.

Justify. See xxi. 9, note. Cf. Ps. li. 4; Dan. ix. 14; Baruch ii. 9.

For what ye . . . done is parenthetical. Cf. lxxix. 2.

That in the last times, etc. These words refer to the return of the 9½ tribes (see note on ver. 7).

4. |ת| 'that behold,' abdefghiWP; c wrongly בך 'that not.'
בג; adefhiWP, אבג.

5. |ז| abdefghiWP; c trs. ז defiWP om. אבג
abdefghilWP; c, אבג. אבג 'evil that has befallen,' abdefghiWP; c, אבג 'evils that have befallen.'
אבג abdefghilWP; c, אבג. אבג, a by a clerical error gives אבג. אבג, *acd*h; befgi, אבג. אבג c; abdefghiWP, אבג. אבג ch; b, אבג.

worthy of your fathers. 6. Therefore if ye consider those things which ye have now suffered for your good, that ye may not finally be condemned and tormented, then ye will receive eternal hope; if above all ye destroy from your heart vain error, on account of which ye departed hence. 7. For if ye so do these things, He will continually remember you, He who always promised on our behalf to those who were more excellent than we, that He will never forget or forsake us, but with much mercy will gather together again those who were dispersed.

6. Departed hence. I.e. from Palestine.

7. Those who were more excellent. The patriarchs.

With much mercy. In 4 Ezra xiv. 34, 35 the righteous are to obtain mercy after death. Here God's mercy will be shown to Israel by causing them to return from their captivity.

Gather together . . . those who were dispersed. Cf. lxxvii. 6; lxxxiv. 2, 8, 10. The promise that God would turn again the captivity of Israel is frequently made in the O. T. (cf. Deut. xxx. 3; Amos ix. 11-15; Isa. xi. 12; Jer. xxiii. 3; xxix. 14; xxxi. 10; xxxii. 37; Ezek. xxxvii. 21-28; Zeph. iii. 19, 20; also in Bar. iv. 36, 37; v. 5-7; Pss. Sol. xi.; 2 Macc. ii. 18). The prediction of the return of the exiles is found also in Tob. xiii. 13; Eth. En. lvii. 1, 2; xc. 33; Or. Sibyl. ii. 170-173; 4 Ezra xiii. 12, 39-47. Either as in the preceding passages God was to procure their return directly; or else indirectly (a) through the agency of the nations who should carry back to Jerusalem the dispersed as offerings (cf. Isa. xlix. 22; lx. 4, 9; lxvi. 20; Pss. Sol. xvii. 34); (b) by means of the Messiah (cf. Pss. Sol. xvii. 28, 30, 50; Targ. Jon. on Jer. xxxiii. 13); (c) by means of Elijah (cf. Ecclus. xlviii. 10). These different methods are not mutually exclusive. In the presence of this strongly attested hope of the restoration of the dispersed it is strange to find it positively denied by R. Akiba (Sanh. x. 3): "The ten tribes will nevermore return; for it is said of them (Deut. xxix. 28): 'He will cast them into another land, as this day.' Hence as this day passes away and does not return, so shall they pass away and not return. So R. Akiba."

The return of the exiles in B¹ accords well with the rebuilding of Jerusalem which is elsewhere expected in B¹. See i. 4; vi. 9, notes.

6 בַּחֲסֵדָה . עֲלֵה־נָּה

אֶל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם

וְכִלְקָדָה מִמֶּלֶךְ־שָׁמַיִם .

בְּנֵי־לִמְּזִיזִים

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם .

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם .

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם .

7 אֶל־בְּנֵי־שֶׁלֹּם .

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם .

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם .

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם .

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם

וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם

6. עֲלֵה־נָּה; c; bdefgilWP, וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם; ah give conflate reading, וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם .

7. עַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם, c adds וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם 'will not forget or forsake us,' abdefghimWP; c, וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם 'will not forget or forsake our seed.' וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם 'those,' abdefghWP; c, וְעַל־מִצְבֵּה־שֶׁלֹּם 'all those.'

LXXIX. Now, my brethren, learn first what befell Zion: how that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up against us. 2. For we have sinned against Him who made us, and we have not kept the commandments which He commanded us, yet He hath not chastened us as we deserved. 3. For what befell you we also suffered in a pre-eminent degree, for it befell us also.

LXXX. And now, my brethren, I make known unto you that when the enemy had surrounded the city, the angels of the Most High were sent, and they overthrew the fortifications of the strong wall, and they LXXIX. 1. What befell Zion.

See lxxvii. 8, note.

2. We have sinned, etc. Cf. Baruch i. 17, 18.

Chastened. Cf. i. 5; xiii. 10.

As we deserved. Cf. lxxviii. 5.

LXXX. This chapter closely resembles and implies vi.-viii., but lxvii. proceeds upon different pre-suppositions. See lxvii. 6, note.

1. Fortifications of the strong wall.
Cf. vii. 1.

*bdefghi*WP. *bdefghi*WP read  'but likewise that which has befallen you has overtaken us: in a pre-eminent degree have we suffered also'; so also a, but that it inserts וְ before , a conflate reading as in lxxviii. 6: all readings seem corrupt.  ce; bh, ; fi, .  abg; cdh, ; fi, ; WP,  'our calamity.'

LXXX. 1.  'I make known unto you that,' *abdefghi*WP; c wrongly om.  abcdfghilm; ewp om. o 'and.'  'fortifications,' *abdefghilm*WP; c,

LXXIX. 1 לַמֶּלֶךְ בְּלִדְוֹזֹ . — . מַחֲמֵל

אֲנִיב תְּמַמֵּם מְחַמֵּם

כְּמַחֲמֵם בְּעַלְמֵי מְחַמֵּם

כְּמַחֲמֵם . בְּמַחֲמֵם מַחֲמֵם

בְּמַחֲמֵם מַחֲמֵם בְּמַחֲמֵם .

2 בְּמַחֲמֵם מַחֲמֵם בְּמַחֲמֵם .

וּלְמַחֲמֵם מַחֲמֵם

בְּמַחֲמֵם אֵל אֵל

זֶה אֵל בְּמַחֲמֵם מַחֲמֵם .

3 עַלְמֵי מַחֲמֵם בְּמַחֲמֵם

בְּמַחֲמֵם מַחֲמֵם מַחֲמֵם .

.. אֵל אֵל בְּמַחֲמֵם מַחֲמֵם

LXXX. 1 מַחֲמֵם אֵל אֵל בְּמַחֲמֵם בְּמַחֲמֵם

בְּמַחֲמֵם מַחֲמֵם מַחֲמֵם .

אֵל אֵל בְּמַחֲמֵם

בְּמַחֲמֵם מַחֲמֵם מַחֲמֵם

LXXIX. 1. מַחֲמֵם abdefghiWP; c, מַחֲמֵם. abogh; defWP, מַחֲמֵם. efhi; bg, בְּמַחֲמֵם בְּמַחֲמֵם.

2. מַחֲמֵם bdfghiWP; ac, מַחֲמֵם. b(ad?)efghiWP; c, בְּמַחֲמֵם. chWP; abdefgil, מַחֲמֵם 'commandments,' chWP; abdefgil, מַחֲמֵם 'commandment.'

2—3. מַחֲמֵם לְ 'yet He hath not chastened . . . degree'; so c, save that I have om. ? before מַחֲמֵם, with destroyed the firm iron corners, which could not be rooted out. 2. Nevertheless, they hid all the vessels of the sanctuary, lest the enemy should get possession of them. 3. And when they had done these things, they delivered thereupon to the enemy the overthrown wall, and the plundered house, and the burnt temple, and the people who were overcome because they were delivered up, lest the enemy should boast and say: "Thus by force have we been able to lay waste even the house of the Most High in war." 4. Your brethren

Its . . . corners. Cf. vi. 4 ; viii. 1.

2. Hide all the vessels. Cf. vi. 7, 8. The ultimate motive for hiding the holy vessels can only be that given in vi. 9.

All the vessels of the sanctuary. The Syriac gives the impossible text, "the vessels of the vessels." The corruption becomes obvious when we retranslate into Hebrew. Thus the words = כלים מבלי הקרש = corrupted from כל-כלי הקרש. I have emended accordingly.

Lest the enemy should get possession of them. The Syriac = "lest they should be polluted by the enemies." But the parallel passage in vi. 8, "So that strangers may not get possession of them," expresses the idea we should find here; for the object with which the vessels are hidden is their preservation for use in the restored temple (vi. 7-10). Further, we find that the corrupt text which = פן יחלו מארבים becomes by the addition of a single letter פן יחלום ארבים = "lest the enemy should get possession of them."

3. Plundered house, and the burnt temple. Cf. v. 3 ; vi. 6, 7.

Should boast. Cf. vii. 1. Contrast lxvii. 2, 7.

4. Cf. viii. 5. Observe that there is no mention here of Jeremiah

'who were overcome,' abdefgiwP; so h, but that it gives the plural; c, ܩܘܒܝܢ. ܒ. 'because,' abcgh; defiWp, ܩܕܡܝܢ. 'when.' ܩܕܡܝܢ. b reads ܩܕܡܝܢ. b; adefghiWp, ܩܕܡܝܢ. c, ܩܕܡܝܢ. 'by force,' abdefghiWp; c wrongly om. ܩܕܡܝܢ. bdefghiWp; a, ܩܕܡܝܢ.

also have they bound and led away to Babylon, and have caused them to dwell there. 5. But we have been left here, being very few. 6. This is the tribulation about which I wrote to you. 7. For assuredly I know that the habitation of Zion gave you consolation: so far as ye knew that it was prospered (your consolation) was greater than the tribulation which ye endured in having departed from it.

LXXXI. But regarding consolation, hear ye the word. 2. For I was mourning regarding Zion, and I prayed for mercy from the Most High, and I said:

though, according to x. 5, he went with the captivity to Babylon. See x. 2, note.

5. From Jer. xlii. 2, where the words are spoken of the remnant in Jerusalem (cf. Deut. iv. 27; Baruch ii. 13). The two latter passages deal with the remnant among the Gentiles.

LXXXI. As in lxxx. 7 the 9½ tribes had consolation in the fact that Jerusalem prospered and were proportionately grieved on its overthrow, Baruch has now a word of consolation for them touching Zion (lxxxi. 1); for, when in his grief over it (lxxxi. 2), he asked God how long should this desolation last (lxxxi. 3), God, to give him consolation, vouchsafed a revelation as to the mysteries of the times and removed his anguish (lxxxi. 4).

1. Regarding consolation. This word refers to the restoration of Zion. Cf. xliv. 7; lxxxi. 4; lxxxii. 1.

bdefghilw פ ; ac, חֲבִיטִים 'habitations.' לְבָרְכָהּ '(your consolation) was greater than,' abcdeg חֵי ; f וְכִי , which requires the following rendering: 'the more assured ye were that it prospered, the greater was the tribulation.'

LXXXI. 1. וְכִי abcefg חֵי ; d וְכִי , לְבָרְכָהּ .

2. וְכִי c; abdefghi וְכִי , וְכִי .

4 אֶל לְתַמְדָּהּ בְּדִי
 וְהָיָה לְבָבִי . וְדַעְתִּי

5 אִנִּי אֶל . וְהָיָה לְבָבִי
 מִן הַתְּדָר . מִלֵּל וְדַעְתִּי .

6 תִּשְׁתַּחֲוֶה לְפָנָיו
 בְּהַלְלָתוֹ לְבָרָהּ דְּלִמְסָה .
 7 הִתְהַלַּח לְפָנָיו מִן הַלֵּל .
 בְּחַבְלָתוֹ לְבָרָהּ
 דַּעְתִּי וְתִשְׁתַּחֲוֶה . דַּעְתִּי
 בְּמִלְכָּהּ וְהָיָה לְבָבִי
 לְמִלְכָּהּ מִן הַלֵּל
 בְּחַבְלָתוֹ לְבָרָהּ
 וְהָיָה לְבָבִי מִן הַלֵּל . וְדַעְתִּי .
 1 LXXXI. אֶל אֶל דְּלִמְסָה
 2 מִלְכָּהּ מִלְכָּהּ . אֶל אֶל
 מִלְכָּהּ מִן הַלֵּל
 תִּשְׁתַּחֲוֶה . וְהָיָה לְבָבִי

4. *acdefghi*WP; bg, אֶל. *bcdefghil*WP; a, לְתַמְדָּהּ. For לְבָבִי l reads וְהָיָה לְבָבִי. abc;
*defghi*WP, לְבָבִי; h, לְבָבִי.

5. abeg; *defh*WP, לְבָבִי. bc; *adfh*WP om.

6. *cefg*hi; b, לְבָבִי.

7. *abcd*fg*hi*; *l*WP, לְבָבִי. דַּעְתִּי 'habitation,'

3. "How long will these things endure for us? and will these evils come upon us always?" 4. And the Mighty One did according to the multitude of His mercies, and the Most High according to the greatness of His compassion, and He revealed unto me the word, that I might receive consolation, and He showed me visions that I should not again endure anguish, and He made known to me the mystery of the times, and the advent of the hours He showed me.

LXXXII. Therefore, my brethren, I have written to you, that ye may comfort yourselves regarding the multitude of your tribulations. 2. For know ye that our Maker will assuredly avenge us on all our enemies, according to all that they have done to us, also that

4. The multitude . . . compassion. Cf. Dan. ix. 18; Bar. ii. 27; cf. lxxvi. 6.

Consolation. See verse 1.

Mystery of the times. Cf. lxxxv. 8.

LXXXII. I am doubtful as to whether lxxxii. 2-9 belongs to B¹ or B². I am inclined to believe the latter. But the evidence is not decisive either way.

4. סבב 'and . . . did,' c; abdefghiwp, דבב 'who did.' דספסמ 'of His mercies,' abegh; defiwp, דספסמ 'of mercies.' אבגח; cdefilwp, אבגח. אן 'mystery,' abdefghiwp; ch, אן 'mysteries.'

LXXXII. 1. אבגח 'of your tribulations,' abgh; defiwp, אבגח 'of your tribulation'; c, אבגח 'of tribulations.'

2. אבגח abdfghwp; c, אבגח. אבגח c; abefghlmwp, אבגח; di om. point. א 'us,' abdefghilmwp; c om. אבגח; c; abdefghiwp, אבגח. א 'to us'; c adds אבגח 'and in us,' against abdefghiwp. אבגח abdefghiwp; c, o. אבגח

[illegible]

لَا عِلْمَ لَنَا بِشَيْءٍ مِّنْهَا

ۛے . ٲٲٲٲٲٲ آٲٲٲ ٲٲٲٲ

4. دقيق الشعير . وجبة

مسند ابی امر مہدی

ۛۛۛۛۛۛۛ . ۛۛۛۛۛۛۛ

אמר זכור למנוח .

[illegible]

247. 000000

مفتونہ امر دہکتا ہے

222. 010. 222

ጸሐፊው ፡ ከነ፣ ካቢ

LXXXII. 1.

ਸਤਿਨਾਮੁ ਅੰਤਮੁ ਆਦਿ ਕਹਾ

✽ : 22-24 : 25

የሰላም ፡ የልማት ፡ የሥራ 2

[illegible]

ՀԱՅՔԻ ԱՆՈՒՄ

دندہ قلم . امر و صلا عدا

ॐ नमो भगवते वासुदेवाय ।

3. ረገሱ ለጊዜው ይቆያል፤ 'how long ... these things?'

abdefghilmwp; c, ܐܠܡܝܢܐ ܕܥܕܐ '(will) these things
... to the end?' ܕܥܡܝܢܐ 'upon us,' acdefghiwp; bg, ܕܡܝܢܐ 'upon me.'

... to the end?' ۞ 'upon us,' acdefhiwp; bg, ۞ 'upon me.'

the consummation which the Most High will make is very nigh, and His mercy that is coming, and the consummation of His judgment, is by no means far off. 3. For lo! we see now the multitude of the prosperity of the Gentiles, though they act impiously, but they will be like a vapour. 4. And we behold the multitude of their power, though they do wickedly, but they will be made like unto a drop. 5. And we see the firmness of their might, though they resist the Mighty One every hour, but they will be accounted as spittle. 6. And we consider the glory of their greatness, though they do not keep the statutes of the Most High, but as smoke will they pass away. 7. And we meditate

3. Like a vapour. 4 Ezra vii. certainly, and in 4 Ezra vi. 56, the text agrees with the LXX.; for in 61.

4. Like unto a drop. Isa. xl. 15; Isa. xl. 15 it has ὡς σίελος λογισθήσονται against the Hebrew לִי־כֶסֶף. 4 Ezra vi. 56.

5. Accounted as spittle. Here פִּתְיוֹ.

bg, לְהַשְׁמִיטָה. לְהַשְׁמִיטָה 'now,' abdfghiwp; c om. here as it has already inserted לְהַשְׁמִיטָה in place of לְהַשְׁמִיטָה; e om. לְהַשְׁמִיטָה לְהַשְׁמִיטָה. לְהַשְׁמִיטָה; c; abdfghwp, לְהַשְׁמִיטָה; efi, לְהַשְׁמִיטָה.

4. לְהַשְׁמִיטָה cdefghimwp; abh, לְהַשְׁמִיטָה. לְהַשְׁמִיטָה 'unto a drop,' abdefghilwp; c wrongly לְהַשְׁמִיטָה 'unto pollution.'

5. לְהַשְׁמִיטָה cdefghwp; ab, לְהַשְׁמִיטָה. לְהַשְׁמִיטָה 'firmness,' abdefghiwp; c wrongly לְהַשְׁמִיטָה 'truth.' לְהַשְׁמִיטָה 'hour,' abdefghiwp; c wrongly לְהַשְׁמִיטָה 'year.'

6. לְהַשְׁמִיטָה cdefghiwp; ab, לְהַשְׁמִיטָה. לְהַשְׁמִיטָה 'commands,' abdefghwp; c, לְהַשְׁמִיטָה 'statutes.'

on the beauty of their gracefulness, though they have to do with pollutions, but as grass that withers will they fade away. 8. And we consider the strength of their cruelty, though they remember not the end (thereof), but as a wave that passes will they be broken. 9. And we remark the boastfulness of their might, though they deny the beneficence of God, who gave (it) to them, but they will pass away as a passing cloud.

LXXXIII. =
B².

[LXXXIII. For the Most High will assuredly hasten His times, and He will assuredly bring on His hours. 2. And He will assuredly judge those who are in His

7. As grass, etc. Isa. xl. 6, 7.

LXXXIII. This chapter seems to belong to B². Thus the times will be cut short (lxxxiii. 1, 6), and everything brought into judgment (lxxxiii. 2, 3, 7); let not, therefore, earthly interests engage them (lxxxiii. 4), but let them fix their thoughts on the promised consummation (lxxxiii. 4, 5), and devote themselves to their faith of aforetime, lest to their captivity in this world there should be added torment in the next (lxxxiii. 8); for the world 'passeth away with its strength and its weakness, its virtues, and its lusts (lxxxiii. 9-23).

The connection between lxxxiii. and xx. is close. Cf. lxxxiii. 1, 6; xx. 1; lxxxiii. 2; xx. 2; lxxxiii. 7; xx. 4. This chapter seems to have formed originally part of Baruch's address to the people (xxi. 3-xxxii. 6; xlv. 8-15), and to have followed immediately on xlv. 8-15.

1. This and verse 6 are related to xx. 1. Cf. liv. 1; Ep. Barn. iv. 3.

8. מִן הַגִּבּוֹרִים c; abdefghiwp, מִן הַגִּבּוֹרִים. מִן הַגִּבּוֹרִים cdefhi; abg, מִן הַגִּבּוֹרִים; wp give plural.

9. מִן הַגִּבּוֹרִים cdfghi; ab, מִן הַגִּבּוֹרִים; ewp, מִן הַגִּבּוֹרִים. מִן הַגִּבּוֹרִים 'the boastfulness,' c; abdefghiwp, מִן הַגִּבּוֹרִים 'the beauty.' מִן הַגִּבּוֹרִים 'of God—Him,' c; abdefghiwp, מִן הַגִּבּוֹרִים 'of Him.'

LXXXIII. 2. מִן הַגִּבּוֹרִים 'will assuredly judge,' acdefghiwp;

7 וְזִנְיָהּ דִּלְמָהּ

בְּמִלְחָמָהּ . כִּי תִבְרָא

כְּלִמְצָה עֲלֵיהֶם . אֵין

אִמְרָהּ בְּמִלְחָמָהּ

8 בְּמִלְחָמָהּ . עֲלֵיהֶם מִלְחָמָהּ

דִּלְמָהּ בְּמִלְחָמָהּ .

כִּי תִבְרָא בְּמִלְחָמָהּ

עֲלֵיהֶם . אֵין אִמְרָהּ

בְּמִלְחָמָהּ .

9 עֲלֵיהֶם מִלְחָמָהּ

בְּמִלְחָמָהּ . כִּי תִבְרָא

כְּלִמְצָה עֲלֵיהֶם

בְּמִלְחָמָהּ . אֵין אִמְרָהּ

.. בְּמִלְחָמָהּ .

LXXXIII. 1 עֲלֵיהֶם מִלְחָמָהּ

בְּמִלְחָמָהּ .

2 עֲלֵיהֶם מִלְחָמָהּ .

בְּמִלְחָמָהּ .

7. בְּמִלְחָמָהּ abdefgiwp; bhl, בְּמִלְחָמָהּ. 'of their gracefulness,' c; abdefghilwp, בְּמִלְחָמָהּ 'of their life.' כְּלִמְצָה 'with pollutions,' c; abdefghilwp, כְּלִמְצָה 'with pollution.'

3. וְהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים .
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים 3
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים .
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים .
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים 4
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים .
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים 5
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים .
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים 6
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים .
 בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים .

bg, וְהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים 'our Lord will judge.' 'hidden,' abdefghiwp; c, וְהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים 'which were sins.'

3. וְהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים 'which in the secret chambers of all,' c; abfghl, וְהַחֲסִים בְּהַחֲסִים 'which in the secret chamber

- 7 האכלתו ב האכלתו
תנתי ב האכלתו ב
האכלתו ב האכלתו
8 האכלתו ב האכלתו
האכלתו ב האכלתו
האכלתו ב האכלתו
האכלתו ב האכלתו
האכלתו ב האכלתו
האכלתו ב האכלתו
9 האכלתו ב האכלתו
האכלתו ב האכלתו
האכלתו ב האכלתו
האכלתו ב האכלתו
האכלתו ב האכלתו
האכלתו ב האכלתו
10 האכלתו ב האכלתו
האכלתו ב האכלתו
11 האכלתו ב האכלתו
האכלתו ב האכלתו

7. האכלתו 'the consummation,' c; e, האכלתו;
abdfghikwp, האכלתו 'in the consummation.'

8. האכלתו 'worlds,' abdfghikwp; c, האכלתו 'world.'

and all force of this time is turning into misery. 12. And every energy of youth is turning into old age and consummation, and every beauty of gracefulness of this time is turning faded and hateful. 13. And every proud dominion of the present is turning into humiliation and shame. 14. And every praise of the glory of this time is turning into the shame of silence, and every splendour and insolence of this time is turning into voiceless ruin. 15. And every delight and joy of this time is turning to worms and corruption. 16. And every clamour of the pride of this time is turning into dust and stillness. 17. And every possession of riches of this time is being turned into Sheol alone.

12. Every beauty, etc. Cf. xxi. 13. Cf. xlviii. 35.
14; xlviii. 35.

so also i, but defectively; c reads corruptly לְגַדְלִי וְלְגַדְלִי 'swelling of pride': we must emend לְגַדְלִי וְלְגַדְלִי into לְגַדְלִי וְלְגַדְלִי.

14. ewp om. לְגַדְלִי וְלְגַדְלִי ... לְגַדְלִי through hmt.

15. לְגַדְלִי וְלְגַדְלִי 'delight and joy,' bdefghiwp; ack, לְגַדְלִי וְלְגַדְלִי 'delights and joys.' לְגַדְלִי 'to worms,' abdefghikwp; c, לְגַדְלִי 'to rejection.' For לְגַדְלִי f reads לְגַדְלִי.

16. לְגַדְלִי וְלְגַדְלִי 'of the pride of this time,' abdefghikwp; c, לְגַדְלִי וְלְגַדְלִי 'of the proud.' לְגַדְלִי וְלְגַדְלִי 'to dust and stillness,' abdefghikmwp; c, לְגַדְלִי וְלְגַדְלִי 'to the still dust.'

17. לְגַדְלִי וְלְגַדְלִי 'of riches,' cdefiwp; abghk, לְגַדְלִי וְלְגַדְלִי 'and riches.'

ከጋራ ሆኖ . በረከት

. በሰባት ሆኖ . በሰባት

በረከት ሆኖ . በሰባት 12

. በረከት ሆኖ . በሰባት

በረከት ሆኖ . በሰባት

በረከት ሆኖ . በሰባት

በሰባት ሆኖ . በሰባት 13

በሰባት ሆኖ . በሰባት

ሆኖ . በሰባት 14

በሰባት ሆኖ . በሰባት

. በሰባት ሆኖ . በሰባት

በሰባት ሆኖ . በሰባት

በሰባት ሆኖ . በሰባት

በሰባት ሆኖ . በሰባት 15

በሰባት ሆኖ . በሰባት

ሆኖ . በሰባት 16

በሰባት ሆኖ . በሰባት

ሆኖ . በሰባት 17

በሰባት ሆኖ . በሰባት

በሰባት; c, በሰባት 'to miseries.' k om. . . . በሰባት
ሆኖ through hmt.

12. በሰባት c; abfghikw, በሰባት.

13. በሰባት በሰባት 'proud dominion,' abdefghkw;

18 . װען אַלעס אַרױס .

אױס אַלעס אַרױס

אױס אַלעס אַרױס

אױס אַלעס אַרױס .

אױס אַלעס אַרױס .

19 . װען אַלעס אַרױס .

אױס אַלעס אַרױס

אױס אַלעס אַרױס

20 . װען אַלעס אַרױס .

אױס אַלעס אַרױס

21 . װען אַלעס אַרױס .

אױס אַלעס אַרױס

אױס אַלעס אַרױס .

22 . װען אַלעס אַרױס .

אױס אַלעס אַרױס

23 . װען אַלעס אַרױס .

.. װען אַלעס אַרױס .

LXXXIV. 1 . װען אַלעס אַרױס .

אױס אַלעס אַרױס

18. אַלעס אַרױס abcwp; defghi, אַלעס אַרױס. אַלעס 'of the lusts,' abcegh; dfiwp, אַלעס 'of the lust.' אַלעס 'of this time,' abdefghikwp; c wrongly om. k om. אַלעס... אַלעס through hmt., and for אַלעס אַרױס reads אַלעס אַרױס.

ye should above all things learn the commandments of the Mighty One, wherein I shall instruct you: and I will set before you some of the commandments of His judgment before I die. 2. Remember that formerly Moses assuredly called heaven and earth to witness against you, and said: "if ye transgress the law ye shall be dispersed, but if ye keep it ye shall be kept." 3. And other things also he used to say unto you when ye the twelve tribes were together in the desert. 4. And after his death ye cast them away from you: on this account there came LXXXIV. 1. Before I die. See lxxviii. 5.

The commandments of the Mighty One (cf. ver. 7; xliv. 3).

2. See xix. 2, 3, note. In this verse there are several traces of the Hebrew original. First the Syr. for "assuredly called . . . to witness" = διαμαρτυρούμενος διεμαρτύρατο = הער הער. Next we have the play on the two senses of שמר: "if ye keep it, ye shall be kept" = אם השמרו השמרו. Finally, there seems to be a paronomasia intended in "if ye transgress the law, ye shall be dispersed" = אם תסורו מתורה תסורו.

3. Twelve tribes. Cf. lxxviii. 4; James i. 1.

בִּשְׁמִי, e save in reading בִּשְׁמִי, f save in reading בִּשְׁמִי, and k save in reading בִּשְׁמִי (for בִּשְׁמִי). ce; dfgiwp, בִּשְׁמִי; k, בִּשְׁמִי.

2. אֲבַעֲפִגְחִילִי abcefgihlwp; b, אֲבַעֲפִגְחִילִי. אֲבַעֲפִגְחִילִי abdefghiwp; c om. אֲבַעֲפִגְחִילִי 'ye shall be kept,' abdefghiwp; c, אֲבַעֲפִגְחִילִי 'ye shall be planted.'

3. אֲבַעֲפִגְחִילִי abdefghiwp; c, אֲבַעֲפִגְחִילִי. ach; bdefgiwp, אֲבַעֲפִגְחִילִי. c; abdefghiwp, אֲבַעֲפִגְחִילִי.

4. אֲבַעֲפִגְחִילִי 'therefore,' abdefghiwp; ch, אֲבַעֲפִגְחִילִי 'and

וְיִלְמְדוּ מִלְּפָנֵי הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל
 הַחֲקִיב מִלְּפָנֵי
 וְיִלְמְדוּ . וְיִלְמְדוּ
 מִלְּפָנֵי הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל
 וְיִלְמְדוּ מִלְּפָנֵי הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל .
 2 וְיִלְמְדוּ מִלְּפָנֵי הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל
 הַחֲקִיב מִלְּפָנֵי
 הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל .
 וְיִלְמְדוּ מִלְּפָנֵי הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל
 וְיִלְמְדוּ מִלְּפָנֵי הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל .
 וְיִלְמְדוּ מִלְּפָנֵי הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל .
 3 וְיִלְמְדוּ מִלְּפָנֵי הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל
 הַחֲקִיב מִלְּפָנֵי
 הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל .
 וְיִלְמְדוּ מִלְּפָנֵי הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל .
 4 וְיִלְמְדוּ מִלְּפָנֵי הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל
 הַחֲקִיב מִלְּפָנֵי
 הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל .

'that ye should above all things learn the commandments of the Mighty One wherein I shall instruct you'; so c, save that I have with Ceriani emended מִלְּפָנֵי הַיָּחִיד into מִלְּפָנֵי ; bdghilwr read וְיִלְמְדוּ מִלְּפָנֵי הַיָּחִיד הַגָּדוֹל
 'that ye should learn the things that are excellent; for the Mighty One hath commanded me to instruct you'; a agrees with bdghiwr save in reading upon you what had been predicted. 5. And now Moses used to tell you before they befell you, and lo! they have befallen you: for you have forsaken the law. 6. Lo! I also say unto you after ye have suffered, that if ye obey those things which have been said unto you, ye will receive from the Mighty One whatever has been laid up and reserved for you. 7. Moreover, let this epistle be for a testimony between me and you, that ye may remember the commandments of the Mighty One, and that also there may be to me a defence in the presence of Him who sent me. 8. And remember ye the law and Zion, and the holy

4. Cf. xix. 3.

6. The $9\frac{1}{2}$ tribes must endure chastisement before they could attain unto the promised happiness. This chastisement was for their well-being (lxxviii. 6); it was less than they deserved (lxxix. 2); and its aim was to make them worthy of their fathers in the last days (lxxviii. 5, see note).

8. They were to remember Zion and the Holy Land; for they were one day to return thither (cf. ver. 10 and lxxviii. 7, note).

5. אָזְכִּיר c; abdefghiWP, אֶזְכֵּר.

6. אֶזְכֵּר ac; bdefghiWP, אֶזְכֵּר. אֶזְכֵּר; abegh; d, אֶזְכֵּר; efiWP, אֶזְכֵּר. אֶזְכֵּר, def add אֶזְכֵּר.

7. אֶזְכֵּר c; abdefghiWP, אֶזְכֵּר. אֶזְכֵּר abegh; defiWP, אֶזְכֵּר. אֶזְכֵּר abdefghiWP; c, אֶזְכֵּר. אֶזְכֵּר c; abdefghilWP, אֶזְכֵּר. אֶזְכֵּר o c; abdfghiWP, אֶזְכֵּר.

8. אֶזְכֵּר 'the law and Zion,' abefghilWP;

ਸਤਿ ਨਾਮੁ ਕਰਤਾ

بقلم علی اکبر احمدی .

5 𐎧𐎠𐎡𐎹 𐎧𐎡𐎹 𐎧𐎡𐎹

ਸਤਿਨਾਮੁ ਕਰਤਾ ਮਾਧੁਰੀ

၂၈၀ . ရေမုန့်ပြီ ပဲ?

הַיְיָ אֱלֹהֵינוּ . אָמֵן

6 മധ്യം . എൻ്റെ ന്റെ

اغلا؛ انا لحد، على

כאן; וְשִׁמְשׁוֹם . דף

[illegible]

לְחַיֵּי . מְחַיֵּי

סמך בלעז, פארוואס

7. የጋራ ጥያቄ ፡ በጋራ ጥያቄ

ਸਤਿਨਾਮੁ ॥੫॥ ਸਤਿਨਾਮੁ ॥੫॥

ရဝတၢ် . ပါးတၢ်သၢ်သၢ်

සමගිකරණය

بِسْمِ اللَّهِ الرَّحْمَنِ الرَّحِيمِ . وَبِالْغَدِ الْفَاحِشِ

ਨਮੋ ਸਤਿਗੁਰੂ ਨਾਮੁ

כִּי־מִלֵּאֲמֹנֵי־הַיָּם יִשְׁמְעוּ וְיִשְׁמְעוּ־לָהֶם .

ՀԱՐՄԱՆ ԸՆԴՈՇՊՈ 8

ഭരതം മഹാഭാരതം

therefore.' $\text{הַשָּׁמַיְמָה} abcegh; defi_{WP}, \text{הַשָּׁמַיְמָה} c; abdefghi_{WP},$ $\text{הַשָּׁמַיְמָה}.$

land and your brethren, and the covenant of your fathers, and forget not the festivals and the sabbaths. 9. And deliver ye this epistle and the traditions of the law to your sons after you, as also your fathers delivered (them) to you. 10. And at all times make request perseveringly and pray diligently with your whole heart that the Mighty One may be reconciled to you, and that He may not reckon the multitude of your sins, but remember the rectitude of your fathers. 11. For if He judge us not according to the multitude of His mercies, woe unto all us who are born.

LXXXV.=B³.

[LXXXV. Know ye, moreover, that in former

9. The traditions of the law, i.e. the unwritten law.

dispersion, should they become faithful.

10. That the Mighty One may be reconciled to you. Cf. 4 Ezra x. 24: "ut tibi repropitiatur Fortis." Here this reconciliation is to lead up to their return to Palestine; for in lxxviii. 7 it is declared that He that promised their fathers that He would not fail their posterity, would gather them together from their

The rectitude of your fathers. On the merit of the fathers see xiv. 7, note.

11. His mercies. See lxxv. 2, note.

Woe unto all, etc. See x. 6, note.

LXXXV. This chapter is certainly an interpolation. I shall designate it B³. It belongs neither to B¹ nor traditions,' c; *abcdefghiW*P, סמלעסעסעס 'the tradition.' *בדעפגחיW*P; a, לכחנעס. c; *abdefghiW*P, לכחנעס.

10. לכחנעס 'perseveringly,' *abdeg*hiW*P*; c om. נפלהסמדה 'of your sins,' *abdefghiW*P; c, בסלחנעס 'of your sinners.' abcgh; *defiW*P, בנלכחנעס.

11. לכחנעס *abdefghilmW*P; c, לכחנעס. *cdefghilmW*P; ab, לכחנעס.

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

10 וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

11 וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

LXXXV. 1 . . . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ

d, וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ ; c trs. wrongly. וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ abdefghiwp ;

c, וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ 'of your fathers,' abdefghiwp ;

e, וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ 'and your fathers.' וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ beg ; adefghiwp, וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ.

9. וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ bedefghiwp ; a, וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ . וְלִפְנֵי הַמֶּלֶךְ 'the times and in the generations of old those our fathers had helpers, righteous men and holy prophets. 2. Nay more, we were in our own land, and they helped us when we sinned, and they prayed for us to Him who made us, because they trusted in their works, and the Mighty One heard their prayer and was gracious unto us. 3. But now the righteous have been gathered and the prophets have fallen asleep, and we also have gone forth from the land, and Zion has been taken

B². In B¹ there is a strong national hope which embraces a restored Jerusalem and the return of the dispersion. This hope is here implicitly denied. Although B³ and B² differ in important respects, they agree in despairing of any national restoration. They regard this world as lost, and look only for spiritual blessedness in the world of incorruption (lxxxv. 4, 5). On the other hand, there is a deeper strain of individualism in B³ than in B²; the writer's interest centres mainly in the destiny of the individual; let each see that he is ready when the end comes (lxxxv. 11), and that end is at hand for all (lxxxv. 10). Again, whereas B² seems to have been written in Jerusalem, B³ was written in Babylon or some other land of the Dispersion. Thus in lxxxv. 3 the writer says: "We also have gone forth from our own land, and Zion has been taken from us"; and in lxxxv. 2: "Nay more, we were in our own land, and they (the righteous) helped us when we sinned." Again, whereas according to B² Jeremiah was with the exiles in Babylon (see x. 2, note), it is here definitely stated that the righteous and the prophets are dead and the exiles have none to intercede for them (lxxxv. 2).

B³ and S (x. 6-xii. 4) are the most pessimistic parts of this book.

1. The generation of Jeremiah seems to be in the far past.

2. This verse conflicts with lxxvii. 5 and lxxx. 5. The writer implies that he is one of the exiles in Babylon or elsewhere. This is still more evident from the next verse.

They helped us when we sinned, and they prayed for us, etc. This thought reappears in the Rest of the Words of Baruch ii. 3: "For when the people transgressed, Jeremiah . . . prayed on behalf of the people until the transgressions of the people were forgiven them."

Trusted in their works. See xiv. 7, note; lxiii. 3. Observe that whereas in lxxxiv. 10 the merits of the patriarchs are regarded as a stay of Israel, no such belief appears here. According to this verse and the next it is implied that only the intercessions of the living righteous avail, and now there are none such. Yet it is shown that there were many such in ii. Hence this seems a later production.

3. We also have gone forth, etc. See verse 2.

מִבְּקֵמָהּ וּבְקֵמָהּ בְּעֵי
 מִבְּמִמָּהּ אִמָּהּ וְכֵן
 לְבִקְשָׁהּ מִבְּקֵמָהּ אִבְמָהּ .
 2 וּבְקֵמָהּ מִבְּקֵמָהּ . אִבְ אִבְ בְּכֵן וְכֵן בְּכֵן . וְכֵן
 מִבְּקֵמָהּ וְכֵן בְּכֵן
 בְּמִבְּקֵמָהּ וְכֵן . וְכֵן
 בְּכֵן . בְּכֵן וְכֵן . בְּכֵן
 בְּכֵן וְכֵן . וְכֵן
 וְכֵן . וְכֵן . וְכֵן
 3 וְכֵן . וְכֵן . וְכֵן
 אִבְמָהּ אִבְמָהּ . וְכֵן
 מִבְּקֵמָהּ . וְכֵן
 מִבְּקֵמָהּ . וְכֵן

LXXXV. 1. בְּקֵמָהּ c; abdefghiwp, בְּקֵמָהּ אִבְמָהּ .
cg; abdefghiwp insert the punctuation between these words; b has no punctuation. בְּקֵמָהּ אִבְמָהּ 'holy prophets,' abdefghiwp; c, בְּקֵמָהּ אִבְמָהּ 'prophets and holy (men).'

2. אִבְ אִבְ 'nay, more,' abdefghiwp; c, אִבְ אִבְ 'moreover.'
 וְכֵן אִבְמָהּ 'their prayer,' abdefghiwp; c, וְכֵן אִבְמָהּ 'them.'
 וְכֵן c; abdefghiwp om. For וְכֵן h reads וְכֵן אִבְמָהּ.

3. אִבְ אִבְ 'and also,' abdefghiwp; c om. 'and.' אִבְ אִבְ 'our land,' c; abdefghiwp, אִבְ אִבְ 'the land.' אִבְ אִבְ, a trs.

from us, and we have nothing now save the Mighty One and His law. 4. If therefore we direct and dispose our hearts, we shall receive everything that we lost, and much better things than we lost (yea, better) by many times. 5. For what we have lost was subject to corruption, and what we shall receive will not be corruptible. [6. Moreover, also, I have written thus to our brethren to Babylon, that to them also I may attest these very things.] 7. And let all those things aforesaid be always before your eyes, because we are still in the spirit and the power of

We have nothing now save the Mighty One and His law. The law was Israel's everlasting possession. This sentiment appears also in Josephus, Apion, ii. 38: καὶ πλούτου καὶ πόλεων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀγαθῶν στερηθῶμεν, ὃ γοῦν νόμος ἡμῶν ἀθάνατος διαμένει. In the Talmud, further, we find (Mechilta, 68b) that whereas the land, the sanctuary, and the kingdom of David, were given conditionally to Israel, the law was given unconditionally. Hence Israel could exist without the former, but not without the latter. This thought combined with that in xlviii. 22 that, so far as Israel observed the law, it could not fall, became the inspiration of Rabbinic Judaism and the safeguard of the race through the storms of later times. On the law see xiv. 7, note.

5. See xxi. 19, note.

6. This verse is due to the final editor.

7. The power of our liberty, i.e. enjoy freewill. Cf. 4 Ezra ix. 11: "Qui fastidierunt legem meam, cum adhuc erant habentes libertatem" (also viii. 56). For the diction compare 1 Cor. vii. 37 ἐξουσίαν δὲ ἔχει περὶ τοῦ ἰδίου θελήματος: Acts i. 7; v. 4; Pss. Sol. ix. 7: τὰ ἔργα ἡμῶν ἐν . . ἐξουσίᾳ τῆς ψυχῆς ἡμῶν. On the doctrine see liv. 15, note.

6. לְבָבֵנו 'to Babylon that also,' abeg; h, לְבָבֵנו וְ; defiwp, לְבָבֵנו 'to Babylon and also.'

7. וְכֹחַ c; abdfghiwp, וְכֹחַ וְ כֹחַ. וְכֹחַ 'and the power,' abdefghiwp; c, וְכֹחַ 'of the power.'

נחמ . וְנִשְׁמַח אֱלֹהֵינוּ עָלֵינוּ . וְנִשְׁמַח לֵב עַד שֶׁמֶלֶךְ אֱלֹהֵינוּ
 4 וְנִשְׁמַח . אֱלֹהֵינוּ
 נִשְׁמַח וְנִשְׁמַח לֵב עַד
 נִשְׁמַח וְנִשְׁמַח לֵב עַד
 5 וְנִשְׁמַח לֵב עַד
 וְנִשְׁמַח לֵב עַד
 6 וְנִשְׁמַח לֵב עַד
 וְנִשְׁמַח לֵב עַד
 7 וְנִשְׁמַח לֵב עַד
 וְנִשְׁמַח לֵב עַד
 וְנִשְׁמַח לֵב עַד
 וְנִשְׁמַח לֵב עַד

4. acdefghiwp; b, נחמ . נחמ . c ; abdefghiwp om. 'and much better things than we lost,' abdefghiwp; c omitting by hmt.

5. abfdghwp; c, וְנִשְׁמַח ; e om. acdef;
bgh, וְנִשְׁמַח ; wp, וְנִשְׁמַח . c ; abdefghiwp, וְנִשְׁמַח .
c ; abdefghiwp, וְנִשְׁמַח .

our liberty. 8. Again, moreover, the Most High also is long-suffering towards us here, and He hath shown to us that which is to be, and hath not concealed from us what will befall in the end. 9. Before therefore judgment exact its own, and truth that which is its due, let us prepare our soul that we may enter into possession of, and not be taken possession of, and that we may hope and not be put to shame, and that we may rest with our fathers and not be tormented with our enemies. 10. For the youth of the world is past, and the strength of the creation is already exhausted, and the advent of the times is very short, yea, they have

8. Hath shown to us . . . and hath not concealed from us. In B¹ Baruch does not use the plural in this connection (cf. lxxxi. 4; see lxxviii. 3, note).

9. Judgment . . . its due. Cf. v. 2; xlvi. 27.

Let us prepare our soul. xxxii. 1, note.

That we may enter into possession of, and not be taken possession of = נַחֲמָהּ סוֹ נַחֲמָהּ. These words are obscure, probably corrupt.

That we may rest with our fathers. Cf. xi. 4; also lxxxv. 11.

Tormented. Cf. lxxxiii. 8.

10. The youth of the world is past. Cf. 4 Ezra xiv. 10: "saeculum perdidit juventutem suam et tempora appropinquant senescere;" also xiv. 16; v. 50-56.

parallel expressions in v. 2 and xlvi. 27; bdefghilwp are wrong here, as they give נִזְכָּר 'the Judge.' Next, for נַחֲמָהּ 'of anything,' of ac, I follow bdefghiwp in reading נַחֲמָהּ, for נִזְכָּר is clearly the subject and not the object of the verb. The text of bdefgiwp = 'before therefore the Judge exact His own and truth that which is its due.' נַחֲמָהּ סוֹ נַחֲמָהּ; abdefghiwp, נַחֲמָהּ סוֹ נַחֲמָהּ; b¹fh, נַחֲמָהּ סוֹ נַחֲמָהּ. אבדה abcdefgh; wp, אבדה; h, אבדה.

10. נִזְכָּר 'and the advent,' abcdefghil; wp,

[illegible]

؟ من منطقتك علي

ਸਮੁੱਚੇ ਸਮਾਜ ਦੇ ਭਲੇ ਲਈ .

[illegible]

በጋራ ጋራ ጋራ ጋራ

9. $\frac{1}{2} \times \frac{1}{3} = \frac{1}{6}$

✽ መጠን ልዩ ጥያቄ

॥ ॐ नमो भगवते वासुदेवाय ॥

وَلَمْ يَكُنْ لَهُ كُفُوًا أَحَدٌ

பெரிய பூங்கா

. 402, 100 402, 0

20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100. 101. 102. 103. 104. 105. 106. 107. 108. 109. 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 127. 128. 129. 130. 131. 132. 133. 134. 135. 136. 137. 138. 139. 140. 141. 142. 143. 144. 145. 146. 147. 148. 149. 150. 151. 152. 153. 154. 155. 156. 157. 158. 159. 160. 161. 162. 163. 164. 165. 166. 167. 168. 169. 170. 171. 172. 173. 174. 175. 176. 177. 178. 179. 180. 181. 182. 183. 184. 185. 186. 187. 188. 189. 190. 191. 192. 193. 194. 195. 196. 197. 198. 199. 200. 201. 202. 203. 204. 205. 206. 207. 208. 209. 210. 211. 212. 213. 214. 215. 216. 217. 218. 219. 220. 221. 222. 223. 224. 225. 226. 227. 228. 229. 230. 231. 232. 233. 234. 235. 236. 237. 238. 239. 240. 241. 242. 243. 244. 245. 246. 247. 248. 249. 250. 251. 252. 253. 254. 255. 256. 257. 258. 259. 260. 261. 262. 263. 264. 265. 266. 267. 268. 269. 270. 271. 272. 273. 274. 275. 276. 277. 278. 279. 280. 281. 282. 283. 284. 285. 286. 287. 288. 289. 290. 291. 292. 293. 294. 295. 296. 297. 298. 299. 300. 301. 302. 303. 304. 305. 306. 307. 308. 309. 310. 311. 312. 313. 314. 315. 316. 317. 318. 319. 320. 321. 322. 323. 324. 325. 326. 327. 328. 329. 330. 331. 332. 333. 334. 335. 336. 337. 338. 339. 340. 341. 342. 343. 344. 345. 346. 347. 348. 349. 350. 351. 352. 353. 354. 355. 356. 357. 358. 359. 360. 361. 362. 363. 364. 365. 366. 367. 368. 369. 370. 371. 372. 373. 374. 375. 376. 377. 378. 379. 380. 381. 382. 383. 384. 385. 386. 387. 388. 389. 390. 391. 392. 393. 394. 395. 396. 397. 398. 399. 400. 401. 402. 403. 404. 405. 406. 407. 408. 409. 410. 411. 412. 413. 414. 415. 416. 417. 418. 419. 420. 421. 422. 423. 424. 425. 426. 427. 428. 429. 430. 431. 432. 433. 434. 435. 436. 437. 438. 439. 440. 441. 442. 443. 444. 445. 446. 447. 448. 449. 450. 451. 452. 453. 454. 455. 456. 457. 458. 459. 460. 461. 462. 463. 464. 465. 466. 467. 468. 469. 470. 471. 472. 473. 474. 475. 476. 477. 478. 479. 480. 481. 482. 483. 484. 485. 486. 487. 488. 489. 490. 491. 492. 493. 494. 495. 496. 497. 498. 499. 500. 501. 502. 503. 504. 505. 506. 507. 508. 509. 510. 511. 512. 513. 514. 515. 516. 517. 518. 519. 520. 521. 522. 523. 524. 525. 526. 527. 528. 529. 530. 531. 532. 533. 534. 535. 536. 537. 538. 539. 540. 541. 542. 543. 544. 545. 546. 547. 548. 549. 550. 551. 552. 553. 554. 555. 556. 557. 558. 559. 560. 561. 562. 563. 564. 565. 566. 567. 568. 569. 570. 571. 572. 573. 574. 575. 576. 577. 578. 579. 580. 581. 582. 583. 584. 585. 586. 587. 588. 589. 590. 591. 592. 593. 594. 595. 596. 597. 598. 599. 600. 601. 602. 603. 604. 605. 606. 607. 608. 609. 610. 611. 612. 613. 614. 615. 616. 617. 618. 619. 620. 621. 622. 623. 624. 625. 626. 627. 628. 629. 630. 631. 632. 633. 634. 635. 636. 637. 638. 639. 640. 641. 642. 643. 644. 645. 646. 647. 648. 649. 650. 651. 652. 653. 654. 655. 656. 657. 658. 659. 660. 661. 662. 663. 664. 665. 666. 667. 668. 669. 670. 671. 672. 673. 674. 675. 676. 677. 678. 679. 680. 681. 682. 683. 684. 685. 686. 687. 688. 689. 690. 691. 692. 693. 694. 695. 696. 697. 698. 699. 700. 701. 702. 703. 704. 705. 706. 707. 708. 709. 710. 711. 712. 713. 714. 715. 716. 717. 718. 719. 720. 721. 722. 723. 724. 725. 726. 727. 728. 729. 730. 731. 732. 733. 734. 735. 736. 737. 738. 739. 740. 741. 742. 743. 744. 745. 746. 747. 748. 749. 750. 751. 752. 753. 754. 755. 756. 757. 758. 759. 760. 761. 762. 763. 764. 765. 766. 767. 768. 769. 770. 771. 772. 773. 774. 775. 776. 777. 778. 779. 780. 781. 782. 783. 784. 785. 786. 787. 788. 789. 790. 791. 792. 793. 794. 795. 796. 797. 798. 799. 800. 801. 802. 803. 804. 805. 806. 807. 808. 809. 810. 811. 812. 813. 814. 815. 816. 817. 818. 819. 820. 821. 822. 823. 824. 825. 826. 827. 828. 829. 830. 831. 832. 833. 834. 835. 836. 837. 838. 839. 840. 841. 842. 843. 844. 845. 846. 847. 848. 849. 850. 851. 852. 853. 854.

የሥራ ምክር ቤቱ ስራ

10. የገንዘብ ጥገና

சுயம் . உயர்வு உயர்வு,

وَجَاءُوا عَلَىٰ حُلَاهُمْ

ရဝတဏ္ဍိယံ . ဓဉ်

وَأَقْبَلُ صَوْمِي وَكَلَمِي ۝ دَجِي ۝

8. 𐤀𐤏𐤋 'again,' abdefghiwp; c, 𐤀𐤏𐤋𐤐 'and again.'
 𐤌𐤍𐤏𐤔𐤕 'the Most High,' abdefghiwp; c, 𐤌𐤍𐤏𐤔𐤕𐤀𐤏𐤋 'also the Most High.'

9. על פניו על פניו. The text follows c save in two cases: instead of על פניו, 'His judgment,' of c, I read על פניו, 'the judgment,' with a; this is manifestly required by the passed by; and the pitcher is near to the cistern, and the ship to the port, and the course of the journey to the city, and life to consummation. 11. And again prepare your souls, so that when ye sail and ascend from the ship ye may have rest and not be condemned when ye depart. 12. For lo! when the Most High will bring to pass all these things, there will not there be again an opportunity for returning, nor a limit to the times, nor adjournment to the hours, nor change of ways, nor place for prayer, nor sending of petitions, nor receiving of knowledge, nor giving of love, nor place

12. An opportunity for returning. The Syr. here = "place" or "opportunity for repentance." But as this idea is found again in this verse, and obviously in its right context, it cannot be right here. The difficulty can be resolved as follows:—In early post-classical Hebrew השבה meant both "return" and "repentance." The Greek translator followed the latter meaning when he ought to have followed the former.

Place of repentance. Cf. 4 Ezra ix. 12: "cum adhuc esset eis apertus poenitentiae locus, non intellexerunt." This is the universal teaching in the Books of Enoch and 4 Ezra.

11. ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ; d, ܐܒܥܓܝܡܦ. ܥܕܝܢ; c; abdegghiWP, ܡܕܝܢܐ. ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ 'be condemned,' abcgh; efWP, ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ may have rest'; di, ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ.

12. ܕܢܐ 'when,' abdefghiWP; c om. ܡܕܝܢܐ c; abdefghiWP, ܡܕܝܢܐ. ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ; d, ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ. ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ 'of ways,' bgWP; dei, ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ 'of way'; acfl, ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ; h, ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ. ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ; bcdefghiWP; a, ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ. ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ 'giving of love,' cd; abcefgghiWP, ܐܒܥܥܓܝܡܦ 'giving of love,' or 'pardoner of guilt,' accord-of repentance, nor supplication for offences, nor intercession of the fathers, nor prayer of the prophets, nor help of the righteous. 13. There there is the sentence of corruption, the way of fire, and the path which bringeth to Gehenna. 14. On this account there is one law by one, one age and an end for all who are in it. 15. Then He will preserve those to whom He finds He may be gracious, and at the same time destroy those who are polluted with sins.]

LXXXVI. When therefore ye receive this my epistle, read it in your congregations with care. 2.

Intercession of the fathers. Cf. 4 Ezra vii. 102-115; Slav. En. liii. 1.

13. Way of fire. Cf. xlv. 15, note.

In the Ass. Moyseos, iii. 12, Moses is called the mediator of the law.

14. One law by one. Moses seems to be here referred to. The remark seems directed against the Christians (cf. xlviii. 24). This verse seems either to be interpolated or in its wrong place.

ܐܒܕܐܢܐ, 'of corruption,' abdefghiWP; c, ܐܒܕܐܢܐ 'to corruption.'
 ܐܒܕܐܢܐ 'the way,' abdefghiWP; c, ܐܒܕܐܢܐ 'of the way.' ܐܒܕܐܢܐ
 'to gehenna,' abefghi; so dWP, ܐܒܕܐܢܐ; c, ܐܒܕܐܢܐ 'to coals.'

14. ܐܒܕܐܢܐ ܐܒܕܐܢܐ cg; defhWP, ܐܒܕܐܢܐ . ܐܒܐܢܐ

15. ܐܒܐܢܐ 'then,' begh; adefilWP, ܐܒܐܢܐ 'and then.'
 ܐܒܐܢܐ acdefiWP; bgh, ܐܒܐܢܐ 'those,' c; adefghiWP, ܐܒܐܢܐ 'and those.' ܐܒܐܢܐ abdefghWP; c, ܐܒܐܢܐ.
 ܐܒܐܢܐ c; abdefghiWP trs.

LXXXVI. 1. ܐܒܐܢܐ ܐܒܐܢܐ c; abdefghiWP trs. ܐܒܐܢܐ
 'this,' abdefghiWP; c om. ܐܒܐܢܐ abdefghiWP; c, ܐܒܐܢܐ.

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

13 וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

14 וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

15 וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

LXXXVI. 1 וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם הַשֵּׁנִי .

ing as we vocalise the phrase. וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם 'supplication,' abdeghilwF; c, וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם 'supplications'; f om. וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם ... וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם. וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם, d repeats; e reads singular. וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם 'intercession,' bdefghiW; ac, וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם 'intercessions.'

13. וּמִן הַשָּׁמַיִם, c adds above the line in first hand וּמִן against abdefghiW; h adds וּמִן abdefghiW; c, וּמִן וּמִן.

And meditate thereon, above all on the days of your fasts. 3. And bear me in mind by means of this epistle, as I also bear you in mind in it, and always fare ye well.

LXXXVII. And it came to pass when I had ended all the words of this epistle, and had written it sedulously to its close, that I folded it, and sealed it carefully, and bound it to the neck of the eagle, and dismissed and sent it.

HERE ENDS THE BOOK OF BARUCH THE SON OF NERIAH.

LXXXVII. Bound it to the neck of the eagle. These words reappear in the Rest of the Words of Baruch
 vii. 8, τὴν ἐπιστολὴν . . . ἔδησεν eis τὸν τράχηλον τοῦ αἰετοῦ (cf.
 vii. 30).

the first epistle'; in WP,  לְכָדָא ' (here) ends the epistle of Baruch'; f om. subscription.

LXXXVII. Found only in c, but undoubtedly a part of the original work, as is clear from a comparison of lxxvii. 17, 20—26. As all the other MSS. began with lxxviii., and gave only a fragment of the book for ecclesiastical reading, they naturally omitted this chapter, since it would have been unintelligible without lxxvii., and simply closed the section with the words  וְכִי־יִלְכָּד." data-bbox="330 730 570 755"/>

APPENDIX ON VI. 7-10

In 2 Macc. ii. 4-8 there is a tradition closely related to the account in vi. 7-10. Here Jeremiah is warned of God to hide, in a cave-like dwelling in the mountain where Moses climbed up, "the tabernacle and the ark and the altar of incense" (τὴν σκηνὴν καὶ τὴν κιβωτὸν καὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον τοῦ θυμιάματος). This place was to remain unknown till God should gather His people again together (ἄγνωστος ὁ τόπος ἔσται ἕως αἶν συναγάγῃ ὁ Θεὸς ἐπισυναγωγὴν τοῦ λαοῦ).

The mention here of the "altar of incense" supports the rendering I have given of ܐܠܬܐ ܕܥܝܢܐ in vi. 7. This word implies θυμιατήριον in the Greek. In the LXX. this word means "censer," but in Philo, Josephus, Clem. Alex., and Origen it is the ordinary appellation of the "altar of incense." Now as regards the first meaning, there is no mention of any particular censer in the Old Testament, not even in Lev. xvi. 12. The only mention of the golden censer is found in the Mishna, Joma, v. 1, vii. 4 (quoted by Lünemann on Heb. ix. 4), which the High Priest took with him into the Holy of Holies on the Day of Atonement. Since, however, in the frequent earlier and contemporary enumerations of the holy vessels in 2 Macc. ii. 5; Philo, Quis rerum divin. haer. i. 504; de Vita Mos. ii. 149; Heb. ix. 1-5 (?); Joseph. Ant. iii. 6, 8; Bell. Jud. v. 5. 5, this censer is nowhere given, but the altar of incense always, it seems right to conclude that θυμιατήριον should be taken here in its meaning of "altar of incense," and not in that of "censer," as it was by the Syriac translator.

INDEX I

PASSAGES FROM THE SCRIPTURES AND OTHER ANCIENT BOOKS DIRECTLY CONNECTED OR CLOSELY PARALLEL WITH THE TEXT.

Only the more important are given except in the case of 4 Ezra, and the two books of Enoch.

THE OLD TESTAMENT.

Exodus i. 14
Psalms xxxvi. 8
„ civ. 4.
Ecclesiastes x. 10
Isaiah xl. 15
„ xlix. 16
Jeremiah ix. 1
„ xxii. 29
Zechariah vii. 11

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH.

lviii. 1
xli. 4
xlviii. 8 xxxviii. 2
lxxxii. 5
iv. 2 xxxv. 2
vi. 8
li. 4

THE NEW TESTAMENT.

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH.

See pp. lxxvi.-lxxix.

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH.

x. 6 „ 8
xi. 4
xxi. 23
xxiii. 4
xxv. 1
xxix. 4
xxxii. 6
xlviii. 9
l. 2
lv. 3
lvi. 11-13
lix. 5
„ 5
„ 5
„ 8
„ 10

ETHIOPIC ENOCH.

xxxviii. 2
xix. 2 (Greek Version)
li. 1
c. 5
lix. 11
xxxvii. 5
lx. 7
xlv. 4.
ii. 1
li. 1
xx. 7 (Greek Version)
vi. 2
xviii. 11 ; xxi. 7-10
xl. 11
xlvii. 5
xl. 12
xxvii. 2, 3 ; xc. 26, 27

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH.

lix. 10 „ 10 lxviii. 6

ETHIOPIC ENOCH.

xxii. 5-9
 xli. 3 ; xliii. 1, 2, etc.
 lxxxix. 73, 74

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH.

x. 6
 xviii. 2
 xxi. 4
 „ 6 „ 7 xxiii. 4
 xlviii. 10
 li. 11
 liv. 15, 19
 lvi. 11-13
 lix. 5
 „ 5
 „ 8
 „ 10
 „ 10
 „ 11

SLAVONIC ENOCH.

xli. 2
 xxx. 15, 16
 xxiv. 2
 xxix. 1
 xlvii. 5
 xlix. 2 (lviii. 5)
 xvii.
 „
 xxx. 15
 xviii. 4-6
 xxviii. 3
 xli. 4
 lxi. 1-4 ; lxx. 3, 4
 x. ; xc. 12
 xx. 1, 3
 xi. 9

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH.

APOCRYPHAL BOOK OF BARUCH.

See pp. xiv.-xv. ; lxv.-lxvii.

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH.

4 EZRA.

ii. 1
 iii. 1
 „ 1
 „ 2 (xxviii. 6)
 „ 7
 iv. 3
 v. 1
 „ 1
 ix. 2
 x. 6 (xi. 6, 7)
 xi. 3
 xiii. 8
 xiv. 7
 „ 11 (xlviii. 15)
 „ 17
 „ 18 „ 18
 xv. 6
 xvii. 4
 xix. 1, 2
 xx. 1 (liv. 1)
 xxi. 6 „ 19 „ 21

iv. 36 ; viii. 51, 62 ; xiv. 9, 49
 „ 38 ; v. 23, 38 ; vi. 11, 38 ; vii.
 17, 58, 75 ; xii. 7 ; xiii. 51
 x. 7
 v. 56 ; vii. 102 ; viii. 42 ; xii. 7
 vii. 30
 „ 26 ; xiii. 36
 iv. 23
 „ 25
 v. 20 ; vi. 35 ; ix. 26, 27 ; xii. 51
 iv. 12 ; vii. 66, 116, 117
 iii. 30
 iv. 34
 vii. 77 ; viii. 33
 viii. 5
 vi. 38
 „ 54
 „ 55, 59 ; vii. 11 ; viii. 44 ; ix. 13
 vii. 72
 iii. 19
 vii. 121-130
 iv. 26 ; vi. 18
 viii. 21
 vii. 113 (iv. 11 ; vii. 111)
 v. 27

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH.

xxi. 26
xxiii. 4
 " 4, 5
xxiv. 1
xxv. 1
 " 3
xxvii. 10
xxviii. 3
xxix. 4
 " 4

 " 6
 " 6
xxx. 1
xxxi. 3
xxxii. 1
 " 6
 " 7
 " 9 xxxiii. 3 xxxix. 6 xlvi. 2
xlvii. 15
xlviii. 36
 " 38
 " 42
 " 46
li. 5
 " 10
lv. 3
lix. 7
lxx. 3
 " 5
 " 5 lxxvi. 4 lxxvii. 1
lxxxii. 3
 " 4
 " 6 lxxxiv. 10
lxxxv. 7
 " 10
 " 12

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH.

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH.

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH.

4 EZRA.

v. 14
vii. 85, 95
iv. 33-43
vi. 20
iii. 34, 35
xiii. 30
v. 8
xiii. 16-20
vi. 49-52
 " 2, 25 ; vii. 28 ; ix. 7 ; xii. 34 ;
 xiii. 48
vii. 28 ; xii. 34
xiii. 50.
xii. 32 ; xiii. 26
ix. 30
 " 32 (iii. 20)
vii. 75
v. 19
 " 18
xii. 44
v. 1
xiv. 20
viii. 5
v. 9-11
iii. 8
vii. 118-121
iii. 4, 5 ; vii. 116
vii. 87
 " 97, 125
iv. 36
xiv. 47
vi. 24
v. 9-11
 " 12
xiv. 23, 42, 44, 45
xii. 40
vii. 61
vi. 56
vii. 61
x. 24
ix. 11 (viii. 56)
xiv. 10
ix. 12

REST OF THE WORDS OF BARUCH.

See pp. xviii.-xix.

5 EZRA.

See p. xx.

APOCALYPHIS BARUCH TERTIA.

See pp. xx.-xxii.

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH.

ix. 1
xx. 3 xlii. 4 xlviii. 9
lx. 1 lxxviii. 7
lxxxv. 7

PSALMS OF SOLOMON.

xvii. 41
xiv. 5
xvii. 17
xix. 2, 3
ii. 15
viii. 34
ix. 7

INDEX II

NAMES AND SUBJECTS

- AARON, lix. 1
 Abraham, iv. 4 ; lvii. 1
 Abyss, the, lix. 5
 Adam, iv. 3 ; xvii. 2 ; xviii. 2 ; xxiii. 4 ; xlviii. 42 ; liv. 15, 19 ; lvi. 5 brought in physical death, xxiii. 4, note brought in premature death, xxiii. 4, note ; liv. 15, note brought in spiritual death, xlviii. 42, note Adu, v. 5
 Altar of incense, vi. 7 ; p. 168
 Angel of death, xxi. 23, note
 Angels created on the first day, xxi. 6, note armies of, xlviii. 10 ; li. 11, note ; lix. 10 fall of the, lvi. 11-13, note
 Apostates, i.e. Christians, xli. 3, note ; xlii. 4
 Assumption of Baruch, the, xiii. 3, note ; xlv. 7, note

 BABYLON, viii. 5 ; x. 2 ; lxxvii. 12, 17, 19 ; lxxix. 1
 = Rome, xi. 1
 Baldensperger, p. xxxix.
 Baruch, the Assumption of, in B², xiii. 3, note ; xxv. 1 ; xlv. 7, note ; xlviii. 30 ; lxxvi. 2 the death of, an ordinary one in B¹, xiii. 3, note ; xliii. 2, note ; lxxviii. 5 ; lxxxiv. 1 the Apocalypse of ; its different elements, with their characteristics and dates, pp. xlix.-lxi.
 the Apocalypse of, B¹=i.-ix. 1 ; xliii. - xlv. 7 ; xlv. - xlv. 6 ; lxxvii.-lxxxii. ; lxxxiv. ; lxxxvi.-lxxxvii. ; pp. lv.-lvii. ; lx. ; 68-69, 119, 140
 Baruch, the Apocalypse of, B²=xiii. 1-3a ; xx. ; xxiv. 2-4 ; xxii. 3b-12 ; xxv. ; xiv.-xix. ; xxi.-xxiv. 1 ; xxx. 2-5 ; xli.-xlii. ; xlviii. 1-47 ; xlix.-lii. 3 ; lxxv. ; xxxi.-xxxii. 6 ; liv. 17, 18 ; xlviii. 48-50 ; lii. 5-7 ; liv. 16 ; xlv. 8-15 ; lxxxiii. ; xxxii. 7-xxxv. ; lxxvi. ; pp. lv.-lx. ; 20-21, 57-58, 66, 68, 69, 74, 80, 94, 117, 140
 the Apocalypse of, B³=lxxxv. ; pp. liv.-lv. ; 154, 156 the Apocalypse of, S=x. 6-xii. 4 ; pp. lix.-lx. ; 14-20 the Apocalypse of, A¹=xxvii.-xxx. 1 ; pp. li.-liii. ; 48-49, 61-62, 87
 the Apocalypse of, A²=xxxvi.-xl. ; pp. li.-liii. ; 61-62, 87
 the Apocalypse of, A³=liii.-lxxiv. ; pp. li.-liv. ; 87
 the Apocalypse of, the Syriac Version of, pp. xxii.-xxx.
 the Apocalypse of, the Syriac Version—a translation from the Greek, pp. xliii.-xliv.
 the Apocalypse of, the Greek—a translation from a Hebrew original, pp. xlv.-liii.
 the Apocalypse of, modern Latin Version by Ceriani, pp. xxx.-xxxiii.
 the Apocalypse of, its relations with 4 Ezra, pp. lxvii.-lxxvi.
 the Apocalypse of, its relations with the New Testament, pp. lxxvi.-lxxxix.
 the Apocalypse of, its relations with other books of Baruch, pp. xvi.-xxii.

 Baruch, the Lost Epistle of, pp. lxv.-lxvii.
 the Lost Epistle of, modern Latin Version by Ceriani, pp. xxx.-xxxiii.
 the Apocryphal Book of, pp. xvii.-xviii.
 the Gnostic Book of, p. xix.
 a Latin Book of, pp. xix.-xx.
 the Rest of the Words of, pp. xviii.-xix.
 Bath-qôl, the, xxii. 1, note
 Behemoth, xxix. 4, note
 Boasting of the Gentiles, v. 1 ; vii. 1 ; lxvii. 2, 6-7, note ; lxxx. 3
 Body, the, to be restored by the earth, xlii. 8, note

CALEB, lix. 1
 Cedron, the valley of, v. 5, note ; xxi. 1 ; xxxi. 2
 Chaldees, the army of, viii. 4
 Christians referred to, xli. 3, note ; xlii. 4 ; xlviii. 24 ; lxxxv. 14
 Consciousness of right and wrong in all men, xlviii. 40, note Corruption, the present world, its sphere, xxi. 19, note ; xl. 3
 Created, a definite number, xxiii. 4-5, notes Creation ex nihilo, xxi. 4, note the new, xxxii. 6, note

DAVID, lxi. 1
 Death, physical, traced to Adam, xxiii. 4, note premature, traced to Adam, xxiii. 4, note ; liv. 15, note spiritual, traced to Adam, p. lxxx., footnote ; xlviii. 42, note Deluge, the, lvi. 15
 Dillmann, pp. xviii., xxxv.
 Dispersion, the return from the, lxxvii. 6 ; lxxviii. 7, note
 Dragons, x. 6, note
 Drummond, p. xxxv.

EDERSHEIM, p. xxxv.
 Eljah, lxxvii. 24

Emendations of the Syriac by Bensly, xxxii. 5 of the Syriac by Ceriani, x. 18 ; xiv. 6 ; li. 1 ; lvi. 4, 14 ; lx. 2 ; lxix. 1, 4 ; lxx. 8 ; lxxvii. 16 of the Syriac by the Editor, vii. 2 ; xiv. 5 ; xxiv. 4 ; xlii. 5 ; xlviii. 32 ; li. 16 ; lix. 11 ; lxxvii. 2 ; lxx. 5 ; lxxii. 1 ; lxxiv. 4 ; lxxv. 1 ; lxxvi. 2 of the text through retranslation into Hebrew, pp. li.-liii. ; x. 13 ; xxi. 9, 11, 12 ; xxiv. 2 ; xxix. 5 ; xlv. 12 ; lxii. 7 ; lxx. 6 ; lxxx. 2 ; lxxxv. 12 of the text through retranslation into Greek, iii. 7 ; xxi. 9, 11, 12 ; xxiv. 1, 2 ; lxii. 7
 Enoch's functions transferred to Moses, xiii. 3, note ; lix. 5-11, note Euphrates, lxxvii. 22 ; lxxviii. 1
 Ewald, p. xxxiii.
 Ezra, Fourth—its relations to our Apocalypse, pp. lxvii.-lxxvi. composite, pp. lxvii.-lxix. conflicts in doctrine with Apocalypse of Baruch, pp. lxix.-lxxi. from Hebrew sources, p. lxxi. relations of its constituents to those of the Apocalypse of Baruch, pp. lxxii.-lxxvi.
 Ezra, Fifth, p. xx.

FAITH, liv. 21, note
 Fasts, v. 7, note ; ix. 2, note
 Fire—the final abode of the wicked, xlv. 15, note ; xlviii. 39, 43 ; lix. 2, note Forgiveness, pp. lxxxi.-lxxxiv.
 Forty days of instruction, lxxvi. 4-5
 Freewill in the Apocalypse of Baruch and 4 Ezra, pp. lxx.-lxxi. ; lxxx.-lxxxi. ; xviii. 2, note ; liv. 15, note Fritzsche, pp. xvii., xxiii., xxxii., xxxiv.

GEDALIAH, v. 5 ; xlv. 1
 Gehenna, lix. 10
 Gentiles, the boasting of the, v. 1 ;

- vii. 1; lxvii. 2, 6-7, note; lxxx. 3
the destiny of the, lxxii. 4-6, note
- HARRIS, RENDEL, pp. xviii., 55
Hausrath, p. xxxiv.
Hebraisms surviving in the Syriac text, pp. xlv. -li.
Hebrew original of the Apocalypse of Baruch, pp. xlv. -liii.
Hebron, xlvii. 1
Herodotus quoted on, xix. 6-8
Hexaemeron, fragment of an, xxix.
4, note
Hezekiah, lxiii. 1, 3, 5
Hilgenfeld, p. xxxiv.
- INHABITANTS of the earth, xxv. 1,
note
Intermediate place of happiness,
xxi. 23, note; lix. 10, note of torment, xxx. 5; xxxvi. 11; lii.
1, 2, note
Israel chastened, i. 5, note
- JABISH, v. 5
Jacob, seed of, xvii. 4; xxxi. 3
James, pp. xx. -xxi.; xxvii. -xxviii.
Jecooniah, i. 1
Jeremiah, ii. 1; v. 5; ix.; x. 2, 4; xxxiii. 1
accompanies the captivity to Babylon in B², x. 2, note;
xxxiii. 2
does not accompany the captivity in B¹, x. 2, note; lxxvii. 12, note Jeroboam, lxii. 1
Jerusalem removed for a time, i. 4, note; vi. 9; xxxii.
to be restored in B¹, i. 4, note;
cf. also lxxviii. 7, note not to be restored in B², i. 4, note the heavenly, iv. 3, note called "mother," iii. 1, note its fall due to the sins of both Judah and Israel, lxxvii. 10, note
Jezebel, lxii. 3
Josephus quoted on, i. 3; xlvi. 34;
liv. 15, 19; lxxxv. 3
Joshua, lix. 1
Josiah, lxvi. 1
Judgment, the final, xlvi. 39; lix. 8
- Justification, doctrine of, in Baruch and 4 Ezra, pp. lxx., lxxxi.;
xxi. 9, note
Justify—its various meanings, xxi.
9, note
Justin Martyr quoted on, xxix. 3
- KABISCH, pp. xxxix. -xli.; lxvii. - lxviii.
Kneucker, pp. xvii., xxxv.
- LAGARDE, pp. xxiv., xxx.
Land, the Holy; its peculiar sanctity, xxix. 2, note
Law, the, in Baruch and 4 Ezra,
p. lxix.; xv. 5, note; xxxviii.
2, note
glorified in proportion as the Messianic and national hopes fail, xv. 5, note
the unwritten, lvii. 2, note
Lelioto, x. 8, note
Leviathan, xxix. 4, note
Living creatures, the, li. 11
- MANASSEH, lxiv. 1, 6, 7; lxv. 1
Many to be saved according to Baruch, but not according to 4 Ezra, xxi. 11, note
Marshall, p. xvii.
Marvels—a sign of the Messiah's
Advent, xxix. 6, note
Mercy-seat, vi. 7
Merit of the Fathers, xiv. 7, note Messiah, xxix. 3; xxx. 1; xli. 1 the, and the Law, xv. 5, note in A¹ has a passive rôle, xxix. 3,
note
in A² and A³ has an active rôle, xxix. 3, note; xl. 1, note;
lxvii. 4-6, note
Messianic woes, xxvii. 1, note
Millenarian fancies, xxix. 5
Miriam, lix. 1
Moses, iii. 9; iv. 5; xvii. 4; lix.
1; lxxxiv. 2, 5
- NEBUCHADNEZZAR, lxxix. 1
- OAK, the, vi. 1, note; lxxvii. 18 Obedience to the law and the Rabbis enforced, xlvi. 5

Ophir, x. 19

Original sin in Baruch, 4 Ezra, the New Testament, pp. lxx.-lxxi.,
lxxx.-lxxxi.; xviii. 2, note;
xxiii. 4, note; liv. 15, note

PARADISE, iv. 3, 6; lix. 8

Paronomasiae in the Hebrew original,
p. liii.

Pharisees, the, referred to, xlii. 5,
note

Philo quoted on, xxi. 4

Polyglot Syriac text of the Epistle of Baruch, pp. xxvii.-xxviii.

Predestination and freewill in Judaism, liv. 15, 19, note

Proselytes, xli. 4, note; xlii. 5;
xlviii. 19

QUOTATIONS from the Old Testament, pp. xlv.-xlv.

RABBINISM, fusion of the popular Messianic views and early, p.
87

Ramiel, lv. 3, note; lxiii. 6

Recognition after death, l. 3, 4,
note

Renan, pp. xxxiv.-xxxv.

Resurrection, the, p. lxxx.; xxx.
1; l.-li., notes

Righteous, the risen, li. 10, note

Righteousness variously conceived, xxiv. 1, note

Rosenthal, pp. xxxvi.-xxxvii.

Ryle, p. xliii.

SALMANASAR, lxii. 6

Sanday and Headlam's Romans quoted on, xxi. 9; liv. 15, 18, 19, 21

Saved, many to be, xxi. 11

Schürer, pp. xvii., xxxvii.-xxxix.

Sennacherib, lxiii. 2, 4

Seriah, v. 5

Shedim, x. 8, note

Sheol, xi. 6, note; lii. 1, 2, note;
lvi. 6, note; lxxxiii. 17

Sirens, x. 8, note

Solomon, lxi. 1; lxxvii. 25

Son of the law, xlv. 4, note

Sophocles quoted on, x. 6

Spheres, the, xlviii. 9

Stähelin, p. xxxiv.

Stanton, p. xxxvii.

TACITUS quoted on, viii. 2

Temple, the second, its low repute, lxviii. 6, note

Theognis quoted, x. 6, note

Thomson, p. xxxv.

Titles of God—the Lord, i. 1, note;

O LORD, my Lord, iii. 1, note;

Mighty God, vi. 8, note; God,

x. 1, note; the Lofty One, xiii.

8, note; Most High, xvii. 1, note; the Mighty One, xxi. 3;

note

Treasury of manna, xxix. 8

Treasures of good deeds, xxiv. 1,
note

of souls, xxi. 23, note; xxiii. 4

Tribes, the nine and a half, lxii. 5;

lxxvii. 19; lxxviii. 1

the two and a half, lxiv. 5

the ten, i. 2

VISION of the cedar and the vine, i.e. A², xxxvi.-xl.

of the cloud and the lightning,

i.e. A³, liii.-lxxiv.

Visiting the earth, God's, xx. 2,
note

WEBER, passim

Wieseler, p. xxxiv.

Works, the doctrine of, pp. lxx.-

lxx., lxxxi.; ii. 1, 2, notes;

xiv. 7, note

World, the, made for man, xiv. 18,

19, note; xv. 7; xxi. 24

the, of corruption, xxi. 19, note the, of incorruption, xxi. 19, note; lvii. 2, note

YOKE of the law, xli. 3, note

ZEDEKIAH, viii. 5

Zion, v. 1, 3; vii. 1; x. 7, 10, 12;
xi. 1, etc.

In Crown 8vo, Cloth. Price 7s. 6d. net

STUDIES IN HEBREW PROPER NAMES

BY

G. BUCHANAN GRAY, M.A.

Lecturer in Hebrew and Old Testament Theology in Mansfield College late Senior Kennicott Scholar in the University of Oxford

A. & C. BLACK, SOHO SQUARE, LONDON

In Demy 8vo, Cloth. Price 24s.

INTRODUCTION
TO THE BOOK OF ISAIAH WITH AN APPENDIX CONTAINING THE UNDOUBTED PORTIONS OF THE TWO CHIEF PROPHETIC WRITERS IN A TRANSLATION

BY

The Rev. T. K. CHEYNE, M.A., D.D.

ORIEL PROFESSOR OF THE INTERPRETATION OF HOLY SCRIPTURE AT OXFORD AND FORMERLY FELLOW OF BALLIOL COLLEGE; CANON OF ROCHESTER

"This elaborate and scholarly work. . . . We must leave to professed scholars the detailed appreciation of Professor Cheyne's work. His own learning and reputation suffice to attest its importance."—The Times.

"Full of learning, and forms a perfect mine of critical research."—National Observer.

"This truly great and monumental work."—Critical Review.

"We heartily congratulate the author on the completion of a long projected work, which will at once take its place among the most important on its subject."—Primitive Methodist Quarterly Review.

"A further and notable contribution to the study of the interesting and difficult problems presented by the Book of Isaiah."—Baptist Magazine.

"This monument of patient scholarship, wide reading, and indefatigable research."—The Speaker.

"Ein ausgezeichnetes Werk! Des Verfassers kritische Kraft, seine Umsicht in der Untersuchung und die besonnene Ruhe seines Urtheils, insbesondere aber auch die ungewöhnliche Klarheit seiner Darstellung, die auch die verwickeltsten Fragen in angenehmster Form darzubieten vermag, haben längst schon seinen Namen bei den Fachgenossen hochangesehen gemacht."—Deutsche Litteratur Zeitung.

A & C. BLACK, SOHO SQUARE, LONDON.

WORKS BY THE LATE W. ROBERTSON SMITH, M.A., LL.D.

Professor of Arabic in the University of Cambridge

Demy 8vo. Price 15s. net.

LECTURES ON THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITES

THE FUNDAMENTAL INSTITUTIONS

New Edition. Revised throughout by the Author

Demy 8vo. Price 10s. 6d.

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THE JEWISH CHURCH

A COURSE OF LECTURES ON BIBLICAL CRITICISM

Second Edition. Revised and much Enlarged

Post 8vo. Price 10s. 6d.

THE PROPHETS OF ISRAEL AND THEIR PLACE IN HISTORY

To the Close of the Eighth Century B.C.

New Edition

WITH INTRODUCTION AND ADDITIONAL NOTES

BY

The Rev. T. K. CHEYNE, M.A., D.D.

ORIEL PROFESSOR OF THE INTERPRETATION OF HOLY SCRIPTURE AT OXFORD
CANON OF ROCHESTER

A. & C. BLACK, SOHO SQUARE, LONDON

A SHORT HISTORY OF SYRIAC LITERATURE

BY

The Late WILLIAM WRIGHT, LL.D.

PROFESSOR OF ARABIC IN THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE

Crown 8vo. Price 6s. net.

SKETCH OF THE HISTORY OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH

BY

J. WELLHAUSEN

PROFESSOR AT MARBURG

Third Edition

Crown 8vo. Price 5s.

SKETCHES FROM EASTERN HISTORY

BY

THEODOR NÖLDEKE,

PROFESSOR OF ORIENTAL LANGUAGES IN THE UNIVERSITY OF STRASSBURG

TRANSLATED BY

JOHN SUTHERLAND BLACK, M.A., LL.D.

And Revised by the Author

Demy 8vo. Price 10s. 6d.

A. & C. BLACK, SOHO SQUARE, LONDON

5.1.87

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

Library of the University of Wisconsin

THE ODES AND PSALMS
OF SOLOMON

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

London: FETTER LANE, E.C.

C. F. CLAY, MANAGER

Edinburgh: 100, PRINCES STREET

Berlin: A. ASHER AND CO.

Leipzig: F. A. BROCKHAUS

New York: G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS

Bombay and Calcutta: MACMILLAN AND CO., LTD.

All rights reserved

١٣
 ١٤
 ١٥
 ١٦
 ١٧
 ١٨
 ١٩
 ٢٠
 ٢١
 ٢٢ ٢٣
 ٢٤
 ٢٥
 ٢٦
 ٢٧
 ٢٨
 ٢٩
 ٣٠
 ٣١
 ٣٢
 ٣٣
 ٣٤
 ٣٥
 ٣٦
 ٣٧
 ٣٨
 ٣٩
 ٤٠ ٤١
 ٤٢
 ٤٣
 ٤٤
 ٤٥
 ٤٦
 ٤٧
 ٤٨
 ٤٩
 ٥٠
 ٥١
 ٥٢
 ٥٣
 ٥٤
 ٥٥
 ٥٦
 ٥٧
 ٥٨
 ٥٩ ٦٠
 ٦١
 ٦٢
 ٦٣
 ٦٤
 ٦٥
 ٦٦
 ٦٧
 ٦٨ ٦٩
 ٧٠
 ٧١
 ٧٢
 ٧٣
 ٧٤
 ٧٥
 ٧٦
 ٧٧
 ٧٨
 ٧٩
 ٨٠
 ٨١
 ٨٢
 ٨٣
 ٨٤
 ٨٥
 ٨٦
 ٨٧
 ٨٨
 ٨٩
 ٩٠
 ٩١
 ٩٢
 ٩٣
 ٩٤ ٩٥
 ٩٦
 ٩٧
 ٩٨
 ٩٩
 ١٠٠

Bible. O.T. Apocryphal books. Psalms and " Odes of Solomon. Syriac.

THE ODES AND PSALMS OF SOLOMON

PUBLISHED FROM THE SYRIAC VERSION

BY

J. RENDEL HARRIS, M.A.

Hon. D.Litt. (Dubl.), Hon. LL.D. (Haverford), Hon. D.Theol. (Leiden), Hon. LL.D. (Birmingham), Hon. Fellow of Clare College, Cambridge

SECOND EDITION
REVISED AND ENLARGED WITH A FACSIMILE

Cambridge :
at the University Press 1911 πληροῦσθε ἐν πνεύματι, λαλοῦντες ἑαυτοῖς ψαλμοῖς καὶ ὕμνοις καὶ ᾠδαῖς πνευματικαῖς, ᾄδοντες καὶ ψάλλοντες τῇ καρδίᾳ ὑμῶν τῷ κύριῳ.

Ad Ephes. v. 19.

οὐ γάρ ἐστιν ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ βρωσίς καὶ πόσις, ἀλλὰ δικαιοσύνη καὶ εἰρήνη καὶ χαρὰ ἐν πνεύματι ἀγίῳ.

Ad Rom. xiv. 17.

General Library System
University of Wisconsin - Madison
728 State Street
Madison, WI 53706-1494
U.S.A.

267626

JUL -5 1928

CBOY

P

2

Man CBOY
P 1911

CONTENTS

| | PAGES |
|---|----------------------|
| PREFACE TO FIRST EDITION | vii |
| PREFACE TO SECOND EDITION | viii |
| BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTES | ix—xii |
| BRIEF SUMMARY OF CRITICISMS | xiii—xxxii |
| SUPPLEMENTARY NOTE ON RECENT CRITICISMS | xxxiii—xxxvii |
| INTRODUCTION | i—89 |
| TRANSLATION OF THE ODES | 90—140 |
| TRANSLATION OF THE PSALMS | 141—156 |
| SYRIAC TEXT OF THE ODES AND PSALMS | 1—2 |
| FACSIMILE: ODES OF SOLOMON xxvi. 13—xxviii. 4 | To face Title |

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

IT is not easy to produce a satisfactory edition of a work which has come down to us in a single document, especially when the document itself is late in date, and represents not the original text, but a version of the same, made by some unknown hand. Obscurities are sure to exist in a text so scantily attested and of such an uncertain tradition. In spite, however, of these inherent difficulties, I hope that the translation and editing of these new Odes of Solomon (with their associated and already known Psalms of Solomon) will be satisfactory; for, although late in date, the text is very well preserved, and the translation from the Greek into the Syriac appears to have been carefully and conscientiously made. If we could come across some more traces of the newly-recovered work in the writings of the Fathers, or if, by good hap, we might find the lost Latin or a copy of the original Greek, much that is obscure in our presentation of the Odes would disappear. Meanwhile we have done our best with the material as we found it and as we were able to reinforce it: our thanks are due to scholarly friends who have assisted us with their keen revising eyes or their nimble emendating brains. My learned lady friends Mrs Lewis and Mrs Gibson have given me much assistance with the proofs: Mr Glover has criticised obscure passages and inadequate arguments: and Professor Nestle has made some brilliant suggestions for the betterment of the text, and traces of his skilled hand may be seen at several points, of which I note especially Ode 7. 12, Ode 38. 14, Ps. v. 16, Ps. vii. 4, and Ps. xvii. 31. I think it is very likely that a skilled Coptic scholar could also do something to improve either the text or the translation in those Odes which have been transferred to the text of the Pistis Sophia.

RENDEL HARRIS

CHETWYND

SELLY OAK

October 1909

O. S.

b

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

THE first edition of this book having been exhausted sooner than I had anticipated, I have decided not to delay the production of a new edition, which should, as far as possible, remove the errors of the former, and incorporate the results of the searching criticism to which the Odes and the manner of their presentation have been subjected.

In response to a number of appeals, I have added a facsimile of the unique manuscript from which I have worked. Then, as far as conviction ruled, I have accepted a number of textual betterments from scholars in England, France and Germany. In the case of the Psalms of Solomon, I have added the readings of the curious fragment of these Psalms, preserved in a MS. in the Cambridge University Library, to which Dr Barnes has drawn attention. In the case of the Odes, the text and the translation and the theories connected therewith have been compared with those of Harnack-Flemming, Zahn, Ungnad-Stärk, Batiffol-Labourt, Barnes, Bernard, Diettrich, Charles, Clemen, Gunkel, Haussleiter, Mead, Menzies, Nestle, Schulthess, Spitta and others. As the range of interpretation is very wide, and critical consent still seems to be somewhat remote, I have added a new section to review the work done on the Odes by the scholars referred to, and to give some estimate of its value in the most important cases. With these corrections and expansions I hope the second edition will be as welcome as and not less useful than the first.

RENDEL HARRIS

SEELY OAK

February 1911

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTES

In preparing the second edition for the press, it will be convenient to give in the first place, a bibliography of the most important reviews and notices of the Odes, which I have come across: the list makes no pretence at completeness; but it will serve to indicate the currents of opinion, and special attention will be given to those articles or reviews which are important for the resolution of the problems connected with the Odes, by marking them with an asterisk.

- Dr J. Vernon Bartlet in British Weekly for Feb. 25, 1909. (Announcement of Discovery of the Odes.)
- Rendel Harris in Contemporary Review for April, 1909, 'An Early Christian Hymn-book.'
- J. M. Leendertz in 'Ελθέτω ἡ βασιλεία σου for May 6, 1909 (Utrecht). (Notice of Discovery etc.)
- Prof. Nestle in Kirchlicher Anzeiger für Württemberg No. 49, 1909. (Notice of Discovery.)
- Louis Mariès in Études par les Pères de la compagnie de Jésus for June 20, 1909. (Notice of Discovery and of Article by R. H. in Contemporary Review.)
- Rendel Harris. An Early Christian Psalter, London (Nisbet and Co.), 1909. Contains the greater part of the Odes in English with a brief introduction.
- Rendel Harris in The Quest. 1910, pp. 288—305. Text of lecture on 'An early Judæo-Christian Hymn-book' given before the Quest Society.
- G. R. S. Mead in The Quest. 1910, pp. 561—570. Review of Rendel Harris' Odes and Psalms of Solomon.
- G. R. S. Mead in The Quest. 1910, vol. ii. pp. 166—169. Review of Harnack's Ein jüdisch-christliches Psalmbuch.
- Harnack in Sitzungsberichte der könig. preuss. Akademie for 1909. No. 51. Berlin. Notice of Discovery.

- 'Times' Literary Supplement for Dec. 2, 1909. Brief Review.
 Schürer in Theol. Literaturzeitung for Jan., 1910, pp. 6, 7. Review Record for Dec. 17, 1909. (Brief Notice.)
 Nestle in Theol. Lit.-Blatt for Jan. 7, 1910. Review of the Odes.
The Christian World for Jan. 13, 1910. Review.
 W. B. Brash in The Methodist Times for Jan. 13, 1910. Review.
 Dr James Moffatt in British Weekly for Feb. 24, 1910. Review.
The Athenaeum for Jan. 15, 1910. Review.
 R. S. Franks in the British Friend for Jan., 1910. Review.
 H. Ramette in Le Chrétien Libre, pp. 457—460. Review.
Expository Times for Feb., 1910. Editorial Notice.
 Wohlenberg in Schleswig-Holstein-Lauenburgisches Kirchen- u. Schulblatt for Feb. 12, 1910, No. 7.
The Outlook for April 2, 1910. Review. (New York.)
Evening Bulletin for April 13, 1910. Account of Discovery. (Philadelphia.)
The Guardian for April 14, 1910. Review of Early Christian Psalter.
The Guardian for April 29, 1910. Review of Odes and Psalms.
 Buonaiuti in Rivista Storico-critica delle Scienze Teologiche for March, 1910 (pp. 188—200). (Rome.)
Daily News for March 11, 1910. Brief Review.
 'Times' Literary Supplement for April 7, 1910. A Church Hymnal of the First Century. Review (by Dr R. H. Charles).
 H. Hansen in Der Alte Glaube for April 8, 1910. Review, with translation of three selected Odes into German verse.
British Weekly for April 27, 1910. Notice of Dr Harnack's book on the Odes.
Great Thoughts for May 7, 1910. Review.
 *Harnack and Flemming, Ein jüdisch-christliches Psalmbuch aus dem ersten Jahrhundert: in Texte u. Untersuchungen III. 5. 4. Leipzig (Hinrichs) 1910.
 Nairne in Guardian for June 3, 1910, p. 778. Review.
 Dr Johannes Haussleiter in Theologisches Literaturblatt for June 10, 1910.
Der judenchristliche Charakter der Oden Salomos.
 J. M. Leendertz. Die Oden von Salomo. Amsterdam (Portielje) 1910.
 Dr Johannes Leipoldt in Allgemeine Evangelisch-Lutherische Kirchenzeitung for July 8, 1910. Die Lieder Salomos.
 Dr David S. Schaff in the Presbyterian Banner (America) for June 2, 1910. A Christian Hymn-Book of the First Century.
 Dr Barnes in Expositor for July, 1910, pp. 52—63. An Ancient Christian Hymn-Book.
 Dr Barnes in Journal of Theological Studies for July, 1910, pp. 573 sqq.
The Text of the Odes of Solomon and pp. 615 sqq. Review of Harnack on the Odes.

- *G. Diettrich in Die Reformation for May 8, June 5, Aug. 7, and Aug. 14, 1910. Eine jüdisch-christliche Liedersammlung aus dem apostolischen Zeitalter.
- J. A. Montgomery in Biblical World, xxxvi. 93—100. The recently discovered Odes of Solomon.
- A. Wabnitz in Revue de Théologie et des questions religieuses xix. 351—367. Un Psautier judéo-chrétien du 1^{er} siècle.
- Kennedy in Expository Times, July, 1910, p. 444. Review of Harnack on the Odes.
- Dr R. H. Charles in Review of Theology and Philosophy for October, 1910, pp. 220—223. Review of Harnack's book.
- R. H. Strachan in Expository Times for Oct., 1910. The newly recovered Odes of Solomon and their bearing on the Problem of the Fourth Gospel.
- Dr T. K. Cheyne in Hibbert Journal for Oct., 1910, pp. 208—212. Review of the Odes and Psalms and of Harnack's Jüdisch-christliches Psalmbuch.
- The Churchman* for Oct., 1910. Review.
- R. Bultmann in Monatschrift für Pastoral Theologie Oct., 1910. Ein jüdisch-christliches Psalmbuch aus dem ersten Jahrhundert.
- *Batiffol and Labourt in Revue Biblique for Oct., 1910, pp. 484—500; and for Jan., 1911, pp. 1—57. Les Odes de Salomon. (Not yet completed.)
- F. Spitta in Monatschrift für Gottesdienst und kirchl. Kunst for 1910, pp. 245 sqq. : 273 sqq.
- F. Spitta in Zeitschrift für die neutestamentliche Wissenschaft (Preuschen's Zeitschrift), Heft 3, 1910, pp. 193—290. Zum Verständnis der Oden Salomos.
- F. Spitta in Monatschrift für Pastoral Theologie for Dec., 1910, pp. 91—101. Die Oden Salomos und das neue Testament.
- W. Stärk in Zeitschrift für wissenschaftliche Theologie LII. N.F. xvii. 4.
- *Prof. W. A. Menzies in the Interpreter for Oct., 1910, pp. 1—22. The Odes of Solomon.
- Methodist Quarterly Review* (American) for Oct., 1910. Review of the Odes and Psalms and of Harnack's Jüdisch-christliches Psalmbuch.
- Bousset in Theologische Rundschau for Nov., 1910. Brief notice of Odes etc.
- M. J. Lagrange in Revue Biblique Internationale for Oct., 1910, pp. 593—596. Notice and Review.
- Dr J. H. Bernard in Spectator for Oct. 22, 1910. Notice of Discovery etc.
- Kirsopp Lake in Theologisch Tijdschrift for 1910, xlv. pp. 89—92. Review.
- *Dr J. H. Bernard in Journal of Theological Studies for Oct., 1910.

- Methodist Quarterly Review* (American) for Jan., 1911. Review of Harnack.
- Clemen in Theologische Rundschau, pp. 1—19, Jan., 1911. Die neuentdeckten Oden Salomos.
- *F. Schulthess in Zeitschrift für die neutestamentliche Wissenschaft (Preuschen's Zeitschrift), Heft 3, 1910, pp. 249—258. Textkritische Bemerkungen zu den syrischen Oden Salomos.
- *H. Gunkel in Zeitschrift für die neutestamentliche Wissenschaft (Preuschen's Zeitschrift), Heft 3, 1910, pp. 291—328. Die Oden Salomos.
- *Wellhausen in Göttingische gelehrte Anzeigen for Sept., 1910, pp. 629—642. Review.
- S. Reinach in Revue Moderniste Internationale for Dec., 1910, pp. 457—458 (Geneva), a letter from S.R. à propos des Odes de Salomon.
- H. Böhmer in Kirchliche Rundschau für d. evang. Gemeinden Rheinlands und Westfalens for 1910, pp. 215 sqq.: 238 sqq.: 266 sqq.: 297 sqq.
- *Th. Zahn in Neue kirchliche Zeitschrift for 1910, pp. 667 sqq.: 747 sqq.
- *Ungnad and Stärk in Kleine Texte für theologische und philosophische Vorlesungen und Übungen. Bonn, 1910. Die Oden Salomos.
- B. Hake in Deutsche Rundschau Jan., 1911. Die Oden Salomos.
- H. Hansen. Die Oden Salomos in deutschen Nachdichtungen. Gütersloh (Bertelsmann) 1911.
- Viteau and Martin, Les Psaumes de Salomon. Paris (Letouzey et Ané) 1911.
- *Arthur C. Headlam in Church Quarterly Review for Jan. 1911, pp. 272—302. Review.
- Meyer: Grosses Konversations-Lexicon, 6. Aufl. 22. Bd. Jahres-Supplement 1909—1910.
 p. 396. Harris, James Rendel....The Odes of Solomon, 1909.
 p. 638. Oden Salomos, eine Sammlung von 42 jüdischen Psalmen in christlicher Bearbeitung etc., etc.
- Salomon Reinach in Revue de l'Histoire des Religions, 1910. (Annales du Musée Guimet.) Les Odes de Salomon.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF RECENT CRITICISMS

In the previous edition a first attempt was made to elucidate the various problems which were presented by the new book of Odes. The Psalms which were attached to them were treated in a rapid manner, as there did not seem any necessity to go over again in detail the various critical results at which scholars had arrived with regard to their origin. It is sufficient to say that no considerations have been adduced which should invalidate the reference of the Solomonic Psalms to the period of the Roman Invasion of Judæa by Pompey, and of the years that followed the desecration of the Temple¹. With regard to these Psalms the critics have been moving in converging paths to a conclusion from which there is no appreciable dissent. With regard, however, to the Odes and their place in the history of literature and of religion, no signs of such convergence or consent are yet to be seen. On every side doubts are expressed as to the explanations which I proposed. If, for example, it was suggested that they were Judæo-Christian in origin, the contradiction comes from two opposite sides, one school affirming that they are not Christian, the other that they are not Jewish. If, again, the suggestion is made that the time of their composition is the latter part of the first century A.D., the contentions have to be met that they are (1) nearly a hundred years earlier or (2) nearly a hundred years later than the time proposed. If I suggest that the Odes frequently betray a Johannine vocabulary, but at the same time decline to recognise actual loans from the Fourth Gospel, preferring to believe that the vocabulary in question is the theological language of a time and school which are not very remote from the time and school of thought of the author of the Fourth Gospel, one has to face the objections, on the one side that the theology is not that of a Christian but of a Jewish mystic, on the other side that it is the regular Christian theology of the Church after it has been charged to saturation with the thought and expressions of St John. On the one side there is the alluring hypothesis that we have discovered the missing link from which the Fourth Gospel itself depends, on the other side, the Odes are by invisible links dependent from the feet of St John. Rarely has so much variety of opinion been provoked by the publication of a new document from the lost library of the Early Church: even the Teaching of the Apostles did not evoke so many nor so varied suggestions. Indeed, on looking over what has been said on the subject, up to the time of the preparation of this second edition, there does not seem to be anything about which everyone seems agreed unless it should be that the Odes are of singular beauty and of high spiritual value, and that they are probably of Syro-Palestinian origin. Well! that is something gained, for it means that we are moving still further away from the old belief that the origins of the Fourth Gospel are to be sought in Alexandria and that every presentation of the doctrine of the Logos must have passed through the moulding hands of Philo.

¹ Prof. Cheyne, in the Hibbert Journal, expresses a hope that I shall see my way to the abandonment of the identification of Pompey with the great dragon, and to the desertion of the chronology which is marked by the allusions to his death on the Egyptian shore. I am not to be allured from so certain a piece of critical investigation into the by-paths of ancient astrology.

Let us then see what has been said on the subject of the Odes by recent writers. We begin, both chronologically and for other reasons, with Dr Harnack: he was almost the first in the field¹, and for most of us who are engaged in historical and critical investigations into Christian origins and history, he is il maestro di color che sanno. Harnack's book betrays in its preface the thesis that he means to defend, that the Odes of Solomon are a Jewish Psalm-book composed near the beginning of the Christian era and worked over again at no very distant date by a Christian hand. That is, Harnack accepts most of my arguments that there is little or nothing in many of the Odes that is so distinctly Christian as not to be equally well described as Jewish, and in those cases where the Christian hand must be recognised it is the hand of an interpolator. Without conceding the absolute unity of the collection, for we both agree that this unity may be broken in one or two cases by possible later intrusions, Harnack affirms that the general and obvious unity of style, by which the compositions are characterised, must be qualified by regarding the Odes as emanating from one hand or school, and passing through another. Like myself, Harnack does not love the hypothesis of interpolations, but it is a hypothesis to which one must sometimes resort. In particular, at the time when one great religion is passing into another, and the books are, of necessity, passing over with the migrant people, it is in the highest degree likely that Christian editions will be produced of favourite Jewish books. We have, in fact, proof positive of such transfers in the case of the Teaching of the Twelve Apostles and its dependence upon the Jewish Doctrine of the Two Ways, and in the Christian additions which can be dissected out of the text of the Testament of the Twelve Patriarchs. Something of the same kind, but perhaps not quite so early, has happened in the famous Christian expansions of the text of Josephus; and, for a much less probable, but not impossible, parallel, we might refer to those attempts which have been made to dissect original Jewish writings out of the Apocalypse of John, in which case the hypothesis of Vischer that we should treat the expression 'God and the Lamb' as an interpolated expansion of the Divine Name, has a seductive simplicity which, if I remember rightly, bewitched even Harnack himself, who confesses not to love hypotheses of interpolation.

¹ He was partly anticipated by Diettrich, the first of whose remarkable articles in Die Reformation was written and published before Harnack's work saw the light. We shall attend to these articles later on.

There is, however, not the least need to apologize for the use of such hypotheses, if the criticism of the text breaks down for want of them. After all, it does not mean, in the present case, more than the substitution of two authors for one: it is not a case of multiplied redaction like that which is affirmed for the Pentateuch or Isaiah. Two authors are not too many for this little book; if two are intelligible where one is unintelligible, by all means let us have two: only let us keep in reserve the caution that it will always be easy to prove a document to be Jewish when you have dissected out of it everything that is Christian.

Certainly I have no right, a priori, to object to the extension which Harnack makes of my first thesis, seeing that I had already set aside certain Odes which discussed the Virgin Birth and the descent into Hades, as belonging to a relatively later stratum of thought than the main collection; and if one may resort to the hypothesis of interjection for whole Psalms, how can one reasonably object to the hypothesis of interpolation in selected Psalms; the interpolator has been admitted into the argument on the greater scale, how can he be prohibited on the smaller scale? Is it likely that the man who issues a new hymn-book, with which he incorporates some compositions of his own, will carefully keep his editorial hands off the rest of the collection? Such is not the method of the modern compilers of hymn-books, who have less reason to tamper with the texts that they appropriate than people had in the rapidly changing beliefs of the early centuries.

If Harnack is right, however, a curious phenomenon presents itself. My hypothesis of a Judæo-Christian composer, who betrays few of the external signs of Christianity, because of the elevation of his personal experience above the levels of ritual practices and dogmatic definitions, is replaced by Harnack by the hypothesis of a Jewish composer who is as free from definite traces of Judaism as my assumed writer was of the corresponding elements of Christianity. The man who had no Eucharist (so far as his language goes) is replaced by a man without a Passover. The man without a doctrine of penitence is replaced by a man who has no doctrine of sacrifice and no Day of Atonement. The man who moves so lightly amongst the early Christian orders, as not to refer to a bishop, while apologizing for his own priesthood and apparently confounding deacons with evangelists, has to be replaced by a Jew, who loves the Temple but has not a word to say of the associated priesthood and ritual! At first sight this looks very unlikely, and it is made more so, by the necessary deduction that the assumed non-ritualistic, undogmatic, mystical Jew suffered interpolation at the hands of an equally non-ritualistic, undogmatic and mystical Christian. At first sight, I say, this seems to be an improbable collocation: but it is not really so: for we start with the assumption of a mystical writer whose affinities are not with priesthoods or sacraments: one mystic is hereby conceded and perhaps a school: at all events, the Fourth Gospel offers striking analogies of similar spiritual elevation and detachment. If, however, this mystical writer be conceded, he must be either Jew or Christian, and there is no serious difficulty in the use by a Christian mystic of a previously existing Jewish mystic. If such Jewish mystics existed, they must in many cases have passed over, or evolved into Christian mystics, and this almost makes the apparent duality of the hypothesis of Harnack into a unity again. The parts divided are so nearly one, that they easily re-compose into a close and ultimate connexion.

Having said so much, I hope I have made it clear that I am animated by no hostility towards Harnack's treatment of the subject. One cannot read the book in which his theory is presented without admiration for the acuteness of its criticism, and the fertility of its illustration. Whether it be right or wrong, it is certainly a notable piece of work. Let us now take one or two cases in detail, in order that we may see the hypothesis in its actual application to the supposed interpolated Odes.

In the middle of the 3rd Ode, Harnack marks an interpolation in the 9th verse, as follows :

8. I have been united to Him, for the Lover has found the Beloved :
9. (And because I love him that is the Son, I shall myself become a Son) :
10. For he that is joined to Him that is immortal, will also himself become immortal,
11. And he who has pleasure in the Living One, will himself become living.

Here Harnack's argument is that immortality comes from union with God, and that the allusion to the Son of God disturbs the sequence. He objects to my erasure of the plural points, so as to read 'Living One' for 'Life,' and thinks the parallelism is sufficient between Life and 'the Immortal.' Thus the Ode becomes Jewish and not Christian except in the interpolated sentence. But with regard to the erasure of the plural points, it should be noticed that they would almost certainly be added if absent, that the parallelism is improved by their absence, that the title 'the Living One' (ὁ ζῶν) is a characteristic early name for Christ. It is involved again in Ode 8. 24, where the parallelism shows that the terms 'the Beloved,' 'the one that lives,' and 'the one that was saved (!)' all belong to Christ. Accordingly Zahn says of this passage,

"Wer an den Lebendigen Wohlgefallen hat." Der Parallelismus membrorum empfiehlt es, mit Harris das Pluralzeichen...zu ignorieren.'

The words 'has pleasure in,' if we have rightly understood the Syriac, should correspond to a Greek εὐδοκέω which is again appropriate to a person, and as the account of the Baptism of Jesus shows, to a particular person. But if the expression 'the Living One' stands (especially when we remember the Johanne 'because I live ye shall live also,' and kindred passages), then it follows that Christ is referred to in the original Ode, or the alternative to this conclusion would be that the interpolation is more extended than a single verse. The latter alternative is very improbable.

The concluding sentence of the Ode with reference to the 'Spirit of the Lord which does not lie,' is rightly paralleled by Harnack with the ἀψευδὴς θεός of Tit. i. 2, where notice again that it is immortality that is the gift involved in God's veracity; 'the hope of eternal life is what God promised before the world began.' The Christian doctrine of immortality is that 'God has given unto us eternal life, and this life is in His Son' (1 Joh. v. 11). I see no reason to erase the reference to the Sonship in the one case which might not be applied in the other: nor any breach of continuity in a reference to the Son in one case which might not be equally affirmed in the other.

It would, of course, be unfair to discuss a great hypothesis like Harnack's from the standpoint of a single interpolation: the third Ode, for example, might be Christian and be at the same time, a thing apart: but in so far as common authorship in the main body of the Odes is conceded, the proof that one of them is Christian is a proof of the Christianity of the collection.

There are other cases of interpolation in the remaining Psalms where Harnack affirms it, which need to be examined in detail. For the present, however, let us keep to this third Ode, and discuss it in the light of another hypothesis which has been brought forward.

Professor Menzies of St Andrew's University has made a variation upon Harnack's original suggestions. He feels on the one hand the difficulty of resort to interpolation, and on the other hand the general strength of the argument that these Odes are fundamentally Jewish. Accordingly Menzies proposes in a striking article in the Interpreter to discard the theory of interpolation, and explain the apparently Christian allusions from the standpoint of Judaism. Let the reference to the Son stand: but interpret the Son as the ideal Israel, in harmony with the doctrine of the Old Testament that Israel is God's first-born son, whom

He called out of Egypt, carried in the wilderness, &c. The third Ode now reads as follows :

Because I love Israel (the Son of God)
I shall myself become an Israelite (i.e. a Son of God).

The language is that of a Jewish proselyte, who has come, as the Talmud says the disciples of Hillel did, 'under the wings of the Shekinah.' Professor Menzies affirms that this note of proselytism is characteristic of the Odes, and in that way having turned the argument to his own account which I made of the proselytism of the writer, he describes the whole collection by the name of Psalms of the Proselytes. The advantage of this new hypothesis is obvious; it gets rid of the resort to interpolations and restores to the collection a substantial unity; it mediates between the Jewish mystics of Harnack and my own Judæo-Christian proselyte author, by the suggestion of the Jewish proselytes, and it opens up before the imagination a field of spiritual life in connexion with the propaganda of Judaism, which is almost entirely a terra incognita.

As I want to do justice to Professor Menzies' argument, I will try to show how it may be made to illuminate certain other passages, and in particular, let us look a little closer into this same Ode. In the earlier part of the Ode we find the following statement :

Ode 3. v. 5. I love the Beloved and my soul loves Him;
v. 6. And where His rest is, there also am I.
v. 7. And I shall be no stranger there,
For with the Lord Most High and Merciful, there is no grudging.

Evidently the writer is speaking of spiritual privileges into which he has been introduced by God's grace and liberality. What is this divine Rest of which he speaks? It seems natural to refer to the terms in which God's dwelling in the Sanctuary is spoken of in the Old Testament, such as Ps. cxxxii. 14, 'Here is my rest, here will I dwell, for I have desired it': or Ps. cxxxii. 8, 'Arise, O Lord, into thy rest, thou and the ark of thy strength,' or to Isaiah lxvi. 1, 'What house will ye build me, or what is the place of my rest?' God's rest is, then, the Jewish temple¹;

¹ We might compare Isho'dad on John xiv. 1; 'He calls mansions...the abiding rests; because all rests and enjoyments are ours in dwellings.'

and the writer of the Ode is expressing the privilege which he has obtained by his proselytism, of passing beyond the middle wall of partition, from the Court of the Gentiles to the Court of the Israelites. It is precisely the situation which St Paul describes in spiritual language in Eph. ii. 19,

‘Ye are no more strangers and sojourners, but fellow-citizens of the saints, and of the household of God...the whole building groweth to an holy temple in the Lord.’

The reference to the Sanctuary, however it is to be explained, is a mark of the third Ode, just as it is in the much-disputed Ode which follows it. And if in the third Ode the Sanctuary (whether spiritual or literal) is the place of God’s rest, in the fourth Ode, it is forcibly described as the place of God’s heart. For it is God’s promise to Solomon that ‘my eyes and my heart shall be there continually’ (2 Chron. vii. 16) which is responsible for the curious expression, ‘Thou hast given Thy heart to thy believers.’ Here again we see that the Temple is in the view (whether near or far) of the writer.

These instances will suffice to show the strength of Prof. Menzies’ hypothesis. It enables us, as we have said, to avoid interpolation; it emphasises the language of the proselyte which had been previously detected in the Odes; and it makes it unnecessary to explain away, as so many have done, the evident affection of the writer for the actual temple at Jerusalem¹.

I have discussed this particular Ode at length in order to give a clear idea of the theory of Prof. Menzies and the way it mediates between Prof. Harnack’s view and my own. The difficulty in accepting it lies in the fact that it does not explain many of the passages which Harnack had got rid of by the theory of interpolation. The simple case of the third Ode does not find parallels in the rest of the book. How, for example, would one read the Jewish proselyte into the following passage in which Harnack had conceded a Christian element?

¹ This question of the reality of the allusions to the Temple comes up most definitely in the 4th Ode, where it has to be discussed. If we do not allow a real reference to the Temple, as I am disposed to maintain, we must say with Zahn (Die Oden Salomos, p. 753) ‘Dadurch wird klar, dass er nicht an ein von Menschenhänden bereitetes Gotteshaus mit Vorhöfen und Altären denkt, wie der alte Psalmist, sondern an ein geistliches Haus.’

Ode 31. (He opened His mouth and spake grace and joy:
 And He spake a new song of praise to His name:
 And He lifted up His voice to the Most High,
 And offered to Him the sons that were with him.
 And His face was justified, for them had His holy Father given Him.) Cf. Joh. xvii., Heb. ii. 13.
 Come forth, ye that have been afflicted.

Surely Harnack must be right in marking this passage as Christian: and unless the whole Ode is to be counted Christian, an interpolation must be assumed. There is no place for a Jewish proselyte here.

It seems, then, that the amendment moved by Professor Menzies to Harnack's interpretation is not of sufficient scope to cover the difficult passages. In some respects it is a brilliant suggestion, but it is inadequate. In one feature it is, I believe, nearer to the truth than Harnack's own exposition, in that it realised the traces of proselytism which are in the Odes. These are hardly appreciated by Harnack. For example, he passes very rapidly by the allusions to the Creation that does not keep Sabbath (with its obvious consequence in the de-sabbatizing of proselytes). Harnack has brushed this argument on one side, too hastily as I think, and others have followed him. His argument is as follows: the words 'do not keep sabbath' in the illustrative sentence quoted from Justin have nothing corresponding to them in the Ode; and therefore an anti-judaic polemic is not to be thought of. In fact the Ode is, like others, of Jewish origin. Upon which I remark, that the Sabbath is involved in the previous sentence that 'God rested from all his works,' and therefore a definite Sabbatic reference with regard to the motion of the luminaries was not required: and further there is no doubt that the reference to the motion of Sun, Moon and Stars on the Sabbath day is one of the chief anti-judaic arguments of the early Church. For example, take Gregory of Nyssa, Testimonia adversus Judaeos, 13, in a section headed περὶ τοῦ σαββατίζειν and we find that the argument against the Sabbath concludes with these words:

πῶς δὲ ἥλιος καὶ σελήνη καὶ ἄστρα τὸν ὠρισμένον δρόμον ἐκτελεῖ καὶ τῷ σαββάτῳ;

The writer is using up earlier material in the shape of anti-judaic testimonies: and the parallelism between this particular testimony and the language of the sixteenth Ode is so striking that we must convict the Ode of an anti-judaic tendency.

Harnack fails also, as I did to some extent myself, to emphasise and interpret the repeated allusion to a circumcision that was spiritual and not carnal. It is not sufficient in such a connexion to say that circumcision of the heart is a commonplace of the Old Testament and of the prophets. Why does the writer introduce it, not in the manner of exhortation, but as a personal experience, unless he is speaking more proselytorum? The ordinary Jewish mystic (supposing the species to have been discovered) is not likely to break out into song on this note.

Then the references made by the Odist to his being of another race need a closer examination. In Ode 41 Harnack isolates the remarkable passage contained in vv. 8—10, as an interpolation; but while admitting that the passage reminds one of the 'new creature in Christ' of whom Paul speaks, he makes the strange statement that the interpolator this time is a Jew. This Jewish interpolator is followed by a Christian interpolator in the passage from v. 12 to the end ('The Saviour who makes alive and does not reject our souls, the man who was humbled' &c.). It would surely have been simpler to admit that the language was that of a proselyte, and not to make this fantastic variation from the original Jewish author to a second Jewish interpolator, followed in his turn by a Christian annotator. The solution is too cumbrous to be the real one: but this must not be allowed to prejudice our judgment in other cases, in which the dissecting knife appears to be used with extraordinary skill. Whatever the final judgment may be as to the value of Harnack's solution, there can be no doubt that it is criticism of a very high order.

I now turn to a third hypothesis, in some ways more remarkable than either the doubtful one of Harnack or the rejected one of Menzies. In the Journal of Theological Studies for October 1910, Dean Bernard has launched the theory that these Odes are not Jewish (whether mystic or proselyte) nor Judæo-Christian, but simply Christian; that they are songs of newly-baptized persons, or proper to be sung over such, and that they belong to a much later date than has been supposed. Bernard suggests 150 A.D., which is the time to which Zahn and others would refer them, but I gather from him privately that he thinks this date too early, and is rather disposed to press the close of the second century as their time of composition. In some respects this solution has points of contact with Professor Menzies, for Psalms of the Baptized is a Christian way of writing Psalms of the Proselytes, in the period when baptism was adult baptism, and in that sense every believer was a proselyte. Bernard's hypothesis, however, sweeps away all that Harnack has said on the subject, and a good deal of my own reasoning. For it is clear that if the date be far on in the second century, all references to a pre-Johannine school of Christian or of Jewish thought may be swept on one side. At such a date the parallelisms with St John are equivalent to quotations, and no other explanation needs to be made of them. We are not likely to find the missing link in the ancestry of St John's Gospel from a Christian semi-liturgical book of songs at the end of the second century.

What, then, are the reasons from which Dr Bernard proceeds? For it must be said at once that the case is argued with such learning and force as to make the article to which we refer the most remarkable that has yet appeared. The case is as follows. Bernard points out that a number of striking passages in the Odes can be at once illustrated from the early baptismal rituals. For example, it seems certain that in the early Syrian Church and in the closely associated Armenian Church, baptized persons were arrayed in white robes, and crowns, or garlands, were placed on their heads. The white raiment is well known, but the crowns, which are not a feature of Western religion, as far as it is known to us, have been lost sight of. It is these crowns, according to Bernard, that are alluded to in such passages as the first Ode, 'The Lord is on my head like a crown, and I shall not be separated from Him.' The same figure recurs in the 5th, 9th, 17th and 20th Odes. The white garments are also exactly paralleled by the allusions in the Odes to the putting on of brightness or clothing oneself with light. In the Odes this bright raiment is spoken of as an exchange for 'the coat of skin' in the third chapter of Genesis; and Dr Bernard shows that this very allusion is found in the early descriptions of Baptism, as, for instance, in the following passage from Jerome, ‘Praeceptis Dei lavandi sumus, et cum, parati ad indumentum Christi, tunicas pelliceas deposuerimus, tunc induemur veste linea, nihil in se mortis habente, sed tota candida.’ (Ep. ad Fabiolam, LXIV. 20.)

Dr Bernard goes on to argue that the Odes also contemplate Baptism when they refer to the ‘Seal’ on the one hand, and to the ‘Living Water’ on the other. With regard to the ‘Seal,’ Dr Bernard thinks he has a less strong case for identification with Baptism than with regard to the ‘Living Water.’ I think he entirely underestimates the value of his own argument, when he says that the references to the Seal are ‘few in number, and their meaning is not as clear as is that of the Living Water.’ The history of the ‘Seal’ is obscure, nor can it easily be said when it passed from being a mark of ownership to a sacramental sign, but that it did become a talisman is certain, and there is much to be said for the belief that this talismanic virtue of baptism is reflected upon the language of the Odes. For example, in the Acts of Paul and Thecla the talismanic force of baptism is implied in Thecla’s words to Paul, ‘Give me only the sign of God, and no temptation shall touch me.’ But this is exactly parallel to Ode 4. 7, 8,

‘Who is there that shall put on thy grace and be hurt? For thy seal is known &c.’

Another curious illustration may be taken from Cyprian’s Testimonia (II. 10) where Cyprian explains that Goliath was killed by a blow on his forehead because his head had not been sealed. ‘By this seal we also are always safe and live’¹.

There is, therefore, much to be said for Dr Bernard’s contention that the ‘seal’ in the Odes does sometimes refer to baptism, even if it should not turn out to be always used in this sense.

But it is just at this point that the difficulty of the interpretation lies: while it may be freely granted that the ascription of talismanic virtue to the waters of baptism is early, and that it becomes almost universal (as may be seen by its prevalence even to the present day), it must not be overlooked that the Seal and its talismanic value are also both pre-Christian. We need only turn to the Psalms of Solomon in support of this statement. Thus in Psalms of Solomon xv. 8, we are told that 'the sign of the Lord is upon the righteous for their salvation'; and in the same way in xv. 10, 'the mark of perdition is upon the forehead (of sinners).' Granted that this may be based on the signing and sealing in the ninth chapter of Ezekiel, it is nevertheless clear that Ezekiel could be interpreted, and actually was interpreted, mystically before Christian baptism was even thought of. We must therefore be on our guard against reading back a late baptismal gnosis into early Christian or Jewish records.

¹ See also a similar reference from Lactantius on p. 80 infra.

An even more remarkable case for the need of caution occurs in Bernard's identification of the dragon with seven heads in Ode 22. 5. This dragon is supposed to be latent in the waters of baptism, as originally in the river Jordan, according to a passage in Job (xi. 18) where Leviathan will take the Jordan into his mouth; Bernard quotes appropriately from Cyril of Jerusalem, Catecheses iii. 11:

ὁ δράκων ἦν ἐν τοῖς ὕδασι κατὰ τὸν Ἰώβ, ὁ δέχόμενος τὸν Ἰορδάνην ἐν τῷ στόματι αὐτοῦ.

To the various allusions to this dragon who lurks in the midst of the waters which Bernard collects from the Eastern Baptismal rituals, I add the following passage of Bar Ṣalibi from his commentary on Matthew¹:

'Baptizatus est...ut confringeret caput draconis spiritalis qui in aquis reptabat, quem etiam olim immersit per Pharaonem.'

Here is again the dragon lurking in the water of Jordan whose head is broken when Christ is baptized: and I find that Bar Ṣalibi has taken this passage from an earlier Syriac writer, Moses Bar Kepha; for in a MS. of that writer in my possession, in which the meaning of baptism is discussed, there occurs the following passage:

ܕܠܥܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ
ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ ܕܡܫܚܝܢ

i.e. 'And again, it was in order that he might bruise the head of the spiritual dragon because he lurked in the waters: in the same way as erst he typically drowned that dragon, by means of Pharaoh the Egyptian, in the Red Sea.' In this way Bernard's argument is re-inforced, so far as the belief is affirmed (especially the belief of Oriental Christians) that the devil lurks in the waters of baptism, and requires to have his head broken (i) by Christ, (ii) by the insufflation and chrism of the water.

¹ I.c. in trans. p. 98.

But here again caution would be wise; for the dragon with seven heads is not a Christian conception arrived at by applying baptismal gnosis to the Old Testament; we see him again in the Psalms of Solomon, where by almost every critic he is recognised as the equivalent of Pompey and not of the devil or his counterpart the Leviathan of Job: he appears also in the Apocalypse certainly at a time anterior to the development of any baptismal gnosis: and when we look more closely at the language of the twenty-second Ode, we get quite a different kind of dragon from the mystical one of Bernard (Draco aquatilis Bernardi). He is indeed a water-snake; but his nearest zoological representative lies in quite another direction than the book of Job or even the ninety-first Psalm. For this dragon has a wicked poison which has to be eliminated, and when his heads have been broken, the roots have to be destroyed. So it is a bona fide hydra which is in the imagination of the Odist. One has only to recall the story of Hercules and the Lernaean Hydra, the battle with the hydra-heads, the searing of the roots, and the ravages wrought by the poison of the creature, to make it a fair suggestion that Bernard has mistaken the species, and that what he saw was really a Hydra spiritalis Harrisii, an older form zoologically than the ecclesiastical specimen to which Dr Bernard introduced us. The baptismal metaphors may turn out to have been borrowed from an earlier stratum of Christian thought, as well as from the Old Testament.

Perhaps the most striking of Dr Bernard's illustrations will be found in the quotations which he brings to bear on the obscurities at the beginning of the 24th Ode, where the abysses cry out with terror at the Baptism of the Lord. Dr Bernard observes that 'all Eastern Baptismal rites bring in the idea that the waters were terrified at the coming of Christ for Baptism.' The Scriptural basis for this belief is Ps. lxvii. 17, 18, 'The waters saw thee and were afraid, the abysses were troubled.' Bernard gives many striking patristic and liturgical parallels for these beliefs ; and, taken all together, they make a very strong impression. His whole argument must be carefully studied. I have only touched on a few points in the briefest manner.

If it should turn out that there is good ground for Dr Bernard's contention, the whole question of the date will have to be re-considered, and, in part, the history of the baptismal rite will have to be re-written. It will not follow, even then, that the date of the Odes is as late as Dr Bernard suggests. Take, for instance, the single point, which he so forcibly expounds, that the baptized in early ritual wore crowns. A reference to Hermas will show that there was a controversy in the early Church of the West as to whether baptized people should be crowned or not, and it is decided in the negative, because the crown belongs properly to the Martyrs. Thus in Similitude VIII (the great willow) the angel gives slips of willow to be planted by the believers, and scrutinizes the result of the planting. Those who put forth shoots and bring forth fruit are crowned with garlands of palm. Those who put forth shoots without fruit are not crowned ; but all alike have the white raiment and the seal. The meaning of this is that all baptized people are not crowned ; the crown belongs to the martyrs, 'those who have wrestled with the devil and overcome him.' And the suggestion arises that the garlanding of baptized people which Dr Bernard detects in the Eastern rituals was discontinued in the West at a very early period, or never definitely adopted.

Something of the same kind goes on with regard to another form of honour. The Odists speak of becoming one of the men on the right hand, whatever may be covered by that term (cf. Ode 19, 'They who receive in its fulness are the ones on the right hand'). And in the Visions of Hermas we have a scene in which he wishes to sit at the right hand of the Church, but is refused that position, because that place belongs to those who have actually suffered for the name. So Hermas (see the account in Vis. III) has to sit on the left hand. It seems clear that there has been a transfer of some kind of honour from the ordinary believers to the Martyrs. The case is like the previous one.

I should not, therefore, be surprised to find that Bernard's case for a late dating of the Odes will have, even from his own point of view, to be revised. He will certainly be in difficulties over the interpretation of the references to the Sanctuary in the fourth Ode, which are too definite and too Jewish to be got rid of. Perhaps we shall see more clearly the essential Judaism of this Ode, if we examine a little more closely the proof of the unchangeableness of the Sanctuary which the Rabbis deduce from Exod. xv. 17. We shall be able to show that this passage of Exodus was actually in the mind of the writer, and that he is commenting on the following sequence :

εἰσαγαγὼν καταφύτευσον αὐτοὺς εἰς ὄρος κληρονομίας σου.
εἰς ἔτοιμον κατοικητήριόν σου ὃ κατηρτίσω, Κύριε.
ἀγίασμα, Κύριε, ὃ ἡτοίμασαν αἱ χεῖρές σου.
Κύριος βασιλεύων τὸν αἰῶνα καὶ ἐπ' αἰῶνα καὶ ἔτι.

Let us see how Philo would comment on this passage : the treatise De Plantatione § 47 sqq. introduces the text as above : he begins with an explanation in terms of the Stoic philosophy, that the highest life is that which is in accordance with nature and that this is what is meant by being planted in the mountain of the Lord's inheritance. He then reverts from his philosophical speculations to the earlier doctrine that the sanctuary was made, as a reflexion from holy things, an imitation of an archetype ; after which he continues as follows :

'But in order that no one should suppose that the Creator has need of any of the things that are made, he subjoins the following most necessary addition, "Reigning for eternity and beyond eternity," for a king is in need of no one, but his subjects are in everything in need of him !'

It will be seen that this at once explains why the Ode which began with 'No man changeth thy holy place,' should go on with 'Thou hast given us thy fellowship, it was not that thou wast in need of us, but that we are in need of thee.'

Philo and the Odist are both working over the same Rabbinical gnosis on the fifteenth chapter of Exodus. And it is from the Jewish side of Philo's mind and not from the Hellenistic and philosophical, that the parallel is made. We see, then, that it is right to ascribe a Jewish background to the fourth Ode. In fact, the weak point of Bernard's argument lies just there, that the Jewish background of the Odes is too patent to be neglected. The ultimate origin of the coats of light in place of coats of skin must be Jewish : the mere allegorisation of Genesis by Christian hands is insufficient to explain a belief which, as I have shown, can be illustrated from the great Jewish and leading Gnostic teachers, and is perpetuated in the Kabbala and in folk-lore. A Christian allegorisation of Genesis cannot be responsible for all this. At the same time, it is well known that all the early Christian teachers used up Genesis by the way of gnosis and allegory in their teachings of redemption by Christ.

In this way it will be seen that Jewish expositions are necessary to the right understanding of the references to the unchangeable sanctuary, whatever meaning be attached to it: even if a reference to Jerusalem's fortunes be denied or to any other temple, the explanation of the fixity of the sanctuary is to be sought in Jewish writers, as I think I have pointed out.

While I am writing on this point a remarkable confirmation comes to light of the early belief in the pre-existence of the Sanctuary at Jerusalem, and its consequent inviolability, which I hold to underlie the language of the opening verses of the fourth Ode. In an odd quarter, too, the evidence alluded to makes its appearance. The last number of Anthropos (Heft i. 1911) contains an account by the Carmelite father Anastase Marie, of Bagdad, of his recovery of the sacred books of the Yezidees from their hiding place in the mountain of Sinjar, in the Mesopotamian plane between Mosul and Aleppo, about due south from Mardin. These Yezidees, commonly known as devil-worshippers, appear to have been originally devoted to the worship of the Demiurgos as against that of the true God, and they represent the survival of an early Oriental sect, perhaps of Jewish origin. For however much they may disown the Jews in these newly-found documents, and affirm their racial priority to them, it is clear that they believed in the pre-existence of Jerusalem, as the following passage will show:

Yezidi Black-book (Anthropos l.c. p. 37):

XVII. 'The Lord then descended to Jerusalem, and ordered Gabriel to bring a little earth from the four cardinal points of the earth¹. He did so. To this earth he added air, fire and water, and thus created the first man. He gave him a soul, taken from his own almightiness. He ordered Gabriel to put Adam in Paradise, etc.'

¹ Which four points are, according to early Fathers, latent in the four letters of the name of Adam.

Here the pre-existence of Jerusalem to the creation of man is clearly involved. We have an excellent parallel to the doctrine that 'thy holy place thou didst design before thou didst make (other) places¹.'

All of this makes a late date impossible, nor will the position of honour given to the Odes in the Pistis Sophia be explicable, unless the early date of the Odes be conceded, or unless Dr Bernard succeeds in lowering the date of the Pistis Sophia as well as that of the Odes.

I have stated Bernard's case rapidly, with inevitable omission of many of his striking parallels and illustrations, and without trying to break the force of his criticism by drawing attention to its exaggerations. Dr Bernard does not seem to be aware (or was not aware, until I drew his attention to it) that his case had been anticipated. In a series of articles published in Die Reformation Dr Diettrich had anticipated Bernard in detecting references to baptismal customs and had equally anticipated Harnack in the assumption of a Jewish background for the Odes. In the first of the series of articles, published as far back as May 1910, Diettrich held that the later stratum was definitely Christian and the earlier was Essene; but, after the first article was out, he had read Harnack's criticisms and reviewed the whole matter more closely, coming to the conclusion that the later Odist was not an orthodox Christian but that he belonged to a little-known group of Eastern heretics whom Diettrich proposed to identify. It is unfortunate that the separate articles appeared in such an out-of-the-way corner, and that they were too summarily set aside as fantastic by those German critics who read them. Diettrich had the advantage, from his studies on the Nestorian Baptismal Liturgy, of recognizing any parallels that might exist between the Odes and the Ritual, just as Bernard was helped by Conybeare's publication of the Ritual of the Armenians. Moreover, his excellent Syriac scholarship contributes frequently to the right understanding of the meaning of some difficult passages. Whether Bernard and Diettrich have reached the final explanation of the parallels between the Odes and the Eastern Rituals is the matter that has now to be decided. In a recent criticism in the Theol. Tijdschrift Mr Lake has thrown out, independently, the same suggestion as Diettrich and Bernard, that the Odes are not a case of 'Mystic' but of 'Sacramental Mystic'; that is the problem that at present is before us. The remaining question, after this problem is solved, will be the residual Judaism of the Odes. If Bernard is right that the Odes are all Christian, and late as well as Christian, the Jewish background has to be denied or explained away: if Diettrich is right that the Odes are strongly coloured by Essenism, then much of Bernard's argument will be weakened; the 'white robes' in which the singer is assumed to be clad, will be Essene drapery, and the songs before sunrise, which Bernard refers to the Easter baptisms, will be illustrated from the well-known solar adorations of the ascetics of the Jordan valley and the Dead Sea. I reserve my own judgment as to whether such explanations are at all required. They may all be vitiated by over-subtlety. I do not, however, wish to spoil so interesting a debate by summing it up prematurely.

¹ Is it possible that the original language of the Ode was 'thy holy place thou didst design before thou madest man'?

Of the many other tracts and discussions which have hitherto appeared, it must suffice to refer briefly to two or three.

The revision of the Syriac text by Schulthess in Preuschen's Zeitschrift is excellent, and contains some of the best things that have been said linguistically and with reference to the translation. I am pleased to find that, while recognizing the excellence of Flemming's translation (as I myself am forward to do) he points out that my renderings are not always to be rejected for Flemming's. Some of the differences between us were due to unfortunate misprints or transcriptions, which I have done my best to remove in the present edition. With Schulthess should be taken the valuable reviews of my book and of Harnack's by Wellhausen in the Göttingische gelehrte Anzeigen for September 1910. As was to be expected, the criticism of the text is searching and the interpretations proposed are acute. W. will not allow that the Odes are Jewish; even the reference to the unchangeable sanctuary is to be treated as ideal, and the Odes furnish no definite historical date. They know nothing of the Law, but only of the yoke of Love. Their idea of God is as un-Jewish as possible; the initiation by circumcision is replaced by that through the Spirit. The community to which the writer belongs is grounded on inward, rather than outward, fellowship. The transitions in the Odes from the speaking believer to the speaking Christ are illustrated by Bacchic parallels. While the Odes are as little to be classed as Gnostic as the Fourth Gospel itself, they show some Gnostic tendencies, and W. suggests that we might compare the Mandaean hymns, which I have not yet been able to do.

A number of other criticisms lie before me. In the same number of Preuschen's Zeitschrift to which I have referred for Schulthess' discussion of the text of the Odes, there will be found an article by Spitta (one of several which he has written), in which, according to his métier, he dissects the Odes into Jewish and Christian elements, and arrives independently at conclusions not differing very widely from those of Harnack. This is followed by a very interesting article by Gunkel, who discards Harnack's hypothesis in favour of a reference to a heretical Christian sect, to which there was a secret initiation, as betrayed by the language of Ode 8, which Bernard explains by the theory of disciplina arcani. Finally Preuschen himself promises to prove that the Odes are the work of the great Gnostical Mystic Valentinus. It is not difficult to imagine some of the arguments that will be brought forward. It is clear that it will be some time before these investigations are concluded and the final grains of truth gathered from the miscellaneous heap of opinions.

Meanwhile, we ought not to lose sight of the spiritual value of the recovered document, which cannot be seriously affected by the variety of the solutions that may be offered as to the time and place of its production. Dr. A. C. Headlam's article in the Church Quarterly Review, which has just come to my hands, expresses this duty, in a very able and sympathetic discussion.

SUPPLEMENTARY NOTE ON RECENT CRITICISMS.

In the pages that precede I have attempted to give some view of the critical debate that has been in progress with regard to the right interpretation and correct chronology of the Odes. It has been difficult to obtain a correct representation of what is really a moving picture. As I left the matter in the foregoing summary Dr A. C. Headlam's article in the Church Quarterly Review had just appeared and had delighted me by its appreciation of the spiritual value of my book of songs, and by its just handling of many of the points that had to be decided. It also seemed to me to be very judicious in its estimate of what one may call the Baptismal Parallels of Dean Bernard, for while recognising much that was forcible in the criticism, Headlam also suggested that the elevated tone of the writer's experience implied a certain priority over the highly evolved Gnosis to which Bernard drew attention. The baptismal cult was, in fact, reposing upon an earlier stratum, and there was no need to chronologically depress the Odes to the level, say, of the Nestorian Liturgy. As the Odes themselves would say, "That which is earlier shall not be changed by those that are younger than itself." Dr Headlam's actual language is as follows:

"The writer of the Odes is thinking primarily of the new life he is experiencing and not of Baptism. No doubt he had been baptized. No doubt Baptism may have provided language to express his own spiritual experience, but it is not of Baptism that he is thinking. Further, in some cases this reference to Baptism is forced and unreal. It would be far truer to say that language which is here as elsewhere used of the Christian life as a whole was quite naturally introduced into baptismal services and songs and so obtained a specialized use. This particular development of his theory on which Dr Bernard insists is probably more than doubtful."

There has also just reached me an article by S. Reinach in the Revue de l'Histoire des Religions (Annales du Musée Guimet) for 1910, in which there is contained a brilliant survey of the question of the Odes, expressed with the acuteness and insight that one would naturally expect from such a quarter. I have no wish to re-analyse the analysis of M. Reinach, but there is one passage in which he appears to say something like what we just now quoted from Headlam. On p. 15 of the reprinted article which M. Reinach has kindly sent me, after discussing Bernard's hypothesis in detail, he says :

"Dans l'hypothèse où les Odes de Salomon auraient été adoptées par l'Église chrétienne, ou par telle partie judaïsante de cette Église, on comprendrait que cette littérature dont le mérite n'est pas médiocre, eût exercé de l'influence sur le langage métaphorique usité pour le sacrement de baptême."

If I understand this rightly, it runs parallel to Dr Headlam's suggestion, but at the same time runs farther, into the terra incognita of the history of baptismal symbols, and into a branch of literature that corresponds to it, and is itself equally unknown. M. Reinach does not commit himself to any definite position, but makes a half promise that when the translators have come to some closer agreement as to the rendering, and the interpreters are a little nearer to one another and to the meaning, he may return to the subject again. As far as I am concerned, he will be sure of a hearty welcome.

It is clear that M. Reinach is right that we have to go a good way in the acceptance of the Bernard parallels ("les ressemblances si ingénieusement signalées"). Accordingly I pick up the threads of the argument again, and turn once more to the loom.

It was suggested a little way back that the treatment of the dragon with seven heads was too exclusively made from the standpoint of the Baptismal ritual, and that there was in the figure a pre-Christian origin (as shown by the Psalms of Solomon) and perhaps a pagan parallel of great antiquity, for which the closest correspondence would be found in the Lernaean Hydra of Hercules. This, at all events, helped us to explain the destruction of the wicked poison of the dragon, and of his roots. Thus there would be more dragons involved than the Leviathan who would swallow up the Jordan, or the Pharaoh who pursues the Israelites in the Red Sea.

To be quite fair to Bernard's hypothesis, we will show that the virus of the dragon in the midst of the waters was actually exorcised in the waters of baptism, according to early Christian belief, and we shall also suggest that the dragon in the Jordan still exists in the local folk-lore.

For the first of these points it is sufficient to refer to Cyprian Ep. lxviii (Hartel, p. 764), where Cyprian says definitely:

"diaboli nequitiam pertinacem usque ad aquam salutarem ualere, in baptismo autem omne nequitiae suae virus amittere, quod exemplum cernimus in rege Pharaone":

here we have the baptismal parallel to the language of Ode 22 "Thy right hand destroyed his wicked poison." Cyprian continues with the argument that serpents and dragons lose their poison when they pass from dry places into waters:

"nam si scorpii et serpentes qui in sicco praeualent, in aquam praecipitati praeualere possunt sua uenena retinere, possunt et spiritus nequam, qui scorpii et serpentes appellantur et tamen per nos data a Domino potestate calcantur, permanere ultra in hominis corpore, in quo baptizato et sanctificato incipit spiritus sanctus habitare."

Perhaps this contribution to the history of the virus of the dragon may not be unacceptable to Dr Bernard.

The second point, as to the existence of a folk-lore belief in the dragon that lurks in the Jordan, was gathered from my own experience. I was one day, when travelling in the East, planning to rid myself of the discomforts of travel by a bath in the Jordan, the river being at that time in flood. It was certainly a dangerous experiment, even for a good swimmer, and I was deterred from it by the natives who used, amongst other more valid arguments, the statement that there was a whale in the waters into which I proposed to plunge. The whale was, of course, the Biblical tannin (Arabic tinin), and can be equated with serpent or dragon or sea-monster. The Palestinian folk-lore, therefore, retains the belief that there is a dragon in the Jordan. I have no means of deciding whether this belief is older or younger than the belief of the baptismal rituals: but it should certainly be connected with it.

In order to test Bernard's hypothesis more closely, for the value of a hypothesis depends on the number of things it explains, I propose to try whether it will help us to understand the very difficult thirty-eighth Ode.

The opening of this perplexing and discontinuous Ode has perplexity and discontinuity of its own:

"I went up into the light of truth as if into a chariot:
And the truth took me and led me and guided me across pits and gulleys:
And from the rocks and the waves it preserved me:
And it became to me a haven of salvation."

Here we have a chariot flying across pits and ravines, after which we have, what is not usual in chariot riding, the risk of rocks and waves, and finally the chariot arrives—in harbour. This is perplexing. Is it impossible that the chariot can be a ship?

The Syriac word (markebā) which we have translated "chariot" does sometimes mean "ship," as the lexicons will show (v. Payne Smith ad voc.). This rendering is probably due to Arabic influence, for in Arabic markab means inter alia a ship (as a reference to the story of Sindbad the Sailor will show). Perhaps the Odes have been translated into Syriac at a later age than the golden age of Syriac literature, and then the word we are discussing is an Arabism. Let us, then, translate it as ship. We are now on the way to the rocks and waves and haven at the close of the passage. The "pits and ravines" must now be marine and not terrene: they are the gaping and yawning depths of the sea sailed over: so we translate:

"I went up into the light of Truth, as into a ship:
And the Truth took me and led me and guided me over the hollows and yawning depths (of the sea):
From the rocks and the waves it preserved me:
And it became to me a haven of salvation."

That is certainly much more reasonable than going to sea in a chariot. The perplexity and discontinuity of the opening is gone.

But what is the ship? Does he mean the Ark? If so, we are again in contact with a baptismal symbol, for the earliest figure borrowed from the Old Testament to illustrate baptism is the Ark of Noah, in which few, that is eight, souls were saved by water (1 Pet. iii. 20). And Justin carries on the argument by quoting (Dial. 138) a passage which he says comes from Isaiah, to the effect that God says to Jerusalem, "At the flood of Noah I saved thee": and this mystery of human salvation took place at the flood, says Justin. We should, therefore, naturally expect that a person who is writing a book of baptismal hymns would not neglect the typology of the Ark of the Flood.

But here also the difficulty will be felt that the mode of criticism is perilously near the line of over-subtlety and unrestrained imagination. A poet who was working up baptismal symbols would probably not neglect Noah's Ark, but would he express himself so obscurely? and would the "disciplina arcani" cover such obscurity? Perhaps Dr Bernard will tell us when he writes next on the subject.

CORRECTION

P. 121, l. 33, for See Preface to this edition read See above, pp. xxv sq.

INTRODUCTION

The present volume contains an important addition to our knowledge of the literature which immediately anticipates or directly follows the time of Christ. It contains, on the one hand, a hitherto unknown version of the Psalms of Solomon, a collection which has often been studied, from the standpoints both of the higher and lower criticism, and which is, by common consent, referred to the middle of the first century B.C. ; and on the other hand it presents a new collection which I have called, for the sake of distinction, and in harmony with the references in ancient writers, by the name of the Odes of Solomon ; they are here edited and translated from a Syriac MS. in my own possession : and it will probably be no rash prediction to say that their value and antiquity will be at once recognized by students and critics, and that they will be assigned, either wholly or in part, to the first century of the Christian era. The reasons for this belief will appear presently, but, apart altogether from the question of a half-century more or less in the dating of a document, it lies outside controversy that the new Odes are marked by a vigour and exaltation of spiritual life, and a mystical insight, to which we can only find parallels in the most illuminated periods of the history of the Church. They differ, in this respect, by the whole breadth of the firmament, from the extant Psalms of Solomon, with which they are associated in our MS. In these there is little originality, and not much hope : the hard experiences through which Jerusalem passed at the hands of the Romans in the Invasion of Pompey have left a gloom over the sky even in the moments of temporary relief and in the time of exultation over the fall of the great oppressor : what life and light there is may be traced to the severe morality of the traditional Pharisees, and to the Messianic hopes for whose development their times of affliction were the appropriate and necessary nidus ; and so far are they from religious originality in the expression of personal or national experience, that many of the Psalms in question are little more than centos and expansions from the canonical Hebrew Psalter. In the Odes, on the other hand, we have few quotations or adaptations from previous writings, whether Jewish or Christian ; there is little that can be traced to the Old Testament, almost nothing that is to be credited to the Gospels or other branches of the Christian literature. Their radiance is no reflection from the illumination of other days : their inspiration is first-hand and immediate ; it answers very well to the summary which Aristides made of the life of the early Christian Church when he described them as indeed 'a new people with whom something Divine is mingled.' They are thus altogether distinct from the extant Psalms of Solomon which are bound up with them in our MS. Whatever we may have to say of these latter is limited to the interest which arises in the discovery of an Eastern Version of a book whose Greek text is peculiarly difficult to edit, and whose original Hebrew text has altogether disappeared. We shall show that the new Syriac version is itself a translation of the Greek ; we shall point out in what ways, if any, it serves to the betterment of the Greek text, and whether it gives any assistance to the detection of the lost Hebrew text.

Our chief interest, however, will be with the Odes. We shall discuss the quotations and fragments of these which are found in early Christian writers : we shall try to determine the limits of time within which the composition of the Odes must lie, as well as the locality or Church from which they emanate : we shall try to find out also how they became attached to the Psalms, and whether they were originally composed in Greek ; and we shall add a brief commentary and notes to the Odes as translated. In this way we hope to clear up some perplexities in the historical tradition, while leaving, no doubt, a number of unsolved problems to those who shall follow after us.

The MS. from which our texts come is a paper one of quite a late period : its age may be between three and four hundred years : but as it is imperfect both at the beginning and ending, and so has lost both its preface and colophon, we cannot tell how it was described by the person who made the copy, nor can we say anything definite about the date. It has been lying on my shelves for some time, perhaps for as long as two years, along with a heap of leaves from various Syriac MSS. written on paper, which came from the neighbourhood of the Tigris. In spite of its relatively late date, the text is a good one: it is carefully, if somewhat coarsely written, and is furnished with occasional vowels in the Nestorian manner, to which there have been added, probably by a later hand, sundry Greek vowels in the Jacobite manner. As we have said it is incomplete both at the beginning and the end: we can, however, make out pretty clearly what the original MS. was like.

The Syriac
MS.

The book is arranged in quires of ten leaves: of the first quire three leaves are missing: these three leaves contained the first and second Odes and the beginning of the third Ode. The Odes then run continuously till the fourth quire, where they stop on the verso of the fourth leaf: thus the Odes occupy roughly thirty-four leaves. Then the extant Psalms begin: they occupy the remaining six leaves of the fourth quire (say six leaves plus), the fifth quire, and the sixth quire, of which the last leaf is gone, plus whatever was needed to complete the book from a seventh quire: and since the extant portion of the Psalms in our Syriac MS. takes us up to Ps. xvii. 38 there is not much to add from a seventh quire. Suppose we say that the Psalms occupied twenty-six leaves, and that three more leaves are required to complete the text, we have then approximately

Odes = 34 leaves

Psalms = 28 leaves or Psalms and Odes = 62 leaves¹.

Now let us turn to the accounts given us by ancient writers of the extent of the books in question: first of all we know that the 18 Psalms of Solomon once stood in the great Codex Alexandrinus: for in the index to the MS. we find as follows:

Psalms and Odes compared.

Ἀποκάλυψις Ἰωάννου
Κλήμεντος ἐπιστολὴ α' Κλήμεντος ἐπιστολὴ β' οἰκονομίας βιβλία—
Ψαλμοὶ Σολομώντος ιη'.

¹ I have made a slight correction here, following Harnack's estimate of the missing matter.

Here the eighteen Psalms stand just outside the accepted Christian books of the N.T., in the very penumbra of canonicity. Next turn to the Synopsis Sanctae Scripturae which passes under the name of Athanasius: here we find as follows, after the enumeration of the Antilegomena of the Old Testament:

σὺν ἐκείνοις δὲ καὶ ταῦτα ἡρίθμηνται· Μακκαβαϊκὰ βιβλία δ'
 Πτολεμαϊκὰ
 Ψαλμοὶ καὶ ᾠδὴ [1. ᾠδαί]¹ Σολομώντος Σώσαννα.

Here we find the Psalms in the company of the Odes, and forming a part of the disputed writings of the Old Testament: from the supplementary manner in which they are introduced, following an unknown book on Egyptian history, we may perhaps describe their position as the penumbra of uncanonicity, or, rather of deutero-canonicity. The Psalms and Odes are here (say in the sixth century) definitely grouped together.

Next take the Stichometry of Nicephorus, the Patriarch of Constantinople in the beginning of the ninth century: here we find as follows:

1. Three books of Maccabees.
2. The Wisdom of Solomon.
3. Ecclesiasticus.
4. The Psalms and Odes of Solomon, containing 2100 verses (στίχοι βρ').
5. Esther.
6. Judith.
7. Susanna.
8. Tobit.

Here we find our two books again grouped together, and very well placed amongst the Apocrypha of the Old Testament: they do not seem to have lost any dignity between the sixth and ninth centuries; and they have been carefully measured, after the manner of books which are likely to be transcribed and whose contents must therefore be estimated on some recognized scale.

¹ Zahn tries to justify the singular, by reference to the LXX. of 1 K. viii. 53 οὐκ ἰδοὺ αὕτη γέγραπται ἐν βιβλίῳ τῆς ᾠδῆς;

In the same connexion we have a list of books which is found attached to the Quaestiones et Responsiones of Anastasius the Sinaite, and is commonly known as the Catalogue of the Sixty Books. After the sixty canonical books, we have a list of nine deuterocanonical books, and then a list of twenty-five definitely apocryphal writings; amongst these last we find

8. Ἀνάληψις Μωϋσέως.
9. Ψαλμοὶ Σολομῶντος.
10. Ἑλίου ἀποκάλυψις. etc.

Here we cannot be certain whether Psalms means Psalms and Odes, nor is any estimate made of the extent of the composition. The book is not in such good company as it is in the Catalogue of Nicephorus.

Assuming the correctness of the statement that the Odes and Psalms contain 2100 verses, let us now turn to the Greek texts of the eighteen Psalms, and see what the scribes say about their compass. The Vatican MS. (Cod. R of Gebhardt's edition of the Psalms) says that the book contains $\sigma\tau\iota\psi\acute{\nu}$: the Copenhagen MS. (Cod. H) says ἔπη α; and the Paris MS. (Cod. P) says ἔπη τριάκοντα. Here, as Gebhardt says, Cod. P has misread Δ as Λ'; so we have two statements as to the length of the book. One statement says verses, the other verses of Homer, but since that is what verses mean in a stichometric reckoning, there is no discrepancy here except in the numbers. If we imagine that the scribe of Cod. R has misread the sign for 900, Ϡ, as ψ, we have 950 verses for R, which agrees closely with the reckoning in Cod. H. Suppose we say then that the 18 Psalms equal 950 verses. But then we are told by Nicephorus that the Psalms and Odes together make 2100 verses: we have then the ratio of Odes to Psalms 1150 to 950 or 23 to 19. Our estimate of the relative lengths in the Syriac was 34 to 28 or 17 to 14. The former estimate is 1·21 to 1, the latter 1·21 to 1, which is so exact as to make the verification that our new Odes are those of which Nicephorus and the other Canonists speak, so far as statistics can make the demonstration.

It will be observed that Nicephorus has divided the Solomonic literature into two parts, the Canonical books, viz.: Proverbs, Ecclesiastes and Canticles, and the Antilegomena which include the Wisdom of Solomon, perhaps Ecclesiasticus, and the Psalms and Odes of Solomon; that is, there are three canonical books of Solomon, and at least two sub-canonical books. We put it in that way, because there is evidence in some quarters that Ecclesiasticus was also reckoned amongst the books of Solomon. If, however, it is not so reckoned, we have five books of Solomon.

Now let us turn to the Cheltenham Stichometry as published by Mommsen¹.

Here we have the Solomonic writings introduced as follows:

Psalmi David CLI. ver. V.

Salomonis ver. V D.

profetas maiores ver. XVI. CCCLXX. numero IIII.

This is a little perplexing; at first sight it seems as if the Cheltenham list had only one book of Solomon, or several books reckoned as one, and that the total extent of this book or books is 5500 verses. But, as Preuschen² has suggested, the real reckoning for Solomon has got into the next line, and we should read profetas maiores numero IIII.

Salomonis lib. V. ver. VII. CCCXX.

If this restoration be correct, we should have the Cheltenham list in evidence for five books of Solomon, but without any clue to the identification of the five books, or any means of comparison with the stichometry of the Psalms and Odes as given by Nicephorus.

Now, that Preuschen is correct as regards the numbers may be seen from the fact that the figure 7320 agrees with the count which we find in Vulgate MSS.³ For here we have

| | | |
|----------------|-------------|--------|
| Proverbs | 1740 | verses |
| Ecclesiastes | 800 | „ |
| Canticles | 280 | „ |
| Wisdom | 1700 | „ |
| Ecclesiasticus | 2800 | „ |
| Total | 7320 | „ |

¹ Mommsen, Zur lateinischen Stichometrie in Hermes, Bd xxi. pp. 142—156.
Cf. Sanday in Studia Biblica, iii. pp. 217—303.

² Preuschen, Analecta, p. 138 ff.

³ Sanday, l.c. p. 266.

This justifies Preuschen's restoration, and shows that five books of Solomon were reckoned amongst the Canonical and deuterocanonical books, but the Psalms and Odes of Solomon are not amongst the five. For our purposes, therefore, we may dismiss the Cheltenham catalogue. The date of this catalogue is soon after A.D. 359, and it is North African in origin: we may say that at this date the Psalms of Solomon were not recognized in Carthage.

The very same thing follows from the consideration of the list of Canonical Scriptures contained in the Acts of the Council of Carthage in 397, for the entry in the list of Canonical Books,

Salomonis libri quinque can hardly be referred to any other grouping than that which we have already described. The tradition of the Church is steady that there are five books of Solomon. Thus we find in Innocentius, writing at the beginning of the fifth century, ‘prophetarum libri sexdecim, Salomonis libri quinque, Psalterium’,

and in Cassiodorus, writing at the middle of the sixth century², ‘Psalterium librum unum; Salomonis libros quinque

i.e. Proverbia, Sapientiam, Ecclesiasticum, Ecclesiasten, Canticum Canticorum’;

and so in other places. Isidore of Seville, in the early part of the seventh century, divides the five Solomonic writings into groups of three and two respectively, and explains that the two which he detaches (Wisdom and Ecclesiasticus) were really the works of Jesus the son of Sirach, but have been credited to Solomon on the ground of style³:

‘Duo quoque illi egregii et sanctae institutionis libelli, Sapientiam dico et alium qui vocatur Ecclesiasticus;
qui dum dicantur a Jesu filio Sirach editi, tamen propter quandam eloquii similitudinem Salomonis titulo sunt praenotati’.

¹ Ad Exsuperium (Galland, Bibl. vol. viii. pp. 561 ff.).

² De instit. div. litt. c. xiv.

³ Isidore, De ordine libb. S. Script., P.L. lxxxiii. 155 ff.

⁴ For the persistence of the tradition as to the five Solomonic books, see Nestle, Zeitschrift f. alt. Wiss. (1907), 27, 294 ff.

There are no further references that I know of to the Psalms or Odes of Solomon in the lists of canonical books which have come down to us, unless there should be a cryptic allusion to them in the new book of Psalms written for Marcion, which the Muratorian Canon condemns (Saec. ii.—iii.), or the ψαλμοὶ ἰδιωτικοί which the Council of Laodicea (c. 360 A.D.) prohibits from being used in the Church¹. In the latter case we have the opinion of John Zonaras in favour of the identification. But Zonaras in the twelfth century was probably, like ourselves, engaged in speculation. On the other hand, if we might describe ψαλμοὶ ἰδιωτικοί as meaning Psalms of personal experience, the term would exactly suit our collection of Odes.

Having now proved that we have the two books of Solomonian Psalms and Odes in substantially the same compass Lactantius and the Odes. that they were known to the ancient Stichometers, we now pass on to consider what light is thrown on the matter by actual quotations from the book of Odes which are extant. We begin with a passage from Lactantius, which was first noticed by the learned Whiston². In the Divine Institutes (Bk iv. c. 12) we have the following passage:

‘Salomon in ode undevicesima³ ita dicit: Infirmatus est uterus Virginis et accepit foetum et gravata est, et facta est in multa miseratione mater virgo.’

And in the Epitome of the Divine Institutes the passage is introduced by the words Apud Salomonem ita scriptum est. These references to a 19th Ode betray a knowledge of the book from which the quotation was taken: on turning to the 19th Ode in our collection we find the very words quoted by Lactantius, the actual Syriac text being as follows:

¹ Origen's Canon, as contained in Euseb. H. E. vi. 25, has an entry of three Solomonian books, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes and Canticles; with regard to this last he says “ἄσμα ῥημάτων, οὐ γὰρ ὡς παραλαμβάνουσι τινες, ἄσματα ῥημάτων. But this is only an alternative title which Origen condemns; it has no suggestion in it of other Songs or Canticles. [In the Latin Vulgate of Sixtus V (1590) the title was first Canticum and is everywhere in the headings of the pages pasted over as Cantica (Nestle).] Origen is expressly enumerating the twenty-two books of the Hebrew Canon. The alternative title for Canticles is actually found in the Synopsis of Chrysostom, in John of Damascus (De fide orthodoxa iv. 17) and elsewhere.

² Authentic Records, i. 155.

³ So in the Cambridge MS. Gg. 4. 24 and in all MSS. in the apparatus of Brandt's edition; but in the MS. Kk. 4. 17 of the same University the reference is wanting.

နဝါရတန ဂန္ထိဒံ စာ
စာပေ နှစ် တစ်ရာ

• ကုမ္ပဏီ ကုမ္ပဏီ နဝါရတန ကုမ္ပဏီ

The only discordance is in the first word of the passage, which is certainly wrong in the Latin¹, and very difficult to interpret in the Syriac. It is clear, however, that Lactantius is working from a book of Odes arranged in the same order as ours: if he had both Psalms and Odes in his collection, then the Odes preceded the Psalms. And further, since Lactantius quotes in Latin, the book was extant in a Latin translation in his time; for when Lactantius quotes Greek books, as in the case of the Sibylline verses, he quotes in Greek and does not offer a translation. From which it appears that by the beginning of the fourth century the Odes of Solomon must have been translated into Latin².

Ryle and James in their edition of the eighteen Psalms of Solomon drew attention, following Whiston, to this passage of Lactantius, and made the correct inference from it that there must have been more Solomonic matter at one time accessible to Christian scholars than the eighteen Psalms. And since the Ode quoted by Lactantius is undoubtedly Christian, they suggest that the original collection of Psalms of Solomon was fitted with an Appendix of Odes of Solomon, the added matter being approximately equal in length to the original collection, and either Christian or marked by distinctly Christian interpolations. So far they were undoubtedly right, as our MS. incontestably shows. Only our book presents the matter of the Appendix in a different light : here it is the Odes that have the first place and the Psalms that are appended ; and possibly this was also the case with Lactantius' book of Solomon. We shall show, presently, that there is reason to believe that the two books came together in both orders, in different lines of tradition, and that there was current not only a book of Odes and Psalms but also a book of Psalms and Odes¹.

¹ I am inclined to believe it is simply a mistake for 'insinuatus.' Just above Lactantius says, 'Descendens itaque de caelo sanctus ille spiritus dei sanctam virginem cuius utero se insinuare elegit.' Harnack points out, by reference to Rösensch, Italia u. Vulgata p. 371 that the word infirmatus is only used of sick people in the time of Lactantius. The Ode expressly denies sickness to the Virgin. For further suggestions see notes to text and translation.

³ We shall show later that there is some probability that Lactantius has been influenced by our fourth Ode in a passage of Div. Inst. iv. 27.

And now let us pass on to a more interesting question, the existence of extracts from the Odes of Solomon in that curious Gnostic book, preserved in the Coptic (or more exactly, Thebaic) language, and known as the Pistis Sophia. These extracts will be important, not only because they give us, in the form of a version, a good deal of matter that coincides with what we have recovered from the Syriac, but because they present this matter at an earlier time than that of Lactantius, from whom our first quotation was made, and the writer who made these quotations in the latter part of the third century was not only quoting from the Odes of Solomon, but from those Odes as forming a part of his accepted Biblical text. We shall endeavour to make these points clear, and also to show that in the Biblical text from which the writer quoted the Odes of Solomon were preceded by the Psalms of Solomon. If we can establish these points, the antiquity of the Odes will be made out, for it is on the one hand clear that they are traditional companions of the Psalms of Solomon for a considerable length of time and on the other hand it is quite improbable that a book written, say, as late as the end of the second century, should be a part of the accepted Egyptian canon in the latter part of the third century². To get into the canon at all, in any of the great centres of Christian life, a book must have a measure of antiquity on its side: those books which secured such canonicity, Clement's Epistle, or Barnabas' Epistle or the Shepherd of Hermas, obtained their position by the presumption of antiquity, and even then were not easily rooted in the positions that they acquired, as the history of the Canon will show. Let us, then, try to establish the points to which we have referred above: and first with regard to the date of the Pistis Sophia from which the extracts have been made.

The best investigation into the Pistis Sophia is the one

¹ Note that the five apocryphal Psalms published by Wright from the Syriac in Proc. S. Bibl. Arch. for 1887 have nothing to do with our collection.

² [Harnack puts the point equally strongly: Die Oden Salomos p. 9: 'dass irgend eine Provinzialkirche ein nach der Mitte des 2. Jahrhunderts entstandenes Schriftstück in das A.T. aufgenommen hat, ist ganz unwahrscheinlich.'] made by Harnack in Bd vii. of his Texte u. Untersuchungen in 1891. His treatise is divided into five sections: (i) the relation of the Pistis Sophia to the N.T.; (ii) the relation of the Pistis Sophia to the O.T.; (iii) the biblical exegesis of the author; (iv) its general Christian and catholic elements; and (v) a discussion of the character, origin, time and place of production of the work in question. Under this last head Harnack comes to the conclusion that the book is of Egyptian origin, and that it was written in the second half of the third century; that its Gnosticism is Ophite in character, and betrays an origin in a Syrian rather than an Egyptian school; i.e., it is an imported Gnosticism developed on Egyptian soil, and that the actual school from which it emanated can be detected from allusions made by Epiphanius in his treatise on Heresies. He tells us of certain Gnostics who had a Gospel according to Philip, from which he makes a quotation which is quite in the manner of the Pistis Sophia, in which Philip appears as the principal scribe of the discourses; they had also inter alia, books called the Longer and Shorter Questions of Mary: and as a large part of the Pistis Sophia is taken up with questions addressed to Jesus by Mary Magdalene and her women friends, it is natural to regard at least a part of the Pistis Sophia (as we call it) as coinciding with the books spoken of by Epiphanius. But since Epiphanius gives us an extract from the Longer Questions which cannot be identified with the Pistis Sophia (it is in fact, to judge from the extract, an obscene book, though it has many points of contact with the Pistis Sophia, which definitely contradicts its obscenity), we are led to the conclusion that the Pistis Sophia is identical, either wholly or in part, with the Shorter Questions of Mary.

In discussing these Gnostic heretics, Epiphanius tells us that in his early youth he came under their influence in Egypt, and that he was mercifully preserved from entanglement with them. He read their books, understood the sense of them, and then, like the virtuous Joseph from the house of Potiphar, he made his escape from their seductions and denounced the sect to the bishops of the province, and had the heretics expelled from the city in which he had met them. (See Epiphanius, Haer. 26, c. 17, 18.)

We thus succeed in locating in Egypt a group, or rather two related groups of heretics, who may be described as Ophites or as Sethites (Epiphanius uses several names to describe the same groups); to one of these bands of Egyptian heretics the Pistis Sophia may be referred: and we thus get a fairly accurate idea of the place, time and character of the people to whom the book must be referred.

It must not be supposed that all of Harnack's arguments under these heads are valid. For instance on p. 101 he shows that the Gnostic writer uses an Egyptian calendar, for he makes Jesus to be transfigured before His disciples on the 15th of the month Tybi, when the moon is full; this suggests the use of an Egyptian calendar: and then he goes on to say that Egypt is also betrayed by the fact that the book quotes the Gnostic *Odes of Solomon*¹, which are probably of Egyptian origin, and allude to the inundation of the Nile. It is instructive to enquire how the Odes of Solomon came to be suspected of Gnosticism, and of references to Egyptian events.

Amongst the passages quoted by the Coptic writer from the Odes of Solomon there is one which can be identified at once with the sixth Ode in our collection; it describes a great overflow or inundation of the water of life, which has for its first objective point, if not its actual point of departure, the Temple at Jerusalem, and which flows out over all lands, bringing healing and strength.

The Psalm is a very beautiful one, and thoroughly Christian. But because it happens to describe the breaking out of the waters by the Greek word ἀπόρροια, which the Coptic has carefully transliterated, and because this is a favourite word in the Pistis Sophia to describe a Gnostic Emanation, it has been assumed that the Ode was Gnostic and that the illustration of the efflux was borrowed from the rising waters of the Nile. In support of this it may be urged that the waters were fought by a professional class of water-restrainers, and that those who drank of them were, according to the Coptic, a people who lived on the dry sand. It might, therefore, be maintained that this language suited Egypt better than Palestine. It is difficult, however, to see how Jerusalem comes in, if the scenery of the Ode is Egyptian, and it would have been better to express the matter more cautiously, as was done by Ryle and James in their first attempt on the problem of the Odes. Their language was as follows¹: 'Ode iii. (i.e. the third of the quoted Coptic Odes) is also Christian, and the employment of the term ἀπόρροια seems to stamp it as Gnostic. But we cannot see that there is anything unmistakably Gnostic in the doctrine. The imagery employed is that of Ezek. xlvii.², and of our Lord's words concerning the living water: and the thing described appears to be the preaching of the Gospel, which no human effort can avail to hinder, and which brings life and health to a thirsty heathen world. If our theory of these Odes is correct, we have here a hymn of the second century at latest, and one filled with Johannine phraseology and ideas.'

¹ [As soon as Harnack came to the knowledge of the complete collection of Odes, he withdrew the Gnostic epithet: see p. 103 note 2. 'Häretisch-Gnostisches ist auch nicht zu finden. Früher, als man nur fünf kannte und diese in der Beleuchtung der Pistis Sophia, habe ich, wenn auch nicht ohne Bedenken, an Gnostisches gedacht. Allein, wie auch Harris richtig gesehen hat—die vollständige Sammlung zeigt, dass der Verfasser nicht zu den Gnostikern gerechnet werden kann (oder nur so, wie auch Johannes zu ihnen gehört).']

Thus far Ryle and James; and I think we must say that their judgment is a sound one. There is no reason to take ἀπόρροια in a Gnostic sense, nor do the remaining Psalms of our collection encourage the belief in a Gnostic origin: they are as Gnostic as the New Testament, no more and no less. Of course I do not mean that the author of the Pistis Sophia will take this colourless view of ἀπόρροια. His business is to write a book dealing with Gnostic philosophy, and with the Effluxes and Emanations that cause the different strata of the spiritual world: so he will naturally employ the word ἀπόρροια in his own sense, and will build a castle of cloudy words upon it. But we have no reason to follow him in any such architecture nor even to accept his foundation. Consequently we do not regard Harnack's case as made out with regard to the Gnostic character of the Odes of Solomon. If Gnostics could write such beautiful praises of God as we have in our recovered volume, we can only say 'Would God all the Lord's people were Gnostics!' But this they never were nor ever can be in the Valentinian, or Ophite or Sethian sense. With this deduction from the argument,

¹ l.c. p. 160.

² [This should not be so strongly stated: we shall see later that the real parallel is with the 35th chapter of Isaiah.]

Harnack's general inferences from the Ode which we have been discussing are so just that we are tempted to examine his analysis a little more closely.

Let us, in view of the importance of the matters at issue, set down a translation of the sixth Ode as it stands in Syriac, and see what Harnack says by way of interpretation.

The sixth
Ode not Gnostic.

'As the hand moves over the harp, and the strings speak, so speaks in my members the Spirit of the Lord, and I speak by his love. For he destroys everything foreign, and everything that is bitter: thus it was from the beginning and will be to the end, that nothing should be His adversary, and nothing should stand up against Him. The Lord has multiplied the knowledge of Himself, and is zealous that those things should be known, which by His Grace have been given to us¹. And the praise of His name He gave us: our spirits praise His holy Spirit.

'For there went forth a stream and became a river great and broad: it flooded and broke up everything, and it brought [water] to the Temple: and the restrainers of the children of men were not able to restrain it, nor the arts of those whose business it is to restrain waters: for it spread over the face of the whole earth and filled everything; and all the thirsty upon earth were given to drink of it: and thirst was relieved and quenched: for from the Most High was the draught given. Blessed then are the ministers of that draught who are entrusted with that water of His: they have assuaged the dry lips and the will that had fainted they have raised up: and souls that were near departing they have caught back from death; limbs that had fallen they straightened and set up: they gave strength for their coming (?) and light to their eyes: for every one knew them in the Lord and they lived by the water of life for ever. Hallelujah.'

The first thing that we notice when we transcribe the Ode is that the passage in the Pistis Sophia is only an extract; nearly half of the Ode has been neglected. Consequently the word ἀπόρροια which is supposed to be the key to the character of the Psalm, is not in its opening sentence at all, but has been caught up by the Gnostic writer out of the middle of it. It is certainly not the key-word. The Psalmist (or Odist) is telling in very beautiful language the power of the Lord and the scope of His Gospel. There is nothing Gnostic about this living water: there is not, even, anything Ecclesiastic about it, though Harnack wished to interpret it of the water of Baptism¹: one might as well say the fourth chapter of John's Gospel was Gnostic and that when the Lord promised the Samaritan woman the water of life, he wanted to baptize her! I submit that the interpretation of the Ode is affected (i) by regarding it in its entirety, (ii) by regarding it in connexion with the main body of the Odes: and that when this is done, the supposed Gnosticism of the Ode vanishes away. Harnack, in fact, did not positively commit himself on the point, and the greater part of his judgment is valid: thus on page 43 he says:

¹ Cf. 1 Cor. ii. 12.

‘Das Lied ist ohne Zweifel christlichen Ursprungs und damit ist auch die christliche Herkunft der vier übrigen Oden, als zu einer Sammlung gehörig, erwiesen.’ I should not go quite so far, nor quite so fast as that. ‘Ferner weist die Ode auf Ägypten: denn offenbar hat der Verfasser das Bild der grossen Fluth von der Überschwemmung des Nils genommen, der bis über die Häuser steigt, und das durstige Wüstenland tränkt.’ This, as I have said, is extremely doubtful: Harnack tries to make it easier by suggesting that vaós should be corrected to λαός, which would get rid of the Temple at Jerusalem, but it is not a necessary emendation. The Temple is, as we shall see elsewhere, very much in the field of view of the Odist. ‘Endlich scheint mir auch der gnostische Ursprung sehr wahrscheinlich, wenn auch nicht sicher.’ Here Harnack is wisely hesitant.

Again on page 45 Harnack sums up the case for the five Odes incorporated in the Pistis Sophia: (i) that the composer found them in his collection of Old Testament writings; (ii) that they are of Gnostic origin: but he adds at once that the Gnostic character does not stand out clearly, and that the Christian piety of the Ode is powerfully expressed and not discoloured by Gnostic language: a statement which is much strengthened when we read the Ode in its entirety and not merely the part excerpted in the Pistis Sophia.

¹ [Harnack withdrew this interpretation in his complete study of the Odes. See p. 32. ‘An die Taufe ist nicht zu denken!’ Bernard, as we shall see, would retain and emphasise the baptismal allusion.]

Further Harnack admits (p. 46) that if the Odes are Gnostic, their Gnosticism is separated by a deep gulf from that of the Pistis Sophia; which is certainly a just statement: and that, since at the time of the composition of the Pistis Sophia the Odes must have been of considerable antiquity, we may perhaps refer them to the first half of the second century. With this I have little fault to find; only I suggest that they may be 50 years earlier than Harnack's upper limit¹.

In order to understand more clearly what the writer of the Pistis Sophia has been doing with the matter that he has borrowed from the Odes of Solomon, we must try to get a better understanding of the Gnostic book itself. At first sight this is a very repellent task, for the book appears to be mere useless jargon. Harnack evidently thought as much when he first began to study it, for he says:

'In der That kann man kaum etwas Verwirrteres und Ermüdenderes lesen als diese mit den Ausgeburten der gnostischen Phantasie bedeckten Blätter, die bei flüchtigerem Studium zum Zwecke der Verbreitung des systematischen Blödsinns geschrieben zu sein scheinen.'

The impression that the writer is busied with the propagation of systematic imbecility is certainly the result of a cursory or preliminary study; but there is method in the madness and meaning in the aberration, and after a while one begins to pick up threads of continuity and to see what the writer is aiming at. And then the underlying Christianity begins to assert itself through its Gnostic superincumbent weight. Let us see if we can get at the writer's argument.

Jesus is sitting with His disciples, male and female, on the Mount of Olives. It is the twelfth year after the Resurrection; for eleven years Jesus has been teaching His disciples the mysteries of the Kingdom of God : at the end of that time He has ascended to the place of the Prime Mystery (which is the Gnostic expression for the Supreme God); this ascension took place while they were sitting with Him on the Mount of Olives. He was suddenly transfigured before them. A Light-Power, or Glory of the Supreme Being, descends from the twenty-fourth or highest mystery and surrounds Jesus with splendour. The disciples were amazed and terrified at the sight. While they gazed on Him, Jesus ascended into Heaven. After a while Jesus, out of compassion for their fears, for they thought the end of all things was at hand, descended again and appeared to the disciples. He begins to teach them further the secrets of the Kingdom. He explains to them their own miraculous births, the miraculous birth of John the Baptist and His own incarnation. He tells them the story of His ascent through the various heavens and the orders of spiritual beings, ' thrones, dominations, principedoms, virtues, powers.' They proceed to interrogate Him on various points. The company consists of Peter, John, Andrew, Philip, Thomas, Matthew, James, Bartholomew and Simon the Kananite: Mary the Magdalene and Mary the Mother of Jesus, Martha and Salome are all mentioned. The chief place is given to the enquiring women, especially to Mary Magdalene, the lowest place to Simon Peter. Between Mary Magdalene and Peter there is something like a feud. Peter complains that the women talk too much and that the men don't get a chance: and Mary complains that Peter hates our sex and wants to suppress us. Jesus mediates gently between them: advises Mary to make place for the brethren; but when the dispute breaks out again, Jesus definitely takes the side of the women, and Peter is suppressed¹. The meaning of this is that there has been a conflict over the place of women in the ministry of the Church: it is even possible that the hostility of Peter may imply the attitude of the Roman Church towards the prophesying woman of the early centuries. At all events there has been an acute situation created, which has found its reflection in the Gnostic circles in which our book was produced.

¹ The same arguments are repeated by Harnack in his Chronologie der altchrist. Literatur, ii. 193, where he discusses the date of the Pistis Sophia and the related Gnostic writings in the Codex Bezae Cantabrigiae. Here again he dates the Pistis Sophia in the second half of the third century, following the lines of his previous investigation. He remarks again on the use of the Odes of Solomon as an ancient book ranking with the Old Testament, but says they are of Gnostic origin: 'Die fünf Oden Salomos, die das Buch neben den alt-testamentlichen Psalmen zitiert, sind selbst gnostischen Ursprungs, und werden doch wie alte Urkunden behandelt. Wir haben hier also einen Gnostizismus, der über einem älteren aufbaut ist.'

¹ The crisis in the feud between the men and women will be found in P.S. 161. 'Progressa Maria dixit: mi domine, meus vous est νοερος omni tempore, ut progrediar omni vice: dicam solutionem verborum, quae dixit, ἀλλὰ timeo Petrum, quod ἀπειλεί mihi et odit nostrum genus. Haec δε quum locuta esset, dixit ei primum μυστηριον: unumquemque qui impletus fuerit πνευματι luminis, ut progressus proferat solutionem borum, quae dico, nullus κωλυσει.'

Jesus answers a number of enquiries as to the worlds through which He has passed, and then we come to what is the kernel of the first part of the book, the account of the sorrows of Sophia, or, as she is called in the book, Pistis Sophia. Jesus relates how He found Sophia sitting below the thirteenth Aeon. She was mourning over her inability to rise further. Her path was blocked by fearful forms, named προβολαὶ αὐθαδοῦς or Emanations of the Self-willed. They and the rulers of the upper regions prohibit her advance and ascent. One of them had the face of a lion, half flame and half darkness. They chase poor Sophia back into Chaos. But in the midst of her affliction, she sees Jesus passing by, and to Him she addresses a series of Repentances and Hymns. Jesus relates these successively to His disciples. The method of the composition must now be carefully studied: we shall find the key in the lock.

Sophia makes her penitence, let us say, from one of the canonical Psalms. But in using this, she carefully alters every possible term in a Gnostic sense: instead of God, she says Prime Mystery or Light of Truth; instead of my adversaries, she says the Emanations of the Self-willed; by a series of substitutions of this kind she turns the Psalm into a Gnostic Targum, in which you can only detect the original by the expressions which remain unaltered and by the general tenor of the confession. When Jesus has reported to the disciples what Sophia has said, He turns to the disciples and asks, 'Who knows what Sophia said?' It is a game of guessing. Mary Magdalene or some other of the company springs forward, begs permission to speak, and then says, 'This is what your Light-Power (the Light-Power is a substitute for the Divine Name) prophesied through David in the 69th Psalm,' or whatever the portion of Scripture may be that has been selected for disguise. Jesus gives an approbation and a blessing to the successful guesser. Sometimes, to make the matter still clearer, the Gnostic Targum is gone over again in detail with the text and explained sentence by sentence, so that we have the matter treated three times over: viz. the LXX. text, the Gnostic Targum, and the detailed commentary upon the

The sorrows
of Sophia.

Gnostic Targums in the Pistis Sophia.

text with the Targum. It is of the utmost importance that the method of the composition should be clearly grasped : if this is understood, the major part of the Pistis Sophia will become intelligible. To make this quite clear we will transcribe a short passage: here is an extract from one of the first prayers of repentance which Sophia utters¹:

Serva me propter ἀρχοντας, qui oderunt me: nam tu scis afflictionem meam et cruciatum meum, et fractam meam vim, quam abstulerunt a me. Sunt coram te qui plantarunt me in haec mala omnia. Χρῶ iis κατὰ voluntatem tuam. Vis mea prospicit e medio χαους atque e medio tenebrarum. Exspectavi meam συζυγον, ut veniens pugnaret pro me, et haud venit. Atque exspectaveram, ut veniens daret mihi robur, et haud reperi eam. Et quum quaererem lucem, dederunt mihi caliginem: et quum quaererem meam vim, dederunt mihi ὕλην. Nunc igitur, lumen luminum, caliginem et ὕλην duxerunt super me προβολαι αὐθαδους. Sunto iis insidiae et involvunt eas; et retribuas iis, ut σκανδαλιζωσιν, ne veniant in τοπον sui αὐθαδους. Manento in tenebris, ne videant lucem. Contemplantor χαος omni tempore, neve intuentor in altitudinem. Adduc in eas suam vindictam et apprehendito eas tuum iudicium.

Probably without the aid of the Virgin Mary, who in this case is the successful guesser, one could have identified the following verses of the 68th (69th) Psalm:

19. ἔνεκα τῶν ἐχθρῶν μου ῥύσαι με.
20. σὺ γὰρ γινώσκεις τὸν ὀνειδισμόν μου· καὶ τὴν αἰσχύνην μου καὶ τὴν ἐντροπὴν μου. ἐναντίον σου πάντες οἱ θλίβοντές με.
21. ὀνειδισμόν προσεδόκησεν ἡ ψυχὴ μου καὶ ταλαιπωρίαν· καὶ ὑπέμεινα συλλυπούμενον, καὶ οὐχ ὑπῆρξεν, καὶ παρακαλοῦντα καὶ οὐχ εὖρον.
22. καὶ ἔδωκαν εἰς τὸ βρῶμά μου χολήν, καὶ εἰς τὴν δίψαν μου ἐπότισάν με ὄξος.
23. γεννηθήτω ἡ τράπεζα αὐτῶν ἐνώπιον αὐτῶν εἰς παγίδα· καὶ εἰς ἀναπόδοσιν καὶ εἰς σκάνδαλον.
24. σκοτισθήτωσαν οἱ ὀφθαλμοὶ αὐτῶν τοῦ μὴ βλέπειν· καὶ τὸν νῶτον αὐτῶν διὰ παντὸς σύγκαμψον.
25. ἔκχεον ἐπ' αὐτοὺς τὴν ὀργὴν σου. καὶ ὁ θυμὸς τῆς ὀργῆς σου καταλάβοι αὐτούς.

Now if we go over the Penitence of Sophia, with these texts from the Psalms, we shall easily pick up out of the Penitence the disjecta membra Psalmistae.

¹ P. S. ed. Schwartze and Petermann, p. 50 of MS.

I have italicized some of the words, which are either unchanged or almost unchanged. The rest, as I have said, is Gnostic Targum.

The importance of the underlying equivalence of the Targum and text is evident. We are dealing with Biblical matter; Psalm after Psalm is treated in this way, and sometimes short passages of the Gospels are similarly treated. It is not even necessary that the discourse be limited to a single Targum. Sometimes two or three occur of short passages. For us, however, the important thing is that the Odes of Solomon are treated just like the Canonical Psalms, with which they stood in an equal honour in the Bible of the author of the Pistis Sophia. This position of unassailed honour and undoubted confidence marks the antiquity and the prestige of the Odes of Solomon. And as there is no such thing as a Gnostic Bible, these Odes cannot be Gnostic Odes, as was at first surmised.

It is clear, moreover, that in editing the portions of the Odes which occur in the Pistis Sophia we shall have to edit the Targums as well as the texts. We must print the excerpted matter in double form, and in cases where there is a detailed commentary, in triple form. And in this way we can finally make a Coptic apparatus to the Syriac text of the Odes.

One curious result will be arrived at almost immediately.

The second of the passages taken from the Odes of Solomon by the author of the Pistis Sophia is definitely stated to be from the nineteenth Ode.

It does not find any place in our collection. Neither does it agree, except in its opening sentence, with its Targum. On the other hand the Targum does agree with the fifth of the Syriac Odes. It is easy to see what has happened. The Targum was made on the fifth Ode, but when the author came to transcribe the Ode on which he had been commenting, he took out of his Psalter another Ode with a similar opening. This must, then, be one of the missing Odes at the beginning of our book. And since it is numbered 19, it will be the first of our collection, and will have followed directly on the eighteen extant Psalms of Solomon. The Gnostic author had, therefore,

The missing first Ode recovered.

both the Psalms and the Odes in his Bible; and the Psalms stood before the Odes, and not as in our MS. and perhaps in Lactantius' Bible, after the Odes: this is an important discovery, and the study of the text with its Targum has led to the recovery of part of the missing matter at the beginning of our MS.

To make this clear I transcribe the Targum side by side with the Syriac text, in order to show their coincidence:

The Hymn of Sophia as contained in the Gnostic Targum of the Pistis Sophia, 115, 116.

Incepit ὑμνευειν vis εἰλικρινης luminis, quae in σοφια. Ὑμνεουσα δε meae vi luminis, quae est corona cuius capiti, cecinit ὕμνον δεicens, Lumen est corona meo capiti et haud ero absque ea, ut ne priuent me προβολαι αὐθαδους et, quum
motae fuerint ἱλαι omnes, ego δε haud movebor, et quum perierint meae ἱλαι omnes, ut maneant in chao, quas videbunt προβολαι αὐθαδους, ego δε haud peribo, quod lumen est mecum, atque etiam ego ero cum lumine.

The Syriac Odes of Solomon,
Ode 5, ad fin.

For my hope is upon the Lord, and I will not fear: and because the Lord is my salvation, I will not fear: and he is a garland on my head, and I shall not be moved:
Even if everything should be shaken, I stand firm, and if all things visible should perish, I shall not die: because the Lord is with me and I am with Him.

Hallelujah.

Remembering the method of composition of the Targum, there can be no doubt that it is the fifth Ode which is being commented on. It is equally clear that the Ode which is set as the text to the Targum and which is introduced as the 19th Ode of Solomon does not coincide with it.

It runs as follows¹:

Dominus super caput meum sicut corona, neque ero absque eo (ea). Plexerunt mihi coronam veritatis, et ramos in me germinare fecit. Nam non similis est coronae aridae quae non germinat; sed vivis super caput meum, et germinasti super caput meum: fructus tui pleni et perfecti sunt, pleni salute tua.

Clearly this is not the right Psalm, except as regards the opening sentence. Probably the mistake arose in the first instance with the Targumist who copied a line out of a wrong Ode, and thus made the way for copying the whole Ode from a wrong place. The inference is that we have recovered the missing first Ode.

¹ Schmidt's rendering in Texte u. Untersuch. vii. 2. 37.

It is not uncommon in our book of Odes for the openings to be similar or to be repeated. The most striking example will be the short 27th Ode, which appears again almost bodily at the beginning of the 42nd Ode. The coincidences are important, as suggesting the same hand at different parts of the book.

As our object is not so much the interpretation of the Pistis Sophia, as the elucidation of the Syriac Odes, we must collect the matter which is quoted from the Odes in the Pistis Sophia, in order that the texts may be compared. It will be convenient to do this in one place, rather than under the heading of the separate Psalms that may be quoted. For the text of the Odes, we have two translations, that of Schwartz-Petermann, and that which is emended from the original translation (Woide-Münter) by Schmidt, and is given in Harnack's Texte u. Untersuchungen, Bd vii. We may quote these as S.-P. and W.-M.-S. We print these translations side by side. It is to be observed that Schmidt did not revise the Gnostic Targums when correcting the text of the Odes for Harnack, no doubt because their importance was not sufficiently recognized. But he went on to publish a complete translation into German of the Pistis Sophia, as well as of other Gnostic books preserved in Coptic. We shall have to refer to this enlarged and emended translation, but I do not think it necessary to give the German text of the quoted and commented Odes in full¹. [A complete German revision has been made by Schmidt for Harnack's edition, and will be found pp. 14—20.]

ODE 1.

The text is introduced as follows :

Respondens δε Maria, mater Jesu, dixit : Mi domine, tua vis luminis ἐπροφητεύσε de his verbis olim per Salomonem in eius decima nona ode et dixit :

¹ There has also been a French edition by Amélineau, which has been employed by Mead in his English edition of the Pistis Sophia. But as Amélineau is impossible in his paleography, and, I believe, an unsafe guide in other respects, I do not refer to him. I am not engaged upon the Pistis Sophia, except indirectly.

Schmidt's German edition appeared in 1905 under the auspices of the Prussian Academy of Sciences, with the title Koptisch-Gnostische Schriften.

S.-P. p. 116.

Dominus super meum caput
sicut corona, neque ero absque eo.
Plexerunt mihi coronam ἀληθείας.
Et fecit tuos κλαδους germinare in me, quod non tulit coronam aridam, haud germinantem, ἀλλὰ vivis super meum caput et proger-minas super me: tui καρποι pleni sunt et perfecti, pleni sunt tua salute.

W.-M.-S. pp. 37, 38.

Dominus super caput meum
sicut corona, neque ero absque eo (ea). Plexerunt mihi coronam veritatis, et ramos tuos in me germinare fecit. Nam non similis est coronae aridae, quae non germinat, sed vivis super caput meum, et germinasti super caput meum:
fructus tui pleni et perfecti sunt, pleni salute tua.

ODE 5.

The Gnostic Targum on the closing verses of this Ode has been already given: I repeat it for completeness below: the Targum on the rest of the Ode, and the text corresponding to it, are also found in the Pistis Sophia, as indicated. The text is introduced as follows:

Factum δε est, quum Jesus finisset dicere haec verba suis μαθηταις, progressa Salome dixit: mi domine, mea vis ἀναγκάξει me ad dicendam solutionem verborum, quae dixit πιστις σοφία. Tua vis ἐπροφήτευσεν olim per Salomonem dicens:

S.-P. p. 114.

Manifestabo me tibi, domine, quod tu es meus deus. Ne sine me, domine, amplius, quod tu es mea ἐλπίς: dedisti mihi meum ius gratis [P tuum iudicium] et servor a te:
labuntor persequentes me, neve vidento me. Nubes caliginis obtegito eorum oculos atque nebula ἀερος, esto caligo iis, neve vidento diem, ut ne prehendant me: esto impotens eorum consilium, et quae deliberarunt, veniunto in eos: meditati sunt consilium neve esto [P et non factum est] iis. vicerunt [P et vicerunt] eos validi, et quae pararunt collapsa sunt infra eos.
Est mea ἐλπίς in domino, et haud timebo, quod tu es meus deus, meus σωτήρ.

W.-M.-S. p. 37.

Gratias tibi agam, quia tu es deus meus. Ne relinquo me, domine, quia tu es spes mea.
Dedisti mihi iudicium gratis, et liberatus sum a te. Cadant persequentes me, et non videant me.
Nubes fumi tegat oculos eorum et nebula aeris obtenebret eos, neve videant diem, ne prehendant me:
consilium eorum fiat inefficax, et quae consularunt, veniant super eos: meditati sunt consilium, neve succedat illis. Et vicerunt eos potentes¹, et quae praeparaverant malitiose, descenderunt in eos.
Spes mea est in domino, et non timebo, quia tu es deus meus, servator meus.

¹ Schmidt, 'Und sie sind besiegt, obwohl sie mächtig sind.'

ODE 5.

The Gnostic Targum. S.-P. p. 113.

Cecinit ὑμνον et clamavit sursum ad me dicens : ὑμνεύσω sursum ad te, lumen, quod volo venire ad te, ὑμνεύσω tibi, lumen, nam tu es meus servator. Ne sine me in chao, libera me, lumen altitudinis, nam tu es, cui ὑμνεύω. Misisti mihi tuum lumen a te et servasti me. Duxisti me in τοπους superiores chaus. Collabuntur [P delabuntur] igitur in τοπους inferiores chaus προβολαι αὐθαδους, quae persequuntur me, neve veniunto in τοπους superiores ut videant me. Et magna caligo obtegito eas, et venito iis obscura caligo ; neve vidento me in lumine tuae vis, quam misisti mihi ad servandam me : ut ne prehendant iterum me ; et eorum consilium quod excogitarunt ad auferendam meam vim, ne fiat illis, et sicut [P κατα modum, quo] dixerunt mihi, auferre meum lumen mihi, aufer suum quoque loco mei ; et dixerunt auferre meum lumen totum, neque poterant auferre id, quod tua vis luminis est mecum propterea quod consilium ceperunt sine tuo statuto, lumen, propter hoc non potuere auferre lumen meum, quod ἐπιστεύσα lumini, non timebo, et lumen est meus servator, neque timebo.

S.-P. 115, 116.

Ἵμνευουσα δὲ meae vi luminis, quae est corona eius capiti, cecinit ὑμνον δὲ dicens, *Lumen est corona meo capiti, et haud ero absque ea*¹, ut ne privent me προβολαι αὐθαδους et, quum motae fuerint ὕλαι omnes, ego δὲ haud movebor, et quum perierint meae ὕλαι omnes, ut maneant in chao, quas videbunt προβολαι αὐθαδους, ego δὲ haud peribo, quod lumen est mecum, atque etiam ego ero cum lumine.

ODE 6.

The text of this Ode is introduced as follows :

Progressus Petrus dixit : mi domine, de solutione verborum quae dixisti, tua vis luminis ἐπροφητεύσε olim per Salomonem in eius ᾠδαίς.

S.-P. 131.

W.-M.-S. l.c. p. 38.

Egressa ἀπορροια facta est Egressa est emanatio et facta magnum flumen latum : attraxit est magnum flumen dilatatum.
eos omnes, et conversam super Attraxit eos omnes et conversa est

¹ Schmidt, 'und nicht werde ich von ihm weichen.'

templum haud potuerunt capere in clausis et in locis aedificatis, neque potuerunt capere eam τεχναι capientium illos. Duxerunt eam super terram totam, atque prehendit eos omnes. Biberunt versantes super arenam aridam. Eorum sitis soluta est et exstincta, quum dedissent iis potum ab excelso. Μακαριοι sunt διακονοι potus illius, quibus concredita est aqua domini. Converterunt labia arida, sumserunt vigorem animi [P in me] hi, qui erant soluti: prehenderunt (i.e. confirmarunt) ψυχας, eicientes halitum, ut ne morerentur: erexerunt μελη collapsa: dederunt robur suae παρρησιας, atque dederunt lucem suis oculis, quod isti omnes cognovere se in domino, atque servati sunt aqua vitae usque ad aeternum.

super templum¹. Non potuerunt eam capere in locis munitis et aedificatis: neque potuerunt eam capere artes eorum qui interceptiunt (aquis). Duxerunt² eam super omnem terram, et ipsa comprehendit eos omnes. Biberunt qui habitabant in arena arida: sitis eorum soluta est et exstincta, cum daretur illis potus ab Altissimo. Beati sunt diaconi potus illius, quibus credita est aqua domini. Converterunt labia, quae arida erant, accipiebant gaudium cordis, qui soluti erant: comprehenderunt animas, halitum inmittentes, ne morerentur. Restituerunt membra quae ceciderant, dederunt robur parrhesiae eorum, et lucem oculis eorum. Nam omnes illi se cognoverunt in domino et salvati sunt per aquam vitae aeternam³.

ODE 6.

The Gnostic Targum. S.-P. pp. 128—130.

Ego igitur et altera vis, exiens a me, necnon ψυχη quam accepi a Sabaothe αγαθον, venerunt ducentes se invicem, factae sunt απορροια una luminis, existens lumen quam maxime. Vocavi Gabrielem desuper ab αιωσιν atque etiam Michaelen per κελουσιν mei patris, primi μυστηριου introspicientis, dedi eis απορροιαν luminis, feci eos descendere in chaos, ut βοηθωσι πιστει σοφια et uti ferrent vires luminis, quas abstulerunt ab ea προβολαι αυθαδους, ut auferrent eas ab illis et darent πιστει σοφια; et tempore, quo duxerunt απορροιαν luminis desuper in chaos, resplenduit quam maxime in chao toto et dilatata est in eius [P eorum] τοποις omnibus; et quum vidissent magnum lumen απορροιας illius προβολαι αυθαδους, timuerunt super se invicem, atque απορροια illa extraxit iis vires omnes luminis, quas abstulerunt a πιστει σοφια neque ετολμησαν προβολαι αὐθαδους prehendere ἀπορροιαν luminis illius in chao tenebrarum, neque prehenderunt eam τεχνη αὐθαδους dominantis in προβολαις. Et Gabriel et Michael attulerunt ἀπορροιαν luminis in corpus ύλης πιστεως σοφιας et iniecerunt in eam lumina eius omnia, quam [P quae] abstulerunt ab ea, atque accepit lumen totum σωμα ύλης [P + eius]: atque etiam acceperunt lumen eius vires omnes, quae in ea, hae quae acceperunt suum lumen et cessarunt indigere luminis; nam acceperunt suum lumen, quod abstulerunt ab iis, propterea quod dederunt lumen iis a me. Et Michael et Gabriel, qui διηκουησαν mihi, duxerunt ἀπορροιαν luminis in chaos daturam iis μυστηρια luminis: his concredita est ἀπορροια luminis: hanc, quam dedi iis, intuli in chaos. Et Michael et Gabriel non sumserunt quidquam luminis sibi in luminibus πιστεως σοφιας, quae abstulerunt a προβολαις αὐθαδους. Factum igitur est, quum ἀπορροια luminis intulisset in πιστιν σοφιαν suas vires omnes luminis, quas abstulerunt [P abstulit s. abstulerat] a προβολαις αὐθαδους facta est lux tota, atque etiam vires luminis, quae sunt in πιστει σοφια, quas haud abstulerunt προβολαι αὐθαδους, hilares redditae sunt iterum et impletae sunt luminis, et lumina, quae iniecerunt in πιστιν σοφιαν, vivificarunt σωμα eius ύλης, in qua nullum lumen, haec quae peritura est aut haec quae perit, et constituerunt eius vires omnes, quae erant solvendae, et dederunt iis vim luminis¹. Factae sunt iterum, sicut erant ab initio. Atque etiam exaltatae sunt in αἰσθησει luminis, et vires omnes luminis σοφιας cognovere se invicem per ἀπορροιαν luminis, et servatae sunt a lumine ἀπορροιας illius.

¹ Schmidt, 'gegen den Tempel.'

² Schmidt, 'er wurde...geführt.'

³ Schmidt, 'Wasser ewigen Lebens.'

I have indicated some of the points where the Ode crops out: the broad stream of water has been replaced by an ἀπορροια of light, and this makes it difficult to follow the sequence of the Ode, satisfied thirst having been replaced by illumination. But the detailed commentary which follows will make it all clear.

ODE 6.

The detailed Commentary. S.-P. 131—135.

Peter explains the meaning of a prophecy which the vis luminis had formerly made through Solomon.

Audi igitur, mi domine, proferam verbum in παρησια κατα modum quo tua vis ἐπροφητευσε per Salomonem: "ἀπορροια

¹ Schmidt, 'und sie nahmen sich eine Lichtkraft u.s.w.'

egressa facta est magnum flumen latum," quod est ἀπορροια luminis dilatata est in chao, in τοποις omnibus προβολων αὐθαδους; atque verbum iterum, quod tua vis dixit per Salomonem, "attraxit eos omnes, duxit eos super templum," quod est hoc, attraxit vires omnes luminis a προβολαις αὐθαδους quas abstulerunt in [a] πιστει σοφια, et iniecit eas in πιστιν σοφian altera vice; atque verbum rursus, quod tua vis dixit, "haud potuerunt capere eam [loca] clausa neque loca aedificata," quod hoc est: προβολαι αὐθαδους haud potuerunt prehendere ἀπορροian luminis in septis tenebrarum chaus, atque verbum iterum, quod dixit: "duxerunt eam¹ super terram omnem, et implevit res omnes," quod hoc est: quum Gabriel et Michael duxissent eam [P eam super] σωμα πιστεως σοφιας, intulit in eam lumina omnia, quae abstulerunt ab ea προβολαι αὐθαδους atque splenduit [pr. factum est lumen] σωμα eius ὕλης; atque verbum, quod dixit: "biberunt versantes in arena arida," quod est, acceperunt lumen quae sunt omnia in πιστει σοφια quorum lumen abstulerunt (i.e. abstulerant) prius² (i.e. antehac); atque verbum quod dixit "sitis eorum soluta est et exstincta," quod hoc est: eius vires cessarunt indigere luminis, quod abstulerunt [P om. quod abstulerunt], quoniam dederunt (i.e. datum est) iis lumen [P + suum], quod abstulerunt ab iis. Atque iterum κατα modum [P + quoque] quo dixit tua vis, "dederunt iis potum³ ab excelso," quod hoc est: dederunt lumen iis ex ἀπορροια luminis, quae exiit a me, primo μυστηριῳ, et κατα modum, quo dixit tua vis: "μακαριοι sunt διακονοι potus illius," quod est verbum, quod dixisti: Michael et Gabriel, διακονησαντες, duxerunt ἀπορροian luminis in chaos, atque etiam duxerunt eam sursum. Dabunt iis μυστηρια luminis altitudinis, quibus concredita est ἀπορροια luminis, atque etiam κατα modum, quo dixit tua vis: "verterunt labia arida," quod hoc est: Gabriel et Michael haud sumserunt sibi e luminibus πιστεως σοφιας, quae eripuerunt προβολαις αὐθαδους, ἀλλὰ iniecerunt ea in πιστιν σοφian; atque iterum verbum, quod dixit: "acceperunt vigorem⁴ in me qui sunt soluti," quod est hoc: aliae vires omnes πιστεως σοφιας, quas haud abstulerunt προβολαι αὐθαδους, valde praeditae sunt vigore⁵ et impletae lumine a suo socio lumine, quod iniecerunt ea in illas. Et verbum, quod tua vis dixit:

¹ Schmidt, 'er wurde...geführt.'² Schmidt, 'früher genommen war.'³ Schmidt, 'es wurde...gegeben.'⁴ Schmidt, 'Herzensfreude.'⁵ Schmidt, 'sind sehr fröhlich geworden.'

"vivificarunt ψυχας eiicientes halitum, ut ne moverentur," quod hoc est: quum iniecissent lumina in πιστιν σοφian vivificarunt σωμα eius ύλης a quo lumina sua abstulere prius, hoc, quod erat perituum. Atque iterum verbum, quod tua vis dixit: "constituerunt μελη quae collapsa sunt, aut ut ne collaberentur," quod hoc est: quum intulissent in eam eius lumina, constituere (i.e. erexere) eius vires omnes, quae erant dissolvendae; atque etiam κατα modum, quo tua vis luminis dixit: "dederunt robur earum παρησια"; quod hoc est: receperunt iterum illorum lumen atque factae sunt, sicut fuerunt prius: atque etiam verbum, quod dixit "dederunt lumen eorum oculis," quod hoc est: acceperunt αισθησιν in lumine et cognoverunt απορροian luminis, quod pertineat ad altitudinem. Atque etiam verbum, quod dixit: "isti omnes cognoverunt se in domino," quod hoc est: vires omnes πιστεως σοφιας cognovere se invicem per απορροian luminis: atque etiam verbum, quod dixit, "servati sunt aqua vitae usque ad aeternum¹," quod hoc est: servatae sunt per απορροian luminis totius: atque verbum, quod dixit: "attraxit eos omnes απορροια luminis et attraxit eos super templum²," quod est: quum απορροια luminis accepisset lumina omnia πιστεως σοφιας, et quum eripuisset ea a προβολαις αυθαδους, iniecit ea in πιστιν σοφian, atque conversa est, exiit a chao, ³ascendit in perfectionem [P vel "super te"] quod tu es templum³. Haec est solutio verborum omnium, quae dixit tua vis luminis per oden Salomonis. Factum igitur, quum primum μυστηριον audisset haec verba, quae dixit Petrus, locutum est ei: ευγε, μακαριος Petre, haec est solutio verborum quae dixerunt [i.e. dicta sunt].

ODE 22.

This Ode is introduced as follows:

Respondens δε primum μυστηριον dixit: κελευω tibi, Mathaeae, ut proferas solutionem ύμνου, quem dixit πιστις σοφια. Respondens δε Mathaeus dixit: de solutione ύμνου quem dixit πιστις σοφια tua vis luminis επροφητευσεν olim in ωδη Salomonis:

S.-P. pp. 155, 156.

W.-M.-S. p. 39.

Qui deduxit me in locis ex- Is, qui duxit me deorsum e celsis super caelum, et duxit me locis altis, caelestibus, et duxit me

¹ Schmidt, 'Wasser ewigen Lebens.'

² Schmidt, 'riss alles an sich, und zog (?) es über den Tempel.'

³⁻³ Schmidt, 'und kam über Dich, der Du der Tempel bist.'

sursum in locis quae in fundamento inferiori: qui abstulit ibi haec, quae in medio, et docuit me ea, qui dispersit meos inimicos, et meos ἀντιδικούς, qui dedit mihi ἐξουσίαν super vincula ad solvenda ea, qui ἐπάταξε serpentem cum septem capitibus meis manibus. Constituit me super eius radicem, ut evellerem eius σπέρμα atque tu eras mecum, adiuvans me, in omni loco circumdedit me tuum nomen. Dextra tua perdidit venenum huius, qui dicit malum. Tua manus stravit viam tuis πιστοῖς. Redemisti eos e ταφῶν et transtulisti eos e mediis cadaveribus. Sumsisti ossa mortua, induisti iis σῶμα et qui haud movent se, dedisti eis ἐνεργειαν vitae. Via tua facta est perniciiei expers, atque tua facie duxisti [P tua facies. Duxisti] tuum αἰῶνα in perniciem, ut dissolverentur omnes et fierent novi, et uti tuum lumen sit duplicatum [P fundamentum] iis omnibus. Construxisti tuam opulentiam per eos et facti sunt habitaculum sanctum.

in loca, quae in fundamento inferiori. Is, qui abstulit ibi haec, quae in medio sunt, et docuit me ea. Is, qui dispersit inimicos meos et adversarios meos. Is, qui dedit mihi potestatem super vincula ad solvenda ea. Is qui percussit serpentem septem capita habentem manibus meis: constituit me super radicem eius, ut exstinguerem semen eius. Et tu eras mecum, adsistens mihi. Omni in loco circumdedit me nomen tuum. Dextra tua perdidit venenum male loquentis. Manus tua planavit viam fidelibus tuis. Liberasti eos e sepulcris et transtulisti eos e medio cadaverum. Accepisti ossa mortua, induisti iis corpus, et, qui non movent se, dedisti eis ἐνεργειαν vitae. Via tua facta est expers perniciiei, et etiam facies tua: duxisti aeona tuum in perniciem¹ ut dissolverentur omnes et renovarentur. ²Et ut lumen tuum duplicaretur iis omnibus², superstruxisti divitias tuas super eos, effecti sunt habitaculum sanctum³.

ODE 22.

The Gnostic Targum. S.-P. 153—155.

Pergens δε adhuc πιστις σοφία, ὑμνευσε rursum ad me dicens: "ὑμνεύω sursum ad te hoc. Tuo statuto eduxisti me ab αἰῶνι excelso, qui supra caelum, et deduxisti me ad τοπούς inferiores, atque etiam tuo statuto liberasti me e τοπούς inferioribus, et per te abstulisti ὕλην ibi, quae est in meis viribus luminis, et vidi eam, atque tu dispersisti a me προβολὰς αὐθαδούς, quae affligebant me et erant inimici mihi, atque dedisti mihi ἐξουσίαν ut solverer

¹ Schmidt, 'Du hast Deinen Aeon über das Verderben geführt.'

²⁻³ Schmidt, 'und Dein Licht ihnen allen Fundament sei.'

³ Schmidt, 'Du hast Deinen Reichtum auf sie gebaut.'

e vinculis προβολων Adamae, et ἐπαταξας serpentem basiliscum cum septem capitibus. Proiecisti [P eiecisti] eum meis manibus, et constituisti me super eius ὕλην. Perdidisti eam, ut ne σπέρμα suum surgeret inde ad hoc tempore, atque tu es qui eras mecum, dans mihi vim in his omnibus, et tuum lumen circumdedit me in τοποις omnibus, et per te reddidisti προβολας omnes αὐθαδους impotentes, quod abstulisti vim sui luminis ab eis et direxisti meam viam ad educendam me ex chao, et transtulisti me e tenebris ὕλικαις et abstulisti meas vires omnes ab iis, 'quarum lumen abstulere'. Iniecisti in eas lumen purum, et meis μελεσιν omnibus, quibus nullum lumen, dedisti lumen purum ex lumine altitudinis, et direxisti viam iis, et lumen tuae faciei factum mihi est vita, perniciē vacua. Duxisti me sursum super chaos, locum (τοπον) chaus et perniciē, ut dissolverentur omnes ὕλαι, quae in eo, quae sunt in τοπῳ illo, et uti fiant novae meae vires omnes tuo lumine, et ut tuum lumen sit in iis omnibus. Posuisti lumen tuae ἀπορροιας in me. Facta sum lumen purgatum." Hic iterum est secundus ὕμνος quem dixit πιστις σοφια.

ODE 22.

The detailed Commentary.

Matthew then goes on to show in detail the parallelism between the Ode of Solomon and the hymn of the Pistis Sophia.

S.-P. pp. 156—160.

Haec, igitur, mi domine, est solutio ὕμνου quem dixit πιστις σοφια. Audi igitur, dicam eam ingenue. Verbum quod tua vis dixit per Salomonem: "qui deduxit me e locis excelsis quae super caelum, atque etiam duxisti me sursum in locis, quae in fundamento inferiori," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: ὕμνευω sursum ad te hoc. Tuo statuto duxisti me ex hoc αἰῶνι excelso, qui super caelum, et duxisti me in τοπους inferiores, atque etiam servasti me tuo statuto, duxisti me sursum in τοποις inferioribus. Et verbum, quod tua vis dixit per Salomonem: "qui abstulit ibi haec, quae in medio, et docuit me ea," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: atque etiam per te abstulisti¹ ὕλην quae in media mea vi, et vidi eam: atque etiam verbum, quod tua vis dixit per Salomonem: "qui dispersit meos inimicos et meos ἀντιδικους," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: et tu es, qui dispersisti a me προβολας omnes αὐθαδους quae affligebant me, et quae erant inimici mihi; et verbum, quod tua vis dixit: "qui dedit mihi suam σοφian super vincula ad solvenda ea": ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια; [+ et P] dedit mihi suam σοφian ut solverer e vinculis προβολων illarum; et verbum, quod tua vis dixit: "qui ἐπάταξε serpentem cum septem capitibus meis manibus et constituit me super eius radicem, ut evellerem eius σπερμα," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: et ἐπάταξας serpentem cum septem capitibus meis manibus et constituisti me super eius ὕλην, perdidisti eum, ut ne eius σπερμα surgeret inde ab hac hora; et verbum, quod tua vis dixit: "et tu mecum eras, adiuvabas me," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: et tu eras mecum, dans vim mihi in his omnibus; et verbum quod tua vis dixit: "et tuum nomen circumdedit me in omni loco," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: et tuum lumen circumdedit me in eorum locis omnibus; et verbum, quod tua vis dixit: "et tua dextera perdidit venenum huius qui dicit malum," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια; et per te factae sunt impotentes προβολαι αὐθαδους, quod abstulisti lumen vis suae ab iis; et verbum, quod tua vis dixit: "tua manus stravit viam tuis πιστοις," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια; direxisti meam viam ad educendam me e chao, quod ἐπίστευσα tibi; et verbum, quod tua vis dixit: "redemisti eos e ταφοις et transtulisti eos e mediis cadaveribus," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: et redemisti me e chao et transtulisti me e tenebris ὕλικαις quae ipsae sunt προβολαι caliginis, quae in chao, e quibus suum lumen abstulisti; et verbum, quod tua vis dixit: "sumsisti ossa mortua, induisti eis σωμα, et hi, qui non movent se, dedisti iis ἐνεργειαν vitae," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: et abstulisti meas vires omnes, in quibus nullum lumen, et [om. et P] indidisti eis lumen purum, et meis μελεσων omnibus, in quibus nullum lumen movetur, dedisti eis lumen vitae tua altitudine; et verbum quod tua vis dixit: "tua via facta est perniciē vacua et tua facies," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: et direxisti viam [+tuam P] mihi, et lumen tuae faciei facta¹ mihi est vita, perniciē vacua; et verbum, quod tua vis dixit:

¹⁻¹ Schmidt, 'deren Licht genommen war.'

² Schmidt, 'hast....reinigen lassen.'

¹ factum P.

"duxisti tuum αἶωνα in perniciem, ut dissolverentur ut fierent novi omnes," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: 'duxisti me, tuam vim, in chaos et in perniciem', ut dissolverentur ὅλαι omnes, quae sunt [+ sursum P] in τοπω illo, et ut fierent novae meae vires omnes lumine; et verbum, quod tua vis dixit, "et tuum lumen duplicatum [P fundamentum] est² iis omnibus": ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: et tuum lumen est in iis omnibus: et verbum quod tua vis luminis dixit per Salomonem: "posuisti³ tuam opulentiam⁴ in eo, et factus est habitaculum sanctum": ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: firmasti lumen tuae ἀπορροιας super me, et facta sum lumen purum. Haec igitur, domine mi, est solutio ὕμνου, quem dixit πιστις σοφια.

ODE 25.

The text of this Ode is introduced as follows:

Respondens δὲ primum μυστηριον dixit Thomae: κελευω tibi, ut proferas solutionem ὕμνου, quem ὕμνευσεν sursum ad me πιστις σοφια. Respondens δὲ Thomas dixit: mī domine, de ὕμνω quem dixit πιστις quod liberata est a chao: tua vis luminis ἐπροφητεύσεν olim per Salomonem, filium Davidis, in eius ᾠδαίς:

S.-P. p. 150.

Servatus sum e vinculis. Fugi ad te, domine, quod fuisti mihi dextra servans me, atque servans me et adjuvans me, ἐκώλυσας pugnantes contra me, neque apparuerunt, quod tua facies mecum erat servans me tua χαριτι. Affecta sum ignominia coram multitudine, atque proiecerunt me. Fui sicut plumbum coram iis. Facta mihi est vis a te adjuvans me, quod posuisti lucernas ad dexteram mihi et ad sinistram mihi, ut ne quidquam circa me esset luminis expers. Ἐσκεπασας me sub umbra tuae misericordiae et fui super vestes

W.-M.-S. l.c. p. 39.

Liberatus sum e vinculis. Fugi ad te, domine: quia fuisti mihi ad dextram, salvans me. [Et salvans me] et adjuvans me, prohibuisti adversarios meos, neque se manifestaverunt, quod tua facies mecum est, liberans me gratia tua. Accepi contumeliam coram multitudine, et eiecerunt me: fui sicut plumbum coram iis. Fuit mihi robur per te adjuvans me. Quia posuisti lucernas ad dextram meam et ad sinistram meam, ne neutra parte luminis expers essem. Texisti me sub umbra gratiae tuae et 'superavi vestimenta pellicea'. Dextra tua

¹⁻¹ Schmidt, 'Du hast mich, Deine Kraft, über das Chaos hinaufgeführt und über das Verderben.'

² Schmidt, 'ist ihnen allen Fundament (geworden).'

³⁻³ Schmidt, 'Deinen Reichtum.'

⁴⁻⁴ Schmidt, 'ich wurde überhoben den aus Fellen gemachten Kleidern.'

pelliceas. Tua dextra exaltavit me et abstulisti infirmitatem a me: Factus sum validus tua veritate, purgatus tua δικαιοσύνη. Remoti sunt a me pugnantes contra me, et iustificatus sum tua χρηστοτητι, nam tua quies est ad aeternum aeternitatis.

exaltavit me, et abstulisti infirmitatem porro a me. Fui corroboratus veritate tua, purgatus iustitia tua. Procul remoti sunt a me adversarii mei, et iustificatus sum iustitia tua, quia requies tua est in saecula saeculorum.

ODE 25.

The Gnostic Targum. (S.-P. 148, 149.)

Pergens δε iterum in sermone primum μυστηριον dixit μαθηταις: Factum est, quum duxissem πιστιν σοφian sursum in chao, exclamavit iterum dicens: "Servata sum in chao, et soluta e vinculis caliginis. Veni ad te, lumen, quod fuisti lumen ex omni parte mihi servans me, et adiuvens me. Et προβολας αυθαδους quae pugnans contra me, εκωλυσας tuo lumine, et haud potuerunt adpropinquare mihi, quod erat tuum lumen mecum, et servabat me tua [P me in tua] απορροια luminis, quoniam γαρ προβολαι [P + αυθαδους] affligentes me abstulerunt meam vim a me, iniecerunt me in orcos (chaos Plur.) nullum lumen habentem. Fui sicut υλη gravis coram iis. Atque post haec vis απορροιας venit mihi a te servans me. Splenduit ad sinistram mihi et ad dextram mihi; et circumdabat me, ex omni parte mihi erat, ut ne ullum μέρος quo fui, essem [P esset] sine lumine, et obtexit [P obtexisti] me lumine tuae απορροιας et purgasti in me omnes meas υλας malas, et fui super meas υλας omnes propter tuum lumen 'et tuam απορροιαν luminis. Ista exaltavit me' et abstulit me προβολαις αυθαδους θλιβουσais me. Atque fui confisa tuo lumini, nec non lumen purum [P lumini puro] tuae απορροιας, et remotae sunt a me προβολαι αυθαδους quae affligebant me, et facta sum lux tua magna vi, quod tu servas omni tempore.

ODE 25.

The detailed Commentary.

Thomas explains that he will interpret openly the words of the Pistis Sophia, and proceeds to speak εν παρηρησία, as follows:

¹⁻¹ Schmidt, 'und Dein Lichtabfluss ist es, der mich erhöht...hat.'

S.-P. 150—153.

Verbum igitur, quod tua vis luminis dixit per Salomonem: "Servatus sum e vinculis. Fugi ad te, domine," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: soluta sum e vinculis caliginis, veni ad te, domine [P lux]: et verbum, quod dixit tua vis: "Fuisti mihi dextra servans me et adiuvens me"; ipsum iterum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: factus es lumen ex omni parte mihi et adiuvens me: et verbum quod tua vis luminis dixit "ἐκώλυσας pugnantes contra me, et haud apparuerunt" ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: et προβολας αὐθαδους quae pugnant contra me, ἐκώλυσας tuo lumine, et haud potuerunt adpropinquare mihi: et verbum, quod tua vis dixit, "quod tua facies mecum erat servans me tua χαριτι," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: quod tuum lumen erat mecum servans me tua ἀπορροια luminis: et verbum quod tua vis dixit, "*1contemnor eorum multitudine et proiecerunt me*1," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια; affixerunt me προβολαι αὐθαδους et abstulerunt meam vim a me, et contempta sum coram iis et proiecerunt me in chao expertem luminis. Et verbum, quod tua vis dixit: "fui sicut plumbum coram iis," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: quum abstulissent mea lumina a me, facta sum sicut ύλη gravis coram iis. Et verbum, [+ rursus P] quod tua vis dixit, "et facta mihi est vis a te adiuvens me," ipsum [+ quoque P] est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: et post haec vis luminis venit mihi a te servans me: et verbum quod tua vis dixit: "posuisti lucernas ad dextram mihi et ad sinistram mihi, ut ne quidquam circa me esset luminis expers," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια, Tua vis luminis [P + splenduit] ad dextram mihi et ad sinistram mihi et circumdans me ab omni parte, ut ne quidquam circa me esset luminis expers: et verbum quod tua vis dixit: "ἐσκεπασας me umbra tuae misericordiae," ipsum iterum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: et obtexisti me lumine tuae ἀπορροιας; et verbum quod tua vis dixit: "*2fui super vestes pelliceas*2," ipsum iterum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια: et eiecerunt a me meas ύλας omnes malas, et *3elevavi eas*3 tua lumine; et verbum, quod tua vis dixit per Salomonem: "tua dextra exaltavit me et abstulit infirmitatem

1-1 Schmidt, 'ich wurde verachtet im Angesichte vieler und hinausgestossen.'

2-2 Schmidt, 'ich wurde überhoben den aus Fellen gemachten Kleidern.'

3-3 Schmidt, 'ich erhob mich über sie.'

a me," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια : et tua ἀπορροια luminis haec est, quae exaltavit me tuo lumine, et abstulit a me προβολας αὐθαδους θλιβουσας me ; et verbum, quod tua vis dixit : "factus sum validus tua veritate et purgatus tua δικαιοσυνη," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια : facta sum valida tuo lumine et sum lumen purgatum tua ἀπορροια : et verbum, quod tua vis dixit : "remoti sunt a me pugnantes mecum," ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια : remotae sunt a me προβολαι αὐθαδους, hae quae affligebant me, et verbum quod tua vis luminis dixit per Salomonem : "et iustificatus sum tua χρηστοτητι, quod tua quies est ad aeternum aeternitatis" : ipsum est verbum, quod dixit πιστις σοφια : servata sum tua χρηστοτητι quod tu servas unumquemque. Haec igitur, o mi domine, est solutio τοτα μετανοιας quam dixit πιστις σοφια quum servata esset in chao et soluta est e vinculis caliginis.

These, then, are the extracts and comments on the Odes of Solomon which are contained in the Pistis Sophia.

We will now examine what light they throw on the original form of the text, and we will also enquire as to the language in which the book was originally circulated. We begin by comparing the Odes quoted in the Coptic book with their Syriac equivalents.

The presumption is that the Coptic is a direct translation from the Greek : the number of Greek words that are embedded in the Coptic at once suggests this, and it is natural to carry back these Greek words into the text from which the Coptic is derived.

A little caution is necessary, for it will be remembered that Greek words are often used in the Coptic to redeem the language from its linguistic poverty, and it will also be found that the Coptic does not always directly transliterate a Greek word : it sometimes translates by another and more familiar Greek word. But with some reserve of this kind, the Greek elements in the text are sufficient evidence that the book was taken from the Greek to the Egyptian language ; and we know that the Psalms and Odes had a wide circulation amongst Greek-speaking peoples. The Pistis Sophia, in which the Odes are embedded, dates from the third century, and the author of the Pistis had, as we have shown, the Odes bound up with his Canonical Psalter ; at the time intimated there was no Coptic

Original language of the Odes.

[Thebaic] Bible from which the extracts could have been made ; so we may be sure the Odes were taken from a Greek Bible, and, with almost equal certainty, that the Pistis Sophia itself was a Greek book. Detailed examination leads to the same result.

Suppose we examine the parts of the sixth Ode which we have preserved both in Coptic and in Syriac : this is the Ode in which Harnack thought we could detect both Gnostic and Egyptian elements, the supposed Gnostic feature being the use of the word ἀπόρροια, and the supposed Egyptian feature being a sudden inundation, which sweeps over a whole country and defies professional attempts to regulate it. Near the end of the Ode is a beautiful passage describing the way in which the ministers of the water of life have assuaged the thirst of the world : they have given ease to dry lips, strength to paralysed wills and weak limbs. Then the writer adds “Members which had fallen they made straight and set up. They gave strength for their coming and light to their eyes.”

There is something awkward about this word ‘coming’ : and when we turn to the Coptic we find “Restituerunt membra quae ceciderant. Dederunt robur παρρησιᾶ eorum et lucem oculis eorum.”

This is almost as unintelligible as the former ; what does he mean by ‘strength for freedom of speech’? However we have found out that the Greek behind the Coptic read τῇ παρρησίᾳ αὐτῶν ; and it is not difficult to infer that the Syriac has rendered a Greek text τῇ παρουσίᾳ αὐτῶν. Now which of these is correct? Neither of them makes good sense. But if we write τῇ παρέσει αὐτῶν or τῇ παραλύσει αὐτῶν “they gave them strength for their paralysis,”

we can make the passage intelligible, and explain both the Coptic and Syriac readings¹.

¹ The key to the passage is Is. xxxv. 3=Heb. xii. 12 ; ισχύσατε...γόνατα παραλελυμένα (Is.), and cf. τὰ παραλελυμένα γόνατα ἀνορθώσατε (Heb.).

For a similar confusion between παρουσία and παρρησία we may compare the words of Valentinus, quoted in Clem. Alex. Strom. ii. 22 : εἰς δὲ ἐστὶν ἀγαθὸς οὐ παρρησία ἢ διὰ τοῦ υἱοῦ φανέρωσις, where Grabe, Spic. 2 conjectures παρουσία.

This suggests that the Syriac as well as the Coptic has a Greek text behind it. We shall examine this point more in detail presently.

We are not limited to the occurrence of the single Greek word παρρησία (whether it be the right word or only a corruption); nor to the favourite word ἀπόρροια which the Pistis Sophia has caught at, on account of its Gnostic associations.

The Syriac tells us that the flood could not be restrained by the professional restrainers, nor by the arts of those who make the management of floods their business. The Coptic text tells us haud potuerunt capere in clausis et in locis aedificatis, neque potuerunt capere eam τεχναι capientium illos.

Here the Syriac is somewhat at variance from the Coptic, but it is clear that 'capere' stands for the Syriac 'restrain,' and that τεχναι is the Greek word for the Syriac 'arts of the restrainers.'

The Gnostic Targum has also worked in τεχναι in the following form:

neque ἐτολμησαν.....prehendere ἀπορροϊαν.....neque prehenderunt eam τεχνη.....

Here 'prehendo' is the same as 'capio,' and stands for the Syriac 'restrain.' Τεχναι seems to come from the original Greek. I should have said that ἐτολμησαν came from the same source, if it were not that the text and the comment have 'potuerunt' in harmony with the Syriac.

Another bit of the original Greek is picked up in the clause which answers to the Syriac,

'Blessed are the ministers of that draught.'

Here the Coptic gives us, Μακαριοι sunt διακονοι potus illius, and the Comment, as well as the Targum, explains that the ministers are Michael and Gabriel, οἱ διακονήσαντες. So that we can restore the words Μακάριοι εἰσιν οἱ διάκονοι οὗτοι to the Greek. And so in other cases.

But this raises the question whether the Greek is the last stage. Were the Odes written in Greek? Or may we say, as for the eighteen Psalms, that they were translated into Greek from an original Hebrew? The possibility must at all events be kept in mind. But we can only advance by slow stages. The next step should be to confirm the suggestion that the Syriac has been translated from a Greek base by discussing the case for the eighteen Psalms.

Here we should naturally expect dependence on the Greek.

The Syriac of the 18 Psalms depends on the Greek.

For it is now clearly made out, as Ryle and James have shown, that the original Hebrew of these Psalms was done into Greek at a very early period. For the Greek version of the 11th Psalm is used by the author of the book of Baruch in his fifth chapter, and this chapter is quoted at length by Irenaeus. So it would be unreasonable to put the Greek of the eighteen Psalms later than the middle of the first century, when it is employed by Baruch writing, probably, not later than the end of the first century.

So the Greek of these Psalms is available for translation into Syriac at a very early date; we have to determine from the evidence before us whether it was so translated from the Greek. Let us see whether the Syriac confirms any conjectures either in Greek or in Hebrew that the editors have thought necessary to the understanding or betterment of the text. It does not confirm Hilgenfeld's brilliant suggestion of ὀρίων for ὄρεων in Ps. ii. 30: the Syriac has 'mountains' and agrees with the Greek tradition. In Ps. ii. 20 Gebhardt's emendation of κατέσπασεν to κατεσπάσθη is confirmed by the Syriac ܡܫܬܠܚܐ, which is rather a free translation. In Ps. v. 4 Gebhardt conjectures

οὐ γὰρ λήγεται [τις] σκῦλα παρὰ ἀνδρὸς δυνατοῦ and the word added is confirmed by the Syriac, which adds ܟܕܝܢ (a son of man, a man): but then the Copenhagen MS. has σκῦλα ἄνθρωπος, and the Syriac might just as well be a translation of this.

In Ps. viii. 3 Hilgenfeld's emendation καὶ εἶπα [ἐν] τῇ καρδίᾳ μου is not confirmed by the Syriac, which follows the MSS. in omitting ἐν.

In Ps. x. 1 Fritzsche made a striking emendation to the first couplet,

Μακάριος ἀνὴρ οὗ ὁ κύριος ἐμνήσθη ἐν ἐλεγχμῷ, καὶ ἐκυκλώθη ἀπὸ ὁδοῦ πονηρᾶς ἐν μάστιγι

by reading ἐκωλύθη for ἐκυκλώθη.

The Syriac confirms this conjecture, which Gebhardt has discarded in favour of a misunderstood Hebrew text. If this is not a successful emendation on the part of a scribe, the Syriac at this point takes precedence of the existing Greek texts: but that does not mean that it is not dependent on a Greek text.

In Ps. xvi. 9 the Greek text

τὰ ἔργα τῶν χειρῶν μου κατεύθυνον ἐν τόπῳ σου is altered in the Syriac to ἐνώπιόν σου which seems a better, as well as an easier reading.

In Ps. xvii. 16 [14] where Gebhardt has emended

[καθὼς καὶ τὰ ἔθνη ἐν ταῖς πόλεσι] τοῦ σθένους αὐτῶν for τοὺς θεοὺς αὐτῶν of Cod. R the Syriac reads 'to their gods' with the rest of the Greek MSS.

In Ps. xvii. 23 [21] Gebhardt emends εἰς τὸν καιρὸν ὃν εἶλον σύ, ὁ θεός for the current Greek εἰς τὸν καιρὸν ὃν εἶδες [ἶδες, οἶδες, οἶδας].

The Syriac has ܕܡܠܟܐ, which answers most nearly to εἶδες.

This is one of the places where Felix Perles found a trace of the original Hebrew, which had been corrupted from תָּרַךְ to תָּרַךְ, i.e. from 'thou hast appointed' to 'thou hast known.' Most of the proposed emendations seem to me to be more ingenious than necessary. The Syriac, at all events, does not endorse them.

In Ps. xvii. 32 [30] the Syriac renders ἐν ἐπισήμῳ by ܕܡܠܟܐ, which throws light on the same expression in Ps. ii. 6, where the Syriac seems to have left the words untranslated, but there Felix Perles conjectured that they stood for an original Hebrew בְּגִלָּה. The Syriac seems, while itself following the Greek in Ps. xvii. 32, to support this restoration of Perles for the Hebrew in Ps. ii. 6.

In Ps. xvii. 37 [33] Gebhardt has added conjecturally the word λαοῖς in καὶ πολλοῖς [λαοῖς] οὐ συνάξει ἐλπίδας εἰς ἡμέραν πολέμου.

The Syriac has 'and he shall not hope in a multitude for the day of war,' and so does not favour the emendation. So far, then, as these passages go, there is not much ground for taking the Syriac outside the grouping of the Greek MSS., and erecting it into a separate authority. There are one or two passages to be considered in which the Syriac gives us either an independent conjecture, or something nearer to the original text.

In Ps. i. 6 the difficult

καὶ οὐκ ἤνεγκαν

Singular readings of the Syriac.

of the MSS. is replaced by ܐܡܪ ܕܠܐ, and the sentence connected with the previous εἶπαν by omission of the intervening matter, so as to read

‘And they spake what they did not understand’; whether this was arrived at in the first instance by substituting ἔγνωκαν for ἤνεγκαν is not quite clear: but the whole treatment of the text is too drastic to allow us to believe that the Syriac is the original. Another suggestion is that the Syriac translator read καὶ οὐκ ἔγνω, and took it for a 3rd person plural instead of a 1st person singular.

In Ps. ii. 29 [25] the difficult τοῦ εἰπεῖν τὴν ὑπερηφανίαν τοῦ δράκοντος appears in the Syriac as ܐܣܝܪܐ which makes excellent sense, from whatever quarter it is derived. Perles conjectures that the original Greek was ταπεινοῦν: it is just conceivable that the Syriac might stand for a translation of this.

In Ps. ii. 41 [37] for εὐλογητὸς κύριος εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα ἐνώπιον δούλων αὐτοῦ

the Syriac has the equivalent of ὑπὸ τῶν δούλων αὐτοῦ, and a glance at the previous line of the Greek will show that ἐνώπιον has been accidentally borrowed from there, so that we may replace ὑπὸ τῶν on the faith of the Syriac, which at this point establishes a better Greek text.

In Ps. iv. 25 [21, 22] for καὶ παρώργισαν τὸν θεόν· καὶ παρώξυναν ἐξᾶραι αὐτοὺς ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς

the Syriac reads

καὶ παρώργισαν [ܐܘܪܝܩ] τὸν θεόν· καὶ παρωργίσθη [ܕܡܡܕܝܩܐ] ἐξᾶραι κτέ.

Here the translator seems to have taken a slight liberty with his text, by translating the same word in two different ways, unless we prefer the explanation that παρωξύνθη stood in his copy, instead of παρωργίσθη.

In Ps. viii. 23 [20] the clause

ἀπώλεσεν ἄρχοντας αὐτῶν καὶ πάντα σοφὸν ἐν βουλῇ

has for its last words

ܠܥܠܡܐ ܕܥܠܡܐ ܕܥܠܡܐ

‘because he is wise in counsel’;

it is, however, only a blunder in the Syriac text itself: read ܕܥܠܡܐ for ܕܥܠܡܐ and you have the equivalent of the Greek.

The same thing has happened in Ps. x. 9 [8], where the Syriac reads

‘The salvation of the Lord is upon the house of Israel for an eternal Kingdom’:

a very slight change restores ܕܥܠܡܐ for ܕܥܠܡܐ and gives us the Greek σωφροσύνην as in Codd. H (R). This must, in its turn, be corrected to εὐφροσύνην with Codd. J L C.

Here the Syriac follows a corrupt Greek text, and has itself been corrupted. For more violent changes in the Syriac we may take the following:

Ps. ii. 37 [33]

εὐλογεῖτε τὸν θεόν, οἱ φοβούμενοι τὸν κύριον ἐν ἐπιστήμῃ· ὅτι τὸ ἔλεος κυρίου ἐπὶ τοὺς φοβουμένους αὐτὸν μετὰ κρίματος.

The Syriac reads ܕܥܢ ܫܚܝܡܐܬܝ for ܕܥܢ ܥܦܝܫܬܝܡܐ: but the parallelism shows that the Greek is right, and perhaps the Syriac ܕܥܢ ܫܚܝܡܐܬܝ should be corrected to ܕܥܢ ܥܦܝܫܬܝܡܐ.

In Ps. v. 8 [6] for μὴ βαρύνῃς τὴν χεῖρά σου ἐφ’ ἡμᾶς the Syriac has ܠܡܢ ܠܥܝܢܐ ܕܥܝܢܐ ܕܥܝܢܐ

‘let not thy hand be delayed from us’;

which appears to answer to μὴ βραδύνῃς τὴν χεῖρά σου ἀφ’ ἡμῶν, the error being due to a false transcription of the Greek. For the correctness of the Greek, we may compare Ps. Sol. ii. 24 and the Biblical parallels cited by Ryle and James [Judg. i. 35 :

1 Sam. v. 6 : Ps. xxxi. (xxxii.) 4].

In the difficult passage Ps. xv. 8, 9 [7]

λιμὸς καὶ ῥομφαία καὶ θάνατος ἀπὸ δικαίων μακρὰν, φεύξονται γὰρ ὡς διωκόμενοι πολέμου ἀπὸ ὁσίων,

the Syriac boldly says in the second clause, that ‘they shall flee as death flees away from life.’

Perles compares Lev. xxvi. 36

καὶ φεύξονται ὡς φεύγοντες ἀπὸ πολέμου which suggests that ἀπὸ has dropped from our text, and gives the original Hebrew.

The Syriac variation is very vivid, but I am afraid it is an evasion of a difficult text: the parallelism would be spoilt by saying that ‘death flees from the righteous, as death flees from life.’ The Greek seems to be right as it stands, and to mean ‘they shall flee from the saints as fugitives of war [are wont to flee].’

In Ps. xvii. 11 [9] Gebhardt edits

*οὐκ ἠλέησεν αὐτοὺς ὁ θεός.
ἐξερεύνησεν τὸ σπέρμα αὐτῶν καὶ οὐκ ἀφήκεν αὐτῶν ἓνα.*

The Syriac has a series of imperatives, or of futures equivalent to imperatives: so that we ought to have in the Greek, if that were the original of the Syriac, *οὐκ ἐλεήσεις αὐτούς, ὁ θεός.

ἐπίσκεψον [? ἐξερεύνησον] τὸ σπέρμα αὐτῶν, καὶ οὐκ ἀφήσεις αὐτῶν ἓνα,*

and since the MSS. have ἐλεήσει and two of them have ἐξερεύνησον we may, by the Syriac, bring the Greek into closer agreement with what must have been its original form.

So far, then, our investigation has not taken us sensibly out of range of the Greek MSS. There are one or two obscurities still to be cleared up, but the above are the principal cases. Here is one microscopic, but significant error. In Psalm v. 16 the Syriac translator has definitely blundered over the word οὐ in καὶ οὐ ἐστὶν ἡ ἐλπίς ἐπὶ σε, οὐ φείσεται ἐν δόματι.

Here he reads the first ou as a negative, and is obliged to discard the second. Cod. R also reads οὐκ for the first ou.

We may, then, conclude that the Syriac translator of the Psalms has worked from a Greek text; and we will presently try to find out its nearest affinity amongst the existing MSS.

In one or two cases the translator makes very successful paronomasiae in his translation, such as might almost deceive the very elect into a belief that he had recovered a play on words of the original Hebrew.

For example in Ps. xi. 6, 7 [5] οἱ δρύμοι ἐσκίασαν αὐτοῖς ἐν τῇ παροδῷ αὐτῶν, πάν ξύλον εὐωδίας ἀνέτειλεν αὐτοῖς ὁ θεός.

For the second line the Syriac reads

ܟܠܬܐ ܠܥܡܠ ܡܝܬܐ ܟܬܡܐ ܟܡܝܬܐ ܟܡܡܐ ܕܥܐ

As it does not seem possible that ܡܝܬܐ can be a direct translation of ἀνέτειλεν we are almost obliged to believe that the writer has introduced a paronomasia: 'every tree of sweet breath God caused to breathe upon them.' It cannot be original, for as Perles points out¹, Baruch read ἐνέτειλεν (cf. Bar. v. 8, πάν ξύλον εὐωδίας τῷ Ἰσραὴλ προστάγματι), and this can only be a variant of ἀνέτειλεν.

Another similar case will be found in Ps. ix. 9 [5]

ὁ ποιῶν ἐλεημοσύνην θησαυρίζει ζωὴν αὐτῷ παρὰ κυρίῳ, which the Syriac renders by ܡܠ ܕܟܥܐ ܟܝܬܐ ܟܕܥܥܐ ܟܕܥܥܥܝ ܕܥܥܝ ܝܠ ܐܥܐ ܟܝܬܐ ܕܥܐ

As this ܕܟܥܐ ܟܕܥܥܐ cannot be a Hebrew form of speech, we are obliged to admit that the play on words is due to the ingenuity of the translator.

Now let us see whether we can get a rough idea of the place which the Syriac text of the Psalms of Solomon occupies amongst the Greek MSS.

Relation of the Syriac
text of the 18 Psalms to the Greek MSS.

The edition of Ryle and James is based upon four MSS. of which the chief is the very beautiful Copenhagen MS. But since the other three (at Paris, Vienna and Moscow respectively) have been shown by

¹ Zur Erklärung der Psalmen Salomos, p. 9.

Gebhardt to be derived from the Copenhagen MS., the text of Ryle and James is reduced to a single authority, for the other three may be neglected.

To this MS. Gebhardt adds four more, one from the Vatican, two from Mount Athos, and one from Monte Cassino. We have thus eight MSS. as follows :

C = Codex Casanatensis 1908.

H = Codex Hauniensis 6: (the Copenhagen MS.).

J = Cod. 555 of the Monastery at Iveron.

L = a MS. in the Monastery of the Laura.

M = a Moscow MS.: Library of the Holy Synod 147.

P = Paris Gr. 2991 A.

R = Vatican Gr. 336.

V = Vienna: Theol. Gr. 11.

The relations between these eight MSS. Gebhardt reduces to the following scheme :

Here z is the archetype: y, x, w are uncial MSS. which make connecting links between the existing texts, and v, u and h are similar links in the shape of minuscule MSS.

The first thing we notice is that in numbering the Psalms, H proceeds as follows :

Psal. Sol. 1 = α'

..... 2 = β'

..... 3 = ... thus missing one in the count.

..... 4 = γ'

..... 5 = δ'

..... 6 = ϵ'

..... 7 = ζ'

..... 8 = η'

..... 9 = θ' thus missing a numeral :

after which the count is regular.

This error in the numbering of Ps. 5 has led its copy V astray, which has no number by the first hand, but has a wrong number δ on the margin by a later hand.

Now turn to the Syriac MS.; we have Psal. Sol. 1 = Psalm 43 of the Syriac.

..... 2 = 44

..... 3 = 45

..... 4 = 47

&c. = &c.

all the numbers being now one in excess.

It will be seen that the Syriac numeration has gone wrong very nearly at the same place as Cod. H, and in correcting an error in one direction, the scribe has made a continuous line of errors in another direction. This suggests that Syr. and H are not very widely removed from one another. Now let us examine some special readings.

In Ps. i. 3 we have

| | | |
|----------|------------|---|
| R L Syr. | for πολλήν | } |
| J H | πολύν | |

In Ps. i. 4 we have

R J L Syr. against H (διέλθου).

| | | |
|-------------------------------|---------------|---|
| In Ps. ii. 1 we have L H Syr. | for κατέβαλε | } |
| R J | for κατέβαλλε | |

this suggests that the Syriac comes on the diagram somewhere between x and w.

In Ps. ii. 24 [22] ικάνωσον, κύριε, τοῦ βαρύνεσθαι χεῖρά σου ἐπὶ Ἱερουσαλὴμ ἐν ἐπαγωγῇ ἐθνῶν.

Here ἐπαγωγῇ is clearly right, but some MSS. have ἀπαγωγῇ: the Syriac has it correctly: thus the MSS. divide R J L and Syr. against H.

In the same connexion it is somewhat perplexing to find both R and Syr. in what seems to be a common error, reading 'Israel' for 'Jerusalem.' One would have expected the same reading to turn up in J, but perhaps it was corrected by the scribe. If Gebhardt's diagram is correct, it looks as if R and Syr. might be the original reading and not an error at all.

In Ps. iv. 3 R and the Syriac are together in reading ἀμαρτωλῶν against J L C H (ἀμαρτιῶν).

In Ps. iv. 10 [8] we have J L C H Syr. (νόμον μετὰ δόλου) against R (μόνον μετὰ δούλου).

In Ps. viii. 24 [21] the Syriac seems to involve â with R against âς of J L C H.

In Ps. viii. 26 [22] Syr. and R are again together in reading ἐμίανεν.

In Ps. xvi. 12 the Syriac omits a clause by homoioteleuton, in company with L.

In Ps. xvii. 8 [6] the Syriac reads ἀλλάγματος with R J L against H (ἀλαλάγματος).

In Ps. xvii. 23 [21] the Syriac reads εἶδες with R J L against H and the rest.

These are the most striking of the non-singular readings of the Syriac, and they show clearly that the version belongs to an earlier strain of text than Cod. H, and that its place is with the group R J L, being perhaps intermediate between J and L. The singular readings and free translations on the part of the Syriac give us no assistance in regard to the grouping of the MSS., and we must leave the matter in the approximate manner explained above.

It must be clear from the foregoing that we cannot expect to get any nearer to the original language of the Psalms by means of the Syriac. The original Hebrew must be sought in the emendations to the Greek text made by Wellhausen, Geiger, Ryle and James, and Perles. [Dr Barnes has discovered in the Cambridge University MS. Add. 2012 (a volume containing two short works of Bar Hebraeus followed by a collection of prayers), the Syriac text of the Psalm of Solomon xvi. 6—13.
The Psalm, which is wrongly numbered as the 59th in our collection, is actually numbered 58, which shows that the arrangement in our MS., viz. Odes and Psalms numbered continuously, beginning with Odes, is not unique. I have added the readings of this fragment, Cod. C, to the text.]

Let us turn in the next place to the Odes, and see whether we can trace their linguistic history. Here we have no Greek text extant, but we have the Coptic text of certain Odes and there are Greek words embedded; we have also traces of a Latin version, which we may assume, provisionally, to have been made from the Greek; and we have the Syriac version.

The Syriac
text of the Odes taken from the Greek.

In Ode 6, v. 16, we have tried to explain the variation between a Coptic = παρρησία and a Syriac = παρουσία by reference to a misread Greek word.

We can frequently detect Greek compounds in their awkward Syriac substitutes; for example, in Ode 7, v. 26, 'excellent beauty of the Lord' is an attempt to render the Greek *μεγαλοπρέπεια*¹. The constantly recurring ܠܠܐܢܐ, 'without corruption,' stands for ἀφθαρτος and ἀφθαρσία.

A good instance is in Ode 9, v. 3, where the literal rendering

'His thought is everlasting life,
And without corruption is your perfection'

probably stands for καὶ ἐν ἀφθαρσίᾳ τὸ τέλος ὑμῶν, and should therefore be translated,

'And your end is immortality.'

A somewhat similar case is the frequently repeated ܠܠܐܢܐ ܠܠܐܢܐ which stands for the Greek ἄφθονος, *ἀφθόνως*². An interesting example will be found in Ode 11, v. 6, where we read that 'speaking waters touched my lips from the fountain of God without grudging' (i.e. abundantly). In the passage just quoted I was at first tempted to emend 'the speaking waters' to 'waters of a flood,' but it is clear that this must not be done: the expression is the same as in Ignatius ad Rom. 7, ὕδωρ ζῶν καὶ λαλοῦν, which Lightfoot too hastily altered to ζῶν καὶ ἀλλόμενον and thus made a direct Johannine parallel. For 'talking water' there are sufficient literary and folk-lore parallels.

Lightfoot quotes from Jortin [Ecccl. Hist. i. 356] the reference to Anacreon 11 (13), δαφνηφόριοι Φοίβου λάλον πiónτες ὕδωρ, for the expression 'talking water' and for the prophetic inspiration that was supposed to be produced by drinking it: but objects to Jortin's inference that, as there was one of these 'speaking' fountains at Daphne, the famous suburb of Antioch, ¹ We may compare with the LXX. of Ps. lxvii. (lxviii.) 34 and the Peshitta.

² An interesting parallel to this series of translations will be found in Irenaeus (247) where the Latin text shows a double translation: 'sine invidia largiter donans hominibus.'

Ignatius may have borrowed his image from thence. Lightfoot thinks the reference doubtful, even if the text were correct. It seems clear, from the language of the Ode, that the text, about which Lightfoot hesitated, is correct, and I think we may say that the Greek text lies behind the Syriac¹; as to the interpretation, that may require a little further deliberation.

We may now pass on to discuss briefly the question of the unity or multiplicity of the authorship of the Psalms. Do they come from a single hand or are they a collection made up out of various authors extending over a period of time? It is natural that we should be on our guard against a too hasty belief that the whole of a collection like the present one comes from a single workshop: for we have before our eyes the example of the traditional authorship of the Canonical Psalter, where the authors to whom the compositions are referred are far too few and where the Psalms are often referred to periods when it is impossible to believe the compositions can have been extant.

In the case before us, however, we can apply a number of ¹ Lightfoot was quoting Jortin by way of Jacobson. A reference to Jortin himself shows that Lightfoot has not done justice to Jortin, whose statement of the case for λαλοῦν and against ἀλλόμενον is admirable. I transcribe a part of it: 'The expression, ὕδωρ λαλοῦν, resembles the vocales undae which inspired the Poets and Prophets.

Statius, Silv. i. 11. 6,

Et de Pieriis vocalem fontibus undam.

An oracle of Apollo Delphicus given to Julian, and preserved by Cedrenus:

Εἴπατε τῷ βασιλεῖ, χαμαὶ πέσε δαίδαλος αὐλά.
Οὐκέτι Φοῖβος ἔχει καλύβαν, οὐ μάντιδα δάφνην, Οὐ παγὰν λαλοῦσαν, ἀπέσβετο καὶ ἄλων ὕδωρ.

In these verses, which, to do them justice, are elegant, Apollo, to raise Julian's compassion, deploras the silence of his oracles, and of speaking streams. In the first line read βασιλῆ.

Anacreon xiii.,

Οἱ δὲ Κλάρου παρ' ἔχθαις
Δαφνηφόροι Φοῖβου
Ἄλων πίνοντες ὕδωρ
Μεμνηότες βοῶσιν.'

Then after discussing the passage in Ignatius and its variant readings, he shows that the Greek Menaeum had both readings, and goes on to say, against Le Clerc, that 'the λαλοῦν ὕδωρ must not be altered: it is sufficiently confirmed by the citations of Cotelierius in this very note where he is inclined to reject it, and it is more elegant and proper than Le Clerc imagined.' References to Antioch and Daphne follow.

Our seventh Ode shows the fitness of the Ignatian expression. It is not necessary to assume any connexion, either of place or authorship, with the Ignatian letters.

tests as to style and matter, and I think it will be evident that the majority of the Odes do come from a single hand. They are so often cast in the same mould, both as regards ideas and expressions, that we are obliged to recognize kinship in the separate compositions¹. Moreover the very elevation of the thoughts of the Odes is an index of a single personality : even if we cannot identify him, we are sure that the writer was a rare spirit, and rare spirits do not agree with multiplied authorship. When our Odist is at his best, he is certainly one and not many. A good way to test for unity of authorship is to group together those Odes which have the same ideas similarly expressed.

For example, we are all familiar with the expression in the Epistle to the Hebrews (Heb. xiii. 15) in which we are told to offer to God through Christ the fruit of our lips in a continual sacrifice of praise. This expression is borrowed from Hosea xiv. 3 according to the Septuagint, or perhaps from the Hebrew of Is. lvii. 19. The expression is one which is already employed in the extant Psalms of Solomon, where we find as follows :

Ps. Sol. xv. 5 [3]

ψαλμὸν καινὸν μετ' ὧδῆς ἐν εὐφροσύνῃ καρδίας, καρπὸν χειλέων ἐν ὀργάνῳ ἡρμωσμένῳ γλώσσης, ἀπαρχὴν χειλέων ἀπὸ καρδίας ὁσίας καὶ δικαίας.

Here the expression has caught the fancy of the Psalmist, who works it into a parallel between 'fruits' and 'firstfruits.'

In the Odes it is a very favourite expression, as the following instances will show :

Ode 8. 'Let your love be multiplied from the heart and even to the lips, to bring forth fruit to the Lord, living fruit, holy fruit, and to talk with watchfulness in His light.'

Ode 12. 'Like the flow of waters flows truth from my mouth, and my lips show forth His fruit.'

Ode 14. 'Teach me the Odes of thy truth, that I may bring forth fruit in thee.'

Ode 16. 'His love has nourished my heart, and even to my lips His fruits He was pouring out.'

¹ A good parallel case would be the modern recovery of the works of the seventeenth century poet Traherne.

The recurrence of the theme 'the fruit of the lips' suggests that this group of Psalms should be credited to a common author.

The sixteenth Ode from which we just quoted is one of a group that begins with a similitude, something like those which we find in the Songs of Degrees in the Canonical Psalter. For instance we have :

Ode 14. 'As the eyes of a son to his father, so are my eyes, O Lord, at all times towards Thee.'

The parallel to this is Ps. cxxiii. 2, 'As the eyes of servants to the hands of their masters, and as the eyes of a maid to the hand of her mistress, so are our eyes to the Lord our God.'

Very similar is Ode 15.

'As the sun is a joy to them that seek for its day-break, so is my Joy the Lord,' with which we may compare Ps. cxxix. (cxxx.) 6, 'more than they that watch for the morning.'

Ode 16 begins something in the same way :

'As the work of the husbandman is the ploughshare : and the work of the steersman is the guidance of the ship : so also my work is the Psalm of the Lord : my craft and my occupation are in His praises.'

With these three Odes we may probably take Ode 28 :

'As the wings of doves over their nestlings, and the mouths of their nestlings towards their mouths, so also are the wings of the Spirit over my heart.'

Suppose we group these four together, viz. 14, 15, 16, 28: of these we have already 14 and 16 in the group 8, 12, 14, 16: so the six Odes 8, 12, 14, 15, 16, 28, belong together and have a common authorship.

Next let us try the association and repetition of ideas : one of the harshest symbols employed by the Odes is the figure of milk from the breasts of God : we have the following coincidences :

Ode 8. 'My own breasts I prepared for them that they might drink my holy milk and live thereby.'

Ode 14. 'With thee are my breasts and my delight.'

Ode 19 contains a parallel in extended form in which Christ is the cup that contains the milk from the breasts of the Father.

With this we must probably take

Ode 35. 'I was carried like a child by its mother, and he gave me milk, the dew of the Lord.'

The same connexion between the milk and the dew of the Lord is found in Ode 4

'Distil thy dews upon us and open the rich fountains that pour forth milk and honey.'

Here then is a group of Odes, 4, 8, 14, 19, 35, which appear to belong together: but of these 8 and 14 are in the previous group, which must now be enlarged to 4, 8, 12, 14, 15, 16, 19, 28, 35.

In this way then, we may form the Odes into groups, as a preliminary test for authorship. Here are some more suggestions for grouping.

In Ode 6 we begin with

'As the hand moves over the harp, and the strings speak, so speaks in my members the Spirit of the Lord.'

From the use of an opening similitude, it may be suggested that this belongs with the similitudes in Odes already quoted: but the actual figure of the hand and the harp recurs: the very next Ode has

Ode 7. 'They shall go forth to meet Him and shall sing to Him with the harp of many notes':

and this Ode also opens with a similitude.

In Ode 14 we have

'Open to me the harp of thy Holy Spirit, that with all its notes I may praise Thee, O Lord.'

In Ode 26

'His harp is in my hands and the Odes of His rest shall not be silent.'

These four odes may be taken together, and attached to the previous group, which now contains 4, 6, 7, 8, 12, 14, 15, 16, 19, 26, 28, 35.

Ode 7 and Ode 10 are connected by the use of a curious expression, 'the traces of the Light'; thus

Ode 7. 'He set over it the traces of His Light.'

Ode 10. 'The traces of the Light were set upon their heart.'

Ode 4 and Ode 8 are connected by their reference to the seal of God which is set on His creatures:

Ode 4. 'Who is there that shall put on thy grace and be hurt? For thy seal is known.'

Ode 8. 'On their faces I set my seal' &c.

Ode 3 and Ode 8 are connected by the fact that both of them speak of Christ as (a) the Beloved, (b) the Living One.

Ode 3 and Ode 17 have a common feature in that they speak of believers as the members of Christ.

Odes 1, 5, 9(?), 17 and 20(?) contain the doctrine of the crown of life which does not wither.

Odes 17, 21, 40 and 41 speak of the transfiguration of the face of the believer: e.g.

Ode 17. 'I received the face and the fashion of a new person.'

Ode 21. 'The exultation of the Lord increased on my face.'

Ode 40. 'My face exults with His gladness.'

Ode 41. 'Let our faces shine in His light.'

We have now, tentatively, grouped together Odes

1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9(?), 10, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20(?), 21, 26, 28, 35, 40, 41.

No doubt other coincidences and parallels may be detected: the net result of this is the recognition that the majority of the Odes come from a single hand, or if we prefer it, from the same school. The doubtful member, in my judgment, is Ode 19 which is far too grotesque to be by the same hand as the other compositions. It appears to me to be an imitation of the other Psalms that speak of the breasts of God. It is tritheistic as well as grotesque. There will be some short Psalms that do not readily furnish material for identification, but even these short Odes will sometimes be capable of grouping; thus the figure of the Cross in prayer is found in Ode 27, and reappears in a longer composition Ode 42. It is very difficult, however, to believe that this 42nd Ode belongs to the main body of the collection.

Setting aside such small compositions and such as are late or discordant, I believe it will be found that the internal evidence will throw nearly all the Odes together, and that those which are thus grouped will be found to be Christian compositions, although at first sight many of them might seem to be Jewish, or not definitely marked one way or the other. Their internal parallelisms enable us to say with confidence that they are either Christian or at least Judæo-Christian compositions.

Several of the longer Odes do not admit of grouping with the others : amongst these we note

Ode 22, which contains an account of the victory over the dragon with seven heads.

Ode 23, which records the descent from heaven of a mysterious letter, inscribed with the name of the Trinity.

Ode 38, which records the preservation of the writer from various errors and deceits.

Ode 39, which explains the dangers which attend the rapid rise of great rivers, and how the believers walk firmly on their waves, following the footsteps and example of Christ.

These are also, in all probability, Christian ; but the question of their authorship must be reserved and examined in detail.

We now proceed to examine the historical allusions in the book of Odes.

The first thing that strikes us is the poverty of historical background compared with that in the extant Psalms of Solomon. In these known Psalms it is impossible to miss the historical situation which provoked them : they were made under the stress of national exigency, and the troubles stand out from the Psalms with their dates on them. Pompey is written large over several of the Psalms, and when Rome is not expressly mentioned it is distinctly felt. The great dragon of the Psalms of Solomon is a classified specimen. We can tell him a mile away.

Not only so, but when the history is recognized, the theology

Historical allusions in the Odes.

also becomes patent. The Pharisaism of the Psalms is transparently clear, and the Messianism that went with it. So that it was with justice that some critics labelled the compositions Psalms of the Pharisees. That does not mean that all these Psalms are necessarily by one hand nor that all of them are decidedly marked. Some of them are, in fact, colourless, and in that sense, dateless: but the collection, as a whole, is identified, both historically and theologically. The case of the Odes is very different. If there are any national disasters behind the songs, they have been lost in the songs. There is not a sad note, and there is hardly a vindictive note in the whole collection. And on the theological side, the leading characteristic is experience, and not dogma: and experience is much harder to date than dogma, and shows fewer of the weather-marks of evolution. Sometimes, indeed, the expressions of the Odes rise to such a height that they catch from the object of their Faith something that is everlasting rather than evolutionary. It is difficult to date a man who has disclosed the fact that he is supremely happy and that God has made his face to shine with the light of heaven. The only way in which we could date such a phenomenon would be to say that, if he is not an isolated specimen, the songs must proceed from some time of general spiritual elevation; and since it is historically verifiable, that the experimental time of the bloom of Church life is the first age (for one hardly expects to find people generally rejoicing with 'an unspeakable and glorified joy,' say, in the time of Constantine), then these hymns or odes must belong to the first days of the Church: but even that way of dating them is somewhat indefinite.

When we go in search of special historical details, we do not get a very rich harvest. The most important cases must be carefully examined. The first case is Ode 4, which has a reference to a proposal or suggestion to change the Sanctuary of God from Jerusalem to some other position, and it is a noble protest from a standpoint, which at least in part is a Jewish standpoint, against the suggestion. The Ode begins as follows:

The proposal to found another Sanctuary.

'No man, O God, changes thy holy place: and it is not possible that he should change it and put it in another place : because he has no power over it : for thy sanctuary was designed before thou didst make other places : that which is the elder shall not be altered by that which is younger than itself.'

Now here it is clear that some change in the value of the Sanctuary at Jerusalem is threatened at the hands of man. The writer does not mean the same thing as the author of the seventh of the extant Psalms of Solomon, where he prays God not to remove His tabernacle from amongst them, lest the enemy should tread the inheritance of the Sanctuary. It is at the hands of man that the Sanctuary is threatened, and the writer is confident that the Lord himself has never changed and never will change.

His thoughts turn to the origin of the holy place. 'That holy place had a pre-existence and a corresponding eternity : it was a 'Sanctuary from the beginning.' Here we are certainly face to face with Jewish beliefs ; the writer of the Ode may be shown on other grounds to be a Christian, but on this point he is betrayed as having Jewish sympathies. And his views with regard to the Temple are not merely Jewish in a general sense, but highly evolved.

The first theories of the Heavenly Sanctuary appear to have been almost Platonic in character : there was a pattern in the mount : according to that pattern or idea the visible thing was fashioned ; but the idea was eternal, and pre-existent. This Platonic idea underwent change at the hand of later Rabbins, who came to teach that the actual Sanctuary had been created before other things, and had been caught away to Heaven and disappeared.

Accordingly we find in the Apocalypse of Baruch, c. 4, that the Lord explains the doctrine of the Sanctuary to the prophet, in language which depreciates the earthly sanctuary :

'Dost thou think that this is that city of which I said, On the palms of my hands have I graven thee? It is not this building which is now built in your midst : it is that which will be revealed with Me, that which was prepared beforehand here from the time when I took counsel to make Paradise, and showed it to Adam before he sinned, but when he transgressed the commandment, it was removed from him, as also Paradise.'

Here, then, we have the view of a first-century writer who is amazed at the desolation of Zion, and like our Odist, is concerned with the problem of the deserted Sanctuary: he concludes that it has been caught away, as Paradise was. The real city of God is that which was made at the beginning; like Paradise, it was only here temporarily: what is left is not the real thing.

Now our Odist does not go so far in despair as the writer of the Apocalypse, of whom he may have been a contemporary. He believes the Sanctuary was made at the very beginning before other things, but still holds to the belief that Jerusalem is the Holy City and the Temple the true Sanctuary. He does not go so far even as the Epistle to the Hebrews, in drawing a distinction between the tabernacle which the Lord pitched, and that which was made by man.

His position appears to be very closely that of the great Jewish Rabbis, who taught the pre-existence of the Sanctuary and its priority to the rest of the works of God, and who do not appear to have explained this pre-existence according to the theory of Ideas, for in that case where would the priority have been of the Temple amongst other works of God? Their method of teaching can be seen from

Bereshith Rabbah, 20:

'Seven things were created before the world: Torah, Gehenna, the Paradise of Eden, the Throne of Glory, the Sanctuary, Repentance and the Name of Messiah.'

Very nearly to the same effect is the dictum of Rabbi Meir in Pirke Aboth vi. 10:

'Five possessions possessed the Holy One, blessed is He, in His world and they are these: Torah, one possession: Heaven and Earth, one possession: Abraham, one possession: Israel, one possession: the Sanctuary, one possession.'

The Scriptural proofs of these statements are important: the case of the Sanctuary is proved as follows:

'The Sanctuary, whence is it proved? Because it is written, "The place, O Lord, which thou hast made for thee to dwell in, the Sanctuary, O Lord, which thy hands have established" (Exod. xv. 17): and it saith, "And he brought them to the border of his Sanctuary, even to this mountain, which his right hand had possessed" (Ps. lxxviii. 54).

That will suffice to show the nature of the Scripture proofs employed: and it is clear that the same beliefs were in the mind of the writer of our Ode. The question then arises as to the situation which provoked his expression of faith.

In the case of the Apocalypse of Baruch, to which we have referred as a parallel, it is clear that it is the desolation of Jerusalem by Titus which is the historical background: and it is some similar situation which is reflected in this fourth Ode. Only the language in this latter case seems to imply that some deliberate suggestion or attempt had been made by man to move the Sanctuary: and against this the writer protests. The agent who makes or suggests the change cannot be the Roman conqueror: he might carry away the holy vessels, but that does not remove the Sanctuary, any more than it was moved in the days of Nebuchadnezzar. So it must be a suggestion coming from Jewish or quasi-Jewish quarters. And the difficulty lies in this: it is hardly possible that in the time of the last Jewish wars, any body of Jewish believers could have cherished the thought of a temple anywhere else than at Jerusalem. If the temple was gone, it was gone back to Heaven and to God: it was not to be sought elsewhere. It is not easy to believe that in A.D. 70 or in A.D. 135, under the hand of Titus, or at the time of Bar Cochba, the Jews would have thought of another temple.

For this reason I suggest that the writer is referring to an attempt which had been made in earlier days to provide an alternative Sanctuary to that at Jerusalem.

We know of at least three such attempts to change the Holy Place; one, the Samaritan temple on Gerizim, another the Sanctuary at Assouan, whose officials were in friendly relations with both Jerusalem and Gerizim, the third the temple of Onias at Leontopolis in Egypt, said to be actually modelled on the temple at Jerusalem, and designed as a substitute for it. Of these the Sanctuary on Gerizim was destroyed by John Hyrcanus in B.C. 128; the Sanctuary at Assouan was wrecked by the Egyptians, after the retreat of Cambyses ; the temple of Onias actually outlasted the temple at Jerusalem, and was destroyed in A.D. 73 by the Roman general Paulinus in consequence of the fears of the Romans that this temple also might become a rallying point for sedition and revolt. And I have suggested that it is the destruction of this temple, and not the Jerusalem temple, that provokes the protest of the fourth Ode. Unless it can be shown that there is a probability that some one actually proposed building a new temple, soon after the great Jewish disasters, elsewhere than at Jerusalem, it seems to me that this is the likeliest solution : and it furnishes an exact historical date.

There can be no doubt as to the writer's affection for the temple at Jerusalem : but he does not wail or lament : he is satisfied with the unchangeableness of God and the immutability of His promises. If he had been a Jew, he could not have displayed such equanimity : compare, for example, the language of the Apocalypse of Baruch or of Fourth Ezra, to see how the real Jew would feel. It may be inferred that the writer of the Ode is a Judæo-Christian. If his date was not, as I suggest, soon after A.D. 70, the only other possible date seems to be soon after A.D. 135¹.

The importance of the temple at Leontopolis, in connexion with the desecration of the temple at Jerusalem by Antiochus Epiphanes, as a factor in the decentralization of the Jewish religion, is indicated by Harnack in his History of Dogmā.

'The spread of Judaism in the world, the secularization and apostasy of the priestly caste, the desecration of the Temple, the building of the Temple at Leontopolis, the perception brought about by the spiritualizing of religion in the Empire of Alexander the Great, that no blood of beast can be a means of reconciling God—all these circumstances must have been absolutely dangerous and fatal, both to the local centralization of worship, and to the statutory sacrificial system².'

In view of this luminous statement, it is not difficult to ¹ The desecration of the Temple by Pompey in B.C. 63 is not a possible situation ; for no serious interruption of the Temple Worship took place, and therefore no acute religious problem was provoked. Nor can our Odes be referred to so early a period. We have shown that they belong, almost entirely, if not absolutely, to the Christian period.

² Harnack : l.c. i. 69 note, Eng. trans.

imagine the resentment of a Palestinian Jew against Leontopolis, nor the expression of such resentment in song, when the offensive institution had been swept away.

We shall get a good idea of the theological position of the writer amongst the early Christian sects and schools, if we contrast his position with (i) that of the Ebionites on the one hand, and (ii) that of the author of the epistle of Barnabas on the other. Irenaeus tells us, for example, that the Ebionites persevere in the customs of the law and in the Jewish mode of life, and adore Jerusalem as if it were the house of God¹. Without pressing too closely the language of Irenaeus concerning the Ebionites, which may be coloured by polemical exaggeration, there is certainly a common ground between the writer of the fourth Ode and the Ebionites, in their affectionate religious attachment to the ancient Sanctuary.

Now turn to the sixteenth chapter of the very anti-judaic epistle which passes under the name of Barnabas. Barnabas begins by telling us that the poor wretches (sc. the Jews) are in error about the temple, which they take to be a house of God. They have almost consecrated God in a shrine, as the Gentiles do. He then quotes prophecies to show the vanity of the Jewish belief. In the course of these quotations he has to explain Isaiah xlix. 17, 'Behold those that have destroyed this temple shall build it again,' and affirms that this is actually taking place at the hands of the Romans, who had wrecked the temple because the Jews had made war against them. But instead of drawing the Ebionite conclusion from this (to us) obscure historical allusion, he flies off to prove that the only real temple of God is a redeemed soul. It is clear that the writer of the fourth Ode, while accepting the spiritual interpretation of life, would never express himself like Barnabas.

As Dr Taylor says², 'those who felt with Barnabas would have looked with disfavour upon the rebuilding of the temple at Jerusalem.' [For a further discussion of the Unchangeable Sanctuary see what is added in the preface.]

There is another way in which we can see that the position of the writer of the fourth Ode is not that of the normal Christian of Gentile extraction. One of the commonest exercises of the early Christian was the demonstration to the orthodox Jew by means of Testimonies from the Old Testament—that his religion was no longer acceptable to God. From the traces of these early collections of Testimonies which have come to light, it is easy to see that they involved special statements under the heads ‘that the Jews were to lose Jerusalem,’ and ‘that the old temple should pass away and a new one take its place.’ The new temple was to be a spiritual one, but whether the new temple was Christ or the believer, is not quite clear. The writer of the fourth Ode is prepared with spiritual interpretations of the older religion, he spiritualizes the priesthood (if it be the same hand as wrote Ode 20) and perhaps the rite of circumcision (cf. Ode 11), but he is not prepared to say that the old Sanctuary was to pass away. His position, therefore, is an intermediate one, not wholly Gentile, though with strong Gentile leanings, and, as we said above, much nearer to the doctrine of the Ebionites than to that of the epistle of Barnabas.

¹ Iren. (ed. Mass. 105).

² Pirqe Aboth : ed. ii. p. 153.

Possible reference to wars which have occurred. In connexion with the foregoing argument, it may be proper to examine the references made in the Odes to the prevalence of wars, and to determine whether the writer is speaking of actual wars or only of spiritual conflicts. When we read the eighteen Psalms of Solomon, the noise of war is common; we can see the engines moved up for the siege, we can hear the thud of the battering rams. These Psalms open in affliction: ‘instead of peace,’ says the writer, ‘there was heard the sound of war.’

‘Distress and the sound of wars,’ so another Psalm begins, ‘mine ears have heard, the sound of the trumpet, and the noise of slaughter and destruction.’ When this writer says war he means war, and there is no alternative. But the case is not so clear in the Odes. The references to war are few, and obscure.

In Ode 8 we have :

‘The right hand of the Lord is with you, and He is your helper : and peace was prepared for you, before ever your war was.’

How shall we explain this allusion? Does it simply mean that the Divine foresight had seen to the end of the man’s spiritual troubles and had designed for him the happy issue out of them? The objection to this is (i) that it is somewhat forced; (ii) that the language is evidently addressed to a community of persons who have passed through affliction together; and are spoken of as those who have been despised, whose righteousness has now been exalted. But if it is addressed to a community, the distresses can hardly be spiritual: and it is possible, though I should not like to affirm it positively, that the persons addressed are those Judaeo-Christians at Pella, who escaped from the siege of Jerusalem by flight, in harmony with the evangelic precepts. The Ode to which we have been referring finds a striking parallel in Ode 9, where we have as follows:

Predestined Peace.

‘For I announce to you peace, to you His saints: that none of those who hear may fall in war, and that those again who have known Him may not perish.....There have been wars on account of the crown. Put on the crown in the true covenant of the Lord. And all those who have conquered shall be written in His book. For their book is victory.’

Is this spiritual or carnal warfare? the concluding sentences sound like the language of the Apocalypse, ‘To him that overcometh,’ and in that case, are spiritual. But the opening sentences sound like an exemption from actual strife and its dangers: and this might again be compared with the condition of the Judaeo-Christians at Pella.

When we turn to Ode 29 we have again allusion to victory over one’s enemies, and to war made by the word of the Lord. But as this Ode is definitely Christian, and its language is parallel to the vigorous expressions of Paul about the casting down of imaginations and the bringing of every thought into the captivity of obedience to Christ, we may be sure that the warfare and the victories are spiritual. Examine the following sentences:

‘From the mouth of death he drew me back, and I laid my enemies low, and He justified me by His grace: for I believed in the Lord’s Messiah.’

These are certainly spiritual statements: justification by grace through faith in Christ is the record of spiritual experience, and the victories must be interpreted in the same sense: and so must the following:

cf. Ps. cx. 2
cf. 2 Cor.
x. 5

'He gave me the rod of His power :
that I might subdue the imaginations of the peoples :
and the power of the men of might to bring them low :
to make war by His word,
and to take victory by His power :
And the Lord overthrew my enemy by His word :
and he became like the stubble that the wind carries away.'

So far, then, as this 29th Ode is concerned, it is a Christian and a spiritual product, and relates to a warfare that is not carnal.

We come now to a much more difficult Psalm of conflict, the story of a triumph over a dragon with seven heads.

The fight with the Dragon.

In the twenty-second Ode the Lord is praised because 'He overthrew by my hands the dragon with seven heads :

Thou hast raised me up over his roots, that I might destroy his seed :

Thy right hand destroyed his wicked poison, &c. &c.'

Then follows an account of the raising of an army of dead bodies, something like the scene in Ezekiel's valley of dry bones.

The Ode is a striking one and attracted the attention of the author of the Pistis Sophia, who found in the dragon with seven heads one of the Emanations that threatened the upward progress of Sophia. When Sophia escapes from these Emanations, she does it to the music of the ninety-first Psalm, in which it is promised that the believer shall tread on the lion and the dragon. And the Pistis Sophia says (p. 140) :

'Conculcabat προβολην cum facie basilisci serpentis, cui septem erant capita ; et conculcabat vim cum facie leonis et cum facie δρακοντος. Feci πιστιν σοφian manere stantem super προβολην αυθαδους, quae habet faciem basilisci serpentis, cui sunt septem capita.'

and (p. 147)

'Atque verbum quod tua vis luminis dixit per Davidem: meabis super serpentem et basiliscum..... super hos, qui sunt facie serpentis, et super hos, qui facie basilisci serpentis, quibus septem sunt capita.'

And then the Ode of Solomon is quoted and commented on. The Pistis Sophia, therefore, has annexed this dragon with seven heads and given him a spiritual interpretation. We may say that the dragon was the cause of the quotation of the Ode. As far as natural history goes, he is a lay figure. But is this the original idea? We remember that in the eighteen Psalms of Solomon, the dragon is palpable and tangible: he is Pompey himself, and not a spiritual force or opposing influence.

Then there is an even closer parallel to our Ode, in the almost contemporary twelfth chapter of the Apocalypse; a dragon with seven heads and ten horns persecutes the woman who brings forth the man-child. And the same dragon appears to be intended in the seventeenth chapter, where it is ridden by the mystical Babylon that makes war with the saints. The dragon stands for the power of Antichrist¹, exhibited especially in the adverse action of imperial Rome. This, then, is the nearest parallel to the situation in our Ode.

Now the situation cannot be reduced to an actual war, as when Rome subdues Jerusalem under Pompey, for in these wars Rome always wins: so it must be some other form of conflict, either the passive resistance and triumph of the saints in times of persecution, or the conflict between truth and error, which results in the defeat of heretical teaching.

The Odist refers to the conflict as a personal one carried on from place to place by himself:

'Thou hast raised me up over his roots to destroy his seed: thou wast there and didst help me; and in every place thy name was blessed by me: thy right hand destroyed his wicked poison.'

This is the story, not of a persecution, but of a conflict between truth and error: and the dragon with seven heads stands, not for a world-power nor an aggressive world-ruler, but for the Antichrist who is spreading the poison of false doctrine and must be confuted from city to city. A parallel situation would be the conflict between Peter and Simon Magus in the Clementine Homilies. Who this Antichrist is, in the mind of the writer, or what is the special form of error that is combated, we have not sufficient information to decide: and for that reason must leave the historical situation somewhat obscure.

¹ Thus Irenaeus, in denouncing the Gnostic leaders, such as Simon Magus, and Carpocrates, calls them expressly the precursors of the dragon, who is by his magic going to cast down from Heaven the third part of the stars; that is, Simon and Carpocrates are rehearsals of the coming Antichrist. See Irenaeus (ed. Mass. 164).

The next Ode to be discussed, in the hope of finding some points of contact with history, is the twenty-third: and it is the most difficult of all the Odes to interpret, and quite unlike any of the other compositions in the series.

After some opening sentences, affirming that Joy, Grace and Love are the marks of the elect of God, we are informed that a letter was mysteriously sent down from heaven to earth, as if it had been shot from a bow. People rushed to read it; but it was talismaned by a seal, which none dared to break. Like the tables of the law, it was wholly written by the finger of God and the name of the Trinity was on it.

A mysterious wheel (?) protects the letter from venturesome or hostile hands. This wheel with the sign upon it went down to the feet, along with the head. Perplexing as this language is, it appears to be explained of Christ's descent into Hades: for in Ode 42, where there is an account of Christ's under-world triumph, we are informed that death cast Him up, and let go the feet with the head. Christ is the head, and the feet are those members of His who are imprisoned in Hades. This explains our statement about the head going down to the feet. It seems, then, that the mysterious letter has something in it relating to the Descensus ad Inferos.

We may compare it with the little book in Apoc. v., which is sealed so that no one can open it, and read it: here there are seven seals, which are to be broken successively. Another suggestive parallel would be the letter in the Bardesanian Hymn of the Soul, which is sent to rouse the King's Son in Egypt¹.

¹ See Acts of Thomas for the Hymn, and the translation of it in Burkitt, Early Eastern Christianity.

This letter was also talismaned with a powerful seal :

‘ This was my letter, sealed with the King’s own seal on the cover,

Lest it should fall in the hands of the fierce Babylonian Demons.’

It flew rapidly as an eagle :

‘ High it flew as the Eagle, King of the birds of the heaven,

Flew and alighted beside me, and spoke in the speech of my country.’

Such flying letters are not uncommon in Apocryphal literature: one such is sent by Baruch to Babylon, and carried by an eagle. The machinery is not unlike that in our Ode.

We have not, however, succeeded in finding a historical situation for this Ode and the implied document.

It does not seem to belong to the main body of the collection; it may, however, be connected with the forty-second Ode, and both of them may belong to a later period than the rest of the book.

We referred above to the suggestions furnished in Ode 22 of a conflict with Antichrist in the form of some heretical teaching, whose poison was being widely diffused. This suggestion finds some further confirmation in Ode 38, where the writer refers to his pursuit of Truth and the protection which it gave him from the poisons and plagues of Error. He came across a mysterious Bridegroom and Bride, who are corrupting the whole world, and giving them to drink from a cup which, in Circean manner, makes away with their understanding. The Odist escapes by Divine Grace, and by his passion for Truth. But who are these that furnish the blandishments that our writer succeeds in resisting? It cannot be the language of a mere crusader in favour of celibacy, though we know there was a strong tendency in the early Church, especially in the East, to regard all married life as a form of corruption that was to be avoided. But here a mysterious Bridegroom and Bride spread a seductive table before the world, and after they have intoxicated their victims, they forsake them as soon as they have robbed them of their understanding. This can hardly be the language of a general hostility to marriage. And it seems more natural to regard the seducers in the Ode as real people, who are bewitching the world. One thinks of 'thy wife Jezebel' in Apoc. ii. 20, of Simon Magus, and his 'lost sheep' Helena, or some other of the many Antichrists with whom the Church had to contend in the first and second centuries. The description in the Ode is too shadowy for a more exact identification.

The deceiver
and his bride.

In one passage in the Odes the writer speaks of himself in language which suggests that he was by birth a Jew or Gentile? a Gentile, and that he was looked upon by those to whom he had joined himself with astonishment. The Ode to which we refer is the forty-first, where in the midst of a noble strain of Christian exultation and confession of Christ and the great day that has dawned in Him, we find:

'Let us exult with the joy of the Lord. All that see me will be astonished: for I am from another race: the Father of Truth remembered me.'

The writer is explaining his position in a Christian community as a Gentile amongst Jews. He explains his faith in a Saviour who 'makes alive and does not reject our souls.'

The language suits the first century better than the second, and the Church in Palestine better than that in Asia Minor, Greece or Egypt.

In another Ode, Christ Himself makes something like an apology for the reception of the Gentiles. Thus in Ode 10:

Christ receives Gentiles.

'I was strengthened and made mighty and took the world captive.....The Gentiles were gathered together who were scattered abroad. *And I was unpolluted by my love.....*They became my people for ever and ever.'

There can be no doubt that this Ode is Messianic, and that, to put it in the lowest possible terms, it is explanatory of the coming in of the Gentiles. No such explanation, or, if we prefer it, apology, would be natural in Corinth or in Ephesus. It belongs farther East, and seems to me to savour, in any case, of the first century. Certainly the Gentile could not feel himself isolated, nor have to be apologized for in the great Churches of the West, nor in the second century, when Gentile bishops began to appear in Jerusalem itself.

There is another direction in which the writers of the Odes show a curious contact with Judaism.

The coat of skin.

It is well known that the teaching of the earliest Christians and of the philosophically minded Jews of the first century made a special study of the story of creation in the first chapters of Genesis, which they systematically allegorised. We have a statement of Anastasius the Sinaite that all the early Christian exegetes, from Papias onward, interpreted the Hexahemeron, or Six days of Creation, by reference to Christ and the Church¹. And those who did not make this direct mystical reference, especially the great Alexandrines, followed Philo in a general allegorisation of the narrative. Many of these explanations, whether Jewish or Christian, are well known. But there is one case which is more obscure. The clothing of Adam and Eve with coats of skins at the time of their expulsion from Paradise was a point that required explanation, and taxed the ingenuity of Philo himself. In his Questions upon Genesis he first apologizes for the homely occupation attributed to the Most High, and argues that at any rate simple leather garb is superior to purple and fine linen, and then he boldly breaks away from the literal explanation and says that the coat of skin simply means the human body, which is the receptacle for the Mind and the Life which God had already created.

Now this interpretation is not confined to Philo², for there is a steady stream of Rabbinical opinion which has coloured the folk-lore of Eastern Europe that Adam had before his fall a nature clothed in light, like God Himself 'whose robe is the light,' and that after his fall the light was replaced by the ordinary integument. It will be interesting to trace this belief, which agrees with that of Philo so far as to make the coat of skin to be the human body, and to see whether it has left its mark on early Christian circles of thought.

The origin of the belief appears to be indicated by a various

¹ See Routh, Rel. i. 15.

² We find it, for example, in the Encratite Cassianus in the second century, according to the testimony of Clement of Alexandria (Strom. iii. 14), χιτῶνας δὲ δερματίνους ἤγειται ὁ Κασσιανὸς τὰ σώματα.

reading of the passage, Gen. iii. 21, which is credited to a MS. belonging at one time to Rabbi Meir¹, viz. that instead of כתנות עור = coats of skin

we should read

כתנות אור = coats of light.

We could then translate the passage, 'And for Adam and his wife Jahveh Elohim had made coats of light and had clothed them.' It is quite possible that this may be the origin of the Rabbinical conceit as to the 'Light-Body' of Adam. And the opinion is strongly reflected upon European folk-lore. It appears also in Gnostic circles: for we find in the Bardesanian Hymn of the Soul which is embedded in the Acts of Thomas, that the Prince who forgets the Imperial Palace whence he came, in his journey to Egypt to find the Pearl of great price, had left behind him in the homeland the robe of glory with which he had been adorned. The account tells us

'They took off from me the glittering robe, which in their affection they had made for me, and the purple toga which was measured and woven to my stature.'

He puts on the disguise of an Egyptian dress and forgets his race and his country. When the young Prince comes to himself in the far country, he gets possession of the pearl, and promptly strips off from him the filthy and unclean dress in which he was clad. On his way home, the robe came to meet him; it fitted him closely and seemed to be a mirror of himself. It was, in fact, his double, and had grown, with his growth, during his long absence.

Prof. Burkitt points out that this Heavenly Robe represents the Body Celestial, it is 'our house which is from heaven':

'That which St Paul desired was no fixed "house" or "habitation" but a Heavenly Form. So here, too, the Robe is no article of clothing, but a Bright Form. The Syriac word means The Bright or The Shining thing. It is "put off" and "put on" by the Soul².'

Here, then, we have a companion to the belief in the Body of ¹ So in Midrash Rabbah:

'In the Torah of Rabbi Meir they found it written, Coats of light: these are the garments of the first Adam.'

² Burkitt, Early Eastern Christianity, p. 215.

Light which belonged to Adam before he fell from celestial to terrestrial life. The two ideas, that of the pre-existent soul that has to leave heaven for earth, and that of the unfallen creation of God, whose environment is changed from a coat of light to a coat of skin, are evidently worked out on parallel lines.

Now it is not difficult to recognise the traces of the clothing of the Old Adam and the clothing of the original Man, who is also the New Adam, in the New Testament. We have, for example, the instruction to put off the Old Man, and to put on the New Man, or to put on (it is the language of clothing) the Lord Jesus Christ. But what we want now to examine is whether there are any similar traces in our Odes. Is there any doctrine of a Light-Body or of a Skin-Body? Let us see. For instance, in Ode 25, we have

‘In me there shall be nothing that is not light : and I was clothed with the covering of Thy Spirit, and I cast away from me my raiment of skin.’

Here we have the very figure of the third chapter of Genesis, explained in a spiritual manner of the conversion and regeneration of the Soul.

Something similar to this appears in Ode 21,

‘I put off darkness and clothed myself with light.’

Very nearly the same idea is involved in Ode 11,

‘I forsook the folly which is spread over the earth, and I stripped it off and cast it from me : and the Lord renewed me in His raiment (cf. Ps. civ. 2) and possessed me by His light.’

And notice that this re-creating act of God is immediately followed by the statement of Paradise Regained: we are engaged in an allegory of the third chapter of Genesis. I think it will be admitted that the writer (or writers) of the Odes knew the allegorical explanation of the coat of skin with which Adam was clad. If this be conceded, then we must again recognise that we are moving in Jewish circles, for it is very unlikely that, at the early date required for our Odes, a Jewish conceit could have penetrated very far into the Gentile world. The ‘coat of skin' is a significant proof of the Jewish or semi-Jewish authorship of the Odes¹. [It appears again in the Kabbala, as Mr G. R. S. Mead points out to me. Zohar ii. 229 b: 'When Adam was in the Garden of Eden, he was dressed in the celestial garment, which is a Garment of Heavenly Light. But when he was expelled from the Garden of Eden and became subject to the wants of this world, what is written? The Lord God (Elohim) made coats of skins to Adam and his wife and clothed them (Gen. iii. 21), for, prior to this, they had Garments of Light—Light of that Light which was used in the Garden of Eden.' For further allusion to the coats of light see Sepher Hayyashar in Migne, Dict. des Apocryphes, tom. ii. coll. 1102—1150.]

This allegorical treatment of the particular case in question could not have continued very long in use in the Church, because of the complication with the story of the fig-leaves; if the coat of skin is the human body, what are the fig-leaves? Evidently the allegory will have over-reached itself. It will survive, however, in folk-lore and in Gnosticism.

It may, perhaps, be objected that the interpretation of the coats of skins as equivalent to human bodies might just as well be Gnostic as Judæo-Christian. For instance, we have quoted above the language of Cassian the Gnostic for this very belief². But we have not only detected the equation of the coat of skin with the human body; we have also found traces of the belief in a coat of light which has been lost when the coat of skin was acquired, and have connected this belief with a various reading, or a Rabbinical conceit, in the text of Gen. iii. 21. So that, while it is quite likely that some early forms of Gnosticism depend directly upon Palestinian teaching, we ought also to allow that the language of our Odes on this subject is very near to the source of the Gnosis, which is very nearly the same thing as saying that it is not Gnostic. We will illustrate this by showing another case of allegorisation of the text of Genesis, which might be claimed as Gnostic, if it were not a recognised fact that the allegorising of these early chapters of Genesis is common to all the early Christian fathers.

¹ For the curious developments of this belief in an original light-body of Adam which are current in Eastern Europe, we may consult Dähnhardt, Natursagen ii. 225. The coat of light was held to be of the nature of horn, and this bright integument fell away when Adam and Eve sinned. All that remains of it is the human nails!

² We might also have quoted Valentinus, the prince of the Gnostics; for according to Irenæus' account of Valentinus' cosmogony, the Demiurge first fashioned the ἄνθρωπος χοῖρος from some invisible and fluid substance, and then clothed him in the 'coat of skin' which is τὸ αἰσθητὸν σῶμα (cf. Iren. ed. Mass. p. 27).

In Ode 11 we have a beautiful sketch of the recovery of the lost Paradise, and of the blessedness of those who are planted in that land (being considered as 'trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord') or who live by the fruit of the trees (being considered as those who have returned to the privileges of the unfallen Adam). Incidentally it is stated that such persons 'have turned from wickedness to God's delights, and have turned back the bitterness of the trees from them, when planted in God's land.'

Paradise Regained and the bitter herbs.

The metaphor is confused; on the one hand the believers are the trees, on the other hand they are the denizens of Paradise, who will have nothing to do with the bitterness of the trees. Disentangling the similitudes we see that the entry into Paradise goes along with an avoidance of certain bitter trees or products of trees. Can we find out what this means?

The early interpreters of Genesis had to face a Divine injunction to eat of every tree in the Garden, with one single exception of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. But this injunction raised the question as to whether all the trees, herbs and fruits were fit to eat. What about the bitter herbs? The answer could only be, either that there were no bitter herbs, or else that they were to be avoided as uneatable, being made for some other uses. The author of the Ode to which we refer evidently takes the latter view: there are bitter herbs, but they are to be avoided. He does not think them useless, for nothing is useless in the Paradise of God. Now this doctrine of the avoidance of the bitter herbs had been credited to our Lord Himself, in a conversation between Himself and Salome, which has been preserved for us by Clement of Alexandria from the Gospel according to the Egyptians. The passage is strongly Encratite. Salome asks how long death is to rule over men, and receives the answer that it is as long as women bear children. 'Then,' rejoined Salome enquiringly, 'I did well in not having any children?' to which suggestion our Lord replies, 'Eat every herb, but shun the bitter herb.' It is certain that this reply is based upon the language of Genesis, e.g. Gen. i. 29 'Behold! I have given you every herb, whose seed is in itself on the face of the whole earth and all the trees...to you they shall be for food': and Gen. ii. 9 'And the Lord God had brought forth from the ground every tree that was fair to the sight and pleasant to the taste,' &c. It is clear, then, that the language of Jesus in the passage cited from the Gospel according to the Egyptians, refers to the Garden of Eden. What, then, is meant by shunning the bitter herb? If we examine the passage in which Clement of Alexandria discusses the meaning (Strom. iii. 9), we shall find that he is opposing a school of Encratites, who said that the bitter herb was marriage. Clement, himself, who is Anti-encratite will have none of this: he challenges the opinion and affirms that marriage is not a sin, nor is there anything bitter about the rearing or producing of children. So he rejects the Encratite doctrine. In so doing, he has shown us that the doctrine existed and that it was a wide-spread interpretation. What shall we say, then, of the writer of our eleventh Ode? If he says that the saints restored to the life of Paradise have nothing to do with the bitter trees, must we not allow that he, too, is allegorising and that he holds Encratite views with regard to marriage? Such views were wide-spread in the early Christian Church, and survived in Gnostic circles, as in the Old Syrian Church, and amongst the followers of Tatian, but I do not see that they need to be especially labelled Gnostic, since they spring quite naturally out of the allegorical treatment of the first chapters of Genesis, or attached themselves easily to that particular form of interpretation¹.

This case of the 'bitter herbs' and the previous one of the 'coat of skin,' are the closest points of contact of primitive teaching with Gnosticism. I do not see that we need to definitely attach the Gnostic label.

We shall see presently that the writer of the main body of the Odes does not keep the Sabbath and gives very early Christian reason for his neglect of that Jewish duty.

We may now go on to discuss the traces of Christian Scriptures in our book of Odes, and the dogmatic and ecclesiastical position of the writer or writers involved.

¹ We may compare the Acts of Thomas, where the King's son and his bride are persuaded by our Lord to renounce marriage, and 'the care of children, the end of whom is bitter sorrow.' The bride explains to her mother, 'I have not had intercourse with a husband, the end whereof is bitter repentance.'

Use of Scriptures.

When we examine the Odes to see how far they are under the influence of the Scriptures of the Old Testament, we find the problem is quite different from that which presents itself in the eighteen Psalms. In these the use of the Old Testament is patent both in language and in quotation, as one can see by examining the portions of the Psalms which are printed in uncial type by Ryle and James, in order to mark the coincidence of language with the Old Testament. Moreover certain parts of the prophets, especially the latter part of Isaiah, have been closely studied and followed: and it is the recognition of this fact that has suggested to Felix Perles some of his most attractive emendations through the supposed original Hebrew¹.

But in the case of the Odes we are at a loss: we cannot tell what Greek lies behind the Syriac, except in a very few cases: and this makes linguistic identifications difficult and almost impossible: nor does the examination of the ideas which the writer expresses lead to a large harvest of coincidences with the Canonical Psalter or the Hebrew Prophets. Perhaps this is natural, in view of the originality of the writer, with whom it was easier to say inspired things than to report them.

When we turn to the New Testament, the result is equally surprising: the name of the Gospel is not found, nor the name of Jesus: direct historical references are limited to those events which are recorded in the Creed, to which we may perhaps add an oblique allusion to Christ's power to walk on the waters, with a possible allusion to the Dove at the Baptism. Not a single saying of Jesus is directly quoted, though there seem to be one or two indirect references. For instance Christ's yoke is spoken of in Ode 42 ('my yoke was over those that love me') and there is one passage in Ode 22, which looks like a reflexion from the words 'on this rock I will build my church' (Matt. xvi. 18)²: only in this case if coincidence were more than accidental, the Ode has the substitution of Kingdom for Church, which suggests for it priority over the Evangelic language.

Setting aside for the moment the question of the use of

¹ Perles: Zur Erklärung der Psalmen Salomos. Berlin, 1902.

² I.e. 'That the foundation of everything might be thy rock: and on it thou didst build thy Kingdom.'

Johannine writings, and of the Apocalypse, we find next to nothing from the Pauline Epistles: there is a sentence in Ode 3,

‘The Lord is zealous that those things should be known, which by His grace have been given to us,’ which may perhaps be an echo of 1 Cor. ii. 12 ‘that we may know the things which are freely given us of God.’ We have also some doubtful references to Rom. viii. 35, 36 in Ode 1 (‘I shall not be separated from Him’) and Ode 5 (‘If everything should be shaken, I stand firm’) and Ode 28 (‘The sword shall not divide me from Him, nor the scimitar’), and there are occasional allusions to salvation and justification by Divine Grace. There are also frequent allusions, which have a Pauline ring, to Christ as the Head, to whom believers are the members. The figure is worked out so as to include the souls in Hades, who are Christ’s feet¹.

Frequent allusions to a living crown can be illustrated from 1 Pet. v. 4 and from Jac. i. 12 and Apoc. ii. 10, but no direct quotations can be established. They may all run back into a primitive Logion, ‘I will give thee a crown of life.’

Ode 3. 11.
Cf. Ode 8.
24.
The chief coincidences with the Apocalypse are in the title of ‘the Living One’ (Apoc. i. 17) given to Christ (but this was also at the beginning of the book of Sayings of Jesus²): in some of the expressions of victory over spiritual enemies, and the possession of Paradise and its trees, as well as in the allusion to an opposing dragon with seven heads, and perhaps to the story of the Sealed Book. It is doubtful if any of these parallelisms can be pressed to the point of established quotation: the dragon with seven heads is, perhaps, the best case for an identification: but it will be remembered that dragons are a common feature of apocalyptical machinery in the period to which the Odes must belong.

It is when we come to the Gospel and Epistles of John that we find the community of ideas to be the most pronounced. We have clear statements that Christ is the Word, that He is before the foundation of the world; that He bestows living water abundantly; that He is the door of everything; that He stands to His people in the relation of Lover to Beloved: that they love Him because He first loved them (for so we may interpret the language of Ode 3: 'I should not have known how to love the Lord, if He had not loved me'), that their love to the Christ makes them His friends (Ode 8). These and similar phrases betray a Johannine atmosphere: but do they betray the use of the Fourth Gospel? The problem is, on a wider scale, something like that which arises in the discussion whether Valentinus the Gnostic used the Fourth Gospel. Hippolytus tells us in his Refutation of Heresies (p. 185) that Valentinus taught that 'God the Father was all love, but love is not love where there is no object of love. So the Father begat two emanations, νοῦς and ἀλήθεια¹.' Now is that a case of the Fourth Gospel or not? The serious critic would hesitate to affirm it; yet the language is very like that of our third Ode; and it would probably be wise to hold the judgment in suspense with regard to the use of the Fourth Gospel in the Odes, especially when it is so difficult to trace any other Gospel quotation or incident, or Saying of Jesus. But I think it will be conceded that we are in a Johannine atmosphere.

¹ As in Ode 42.

² I.e. ‘These are the [wonderful] words which Jesus the Living One spake’: a form of introduction which is imitated in the Coptic Book of Jeu.

One coincidence has been detected between the Odes and the Ignatian Epistles, in the allusion to 'talking water'; but there is no need to assume quotation on either side, the language being sufficiently explained by the folk-lore of the time.

The net result of these comparisons is to place the collection of Odes at a very early period in the history of the Christian Church. One or two of them had already been referred to the early part of the second century, on account of the almost canonical use made of them in the Pistis Sophia. The main body of the Odes, when studied, takes us in the same direction, only perhaps somewhat further.

We come now to the question of the underlying doctrines which can be traced in the Odes. We have already alluded to Christ's pre-existence², to His pre-eminence in the Church³, and to the spiritual union between Himself and believers⁴. We have also pointed out some refer-

Dogmatic of
the Odes.

¹ Ἀγάπη γάρ, φησιν, ἦν ὁλος, ἡ δὲ ἀγάπη οὐκ ἐστιν ἀγάπη, εἰὰν μὴ ᾖ τὸ ἀγαπώμενον.

² As in Ode 31, Ode 33, &c.

³ As in Ode 28, Ode 41, &c.

⁴ As in Ode 3, Ode 42, &c.

ences to His yoke, and to the foundation of His Kingdom, and to His power to walk upon the stormy waters.

One of the strongest expressions with regard to the nature of Christ will be found in Ode 41, where He is called 'the Son of the Most High, who appeared in the perfection of His Father, ...the Word that was before-time in Him, the Messiah or Christ who is truly one, and was known before the foundation of the world.' In the words 'The Christ is truly one,' taken in connexion with the other statements as to His pre-existence, we have suggestions of controversy, over a division in the nature of Christ, of which, perhaps, the earliest known trace is in the first Epistle of John¹ (πᾶν πνεῦμα ὃ μὴ ὁμολογεῖ τὸν Ἰησοῦν) where the various reading, λύει for μὴ ὁμολογεῖ, if not primitive, is certainly very early. This Ode cannot come from a Docetic, nor can it easily be referred to an Adoptionist source².

An equally pronounced Christology may be detected in Ode 29 where the writer says,

'I believed in the Lord's Messiah,
And it appeared to me that He is the Lord.'

We must not too hastily assume that all these statements come from one hand, and we must be prepared to find, along with variety of authorship (if that can be made out), a variety also of theological definitions. There are some Odes which are a little hard of explanation on orthodox lines, because they appear to use Adoptionist language³. But if this suggests subordination of Christ to the Father, in another Ode it is the Holy Spirit that is subordinate, for we are told (Ode 24) that 'the Dove fluttered over the Messiah, because He was her head⁴.' Again in the Ode previously quoted (Ode 36) it appears to follow that the Holy Spirit was the Mother of Jesus, which we know to have been a feature of Ebionite belief. These variations suggest that theology had not fixed her land-

¹ 1 John iv. 3.

² Cf. Novatian, De Trinitate 30. Irenaeus (M. 206 et passim): 'Non ergo alterum Filium novit evangelium nisi hunc qui ex Maria est, qui et passus est, sed neque Christum avolantem ante passionem ab Jesu.'

³ As in Ode 36.

⁴ In later ages this would be known as the heresy of Macedonius, but the language here is innocent of heretical intention.

marks nor laid down her definitions. On the other hand, it is clear that the Odes do not regard Christ as a mere man, but as a pre-existent being and as the Divine Logos. One Ode has the doctrine of the Trinity under a grotesque form worthy of the Middle Ages. But this Ode we are unwilling to class with the rest of the book.

In regard to the points of early Christian belief which occur in the Odes, it is clear that the Crucifixion is definitely alluded to, less clearly the Resurrection; but what surprises us is the extraordinary emphasis upon the Virgin Birth and the Descent into Hades. The former of these is in a state of evolution beyond the Canonical Gospels: the birth is explained as painless¹, and unexpected: we are on the very verge of the details which occur in the apocryphal Gospels of the Infancy.

The other Article of the Creed, the Descent into Hades, is also treated with picturesque detail, very much as in the Gospel of Nicodemus. Just as in the latter gospel² Hades complains of the inward pain which he feels and which intimates an approaching discharge of imprisoned souls, so in Ode 42 we are told that 'Hades saw me and was miserable: death cast me up, and many along with me.' But the prayer of the Souls in Hades is very fine, and has no vulgar suggestions of Jonah and the Whale about it, such as we find in the byways of Patristic literature.

It will, perhaps, be said that the advanced state of evolution of these two dogmas renders it impossible that the collection should be referred to the end of the first century³. There is,

¹ Here, at all events, we are in the region of folk-lore; the Chinese legend of the birth and conception of Hou-tsi, the founder of the dynasty of Tchū, runs on the same line. His mother brought him forth as a tender lamb without effort, without pain and without pollution. See amongst the Chinese Classics, the Shi-King III. ii. 1, which has been Englished as follows:

'Lo! when her carrying time was done,
Came like a lamb her first-born son,
No pains of labour suffered she—
No hurt, no pain, no injury.'

Cf. Ev. Ps. Matthæi, c. 13 'Nulla pollutio sanguinis facta est in nascente, nullus dolor in parturiēte.'

² Tischendorf, Evan. Apocrypha, p. 396 'Contremui perterritus pavore, et omnia officia mea simul mecum conturbata sunt.'

B. H. Cowper, Apoc. Gospels, p. 305 'For lo! I see that all I have ever swallowed are in commotion and my belly is in pain' (Jonah ii. 2); which is taken from the Greek Descensus, see Tisch. l.c. p. 327.

³ The Descent into Hades is a first century doctrine. Harnack says of it: 'the notion of a descensus ad inferna...commended itself on the ground of Old however, an alternative suggestion, that the forty-second Ode, for instance, may be a later product: for it has not been demonstrated that all the Odes come from the same hand or time.

The organic life of the Church can hardly be detected in the book of Odes. The Church itself is not mentioned, unless it should be in the reference to a Pure Virgin in Ode 33 who stands and proclaims the invitation of the Gospel. The figure of the Pure Virgin is well known¹ to have been a common one in the first and second centuries, and has influenced the New Testament itself. But the Pure Virgin may equally well be the Divine Wisdom who stands and calls men².

There is also the implication of corporate unity in the figure of the Head and the members³: this may be directly derived from St Paul. Of Church officials there are only, (a) the writer of Ode 20 who calls himself a priest of God and defines his priesthood as any mystic might, as the offering to God of the sacrifice of his thought, and (b) there are a body of persons engaged in carrying the water of life to the thirsty, who are called Blessed Ministers or Blessed Deacons (Ode 6): we may compare the language of Perpetua concerning 'Tertius and Pomponius, blessed deacons who ministered to us,' who bribed the gaolers and obtained us relief. But the writer of the Odes does not necessarily mean anything so highly evolved as the ministry of the African Church at the beginning of the third century. His ministers have a commission to preach the word and are counted happy in so doing.

Of Sacraments the Odes do not seem to know much⁴. The only directions in which one could look for references to Baptism would be (i) the Living Water, (ii) the allusion to the Seal. Of the former it is unnecessary to speak. It is frankly impossible that the living water which the thirsty are invited in the Scriptures to come and take freely can Testament prediction. In the first century, however, it still remained uncertain, lying on the borders of those productions of religious fancy which were not at once able to acquire a right of citizenship in the communities.' Hist. of Dogma, i. 202, Eng. tr.

¹ e.g. 2 Cor. xi. 2, and cf. Hegesippus in Euseb. H. E. iv. 22. In the letter of the Churches of Lyons and Vienna (c. 12) the Virgin Mother is the Church (καὶ ἐνεγένετο πολλὴ χαρὰ τῇ παρθένῳ μητρὶ).

² Cf. Proverbs viii. 1, 2.

³ As in Ode 1, Ode 17, &c.

⁴ [Unless Diettrich and Bernard should be right that the whole of the hymns are charged with references to Baptism: see preface for details of the argument.]

be any outward affusion: but perhaps something ought to be said of the Seal, because although, in the New Testament, this is a term used of the gift of the Holy Spirit, it is often employed by Patristic writers to denote baptism and the baptized (e.g. in the epitaph of Abercius and elsewhere).

In the Odes we have plenty of reference to seals: we have the abysses of Hades sealed up with the Lord's seal in Ode 24: we have the mysterious Letter from Heaven sealed with a magic seal in Ode 23; and we have in Ode 4 a statement of the talismanic power of the Seal of God, which angels as well as men possess and which all creation knows and fears. And in Ode 8 the Lord says He has set His seal upon the faces of His people, just as we have in the Apocalypse (vii. 3, xiv. 1). But in the Apocalypse, as Dr Swete points out, the seal is not sacramental. Perhaps it was a taboo-mark of some Jewish sect.

If there is any scriptural reference in this doctrine of the Seal, it must be sought in Ezekiel ix., and the ink-mark which an angelic scribe is told to set on the righteous¹. The seal is alluded to in the extant Psalms of Solomon (Ps. Sol. xv. 6) where we are told that 'the sign (σημεῖον) of God is upon the righteous for Salvation.' It is, therefore, a pre-Christian conception. Here Perles very naturally compared Ezekiel ix. 6 and supplied the Haggadic explanation from Shabbath 55^a, as follows:

'God spake to Gabriel: Go and stamp on the forehead of the righteous a mark of ink, that the destroying angels may have no power over him²: and on the forehead of the hypocrites a mark of blood, that the destroying angels may acquire power over them.'

From this talismanic sign (with which the archangels are here entrusted), there was developed, as is well known, the doctrine of the talismanic virtue of the sign of the cross in baptism. But this development (arising out of an interpretation of the use of the letter Tau as the sign in Ezekiel) is, I think, later than what we have in the Odes³. There does not seem, therefore, to be any definite allusion to Baptism. We can see

¹ In the East it is still common to seal with ink.

² Cf. Ode 4. 7, 8 'who is there that shall put on thy grace and be hurt? for thy seal is known.'

³ We have it in Tert. Adv. Marc. iii. 22 where the letter Tau is explained to be 'the very form of the Cross which was foretold to be the sign upon our foreheads.'

the later interpretation very clearly in Lactantius, Div. Inst. iv. 27, who says that the gods cannot approach those in whom they see the heavenly mark, nor hurt those whom the sign as an impregnable wall protects, which is very like Ode 4. 7, 8. Perhaps Lactantius has here a reminiscence of the Ode¹.

As to the Eucharist, I can find no allusion whatever: there are no references to the religious use of bread and wine; the writers of the Odes seem to prefer milk and honey; but these are not spoken of sacramentally, but mystically and allegorically.

The allegorical use of the terms 'milk and honey' is natural enough in view of the Old Testament descriptions of the Land of Promise: but it should be remembered that there are traces of a milk-and-honey sacrament in the early Church. For example in the Epistle of Barnabas², we have a question raised as to the meaning of the milk and honey in the Old Testament. And after some preliminary allegorising to show that the believers in Jesus are themselves the good land, he asks, 'Why milk and honey?' And the answer is that 'the young child is first quickened with honey and then with milk.'

Probably this refers in the first instance to a folk-lore custom in connexion with newly-born children, but it seems to have very early developed into a Christian sacrament for new converts, who had been born again into the Kingdom of God³.

It does not, however, seem that the milk-and-honey passages in the Odes will bear the sacramental interpretation. The nineteenth Ode, for example, has no suggestion of a recent conversion about it. The only one where it seems possible to make connexion with the new-birth is Ode 8, where the Lord says, 'My own breasts I prepared for them that they might drink my holy milk and live thereby'; this might perhaps, in view of the previous reference to the 'seal upon the faces,' be interpreted sacramentally, but it does not seem likely. The baptismal sacrament, as we have shown, is not milk but milk and honey.

¹ 'Sed quoniam neque accedere ad eos possunt, in quibus coelestem notam viderint, nec iis nocere, quos signum immortale munierit, tanquam inexpugnabilis murus.'

² c. 6.

³ Besides Barnabas, we may refer to Tertullian, De corona, c. 3 (inde suscepti, lactis et mellis concordiam prægustamus): Adv. Marc. i. 14: Clem. Alex. Pred. i. 6, p. 128: Coptic Canons, ii. 46, &c.

The only allusion to wine is in the account of the Seducer in Ode 38, who lays plots for the elect and wishes, by an intoxicating cup, to rob them of their reason. So far as the enquiry has gone, the Odes are hardly to be quoted in the history of the Sacraments; they ought, therefore, to belong to an early period of evolution in the organic life of the Church.

There is still something to be said with regard to the missing portions of our MS. The closing portions of the 18 Psalms of Solomon are preserved for us adequately in the Greek, but the lacuna at the beginning of the Odes is serious, and involves the whole of the second Ode, and the beginning of the third Ode.

It has occurred to me that perhaps a sentence from this second Ode may be preserved in Clement of Alexandria. For in his Protrepticus (p. 5) we have the following sentence: ὁ δὲ ἐκ Δαβίδ, καὶ πρὸ αὐτοῦ, ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγος, λύραν μὲν καὶ κιθάραν, τὰ ἄψυχα ὄργανα, ὑπεριδών, κόσμον δὲ τόνδε, καὶ δὴ καὶ τὸν σμικρὸν κόσμον τὸν ἄνθρωπον, ψυχὴν τε καὶ σῶμα αὐτοῦ, ἀγίῳ πνεύματι ἁρμολύμενος, ψάλλει τῷ Θεῷ διὰ τοῦ πολυφώνου ὀργάνου καὶ προσάδει τούτῳ τῷ ὀργάνῳ, τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ, Σὺ γὰρ εἰ κιθάρα καὶ αὐλὸς καὶ ναὸς ἐμός.

Thus according to Clement the Word of God made music of its own, earlier than David and upon a loftier instrument than his harp and lyre; for its music was produced from the macrocosm of creation and the microcosm of the body and soul of man: to this instrument of many strings¹ it sings and addresses the instrument itself, saying to it:

‘Tis thou my harp, and flute and temple art.’

Now this is a quotation from some poetical composition, and we may infer that it is a fragment of an early Psalm or hymn. Accordingly Potter notes on it as follows:

‘Christi verba, ut videtur, a sacro hymno citata.’

But if it is a hymn, there are two considerations which suggest that it came from the Odes of Solomon: first, it is one of the features of these Odes (often causing no little perplexity) that the singer makes his Psalm, either wholly or in part, in the name of Christ : second, the reference to the harp or flute in describing Christ's music, and the representation of the mind of man as an ὄργανον πολύφωνον is thoroughly in the manner of the Odes. Thus in Ode 7 believers go forth to meet the Lord with a harp of many strings [literally, voices : = κιθάρα πολύφωνος exactly, as we have it involved in the passage quoted from Clement]. In Ode 14 the writer says :

¹ [More exactly notes: and cf. next page.]

‘Open to me the harp of thy Holy Spirit,
That with all its notes I may praise Thee,’ and the same spiritual music is in the opening of Ode 6,

‘As the hand moves over the harp...
So speaks in my members the Spirit of the Lord.’

Here it is the Spirit that plays upon the human instrument.

So it is quite possible that Clement's little quotation may be part of the missing matter of our Odes. To which of them shall we refer it? The first Ode is already identified, the third is almost complete, and it is unlikely that Christ should be the speaker in the opening of the third Ode, when he is not so in the closing portion. So the suggestion arises that the sentence comes from the second Ode.

This is a speculation, and must not be taken too seriously, in view of the insufficiency of the evidence. But it can do no harm to record it, with the necessary Valeat quantum. [The observation made above as to the coincidence in language between Clement and the Odes, makes it no longer necessary to speak so diffidently. Harnack passes the matter by too lightly with ‘im besten Falle eine blosse Möglichkeit.’]

It will, perhaps, be enquired whether the use of the Odes of Solomon by early writers can be detected in cases where there are no introductory formulae or definite allusions. We have just suggested that a fragment of the second Ode may be preserved in an anonymous quotation by Clement of Alexandria. Are there any similar traces to be identified in the early Patristic literature? The difficulty of making such identifications is well known. We had a case in the use of ‘talking water’ by Ignatius and by the writer of the Odes. Such an expression to us in the present day seems very striking; but a draught from a magical or known to Irenaeus.

The Odes

medical spring is probably a common folk-lore way of obtaining inspiration, and need not imply any dependence of one of the coincident writers upon the other.

Here is a somewhat similar case from Irenæus, in which the evidence is rather in the direction of recognising a quotation on the part of that writer from the Odes. Irenæus discusses¹ the question why God made man and why He chose the fathers and why He called the saints. He begins by the doctrine that God, for His part, had no need of man: 'non quasi indigens hominis, plasmavit Adam.' This sentiment of the Divine independence of His works is in our fourth Ode. It is, however, so common an expression in Greek philosophy and theology, that we should pay no attention to its occurrence in Irenæus, if it were not that it is the key-note of the section and that he returns to it with an added amplification, which is also found in the fourth Ode. For he says that the less God needs man, the more man needs God and His fellowship:

'in quantum enim Deus nullius indiget, in tantum homo indiget Dei communione.'

Here we have the thought of fellowship with God, as the expression of man's need, which we have in Ode 4:

'Thou hast given us thy fellowship:'

It was not that thou wast in need of us, but that we were in need of thee.'

A little lower down Irenæus returns to the same thought: God distributed His prophets over the earth to habituate men to the reception of His Spirit and to fellowship with Himself: 'He Himself was in need of no man: but on those that needed Him, He bestowed His fellowship.'

Here we have the same thought, in closely coincident terms; and since it is the fundamental thought of the chapter, we suggest that Irenæus may be working from a text, and the text is a verse from the Odes of Solomon. The same sentiments recur in Bk v. c. ii. in the following form: 'Nihil enim illi ante dedimus, neque desiderat aliquid a nobis, quasi indigens: nos autem indigemus eius quæ est ad eum communionis: et propterea benigne effudit semetipsum'; where the last clause may be compared with what follows in the Ode: 'Distil thy dews upon us and open the rich fountains that pour forth milk and honey.'

¹ Lib. iv. c. xxv. (p. 243, Mass.).

There is still, however, something abrupt in the transition from the discussing of the Holy Place and the Holy People to the general question of whether God has any need of man corresponding to the need which man has of God. We may detect the motion of the writer's thought in passing from one subject to the other in the following manner.

From Irenaeus we see that while God has no need of man, man has need of communion with God. The language is, as we have shown, so closely parallel to that of our Ode as almost to amount to a quotation. But at an earlier time than that of Irenaeus the thought of communion with God was not detached from the thought of communion by means of a Holy Place, and by sacrifice offered there.

We get this thought brought out clearly in the prayer of the priests in 2 Macc. xiv. 15 :

'Thou, O Lord of the universe, who in thyself hast need of nothing, wast well pleased that a sanctuary of thy habitation should be set amongst us: so now, O Holy Lord of all hallowing, keep undefiled for ever this house that hath been lately cleansed.'

Here the 'sanctuary of the Divine habitation' is an earlier form of the Christian 'communion with God' which we find in Irenaeus. When, therefore, the writer of the Ode, who began by chanting the inalienable sanctity of the Temple, says that God, who did not need us, has given us His fellowship, he is still thinking of the fellowship that is associated with one special holy place. He cannot think that this form of communion is abandoned or made void. The opening verses of the Ode make it clear that this is his key-note. The parallel in the New Testament is in Paul's speech before the Areopagus (Acts xvii. 24, 25), 'God dwelleth not in temples made with hands, neither is worshipped of men's hands, as though He needed anything.' Our writer would say, 'He dwells in a Temple, because we need Him.' And as we have pointed out, the situation is for our writer Judaeo-Christian.

The Author does not accept Jewish customs.

At the same time we see clearly that the writer is not really a Jew, though he is in a Judaeo-Christian environment. We see this in a number of ways, both direct and indirect. First we had his definite statement as to his being of a different race, which must surely mean that he is a proselyte, in the Christian sense, from among the Gentiles to a community of Judaeo-Christian origin. Then we had his peculiar apologetics, in the person of Christ, for love to the Gentiles. But even more striking is his indirect argument against the necessity of the maintenance of the Sabbath. I have drawn attention to this under Ode 16, by pointing out that the sequence of thought in the words

‘He rested from His works:

And created things run in their courses and do their works:

And they know not how to stand and be idle:

And His ‘heavenly’ Hosts are subject to His word’ contain the argument of Justin with Trypho for the non-validity of the Sabbath, on the ground that

‘the elements, στοιχεῖα (or more exactly, the heavenly bodies¹), do not idle or keep Sabbath.’

And Justin tells Trypho that he learnt this from the very old man to whom he owed his conversion, who taught him, in reference to the Sabbath and Circumcision, that he should remain as he was born. This is very early teaching on the subject of the leading Jewish practices. It does not necessarily mean the abandonment of the Sabbath by Jews. Our author stands where Justin stood, and both of them employ an argument of the more liberal-minded in the primitive Church. He is no more a Jew than Justin is.

It will be asked whether he argues against circumcision as well as against the Sabbath. This is more difficult to answer. It depends upon the interpretation of the opening sentences of Ode 11. If our alternative translation is correct, the writer refers to the work of Divine Grace which he has experienced as a circumcision of the heart, a figure of speech which is justified by the Old Testament references to Israel as ‘uncircumcised in heart and ears²,’ and by the Pauline affirmation that ‘we are the true circumcision,' and that 'he is not a Jew who is one outwardly, nor is circumcision in the letter, but in the spirit.' In this sense our writer may be held to affirm that, although not an Israelite by birth, he is one of the spiritual Israel. And this would agree exactly with the other statements to which we have alluded.

¹ Gal. iv. 9.

² Cf. Deut. x. 16, ‘Circumcise your hearts and be not any more stiffnecked.’

We found no allusions by which we could identify the Gospels used by the Odists.

But if there are no references of a direct character to the Gospels, and only scanty allusions to the historical incidents which make the framework of the Gospels, there is one indirect reference to an early Apocryphal Gospel, which is of the first importance. We have discussed under the twenty-fourth Ode the question whether the reference of the Ode is to the Baptism of Jesus or to some other unknown incident connected with His crucifixion, and have decided that the allusion to the fluttering of the Dove over the head of the Messiah must mean the events at the Baptism, although there was in the context matter which seemed to suggest the descent into Hades rather than the Baptism. The reason for this conclusion lies in the coincidence of the expression of the Odist with the language employed by Justin Martyr in his dialogue with Trypho (c. 88). The Syriac of the opening verse is literally

Trace of an uncanonical Gospel.

'The Dove flew upon [or over] the Messiah'; and this curious phrase answers exactly to the word which Justin twice uses in his account of the Baptism. The repetition of the word has long since provoked a suggestion on the part of the critics that we had here a fragment of Justin's actual gospel, and that it was not one of the canonical Gospels, though Justin himself refers his account to the Apostles of the Lord. And when it was observed that the same peculiar verb turned up elsewhere in Greek Patristic accounts of the Baptism, a very strong case was made out for the use of an actual document of an apocryphal, or, at all events, of a non-canonical character.

When, therefore, we detect the same expression in the Syriac text of the Odes, the coincidence is so striking that we are justified in removing the allusions to the Baptism of Jesus from the matter credited to the canonical Evangelists, and assigning it instead to a lost Gospel of a very early date. It will be convenient to collect¹ under one view the cases in which it may reasonably be held that the Greek word ἐπιπτήναι is used of the Descent of the Dove (Justin Martyr: Dial. 88):

ἀναδύντος αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ τοῦ ὕδατος, ὡς περιστερὰν τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα ἐπιπτήναι ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἔγραψαν οἱ ἀπόστολοι αὐτοῦ τούτου τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἡμῶν.

Ibid.:

τὸ πνεῦμα οὖν τὸ ἅγιον καὶ διὰ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, ὡς προέφην, ἐν εἵδει περιστερᾶς ἐπέπτη αὐτῷ.

Celsus (v. Origen contra Celsum i. 41):

λουομένῳ, φησί, σοι παρὰ τῷ Ἰωάννῃ [v. l. Ἰορδάνῃ] φάσμα ὄρνιθος ἐξ αἰέρος λέγεις ἐπιπτήναι.

Origen (c. Celsum i. 40):

ἐξῆς δὲ τούτοις ἀπὸ τοῦ κατὰ Ματθαῖον, τίχα δὲ καὶ τῶν λοιπῶν εὐαγγελίων, λαβὼν τὰ περὶ τῆς ἐπιπτάσης τῷ σωτῆρι βαπτιζομένῳ παρὰ τοῦ Ἰωάννου περιστερᾶς διαβάλλειν βούλεται.

Origen (in Joan. tom. ii. 11):

ὅτε τῷ σωματικῷ εἶδει ὥσεϊ περιστερὰ ἐφίπταται μετὰ τὸ λούτρον αὐτῷ.

Orac. Sib. vii. 64—70:

Ἄ, Συρίη κοίλῃ, Φοινίκων ὕπατον ἀνδρῶν,
Οἷς ἐπερευγεσμένη κείται Βηρυτιάς ἄλμῃ,
Τλήμων, οὐκ ἔγνωσ τὸν σὸν Θεόν, ὅς ποτ' ἔλουσεν Ἰορδάνου ἐν ὑδάτεσσι, καὶ ἔπτατο πνεῦμα ἐπ' αὐτῷ.

Σάρκ' ἐνδυσάμενος, τάχυσ ἔπτατο Πατὴρ ἐς οἴκους.

To the foregoing coincidences from Greek sources, Resch adds a number of suspicious coincidences in Latin:

Tert. adv. Valent. c. 27:

'Super hunc itaque Christum devolasse tunc in baptismatis sacramento Jesum per effigiem columbae.'

Hilarius in Ps. liv. 7:

'Nam et in columbae specie Spiritus in eum volando requievit...ut volando requiescat.'

¹ See Resch, Aussercanonische Paralleltexzte zu Luc. p. 15.

Hilarius in Matt. ii. 6:

‘post aquae lavacrum et de caelestibus portis sanctum in nos spiritum involare.’

Severi de ritibus baptismi, p. 24, ed. Boderianus (Resch, Agrapha, p. 363):

‘Et Spiritus sanctitatis in similitudinem columbae volans descendit mansitque super caput filii.’

These references are not of equal value in the determination of the language of a primitive account, but taken together, they certainly make a very strong impression in favour of the belief in an uncanonical account of the Baptism, and it is to that account that the first line of Ode 24 must be referred.

But what are we to say of the Spirit singing over the Messiah? Is this also from the uncanonical source?

We may sum up the investigation as far as it has gone as follows:

There can be no reasonable doubt of the antiquity of the recovered Book of Odes. That which seems to be the latest composition amongst them is attested already by Lactantius in the beginning of the fourth century as having the place in the collection which it occupies in our Manuscript. The portions of the Odes which have been transcribed by the author of the Pistis Sophia towards the end of the third century, are evidently taken from a book which was either canonical in the writer's judgment, or not very far removed from canonicity; so that it is quite easy to carry the Odes back into the second century, and those who have studied the extant fragments of them before the recovery of our Manuscript have, in fact, referred them to the earlier part of the second century. Our own investigations have shown that the Odes agree in the extent of their composition with the statistical data for their measurement, preserved in the early Stichometries. We have also shown that they agree in sentiment with the beliefs and practices of the earliest ages of the Church. It came out clearly in the investigation that the writer, while not a Jew, was a member of a community of Christians, who were for the most part of Jewish extraction and beliefs, and the apologetic tone which is displayed, in the Odes, towards the Gentiles, as a part of the Christian Church, is only consistent with the very earliest ages, and with communities like the Palestinian Churches where Judaism was still in evidence and in control. We think, therefore, that it will be admitted on all hands, that the discovery of this collection of Odes and Psalms is not only valuable for the fact that it presents us, for the first time, with the Syriac version of the extant Psalms of Solomon, but that the Syriac text of the Odes of Solomon is in itself a memorial of the first importance for rightly understanding the beliefs and experiences of the Primitive Church.

We have expressed our belief that in part, at least, the collection belongs to the last quarter of the first century ; but if it should be objected that this is too early a date, it cannot be very many years in excess. Even if the writings do not fall within the actual time of the composition of the books of the New Testament, they scarcely fall outside the limits of the same, and we may, therefore, be sure that the Christian Church of to-day has been enriched by the discovery of a literary monument of the highest value. Apart, also, from all critical questions concerned with the little less or little more of a determined date, or with the 'Lo ! here' or 'Lo ! there' of an assigned locality, we have in our Odes the language of Christian experience upon the highest levels of the Spiritual Life, and we should have to go far afield to find such expressions of the Joy of the Lord as recur in almost every one of these Spiritual Songs.

We have no means of knowing who it was that in the first instance ascribed them to Solomon, nor have we any clue at present to their actual authorship, but we may be sure that whatever Solomon did, or did not, in the composing of Odes, with which he has been credited to the number of one thousand and five, according to the insistent accuracy of the Jewish Chronicler, we may say of these new-found compositions, that not even Solomon at his very best could have been spiritually arrayed like one of these.

ODE 1. (Pistis Sophia 116.)

¹The Lord is on my head like a crown, and I shall not be without Him¹. ²They wove for me a crown of truth, and it caused thy branches to bud in me. ³For it is not like a withered crown which buddeth not : but thou livest upon my head, and thou hast blossomed upon my head. ⁴Thy fruits are full-grown and perfect, they are full of thy salvation.

ODE 1. This Ode is not in our Syriac text, but in the Coptic version of the Pistis Sophia, where it is said to be the 19th Ode. I have identified it with the missing first Ode of our collection, on the supposition that in the collection of Solomonian Psalms known to the author of the Pistis Sophia, the eighteen Psalms of Solomon stood first, and not, as in the Syriac collection, in the last place. The question is discussed, more at length, under Ode 5. The argument of the Psalm is that God is the crown of the soul, whose supreme experience is the knowledge of His truth. This crown is of the amarant variety ; it fadeth not away. On the contrary, it buds and blossoms and is full of immortal fruit. The similitude is not uncommon in the book of Odes to which we have placed this Psalm as an introduction. [Diettrich and Bernard think the reference is to a crown put on the head of newly-baptized persons². We may also compare the crown offered to the worshipper of Mithra on his admission to the rank of miles. He sets it aside declaring Mithra to be his only crown³.]

ODE 2. (Deest.)

ODE 3. (Priora desunt.)

..... I put on : ²And his members are with him. And on them do I hang, and He loves me : ³for I should not have known how to love the Lord, if He had not loved me. ⁴For who is able to distinguish love, except the one that is loved ? ⁵I love the Beloved, and my soul loves Him : ⁶and where His rest is, there also am I ; ⁷and I shall be no stranger, for with the Lord Most High and Merciful there is no grudging. ⁸I have been united

¹ Or it.

² Bernard : J.T.S for Oct. 1910, p. 7. Diettrich : Die Reformation for May 1910, p. 307 n.

³ Cumont : Monuments, i. 318.

to Him¹¹, for the Lover has found the Beloved, ⁹and because I shall love Him that is the Son, I shall become a son²; ¹⁰for he that is joined to Him that is immortal, will also himself become immortal; ¹¹and he who has pleasure in the Living One³, will become living⁴. ¹²This is the Spirit of the Lord, which doth not lie, which teacheth the sons of men to know His ways. ¹³Be wise and understanding and vigilant. Hallelujah.

ODE 3. This Psalm, of which the first verses have disappeared along with the leaves that contained the first two Psalms, is evidently a Christian product; the author is a mystic with a doctrine, or rather an experience, of union with the Son. With Him his whole nature has become mingled, as water is mixed with wine. In Pauline language, he has been joined to the Lord, and has become one spirit with Him⁵. In Johannine language, because the Beloved lives, he himself lives also⁶. He has, at least in hope and faith, attained immortality through union with the Living One. The name here given to Christ is very ancient, it has been detected by the Revisers of the English New Testament in the Apocalypse ('I am the Living One')⁷, and it is found in the opening sentences of the Sayings of Jesus, recovered in recent years from Egypt: ('these are the words.....which Jesus the Living One spake'). [Cf. also Ode 24. 14 where 'Him that liveth' is Christ.]

Other Johannine touches are the doctrine that 'we love Him because He first loved us'. For the Psalmist tells us that 'he should not have known how to love the Lord if the Lord had not loved him.'

It would be a mistake to suppose that we have here any direct quotations or that the language necessarily involves acquaintance with the text of the New Testament. In translating the Syriac, I have not tried to distinguish the two words for love which are used: even if it could be inferred that the Greek had used ἀγαπῶ and φιλῶ, as in the 21st chapter of John's Gospel, it would be a mistake to indicate this in the translation by a subtlety which is now exploded. For the Syriac makes no such distinction, nor need we imagine it in the original Aramaic spoken by Jesus. When the Syriac translators turn back our Lord's words in John xiv. 21, 'He it is that loveth me, and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father,' although the Greek word is consistently ἀγαπῶ, they use both the available Syriac words, without distinction, and where they do not distinguish we have no call to over-refinement.

¹ Mingled with (as water with wine); cf. 1 Cor. vi. 17.

³ The MS. has 'in life.' Cf. Apoc. i. 17.

⁵ 1 Cor. vi. 17.

⁶ John xiv. 19.

⁷ Apoc. i. 17.

² Or the Son.

⁴ Or the living One.

⁸ 1 John iv. 19.

ODE 4.

¹No man, O my God, changeth thy holy place ; ²and it is not [possible] that he should change it and put it in another place : because he hath no power over it : ³for thy sanctuary thou hast designed before thou didst make [other] places : ⁴that which is the elder shall not be altered by those that are younger than itself. ⁵Thou hast given thy heart, O Lord, to thy believers : never wilt thou fail, nor be without fruits : ⁶for one hour of thy Faith is more precious than all days and years. ⁷For who is there that shall put on thy grace, and be hurt ? ⁸For thy seal is known : and thy creatures know it : and thy [heavenly] hosts possess it : and the elect archangels are clad with it. ⁹Thou hast given us thy fellowship : it was not that thou wast in need of us : but that we are in need of thee : ¹⁰distil thy dew upon us and open thy rich fountains that pour forth to us milk and honey : ¹¹for there is no repentance with thee that thou shouldest repent of anything that thou hast promised : ¹²and the end was revealed before thee : for what thou gavest, thou gavest freely : ¹³so that thou mayest not draw them back and take them again : ¹⁴for all was revealed before thee as God, and ordered from the beginning before thee : and thou, O God, hast made all things. Hallelujah.

Ps. lxxxiv.
11.

ODE 4. This Psalm is one of the most important in the whole collection, on account of the historical allusion with which it commences. The reference to an unsuccessful attempt to alter the site of the Sanctuary of the Lord can only be explained by some unknown movement to carry on the Jewish worship outside the desolated and proscribed sanctuary, or by the closing of the Jewish temple at Leontopolis in Egypt, which was, perhaps, itself in the first instance built under the pressure of the situation which resulted in the desecration of the temple at Jerusalem by Antiochus Epiphanes. As the latter explanation leans on fact, rather than on hypothesis, we may accept it provisionally as the real interpretation of our Psalm, which is thus dated soon after A.D. 73 when the temple of Onias was closed and dismantled by the Romans. The writer of the Psalm, if not of Jewish origin is, at least, Jewish in sympathy : he holds the Jewish belief that the Sanctuary at Jerusalem was older than the world in which it stood ; it was, according to Rabbinic teaching, prior to all other created things : thus we find in Bereshith Rabbah that 'seven things were created before the world, Torah, Gehenna, the Garden of Eden, the Throne of Glory, the Sanctuary, Repentance and the name of Messiah.'

The proofs of these pre-existent creations can easily be made from the Scriptures: e.g. 'the Lord God had planted a garden in Eden from afore-time' (Gen. ii. 8)¹, and so on. The matter is discussed with some detail in Pirge Aboth vi. 10 'Five possessions possessed the Holy One, blessed is He, in His world: and these are they: Torah, one possession; Heaven and Earth, one possession; Abraham, one possession: Israel, one possession; the Sanctuary, one possession:.....
...The Sanctuary: whence [is it proved]? Because it is written, The place, O Lord, which thou hast made for thee to dwell in, the Sanctuary, O Lord, which thy hands have established (Exod. xv. 17): and it saith, And He brought them to the border of His sanctuary, even to this mountain, which His right hand had possessed (Ps. lxxviii. 54).' This Rabbinical belief has affected the mind of our Psalmist, who comments upon the fall of the Egyptian temple unsympathetically, and evidently has his heart set amongst the ruins of the Sanctuary at Jerusalem. He does not think the covenant between God and the people of Israel is disannulled; all God's promises are irrevocable; His gifts and callings are without repentance on His part. But there are no lamentations on the part of the writer over the ruins of Jerusalem; the temple which is in his thoughts has not developed a wailing-place. God has sealed His own people with the marks of His ownership. All creation, and both worlds, recognise this seal. And He is able to pour out blessings on His chosen, comparable to the dew of heaven, and the milk and honey of the earth. If we please, we may definitely call it a Judæo-Christian Psalm: and it might very well have been composed by one of the refugees at Pella. It is not easy to see how it could have been written outside Palestine, nor by a purely Jewish hand.

There are no Scripture references; perhaps the nearest parallels are Rom. xi. 29 ('the gifts and calling of God are without repentance,' ἀμεταμέλητα), and the adaptation of Ps. lxxxiv. 11 in v. 6, where again the temple is in the mind of the writer.

The thought that God does not need us, but we need God, is a common religious expression in this period, and is found constantly in Greek literature. We may compare the Apology of Aristides, c. 1, and Irenæus (ed. Mass. 244) 'ipse quidem nullius indigens: his vero qui indigent eius, suam præbens communionem,' which is very near indeed to the language of our Ode, and may almost be taken as a quotation. The opposite sentiment can be illustrated from Schiller:

'Freudlos war der grosse Weltenmeister, Fühlte Mangel, darum schuf er Geister, Sel'ge Spiegel seiner Seligkeit.'

Clement of Rome, Ep. i. ad Cor., c. 52, takes an intermediate position: 'The Lord needs nothing...except our praise.'

¹ So Jerome: a principio.

ODE 5.

¹I will give thanks unto thee, O Lord, because I love thee;
²O most High, thou wilt not forsake me¹, for thou art my hope:
³freely I have received thy grace, I shall live thereby: ⁴my persecutors will come² and not see me: ⁵a cloud of darkness shall fall 'on' their eyes; and an air of thick gloom shall darken them: ⁶and they shall have no light to see: that they may not take hold upon me. ⁷Let their counsel become thick darkness³, and what they have cunningly devised, let it return upon their own heads: ⁸for they have devised a counsel, and it did not succeed⁴: they have prepared themselves for evil⁵, and were found to be empty. ⁹For my hope is upon the Lord, and I will not fear, and because the Lord is my salvation⁶, I will not fear: ¹⁰and He is as a garland on my head and I shall not be moved; even if everything should be shaken, I stand firm; ¹¹and if all things visible should perish, I shall not die: because the Lord is with me and I am with Him. Hallelujah.

ODE 5. The interest of this Psalm lies in the fact that at this point we begin to strike the region of coincidences with the Gnostic book, known as the Pistis Sophia. The Ode has been used, apparently, in the composition of two Odes or Prophecies of Solomon, quoted respectively by Salome and the Virgin.

Salome recites nearly the whole of the Ode, with some slight variations and expansions: and it is possible that one or two clauses may be missing in the Syriac and may be capable of restoration from the Coptic.

The remaining portion of the Ode before us appears, at first sight, from the parallelism of the first sentence, to be the same as what is given in the Pistis Sophia as the recitation of the Virgin from the 19th Ode of Solomon. And this ascription and numbering led Ryle and James astray, to identify the matter in question with the sentences about ¹ Or, as in the Coptic, do not thou forsake me.

² Or, as in the Coptic, let my persecutors come.

³ Copt. weakness.

⁴ lit. and it became not to them.

⁵ lit. evilly, as in the Coptic, which expands as follows: Et vicerunt eos potentes et quae paraverant malitiose, descenderunt in eos. Cf. the German of Schmidt: 'Und sie sind besiegt, obwohl sie mächtig sind, und was sie böswillig (κακῶς) bereitet haben, ist auf sie herabgefallen.'

⁶ Copt. quia tu es deus meus, salvator meus.

the Virgin quoted by Lactantius¹, as from the 19th Ode of Solomon. We have, however, shown elsewhere that Lactantius' quotation is really in our 19th Ode, so that Lactantius does not appear in the discussion, having been found in another quarter. And we have suggested that the supposed 19th Ode of the Coptic writer is the first of our collection, and that it followed on the eighteen Psalms of Solomon. The mistake can be traced, by comparing, in the Pistis Sophia, the text and the Gnostic comment upon it; it will be found that a wrong Ode has been copied out for the text of the Gnostic comment, in consequence of two Odes, the first and the fifth, having some similar sentences. The difference can be exhibited thus:

Coptic Ode 19
[= our Ode 1]

'The Lord is on my head like a crown, and I shall not be separated from Him: a crown of truth has been woven for me: my branches were planted in me: for they did not bear a crown that was dried up, and without a shoot:
but thou livest upon my head:
and thou growest upon me: thy fruits are full and perfect: they are filled with thy salvation.'

Syriac Ode 5.

'He is like a crown on my head and I shall not be moved.
Even if everything should be shaken, I stand firm: and if all things visible should perish, I shall not die: because the Lord
is with me and I am with Him.'

The comment upon the foregoing Coptic Ode follows the text of the Syriac Ode, by an unconscious error of the writer who mistook one hymn for the other.

It is clear, then, that the Coptic nineteenth Ode and the Syriac fifth Ode are two different Odes, as we have explained above. We thus recover the missing first Ode of our collection.

Whether this fifth Ode is Christian or not, does not appear decisively at the first reading. It opens in a rather Jewish strain of praise, accompanied by prayer for the discomfiture of enemies. If there is a definite Christian feature, perhaps it is the garland upon the singer's head, which appears in several other Odes. In the 17th Ode, for example, we get the same figure, and here the theme is the praise of the Messiah for His triumph over Hades. This must, of course, be Christian.

The crown is a crown of life, that is a living crown or garland: and this meaning is carefully brought out in the Coptic Ode, which explains that the crown does not wither, but (like Aaron's rod), it buds and bears fruit. We have similar allusions and explanations to the crown of life in the New Testament, as in 1 Pet. v. 4 'a crown of glory, or glorious crown, which does not fade away.' The close of the Ode is a noble expression of trust in the Lord, amidst adverse circumstances, which one instinctively compares with the close of the eighth chapter of the Epistle to the Romans. It may be regarded as a Christian composition, on account of its affinity with other Odes that are certainly Christian, as well as on account of its intrinsic spiritual value.

¹ Psalms of Solomon, p. 160. 'Ode ii. [of the Coptic Odes] should be another fragment of that quoted by Lactantius, the 19th Ode. Here alone is a number given. The Virgin, be it noted, is the reciter here, and the Virgin is the subject of Lactantius' quotation.'

ODE 6.

¹As the hand¹ moves over the harp, and the strings speak, ²so speaks in my members the Spirit of the Lord, and I speak by His love. ³For it destroys what is foreign, and everything that is bitter²: ⁴for thus it was from the beginning and will be to the end, that nothing should be His adversary, and nothing should stand up against Him. ⁵The Lord has multiplied the knowledge of Himself, and is zealous ⁶that these things should be known, which by His grace have been given to us³.
⁶And the praise of His name He gave us⁴: our spirits praise His holy Spirit. ⁷For there went forth a stream and became a river great and broad; ⁸for it flooded and broke up everything and it brought [water] to the Temple⁵: ⁹and the restrainers of the children of men were not able to restrain it, nor the arts of those whose business it is to restrain waters; ¹⁰for it spread over the face of the whole earth, and filled everything: ¹¹and all the thirsty upon earth were given to drink of it⁶; ¹²and thirst was relieved and quenched: for from the Most High the draught was given. ¹³Blessed then are the ministers of that draught who are entrusted with that water of His: ¹⁴they have assuaged the dry lips, ¹⁵and the will that had fainted they have raised up; ¹⁶and souls that were near departing they have caught back from death⁷: ¹⁷and limbs that had fallen they straightened and

¹ Or perhaps plectrum.

² Cod. and everything is of the Lord.

³⁻⁵ 1 Cor. ii. 12.

⁴ lit. His praise He gave us to His name.

⁵ i.e. the temple at Jerusalem. Schmidt: 'wandte sich gegen den Tempel.'

⁶⁻⁸ Schmidt: es tranken, die sich auf dem trockenen Sande befinden. Cf. Is. xxxv. 1.

⁷⁻¹⁷ Schmidt: 'Herzensfreude haben empfangen die Entkräfteten. Sie haben Seelen erfasst, indem sie den Hauch hineinstießen, dass sie nicht stürben.'

set up: ¹⁶they gave strength for their feebleness¹ and light to their eyes: ¹⁷for everyone knew them in the Lord, and they lived by the water of life² for ever. Hallelujah.

ODE 6. In this Psalm again we are fortunate in having a large part of the Coptic text preserved to us: and, as is common in Coptic texts, some Greek words have been also preserved by it. But this very circumstance has led Ryle and James to a wrong supposition as to the existence of Gnostic elements in the Psalm. They recognize that it is a Christian Psalm but suggest, hesitatingly, that the use of the word ἀνόρροια may stamp it as Gnostic. It is quite unnecessary to pay this little tribute to Gnosticism. Neither here nor anywhere else is there anything definitely Gnostic in the book. And Ryle and James are right in saying, 'we cannot see that there is anything unmistakably Gnostic in the doctrine³.' They are also clearly right in saying that what is described in the Psalm is 'the preaching of the Gospel which no human effort can avail to hinder.' We must also recognize a reference to the waters in Ezekiel which go forth from the temple. But there is a suggestive difference in our Psalm from the parable in Ezekiel: in the Syriac text the stream appears to rise elsewhere than in the temple, and part of its function is to water the temple. It is a river deep and broad before it reaches the temple. If this be what is intended, then the restrainers who build dykes to keep waters out or cisterns to keep them in are very likely the Temple officials themselves, who were often hard put to it to hinder the propaganda of the new religion within the limits of the Holy Place.

The writer is exultant in his universalism; the stream of living water has gone out into all the earth: thirsty souls everywhere have been refreshed by it: dying souls have been revived.

The writer is as universal as St Paul. But he is not so detached from Judaism as not to know that the living water was connected with the temple. Perhaps, then, he is a Judaeo-Christian of an enlightened type. Ryle and James suggest for him a date not later than the second century, and intimate the presence of Johannine phraseology and ideas. We think the date is too late; the Johannine features do not appear to us to be directly due to the Gospel: if such a long composition had been under Johannine influence, it would have betrayed its ancestry more definitely. Neither here nor elsewhere does it seem possible definitely to convict the Psalms of having borrowed from St John. On the other hand there is one expression which recalls a sentence in 1 Cor., where the writer says that God is zealous 'that those things should be known, which have been given us by His grace': this is very like 1 Cor. ii. 12, 'that we may know the things that have been freely given us of God.' Whether the coincidence should be pressed will depend to some extent upon the existence of further and similar echoes of New Testament speech.

¹ Cod. ex errore 'for their coming.'

² lit. by living water.

³ Harnack, who has missed the meaning of this hymn, called it a Gnostic baptismal hymn (Hist. of Dogma, i. 297 note). He admits now that it is not Gnostic, and it is doubtful if it has anything to do with baptism.

Near the close of the Psalm the Greek word παρηγσία occurs in the Coptic; but the Syriac 'coming' suggests παρουσία. Παρηγσία, as the Pistis Sophia shows, is one of the words which the Coptic transliterates: so we must retain it, or else find a Greek word which may be misread either as παρηγσία or παρουσία. We have suggested that παράλυσσις is the right word. This is confirmed by the preceding clause, 'Members that had fallen they straightened and set up.' Here the Coptic has erexere for the two Syriac words which we render by 'straightened and set up.' The Syriac has been translating a compound verb by two simple verbs; and the original was evidently ἀνὀρθωσαν. We may now compare Is. xxxv. 3 and Heb. xii. 12; especially note τὰ παραλελυμένα γόνατα ἀνὀρθώσατε. We now see the meaning of the words which follow, 'they gave strength to their paralysis'; it is a reflexion from ισχύσατε, γόνατα παραλελυμένα. The correctness of the reference to Isaiah may be further seen from the following words 'and light to their eyes,' which are a reflexion from 'then shall the eyes of the blind be opened.' It is clear then that the writer is working from Isaiah and not from Hebrews: and in that case the ἀπόρροια of which the Pistis Sophia makes so much is the stream of water which, in the prophecy, makes glad the wilderness and the solitary place. We can now explain the variation between the Syriac and Coptic in v. 10. The 'dry sand' is the ἔρημος διψῶσα of Is. xxxv. 1, and the Syriac should be 'all upon the thirsty land drank of it.'

[The Ode is translated into English by Barnes in Expositor (July 1910). He suggests that we read 'wind' for 'hand' in v. 1 as if the harp were an Aeolian harp! Perhaps 'hand' is wrong, as there is the trace of a connecting line before the actually visible Olaph. If it is not 'hand,' I suspect it is 'plectrum.']

ODE 7.

¹As the impulse of anger against evil, so is the impulse of joy over what is lovely, and brings in of its fruits without restraint: ²my joy is the Lord and my impulse is toward Him¹: this path of mine is excellent²: ³for I have a helper, the Lord³. ⁴He hath caused me to know Himself, without grudging, by His simplicity: His kindness has ¹humbled His greatness¹. ⁵He became like me, in order that I might receive Him: ⁶He was reckoned like myself² in order that I might put Him on; ⁷and I trembled not when I saw Him: because He was gracious to me: ⁸like my nature He became that I might learn Him and like my form, that I might not turn back from Him: ⁹the Father of knowledge is the word of knowledge: ¹⁰He who created wisdom is wiser than His works: ¹¹and He who created me when yet I was not knew what I should do when I came into being: ¹²wherefore He pitied me in His abundant grace: and granted me to ask from Him and to receive from His sacrifice³: ¹³because He it is that is incorrupt, the fulness of the ages and the Father of them⁴.

¹ lit. my running: cf. Cant. i. 3.

² So Schultheiss.

³ B.-L. remove  to the end of previous verse.

¹⁴He hath given Him to be seen of them that are His, ¹⁵in order that they may recognize Him that made them: and that they might not suppose that they came of themselves⁵: ¹⁶for knowledge He hath appointed as its way, He hath widened it and extended it; and brought it to all perfection; ¹⁷and set over it the traces of His light, and I walked ¹⁸therein from the beginning even to the end. ¹⁹For by Him it was wrought, and He was resting in the Son, and for its salvation He will take hold of everything: ²⁰and the Most High shall be known in His Saints, to announce to those that have songs of the coming of the Lord; ²¹that they may go forth to meet Him, and may sing to Him with joy and with the harp of many tones⁶: ²²the seers shall come before Him and they shall be seen before Him, ²³and they shall praise the Lord for His love: because He is near and beholdeth, ²⁴and hatred shall be taken from the earth, and along with jealousy it shall be drowned: ²⁵for ignorance hath been destroyed, because the knowledge of the Lord hath arrived. ²⁶They who make songs shall sing the grace of the Lord Most High; ²⁷and they shall bring their songs, and their heart shall be like the day: and like the excellent beauty⁷ of

¹⁻¹ So Flemming: seine Grösse klein erscheinen lassen.

² lit. in likeness as myself.

³ Gk. θυσίας: Nestle conjectures ούσίας: cf. Clem. Ep. ii. ad Cor. i. ἠθέλησεν ἐκ τοῦ μη ὄντος εἶναι ἡμᾶς: and the verse of the Ode that precedes, 'when I came into being.' Also Ode 8. 16. For an opposite error see Cod. k in Mk. ix. 49.

⁴ For the expression 'Father of the Ages,' cf. 1 Clem. ad Cor. xxxv. 2, lv. 6, lxi. 2, and Is. xi. 6 (Heb.).

⁵ Ps. c. 3.

⁶ lit. voices.

⁷ Gk. μεγαλοπρέπεια as in Ps. lxvii. (lxxviii.) 34.

the Lord their pleasant song : ²⁷and there shall neither be any thing that breathes without knowledge, nor any that is dumb: ²⁸for He hath given a mouth to His creation, to open the voice of the mouth towards Him, to praise Him: ²⁹confess ye His power, and show forth His grace. Hallelujah.

ODE 7. In this Psalm the writer dilates joyfully¹ on the theme of the Incarnation ; and the combination of lowliness and wisdom that are involved therein. The condescension of Christ to human form is not only a sympathetic approach to human conditions, it is a divine welcome. He says 'Come unto me' by coming unto us. 'Like my nature He became that I might learn of Him.'

But the incarnate Messiah is still the maker and sustainer of all things, in whom all things consist. The knowledge of this revelation produces praise and expectation, praise for those who sing His advent, expectation for those who look for His triumphant rule among men. All evil is to pass away, and all hate. The saints who sing are already exulting in the new life which He has bestowed upon them².

For the argument with which the Ode opens we may compare Lactantius, de Div. Inst. iv. 26: 'is, qui humilis advenerat, ut humilibus et infimis opem ferret, et omnibus spem salutis ostenderet, eo genere afficiendus fuit, quo humiles et infimi solent, ne quis esset omnino, qui eum non posset imitari.'

[The difficulty in translating v. 3 has been variously met : Flemming translates 'ein Helfer zum Herrn,' Zahn, (in Verhältniss) zum Herrn : Batiffol and Labourt, as intimated, remove the words 'to the Lord' to the end of the previous verse.]

ODE 8.

¹Open ye, open ye your hearts to the exultation of the Lord: ²and let your love be multiplied from the heart and even to the lips, ³to bring forth fruit to the Lord, living 'fruit', holy 'fruit',³ and to talk with watchfulness in His light. ⁴Rise up, and stand erect, ye who sometime were brought low: ⁵tell forth ye who were in silence, that your mouth hath been opened. ⁶Ye, therefore, that were despised, be henceforth lifted up, because your righteousness hath been exalted. ⁷For the right hand of the Lord is with you : and He is your helper : ⁸and peace was prepared for you, before ever your war was. ⁹Hear the word of truth, and receive the knowledge of the Most High. ¹⁰Your flesh has not known what I am saying to you : neither have your hearts¹ known what I am showing to you. ¹¹Keep my secret², ye who are kept by it : ¹²keep my faith, ye who are kept by it. ¹³And understand my knowledge, ye who know me in truth. ¹⁴Love me with affection, ye who love : ¹⁵for I do not turn away my face from them that are mine ; ¹⁶for I know them, and before they came into being I took knowledge of them, and on their faces I set my seal : ¹⁷I fashioned their members : my own breasts I prepared for them that they might drink my holy milk and live thereby. ¹⁸I took pleasure in them and am not ashamed of them : ¹⁹for my workmanship are they and the strength of my thoughts : ²⁰who then shall rise up against my handiwork, or who is there that is not subject to them ? ²¹I willed and fashioned mind and heart : and they are mine, and by my own right hand I set my elect ones : ²²and my righteousness goeth before them and they shall not be deprived of my name, for it is with them. ²³Ask, and abound³ and abide in the love of the Lord, ²⁴and¹ ye beloved ones in the Beloved : those who are kept, in Him that liveth : ²⁵and they that are saved in Him that was saved ; ²⁶and ye shall be found incorrupt in all ages to the name of your Father. Hallelujah.

¹ The opening sentence about the 'impulse against evil' may be illustrated from Clem. Alex. Paed. i. 8, p. 140 ἐπεταί τῷ ἀγαθῷ, ἢ φύσει ἀγαθὸς ἐστίν, ἢ μυστοφωνία.

² The combination of 'seers' and 'singers' is peculiar, and belongs to a very early period in Church History; it would be best illustrated by the saints in the beginning of Luke's Gospel, who were looking for redemption in Jerusalem, if we could imagine that peculiar religious society of prophets and singers continued and extended.

³ Ungnad-Stärk, a holy life.

Cf. Is.
lxiv. 4.

ODE 8. This Psalm again is Johannine in many of its ideas and expressions. But, even when this is conceded, it is difficult to prove a direct dependence on the Fourth Gospel.

The Psalm is, like a number of others, marked by a sudden transition of personality from the Psalmist or Prophet to the Lord Himself : after the writer has addressed those who have been lifted up out of affliction and have found peace after war, he suddenly in prophetic manner, cries out, 'Hear the word of the Lord,' 'Receive the heavenly knowledge,' and then proceeds to speak in the person of the Lord. The same abrupt transitions are found in the canonical Psalter, and they appear to have characterized the Montanist inspirations. It will be remembered that Montanus describes his own spiritual exaltation in the words : 'Behold ! the man is as a lyre, and I sweep over him as the plectrum. The man sleeps and I wake. Behold ! it is the Lord, who estranges the souls of men from themselves, and gives men souls.' The same address by the Lord in the first person is in the utterance of Maximilla, the Montanist prophetess, who said, 'I am chased as a wolf from the midst of the flock. I am no wolf; I am word, and spirit, and power.'

¹ The MS. by an error of transcription reads, 'your raiment.' But perhaps the aiment means the human body ?

² Clem. Hom. xix. 20 ; and Clem. Alex. Strom. v. 10, apparently from a lost Gospel.

³ Fl. : Bittet ohne Unterlass.

The language of Montanus finds a close parallel in the opening of the sixth Psalm, where the writer says, 'As the hand [or perhaps plectrum] moves over the harp, and the strings speak, so speaks in my members the Spirit of the Lord.' This might easily be claimed as a Montanist utterance, and I can imagine that on account of these and similar sayings, the whole Psalter might be claimed as a Montanist product. But the sentiments are simply Christian, on a high experimental plane; and we must not forget that one of the chief characteristics of Montanism is its attempt to perpetuate the life of the primitive Church. Towards the end of the Psalm the prophet returns abruptly to speech in his own name. There seems to be some breach of continuity in the discourse, as well as a change of personality.

I do not know whether the allusion to an actual war, from which the saints have emerged or escaped, is to be taken literally. If it be a literal, and not a spiritual reference, the choice will lie between the Jewish war under Titus or that under Hadrian; in either case we should be in Judæo-Christian circles. It is, however, quite possible that the 'war' and the 'peace' refer only to spiritual experiences.

The injunction in v. 11 to keep the Lord's secret (μυστήριον ἑμὸν) is frequently quoted in the Fathers. A striking instance will be found in Lactantius, Div. Instit. vii. 26: 'nos defendere hanc [doctrinam] publice atque asserere non solemus, Deo jubente, ut quieti ac silentes arcanum ejus in abdito atque intra nostram conscientiam teneamus... abscondi enim tegique mysterium quam fidelissime oportet, maxime a nobis, qui nomen fidei gerimus.' The last sentence is very like the language of the Ode, 'Keep my secret ye who are kept by it; keep my faith ye who are kept by it.' These Patristic quotations may be traced ultimately to a variant translation of Isaiah xxiv. 16, which has crept into some texts of the LXX from the Hexapla of Origen. But there are a number of cases where the citation is not directly from Isaiah, but from a saying of our Lord in an uncanonical Gospel. Thus in Clem. Alex. Strom. v. 10 we have οὐ γὰρ φθονῶν, φησί, παρήγγειλεν ὁ κύριος ἐν τινι εὐαγγελίῳ· μυστήριον ἑμὸν ἔμοι καὶ τοῖς υἱοῖς τοῦ οἴκου μου. Again in Clem. Hom. xix. 20 we have, μεμνήμεθα τοῦ κυρίου ἡμῶν καὶ διδασκάλου, ὡς ἐντελλόμενος εἶπεν ἡμῖν· τὰ μυστήρια ἔμοι καὶ τοῖς υἱοῖς μου φυλάξατε. It seems that the Odist has been working from the same source as Clement of Alexandria and the Clementine Homilist: and if this be the case, the uncanonical Gospel of which he makes use is very likely the same which we shall find quoted in the 24th Ode. [Bernard thinks the reference is to the disciplina arcani.]

ODE 9.

¹Open your ears and I will speak to you. Give me your souls that I may also give you my soul, ²the word of the Lord and His good pleasures, the holy thought which He has devised concerning His Messiah. ³For in the will of the Lord is your salvation¹, and His thought is everlasting life; and your end is immortality². ⁴Be enriched in God the Father, and receive the thought of the Most High. ⁵Be strong and be redeemed by His grace. ⁶For I announce to you peace, to you His saints; ⁷that none of those who hear may fall in war, and those again who have known Him may not perish, and that those who receive may not be ashamed. ⁸An everlasting crown for ever is Truth. Blessed are they who set it on their heads: ⁹a stone of great price is it; and there have been wars on account of the crown. ¹⁰And righteousness hath taken it and hath given it to you. ¹¹Put on the crown in the true covenant of the Lord. ¹²And all those who have conquered shall be written in His book. ¹³For their book is victory which is yours. And she (Victory) sees you before her and wills that you shall be saved. Hallelujah.

Is. lii. 7.

Cf. Ps. lxxxv. 9.

ODE 9. This Psalm is, from a historical point of view, somewhat colourless. The only definite points are the allusions to the Lord's Messiah, or Christ: and a promise of peace and deliverance from war, which is made to the saints. Of the first of these allusions, we may say that while it makes the Psalm a Messianic one, this does not mean that it is not Christian. The promise of everlasting life which follows must be the holy thought of God concerning the Christ. And this seems to definitely mark out the Psalm as Christian.

What then are we to say of the wars and victory to which the Psalm refers; are they spiritual or are they outward, or a mixture of both? We shall have the same problem before us in other Psalms. From the fact that Victory is personified and writes a book, with which we may compare Apoc. iii. 5 ('He that overcometh shall be clothed in white raiment, and I will not blot out his name from the book of life'), we may perhaps conclude that the Victory spoken of is a spiritual one. This is in harmony with the references to redemption by grace and to the will of Victory that the saints should be saved. These are Christian expressions. On the other hand the promise that none of those who obey the Lord's word shall fall in war might have been very strikingly illustrated in the case of the Christians who escaped to Pella. But even then the Psalm is a Christian one, and it remains an open question whether outward allusions may not have been coupled with inward victories.

¹ lit. life.² Or, and without corruption is your perfection.

The alternative rendering for the third verse suggests that the Syriac words answer to a Greek sentence, καὶ ἐν ἀφθαρσίᾳ τὸ τέλος ὑμῶν.

ODE 10.

¹The Lord hath directed my mouth by His word : and He hath opened my heart by His light : and He hath caused to dwell in me His deathless life ; ²and gave me that I might speak the fruit of His peace : ³to convert the souls of them who are willing to come to Him : and to lead captive a good captivity for freedom. ⁴I was strengthened and made mighty and took the world captive ; ⁵and it became to me for the praise of the Most High, and of God my Father. ⁶And the Gentiles¹ were gathered together who were scattered abroad. ⁷And I was unpolluted by my love ²for them², because they confessed me in high places : and the traces of the light were set upon their heart : ⁸and they walked in my life and were saved and became my people for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

ODE 10. In this vigorous little Psalm Christ must Himself be accounted the speaker through the mouth of His prophet ; unless we should prefer to say that any of the opening sentences are spoken in the Psalmist's own name, and that after them there is an abrupt alteration of personality, such as we have already referred to. It is certain, however, that the one who gathers the peoples together by his love must be the Messiah : ('unto him shall the gathering of the peoples be³'). And it can be no psalmist or prophet who declares that the Gentiles became his people for ever and ever. The one who goes forth to lead captivity captive is again the Christ : we have in the New Testament (Eph. iv. 8) the Messianic interpretation of Ps. lxxviii. 18, 'He ascended up on high, he led captivity captive' ; and the same explanation underlies the Ode before us. The Ode is, therefore, a Christian one : and its soteriology is universal in character. But we are still in the region where apologetic is necessary for the reception of the Gentiles, and where it does not suffice to quote a verse of the Old Testament and say that such reception was foretold. In our Ode Christ explains that the reception of the Gentiles has not polluted Him. Such language does not belong to the Hellenic world, nor, we think, to the second century. But it is quite natural in a Judæo-Christian community in Palestine in the first century.

¹ Christ has accepted the Gentiles.

² i.e. erasing the plural points, so as not to read 'by my sins.' Barnes suggests the emendation 'by their sins.' Wellhausen: ist natürlich hambai zu sprechen, nicht hubbi.

³ Gen. xlix. 10.

The fact that prophets spoke in the person of God or of Christ was a common observation with the early fathers: a good illustration may be seen in Justin's *Apology*¹, where Justin explains that the opening sentences of Isaiah ('The ox knoweth his owner...but my people doth not consider') are a case of the kind; and then goes on to explain that the words 'all day long I have stretched out my hands' are to be understood of the prophet speaking in the person of Christ. In the canonical Psalms also the same feature was easily traced, and those who composed the early books of Testimonies against the Jews constantly point out that the real speaker is not the prophet, but One whom he impersonates. It is inevitable that this impersonation should cause difficulties of interpretation, due to the obscurity of personality involved in the different parts of the prophecy or psalm. And we must not be surprised if we sometimes find it hard to tell in the text of our Odes who is to be regarded as the speaker.

ODE 11.

¹My heart was cloven² and its flower appeared; and grace sprang up in it: and it brought forth fruit to the Lord, ²for the Most High clave ³my heart³ by His Holy Spirit and searched my affection⁴ towards Him: and filled me with His love. ³And His opening⁵ of me became my salvation; and I ran in His way in His peace, even in the way of truth: ⁴from the beginning and even to the end I acquired His knowledge: ⁵and I was established upon the rock of truth; where He had set me up: ⁶and speaking waters⁶ touched my lips from the fountain of the Lord plenteously: ⁷and I drank and was inebriated with the living water that doth not die; ⁸and my inebriation was not one without knowledge, but I forsook vanity and turned to the Most High my God, ⁹and I was enriched by His bounty,

¹ 1 Ap. 37, 38.

² Or, circumcised.

³ lit. clave me or circumcised me. Cf. Rom. ii. 29.

⁴ lit. revealed my reins: cf. Sap. Sol. i. 6: Ps. vii. 9: Ps. lxii. (lxi.) 2: Apoc. ii. 23.

⁵ Or, circumcision.

⁶ Cf. Ignatius ad Rom. γ ὁδὸν ζῶν καὶ λαλοῦν. Wellhausen: das redende Wasser findet sich bei den Mandäern.

and I forsook the folly which is diffused¹ over the earth; and I stripped it off and cast it from me: ¹⁰and the Lord renewed me in His raiment², and possessed me by His light, and from above He gave me rest in incorruption; ¹¹and I became like the land which blossoms and rejoices in its fruits: ¹²and the Lord was like the sun shining on the face of the land; ¹³He lightened my eyes, and my face received the dew; and my nostrils³ enjoyed the pleasant odour of the Lord; ¹⁴and He carried me to His Paradise; where is the abundance of the pleasure of the Lord; ¹⁵and I worshipped the Lord on account of His glory; and I said, Blessed, O Lord, are they who are planted in thy land! and those who have a place in thy Paradise; ¹⁶and they grow by the fruits of thy trees⁴. And they have changed from darkness to light. ¹⁷Behold! all thy servants are fair, who do good works, and turn away from wickedness to the pleasantness that is thine: ¹⁸and they have turned back the bitterness of the trees from them, when they were planted in thy land; ¹⁹and everything became like a relic of thyself, and a memorial for ever of thy faithful works. ²⁰For there is abundant room in thy Paradise, and nothing is useless⁵ therein; ²¹but everything is filled with fruit; glory be to thee, O God, the delight of Paradise for ever. Hallelujah.

ODE II. This lovely Psalm is altogether personal and experimental: the writer describes the visitations of Divine Grace, which he calls the cutting open⁶ of his heart, and his establishment upon the rock of eternal truth. He is renewed by these visitations, as if he had been newly clad in light and had already reached the eternal rest. He becomes like a land that drinks in the dew of heaven, and brings forth fruit to God. He finds himself at last in the Paradise of God and amongst the fragrant trees of a new creation. He breaks out into exultant praise of the good things which God has prepared for them that love Him.

There are no Scriptural references in the Psalm that can be claimed as quotations, however closely the language approximates to that of the ancient Scriptures. Perhaps the nearest parallel would be the promise in Apoc. ii. 7, that the one who overcomes, shall eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God.

¹ lit. cast. U.-S.: die auf Erden lagert.

² Cp. Ps. civ. 2.

³ lit. my breathing.

⁴ Better with Fl.: they grow according to the growth of thy trees.

⁵ Or, idle = ἀργός. Cf. 2 Pet. i. 8: οὐκ ἀργούς οὐδὲ ἀκάπρους.

⁶ perhaps the circumcising.

ODE 12.

¹He hath filled me with words of truth; that I may speak the same; ²and like the flow of waters flows truth from my mouth, and my lips show forth His fruit. ³And He has caused His knowledge to abound in me, because the mouth of the Lord is the true Word, and the door of His light; ⁴and the Most High hath given it to His worlds, [worlds] which are the interpreters of His own beauty, and the repeaters of His praise, and the confessors of His counsel, and the heralds of His thought, and the chasteners of His servants¹. ⁵For the swiftness of the Word² is inexpressible, and like its expression is its swiftness and force; ⁶and its course knows no limit. Never doth it fail, but it stands sure, and it knows not descent nor the way of it³. ⁷For as its work is, so is its end: for it is light and the dawning of thought; ⁸and by it the worlds⁴ talk one to the other; and in the Word there were those that were silent; ⁹and from it came love and concord; and they spake one to the other whatever was theirs; and they were penetrated by the Word; ¹⁰and they knew Him who made them, because they were in concord; for the mouth of the Most High spake to them; and His explanation ran by means of it: ¹¹for the dwelling-place of the Word is man: and its truth is love. ¹²Blessed are they who by means thereof have understood everything, and have known the Lord in His truth. Hallelujah.

ODE 12. This Psalm rises to a high level of spiritual thought, but for that very reason its language is occasionally obscure. The writer describes his own inspiration and how his heart and lips become filled with the words of God. Here, as elsewhere, God's fruit is found in the lips of the faithful, and we are often reminded in these Psalms of the expression which is borrowed in Heb. xiii. 15, from the prophet Hosea, about offering to God the 'fruit of lips that confess to His name.' From the general thought of the words of God, the writer rises to the abstract idea of the Word of God, or Logos, which is the totality of God's revelation and which interpenetrates all things, so that even things that are silent find their speech in it. But especially this Word, which is both truth and love, finds its dwelling-place in man. Happy

¹ Or, works.

² Cf. Sap. Sol. vii. 24. Philo, De Mut. Nom. 42 κοῦφον γὰρ ὁ λόγος καὶ πτηνὸν φύσει, βέλους θάπτον φερόμενος καὶ πάντα διάττω.

³ Or by slight emendations, no man knoweth its length or breadth.

⁴ Or possibly, the aeons.

are they that have come to know Him. Here, perhaps, we are nearer to Gnostic ideas, such as the doctrine of the Word and the Silence, than in any other part of the Psalter: yet there is nothing that can fairly be called Gnostic. We are also very close to the doctrine of the Logos as we have it in John, where the Logos becomes flesh and dwells amongst us: but it is not the Johannine thought of the Incarnation that is imitated or reproduced. The dwelling of the Logos with man is personal and not collective; and we cannot infer from this Psalm a direct statement of the doctrine of Incarnation, for the writer does not go beyond Inspiration; but his thought is noble, even if, as we have said, it is sometimes obscure, at least in a translation.

ODE 13.

¹Behold! the Lord is our mirror¹: open the eyes and see them in Him: and learn the manner of your face: ²and tell forth praise to His spirit: and wipe off the filth from your face: and love His holiness, and clothe yourselves therewith: ³and be without stain at all times before Him. Hallelujah.

ODE 13. This strange little Psalm is an exhortation to holiness: we are to behold the Lord in the beauty of His holiness, but we are also to see ourselves reflected in God as in a mirror; then we shall behold our natural face in an unexpected glass and know what manner of men we are: and in that glass we shall cleanse the dirt from off our faces, and attain to purity. We are reminded of St Paul's statement that we behold, as in a mirror, the glory of our Lord and are transfigured into the same image; though here the thought is not as high as in Corinthians, where holiness is found by the Vision of God rather than by the scrutiny of ourselves.

We may also in this connexion refer to a remarkable passage which is found in a tract falsely ascribed to Cyprian, and known as De Montibus Sina et Sion. We are reminded in this passage first that Christ is the Unspotted Mirror of the Father, as is said of Wisdom in the book called the Wisdom of Solomon². Hence the Father and the Son see one another by reflexion. The writer then continues as follows:

'And even we who believe in Him see Christ in us as in a mirror, as He Himself instructs and advises us in the Epistle of His disciple

¹ Cf. Clem. Alex. Paed. i. 9, p. 172 Τὸ ἑσπυρον τῷ αἰσχυρῷ οὐ κακόν, ὅτι δεικνύει αὐτὸν ὁὗτος ἐστιν. Cf. Jac. i. 24. Clem. Hom. xiii. 16 καλῶ ἐσπυρω ὁρᾶ [ἡ σώφρων γυνή] εἰς τὸν Θεὸν ἐμβλέπουσα.

² Sap. Sol. vii. 26.

John to the people: "See me in yourselves, in the same way as any one of you sees himself in water or in a mirror"; and so he confirmed the saying of Solomon about Himself, that "He is the unspotted mirror of the Father."

Here we have the doctrine of dual vision in a mirror, as though the mirror saw the observer as well as the observer the mirror; in this way the Father sees Himself in the Son and the Son sees Himself in the Father: and then we are told of something said by John, speaking in the person of Christ, in a lost epistle, that we are to see Christ in ourselves as in a glass. This is something like the doctrine of our Psalm that we are to see ourselves in Christ. If we could really be sure of the correctness of the reference of the supposed Cyprianic tract to St John, we should have more confidence in saying that here also we are in the region of Johannine ideas: but, even in that case, there would seem to be no question of direct quotation from canonical Johannine writings¹.

ODE 14.

¹As the eyes² of a son to his father, so are my eyes, O Lord, at all times towards thee. ²For with thee are my consolations (lit. breasts) and my delight. ³Turn not away thy mercies from me, O Lord: and take not thy kindness from me. ⁴Stretch out to me, O Lord, at all times thy right hand: and be my guide³ even unto the end, according to thy good pleasure. ⁵Let me be well-pleasing⁴ before thee, because of thy glory and because of thy name: ⁶let me be preserved from evil, and let thy meekness, O Lord, abide with me, and the fruits of thy love. ⁷Teach me the Psalms of thy truth, that I may bring forth fruit in thee: ⁸and open to me the harp of thy Holy Spirit, that with all its notes I may praise thee, O Lord. ⁹And according to the multitude of thy tender mercies, so thou shalt give to me; and hasten to grant our petitions; and thou art able for all our needs. Hallelujah.

¹ The passage in Ps.-Cyprian is so curious, that for convenience I transcribe the Latin: De Mont. Sina et Sion 13: 'Ita inuenimus ipsum Saluatorem per Salomonem speculum immaculatum patris esse dictum, eo quod sanctus spiritus Dei filius geminatum se uideat, pater in filio et filius in patre, utrosque se in se uident: ideo speculus immaculatus. Nam et nos qui illi credimus Christum in nobis tanquam in speculo uidemus, ipso nos instruente et monente in epistula Iohannis discipuli sui ad populum: "ita me in uobis uidete, quomodo quis uestrum se uidet in aquam aut in speculum," et confirmauit Salomonicum dictum de se dicentem, "quis est speculus immaculatus patris."'

² Ps. cxxiii. 2.

³ Ps. xlviii. 14.

⁴ = εβαπτεσθαι, walk before God, as Enoch, Gen. v. 24 etc.; cf. Peshitta.

ODE 14. In this Psalm the canonical Psalter is somewhat more closely imitated than is generally the case with our collection. The opening sentences recall Ps. cxxiii. 2, 'As the eyes of servants to the hands of their masters, and as the eyes of a maid to the hand of her mistress, so are our eyes to the Lord our God.' The prayer that the Lord will be 'my guide even to the end,' recalls Ps. xlviii. 14, 'This God is our God for ever and ever: He will be our guide even unto death.' But the Psalm is by no means a cento from the canonical Psalter, even though it does not contain anything that could, at the first reading, be definitely labelled as Christian.

ODE 15.

¹As the sun is the joy to them that seek for its daybreak¹, so is my joy the Lord; ²because He is my Sun and His rays have lifted me up²; and His light hath dispelled all darkness from my face. ³In Him I have acquired eyes and have seen His holy day: ⁴ears have become mine and I have heard His truth. ⁵The thought of knowledge hath been mine, and I have been delighted through Him. ⁶The way of error I have left, and have walked towards Him and have received salvation from Him, without grudging. ⁷And according to His bounty He hath given to me, and according to His excellent beauty³ He hath made me. ⁸I have put on incorruption through His name: and have put off corruption by His grace. ⁹Death hath been destroyed before my face: and Sheol hath been abolished by my word: ¹⁰and there hath gone up deathless life in the Lord's land, ¹¹and it hath been made known to His faithful ones, and hath been given without stint to all those that trust in Him. Hallelujah.

ODE 15. This beautiful Psalm, like so many others in the collection, opens with a similitude: these openings are characteristic of the book, and betray a single writer. This does not mean that they do not sometimes imitate the opening of the canonical Psalms. In the present case the 130th Psalm seems to have furnished the key-note, viz. the watchers for the morning. It is an experimental Psalm of the first order: the Sun has risen upon the soul of the writer. Eyes, ears and heart have all been opened. Salvation has been realized: the comeliness of the Lord has been put upon him: death has lost its terrors, the grave its power.

¹ Cf. Ps. cxxx. 6.

² Or, made me rise up.

³ = Gk. μεγαλοπρέπεια.

There is one passage which is either obscure, incorrect or extravagant where the writer says that 'Sheol has been abolished by my word.' Unless there has been a transition of personality, this seems extravagant, and invites the correction 'has been abolished at His word.' In any case, I think the Psalm is a Christian one, though the positive or dogmatic identifications are not forthcoming, apart from the victory over death and the grave.

ODE 16.

¹As the work of the husbandman is the ploughshare: and the work of the steersman is the guidance¹ of the ship: ²so also my work is the Psalm of the Lord: my craft and my occupation are in His praises²: ³because His love hath nourished my heart, and even to my lips His fruits He poured out. ⁴For my love is the Lord, and therefore I will sing unto Him: ⁵for I am made strong in His praise, and I have faith in Him. ⁶I will open my mouth and His spirit will utter in me ⁷the glory of the³ Lord and His beauty; the work of His hands and the operation of His fingers: ⁸the multitude of His mercies and the strength of His word. ⁹For the word of the Lord searches out³ all things, both the invisible and that which reveals His thought; ¹⁰for the eye sees His works, and the ear hears His thought. ¹¹He spread out the earth and He settled the waters in the sea: ¹²He measured the heavens and fixed the stars: and He established the creation and set it up: ¹³and He rested from His works: ¹⁴and created things run in their courses, and do their works: ¹⁵and they know not how to stand and be idle⁴; and His 'heavenly' hosts are subject to His word. ¹⁶The treasure-chamber of the light is the sun, and the treasury of the darkness is the night: ¹⁷and He made the sun for the day that it may be bright, but night brings darkness over the face of the land; ¹⁸and their alternations one to the other speak⁵ the beauty of God: ¹⁹and there is nothing that is without the Lord; for He was before any thing came into being: ²⁰and the worlds were Cf. Heb. made by His word, and by the thought of His heart. Glory^{1. 2.} and honour to His name. Hallelujah.

¹ lit. traction. Schulthess suggests 'the mast.' (l. מִזְרָה).

² lit. in His praises is my craft and in His praises my occupation.

³ Or, searches out: everything, the invisible and the revealed, (is) his thought.

⁴ Justin, Dial. 22.

⁵ Cod. complete; but read حَمْدًا.

ODE 16. This Psalm is, in its closing sentences, specifically Christian, and it is clearly from the same author as those that have immediately preceded. The theme is the beauty of God's creation; especially the writer considers the heavens which are the works of God's fingers, he contemplates the 'spacious firmament on high' (Ps. xviii.). We frequently catch refrains from the story of Creation. But curiously the writer appears to avoid the mention of the moon: instead of saying that God appointed the sun to rule the day and the moon to rule the night, he says that 'the treasure of the light is the sun, and the treasure of the darkness is—the night': and he tries to work out this broken parallel by a further statement about the offices of the sun and the darkness. It would be, perhaps, too much to assume that he had some reason for neglecting the moon: but the omission is curious: (there is a similar omission in Sap. Sol. vii. 18). The Psalm is certainly a beautiful one, especially in its opening verses. These find an appropriate parallel in Clement of Alexandria, who tells us¹: 'We do not force the horse to plough nor the bull to hunt, but we allure each species of animal to the craft that suits it. So we also invite man to the vision of the open heaven, and to the knowledge of God, because he is of celestial birth.....Plough, indeed, if ploughman thou be, but know God while thou plougest: sail, if thou love to voyage the seas, but make thy appeal to the steersman on high.'

The opening verses of this Ode find also a close parallel to Stoic thought in one of its loftiest expressions; for, according to Epictetus, the praise of God is the greatest of occupations: 'Seeing that most of you are blinded, should there not be some one to fill this place, and sing the hymn to God on behalf of all men?...Were I a nightingale, I should do after the manner of a nightingale. Were I a swan, I should do after the manner of a swan. But now, since I am a reasonable being, I must sing to God; that is my proper work: I do it, nor will I desert this my post, as long as it is granted to me to hold it: and unto you I call to join in this self-same hymn' (Epictetus, Discourses, i. 16). I am almost tempted to believe that our Odist knew this saying of Epictetus, and had Christianised it. It may well have been a popular religious quotation in the latter part of the first century. Stoicism and Christianity were, as is well known, very near neighbours; and this passage is one of the finest of Epictetus' sayings².

On examining the Ode more closely we detect an unmistakable case of anti-Judaic polemic. The writer after describing the beauty of creation and the Lord's rest from His works, goes on to say something which shows that he does not mean to deduce the Jewish Sabbath from the statements in Genesis. 'Created things run in their courses, and do their works and know not how to stand or be idle.' Suppose we turn to Justin's Dialogue with Trypho, c. 22, where Justin is arguing with Trypho for the non-necessity of circumcision and the Sabbath: 'I will declare to you and to those who may wish to become proselytes,' says Justin, 'a divine word which I heard from the old man to whom I owe my conversion. He said, "you observe that the heavenly bodies do not idle nor keep sabbath". Remain, therefore, as you were born, do not keep sabbath nor practise circumcision."

¹ Clem. Alex. Protrept. p. 80.

² T. R. Glover (Conflict of Religions, p. 165) refers to this saying of Epictetus and remarks that 'Stoicism was never essentially musical. Epictetus announces a hymn to Zeus, but he never starts the tune.' Certainly the language of the Ode is much loftier and more musical than that of Epictetus.

It is clear, then, that the 16th Ode means to say that the Sabbath is not kept by the Heavenly bodies; and as it goes on to say 'and the [Heavenly] hosts are subject to His word,' it follows that God is regulating the motions of the worlds on the Sabbath days as well as on the week-days: a point which Justin expressly makes in c. 29, 'God undertakes the regulation of the world on this day, exactly as on other days².'

The writer then is a Christian of the type of Justin Martyr, who accepts the Gospel without the obligation of the Law, and makes a quiet intimation of the position which he takes towards the stricter Judaism. But we notice, further, that the argument which underlies his verse is older than Justin Martyr; it is contained in the reply of the ancient Christian whom Justin consulted on the question of sabbath and circumcision; he calls it a Divine Word or Oracle (θεῖον λόγον). It may, then, have come from some early Christian handbook; but, whether this be the case or not, it is a dictum of the first century; for the very old man who talked with Justin was not inventing a solution for immediate perplexities, but giving him a rule which prevailed in the Church to which he belonged.

So it seems clear that the Ode is really Christian, and that its Christianity is of a very early type, to judge from the arguments involved in it.

ODE 17.

¹I was crowned by my God: my crown is living: ²and I was justified in my Lord: my incorruptible salvation is He. ³I was loosed from vanity, and I was not condemned: ⁴the choking bonds were cut off by her³ hands: I received the face and the fashion of a new person : and I walked in it and was saved ; ⁵and the thought of truth led me on. And I walked after it and did not wander : ⁶and all that have seen me were amazed : and I was regarded by them as a strange person : ⁷and He who knew and brought me up is the Most High in all His perfection. And He glorified me by His kindness, and raised my thought to the height of 'His' truth. ⁸And from thence He gave me the way of His precepts¹ and I opened the doors that were closed, ⁹and brake in pieces the bars of iron ; but my iron melted and dissolved before me ; ¹⁰nothing appeared closed to me : because I was the door of everything. ¹¹And I went over all my bondmen to loose them ; that I might not leave any man bound or binding : ¹²and I imparted my knowledge without grudging : and my prayer was in my love : ¹³and I sowed my fruits in hearts, and transformed them into myself : and they received my blessing and lived ; ¹⁴and they were gathered to me and were saved ; because they were to me as my own members and I was their head. Glory to thee our head, the Lord Messiah. Hallelujah.

¹ ἰ.ε. τὰ στοιχεῖα οὐκ ἀργεῖ οὐδὲ σαββατίζει.

² ὁ θεὸς τὴν αὐτὴν διοίκησιν τοῦ κόσμου ὁμοίως καὶ ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ πεποιήτα καθάπερ ἐν ταῖς ἄλλαις ἀπάσαις.

³ Query his?

ODE 17. This Psalm is one that we alluded to above in connexion with 'the crown of life' that has been put upon the writer's head. That it is a Christian Psalm is evident : the Messiah or Christ is definitely referred to, and he is spoken of as being to believers in the relation of the head to the members. But we have again in this Psalm the peculiar change of personality : this time it comes so imperceptibly that we might be tempted to doubt the reality of the transition, if it were not for the abruptness of the return from it at the close of the Psalm. The breaking of the bars of iron must surely refer to the Messiah² : it need not be an allusion to the descent into Hades³ ; for the problem of liberation of souls is stated in general terms : all men are to be free ; there is to be no more one that binds and one that is bound. The transformation of believers into Christ's nature is also referred to ; 'I transformed them into myself.....they became my own members.'

ODE 18.

¹My heart was lifted up in the love of the Most High and was enlarged : that I might praise Him for His⁴ name's sake.

¹ lit. steps.

² So Zahn : Wer anders sollte das sein als Jesus der Messias?

³ Batiffol : Avec M. Harris, avec M. Harnack aussi, et contre M. Gunkel, je crois que ces vv. ne parlent pas de la descente du Christ aux enfers.

⁴ Cod. my.

²My members were strengthened that they might not fall from His strength. ³Sicknesses removed from my body, and it stood to the Lord by His will. For His Kingdom is true. ⁴O Lord, for the sake of them that are deficient do not remove thy word from me! ⁵Neither for the sake of their works do thou restrain from me thy perfection! ⁶Let not the luminary be conquered by the darkness; nor let truth flee away from falsehood. ⁷Thou wilt appoint me to victory; our Salvation is thy right hand¹. And thou wilt receive men from all quarters, ⁸and thou wilt preserve whosoever is held in evils: ⁹Thou art my God. ¹⁰Falsehood and death² are not in thy mouth: ¹¹for thy will is perfection; and vanity thou knowest not, ¹²nor does it know thee. ¹³And error thou knowest not, ¹⁴neither does it know thee. ¹⁵And ignorance appeared like a blind man³; and like the foam of the sea, ¹⁶and they supposed of that vain thing that it was something great; ¹⁷and they too came in likeness of it and became vain; and those have understood who have known and meditated; ¹⁸and they have not been corrupt in their imagination; for such were in the mind of the Lord; ¹⁹and they mocked at them that were walking in error; ²⁰and they spake truth from the inspiration which the Most High breathed into them; Praise and great comeliness⁴ to His name. Hallelujah.

ODE 18. The writer of this Psalm speaks as a prophet, who has known the Divine visitation, and has felt its effect both on mind and body, in the dispelling of error and the healing of disease. He prays for a continuance of the heavenly gift for the sake of the needy people to whom he gives his message. He has evidently been regarded by them as a light and foolish person, whose talk is like the foam on the wave of the sea. But there are others who are inspired like himself, and who mock at the unbelievers for their stupidity and ignorance. We catch the echo of some serious controversy upon religious matters, but the subject of the dispute is unknown. There are no definitely Christian features in the Psalm.

¹ Or, To Victory may thy right hand bring our Salvation.

²⁻³ Perhaps Falsehood and the like.

³ Or by a slight change, And I appeared like a blind man without knowledge. Or better, like chaff, reading  (so Schulthess). Cf. Ode 29. 10.

⁴ Gk. μεγαλοπρέπεια.

ODE 19.

¹A cup of milk was offered to me: and I drank it in the sweetness of the delight of the Lord. ²The Son is the cup, and He who was milked is the Father: ³and the Holy Spirit milked Him: because His breasts were full, and it was necessary for Him that His milk should be sufficiently released; ⁴and the Holy Spirit opened His¹ bosom and mingled the milk from the two breasts of the Father; and gave the mixture to the world without their knowing: ⁵and they who receive in its fulness are the ones on the right hand. ⁶[The Spirit]² opened the womb of the Virgin and she received conception and brought forth; and the Virgin became a Mother with many mercies; ⁷and she travailed and brought forth a Son, without incurring pain; ⁸and because she was not sufficiently prepared³, and she had not sought a midwife, (for He brought her to bear), she brought forth, as if she were a man⁴, of her own will⁵; ⁹and she brought Him forth openly, and acquired Him with great dignity, ¹⁰and loved Him in His swaddling clothes⁶, and guarded Him kindly, and showed Him in Majesty. Hallelujah.

ODE 19. Fantastic as this Psalm is, it might at first sight have been discarded as being out of harmony with the lofty spiritual tone of the rest of the collection. But it happens to be attested by Lactantius, and in the MSS. of his Divine Institutes we have not only a quotation from the Psalm in regard to the painless delivery of the Blessed Virgin, but we have also the number of the Psalm given, either as 19 or 20. So it was found in the collection known to Lactantius.

The harshness of the opening figure with regard to the bosom of the Father does not necessarily detach it from the rest of the collection; for we have had already allusion to the breasts of God. Thus in Psalm 8, the Lord is represented as saying: 'My own breasts I prepared for them that they might drink my holy milk and live thereby.' The eighth and the nineteenth of our Psalms appear therefore to be connected together by a common authorship. For the figure of the breasts of God in the literature of the early Church we may refer to Clement of Alexandria who, in the Paedagogus (lib. i. c. 6, p. 124), has

¹ MS. her bosom.

² Lact. Div. Instit. iv. 12; Epil. Div. Instit. c. 44. The original Greek was perhaps ἐνεκοιλίσθη (= Aram. ܝܢܝܬܐ). Flemming: er umarmte (?)

³ Perhaps: and because there was not (pain) she was sufficient.

⁴ Batiffol: as it were a man: reading ὡς ἄνθρωπον for ὡς ἄνθρωπος.

⁵ Batiffol: by the will [of God]: cf. Joh. i. 13 ἐκ θελήματος.

⁶ Reading ~~ῥαβδία~~ for ~~ῥαβδος~~.

a long discussion of the milk with which Christ's babes are nourished. Our nourishment, he says, is the Divine Word, it is 'the milk of the Father, by which only the babes are fed.' Through the Word 'we have believed in God, to whose care-allaying breast we have fled.' And again (p. 125) 'to the babes, who seek for the Word, the breasts of the Father's kindness supply the milk' (τοῖς ζητοῦσι νηπίοις τὸν Λόγον αἱ πατρικαὶ τῆς φιλανθρωπίας θηλαὶ χορηγοῦσι τὸ γάλα). So Clement comes very near to the figurative language of the Ode, without its crudity of expression. The harshness of the figures employed and the tritheistic character of the theology may be paralleled in writers of the middle ages, whose repute in the Church is very wide. For is it not St Bernard who expounds the Evangelic statement that the beloved disciple leaned on Jesus' breast in the words 'hausit de sinu Unigeniti quod de paterno hauserat ille'? but if John imbibed from the breast of the Only-begotten what He had imbibed in like manner from the Father, we can only say that a very lofty theology is presented in a very harsh metaphor; but we cannot dismiss St Bernard as unworthy of further notice. And if it comes to tritheism, with which all the Christian Ages are more or less discoloured, where shall we find it more pronounced than in John Tauler's great sermon on the coming of the Bridegroom, where God the Father presides over the nuptials of Christ and the Church, and where the Holy Spirit acts as cup-bearer at the feast: a representation which is not so very remote from what we have in our Psalm, when wine has been substituted for milk. But I am afraid the matter is past apologetic. Further than this, we must admit that it is in many ways perplexing: the doctrine seems too highly evolved to allow us to reckon the Psalm to the same period of production as the rest of the book. When the writer speaks of milk from the two breasts of God, he evidently means the two covenants, or testaments. But that exegesis implies that the writer is no Marcionite rejecting an old covenant in the interests of a new, or else he wishes us to understand that he is no Jew, clinging to an old covenant to the neglect of the new covenant. And he seems to imply that the Christians whom he represents are distinguished from some other body of believers by being on the right hand of Christ. Is it the Jews from whom he wishes to be distinguished or is it the Marcionites? The Ode must be, at the earliest, a product of the second century. It is conceivable that the allusion to the Cup of Milk may cover an early Milk-Eucharist. Wine is nowhere mentioned in the religious language of our Psalter.

Turn in the next place to the account of the Virgin Birth, which follows the parable of the cup of milk, and can almost be detached as a separate composition. It certainly presents the miraculous conception and birth in a form which has already undergone considerable development: that the birth was painless was a very early corollary to the statement that it was supernatural; in the commentary of Ephrem on the Gospel there was a statement that 'it was indecent that she who had been a habitation of the Spirit should bring forth with pains and curses'; and this must have been a very early reflection upon the statement of the Virgin Birth. But our writer goes much further than that: he dispenses with the usual aids to child-birth, and introduces details for which we find parallels in the Apocryphal Gospels of the Infancy. And it is frankly impossible that the doctrine of the Miraculous Birth should have become so highly evolved in the first century. So that the doubts raised by the first part of the Psalm are reinforced by a study of its latter half. As far then as this Psalm is concerned, it seems as if we must refer it to a later date than the majority of those which we have been discussing. We detected something like polemical tendency in the first half of the composition, as if the writer turned aside to rebuke either Jews or Marcionites: if we might assume tendency in the latter half, it must be directed against persons who did not believe in the Virgin Birth. Palestine and especially trans-Jordanic Palestine would furnish opponents of all the classes mentioned; so that, if we should be obliged to depress the date to the second century, we have no reason to remove the composition to another locality than that which has already been suggested.

ODE 20.

¹I am a priest of the Lord, and to Him I do priestly service: and to Him I offer the sacrifice of His thought. ²For His thought is not like 'the thought of' the world nor 'the thought of' the flesh, nor like them that serve carnally. ³The sacrifice of the Lord is righteousness, and purity of heart and lips. ⁴Present your reins before Him blamelessly: and let not thy heart do violence to heart, nor thy soul to soul. ⁵Thou shalt not acquire a stranger by 'the price of thy silver'², neither shalt thou seek to devour thy neighbour³, ⁶neither shalt thou deprive him of the covering of his nakedness⁴. ⁷But put on the grace of the Lord without stint; and come into His Paradise and make thee a garland from its tree, ⁸and put it on thy head and be glad; and recline on His rest, and glory shall go before thee, ⁹and thou shalt receive of His kindness and of His grace; and thou shalt be flourishing⁵ in truth in the praise of His holiness. Praise and honour be to His name. Hallelujah.

¹ J. R. Harris, Ephrem on the Gospel, p. 31.

² Literally, by the blood of thy soul. I correct the Syriac, which is faulty, and has repeated 'thy soul' from the previous verse.

³ Cf. Exod. xxii. 24.

⁴ Exod. xxii. 26.

⁵ lit. fat.

ODE 20. This Psalm is a mixture of ethics and of mysticism, of the golden rule and of the tree of life. The writer, whether Jew or Christian, is wholly detached from external ritual; he calls himself a priest of God, but explains that this means the thinking of God's thought, and that the sacrifice he offers is the pure heart and life. He might be an Essene, one of that strange company who did not frequent the temple because they had purer sacrifices of their own. He drops a few ethical maxims, such as we find in the Pentateuch, protests against the owning of slaves (another Essene tenet) and against taking the neighbour's garment in pledge. Then he leaves morals and is away in search of the honey-dew and milk of Paradise. There glory waits the soul that enters into the Divine rest.

It is a beautiful Psalm, but one could not say of it, taken by itself, that it was necessarily Christian; though its affinities are with Psalms that are definitely Christian. For the sacrifices which the good man offers to God we may compare Lactantius, Div. Instit. vi. 25 'Donum est integritas animi; sacrificium, laus et hymnus: si enim Deus non videtur, ergo iis rebus coli debet, quae non videntur. Nulla igitur alia religio est vera, nisi quae virtute et justitia constat.'

In Clem. Alex. Strom. v. 11 the sacrifice is an ascetic life.

ODE 21.

¹My arms I lifted up to the Most High, even to the grace of the Lord: because He had cast off my bonds from me: and my Helper had lifted me up to His grace and to His salvation: ²and I put off darkness and clothed myself with light, ³and my soul acquired a body¹ free from sorrow or affliction or pains. ⁴And increasingly helpful to me was the thought of the Lord, and His fellowship in incorruption: ⁵and I was lifted up in His light; and I served before Him, ⁶and I became near to Him, praising and confessing Him; ⁷my heart ran over and was found in my mouth: and it arose upon my lips; and the exultation of the Lord increased on my face, and His praise likewise. Hallelujah.

ODE 21. This Psalm is short, and somewhat obscure. The reason for this lies in the fact that the writer is assuming a mystical explanation of the 'coats of skin' in the third chapter of Genesis, which are held to represent the ordinary human body which has replaced a body originally clad in light. See Ode 25 where the same idea of the acquisition of a Light-Body, and of its freedom from pain is more definitely expressed. It is impossible to decide definitely from the reading of the ¹ lit. there became members to my soul, etc.

Psalm whether it is Christian or Jewish: if the writer was a Christian, he was a very joyous Christian; if he was a Jew, he knew the salvation of Israel that comes out of Zion, and had the dew of Heaven upon his vineyard.

ODE 22.

¹He who brought me down from on high, also brought me up from the regions below; ²and He who gathers together the things that are betwixt is He also who cast me down: ³He who scattered my enemies and my adversaries: ⁴He who gave me authority over bonds that I might loose them; ⁵He that overthrew by my hands the dragon with seven heads¹: and thou hast set me over his roots that I might destroy his seed. ⁶Thou wast there and didst help me, and in every place thy name was a rampart to me². ⁷Thy right hand destroyed his wicked poison³; and thy hand levelled the way for those who believe in thee: ⁸and thou didst choose them from the graves and didst separate them from the dead. ⁹Thou didst take dead bones and didst cover them with bodies; ¹⁰they were motionless, and thou didst give them energy for life. ¹¹Thy way was without corruption, and thy face; thou didst bring⁴ thy world to corruption: that everything might be dissolved⁵, and then renewed, ¹²and that the foundation for everything might be thy rock⁶: and on it thou didst build thy Kingdom; and it became the dwelling-place of the saints. Hallelujah.

ODE 22. In this Psalm we seem to be nearer to the known Psalter of Solomon than elsewhere. There is a pointed reference to a dragon with seven heads whose seed is to be destroyed, and whose wicked poison has found its antidote in the Divine power. We think at once of the description of Pompey as the great dragon in the second of the published Psalms of Solomon. But dragons generally are difficult to identify. Who, for instance, is the dragon in Ps. lxxiii. (lxxiv.) 14 whose heads are broken? Is it Tiamat the Babylonian cosmic monster or the Leviathan whom the faithful are to eat in the last day, or is it a real person? In Ezekiel xxix. 3 it is Pharaoh of Egypt that is called the great dragon in the midst of the waters, but it might not be so easy to say which Pharaoh: any political monster may be a beast or a dragon:

¹ Cf. Apoc. xii. 3: and Pistis Sophia: see Introd. pp. 61—63.

² Reading  with the Coptic, so Diettrich and others.

³ Copt. the poison of the slanderer.

⁴ Following a correction of Flemming.

⁵ Cf. 2 Pet. iii. 11.

⁶ Cf. Matt. xvi. 18.

so in the present case we have to hunt around among the fallen gods to find him. There has evidently been a great slaughter of Jews for the writer uses the imagery of the Valley of Dry Bones in Ezekiel, in order to show that God can raise up His people from the gates of death: the ruin of all things becomes the occasion for a new Kingdom founded upon the rock.

The Psalm is one of those which are transferred to the pages of the Pistis Sophia where it is recited by Matthew from an Ode of Solomon. It is suggested by Ryle and James that the opening sentences are of a Gnostic character, from the allusion to things above and things below and things between. But the whole tenor of our Psalms is foreign to Gnosticism, and I do not see any reason to introduce it as a factor in the interpretation. If the Psalm is really the expression of some person triumphing over a fallen tyrant, or of Israel personified in such a situation, we have to search the political crises for such a time of trial and recovery. It is not easy to find the solution. The Hadrianic wars are too late, and they were followed by no recovery on the part of the Jews in Palestine. Antiochus Epiphanes is too early, in every respect. The next cases to examine are those of Pompey and Titus. Pompey is already known as the dragon, and the destruction of the dragon is historical. Titus on the other hand is a triumphant dragon without a subsequent collapse: nor does there seem to be in his case a sufficient recovery of Judaism to justify the triumphant language of the Odist. The statement that God levelled the way for those who believe in Him seems to imply a return from exile, in greater or less degree; but this also is not easy to justify from a historical point of view. [Bernard thinks the dragon is to be explained by Patristic gnosis of the defeat of the devil in the waters of Baptism, as in Cyril Cat. iii. 11 and the Baptismal rituals. I add to Dr Bernard's references one from a MS. of Moses Bar Kepha on Baptism, in my own collection: 'Our Lord was baptized that he might trample on the head of the spiritual dragon that lurked in the water etc.' The passage has been borrowed by Bar Šalibi, Comm. in Matt. p. 98. See Preface to this edition.]

ODE 23.

1 Joy is of the saints! and who shall put it on, but they alone? 2 Grace is of the elect! and who shall receive it except those who trust in it from the beginning? 3 Love is of the elect! And who shall put it on except those who have possessed it from the beginning? 4 Walk ye in the knowledge of the Most High without grudging: to His exultation and to the perfection of His knowledge. 5 And His thought was like a letter; His will descended from on high, and it was sent like an arrow which is violently shot from the bow: ⁶and many hands rushed to the letter to seize it and to take and read it: ⁷and it escaped their fingers and they were affrighted at it and at the seal that was upon it. ⁸Because it was not permitted to them to loose its seal: for the power that was over the seal was greater than they. ⁹But those who saw it went after the letter that they might know where it would alight, and who should read it and who should hear it. ¹⁰But a wheel received it and came over it: ¹¹and there was with it a sign of the Kingdom and of the Government: ¹²and everything which tried to move the wheel it mowed and cut down: ¹³and it gathered the multitude of adversaries, and bridged¹ the rivers and crossed over and rooted up many forests and made a broad path. ¹⁴The head went down to the feet, for down to the feet ran the wheel, and that which was a sign upon it. ¹⁵The letter was one of command, for there were included² in it all districts; ¹⁶and there was seen at its [?] head, the head which was revealed, even the Son of Truth from the Most High Father, ¹⁷and He inherited and took possession of everything. And the thought of the many was brought to nought, ¹⁸and all the apostates hasted and fled away. And those who persecuted and were enraged became extinct.

¹⁹And the letter was a great volume³, which was wholly written by the finger of God: ²⁰and the name of the Father was on it, and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, to rule for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

ODE 23. This is the most difficult of all the Psalms in the collection, and I have almost despaired of being able to explain it. It describes the descent from heaven of a sealed document, with a message from God in it. The description is something like that of the little sealed book in the Apocalypse, which no one can open, except the triumphant Lamb⁴. If the allusion in the Apocalypse is to some previous document which the author has incorporated, perhaps the same thing may be true here. Some book may have been published, claiming Divine Authority. What can it have been? A Gospel? An Apocalypse? It appeared suddenly, unexpectedly, and met with opposition rather than with universal acceptance. It came from the head and it went down to the feet. If we may use the language of a later Psalm in which the saints

¹ lit. covered.

² lit. gathered.

³ Or tablet.

⁴ Another parallel would be the letter sent from the home-land in Bardesanes' Hymn of the Soul in the Acts of Thomas.

in Hades are called the feet of Christ, we should say that the mysterious little book conveyed a message to those below from one above, and that it interpreted the region below to include the invisible world. Was the little book then a 'Descensus ad Inferos'? It is impossible to decide with certainty. It contained some pronounced statement concerning the Trinity, for we are expressly told that it had the name of Father, Son and Holy Ghost upon it. When any one writes in cipher, about a document which itself appears to have been written in cipher, for that is the natural meaning of a sealed book, we ought not to be surprised if it is not quite obvious, two thousand years later, what the writer meant or to what he was referring.

ODE 24.

¹The Dove fluttered over the Messiah, because He was her head; and she sang over Him and her voice was heard: ²and the inhabitants were afraid and the sojourners were moved: ³the birds dropped their wings, and all creeping things died in their holes: and the abysses were opened which had been hidden; and they cried to the Lord like women in travail: ⁴and no food was given to them, ¹because it did not belong to them¹; ⁵and they sealed up the abysses with the seal of the Lord². ³And they perished, in the thought, those that had existed from ancient times³; ⁶for they were corrupt from the beginning; and the end of their corruption was life⁴: ⁷and every one of them that was imperfect perished: for it was not possible to give ⁷them⁷ a word that they might remain: ⁸and the Lord destroyed the imaginations of all them that had not the truth with them. ⁹For they who in their hearts were lifted up were deficient in wisdom, and so they were rejected, because the truth was not with them. ¹⁰For the Lord disclosed His way, and spread abroad His grace: and those who understood it⁵, know His holiness. Hallelujah.

¹⁻¹ Or perhaps, because that which was non-existent belonged to them.

²⁻² U.-S.: und es versanken die Abgründe in der Versenkung des Herrn.

³⁻³ Fl.: und es gingen zugrunde durch diesen Gedanken sie, die vorher existiert hatten.

U.-S.: und es gingen durch jenen Gedanken die zugrunde, die vor alters gewesen waren.

⁴ Or, was the life of all; and whatever of them, etc.

⁵ sc. the way.

ODE 24. The Psalm opens with a reference to the Baptism of the Lord, when the Holy Spirit descended in the form of a Dove on the head of the Messiah. The occasion was one of great dread to all created things, man and beast and creeping things shared the terror. The abysses, personified as living creatures, cried out in pain. They were sealed up and ended, as belonging to the order of non-existent things. Men also whose hearts were proud were rejected, when the way of the Lord was revealed and His holiness known.

In this Psalm with its reference to the abysses, and the things which are not and are brought to nought, we seem to be nearer to the world of Gnostic ideas: but it would be difficult to say that any of the catch-words or peculiar terms of Gnosticism are here. If we are right in referring the Psalm to the Baptism of the Lord, we are only furnishing one more proof of the extraordinary prominence given to that event in the early Church, for which it was the beginning of the Gospel: and we need not be surprised that the event should be treated in many ways, both theological and hymnological.

If it is not the Baptism that is alluded to, it must be the Crucifixion, and in that case we must assume an unknown incident connected with the Crucifixion, comparable with the appearance of the Dove at the Baptism. In that case the plaint of the abysses is another allusion to the descent into Hades.

But there is a special reason why I feel sure that the Baptism must be the incident to which reference is made: I think we can say that a written Gospel has here been employed, but not a Canonical Gospel. It will be remembered that Justin Martyr in his Dialogue with Trypho, c. 88, takes his account of the Baptism from a source which is either uncanonical: or, if canonical, is interpolated. When Jesus went down into the water, a fire was kindled in the Jordan, and when He came up from the water, the Holy Spirit, like a dove, fluttered upon Him (ἐπιπτήναι ἐπ' αὐτὸν ὡς περισσετέραν τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα): and Justin says expressly that this was recorded by the Apostles of our Christ (ἔγραψαν οἱ ἀπόστολοι αὐτοῦ τούτου τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἡμῶν). This 'fluttering down' of the dove is very near indeed to the language of our Ode. Its ultimate origin is probably to be found in the language of Gen. i. 3.

It is well known that the account of the Baptism by Justin has been the centre of serious controversy, on account of the apocryphal expansions of the narrative, especially the reference to the Fire which appeared at the Jordan: and it has been argued, reasonably enough, that Justin cannot have used our Canonical Gospels, or at least must have used an uncanonical Gospel with them. The same difficulty turns up in the descent of the Dove, for the word ἐπιπτήναι, which recurs in Justin, must come from the written source which the author is using. A reference to Resch, Aussercanonische Parallele zu Luc. p. 15, will show the wide diffusion of the account from which Justin is working¹. The word ἐπιπτήναι can be traced in Celsus and in Origen and in the seventh book of Sibyllines, as well as in a number of Latin authors. The inference, therefore, is that a very early written Gospel is responsible for the detail: and it is this early Gospel that has been employed by the writer of the Ode. We conclude, then, that the reference is to the Baptism and that it is taken from a lost primitive Gospel. [If the Dove sang the words 'Thou art my beloved Son,' the Holy Spirit must be regarded as the mother of Jesus as in the Gospel according to the Hebrews. The same belief is involved in Ode 36.]

There is, however, a possible suggestion that the Psalm may refer to the Descent into Hades, and to the Baptism, as events happening in close connexion. I mean that it is not out of the region of reasonable criticism to suggest that in the earliest times the Baptism of Christ was the occasion of His triumph over Hades. We find suspicious hints of this in the Descensus ad Inferos. Thus in c. xx² we have a statement made by Seth concerning his father Adam that he will receive the oil of healing from Paradise in the last days: 'veniet enim amantissimus dei filius de caelis in mundum, et baptizabitur a Johanne in Jordane flumine, et tunc recipiet pater tuus Adam de hoc oleo misericordiae et omnes credentes in eum.'

And in c. xxi we find Jesus talking to John the Baptist concerning his Descent into Hades: 'Ego Johannes vocem patris de caelo super eum intonantem audiui et proclamantem, Hic est filius meus dilectus, in quo mihi bene complacuit. Ego ab eo responsum accepi quia ipse descensurus esset ad inferos.'

Here are two curious references connecting the Baptism and the Descent into Hades. And the question arises whether this 24th Ode may not look in the same direction. The evidence is, of course, inadequate, but the statement of the case may perhaps lead to the discovery of fresh evidence in the same direction.

ODE 25.

¹I was rescued from my bonds and unto thee, my God, I fled: ²for thou art the right hand of my Salvation and my helper. ³Thou hast restrained those that rise up against me, ⁴and I shall see him³ no more: because thy face was with me, which saved me by thy grace. ⁵But I was despised and rejected in the eyes of many: and I was in their eyes like lead⁴,

¹ See Introd. pp. 84, 85.

² Tischendorf, Ev. Apoc. p. 425.

³ l. them.

⁴ Cf. Sap. Sol. ii. 16 εἰς κίβδηλον ἐλογίσθημεν αὐτῷ.

⁶and strength was mine from thyself and help. ⁷Thou didst set me a lamp¹ at my right hand and at my left: and in me there shall be nothing that is not bright²: ⁸and I was clothed with the covering of thy Spirit, and thou didst remove from me my raiment of skin³; ⁹for thy right hand lifted me up and removed sickness from me: ¹⁰and I became mighty in the truth, and holy by thy righteousness; and all my adversaries were afraid of me; ¹¹and I became admirable by the name of the Lord, and was justified by His gentleness, and His rest is for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

ODE 25. In this Psalm we are back again in the region of personal experience, and there is no allusion to any definite historical event. The writer, whether Christian or Jew, has been brought out of spiritual bondage into liberty: he has had to face contempt and scorn, but the Lord has filled him with brightness and covered him with beauty, and given him health of mind and body: his enemies have turned back, and his portion is with the justified saints of the Most High. It is possible that this Psalm may be meant to express the experience of the Messiah, emerging from His conflicts into victory: in that case it need not be the Christian conception of the Messiah, but it might conceivably be such a human representation as we find in the Psalms of the Pharisees (e.g. Ps. 17, which is our Ps. 60). But our collection, as to its first block of Psalms, is certainly of a later period than the Pharisee Psalms, so we ought to hesitate before ascribing the same Messianic ideas to the two parts of the hymnal. For the allusion to the 'coat of skin,' see Introd. pp. 66—70, and cf. Ode 21.

ODE 26.

¹I poured out praise to the Lord, for I am His: ²and I will speak His holy song, for my heart is with Him. ³For His harp is in my hands, and the Odes of His rest shall not be silent. ⁴I will cry unto Him from my whole heart: I will praise and exalt Him with all my members. ⁵For from the east and even to the west is His praise: ⁶and from the south and even to the north is the confession of Him: ⁷and from the top of the hills to their utmost bound is His perfection. ⁸Who can write the Psalms of the Lord, or who read them? ⁹or who can train his soul for life, that his soul may be saved, ¹⁰or who can rest on the Most High, so that with His mouth he may speak? ¹¹Who is able to interpret the wonders of the Lord? ¹²For he who could interpret would be dissolved and would become that which is interpreted¹. ¹³For it suffices to know and to rest²: for in rest the singers stand, ¹⁴like a river which has an abundant fountain, and flows to the help of them that seek it³. Hallelujah.

¹ Ps. cxxxii. 17.

² lit. light.

³ Cp. Clem. Alex. Paed. i. 6, p. 117 τῆς κακίας ἐκδυσάμενοι τὸν χιτῶνα and Gen. iii. 21.

ODE 26. This beautiful song of praise recounts the goodness and greatness of the Lord. All within the writer magnifies the great Name, but all within is insufficient to tell out what waits to be told. His praise is widespread to the utmost bound of earth and beyond the bound of the everlasting hills. The creature cannot express God's praise perfectly; if he could, he would be no longer a creature: he would be the Word, and not the interpreter of the Word. So it suffices to know and to rest, while at our feet the river of grace rolls on, an unchanging flood:

Labitur et labetur in omne volubilis aevum.

It is impossible to say whether the Psalm, as detached from the rest of the collection, is Jewish or Christian.

ODE 27.

¹I stretched out my hands and sanctified my Lord⁴: ²for the extension of my hands is His sign: ³and my expansion is the upright tree (or cross).

ODE 27. This tiny Psalm is Christian, and is based upon the early Christian fondness for finding the Cross everywhere in the outward world: in the handle of the labourer's plough, in the mast and yards of the seaman's ship; and in the human body, when the man stands erect in the act of prayer with outstretched arms. There can, therefore, be no doubt that this is a Christian Psalm, and the figurative language which it employs is characteristic of the second century and not unknown in the first century. Justin Martyr, for example, sees the

¹ Cf. Lactantius, Div. Inst. praef.: 'there would be no difference between God and man, if human thought could reach to the counsels and arrangements of that eternal Majesty.'

² Cf. Clem. Alex. Paed. i. 6 (p. 115) ὥστε ἡ μὲν γνώσις ἐν τῷ φωτισματι· τὸ δὲ πέρας τῆς γνώσεως, ἡ ἀνάπαυσις.

³ Cf. Lactantius, Div. Inst. iv. 30 'Si quis aquam vitae cupiat haurire, non ad detritos lacus deferatur, qui non habent venam, sed uberrimum Dei noverit fontem, quo irrigatus perenni luce potiatur.'

⁴ U.-S.: und heiligte [sic] meinem Herrn.

Cross, in the outspread arms of Moses in the battle against Amalek ; but so does Barnabas also : and the same thought is involved in the conclusion of the Teaching of the Apostles, where an outspread cross in the sky is one of the signs of the Advent and answers to the Sign of the Son of Man in Matthew. So it is very likely that the figure in our Psalm is one of the oldest forms of Christian symbolic teaching. We shall find it used again in the 42nd Psalm which may, therefore, be by the same hand as the present one : otherwise it would be an imitation of it.

Those who care to have a Gnostic example of the use of this widespread Christian figure, will find one in Schmidt, Unbekanntes altgnostisches Werk (l.c. p. 336) : 'Die Haare seines Gesichtes sind die Zahl der äusseren Welten, und die Ausbreitung seiner Hände ist die Offenbarung des Kreuzes.'

ODE 28.

¹As the wings of doves over their nestlings ; and the mouth of their nestlings towards their mouths, ²so also are the wings of the Spirit over my heart : ³my heart is delighted and exults : like the babe who exults¹ in the womb of his mother² : ⁴I believed ; therefore I was at rest ; for faithful is He in whom I have believed : ⁵He has richly blessed me and my head is with Him : and the sword shall not divide me from Him, nor the scimitar ; ⁶for I am ready before destruction comes : and I have been set on His immortal³ pinions : ⁷and immortal life has come forth and given me to drink⁴, and from that life is the spirit within me, and it cannot die, for it lives. ⁸They who saw me marvelled at me, because I was persecuted, and they supposed that I was swallowed up : for I seemed to them as one of the lost ; ⁹and my oppression became my salvation ; and I was their reprobation because there was no zeal in me⁵ ; ¹⁰because I did good to every man I was hated, ¹¹and they came round me like mad dogs⁶, who ignorantly attack their masters, ¹²for their thought is corrupt and their understanding perverted. ¹³But I was carrying water in my right hand⁷, and their bitterness⁸ I

¹ Or, leaps.

² Cf. Luke i. 41.

³ lit. pinions without corruption.

⁴ Reading ~~habe~~. Fl.: has kissed me. So U.-S.

⁵ Perhaps because I was not a Zealot.

⁶ Ps. xxii. 16.

⁷ Query 'that I might put out their flame.'

⁸ As water is plural, Fl. would refer the bitterness to it ; but Zahn says : 'das pluralische Suffix an dem Worte Bitterkeit ist selbstverständlich nicht mit Fl. auf das Wasser zu beziehen.'

endured by my sweetness; ¹⁴and I did not perish, for I was not their brother nor was my birth like theirs, ¹⁵and they sought for my death and did not find it: for I was older than the memorial of them; ¹⁶and vainly did they make attack upon me¹ and those who, without reward, came after me²: ¹⁷they sought to destroy the memorial of him who was before them: ¹⁸for the thought of the Most High cannot be anticipated: and His heart is superior to all wisdom. Hallelujah.

ODE 28. This exquisite Psalm has the music in it of the 'Quis separabit?' of Romans viii. Nor sword nor scimitar divide the believer from the Lord. In some respects the Psalm appears to be Messianic in a Christian sense, for the writer concludes his exulting strain over enemies who had come round him like mad dogs and had left him for dead, with the remark that it was not possible for them to blot out the memory of one who existed before them, and who was of a different birth from theirs. He also speaks of their attacks as having been directed against his followers as well as himself. Perhaps, then, the writer is speaking, in these verses, as if in the person of Christ.

ODE 29.

¹The Lord is my hope: in Him I shall not be confounded.
²For according to His praise He made me, and according to His goodness even so He gave unto me: ³and according to His mercies He exalted me: and according to His excellent beauty He set me on high: ⁴and brought me up out of the depths of Sheol: and from the mouth of death He drew me: ⁵and thou didst lay my enemies low, and He justified me by His grace.
⁶For I believed in the Lord's Messiah³: and it appeared to me that He is the Lord; ⁷and He showed him⁴ His sign: and He led me by His light, and gave me the rod of His power; ⁸that I might subdue the imaginations of the peoples; and the power of the men of might to bring them low: ⁹to make war by His word, and to take victory by His power. ¹⁰And the Lord overthrew my enemy by His word; and he became like the stubble which the wind carries away; ¹¹and I gave praise to the Most High because He exalted 'me' His servant and the son of His handmaid. Hallelujah.

¹ The margin suggests, slaughtering me: i.e. reading  for the marginal  (cast lots).

² Or, who came after me. To no purpose they sought, etc.

³ Or, Christ.

⁴ Query me?

ODE 29. Some one wrote this Psalm, who was a follower of the Christ and had recognised Him to be the Lord. Out of great conflicts he had been brought into the place of victory: his enemies had become like the straw before the wind: he has passed through deep distresses, which he speaks of figuratively as the pains of Sheol and the gates of death. But for the reference to the Lordship of the Messiah and to faith in Him, we might have imagined this Psalm to belong to the ancient Psalter: we shall be justified in regarding it as a Judaeo-Christian composition.

ODE 30.

¹Fill ye waters for yourselves from the living fountain of the Lord, for it is opened to you: ²and come all ye thirsty, and take the draught; and rest by the fountain of the Lord. ³For fair it is and pure and gives rest to the soul. Much more pleasant are its waters than honey; ⁴and the honeycomb of bees is not to be compared with it. ⁵For it flows forth from the lips of the Lord and from the heart of the Lord is its name. ⁶And it came infinitely and invisibly: and until it was set¹ in the midst they did not know it: ⁷blessed are they who have drunk therefrom and have found rest thereby. Hallelujah.

ODE 30. The Psalm is an invitation to the thirsty, somewhat in the manner of Isaiah lv. The water of life, which here is explained to be the teaching of the Lord, is flowing from an open fountain, whose waters, to use the language of the 19th Psalm in the canonical Psalter, are 'sweeter than honey and the honeycomb.' The Ode is not so far removed from Old Testament thought and expression that we can positively call it a Christian composition. The writer is fond of the similitude of honey and the honeycomb: we find it, for instance, again in our fortieth Ode, where we have it for the opening similitude:

'Like the honey that drops from the comb of the bees.....so is my hope on thee, O God.'

But this Psalm, also, appears, at first sight, to be destitute of specific Christian colouring.

The fountain, however, whose waters come without limit, and invisibly, corresponds to the unexpected appearance of Christ and Christ's teaching in the world, when there stood in the midst One whom they knew not.

¹ lit. given.

ODE 31,

¹The abysses were dissolved before the Lord : and darkness was destroyed by His appearance : ²error went astray and perished at His hand : ³and folly found no path to walk in¹, and was submerged by the truth of the Lord. ⁴He opened His mouth and spake grace and joy : and He spake a new song of praise to His name : ⁵and He lifted up His voice to the Most High, and offered to Him the sons that were with Him². ⁶And His face was justified, for thus His holy Father had given to Him. ⁷Come forth, ye that have been afflicted and receive joy, and possess your souls by His grace ; and take to you immortal life. ⁸And they made me a debtor when I rose up, me who had not been a debtor³ : and they divided my spoil, though nothing was due to them. ⁹But I endured and held my peace and was silent⁴, as if not moved by them. ¹⁰But I stood unshaken like a firm rock which is beaten by the waves and endures. ¹¹And I bore their bitterness for humility's sake : ¹²in order that I might redeem my people, and inherit it, and that I might not make void my promises to the fathers⁵, to whom I promised the salvation of their seed. Hallelujah.

ODE 31. The Psalm is Messianic, and records how the Christ fulfilled the promises which, in a pre-existent state, He had made to the fathers. He has closed the abysses and banished error and vanity. With a new song in His mouth, He appears before God with the children whom God has given Him. His similitude is the rock against which the waves had beaten in vain. It stands firm, whether the waves advance or retire. Here Christian speech comes near to the language of the Stoics. One thinks of Marcus Aurelius, and his advice to 'be like the promontory against which the waves continually break, but it stands firm and tames the fury of the water around it⁶.' One thinks also of Ignatius, and his advice 'to stand steady like the beaten anvil⁷.' For the opening sentences about the destroying of the abysses, we must compare the language of the 24th Psalm of our collection, where the abysses cry out in pain at the time of the Baptism of the Lord. These Psalms are by the same Christian hand.

¹⁻¹ lit. and folly, there was given her no path.

² lit. in His hands. Cf. Is. viii. 18; Heb. ii. 13.

³ 2 Cor. v. 21. Perhaps we should translate 'a criminal.'

⁴ 1 Pet. ii. 23.

⁵ Rom. xv. 8; Luke i. 55.

⁶ Medit. iv. 49.

⁷ ad Polyc. 3.

ODE 32.

¹To the blessed there is joy from their hearts, and light from Him that dwells in them : ²and words from the Truth, who was self-originate¹: for He is strengthened by the holy power of the Most High: and He is unperturbed for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

ODE 32. Joy, Light, Inspiration, Strength and Calmness belong to the believer through Him that dwells within.

ODE 33.

¹Again Grace ran and forsook corruption, and came down in Him to bring it to nought ; ²and He destroyed perdition from before Him, and devastated all its order ; ³and He stood on a lofty summit² and uttered His voice from one end of the earth to the other : ⁴and drew to Him all those who obeyed Him ; and there did not appear as it were an evil person, ⁵but there stood a perfect virgin³ who was proclaiming and calling and saying, ⁶O ye sons of men⁴, return ye, and ye daughters of men, come ye : ⁷and forsake the ways of that corruption and draw near unto me, and I will enter into you, and will bring you forth from perdition, ⁸and make you wise in the ways of truth : that you be not destroyed nor perish : ⁹hear ye me and be redeemed. For the grace of God I am telling among you : and by my means you shall be redeemed and become blessed. ¹⁰I am your judge ; and they who have put me on shall not be injured : but they shall possess the new world that is incorrupt : ¹¹my chosen ones walk in me, and my ways I will make known to them that seek me, and I will make them trust in my name. Hallelujah.

ODE 33. Apparently this Psalm is Messianic, though Christ is not named. He must be the one that rises from the dead and sends forth his triumphant voice to the ends of the earth. A virgin also stands and proclaims, who must be either the Divine Wisdom (the language is

¹ Gk. αὐτοφύης, as in the oracular reply to the enquiry as to the Divine Nature, αὐτοφύης, ἀδίδακτος, ἀμήτωρ, ἀστυφέλικτος. See Lact. De Div. Inst. i. 7.

² Prov. viii. 2.

³ Prov. viii. 1.

⁴ Prov. viii. 4.

very like that of the eighth chapter of Proverbs) or the Church¹. She promises salvation by Divine Grace and immortality in a new world to those that walk in her ways.

ODE 34.

¹No way is hard where there is a simple heart. ²Nor is there any wound where the thoughts are upright : ³nor is there any storm in the depth of the illuminated thought : ⁴where one is surrounded on every side by beauty, there is nothing that is divided. ⁵The likeness of what is below is that which is above ; for everything is above : what is below is nothing but the imagination of those that are without knowledge. ⁶Grace has been revealed for your salvation. Believe and live and be saved. Hallelujah.

ODE 34. All the hard things are easy, where the soul itself is right: no storms invade the hidden place of communion with God. Evil itself becomes unreal, and that which is beneath exists not before that which is above.

ODE 35.

¹The dew of the Lord in quietness He distilled upon me : ²and the cloud of peace He caused to rise over my head, which guarded me continually ; ³it was to me for salvation : everything was shaken and they were affrighted ; ⁴and there came forth from them a smoke and a judgment ; and I was keeping quiet in the order of the Lord : ⁵more than shelter was He to me, and more than foundation. ⁶And I was carried like a child by his mother : ⁷and He gave me milk, the dew of the Lord² : ⁷and I grew great by His bounty, and rested in His perfection, ⁸and I spread out my hands in the lifting up of my soul : and I was made right with the Most High, and I was redeemed with Him. Hallelujah.

ODE 35. The dew lies on the branch of the man that sings this Psalm : Divine Peace guards him like a sheltering cloud. The Lord is his sure defence in the day of evil. Mother's arms are his place and mother's milk his portion. 'No cradled child more softly lies than I : Come soon, eternity.'

¹ Or Prov. i. 20. Cf. Clem. Alex. Paed. i. 6 (p. 123) μία δὲ μόνη γίνεταί μήτηρ Παρθένος : 'Εκκλησίαν ἐμοὶ φίλον αὐτὴν καλεῖν. See also Introd. p. 77.

²⁻² Or, and the dew of the Lord gave me milk. U.-S.

ODE 36.

¹I rested on the Spirit of the Lord : and ²the Spirit raised me on high : ³and made me stand on my feet in the height of the Lord, before His perfection and His glory, while I was praising ⁴Him by the composition of His songs. ⁵The Spirit brought me forth before the face of the Lord : and, although a son of man, I was named the Illuminate, the Son of God : ⁶while I praised amongst the praising ones, and great was I amongst the mighty ones. ⁷For according to the greatness of the Most High, so He made me : and like His own newness He renewed me ; and He anointed me from His own perfection : ⁸and I became one of His neighbours ; and my mouth was opened, like a cloud of dew ; ⁹and my heart poured out as it were a gushing stream of righteousness, ¹⁰and ¹¹my access to Him was in peace ; and I was established by the spirit of His government. Hallelujah.

ODE 36. This is a perplexing Psalm, from a theological point of view. It is almost impossible to determine whether the Psalmist is speaking in his own name, or in that of the Messiah ; or whether it is an alternation of one with the other. It seems almost a necessity, when the Holy Spirit is spoken of as a Mother, that the offspring should be the Son of God : and that such was the theology of certain early believers we know from the fragment of the Ebionite Gospel, in which Christ speaks of being taken by the hair of His head by His mother, the Holy Spirit, and carried to Mount Tabor. If this be the right interpretation, then the Illuminated Son of God is Christ. But the latter part of the Psalm seems to be in too low a strain for this interpretation : to be one of those who are near to God is certainly not orthodox theology, though it may conceivably be Adoptionist : and the heart that pours out righteousness and makes its offering in peace seems rather to be the language that describes one of the pious in Israel.

ODE 37.

¹I stretched out my hands to my Lord : and to the Most High I raised my voice : ²and I spake with the lips of my heart ; and He heard me, when my voice reached Him : ³His answer came to me, and gave me the fruits of my labours ; ⁴and it gave me rest by the grace of the Lord. Hallelujah.

¹⁻¹ Or perhaps, my offering.

² lit. fell to Him.

ODE 37. A colourless Psalm, something like one of the shorter and more elementary Psalms of the Hebrew Psalter. The writer has cried to God: his prayer has been heard: his heart has appealed, and an answer has come. His work has been followed by Divine blessing.

ODE 38.

¹I went up to the light of truth as if into a chariot: ²and the Truth took me and led me: and carried me across pits and gulleys; and from the rocks and the waves it preserved me: ³and it became to me a haven of Salvation: and set me on the arms of immortal life: ⁴and it went with me and made me rest, and suffered me not to wander, because it was the Truth; ⁵and I ran no risk, because I walked with Him; ⁶and I did not make an error in anything because I obeyed the Truth. ⁷For Error flees away from it, and meets it not: but the Truth proceeds in the right path, and ⁸whatever I did not know, it made clear to me, all the poisons of error, and the plagues of death which they think to be sweetness: ⁹and I saw the destroyer of destruction, when the bride who is corrupted is adorned; and the bridegroom who corrupts and is corrupted; ¹⁰and I asked the Truth, 'Who are these?'; and He said to me, This is the deceiver and the error; ¹¹Joh. 7 and they are alike in the beloved and in his bride: and they lead astray and corrupt the 'whole' world: ¹²and they invite many to the banquet, ¹³and give them to drink of the wine of their intoxication, and remove¹ their wisdom and knowledge, and 'so they' make them without intelligence; ¹⁴and then they leave them; and then these go about like madmen corrupting: seeing that they are without heart, nor do they seek for it. ¹⁵And I was made wise so as not to fall into the hands of the deceiver; and I congratulated myself because the Truth went with me, ¹⁶and I was established and lived and was redeemed, ¹⁷and my foundations were laid on the hand of the Lord: because He established me. ¹⁸For He set the root and watered it and fixed it and blessed it; and its fruits are for ever. ¹⁹It struck deep and sprung up and spread out, and was full and enlarged; ²⁰and the Lord alone was glorified in His planting and in His husbandry: by His care and by the blessing of His lips, ²¹by the beautiful planting of His right hand²: and by the discovery¹ of His planting, and by the thought of His mind. Hallelujah.

¹ lit. they vomit up.² Is. lx. 21.

ODE 38. The Psalm opens with a beautiful description of the power of the truth over those that surrender to it. Truth becomes to them guidance in all difficult and rough and dangerous places. But the Psalm is not merely a Psalm of the Truth, it is a Psalm concerning Truth and Error. They appear to stand like Christ and Antichrist. We are tempted to believe that the writer had at one time been brought face to face with some special outbreak of erroneous teaching, one of the many Antichrists of the first century. There are some things which suggest Simon Magus and his Helena, who went about to mislead the faithful. It is, however, useless to try and define the situation more closely. Whatever form the attractions of Truth and Error took to the Psalmist, he tells us that he escaped the Circean blandishments, and sailed past the Sirens. His foundations were in the holy mountain; his growth was in God and of God. God planted, God watered, God gave the increase. The Father was the husbandman.

ODE 39.

¹Great rivers are the power of the Lord²: ²and they carry headlong those who despise Him: and entangle their paths: ³and they sweep away their fords, and catch their bodies and destroy their lives. ⁴For they are more swift than lightning and more rapid, and those who cross them in faith are not moved; ⁵and those who walk on them without blemish shall not be afraid. ⁶For the sign in them is the Lord; and the sign is the way of those who cross in the name of the Lord; ⁷put on, therefore, the name of the Most High, and know Him: and you shall cross without danger, for the rivers will be subject to you. ⁸The Lord has bridged them by His word; and He walked and crossed them on foot³: ⁹and His footsteps stand 'firm' on the water, and are not injured; they are as firm as a tree that is truly set up. ¹⁰And the waves were lifted up on this side and on that, but the footsteps of our Lord Messiah stand firm and are not obliterated and are not defaced. ¹¹And a way has been appointed for those who cross after Him and for those who adhere to⁴ the course of faith in Him and worship His name⁵. Hallelujah.

¹ Or perhaps, reading ~~showing~~ with Schulthess, 'by the splendour of His planting.'

² Is. xliii. 2.

³ Matt. xiv. 25.

⁴ I follow the correction of Flemming.

⁵ Cf. Matt. xiv. 28.

ODE 39. When I first read this Psalm I thought that we had another historical landmark, in the allusion to some great accident connected with the sudden rise of one of the great Oriental rivers. But upon reflection, I have come to the conclusion that the writer is speaking of disasters generally, under the natural figure of a rising and rushing river. In such times of flood the unbelievers find no footing and are swept away: believers on the other hand walk the waters like their Lord and with their Lord. Perhaps there is a reference to Isaiah xliii. 2, 'When thou passest through the waters I will be with thee.' The same promise appears to be quoted in Psalms of Solomon vi. 5, 'When he passeth through rivers, yea, through the surge of the sea, he is not affrighted.' Their feet stand firm where His feet had stood unmoved. Here the background of the teaching is the account of our Lord's walking on the sea of Galilee. The reference is valuable¹, for we have hardly any other allusion to events recorded in the Gospel, beyond the Birth, Baptism and Crucifixion, to which we have already referred. The paucity of parallels to the New Testament in the new Psalter should be one of the strongest reasons for believing that, as regards the major part of the collection, we are dealing with very early material.

ODE 40.

¹As the honey distils from the comb of the bees, ²and the milk flows from the woman that loves her children³; ³so also is my hope on Thee, my God. ⁴As the fountain gushes out its water, ⁵so my heart gushes out the praise of the Lord and my lips utter praise to Him, and my tongue His psalms. ⁶And my face exults with His gladness, and my spirit exults in His love, and my soul shines in Him: ⁷and reverence confides in Him; and redemption in Him stands assured: ⁸and His inheritance³ is immortal life, and those who participate in it are incorrupt. Hallelujah.

ODE 40. One may say of the writer in the language of St Bernard: 'Inebriantur ab ubertate domus tuae et torrente voluptatis tuae potabis eos (Ps. xxxv. 9). O quanta amoris vis! quanta in spiritu libertatis fiducia.' Praise flows out of his life and from his lips as honey drops from the comb or milk from the breast. God's gladness makes his face without to shine, and his soul within to be radiant. If mortality is not quite swallowed up of life, it is irradiated by it. There is assurance of faith and the confident hope of immortality.

¹ Moreover, if Peter's walking on the sea is involved in the reference of the Odist, it is not Mark's gospel that is being quoted, nor any of the canonical four except Matthew.

² Cf. Clem. Alex. Paed. i. 6 (p. 119) φιλοστόργους πηγάζουσα μαστοῖς.

³ Following the emendation of Charles.

ODE 41.

¹All the Lord's children will praise Him, and will collect the truth of His faith. ²And His children shall be known to Him. Therefore we will sing in His love: ³we live in the Lord by His grace: and life we receive in His Messiah: ⁴for a great day has shined upon us: and marvellous is He who has given us of His glory. ⁵Let us, therefore, all of us unite together in the name of the Lord, and let us honour Him in His goodness, ⁶and let our faces shine in His light: and let our hearts meditate in His love by night and by day. ⁷Let us exult with the joy of the Lord. ⁸All those will be astonished that see me. For from another race am I: ⁹for the Father of truth remembered me: He who possessed me from the beginning: ¹⁰for His bounty begat me, and the thought of His heart: ¹¹and His Word is with us in all our way; ¹²the Saviour who makes alive and does not reject our souls: ¹³the man who was humbled, and exalted by His own righteousness, ¹⁴the Son of the Most High appeared in the perfection of His Father; ¹⁵and light dawned from the Word that was beforetime in Him; ¹⁶the Messiah is truly one¹; and He was known before the foundation of the world, ¹⁷that He might save souls for ever by the truth of His name: a new song 'arises' from those who love Him. Hallelujah.

ODE 41. This Psalm, again, is Messianic, but certainly not in the prophetic sense. The writer knows that the Son of God is come. The glorious day of which prophets spoke has dawned: the dayspring from on high has become the noontide glory. Christ who was humbled is now exalted; the Word, who existed before the foundation of the world, has appeared. The language finds its nearest parallel in the Johannine theology.

It is not, at first sight, quite clear what the writer means by being sprung from another race². Is it that he is of Gentile origin and persuaded to dwell in the tents of Shem? That would agree well with the general Palestinian origin of the Psalms. In that case he has become sufficiently Hebraized to sing Zion's songs in a Zionite manner: and to praise God night and day, where a Gentile would naturally have done it by day and night.

¹ Cf. Ign. ad Magn. γ ἐστὶν Ἰησοῦς Χριστός.

² But see Introd. p. 66.

ODE 42.

¹I stretched out my hands and approached my Lord: ²for the stretching of my hands is His sign: ³my expansion is the outspread tree which was set up on the way of the Righteous One¹. ⁴And I² became of no account to those who did not take hold of me; and I shall be with those who love me. ⁵All my persecutors are dead; and they sought after me who hoped in me, because I was alive: ⁶and I rose up and am with them; and I will speak by their mouths. ⁷For they have despised those who persecuted them; ⁸and I lifted up over them the yoke of my love; ⁹like the arm of the bridegroom over the bride, ¹⁰so was my yoke³ over those that know me: ¹¹and as the couch that is spread in the house of the ⁴bridegroom and bride⁴, ¹²so is my love over those that believe in me. ¹³And I was not rejected though I was reckoned to be so. ¹⁴I did not perish, though they devised 'it' against me. ¹⁵Sheol saw me and was made miserable: ¹⁶death cast me up and many along with me. ¹⁷I⁵ had gall and bitterness⁶, and I went down with him to the utmost of his⁷ depth: ¹⁸and the feet and the head he let go, for they were not able to endure my face: ¹⁹and I made a congregation of living men amongst his dead men, and I spake with them by living lips: ²⁰because my word shall not be void: ²¹and those who had died ran towards me: and they cried and said, Son of God, have pity on us, and do with us according to thy kindness, ²²and bring us out from the bonds of darkness: and open to us the door by which we shall come out to thee. ²³For we see that our death has not touched thee. ²⁴Let us also be redeemed with thee: for thou art our

¹ Zahn thinks the text of this verse has been altered, and suggests אֲדִיכָא כְּמִיכָא, 'on which the Beloved was hanged.'

² Christ speaks.

³ Matt. xi. 29.

⁴⁻⁵ lit. bridegrooms.

⁵ Cod. He.

⁶ Cf. Descensus ad Inferos 4 'They crucified him, and gave him gall and vinegar to drink. Be ready, therefore, to hold him firmly when he cometh.' Flemming objects to the correction which I have made in the text, and says we should render 'I was gall and bitterness to him.' So U.-S. Probably this is the right sense of the passage: but I am not quite satisfied.

⁷ or its: sc. Sheol's.

Redeemer. ²⁵And I heard their voice; and my name I sealed upon their heads: ²⁶for they are free men and they are mine. Hallelujah.

ODE 42. This Psalm concludes the collection of Odes ascribed to Solomon: what follows is the extant book of Solomonic Psalms. The collection up to the present point is marked in each case with a final Hallelujah. The remaining Psalms, with one accidental exception, are not marked this way. So we may add the editorial remark at the end of this Psalm, that 'the Odes of Solomon, the Son of David, are ended.'

The concluding Psalm is Christian and Messianic: its main theme is the descent of Christ into Hades in order to liberate the imprisoned souls of the fathers: and it should be read along with the extant apocryphal books that deal with this subject.

Almost the whole of the Psalm is ex ore Christi: the writer begins, as in the short 29th Ode, with the statement that his lifted hands make the figure of the Cross of the Righteous One. But he soon diverges into the harrowing of hell. The imprisoned souls cry out for release to Him over whom death, which binds them, has no power. A congregation of saints is gathered in the place of the dead. They become Christ's free men. Incidentally an expression is used of their relation to the Lord which appears to be employed elsewhere: they are called, not the members, but the feet of the Lord. Hades disgorges both the head and the feet: the head is, of course, Christ; and the feet are the saints of old time¹. [For v. 18 we may compare Acta Thomae c. 156 οὐ τὴν θεὸν οὐκ ἤνεγκαν οἱ τοῦ θανάτου ἄρχοντες.]

The Psalm is too highly evolved, in its imaginary treatment of the Descent into Hell, to be reckoned as belonging to the same period as the main body of the collection. Still it cannot be very much later, for its mystical language is in close agreement with many of the most beautiful of the Psalms before us: and the union of Christ with the Church, under the figure of the Bridegroom and the Bride, is expressed with great beauty. Incidentally the textual critic will find something suggestive for his New Testament apparatus. The writer speaks of 'the couch that is spread in the house of the bridegrooms,' marking the plural by dots in the usual Syriac manner: it is evident that he means 'in the house of the bridegroom and the bride.' Perhaps, then, the curious Western reading of Matt. xxv. 1, 'went out to meet the bridegroom and the bride,' may be due to a more accurate interpretation of an Aramaic original than what we find in the received and edited texts.

¹ Cf. Ode 23.

PSALM 43 = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 1.

¹I cried unto the Lord, when I was in affliction at my end ; and to God when sinners set upon me : ²for suddenly there was heard before me the sound of war : for He will hear me, because I am filled with righteousness : ³and I reckoned in my heart that I was filled with righteousness : in the day that I became rich and was with the multitude of my children. ⁴Their wealth, however, has been given to the whole earth : and their glory as far as the ends of the earth. ⁵They were lifted up as high as the stars : and they said, ⁶speaking without knowledge.... ⁷For their sins were in secret, and I knew them not : ⁸and their wickedness exceeded that of the nations that had been before them : and they defiled the sanctuary of the Lord with pollution.

PSALM 44 = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 2.

¹In the insolence of the sinful man, he cast down with battering rams¹ the strong walls and thou didst not restrain him. ²And the Gentile foreigners went up on thy altar, and were trampling on it with their shoes in their insolence. ³For the children of Jerusalem had polluted the Holy House of the Lord : and they were profaning the offerings ⁴to God² with wickedness. ⁴Wherefore He said, Remove them, cast them away from me. And He did not establish with them the beauty of His glory : ⁵it was rejected before the Lord : and they were utterly torn in pieces. ⁶Her sons and her daughters were in bitter captivity : and on their neck was put the sealed yoke of the Gentiles : ⁷according to their sins, so He dealt with them : for He suffered them to pass into the hand of him that was stronger than they : ⁸for He turned away His face from His mercy : young men and old men and their children together : ⁹because they also had worked evil together, that they might not hearken unto me : ¹⁰and the heaven was mightily angered, and the earth rejected them : ¹¹because none in the earth had done therein like their doings : ¹²and that the earth may know all thy righteous judgments, O God. ¹³They set up the sons of Jerusalem for mockery within her, in the place of harlots ; and every one that transgressed¹, was transgressing as if before the sun : while they made sport in their villainies, as they were used to do. ¹⁴In the face of the sun they made a show of their villainies. And the daughters of Jerusalem were polluted according to thy judgments ; ¹⁵for they had polluted themselves in lustful intercourse. My belly and my bowels are pained over these things. ¹⁶But I will justify thee, O Lord, in the uprightness of my heart ; because in thy judgments is thy righteousness, O God. ¹⁷For thou dost reward sinful men according to their deeds : and according to their wicked and bitter sins. ¹⁸Thou didst disclose their sins, in order that thy judgment might be known : ¹⁹and Thou didst blot out their remembrance from the earth. God is a judge and righteous, and accepteth no man's person. ²⁰For the Gentiles reproached Jerusalem, in their wickedness, and her beauty was cut off from the throne of His² glory. ²¹And she was covered with sackcloth instead of beauteous raiment : and there was a rope on her head instead of a crown. ²²She cast off from her the dazzling³ glory which God had put upon her : ²³and in contempt her beauty was cast away on the ground. ²⁴And I beheld and I besought the face of the Lord, and I said : Enough ! Thou hast made thy hand heavy, O Lord, upon Israel, by the bringing in of the Gentiles : ²⁵for they have mocked and not pitied, in anger ; ²⁶and in reproach they are consumed, unless thou, O Lord, shalt restrain them in thy wrath. ²⁷For it was not in zeal that they did 'this', but in the lust of the soul : ²⁸that they might pour out their wrath upon us in plundering us. But thou, O Lord, delay not to recompense them upon their own heads : ²⁹to cast down the pride of the dragon to contempt. ³⁰And I delayed not until the Lord showed me his insolence smitten on the mountains of Egypt : and despised more than him that is least on land and on sea : ³¹and his body coming on the waves in much contempt, and none to bury him'. ³²Because He had rejected him with scorn, for he did not consider that he is a man. And the end he did not regard. ³³For he said; I will be lord of land and sea: and he knew not that the Lord is God, great and mighty and powerful, ³⁴and He is King over Heaven and over Earth: and He judges kingdoms and princes, ³⁵He who raiseth me up in glory and layeth low¹ the proud in contempt, not temporal but eternal; because they knew Him 'not'.

¹ lit. great beams.

²⁻³ lit. of God.

¹ Or, passed by.² Gk. her.³ Gk. her diadem of glory.

³⁶And now, behold, ye great ones of the earth, the judgment of the Lord, for He is a righteous King, and judges what is under the whole heaven. ³⁷Bless ye the Lord, ye who fear the Lord reverently: for the mercies of the Lord are on them that fear Him with judgment, ³⁸to separate between the righteous and the sinful, and to reward the sinful for ever according to their deeds: ³⁹and to be gracious to the righteous after their oppression by sinners: and to reward the sinful for what he has done that is right: ⁴⁰because the Lord is kind to those that call upon Him in patience, to do according to His mercy to His saints: so as to stand before Him at all times in strength. ⁴¹Blessed is the Lord for ever by His servants.

PSALM 45 = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 3.

¹Why sleepest thou, my soul, and dost not bless the Lord?
²Sing a new song to God and keep vigil in His watch. For a psalm is good 'to sing' to God out of a good heart. ³The righteous will ever make mention of the Lord: in confession and in righteousness are the judgments of the Lord. ⁴The righteous will never neglect², when he is chastened by the Lord: because his will is always before the Lord. ⁵The righteous stumbles and justifies God: he falls and I wait³ what the Lord will do to him. ⁶And he looks to see from whence his salvation comes. ⁷The stability of the righteous is from God their Saviour: for in the house of the righteous there does not lodge sin upon sin: ⁸because He always visits the house of the righteous to remove the sins of his transgressions. ⁹And He delivers his soul, in whatever he has sinned without knowledge, by fasting and by humiliation: ¹⁰and the Lord purifies every holy man and his house.

¹ Gk. κοιμῶ and so Syr.

² = Gk. ἀλιγνώσει: cf. Prov. iii. 11; Heb. xii. 5.

³ Read, 'and he waits.'

¹¹But the sinner stumbleth and curseth his own life, and the day in which he was born: and the birth-pangs of his mother; ¹²and he adds sin upon sin to his life: ¹³he falls, and because his fall is grievous, he rises not again: for the destruction of the sinner is for ever: ¹⁴and He will not remember him when He visits the righteous: ¹⁵this is the portion of sinners for ever. ¹⁶But those who fear the Lord shall rise to eternal life: and their life shall be in the light of the Lord, and he will not fail any more. [Hallelujah¹.]

PSALM 46 (47) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 4.

¹Why sittest thou, O wicked man, in the congregation of the righteous: and thy heart is far removed from God; and by thy wickedness thou provokest to anger the God of Israel, ²exceedingly by thy words, and exceedingly by thy 'outward' signs, more than all men? He who is severe in his words in his condemnation of sinners in judgment, ³and his hand is the first to be on him, as though 'he acted' in zeal: and he is guilty himself of all kinds of sinful crimes: ⁴his eyes are upon every woman immodestly: and his tongue lies when he answers with oaths. ⁵In the night and in the darkness, as if he were not seen; by his eyes he talketh with every woman in the cunning of wickedness: ⁶and he is quick to go into every house with joy, as if he had no wickedness. ⁷God shall remove those who judge with respect of persons: but He lives with the upright, in the corruption of his body and in the poverty of his life. ⁸God will disclose the deeds of those who are men-pleasers: in scorn and derision are his works: ⁹and let the saints justify the judgment of their God, when the wicked shall be removed from before the righteous: ¹⁰the acceptor of persons who talks law with guile, ¹¹and his eyes are on a house, quietly like a serpent, to dispel the wisdom of each one by words of villainy: ¹²his words are with an evil intent, with a view to the working of the lust of the wicked: ¹³and he does not remove until he has scattered in bereavement, and has desolated the house because of his sinful lust. ¹⁴And he supposes in his words that there is none that sees and judges: ¹⁵and he is filled with this sinfulness; and his eyes are on another house to devastate it with words of prodigality: and his soul is, like Sheol, never satisfied. ¹⁶For all these things, let his portion¹, O Lord, be before thee in dishonour; let his going out be with groans and his coming in with curses: ¹⁷in pains, and in poverty and in destitution, O Lord, let his life be: let his sleep be in anguish and his waking in vexation: ¹⁸let sleep be removed from his eyelids by night: let him fall from every work of his hands in dishonour; ¹⁹and let him enter his house empty-handed: and let his house be destitute of everything that can satisfy his soul: ²⁰and from his offspring let not one draw near unto him: ²¹let the flesh of the hypocrites be scattered by wild beasts; and the bones of the wicked be before the sun in dishonour: ²²let the ravens pick out the eyes of those who are men-pleasers: ²³because they have laid waste many houses of men in dishonour: and have scattered them in lust: ²⁴and they remembered not God; nor feared God in all these things; ²⁵and they provoked God, and He was angered to destroy them from the earth; because with crafty intent they had played the hypocrite with innocent souls. ²⁶Blessed are they that fear the Lord in their innocency: ²⁷and the Lord will save them from all the cunning and wicked men; and He will redeem us from every stumbling-block of the wicked. ²⁸May God destroy all them that work fraud with pride²: for a strong judge is the Lord our God in righteousness; ²⁹let thy mercy, O Lord, be upon all them that love thee.

¹ This is an addition by the scribe, under the influence of the Odes of Solomon, which he has been copying.

PSALM 47 (48) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 5.

¹O Lord my God, I will praise thy name with exultation, amongst those that know thy righteous judgments. ²For thou art gracious and merciful, and the place of refuge of the poor. ³When I cry unto thee, be not thou silent unto me. ⁴For one does not take spoil from the strong man: ⁵or who shall take aught from what thou hast made, unless thou give it him? ⁶Because he is man, and his portion is before thee in the balance: and he shall not add aught to better it apart from thy judgment, O God. ⁷In our afflictions we call thee to our help: and thou hast not turned away our petition: for thou art our God. ⁸Delay not thou thy hand from us: lest we be strengthened to sin: ⁹and turn not away thy face from us, lest we remove away from thee: but to thee we will come: ¹⁰for if I should be hungry, O Lord, unto thee will I cry, O God: and thou wilt bestow. ¹¹For the fowl and the fish thou dost feed. When thou givest rain in the desert to cause the grass to spring up, ¹²to prepare food in the wilderness for every living thing, and if they shall be hungry, unto thee will they lift up their faces: ¹³kings and rulers and peoples thou dost provide for, O God: and the hope of the poor and the miserable, who is it except thyself, O Lord? ¹⁴and thou wilt answer him, because thou art kind and gentle: and his soul shall be satisfied when thou openest thy hand in mercy. ¹⁵For the kindness of a man is with parsimony; to-day and to-morrow; and if it should be that he repeats his gift and does not grumble, 'well' that is a wonder! ¹⁶But thy bounty is plenteous in kindness and in wealth; and there is no expectation towards thee that He will be sparing in gifts¹. ¹⁷For over all the earth is thy mercy, O Lord, in kindness. ¹⁸Blessed is the man whom the Lord shall remember in poverty: for that a man should exceed his measure means that he will sin. ¹⁹Sufficient is a low estate with righteousness²: ²⁰for those that fear the Lord are pleased with good things: and thy grace is on Israel in thy Kingdom: ²¹blessed be the glory of the Lord, for He is our King.

¹ Syr. let him.² lit. excess.

PSALM 48 (49) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 6.

¹Blessed is the man whose heart is prepared to call upon the name of the Lord: ²and when he shall remember the name of the Lord, he will be saved. ³His ways are directed from before the Lord: and the works of his hands are preserved by his God: ⁴and 'in' the evil vision of the night his soul shall not be moved, because he is His: ⁵and his soul shall not be affrighted in the passing through the rivers, and in the tumult of the seas. ⁶For he rose from his sleep and praised the name of the Lord, ⁷and in the quiet of his heart he sang psalms to the name of the Lord: and he made request from the face of the Lord concerning all his house: ⁸and the Lord hears the prayer of every one that is in His fear, and every petition of the soul that trusts in Him; and the Lord fulfils it. ⁹Blessed is he who doeth mercy upon them that love Him in truth.

¹ The Gk. οὐ ἐστιν ἐπὶ σε has been misread οὐκ ἐστιν τὲ.

² The Syriac has omitted a sentence of the Greek by a common transcriptional error. Add 'and herein is the blessing of the Lord that a man be satisfied in righteousness'.

PSALM 49 (50) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 7.

¹Remove not thy tabernacle from us, O Lord, lest those rise up against us who hate us without a cause: ²for thou hast put them away, O God, that their foot may not tread the inheritance of thy sanctuary. ³Thou in thy good pleasure chasten me and deliver us not over to the Gentiles. ⁴For if thou shouldest send death, it is thou who givest it command against us; ⁵for thou art the Merciful One, and wilt not be angry so as to consume us utterly. ⁶For because of thy Name that encamps amongst us, mercies shall be upon us: and the Gentiles shall not be able to prevail against us, ⁷for thou art our strength: and we will call upon thee and thou wilt answer us: ⁸for thou wilt be gracious to the seed of Israel, for ever, and thou wilt not forget him: ⁹thou wilt establish us in the time of thy help, to show favour to the house of Jacob, in the day that is prepared for them.

PSALM 50 (51) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 8.

¹Distress and the sound of war mine ears have heard, the sound of the trumpet, and the noise of slaughter and destruction: ²the sound of much people like a mighty and frequent wind: like the tempest of fire which comes over the wilderness. ³And I said to my heart: Where will he judge him? ⁴I heard a sound in Jerusalem, the Holy City; ⁵the bonds of my loins were loosed at the report: and my knees trembled, ⁶and my bones were moved like flax. ⁷And I said, They will make straight their paths in righteousness and I remembered the judgments of the Lord, from the creation of the heaven and the earth: and I justified God in all His judgments from the beginning. ⁸But God laid bare their sins before the sun: and to all the earth was made known the righteous judgments of the Lord. ⁹For in secret places of the earth were they doing evil ; ¹⁰the son had connexion with the mother and the father with the daughter : ¹¹and all of them committed adultery with their neighbours' wives : and they made solemn covenants amongst themselves concerning these things : ¹²they were plundering the House of God's Holiness, as if there was none to inherit and to deliver. ¹³And they were treading His sanctuary in all their pollutions, and in the time¹ of their separation they polluted the sacrifices, as common meat : ¹⁴and they left no sins which they did not commit, and even worse than the Gentiles. ¹⁵For this cause God mingled for them a spirit of error, and caused them to drink a living cup for drunkenness : ¹⁶He brought him from the other side of the world, the one that afflicts grievously : ¹⁷and he decrees war against Jerusalem and against her land : ¹⁸and the judges of the land met him with joy : and they said to him : Thy path shall be ordered, come, enter in peace. ¹⁹They levelled the lofty paths² for his entering : they opened the doors against Jerusalem : and they crowned the walls. ²⁰And he entered like a father into the house of his children, in peace : and he set his feet ³there in great firmness : ²¹and they took possession of the towers and the walls of Jerusalem. ²²For God brought him in assurance against their error : ²³and they destroyed their princes because he was cunning in counsel : and they poured out the blood of the dwellers in Jerusalem like the water of uncleanness : ²⁴and he carried off their sons and daughters, who had been ⁴born in pollution, ²⁵and had wrought their pollution even as also their fathers had done. ²⁶And Jerusalem defiled even those things that were consecrated to the name of God : ²⁷and God was justified in His judgments upon the nations of the earth, ²⁸and the saints of God were as innocent lambs in their midst. ²⁹God is to be praised who judges all the earth in His righteousness. ³⁰Behold, O God, thou hast shown us ⁵thy judgments in thy righteousness, ³¹and our eyes have seen thy judgments, O God : and we have justified thy name that is honoured for ever.

¹ The Syriac has dropped the sentence: 'and we are under thy yoke for ever, and under the scourge of thy chastening.'

² Gk. adds: and my heart was afraid.

³ lit. from eternity.

³²For thou art a God of righteousness : who judgest Israel with chastening. ³³Turn thy mercy towards us and be gracious to us : ³⁴and gather the dispersion of Israel, in mercy and in kindness : ³⁵for thy faithfulness is with us : and we are stiff-necked, and thou art our chastener : ³⁶do not desert us, O our God ! lest the Gentiles should swallow us up, as though there were none to deliver : ³⁷and thou art our God from the beginning, and upon thee is our hope, O Lord : ³⁸and we will not depart from thee, for thy judgments are good ; ³⁹upon us and upon our children is thy good will for ever, O Lord God, our Saviour, and we shall not be shaken again, for ever. ⁴⁰The Lord is to be praised for His judgments by the mouth of His saints : ⁴¹and blessed is Israel from the Lord for evermore.

¹ lit. blood.² lit. paths of elevation.³ Cod. om.

PSALM 51 (52) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 9.

¹When Israel went forth into captivity to a strange land, because they departed from the Lord their Saviour : ²then were they cast out from the inheritance that God gave them : amongst all the Gentiles was the dispersion of Israel, according to the word of God, ³that thou mightest be justified, O God, in thy righteousness over our wickedness : ⁴for thou art a just Judge over all the peoples of the earth. ⁵For there will not be hidden from thy knowledge any one who doeth wickedness : ⁶and the righteousness of thy upright ones, O Lord, is before thee. And where shall a man be hidden from thy knowledge, O God ? ⁷For we work by free-will and the choice of our own souls to do either good or evil by the work of our hands : ⁸and in thy righteousness thou dost visit the children of men. ⁹For he who does righteousness lays up a treasure of life with the Lord : and he who does wickedness incurs judgment upon his soul in perdition.

¹⁰For His judgments are in righteousness upon every man and his house. ¹¹For with whom wilt thou deal graciously, O God, unless with them that call upon the Lord ? ¹²For he purifies the sins of the soul by confession, ¹³because shame is on us and our faces because of all these things. ¹⁴For to whom will He remit sins except to those that have sinned ? ¹⁵For the righteous thou dost bless, and dost not reprove them for any of their sins ; for thy grace is on those that have sinned when they have repented. ¹⁶And, now, thou art our God : and we are thy people whom thou hast loved : behold and have mercy, O God of Israel ; for thine are we : remove not thy compassions from us, lest the Gentiles should set upon us: ¹⁷for thou hast chosen the seed of Abraham rather than all the Gentiles, ¹⁸and thou hast put on us thy Name, O Lord: and thou wilt not remove for ever. ¹⁹Thou didst surely covenant with our fathers concerning us: and we hope in thee, in the repentance of our souls. ²⁰The mercies over the house of Israel are of the Lord, now and evermore.

PSALM 52 (53) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 10.

¹Blessed is the man whom God remembers with reproof: and He has restrained him from the way of evil by stripes: so as to be purified from his sin, that he may not abound ¹therein. ²For he who prepares his loins for beating shall also be purified: for He is good to those that receive His chastening. ³For the way of the righteous is straight, and His chastisement does not turn it aside. ⁴For the face¹ of the Lord is upon them that love Him in truth, and the Lord will remember His servants in mercy. ⁵For the testimony is in the law of the everlasting covenant: the testimony of the Lord is in the ways of the children of men, by ¹His visitations. ⁶Righteous and upright is our God in all His judgments: and Israel will praise the name of the Lord with joy. ⁷And the saints shall give thanks in the congregation of the people: and on the poor the Lord will have mercy, in the gladness of Israel. ⁸For God is kind and merciful for ever: and the congregations of Israel shall praise the name of the Lord: ⁹for of the Lord is the salvation upon the house of Israel, unto the everlasting kingdom².

PSALM 53 (54) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 11.

¹Blow ye ¹the trumpet in Zion, the certain trumpet of the saints: ²proclaim in Jerusalem the voice of the heralds, because God is merciful to Israel in His visitation. ³Stand up on high³, Jerusalem, and behold thy children, who are all being gathered from the East and the West by the Lord: ⁴and from the North they come to the joy of their God: and from the far-away islands God gathereth them. ⁵Lofty mountains has He humbled and made plain before them; and the hills fled away before their entrance: ⁶the cedar¹ gave shelter to them as they passed by: and every tree of sweet odour God made to breathe² upon them: ⁷in order that Israel might pass by in the visitation of the glory of their God. ⁸O Jerusalem, put on the garments of thy glory; and make ready thy robe of holiness. For God speaks good things to Israel, now and ever. ⁹May the Lord do what He hath spoken concerning Israel: and concerning Jerusalem: may the Lord raise up Israel in the name of His glory. May the mercies of the Lord be upon Israel, now and evermore.

¹ Gk. mercy (ἐλεος).

² Gk. gladness, εὐφροσύνην.

³ Baruch v. 5—8.

PSALM 54 (55) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 12.

¹O Lord, save my soul from the perverse and wicked man and from the whispering and transgressing tongue, that speaks lies and deceit. ²For in the response of his words is the tongue of the transgressor³: for he shows like one whose deeds are fair, and kindles fire among the people. ³For his sojourning is to fill⁴ (set fire to) houses by his lying talk: for the trees of his delight he will cut down with the flame ⁵of his tongue⁵ that does lawlessly. ⁴He has destroyed the houses of the transgressors by war: and the slandering⁶ lips God has removed from the innocent, the lips of transgressors: and the bones of the slanderer shall be scattered far from those who fear the Lord. ⁵By flaming fire He will destroy the slanderous tongue from among the upright, and their houses. ⁶And the Lord shall preserve⁷ the soul of the righteous who hateth them that are evil: and the Lord shall establish the man that makes peace in the house of the Lord. ⁷Of the Lord is salvation upon Israel His servant for ever: ⁸and the sinners shall perish together from before the face of the Lord: and the saints of the Lord shall inherit the promises of the Lord.

PSALM 55 (56) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 13.

¹The right hand of the Lord has covered us: the right hand of the Lord has spared us: ²and the arm of the Lord has saved

¹ Gk. οἱ ὄρυμοί, the groves.

² Gk. ἀνέτειλεν, caused to rise. Corr. the Syriac to ܡܢܬܐ (Schulthess).

³ The Greek of this passage is obscure.

⁴ The translator read ἐμπλήσαι for ἐμπρήσαι.

⁵⁻⁶ Cod. om.

⁶ lit. whispering.

⁷ Better: 'and may the Lord preserve' as in Gk.: and so in following clauses.

me from the spear that goes through and from famine and the pestilence of sinners. ³Evil beasts ran upon them: and with their teeth were tearing their flesh; and with their jaw-teeth¹ were breaking their bones. But us the Lord has delivered from all these things. ⁴But the wicked man was troubled on account of his transgression: lest he should be broken along with the evil men. ⁵Because dread is the fall of the wicked: but the righteous not one of these things shall touch. ⁶For one cannot compare the chastening of the righteous who have 'sinned' ignorantly with the overthrow of evil men who sin 'knowingly'. ⁷For the righteous is chastened² so that the sinner will not exult over him. ⁸For the righteous He will admonish as His beloved son³; and his chastening is like that of the first-born: ⁹for the Righteous One will spare His saints, and their transgressions He will blot out by His chastisement. For the life of the righteous is for ever. ¹⁰But sinners shall be cast into perdition: and their memorial shall no more be found. ¹¹But upon the saints shall be the mercy of the Lord. He will cherish all them that fear Him.

PSALM 56 (57) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 14.

¹The Lord is faithful to them that love Him in truth: even to them that abide His chastening: to them who walk in righteousness in His commandments: He has given us the Law for our life: ²and the saints of the Lord shall live thereby for ever. The Paradise of the Lord, the trees of life, are His saints: ³and the planting of them is sure for ever; nor shall they be rooted up all the days of the heaven. For the portion of the Lord and His inheritance is Israel. ⁴Not so are the sinners and evil men, those who have loved a day in the participation of sin: for in the brevity of wickedness is their lust; ⁵and they did not remember God; that the ways of the children of men are open before Him continually: and the secrets⁴ of the heart He knoweth before they come to pass: ⁶therefore their inheritance is Sheol, and Perdition and Darkness: and in the day of mercy upon the righteous they shall not be found. ⁷For the saints of the Lord shall inherit life in delight.

¹ Or molars: rendering the Greek μύλαι literally, as Wellhausen has observed: it should have been

²⁻³ Or perhaps: For the righteous is chastened secretly. (See Ryle and James, ad loc.)

³ Corr. 'He will cause the righteous to inherit Him.'

⁴ lit. secret places.

PSALM 57 (58) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 15.

¹In my affliction I called on the name of the Lord, and for my help I called on the God of Jacob: and I was delivered, ²because thou, O God, art the hope and the refuge of the poor. ³For who that is strong will praise thee in truth? ⁴and what is the strength of a man, except that he should praise thy name? ⁵A new song with the voice in the delight of the heart: the fruit of the lips with the instrument attuned to the tongue: the firstfruit of the lips from a heart that is holy and just. ⁶He that doeth these things shall never be moved by evil: the flame of fire and the anger of sinners shall not touch them, ⁷when it goeth forth against the sinners from before the Most High to root up all the roots of sinners: ⁸because the sign of the Lord is upon the righteous for their salvation: death and the spear and famine shall remove from the righteous; ⁹for they shall flee from them, as death flees from life: but they shall pursue after the wicked and catch them: and those who do evil shall not escape from the judgment of the Lord: for they will get before them like skilled warriors: ¹⁰for the sign of destruction is upon their faces. ¹¹And the inheritance of sinners is Perdition and Darkness: and their iniquity shall pursue them down to the lower hell. ¹²And their inheritance shall not be found by their children: ¹³for their sins shall lay waste the houses of sinners: and sinners shall perish for ever in the day of the Lord's judgment: ¹⁴when God visits the earth with His judgment. ¹⁵And upon those who fear the Lord there shall be mercy therein; and they shall live in the compassion of our God: and sinners shall perish unto eternity¹.

PSALM 58 (59) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 16.

¹When my soul declined a little from the Lord, I had almost been in the lapses of the sleep of destruction; and when I was far away from the Lord, ²my soul had almost been poured out to death, hard by the gates of Sheol along with the sinners: ³and when my soul declined from the God of Israel, unless the Lord had helped me by His mercy which is for ever—! ⁴He pricked me, like the spur of the horse, according to His watchfulness: my Saviour and Helper at all times is He: He saved me: ⁵I will praise thee, O God, because thou hast helped me with thy salvation: and hast not reckoned me with sinners for destruction. ⁶Withdraw not thy mercy from me, O God: and let not the remembrance of thee remove from my heart until I die: ⁷save me, O Lord, from the wicked sinful woman, and from every wicked woman who sets traps for the simple: ⁸and let not the beauty of a wicked woman lead me astray, nor any sin that is, ⁹and establish the work of my hands before thee: and preserve my walk in the remembrance of thee. ¹⁰My tongue and my lips in words of truth do thou establish: anger and unreasonable passion do thou remove from me: ¹¹grumbling and little-mindedness in affliction do thou remove from me: for if I shall sin when thou hast chastened me, it is for repentance: ¹²but by thy good-will establish my soul: and when thou shalt strengthen my soul, whatever has been given shall be sufficient for me: ¹³for if thou strengthenest me not, who can endure thy chastening in poverty? ¹⁴for a soul shall be reprov¹ed in his flesh and by the affliction of poverty: ¹⁵and when a righteous man shall endure these things, mercy shall be upon him from the Lord.

¹ lit. the time of eternity.

PSALM 59 (60) = PSALMS OF SOLOMON 17.

¹O Lord, thou art our King, now and for ever: for in thee, O God, our soul shall glory. ²And what is the life of man upon the earth? for according to his time, so also is his hope. ³But we hope on God our Saviour: for the stronghold of our God is for ever according to mercy: ⁴and the Kingdom of our God is over the Gentiles for ever with judgment. ⁵Thou, O Lord, didst choose David for king over Israel: and thou didst swear to him concerning his seed, that their kingdom should not be removed from before thee. ⁶But for our sins sinners rose up against us: and they set upon us, and removed me far away: they to whom thou gavest no command have taken by violence, ⁷and have not glorified thy honourable name with praises: and they have set up a kingdom instead of that which was their pride. ⁸They laid waste the throne of David in exultation of their change². But thou wilt overthrow them, and wilt remove their seed from the earth : ⁹even when there shall rise up against them a man that was a stranger to our race. ¹⁰According to their sins, thou wilt reward them, O God : and it shall befall them according to their works. ¹¹And thou wilt not have mercy upon them, O God. Command their seed, and do not leave a single one of them. ¹²The Lord is faithful in all His judgments which He has done upon the earth. ¹³The wicked man¹ has devastated our land, so that there is none to dwell therein. They have destroyed both young and old and their children together. ¹⁴In the splendour of his wrath he sent them away to the West, and the princes of the land to mockery without sparing. ¹⁵In his foreign way the enemy exults, and his heart is alien from our God. ¹⁶And Jerusalem did all things² according as the Gentiles did in their cities to their gods. ¹⁷And the children of the covenant took hold of them in the midst of the mingled Gentiles : and there was none amongst them that did mercy and truth in Jerusalem. ¹⁸They that love the assemblies of the saints fled away from them : and they flew like sparrows who fly from their nests : ¹⁹and they were wandering in the wilderness, in order to save their soul from evil : and precious in their eyes was the sojourning with them of any soul that was saved from them. ²⁰Over all the earth they were scattered by the wicked. Therefore were the heavens restrained that they should not send down rain upon the earth, ²¹and the everlasting fountains were restrained, both the abysses, and from the lofty mountains : because there was none among them who did righteousness and judgment ; from their ruler to the lowest of them they were sinning in everything. ²²The king was in transgression, and the judge in wrath, and the people in sin. ²³Behold, O Lord, and raise up to them their king, the Son of David, according to the time which thou seest, O God : and let Him reign over Israel thy servant, ²⁴and strengthen Him with power that He may humble the sinful rulers : ²⁵and may purify Jerusalem from the Gentiles who trample her down to destruction, ²⁶so as to destroy the wicked from my inheritance : and to break their pride like a potter's vessel : to break with a rod of iron all their firmness : ²⁷to destroy the sinful Gentiles with the word of His mouth : at His rebuke the Gentiles shall flee from before His face : and to confute sinners by the word of their heart: ²⁸that He may gather together a holy people that shall exult in righteousness: and may judge the tribes of the people whom the Lord His God sanctified: ²⁹and He shall not any more suffer sin to lodge amongst them; and no more shall dwell amongst them the man that knoweth evil. ³⁰For He knoweth them that they are all the children of God, and He shall divide them according to their tribes upon the earth: ³¹and the sojourner and the foreigner shall not dwell with them: for He will judge the Gentiles and the peoples in the wisdom of His righteousness: ³²and He shall possess a people from among the Gentiles: and they shall serve Him under His yoke: and they shall praise the Lord openly over all the earth: ³³and He shall purify Jerusalem in holiness, as it was of old time: ³⁴that the Gentiles may come from the ends of the earth to behold His glory: bringing her sons with them as an honourable gift; those who were scattered from her, ³⁵and to see the glory of the Lord wherewith He hath glorified her: and He the righteous king, taught of God, is over them: ³⁶and there is no wicked person in His days amongst them, because they are all righteous, and their king is the Lord Messiah: ³⁷for He will not trust on horse nor on his rider; nor on the bow: nor shall He multiply to himself gold and silver for war: nor shall He rely on a multitude in the day of war: ³⁸for the Lord —.

¹ Or (see note to text): thou wilt reprove.

² Reading ἀλλάγματος.

¹ Gk. ἀνομος, not ἀνεμος.² Gk. = ὅσα ἐποίησεν Ἱερουσαλήμ.

(Caetera desunt.)

תִּפְתִּי כִּפְתִּי וְכִפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . כִּפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי גִּם מִתְּמִי . ¹⁹ אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . כִּפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי .
 כִּפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . כִּפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי
 אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . ²⁰ אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי
 אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . ²¹ אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי
 אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . ²² אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי
 אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . ²³ אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי
 אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . ²⁴ אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי
 אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . ²⁵ אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי
 אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . ²⁶ אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי
 אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . ²⁷ אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי
 אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . ²⁸ אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי
 אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי . ²⁹ אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי אֶפְתִּי .

ⁿ The translator has referred ἐπλανῶντο to the sparrows.

^o For παροικίας ψυχῇ the translator read παροικία ψυχῆς. Cf. note ⁱ on previous page.

^p Gk. ἐν ἀπειθείᾳ.

^q Gk. εἶδες (JL). Gebhardt conjectures εἶλον.

^r = Gk. καθαρῖσαι.

^s Gk. adds ἐν σοφίᾳ, ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ: probably by an eye-error to v. 31.

^t Gk. ὑπόστασιν. Cf. Ps. xv. 7.

^u vid. sup. Ps. xvi. 14.

^v Gk. οὐ ἀφηγῆσεται.

κησαλα ααααα. κηααααα κηααα αααα⁷ κηα κηααααα αααα ααααα αααα⁸ : ααααα αα ααααα αααα : αα ααααα⁹ αα αααα : ααααααα¹⁰ αα αααα αααα : αααα αααα ααα¹¹ . αααα αα
 . αααα : αα αααα ααααα ααα¹² . αα αααα αααα αααα¹³ κηα¹⁴ : ααααα ααα ααα ααααα
 . αα κηα αααα αααα κηα αααα¹⁵ . αααα
 . αααα αα αααα αααα αααα αααα¹⁶ . αααα αα ααα αααα¹⁷ : ααααα¹⁸ αααααα ααα αααα ααα ααα . αααα ααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα¹⁹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα²⁰ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα²¹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα²² . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα²³ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα²⁴ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα²⁵ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα²⁶ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα²⁷ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα²⁸ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα²⁹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα³⁰ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα³¹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα³² . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα³³ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα³⁴ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα³⁵ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα³⁶ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα³⁷ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα³⁸ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα³⁹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁴⁰ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁴¹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁴² . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁴³ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁴⁴ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁴⁵ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁴⁶ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁴⁷ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁴⁸ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁴⁹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁵⁰ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁵¹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁵² . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁵³ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁵⁴ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁵⁵ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁵⁶ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁵⁷ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁵⁸ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁵⁹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁶⁰ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁶¹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁶² . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁶³ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁶⁴ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁶⁵ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁶⁶ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁶⁷ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁶⁸ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁶⁹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁷⁰ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁷¹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁷² . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁷³ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁷⁴ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁷⁵ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁷⁶ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁷⁷ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁷⁸ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁷⁹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁸⁰ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁸¹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁸² . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁸³ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁸⁴ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁸⁵ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁸⁶ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁸⁷ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁸⁸ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁸⁹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁹⁰ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁹¹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁹² . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁹³ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁹⁴ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁹⁵ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁹⁶ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁹⁷ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁹⁸ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα⁹⁹ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα ααα ααα αααα¹⁰⁰ . ααααα αααα αααα αααα

^e Gk. ἀλλάγματος but the Copenhagen MS. ἀλαλάγματος.

^f Gk. + ὁ θεός.

^g Gk. ἐλεήσεις or ἐλεήσαι.

^h The Gk. is ἐξηρεύνησε...καὶ οὐκ ἀφήκεν...which the Syr. has turned into imperatives. The meaning of αααα is obscure.

ⁱ The Gk. is ἐν ὀργῇ κάλλους αὐτοῦ, for which the Syr. has read ἐν κάλλει ὀργῆς αὐτοῦ.

^k The translator read ἐποίησεν [- ἐν] Ἱερουσαλήμ and omits ὅσα.

^l Reading τοῖς θεοῖς or τοὺς θεοὺς with J LH for which Gebhardt conjectured τοῦ σθένους.

^m This agrees with Gebhardt's reading οὐκ ἦν ἐν αὐτοῖς ὁ ποιῶν ἐν Ἱερουσαλήμ θεός καὶ ἀλήθειαν. The Gk. MSS. vary between ὁ ποιῶν ἐν μέσῳ ἐν αὐτοῖς ἐν and ὁ ποιῶν ἐν αὐτοῖς ἐν μέσῳ. May it not, however, be the case that the Syr. ααααα stands for ἐν μέσῳ ἐν αὐτοῖς? For ααααα the MS. has ααααα (?).

ܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ⁴ . ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ^b ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ
 ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ⁶ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ⁵ . ܕܡܫܝܚ
 ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ⁷ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ
 ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ^d ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ
 ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ⁸
 ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ
 ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ⁹ . ܕܡܫܝܚ
 ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ
 ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ^f ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ

^b Gk. εἰσάπαξ (= Heb. הָיָה).

^c Gk. οἱ δρίμοι.

^d Gk. ἀνέτειλεν (= Syr. ܡܫܝܚ?).

^{e-e} Gk. εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα καὶ ἔτι = Heb. ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ut supra.

^{f-f} Gk. as in note ^{e-e}.

PSALM 12 (= Ps. 55).

ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ¹ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ
 ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ
 ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ² ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ
 ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ
 ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ³ ܕܡܫܝܚ ܕܡܫܝܚ

^a The Syriac translator has had difficulty, as every one else, with this passage: but it seems clear that he had a text very near to the Gk. ὥσπερ ἐν λαφῇ πῦρ ἀνάπτον καλλόνην αὐτοῦ. It seems natural to correct this to ὥσπερ ἐν ἀλφῇ πῦρ ἀνάπτον καλᾶμην with the Copenhagen MS. But the Syr. is clear for λαφῇ, and it suggests καλλόνην αὐτοῦ by the clause which it prefixes (ܕܡܫܝܚ).

^b i.e. ἐμπλήσαι (H) for ἐμπρήσαι (RJLC).

^c Gk. ἐκκόψαι.

PSALM 10 (= Ps. 53).

,ṣḥḥ^b . ḥḥḥḥḥḥ^a ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ¹ , ḥḥḥḥ¹ ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ . ḥḥḥḥ . ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ² . ḥḥḥḥ² ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ³ . ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ ḥḥ ḥḥ⁴ ḥḥḥḥ^d . ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥ . ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ⁵ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ⁶ . ḥḥḥḥḥ⁷ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ⁸ ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ⁹ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ^h . ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ

^a Cod. ḥḥḥḥḥḥ. Gk. ἐν ἐλεγμῷ.

^b l. ἐκωλύθη as suggested by Fritzsche, for ἐκυκλώθη of the MSS.

^c Gk. adds ὁ κύριος.

^d Gk. τὸ ἔλεος (= ἡμῶν, cf. 14^g).

^e Gk. ὁ κύριος ἡμῶν.

^f Gk. ἐν κρίμασιν αὐτοῦ and adds εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.

^g Gk. ὁ θεός.

^h Perhaps we should read ḥḥḥḥḥḥ answering to the Gk. σωφροσύνην.

PSALM 11 (= Ps. 54).

ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ² . ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ^a ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ¹
 . ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ³
 ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥ ḥḥḥḥḥ

^a Gk. σημασίας.

תעל אסח תעצמא ללל א תעצמא תעצמאⁿ²⁶
 .תעצמא תעצמא ,תעצמא תעצמא²⁷ .תעצמא
 :תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא²⁸
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא²⁹
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא³⁰
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא³¹
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא³²
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא³³
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא³⁴
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא³⁵
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא³⁶
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא³⁷
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא³⁸
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא³⁹
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא⁴⁰
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא⁴¹

ⁿ Gk. ἐμίαναν, (not as in Cod. R ἐμίανεν).

^o Cod. om. τὸ κρίμα σου.

PSALM 9 (= Ps. 52).

תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא¹
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא²
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא³
 .תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא תעצמא⁴

^a Gk. κύριος.

כמלך נר כל⁸ . נר נר , נר נר , נר נר
 , נר נר נר נר נר נר . נר נר נר נר נר^d נר נר נר נר נר נר⁹ . נר נר נר נר
 . נר נר נר נר נר נר¹⁰ . נר נר נר
 נר נר נר נר נר נר¹¹ . נר נר נר נר
 . נר נר נר נר נר נר¹² . נר נר נר
 נר נר נר נר נר נר¹³ . נר נר נר נר
 נר נר נר נר נר נר¹⁴ . נר נר נר נר
 נר נר נר נר נר נר¹⁵ . נר נר נר
 נר נר נר נר נר נר¹⁶ . נר נר נר
 נר נר נר נר נר נר¹⁷ . נר נר נר
 נר נר נר נר נר נר¹⁸ . נר נר נר
 נר נר נר נר נר נר¹⁹ . נר נר נר
 נר נר נר נר נר נר²⁰ . נר נר נר
 נר נר נר נר נר נר²¹ . נר נר נר
 נר נר נר נר נר נר²² . נר נר נר
 נר נר נר נר נר נר²³ . נר נר נר נר נר נר נר נר נר²⁴ . נר נר נר
 . נר נר נר נר נר נר²⁵ . נר נר נר

^d Cod. ex errore נר נר .

^e Gk. adds ἐν παροργισμῷ.

^f Gk. adds μετὰ ὅρκου.

^g Gk. τὸ θυσιαστήριον κυρίου.

^h Gk. οἶνου ἀκράτου.

ⁱ Gk. ἐπευκτή.

^k Cod. נר נר

^{l-1} Gk. καὶ πάντα σοφὸν ἐν βουλῇ. This requires that we correct נר to נר.

^m Cod. נר נר

וְשִׁירֵי יְהוָה כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' ¹⁷ . כְּהִתְנַחֵם וְשִׁירֵי יְהוָה
 , מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' ¹⁸ . כְּהִתְנַחֵם כִּי
 כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' ¹⁹ . כְּהִתְנַחֵם ⁱ כִּי ^h
 אֲשַׁמְּחֶה ²¹ . ¹ כְּהִתְנַחֵם כְּהִתְנַחֵם ^k כִּי ²⁰ . מִלִּפְנֵי
 יְהוָה יִשְׁמַע ה' כְּהִתְנַחֵם כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' , מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה
 אֲשַׁמְּחֶה כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' , מִלִּפְנֵי ²² . יְהוָה
 חַלֵּם .

^h Gk. θεός.

ⁱ Gk. συμμετρίᾳ αὐταρκείας.

^k Gk. τὸ μέτριον.

¹ Syr. omits by ὁμοιοτέλετον the words καὶ ἐν τούτῳ ἡ εὐλογία τοῦ κυρίου εἰς πλησμονὴν ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ.

PSALM 6 (= Ps. 49).

. כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' , מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' ¹
 בְּ יְהוָה אֲשַׁמְּחֶה ³ . מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה אֲשַׁמְּחֶה יְהוָה ²
 אֲשַׁמְּחֶה ⁴ . מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה , מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה . כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה'
^a אֲשַׁמְּחֶה . אֲשַׁמְּחֶה יְהוָה . מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה'
 יְהוָה ⁶ מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' . כְּהִתְנַחֵם כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' ⁵ יְהוָה מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה ⁷ . כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' אֲשַׁמְּחֶה יְהוָה כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה'
 מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה , מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה . כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' ^c אֲשַׁמְּחֶה
 יְהוָה . ^d אֲשַׁמְּחֶה יְהוָה מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה . מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה ⁸ . מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה ⁹ . כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' . מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' ^e
 . כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה' מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה . מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה .

^{a-a} The text is in confusion: we should read כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה', and add אֲשַׁמְּחֶה after מִלִּפְנֵי יְהוָה. The words אֲשַׁמְּחֶה יְהוָה are missing in the Greek.

^b Cod. כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה'

^c Gk. τοῦ θεοῦ αὐτοῦ.

^d Gk. adds θεοῦ.

^e Cod. ex errore כִּי יִשְׁמַע ה'

^f Cod. ex errore repeats מִלִּפְנֵי in passing from one page to the next.

19 ^k וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 20 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 21 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 22 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 23 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 24 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 25 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 26 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 27 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 28 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 29 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 30 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.

^k Cod. ex errore וְיִתֵּן.

^l Cod. om. וְיִתֵּן. The translation is a free paraphrase of ἐν μονώσει ἀτεκνίας τὸ γῆρας αὐτοῦ εἰς ἀνάληψιν.

^m Accidentally omitted in passing from one page to the next.

PSALM 5 (= Ps. 48).

1 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 2 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 3 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 4 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.
 5 וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְיִתֵּן לָנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ.

17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33.

^g We should restore ܠܡܫܬܪܥܝܢ which answers to the Greek καταπατήσας.

^h Cod. ܡܫܬܪܥܝܢ

ⁱ⁻ⁱ Gk. μίτραν δόξης.

^k Cod. ut videtur ܠܡܫܬܪܥܝܢ.

^l Syr. om. μετὰ μηνίσσεως καί.

^m l. ܠܡܫܬܪܥܝܢ (Well.) to agree with Greek ἐκχέαι.

ⁿ This answers to the unintelligible Greek τοῦ εἰπεῖν, which Geiger explained as a misunderstanding of לרבר in the sense of לְרַבֵּר (to destroy); and which Wellhausen explained by taking לְאָמַר as a late Hebrew form for לְקַמֵּר = לְקַמֵּר. Cf. Hos. iv. 7.

^o κύριος for θεός.

^p The Syriac evidently had ὁρίων, and not as Hilgenfeld suggested ὁρίων.

[illegible]

^c Cod. ex errore לחכמה

1. $\text{dim}(\text{Ker } A) = \text{dim}(\text{Ker } B)$ $\text{Ker } A = \text{Ker } B$
 2. $\text{Im } A = \text{Im } B$ $\text{Im } A \subseteq \text{Im } B$
 3. $\text{Ker } A \subseteq \text{Ker } B$ $\text{Im } A \subseteq \text{Im } B$

E

Digitized by Google

ODE 38.

קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה². אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה אֶתְּחַבֵּל
 אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה³. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל
 אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה⁴. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל
 אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה⁵. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל
 אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה⁶. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל
 אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה⁷. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל
 אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה⁸. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל
 אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה⁹. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה¹⁰. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה¹¹. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה¹². אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה¹³. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה¹⁴. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה¹⁵. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל קִיֵּץ נִיבָּנָה¹⁶. אֶתְּחַבֵּל וְאֶתְּחַבֵּל

^a Sic cod.

^b An obscure passage: the MS. appears to have אֶתְּחַבֵּל which might be resolved into אֶתְּחַבֵּל (fear: so Fl.) or into אֶתְּחַבֵּל (sweetness: so U.-S.).

^c Cod. אֶתְּחַבֵּל (the emendation is Nestle's).

ODE 28.

1. ^a ^b ^c ^d ^e ^f ^g ^h ⁱ ^j ^k ^l ^m ⁿ ^o ^p ^q ^r ^s ^t ^u ^v ^w ^x ^y ^z ^{aa} ^{ab} ^{ac} ^{ad} ^{ae} ^{af} ^{ag} ^{ah} ^{ai} ^{aj} ^{ak} ^{al} ^{am} ^{an} ^{ao} ^{ap} ^{aq} ^{ar} ^{as} ^{at} ^{au} ^{av} ^{aw} ^{ax} ^{ay} ^{az} ^{ba} ^{bb} ^{bc} ^{bd} ^{be} ^{bf} ^{bg} ^{bh} ^{bi} ^{bj} ^{bk} ^{bl} ^{bm} ^{bn} ^{bo} ^{bp} ^{bq} ^{br} ^{bs} ^{bt} ^{bu} ^{bv} ^{bw} ^{bx} ^{by} ^{bz} ^{ca} ^{cb} ^{cc} ^{cd} ^{ce} ^{cf} ^{cg} ^{ch} ^{ci} ^{cj} ^{ck} ^{cl} ^{cm} ^{cn} ^{co} ^{cp} ^{cq} ^{cr} ^{cs} ^{ct} ^{cu} ^{cv} ^{cw} ^{cx} ^{cy} ^{cz} ^{da} ^{db} ^{dc} ^{dd} ^{de} ^{df} ^{dg} ^{dh} ^{di} ^{dj} ^{dk} ^{dl} ^{dm} ^{dn} ^{do} ^{dp} ^{dq} ^{dr} ^{ds} ^{dt} ^{du} ^{dv} ^{dw} ^{dx} ^{dy} ^{dz} ^{ea} ^{eb} ^{ec} ^{ed} ^{ee} ^{ef} ^{eg} ^{eh} ^{ei} ^{ej} ^{ek} ^{el} ^{em} ^{en} ^{eo} ^{ep} ^{eq} ^{er} ^{es} ^{et} ^{eu} ^{ev} ^{ew} ^{ex} ^{ey} ^{ez} ^{fa} ^{fb} ^{fc} ^{fd} ^{fe} ^{ff} ^{fg} ^{fh} ^{fi} ^{fj} ^{fk} ^{fl} ^{fm} ^{fn} ^{fo} ^{fp} ^{fq} ^{fr} ^{fs} ^{ft} ^{fu} ^{fv} ^{fw} ^{fx} ^{fy} ^{fz} ^{ga} ^{gb} ^{gc} ^{gd} ^{ge} ^{gf} ^{gg} ^{gh} ^{gi} ^{gj} ^{gk} ^{gl} ^{gm} ^{gn} ^{go} ^{gp} ^{gq} ^{gr} ^{gs} ^{gt} ^{gu} ^{gv} ^{gw} ^{gx} ^{gy} ^{gz} ^{ha} ^{hb} ^{hc} ^{hd} ^{he} ^{hf} ^{hg} ^{hh} ^{hi} ^{hj} ^{hk} ^{hl} ^{hm} ^{hn} ^{ho} ^{hp} ^{hq} ^{hr} ^{hs} ^{ht} ^{hu} ^{hv} ^{hw} ^{hx} ^{hy} ^{hz} ^{ia} ^{ib} ^{ic} ^{id} ^{ie} ^{if} ^{ig} ^{ih} ⁱⁱ ^{ij} ^{ik} ^{il} ^{im} ⁱⁿ ^{io} ^{ip} ^{iq} ^{ir} ^{is} ^{it} ^{iu} ^{iv} ^{iw} ^{ix} ^{iy} ^{iz} ^{ja} ^{jb} ^{jc} ^{jd} ^{je} ^{jf} ^{jj} ^{jk} ^{jl} ^{jm} ^{jn} ^{jo} ^{jp} ^{jq} ^{jr} ^{js} ^{jt} ^{ju} ^{jv} ^{jw} ^{jx} ^{ky} ^{kz} ^{la} ^{lb} ^{lc} ^{ld} ^{le} ^{lf} ^{lg} ^{lh} ^{li} ^{lj} ^{lk} ^{ll} ^{lm} ^{ln} ^{lo} ^{lp} ^{lq} ^{lr} ^{ls} ^{lt} ^{lu} ^{lv} ^{lw} ^{lx} ^{ly} ^{lz} ^{ma} ^{mb} ^{mc} ^{md} ^{me} ^{mf} ^{mg} ^{mh} ^{mi} ^{mj} ^{mk} ^{ml} ^{mn} ^{mo} ^{mp} ^{mq} ^{mr} ^{ms} ^{mt} ^{mu} ^{mv} ^{mw} ^{mx} ^{my} ^{mz} ^{na} ^{nb} ^{nc} nd ^{ne} ^{nf} ^{ng} ^{nh} ⁿⁱ ^{nj} ^{nk} ^{nl} ^{nm} ⁿⁿ ^{no} ^{np} ^{nq} ^{nr} ^{ns} ^{nt} ^{nu} ^{nv} ^{nw} ^{nx} ^{ny} ^{nz} ^{oa} ^{ob} ^{oc} ^{od} ^{oe} ^{of} ^{og} ^{oh} ^{oi} ^{oj} ^{ok} ^{ol} ^{om} ^{on} ^{oo} ^{op} ^{oq} ^{or} ^{os} ^{ot} ^{ou} ^{ov} ^{ow} ^{ox} ^{oy} ^{oz} ^{pa} ^{pb} ^{pc} ^{pd} ^{pe} ^{pf} ^{pg} ^{ph} ^{pi} ^{pj} ^{pk} ^{pl} ^{pm} ^{pn} ^{po} ^{pp} ^{pq} ^{pr} ^{ps} ^{pt} ^{pu} ^{pv} ^{pw} ^{px} ^{py} ^{pz} ^{qa} ^{qb} ^{qc} ^{qd} ^{qe} ^{qf} ^{qg} ^{qh} ^{qi} ^{qj} ^{qk} ^{ql} ^{qm} ^{qn} ^{qo} ^{qp} ^{qq} ^{qr} ^{qs} ^{qt} ^{qu} ^{qv} ^{qw} ^{qx} ^{qy} ^{qz} ^{ra} ^{rb} ^{rc} rd ^{re} ^{rf} ^{rg} ^{rh} ^{ri} ^{rj} ^{rk} ^{rl} ^{rm} ^{rn} ^{ro} ^{rp} ^{rq} ^{rr} ^{rs} ^{rt} ^{ru} ^{rv} ^{rw} ^{rx} ^{ry} ^{rz} ^{sa} ^{sb} ^{sc} ^{sd} ^{se} ^{sf} ^{sg} ^{sh} ^{si} ^{sj} ^{sk} ^{sl} sm ^{sn} ^{so} ^{sp} ^{sq} ^{sr} ^{ss} st ^{su} ^{sv} ^{sw} ^{sx} ^{sy} ^{sz} ^{ta} ^{tb} ^{tc} ^{td} ^{te} ^{tf} ^{tg} th ^{ti} ^{tj} ^{tk} ^{tl} tm ^{tn} ^{to} ^{tp} ^{tq} ^{tr} ^{ts} ^{tt} ^{tu} ^{tv} ^{tw} ^{tx} ^{ty} ^{tz} ^{ua} ^{ub} ^{uc} ^{ud} ^{ue} ^{uf} ^{ug} ^{uh} ^{ui} ^{uj} ^{uk} ^{ul} ^{um} ^{un} ^{uo} ^{up} ^{uq} ^{ur} ^{us} ^{ut} ^{uu} ^{uv} ^{uw} ^{ux} ^{uy} ^{uz} ^{va} ^{vb} ^{vc} ^{vd} ^{ve} ^{vf} ^{vg} ^{vh} ^{vi} ^{vj} ^{vk} ^{vl} ^{vm} ^{vn} ^{vo} ^{vp} ^{vq} ^{vr} ^{vs} ^{vt} ^{vu} ^{vv} ^{vw} ^{vx} ^{vy} ^{vz} ^{wa} ^{wb} ^{wc} ^{wd} ^{we} ^{wf} ^{wg} ^{wh} ^{wi} ^{wj} ^{wk} ^{wl} ^{wm} ^{wn} ^{wo} ^{wp} ^{wq} ^{wr} ^{ws} ^{wt} ^{wu} ^{wv} ^{ww} ^{wx} ^{wy} ^{wz} ^{xa} ^{xb} ^{xc} ^{xd} ^{xe} ^{xf} ^{yg} ^{yh} ^{yi} ^{yj} ^{yk} ^{yl} ^{ym} ^{yn} ^{yo} ^{yp} ^{yq} ^{yr} ^{ys} ^{yt} ^{yu} ^{yv} ^{yw} ^{yx} ^{yz} ^{za} ^{zb} ^{zc} ^{zd} ^{ze} ^{zf} ^{zg} ^{zh} ^{zi} ^{zj} ^{zk} ^{zl} ^{zm} ^{zn} ^{zo} ^{zp} ^{zq} ^{zr} ^{zs} ^{zt} ^{zu} ^{zv} ^{zw} ^{zx} ^{zy} ^{zz}

^a Sic cod.: as Flemming suspected.

^{b-c} = ἐπὶ τῇ ἐαυτῶν νοσσίᾳ. cf. Luke xiii, 34.

^c Schulthess suggests ἡδονή

^d Marg. نعم

.መጠ ይጠቅሙኝ ብሎ¹⁰ እኔን ለመሠረዝ ይጠቅሙኝ ለክርስቲያን
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን

ODE 23.

.ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን¹
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን²
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን³
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን⁴
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን⁵
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን⁶
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን⁷
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን⁸
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን⁹
 .ሆኖኝ ይጠጡኝ ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን ለክርስቲያን¹⁰

Ode 22, v. 12. Here the Coptic texts have gone astray, under the influence of the Gnosticism in the mind of the writer, who brings in the 'light' from the story of Pistis Sophia. The text of Schwartz is 'et uti lumen sit duplicatum iis omnibus'; and the Gnostic Targum is 'ut tuum lumen sit in iis omnibus.' But Petermann notes that for 'duplicatum' we should read 'fundamentum.' This brings the text nearer to the Syriac, which may be taken as correct in these concluding sentences. The Coptic 'opulentiam' for the Syriac 'kingdom' is an error which Schmidt has corrected in his German translation.

ODE 21.

· ,iāwka ḥp kina msl. kaniḥl ḥwina ḥiā¹ ḥwilo². mmiālo msl mizka mwiḥna. ḥa kiz
 .ḥa ḥal kaniḥl ḥa mmiā³. kimaḥ ḥwilo kama kila kiliḥ kila. kaka ḥa ḥa ḥa⁴. ḥa
 .kina mmiāḥ ḥa ḥa kima kaniḥl ḥwilo⁵. kima ḥwilo kimaḥ ḥwiloḥ⁶. mmiāḥ ḥa
 .ḥaḥa. ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa⁷. ḥa kina kima
 .ḥaḥaḥa. kina ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa⁸.
 .kallm

^a Cod. ḥa

ODE 22 [= Pistis Sophia, pp. 154—160].

.kaniḥl ḥa ḥa ḥa ḥa ḥa ḥa ḥa ḥa¹
 ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa²
 ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa³
 ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa⁴
 ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa⁵
 ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa⁶
 ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa⁷
 ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa⁸
 ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa ḥaḥa⁹

^a 1. ḥa. Cf. Copt. et docuit me.

^{b-b} Copt. venenum hujus qui dicit [malum].

^c Copt. liberasti.

Ode 22. In v. 6 the Coptic 'in omni loco circumdedit me nomen tuum' requires, as Schulthess points out, that we should emend ḥaḥa to ḥa. So too Diettrich.

^d Cod. add. in marg.

. താ പന ഓരോ ക്ലൈ ഓർട്ട . അൻ ക്ലൈ കുലു നന്തി കർമ്മങ്ങൾ ഓർത്താ² . കുലു നന്തി നന്തി നന്തി നന്തി
 നന്തി നന്തി നന്തി . കുലു നന്തി നന്തി നന്തി . നന്തി
 . നന്തി നന്തി നന്തി നന്തി നന്തി . നന്തി നന്തി നന്തി
 . നന്തി

[illegible]

മുഖമുദിക്കും. കരുതും ല അറന്നു ഏ. ധർമ്മം^൧ മനുഷ്യൻ അറിക്കും സു അലതാ^൨ ല അലതാ^൩ കരുതും
 .കരുതും. കരുതും.

^൧ Read ധർമ്മം

ODE 11.

൧. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^൧
 .കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^൨. കരുതും കരുതും
 ല കരുതും^൩. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും
 കരുതും. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും. കരുതും കരുതും
 .കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^൪. കരുതും
 .കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^൫
 കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^൬
 .കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^൭. കരുതും
 .കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^൮
 .കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^൯. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും
 കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും
 കരുതും. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^{൧൦}. കരുതും
 കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^{൧൧}. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും
 കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^{൧൨}. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും
 കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^{൧൩}. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും
 .കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^{൧൪}. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും
 കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^{൧൫}. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും
 കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും
 .കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും^{൧൬}. കരുതും കരുതും കരുതും

^൧ We should probably read കരുതും

Digitized by Google

קְהִלָּה עֲלֵה שָׁמוֹ¹⁷ . קִלְכָּאֵה עֲלֵה לֵךְ מִבְּהֵמָה מִצִּיּוֹנָה
 עֵלְ מַמְצָא¹⁸ . קְהִלָּה קָמָה דִּיעֵיבָה שֶׁן דִּלְמָה . מִיִּמְיָה
 יִאֻמְכֵּי מַמְצָאֵה לְפָנֶיךָ . קִיבָה קֹמֶה מִיִּמְיָה . קֹמֶה מִלֵּה
 מִלְכָּל רִיבְעָל . ,מִאֲרִיבֵי קָמָה דִּיעֵיבָה¹⁹ . שֶׁן לֵךְ
 אֲפֵי²⁰ . קִיבָה מִבְּהֵמָה קִיבָה רֹמֶל דִּיעֵיבָה
 מִקְלָה קִיבָה^h . קְהִלָּה עֲלֵה רִיבְעָל מַמְצָאֵה
 ,מִאֲרִיבֵי רִיבְעָל . קִיבָה ,מִאֲרִיבֵי אֲלִיכָה²¹ .^h ,מִלֵּה קִיבָה רֹמֶל דִּיעֵיבָה לְפָנֶיךָ . מִאֲרִיבֵי קִיבָה אֲפֵי²²
 ,מִלֵּה קִיבָה שָׁמוֹ . קִיבָה שֶׁן קְהִלָּה מַמְצָאֵה²³
 מִבְּהֵמָה עֲלֵה דִיעֵיבָה לְפָנֶיךָ . קְהִלָּה קִיבָה עֲלֵה עֲלֵה דִיעֵיבָה²⁴
 קִיבָה מִבְּהֵמָה מִיִּמְיָה מִלְכָּל רִיבְעָל²⁵ . קִיבָה
 קֹמֶה קָמָה מִיִּמְיָה . מַמְצָאֵה אֲפֵי²⁶ . קִיבָה
 קִיבָה²⁷ : מִבְּהֵמָה קִיבָה מִבְּהֵמָה דִּיעֵיבָה מִיִּמְיָה : מִלֵּה
 קִיבָה קִיבָה קִיבָה קִיבָה . קִיבָה שֶׁן קֹמֶה קָמָה קִיבָה מִבְּהֵמָה . מִבְּהֵמָה דִּיעֵיבָה עֲלֵה קָמָה²⁸
 . מִבְּהֵמָה רֹמֶל קִיבָה רִיבְעָל²⁹ . מִבְּהֵמָה . מִלֵּה
 . קִיבָה

^{h-h} = κιθάρα πολύφωνος.

ⁱ⁻ⁱ = μεγαλοπρέπεια.

ODE 8.

קָמָה² . קִיבָה מִיִּמְיָה אֲפֵי אֲפֵי אֲפֵי¹
 קִיבָה מִיִּמְיָה³ . קְהִלָּה קָמָה קִיבָה שֶׁן אֲפֵי
 . מִיִּמְיָה קְהִלָּה אֲפֵי . קִיבָה קִיבָה קִיבָה
 רֹמֶל אֲפֵי⁵ . אֲפֵי שֶׁן אֲפֵי אֲפֵי⁴
 אֲפֵי⁶ : אֲפֵי מִבְּהֵמָה אֲפֵי אֲפֵי
 עֲלֵה מַמְצָא⁷ : אֲפֵי מִבְּהֵמָה מִבְּהֵמָה מִבְּהֵמָה

ODE 7.

ε-ε = τοῖς ἰδίοις αὐτοῦ as in Joh. i. 11.

Digitized by Google

.൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ ഏറ്റി ഏറ്റി⁴ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ ഏറ്റി
 കലാ⁵ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ

ODE 6 [= Pistis Sophia, pp. 131—135].

കലാ¹ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ
 കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ .൧൦൦൦൦ കലാ

^{a-a} Perhaps കലാ (Schulthess) but I follow the MS.

^b Cod. കലാ

^c Cod. കലാ

Ode 5, v. 8. The Coptic expands the second clause thus: 'et vicerunt eos potentes, et quae paraverant malitiose, descenderunt in eos.'

ODE 1.

[= Pistis Sophia 116 (tr. Schmidt): Texte u. Untersuch. Bd. VII. pp. 37, 38.]

[Dominus super caput meum sicut corona, neque ero absque eo. Plexerunt mihi coronam veritatis, et ramos tuos in me germinare fecit. Nam non similis est coronae aridae quae non germinat; sed vivis super caput meum. Et germinasti super caput meum: fructus tui pleni et perfecti sunt, pleni salute tua.]

ODE 2.

Deest.

ODE 3.

Priora desunt.

* * * * *
 𐤒𐤁𐤁 𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓² . 𐤒𐤁𐤁 𐤓𐤓𐤓
 . 𐤒𐤁𐤁 𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓³ . 𐤒𐤁𐤁 𐤓𐤓𐤓
 . 𐤒𐤁𐤁𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓⁴ . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓
 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓⁵ . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤒𐤁𐤁⁷ . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓⁶ . 𐤓𐤓𐤓
 . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓⁸ . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓
 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓¹⁰ . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓⁹ . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓
 . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤒𐤁𐤁 𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 𐤒𐤁𐤁 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓
 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 , 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓¹² . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓^c 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓^b 𐤓𐤓𐤓¹¹ 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓 . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓¹³ . 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓

^a Cod. prima manu 𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓𐤓, sed ipse correxit.

^b Cod. 𐤒𐤁𐤁𐤓𐤓

^c = εὐδόκησεν (cf. Matt. iii. 17).

ကုသိုလ် ကုသိုလ်
အလှူ

89067897132 b89067897132a

Date

The physical condition of this book is such that it CANNOT BE REBOUND

89067897132

B89067897132A